Sixtieth session

Item 73 (a) of the provisional agenda*

Human rights questions: implementation of human rights instruments

Equitable geographical distribution in the membership of the human rights treaty bodies

Analysis of the membership of the human rights treaty bodies since 1970

Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights****

Summary

The General Assembly, in its resolution 59/181, requested the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session concrete recommendations on the implementation of the resolution, including the possible establishment of quota distribution systems by geographical region for the election of the members of the treaty bodies. This report, submitted in accordance with that request, provides information on the system for the election of treaty body members, along with an analysis of the past and present membership of each treaty body by geographical region.

I. Introduction

1. In resolution 59/181, the General Assembly recommended that, in considering whether a quota system for the election of the treaty body members should be adopted, each regional group should be assigned “a quota of membership of each treaty body in equivalent proportion to the number of States parties to the instrument that it represents”. The following analysis presents a statistical comparison of the composition of each treaty body following each election of members and the number of States parties to each treaty by regional group since 1970. It does not examine other factors, such as the number of nominations received per regional group and the number of State party representatives voting in elections, which influence the outcome of the elections.

2. Six of the seven core international human rights treaties create a committee of independent experts to monitor implementation of the treaty by States parties:

- The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) has monitored implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination since 1970.
- The Human Rights Committee (HRC), has monitored implementation of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights since 1977.
- The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) has monitored implementation of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women since 1982.
- The Committee against Torture (CAT) has monitored implementation of the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (Convention against Torture) since 1987.
- The Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) has, since 1991, monitored implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and, since 2002, its two Optional Protocols.
- The Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (CMW), which held its first session in March 2004, monitors implementation of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families.

3. The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights does not create a treaty body, but gives the Economic and Social Council a general mandate to monitor implementation of the Covenant by States parties and United Nations specialized agencies through consideration of regular reports. In 1978, the Council established a Sessional Working Group of Governmental Experts on the Implementation of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, to assist it in considering the reports submitted by States parties (decision 1978/10). The composition of the Sessional Working Group was altered in 1982 (resolution 1982/33) and, in 1987, it was reconstituted according to the treaty body model and renamed the “Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights” (CESCR) (resolution 1985/17). The Committee, which first met in 1987, is treated as a treaty body.

4. The Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, which is not yet in force, envisages the creation of an additional body, the “Subcommittee on Prevention”, to undertake visits to places of detention in States parties.

II. The provisions of the treaties relating to election of members of the treaty bodies

5. The provisions of the treaties relating to the election of treaty body members are: article 8, International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination; articles 28-34, International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; article 17, Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; article 17, Convention against Torture; article 43, Convention on the Rights of the Child; and article 72, International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. Elections of members of CESCR are governed by the terms of resolution 1985/17.

6. In accordance with the provisions of the relevant treaty, each committee is composed of independent experts, ranging in number from 10 to 23 (see table 1), who are nominated and elected for fixed, renewable terms of four years by States parties from among their nationals. In order to avoid the entire membership changing at any one election, the terms of half of the members elected at the first elections are limited to two years. Subsequent elections occur every two years. The treaties impose no limit on the number of times a member’s term may be renewed.

Composition of the human rights treaty bodies

Treaty body	Original number of members	Increased to	Number of States parties required for increase
CERD	18	—	—
HRC	18	—	—
CESCR	18	—	—
CEDAW	18	23	35 <sup>a</sup>
CAT	10	—	—
CRC	10	18 <sup>b</sup>	—
CMW	10	14	41

<sup>a</sup> Since, at the time of the first meeting of States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, there were already 35 States parties, the meeting elected 23 members to the Committee for its first session.

<sup>b</sup> Amendment to article 43 (2) of the Convention, approved by the General Assembly in resolution 50/155, which entered into force on 18 November 2002 upon acceptance by two thirds of the States parties.

A. Qualifications for nomination as members

7. The provisions of the treaties (or, in the case of CESCR, the relevant Council resolution) vary with regard to the qualifications expected of nominees. Members are generally required to be of recognized competence (in the field of human rights) and of high moral standing and acknowledged impartiality (although this is not explicitly stated in the case of CESCR). Nominees must be nationals of a State party to the relevant treaty, but members of all treaty bodies serve in their personal capacity.

B. Criteria for election of members

8. The treaties set out criteria to guide States parties when voting for members. In all cases, consideration must be given to equitable geographical distribution. All treaties restrict nominations to one nominee per State party, except the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights which allows two nominations per State but states that the Committee may not include more than one national of the same State (art. 31 (1)).

9. The treaties also set out additional considerations to be taken into account in electing treaty body members, including representation of the “principal legal systems” (CERD, CEDAW, CRC), “the different forms of social and legal systems” (CESCR), “the different forms of civilization” (CERD, CEDAW), “different forms of civilization and legal systems of States parties”, or the “usefulness of legal experience” (HRC, CAT). The Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture contains very specific requirements for members of the Subcommittee on Prevention, including “proven professional experience in the field of the administration of justice, in particular criminal law, prison or police administration, or in the various fields relevant to the treatment of persons deprived of their liberty” (art. 5 (2)).

10. No treaty in force explicitly requires “gender balance” with regard to the election of experts and no quota system is in operation for any of the treaty bodies to address gender balance. In the composition of the Subcommittee on Prevention, due consideration will have to be given to “balanced gender representation on the basis of the principles of equality and non-discrimination” (art. 5 (4)).

C. Conduct of elections

11. The election of members of all treaty bodies, except CESCR, takes place at a biennial meeting of States parties to the treaty concerned. Election is by secret ballot.

D. Replacement of members

12. All treaties contain provision for the replacement of any members who resign or die before the end of their term. In most cases, the State party that nominated the former member appoints another expert from among its nationals to fill the vacancy for the remainder of the term, subject in certain cases to the approval of the relevant committee (CERD, CEDAW, CRC and CMW) or other States parties (CAT). This procedure has no impact on the existing geographical distribution of the committee concerned. Article 34 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights requires vacancies on the Human Rights Committee to result in a new round of nominations and elections, provided the term still has at least six months to run. This may result in a change in the geographical composition of the Committee. In practice, on the nine occasions that members of the Human Rights Committee have been replaced, the nationality of the member changed once, although the replacement member was from the same regional group.

III. The five informal regional groups

13. According to an unofficial list, drawn up on the basis of the practice of States in elections at the General Assembly (see annex I), the present composition of the regional groups recognized by the General Assembly is:

African States	53 States
Asian States	52 States
Eastern European States	22 States
Latin American and Caribbean States	33 States
Western European and other States	29 States
Not members of a regional group	2 States
Total	191 States

The practice of certain States with regard to regional groups differs for the purposes of elections and for other functions. Thus, for the purpose of elections, Turkey votes with the Western European group although it is also a member of the Asian group.

14. The Cook Islands, the Holy See and Niue are parties to one or more of the treaties but are not members of the United Nations.

IV. Past and present membership of the treaty bodies

15. In the following analysis of past and present membership of the treaty bodies, the number of individuals who have served as members of the treaty bodies is distinguished from the number of terms that have been served by those individuals. There is no restriction on the number of terms an individual may serve as a member, and many individual members have served consecutive terms. Statistical analysis based on the individual members of the treaty bodies gives one view of the geographical distribution of seats on the treaty bodies. However, since States parties meet at two-year intervals to elect half of the members of each committee for four-year terms, the composition of each committee changes every two years. Analysis of the composition of the treaty bodies by regional group based on these biennial changes allows a comparison to be made with the number of States parties from each region at the time of each biennial election.

A. Individual membership of the treaty bodies since 1970

16. Since 1970, a total of 410 individuals, from 106 States, have served as members of the treaty bodies:

CERD	94 individuals from 47 States
HRC	79 individuals from 50 States
CEDAW	109 individuals from 63 States
CAT	32 individuals from 25 States
CESCR	47 individuals from 41 States
CRC	39 individuals from 34 States
CMW	10 individuals from 10 States

A number of individuals have served on more than one treaty body.

1. Regional balance

17. Of the 410 individuals who have been elected as treaty body members, 86 have come from the African region, 76 from Asia, 60 from Eastern Europe, 77 from Latin America and the Caribbean and 111 from the Western European group (see table 2).

Individual treaty body members since 1970, by regional group (with percentage of total)

18. These individuals have served a total of 623 terms as members of the various committees. Of the 106 States whose nationals have served as members, one quarter has seen their nationals serve no more than two terms. The average number of terms served per nationality is a little under 6 terms (5.8 terms). Nationals of 15 States have served more than twice the average number of terms, and the nationals of one State have collectively served 31 terms as treaty body members.

19. In total, nationals from Asia have served 21 per cent of treaty body terms, nationals from Africa and from Latin America and the Caribbean have served 19 per cent of terms, nationals from Eastern Europe 14 per cent and nationals from Western Europe and other States have served 28 per cent of terms. The number of terms served by each regional group for each committee is presented below, along with the percentage of the total terms served:

Terms served on the treaty bodies since 1970, by regional group (with percentage of total)

Treaty body	Africa	Asia	Eastern Europe	Latin America	Western Europe	Total

2. Nationality of individual members

20. The 410 individuals who have served as treaty body members have been nationals of a total of 106 States. The total of nationalities of members by regional group (N) is shown in table 4 against the total States parties for each region (S):

Nationalities represented as treaty body members and States parties, by regional group

21. Taking into account the number of States parties from each regional group that could nominate candidates, the proportion of all nationalities from within each group that have been elected as members of at least one of the treaty bodies is as follows:

Distribution of nationalities from each regional group elected as members of the treaty bodies since 1970 (as percentage of total States parties)

Treaty body	Africa	Asia	Eastern Europe	Latin America	Western Europe	Total
CERD	24%	20%	9%	23%	41%	28%
HRC	14%	35%	32%	32%	66%	32%
CEDAW	29%	24%	26%	39%	57%	35%
CAT	20%	15%	18%	23%	29%	21%
CESCR	21%	35%	36%	26%	29%	28%
CRC	15%	14%	9%	18%	34%	17%
CMW	25%	33%	50%	44%	0%	33%
Total	44%	46%	72%	60%	79%	55%

22. In total, 44 per cent of African States, 46 per cent of Asian States, 72 per cent of Eastern European States, 60 per cent of Latin American and Caribbean States and 79 per cent of Western European and other States have had at least one of their nationals elected to one of the treaty bodies. The list of terms per State is presented in annex II. The degree of representation attainable for each treaty body depends on the length of time that the committee concerned has been in existence, the rate at which ratification by States occurs and the number of seats available on the committee.

3. Gender balance

23. With the exception of CEDAW, men have outnumbered women as treaty body members since 1970 by a factor of four to one. Of the 410 individuals who have been elected as members, 251 have been men and 159 have been women. Excluding CEDAW, there have been 53 female members of treaty bodies.

Number of women and men elected as treaty body members since 1970

CERD	6 women (6%)	88 men (94%)
HRC	10 women (13%)	69 men (87%)
CEDAW	106 women (97%)	3 men (3%)
CAT	4 women (12%)	28 men (88%)
CESCR	9 women (19%)	38 men (81%)
CRC	22 women (56%)	17 men (44%)
CMW	2 women (20%)	8 men (80%)
Total excluding CEDAW	53 women (18%)	248 men (82%)
Total	159 women (39%)	251 men (61%)

B. Distribution of the regional groups in the membership of the treaty bodies

24. The charts presented in this section compare the composition of each committee following each election (new or re-elected members plus members with two years of their term remaining) with the number of States parties eligible to vote on the day of the elections by regional group. The source data is presented in annex III and full results are presented on the website of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (www.ohchr.org).

25. The following factors have been taken into account:

- Since the composition of each committee changes every two years, sampling is made at two-year intervals, immediately following each election.
- Since some individuals serve more than one term on a treaty body, the number of terms served are counted rather than the number of individuals elected.
- Some committees have increased in size as the number of ratifications has risen.
- The number of States parties eligible to vote at meeting of States parties, and the relative balance within each regional group and between regional groups, shifts constantly as more States ratify or accede to the treaties.

Special conditions apply in the case of CESCR, which is covered separately below.

26. Other factors may influence the outcome of elections. Thus, for example, the large number of nominations received from one regional group may make it more difficult for those candidates to gain sufficient votes from States parties from within their regional group compared with a region that has put forward a shorter list of candidates. Treaty body members are not elected to represent their region and States parties are not obliged to vote for candidates from their region. Such factors are not taken into account in the present analysis, which is purely statistical.

27. A statistical differential between the membership of each treaty body after each election and each regional group may be calculated in the following manner:

- The number of members from each regional group is expressed as a percentage of the total membership of the committee concerned.
- The number of States parties from each regional group eligible to vote is expressed as a percentage of the total number of States parties.
- The difference between these two percentages indicates the degree to which membership of a treaty body corresponds to the number of States parties from each regional group for each biennium.

28. A value of zero indicates a perfect correspondence between members and States parties from the region concerned. Positive values indicate that more members were elected than would be expected statistically on the basis of the number of States parties from each region. Conversely, negative values indicate that fewer members were elected than would be expected.

29. The scale of these values may be gauged by comparing the percentage difference with the percentage representing one member of the committee concerned: in a 10-member committee, one member equals 10 per cent of the total membership; in an 18-member committee, one member equals 5.55 per cent of the total membership; in a 23-member committee, one member equals 4.34 per cent of the total membership. The horizontal lines in the charts below indicate one member of the relevant committee in percentage terms. Given the limited membership of the committees, a perfect distribution of seats between regional groups in exact proportion to the number of States parties from each region may not always be possible since fractions of seats cannot be divided between regional groups.

1. Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

30. On average, the distribution of seats on CERD shows both Eastern and Western European and other States with one member more, and African States with two members less, than would be statistically expected. Asian States have achieved a perfect average distribution.

Chart 1

Percentage difference between the number of members elected to CERD and the number of States parties from each region

2. Human Rights Committee

31. On average, the distribution of seats in the Human Rights Committee shows Western Europe with three more members, and Africa with two less members, than would be expected statistically.

Chart 2

Percentage difference between the number of members elected to the Human Rights Committee and the number of States parties from each region

3. Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women

32. On average, the distribution of seats on CEDAW reveals Western Europe having two more members, and both Africa and Latin America and the Caribbean having one less member, than would be expected statistically.

Chart 3

Percentage difference between members elected to CEDAW and the number of States parties from each region

4. Committee against Torture

33. On average, Asia has achieved a perfect correspondence between the percentage of States parties and the percentage of members from each region in CAT. Between 2000 and 2004, Western European and other States had almost two more members than would be expected.

Percentage difference between the number of members elected to CAT and the number of States parties from each region

5. Committee on the Rights of the Child

34. On average, Africa and Latin America and the Caribbean have achieved a perfect correspondence between States parties and members of CRC, whereas Western Europe has had on average two more members, and Asia and Eastern Europe one less member, than would be expected statistically.

Percentage difference between the number of members elected to the CRC and the number of States parties from each region

6. Committee on Migrant Workers

35. The 10-member Committee on Migrant Workers has not been in existence long enough to allow clear conclusions to be drawn. Following the first elections, at which only 10 candidates were presented, Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean have more members and Africa and Eastern Europe have fewer members than would be expected statistically. No Western European and other States are parties to the Convention.

V. Election of members of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the quota system

36. The procedure for the election of members of CESCR is not set out in the Covenant and differs in two respects from the equivalent procedures of the other treaty bodies:

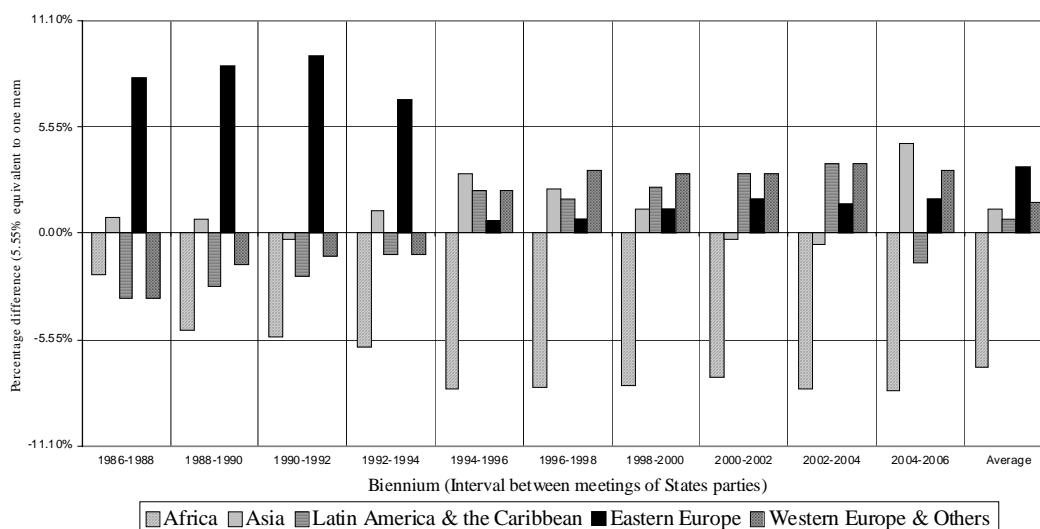

(a) Although candidates are nominated by States parties to the Covenant, members are not elected at a meeting of all States parties but are elected by the 53 members of the Economic and Social Council, by secret ballot;

(b) A quota system, as set out in Council resolution 1985/17, is in operation for the election of members which guarantees each regional group at least three members regardless of the number of States parties in each group. The three remaining positions are available to correct imbalances resulting from disproportionate ratification by regional groups.

37. Within the membership of CESC, despite the quota system, Africa has been short by at least one member since 1989. On average, all other groups have been slightly overrepresented, but not to an extent that could be corrected.

Percentage difference between the number of members elected to CESC and the number of States parties from each region (quota system in operation)

38. The CESC quota system has not achieved equitable distribution of seats for African States and will require adjustment to be able to ensure an equitable distribution between all regional groups as the Covenant progresses towards universal ratification. The quota system allocates three seats to each regional group, leaving only three to correct imbalances. The Eastern European Group (which has already universally ratified the Covenant) has less than half as many States parties to the Covenant as the African Group.

The CESCR quota system and universal ratification of the Covenant

Expected allocation on universal ratification	5	5	2	3	3	18

VI. Conclusion

39. Under the terms of the six core human rights treaties that establish a treaty body, the modalities for the election of treaty body members is a matter for the States parties. The General Assembly may wish to forward the present report to the chairperson of the next meeting of States parties of each treaty. The resolution, and the present report, will also be provided to the chairperson of the seventeenth meeting of chairpersons of human rights treaty bodies as he prepares the agenda of the eighteenth meeting, to be held in June 2006.

Czechoslovakia*
German Democratic Republic**
Union of Soviet Socialist Republics***
Yugoslavia****

- * Czechoslovakia ceased to exist on 1 January 1993, on which date the Czech Republic and Slovakia, as successor States to the former Czechoslovakia, considered themselves bound by the multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General to which Czechoslovakia was party. Both States are within the Eastern European Group.
- ** The German Democratic Republic acceded to the Federal Republic of Germany on 3 October 1990, resulting in one less State within the Eastern European Group.
- *** The Russian Federation, as of 24 December 1991, maintained full responsibility for the rights and obligations of the USSR under the multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General. The territory which formerly constituted the USSR, entirely within the Eastern European Group, is now represented by the Russian Federation and 12 other independent States, seven within the Eastern group (Armenia, Azerbaijan; Estonia, Georgia, Latvia, Lithuania and the Republic of Moldova) and five within the Asian group (Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan). Belarus (as the Byelorussian SSR) and Ukraine (as the Ukrainian SSR) were each founding members of the United Nations in their own right.
- **** The following States succeeded to the treaty rights and obligations with effect from the dates indicated previously undertaken by the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia: Bosnia and Herzegovina (6 March 1992), Croatia (8 October 1991), Serbia and Montenegro (27 April 1992), Slovenia (25 June 1991) and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (17 September 1991). The Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia ceased to exist upon the independence of these five successor States.
- <sup>a</sup> On 22 May 1990, the Yemen Arab Republic and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen merged to form the Republic of Yemen. Between 6 April 1989 and 22 May 1990, both States were parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, resulting in an increase in the number of States parties in the Asian group.
- <sup>b</sup> Cook Islands and Niue are self-governing territories in free association with New Zealand. The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women was applied by New Zealand to the Cook Islands and Niue at the time of its ratification of the Convention on 10 January 1985. The Secretary-General, as depositary of multilateral treaties, recognized the full treaty-making capacity of the Cook Islands in 1992 and of Niue in 1994. Both States are parties to the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Currently, the Cook Islands and Niue are not parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women in their own right. For the purpose of this study, both States are included with the other Pacific States in the Asian group, notwithstanding that New Zealand is part of the Western group.
- <sup>c</sup> The Holy See has observer status at the United Nations and is a party to three human rights conventions: International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, Convention against Torture and Convention on the Rights of the Child. It does not adhere to a regional group.

WEO = Western European and other States group

Annex III

Number of members elected to serve on the human rights treaty bodies and number of States parties eligible to vote at meetings of States parties, by regional group

Explanatory notes

For each committee, the first table compares the number of States parties eligible to vote with the number of committee members by regional group, shown with percentages of the total at the time of each election. The second table shows the difference in the percentages obtained from the first table, expressed as a positive or negative percentage value, which represents the degree to which the geographic distribution of membership equates to the number of States parties from each regional group.

The grand totals at the foot of each of the following charts (shown in bold) are provided for statistical purposes only and should be read with caution. The total number of States parties per region is a cumulative total which should be read as the maximum number of votes that could have been cast in all elections. Similarly, the total number of members per regional group should be read as the total number of two-year periods served; this figure is doubled to calculate the total number of four-year terms served (as shown in annex II).

The composition of each regional group has fluctuated over the years. Since it has not been possible to determine the precise composition of each group at the time of each election, the following calculations are based on the composition of the regional groups as of 14 April 2005. Nevertheless, calculations for the Eastern European group do incorporate States parties that existed at the time of earlier elections but have since been dissolved (Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Yugoslavia). The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is included in the Eastern European group although many of its successor States belong to the Asian group.

Note: Elections of members are governed by article 18 of the Convention. Members are elected for terms of four years, except for the terms of nine of the members elected at the first election, which expired after two years. States parties meet every two years to elect nine members. The first elections were held in January 1970. Terms run from 19 January of the year of election to 18 January four years later, with elections at a meeting of States parties held in January every two years.

2. Percentage difference between numbers of members elected to CERD and States parties, by regional group

One member is equivalent to 5.55 per cent of the total membership of 18 members.

Note: Elections of members are governed by article 17 of the Convention. Members are elected for terms of four years, except for the terms of 11 of the members elected at the first election, which expired after two years. States parties meet every two years to elect alternately 11 or 12 members. The first elections were held in April 1982. From 1982 to 1988 these terms ran from 16 April of the year of election to 15 April four years later, with elections usually held at a meeting of States parties in February. From 1 January 1999, the terms were amended to run from 1 January of the year after election to 31 December four years later, with elections at a meeting of States parties now held in August every two years.

2. Percentage difference between number of members elected to CEDAW and States parties, by regional group

One member is equivalent to 4.34 per cent of the total membership of 23 members.
