Proceedings

7. The Ad Hoc Committee held two plenary meetings, on 20 and 24 April 2009.
8. In the absence of the Chairman, the 4th meeting of the Committee was chaired by Mr. Thomas Fitschen (Germany), Vice-Chairperson of the Ad Hoc Committee.
9. At its 4th meeting, on 20 April, the Committee adopted its programme of work and decided to proceed with its discussions as a working group of the whole. The Committee also held a general exchange of views, during which delegations made statements. A summary of the debate is contained in section III below.
10. The Working Group of the Whole, which was chaired by Mr. Thomas Fitschen, held five meetings, on 20, 21, 22 and 24 April, including a question-and-answer session on 21 April, at which the United Nations Ombudsman, the Executive Director of the Office of Administration of Justice and representatives of the Office of Legal Affairs and the Office of Human Resources Management answered questions raised by delegations.
11. In addressing the outstanding legal aspects of the item, the Working Group focused its work on the question of the scope of the new system of administration of justice. Other legal issues were also considered, including the questions of legal assistance to staff and whether staff associations may file applications before the United Nations Dispute Tribunal. An informal summary of the discussions in the Working Group is contained in the annex to the present report. The summary was prepared by the Chairman of the Working Group for reference purposes only and not as a record of the discussions.

13. At the same meeting, the Committee adopted the report on its second session.

Chapter III

General comments made in plenary meeting

A. General aspects

14. Delegations reiterated their support for the reform of the system of administration of justice at the United Nations. They noted that the establishment of the new system was aimed at ensuring impartiality, fairness, transparency and efficiency, in line with the internationally recognized standards of due process and the rule of law.

15. Delegations welcomed the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 63/253, and hence the adoption of the statutes of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. The appointment of all of the judges of the Tribunals was also welcomed. Some delegations pointed out that the Internal Justice Council should operate in a transparent way and that it should maintain contacts with Member States and provide further information on its work, in particular on the implementation of the relevant General Assembly resolutions. Delegations stated that they were looking forward to the Tribunals becoming operational on 1 July 2009. It was also noted that the rules of procedure of the two Tribunals should be made available to delegations in a timely manner in order to allow for their approval by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session.

16. It was emphasized that the new system of administration of justice should not only be adequately resourced, but should also be subject to periodic review in order to ensure possible improvements in the light of the needs of the Organization.

17. Some delegations emphasized the importance of receiving information from representatives of the Secretariat in order to facilitate the work of the Ad Hoc Committee. The view was expressed that while the Committee, at the present session, should consider the outstanding legal aspects of the item, which included the question of ensuring effective remedies for non-staff personnel, legal assistance to staff and the question of the filing of applications by staff associations before the Dispute Tribunal, priority should be given to the first issue.

B. Scope ratione personae of the new system of administration of justice

18. Underlining the importance of providing effective remedies to all persons who perform work for the Organization, several delegations reiterated their support for the two-step approach, whereby the new system was first made available only to those individuals who had access to the previous system, while the situation of non-staff personnel would be considered at a later stage. The view was also expressed that the broadening of the scope of the new system at the present stage would cause various problems and that the chance should first be given for the new Tribunals to begin their work. It was noted, however, that while the first step would be implemented by 1 July 2009, it was already the time for delegations to consider how to proceed with the second step. It was therefore suggested that the Ad Hoc Committee should focus its work at the second session on the question of the remedies available to the different categories of non-staff personnel.

19. The view was expressed that, in addressing the issue of a possible expansion of the scope of the new system, the determining factor would be whether certain categories of personnel, who were not covered under the current system, lacked access to any adequate means of legal redress. However, the view was also expressed that a cautious approach should be taken in granting individual contractors access to the new system, in the light of the particular nature of their relationship with the Organization. A proposal was also made regarding a possible approach to alternative remedies for personal service contractors. In this regard, it was stated that an analysis by the Secretariat of the feasibility of the proposed approach would be welcome. Moreover, it was observed that the work regarding the scope of the new system of administration of justice should remain consistent with the outcome of the reform of human resources within the United Nations.

20. Management evaluation was mentioned as a key component of the new system of administration of justice. It was recalled that, in paragraph 7 of its resolution 63/253, the General Assembly had decided that interns, type II gratis personnel and volunteers (other than United Nations Volunteers) should have the possibility of requesting an appropriate management evaluation but would not have access to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal or to the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. It was also suggested that a similar solution could be applied to other categories of non-staff personnel.

21. Some delegations expressed their wish to obtain more information from the Secretariat on the nature of the different contracts in use for non-staff personnel, as well as on the reasons why funds and programmes use a large number of personnel with personal contracts who may be deemed to be non-staff personnel and why daily-paid workers continue to be hired by the Organization. It was also proposed that the Committee recommend to the General Assembly that the Secretary-General be requested to submit a further report on the situation of non-staff personnel for consideration by the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session.

C. Other outstanding legal issues

22. Some delegations also referred to other outstanding legal issues. In particular, it was pointed out that further consideration should be given to the mandate of the Office of Staff Legal Assistance and to the establishment of a procedure for disciplinary measures to replace the disciplinary committees.

Chapter IV

Recommendation

23. At its 5th meeting, on 24 April, the Ad Hoc Committee decided to recommend that, at the sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly, a working group of the Sixth Committee be established with a view to continuing the discussion on the outstanding legal aspects of the administration of justice at the United Nations, taking into account the deliberations in the Ad Hoc Committee and bearing in mind the decision of the Assembly to revert to the issue of the scope of the system of administration of justice at its sixty-fifth session, with a view to ensuring that effective remedies are available to all categories of United Nations personnel, with due consideration given to the types of recourse that are the most appropriate to that end.

Annex

Informal summary of the discussions in the Working Group of the Whole, prepared by the Chairman of the Working Group

A. General remarks

1. The Working Group of the Whole agreed that the main issue to be considered at the present session of the Ad Hoc Committee was that of the scope ratione personae of the new system of administration of justice. Therefore, most of the work of the Working Group focused on that issue. However, some other legal issues were also addressed in the discussions, such as the questions of legal assistance to staff and whether staff associations may file applications before the United Nations Dispute Tribunal.

2. In the course of a question-and-answer session, representatives of the Secretariat answered questions from delegations on the following topics: the different categories of non-staff personnel and dispute settlement mechanisms available to them; management evaluation; legal assistance to staff; the selection of candidates made by the Internal Justice Council for the positions of judges at the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal; the status of the preparation for the implementation of the new system; disciplinary procedures; and the preparation of the rules of procedure of the two Tribunals.

B. Scope of the new system

3. Several delegations expressed the view that non-staff personnel should be provided with effective mechanisms for the settlement of their disputes with the Organization. The point was made that, in line with the original purpose of the reform, the mechanisms to be afforded to non-staff personnel should not be too diverse or complicated in order to avoid any discrimination or discouragement of their utilization.

4. Some delegations pointed to the need for receiving additional information from the Secretariat on the types and number of disputes involving non-staff personnel, the mechanisms currently available to them and the problems that had arisen in the implementation of such mechanisms.

5. Some delegations raised the question of whether non-staff personnel should, as proposed by the Secretary-General (A/62/782, para. 55), be granted access to the new informal system of administration of justice, and, if so, under what conditions and modalities such access should be granted. Other delegations were of the view that the informal system should play a greater role in the settlement of disputes between the Organization and its personnel and that non-staff personnel should be encouraged to resort to that system. The point was made, however, that it was necessary for the Ad Hoc Committee to receive further information on how the new informal system would actually work, on its current resources and capabilities, and on the possible outcome of a procedure brought to it, in particular with regard to mediation.

6. Some delegations also referred to the need to provide non-staff personnel with adequate redress mechanisms in the event that recourse to the informal system would not produce a satisfactory outcome.

7. Some delegations were of the view that it was still necessary to obtain further information on the adequacy of the mechanisms that are currently available to the various categories of non-staff personnel, more specifically with regard to arbitration under the rules of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL). In view of the very low number of cases that were settled by arbitration under UNCITRAL rules, the question was asked whether this type of arbitration would provide an effective remedy to non-staff personnel, in particular in the light of the costs that were involved.

8. Recalling the decision already made by the General Assembly, in paragraph 7 of its resolution 63/253, to grant interns, type II gratis personnel and volunteers (other than United Nations Volunteers) the possibility of requesting an appropriate management evaluation, a proposal was made to extend such a possibility to other categories of non-staff personnel.

9. Some delegations also recalled the possibility of granting non-staff personnel access to the Dispute Tribunal. It was suggested that expedited procedures could be provided for that purpose in the statute of the Dispute Tribunal.

10. According to another proposal, an alternative mechanism could be created for non-staff personnel performing work by way of their personal service for the United Nations. Such a mechanism could comprise two steps. First, such personnel should be provided with a possibility of obtaining a managerial review of the contested decision. Thereafter, the possibility of recourse to arbitration pursuant to UNCITRAL rules would be maintained for claims exceeding $25,000, while an expedited and streamlined arbitration procedure would be established for claims of a lesser amount. It was proposed that, under such simplified procedure, cases would be decided by a single arbitrator with no possibility of appeal; moreover, a list of regional or national arbitration associations, which would agree to assist in the settlement of such disputes, could be maintained. It was suggested that the Secretariat could be asked to study the feasibility of that proposal.

11. Reference was also made to the Secretary-General's proposal that non-staff personnel be provided with a separate formal but less lengthy and complex dispute resolution procedure (see A/62/782, paras. 52-54). Such a mechanism could consist of an internal standing body with powers similar to those of the Dispute Tribunal, which would make binding decisions that are final and not subject to appeal. Some delegations were of the view that the Secretary-General should be requested to elaborate on this proposal and to provide further details thereon. However, the point was also made that the establishment of an independent standing body might not be appropriate at the present stage.

C. Other outstanding legal issues

12. The Working Group also considered the questions of legal assistance to staff and the filing of application by staff associations. With regard to the former issue, reference was made to paragraphs 9, 11, 15 and 16 of General Assembly resolution 63/253.

D. Other issues

13. The Working Group discussed issues of the selection and nomination of candidates for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal by the Internal Justice Council.

Appendix

Summary of proposals and suggestions concerning the scope of the system of administration of justice made during the session, prepared by the Chairman of the Working Group

Based on the discussions at the second session of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Administration of Justice at the United Nations (20-24 April 2009), as reflected in the present report of the Committee, the Chairman notes the following observations, which, in his view, should be further considered by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, with a view to enabling the Assembly to take all outstanding decisions at its sixty-fifth session, as provided for in Assembly resolution 63/253:

1. Delegations noted that the Committee worked on questions of scope with a view to ensuring that effective remedies are available to all categories of United Nations personnel, with due consideration given to the types of recourse that are the most appropriate to that end.
2. At the meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee a number of delegations reaffirmed their position that non-staff personnel should be given access to the formal system of administration of justice.
3. Following a request by the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, in his report (A/62/782, paras. 51-56), proposed to address disputes concerning non-staff personnel through the establishment of a separate formal dispute settlement mechanism in the form of an internal standing body that would have powers similar to those of the Dispute Tribunal, which would make binding decisions, using streamlined procedures; the decisions of the standing body would be final and not subject to appeal. Delegations noted that the Secretary-General had pointed out that, in order to review the feasibility of such an option, detailed proposals would have to be developed, and that for that purpose he would need the guidance of the Assembly as to whether the matter should be pursued (A/62/782, para. 56). Some delegations suggested that the Assembly should indeed request the Secretary-General to do so.
4. Delegations recalled the decision of the General Assembly, in its resolution 63/253 (para. 7), that interns, type II gratis personnel and volunteers (other than United Nations Volunteers) should have the possibility of requesting an appropriate management evaluation. A proposal was made to consider whether an appropriate management evaluation could also be established for other categories of non-staff personnel.
5. As to contractors and consultants — who under current terms (see General Conditions of Contracts for the Services of a Consultant or Individual Contractor (see ST/AI/1997/7/Amend. 1, annex)) have the possibility to submit a case that is not amicably settled, including through conciliation, to arbitration under the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) rules — some delegations noted the very low number of cases reported by the Secretary-General where an arbitration procedure has been concluded. Delegations suggested that further inquiry into the reasons be undertaken.
6. In this context a proposal was made to establish, for personal service contractors (i.e. consultants and contractors) pursuing claims that their personal service contract has been violated with a value of not more than $25,000, an expedited special arbitration procedure.

7. Delegations noted with approval that all non-staff personnel have the same right as United Nations staff members to submit, according to established procedures, complaints of discrimination, harassment and abuse of authority (see ST/SGB/2008/5).

8. Delegations noted that, according to information supplied by the Secretary-General in his report (A/62/782), non-staff personnel have submitted cases to the Office of the Ombudsman and that the Ombudsman has, as a matter of practice, taken up those cases. As the terms of reference for the Office of the Ombudsman and the Mediation Division are currently being developed, it was suggested that the General Assembly, upon review of the terms of reference, examine whether the new terms of reference will allow that practice to be continued, bearing in mind that the Assembly has already decided that all persons who have access to the Office of the Ombudsman under the current system shall also have access to the new informal system (resolution 63/253, para. 19). Some delegations proposed that information on the types of grievances submitted to the Office of the Ombudsman by non-staff personnel be included in the reports of the Office of the Ombudsman.

9. Delegations recalled that any of the decisions to be taken at the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly needed to be based on a clear understanding of all relevant facts and applicable rules and regulations; they urged that all additional information which the Assembly may decide to request should be submitted as early as possible before the beginning of the sixty-fifth session so as to allow delegations time for proper preparation.
