Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its thirtieth session from 7 to 18 May 2018. The review of Colombia was held at the 7th meeting, on 10 May 2018. The delegation of Colombia was headed by the Minister of the Interior, Guillermo Rivera Flores. At its 14th meeting, held on 15 May 2018, the Working Group adopted the report on Colombia.
2. On 10 January 2018, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Colombia: Australia, Panama and Qatar.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Colombia:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/30/COL/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/30/COL/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/30/COL/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Brazil, Chile, Germany, Liechtenstein, Portugal, Slovenia, Sweden and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Colombia through the troika. These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The head of the delegation underscored the importance of participating in the third cycle of the universal periodic review to share the progress made by and the challenges facing his country. He thanked civil society organizations, the Ombudsman's Office, OHCHR and the United Nations agencies present in Colombia for their commitment to achieving peace and for their daily work.
6. Peace was the best way to ensure human rights, and the Final Agreement for Ending the Conflict and Building a Stable and Lasting Peace signed in 2016 was a milestone in that regard. Victims of the conflict had participated in the peace negotiations, and the agreement contained both gender and ethnic dimensions. Provision had been made for the release and subsequent care of child victims of the conflict. Dialogue was currently being held with the Ejército de Liberación Nacional (National Liberation Army).
7. With the end of the conflict, the number of cases of kidnapping, disappearance, recruitment and displacement and the number of victims of anti-personnel mines had fallen. 2017 had been the year with the lowest homicide rate since 1975. Progress had also been made in terms of humanitarian demining; a third of municipalities had been declared mine-free.
8. The Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia-Ejército del Pueblo (Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia-People's Army) had laid down arms and some 12,000 former combatants had rejoined civil society. In addition, 69,000 families had joined the crop substitution programmes to replace illicit crops. The Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia had been included as a political party in the parliamentary elections of March 2018, in which 48 per cent of the electorate had participated, the largest level of participation in Colombian history. The status of the opposition had been approved, ensuring that all political opinions would be heard.

9. Attacks against human rights defenders and social leaders continued to be one of the greatest challenges facing the country. The Government rejected all acts of violence against those groups and recognized the importance of their work in the process of strengthening democracy and the rule of law. The Government was therefore working to consolidate its policy of prevention and protection, and had implemented the new Early Warning System, the Collective Protection Route, the National Commission of Security Guarantees and the Special Investigation Unit for the Dismantling of Criminal Organizations and Conduct within the Attorney General's Office. Nearly 4,000 social leaders and human rights defenders, 60 per cent of whom were in rural areas, were currently receiving protection through the National Prevention and Protection Programme.

10. Over the past eight years, 5 million people had been lifted out of poverty in Colombia, and 8 million children had been given access to free education in public schools. Colombia was committed to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals.

11. Colombia recognized the challenges it faced in terms of forced displacement, recruitment of children by illegal armed actors, collective reparation of victims, investigation and punishment of those responsible for human rights violations and violence against women. The State was committed to continuing to work to meet those challenges.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

12. During the interactive dialogue, 86 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

13. Turkey recalled the importance of the peace agreement as a road map to address human rights issues in a comprehensive way. It stressed that land issues were of utmost importance in tackling the root causes of violence.

14. Ukraine welcomed the adoption of the National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons and the priority given in the Strategic Plan for 2016–2020 of the Attorney General's Office to combating murder, sexual violence and domestic violence.

15. The United States of America raised concerns about extrajudicial killings, limited accountability for human rights violations and abuses, and attacks on Afrodescendent and indigenous leaders. It requested data on the prosecution of those responsible for the "false positive" killings.

16. Uruguay praised the progress achieved in the talks with Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia and encouraged Colombia to prioritize the allocation of the technical, financial and human resources necessary to implement the peace agreement in accordance with the principles of transparency, participation and accountability.

17. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela called for the parties to comply with the peace agreement in order to put an end to a conflict that had caused thousands of deaths and had lasted for more than 50 years.

18. Zambia commended Colombia for its promotion and protection of human rights and its ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

19. Algeria congratulated Colombia on its determination to build a sustainable and lasting peace through the 2016 peace agreement. Algeria welcomed the mainstreaming of human rights in trade issues and the measures taken to ensure due diligence in the economic sector.

20. Angola noted that, since its previous review in 2013, Colombia had bolstered its legislative framework in order to protect and guarantee the rights of all, in particular through legislation concerning human rights and humanitarian law.

21. Argentina commended Colombia for the peace agreement, the establishment of the Commission on Truth, Coexistence and Non-repetition, and its efforts to combat impunity.

22. Australia was concerned about the targeted killing and harassment of community leaders, human rights defenders and witnesses in criminal proceedings relating to human rights violations. It welcomed the establishment of the Land Restitution Unit.
23. Austria welcomed the signing of the peace agreement and the establishment of a Special Investigation Unit within the Attorney General's Office. It remained concerned about the failure to fully implement the rights to truth, justice, reparations and guarantees of non-repetition.
24. Azerbaijan commended Colombia for its accession to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and the implementation of the National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights 2014–2034.
25. Belgium praised the positive steps Colombia had taken to implement the recommendations it had accepted during the second review cycle, and encouraged it to take additional measures to strengthen the protection of human rights.
26. Bhutan commended Colombia for its comprehensive national report and welcomed the 2016 peace agreement and the National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights 2014–2034.
27. The Plurinational State of Bolivia shared its concerns about the attacks on human rights defenders and social leaders. While welcoming the Victims and Land Restitution Act, it requested information about the collective reparation process.
28. Botswana noted the efforts made to implement the recommendations Colombia had accepted during the previous review cycle. It welcomed the National Development Plan 2014–2018 and the National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights 2014–2034.
29. Brazil acknowledged the commitment of the authorities at the highest level to holding a transparent and constructive dialogue on human rights. It welcomed the adoption of the peace agreement, which included a broad human rights perspective.
30. Canada welcomed the progress made in implementing the 2016 peace agreement and on human rights. However, it continued to be concerned about high-level corruption and the considerable impact it had on the ability of citizens to fully enjoy their social, political and economic rights.
31. Chile inquired about the measures taken to protect lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons. It requested information about the steps taken by Colombia to protect human rights defenders and about how it planned to increase the effectiveness of those measures.
32. China congratulated Colombia on the progress made on the peace process and on its efforts to protect the rights of vulnerable groups, such as women, children, the elderly and persons with disabilities.
33. The Congo welcomed the signing of the 2016 peace agreement and the development, in the wake of a participatory process, of a national strategy for the protection of human rights. It noted with satisfaction the commitment of Colombia to implementing relevant measures during the International Decade for People of African Descent.
34. Costa Rica wished Colombia success in the implementation of the peace agreement, particularly the Comprehensive System of Truth, Justice, Reparations and Non-repetition. It expressed concern about the increase in the incidence of killings of human rights defenders and community leaders.
35. Côte d'Ivoire welcomed the adoption of several laws aimed at strengthening the protection of human rights. It congratulated Colombia for its commitment to making progress on the peace process and urged it to apply the peace agreement diligently.
36. Croatia welcomed the launching of the programme to prevent the recruitment and use of children and adolescents by armed groups and asked the Government to make sure that child soldiers were treated as victims.

37. Cuba highlighted the responsibility of the international community in guaranteeing that the peace agreement was upheld, and underlined the need to support the peace negotiations with the National Liberation Army.
38. Cyprus welcomed the signing of the peace agreement, which constituted a solid basis for addressing the structural human rights challenges faced by Colombia. It encouraged Colombia to intensify its efforts to address discrimination against women and persons with disabilities.
39. Czechia appreciated the efforts Colombia was making regarding several human rights, such as the launching of specialized programmes to prevent the forced recruitment of children into armed groups and steps taken to recognize the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.
40. Denmark congratulated Colombia on the peace agreement and the positive steps it was taking towards reconciliation. Denmark highlighted the importance of the sexual and reproductive health rights of women and girls.
41. Honduras welcomed the signing of the peace agreement and the negotiations between the Government and the National Liberation Army towards a lasting peace. It also welcomed the efforts being made to improve the living standards of Afro-Colombians, indigenous peoples and women.
42. Ecuador welcomed the efforts of Colombia to implement the recommendations received during the second review cycle and highlighted the inclusion of persons with disabilities in social programmes.
43. Egypt noted the efforts the Government had made since the signing of the peace agreement and the steps it had taken to incorporate human rights into the National Development Plan 2014–2034.
44. El Salvador congratulated Colombia on the adoption of the peace agreement and highlighted the establishment of the National Council for Peace, Reconciliation and Coexistence. It commended the efforts to include gender issues in post-conflict policies.
45. Equatorial Guinea welcomed the peace agreement, which had led to a substantial drop in indicators of violence, and the provisions for the protection of children. It also welcomed the adoption of the Children and Adolescents' Code.
46. Finland thanked Colombia for improving the human rights situation in the country and congratulated it on the peace agreement. Finland noted that there were challenges remaining in terms of the implementation of laws, including in relation to sexual and gender-based violence, and the full protection of human rights defenders.
47. The delegation of Colombia highlighted the implementation of the Comprehensive System of Truth, Justice, Reparations and Non-repetition. The System included the Special Jurisdiction for Peace, the Investigation and Indictment Unit, and an extrajudicial component constituted by the Special Unit for the Search for Persons deemed as missing in the context of and due to the armed conflict, and the Commission on Truth, Coexistence and Non-repetition. The System did not provide for amnesty for crimes against humanity, sexual violence or forced displacement.
48. Measures had been taken to reduce prison overcrowding and improve health care in prisons. In addition, steps had been taken to increase the use of house arrest, and to incorporate a differentiated approach to caring for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons who were deprived of their liberty.
49. Almost 3 million victims of the conflict had received some measure of reparation. Providing collective reparation to more than 600 ethnic and rural communities and social organizations remained a challenge. Some 89 per cent of victims had been displaced; almost 4 million of them had received humanitarian aid or assistance from the State, some 500,000 were no longer in a vulnerable situation, and 67,000 families had returned or relocated.
50. Since the end of the conflict, over 300,000 ha of land had been returned to their rightful owners. The judicial branch was working to establish the ownership of another

500,000 ha. Progress was being made to guarantee the land rights of Afro-Colombian communities and more than 50 indigenous peoples by formalizing and protecting ownership and returning over 2 million ha of land to them. Moreover, land titles of 4 million ha had been given to farmers, 53 per cent of whom were rural women.

51. Some 2,423 investigations were being conducted into deaths that had been illegitimately presented as casualties in combat (“false positive” killings), with 5,106 soldiers having been brought to trial, including 134 colonels. To date, 1,683 members of the armed forces had been convicted. Between 2016 and April 2018, the Attorney General’s Office had received 261 reports of murders of human rights defenders, 41 per cent of which had been resolved. Progress had been made in terms of resolving cases of murder of trade unionists, journalists and ex-combatants of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia–People’s Army and their relatives. Progress had also been made in cases involving domestic violence, sexual violence and human trafficking.

52. As part of its institutional strengthening, the Attorney General’s Office had increased its presence and citizens’ access to justice in 151 municipalities. In addition, it had submitted a consolidated report to the Special Jurisdiction for Peace on cases of sexual violence in the context of the armed conflict. Regarding the use of children in the commission of crimes, more than 500 convictions had been processed. In the area of enforced disappearance, 8,990 bodies had been recovered, 4,296 of which had been duly identified and handed over to family members. The plan for the effective investigation and prosecution of civil third parties and State agents linked to illegal armed actors, including financing, had been implemented.

53. The armed forces and the police continued to work together to build and maintain a culture of respect for human rights through a new comprehensive policy on human rights and international humanitarian law. The policy included awareness-raising for State agents on the ethnic and cultural diversity of the population, and for legal advisers on police and military operations. There was also a sectoral policy with a gender focus within the armed forces.

54. France noted that the 2016 peace agreement addressed many of the recommendations Colombia had received in the previous review, and offered support to continue such efforts.

55. Gabon welcomed the signing of the 2016 peace agreement, the involvement of women in the negotiation of the agreement, and the integration of the gender perspective in the master plan for its implementation.

56. Georgia noted the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and encouraged Colombia to strengthen its national legal framework to improve the protection of the rights of persons with disabilities.

57. Germany appreciated the victim-centred and human rights-based approach of the final peace agreement between the Government and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia–People’s Army.

58. Ghana commended Colombia on its National Development Plan for 2014–2018 and the development of the National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights 2014–2034. It also commended the key role played by women in the peace process.

59. Guyana congratulated Colombia on the successful signing of the 2016 peace agreement. It noted with appreciation the Government’s commitment to promoting human rights-based programmes across all sectors.

60. Haiti noted the progress made by Colombia since the previous review cycle and highlighted the fact that the signing of the 2016 peace agreement constituted a guarantee for the effective enjoyment of human rights.

61. The Holy See emphasized the importance of the peace agreement and the need to work towards reintegrating former combatants, especially children, and providing genuine justice and reparation to all victims.

62. The Dominican Republic congratulated Colombia on the signing of the peace agreement.
63. Iceland congratulated Colombia on the signing of the peace agreement, which had brought an end to over five decades of armed conflict. It welcomed the decisions to approve marriage equality and adoption by same-sex couples.
64. India appreciated the efforts of Colombia to pursue peacebuilding and to develop a framework plan for implementing the peace agreement, which would significantly improve peace, security, human rights and equitable justice for all.
65. Indonesia welcomed the ongoing legal reforms and commended Colombia for several developments introduced since the second review cycle, such as the National Development Plan and the National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons.
66. Iraq welcomed the steps the Government had taken to develop comprehensive policies and an institutional system for the promotion and protection of human rights.
67. Ireland acknowledged the landmark achievement of the peace agreement. However, it expressed concern about the troubling increase in attacks on human rights defenders and social leaders, and urged Colombia to strengthen the rule of law.
68. Italy expressed particular appreciation for the inclusion in the National Development Plan 2014–2018 of guidelines and strategies for consolidating peace and equity and achieving better quality education.
69. The Lao People’s Democratic Republic welcomed the commitment of Colombia to a 20-year National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights for 2014–2034 and hailed the adoption of the National Public Policy on Gender Equity for Women.
70. Lebanon congratulated Colombia on the conclusion of the Final Agreement for Ending the Conflict and Building a Stable and Lasting Peace. That guaranteed effective implementation of human rights, especially for victims of the conflict.
71. Malaysia urged the Government to continue to effectively implement the peace agreement. It appreciated women’s active involvement in the peace process and welcomed the establishment of a subcommittee on gender.
72. Maldives welcomed the Government’s efforts to cooperate with civil society for the effective promotion and protection of human rights. It commended the Government for signing the final agreement with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia-People’s Army.
73. Mexico welcomed the tireless efforts of Colombia to promote peace and wished it every success in implementing the agreement signed with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia. It commended Colombia on accepting a large influx of Venezuelan immigrants.
74. Montenegro acknowledged the Government’s ongoing efforts to protect human rights defenders, but was concerned at the persistent widespread impunity for such attacks. It therefore called on the Government to strengthen the protection afforded to human rights defenders.
75. Morocco welcomed the new comprehensive policy for human rights and international humanitarian law and the related monitoring mechanism. It appreciated the fact that many women had participated in the peace process.
76. Myanmar appreciated the efforts of Colombia to reinforce humanitarian demining and promote mine risk awareness. Myanmar urged Colombia to further promote mine clearance by cooperating with humanitarian demining organizations and the United Nations Mine Action Service.
77. Namibia welcomed recent human rights initiatives, notably the signing and implementation of the peace agreement, the National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights 2014–2034 and the National Plan on Business and Human Rights.

78. Nepal congratulated Colombia on the historic peace agreement signed in 2016. It appreciated the continuous efforts of Colombia to protect human rights through various measures, particularly the National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights.

79. The Netherlands congratulated Colombia on the successful demobilization and disarmament of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, which had helped end the decades-long armed conflict. However, the peace agreement was ambitious, and many challenges were hampering its full implementation.

80. The Niger congratulated the Government on its efforts to reach a peace agreement with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, making it possible to end a long-running conflict and creating new momentum for peace and stability.

81. Nigeria welcomed the adoption by Colombia of the National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons, the National Public Policy on Gender Equity for Women and the Comprehensive Plan to Guarantee Women a Life Free from Violence.

82. Norway commended the efforts of the Government to establish peace with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia and the National Liberation Army, which represented a unique opportunity to strengthen the human rights situation in Colombia.

83. Paraguay stated that the signing and progressive implementation of the Final Agreement for Ending the Conflict and Building a Stable and Lasting Peace allowed Colombia to send a message of peace and reconciliation to the Human Rights Council and the world.

84. The delegation of Colombia highlighted the decisions of the Constitutional Court approving marriage equality and adoption by same-sex couples. The State was committed to non-regression in the protection of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender rights, and a policy was in place guaranteeing the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons. Measures were also being taken to protect the rights of persons with disabilities. Moreover, ethnic communities had been guaranteed the right to prior consultation. Furthermore, the National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons had been adopted.

85. The delegation stated that 30 per cent of public spending had been allocated to the education and health of 15 million children and adolescents. The school dropout rate had fallen to 3 per cent. Some 1.9 million children between the ages of 0 and 5 years old had been given access to nutrition, education and health services, including vaccinations. About 90 per cent of children in urban and rural areas had received the full complement of vaccinations. While the rate of chronic malnutrition among children under 5 years old had fallen, the alarming number of child deaths as a result of malnutrition in La Guajira was a major challenge that Colombia was working to address. The rate of teenage pregnancy had fallen; it currently stood at 17 per cent.

86. Policies had been adopted for the eradication of child labour and the prevention of recruitment of children by illegal armed groups. In addition, Colombia had adopted a national policy on decent work. During the reporting period, 3.5 million people had found employment, 74 per cent of them in the formal sector. The rate of unemployment among women had fallen and the number of attacks against trade unionists had decreased.

87. The delegation stressed the decisive role that women had played in the negotiation process with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia and in the implementation of the peace agreement. The president of the Special Jurisdiction for Peace was a woman, and 53 per cent of magistrates were women. The Special Unit for the Search for Persons deemed as missing in the context of and due to the armed conflict was also led by a woman. The National Public Policy on Gender Equity for Women and the Comprehensive Plan to Guarantee Women a Life Free from Violence were being implemented. Moreover, measures to improve access to justice for women victims of sexual violence had been strengthened, femicide had been defined as a specific offence, and the Protocol for Comprehensive Health Care for Victims of Sexual Violence was being implemented.

88. The “More Women, More Democracy” campaign had resulted in an increase in the number of women standing for election from 20 to 34 per cent between 2011 and 2018; the number of women in Congress had risen from 14 to 22 per cent between 2010 and 2018. In 2017, women occupied 43 per cent of management positions in State entities. Some 8.6 per cent of the armed forces were women.

89. The human rights policy had been developed with the participation of some 9,000 organizations in 2013. Local governments had incorporated actions in their development plans and more than 50 per cent of those plans had been developed using a human rights-based approach.

90. Colombia had a National Plan on Business and Human Rights, which was in line with the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: Implementing the United Nations “Protect, Respect and Remedy” Framework. Progress was currently made in the design of the second phase of the National Plan.

91. Based on the peace agreement and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, Colombia was working on the formulation of the National Human Rights Action Plan, together with civil society. One of the aspects that had yet to be addressed was follow-up to international human rights recommendations. The national information system for monitoring human rights situations had been strengthened with the addition of 40 social, government and academic observatories.

92. A policy had been adopted on the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals. The Government had managed to reduce multidimensional poverty by 13.4 per cent between 2010 and 2017 and the number of Colombians living in extreme poverty had been halved over seven years. In 2017, some 49 per cent of total budget spending had been aimed at reducing poverty.

93. Since 2015, the education sector had ranked first in terms of national budget allocation. As at March 2018, some 95 per cent of the population was covered by health system affiliation. Although achievements had been made in terms of reducing maternal mortality, there was a disparity between urban and rural areas, which mostly affected indigenous and Afrodescendent communities. In order to improve quality of life, 1.5 million homes had been built, half of which had been provided free of charge or subsidized.

94. Regulation for environmental protection had been made more rigorous. The current Government had delimited 30 of the country’s 37 highland areas; 10 ecosystems had been included in the Ramsar List of Wetlands of International Importance and almost 300,000 km<sup>2</sup> of land had been declared protected areas (more than 20 per cent of the national territory). The Government was in the process of ratifying the Paris Agreement on Climate Change and progress was being made on the adoption of regional instruments, such as the Regional Agreement on Access to Information, Public Participation and Justice in Environmental Matters in Latin America and the Caribbean.

95. Peru highlighted the efforts made by Colombia to address organized crime in rural areas where the former Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia used to exert its influence. Peru also noted the measures being taken to uphold the rule of law, ensure respect for human rights and promote access to land in rural areas.

96. The Philippines congratulated Colombia on its historic achievement in forging the peace agreement and on its successful integration of human rights in its National Development Plan 2014–2018.

97. Poland acknowledged the efforts of Colombia to comply with the recommendations it had accepted in 2013, particularly those concerning the protection of women and children.

98. Portugal commended the Government for its efforts to advance the peace process and its positive impact on the enjoyment of human rights in the country.

99. Qatar commended the implementation of structural changes and legal reforms in Colombia in the field of human rights, such as the National Strategy for Guaranteeing Human Rights 2014–2034.

100. The Republic of Korea appreciated the cooperation of Colombia with international and regional human rights bodies, its incorporation of a gender perspective in its National Development Plan, and its formulation of a National Plan on Business and Human Rights.
101. Romania congratulated Colombia for the positive developments since the second review cycle and for the cooperation with civil society and the international community to consolidate its human rights policies.
102. The Russian Federation stated that the ceasefire allowed for the improvement of humanitarian situations in the region. However, the situation remained complicated, particularly in the light of the number of displaced persons.
103. Senegal welcomed the adoption of the National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons 2016–2018, the establishment of the National Disability Council and the accession of Colombia to the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.
104. Serbia welcomed the Government’s determination to submit regular reports to the United Nations human rights bodies and encouraged the authorities to continue to combat human trafficking.
105. Singapore welcomed efforts to reintegrate former Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia members into society and measures such as the establishment of the Comprehensive System of Truth, Justice, Reparations and Non-repetition. It acknowledged the critical roles women had played in the peace process.
106. Slovenia welcomed the increase in enrolment in basic schooling and the fall in the dropout rate in Colombia. However, it was concerned about the significant gaps in education coverage, mostly affecting the most vulnerable groups in society.
107. Spain noted that Colombia had made progress in terms of women’s rights by implementing relevant plans and strategies, and by actively participating in the women and peace and security agenda.
108. Sri Lanka commended Colombia for strengthening its humanitarian demining policy to support mine victims through the provision of health care, physical rehabilitation, reparation measures and measures to educate people on mine risks.
109. The State of Palestine congratulated Colombia for signing the historic peace agreement with the People’s Alternative Revolutionary Force, which would lead to internal peace and prosperity for the Colombian people.
110. Sweden made recommendations and wished Colombia every success in the current review and in implementing the recommendations.
111. Switzerland welcomed the progress accomplished in the peace process, while noting that the participation of numerous groups in the decisions of the State remained insufficient.
112. Thailand acknowledged the efforts of Colombia to eliminate gender-based violence and the reduction in the maternal and infant mortality rates, but noted that the infant mortality rate remained high among indigenous groups.
113. Togo appreciated the improvement of the institutional and legislative framework to protect human rights and encouraged Colombia to continue its efforts to implement measures for land restitution and compensation procedures for indigenous and Afro-Colombian people.
114. Tunisia commended the steps taken to develop a human rights system, including the improvement of the legislative and institutional framework, and valued the efforts made in the field of the peace agreement.
115. The United Kingdom expressed concern about violence against human rights defenders and the significant level of impunity in cases of conflict-related sexual violence, while recognizing the efforts made by Colombia to tackle those challenges.
116. Afghanistan said that the outcomes of the peace process constituted a good practice in terms of bringing about peace and in terms of justice, truth, reparation and the guarantees of non-repetition. It stressed the importance of justice for a lasting peace process.

117. The delegation stated that Colombia had ratified the core international human rights treaties, including the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and the Convention on Cluster Munitions. In addition, the country continued to make contributions to the human rights protection system. The Special Rapporteur on the human rights to safe drinking water and sanitation would be visiting Colombia in 2019.

118. The head of the delegation recognized the importance of international cooperation for the strengthening of human rights, and reiterated his country's commitment to facing challenges. Colombia was willing to share good practices in the areas of business and human rights, the national information system on human rights and international humanitarian law and on peacebuilding.

119. He stressed the importance of the universal periodic review for the improvement and respect of human rights. He thanked the States that had participated in the interactive dialogue and had acknowledged the progress Colombia had made, highlighted the importance of the peace agreement and made constructive recommendations for the consolidation of a culture of human rights.
