

General Assembly

Distr.: General
19 February 2020

English only

Human Rights Council

Forty-third session

24 February–20 March 2020

Agenda item 3

Promotion and protection of all human rights, civil,
political, economic, social and cultural rights,
including the right to development

Written statement* submitted by Jameh Ehyagaran Teb Sonnati Va Salamat Iranian, a non-governmental organization in special consultative status

The Secretary-General has received the following written statement which is circulated in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/31.

[3 February 2020]

* Issued as received, in the language(s) of submission only.

The necessity to promote the right to health through the revival of ancient science

The right to health is certainly one of the human rights of every human being and society. Undoubtedly, today's health science is one of the most advanced science available in the universe that human beings need today more than any other time. Discussions on environmental damage have emerged today as a threat to the right of human life on Earth and endangered the lives of many humans, animals, and plants all over the world. Meanwhile, the Islamic Republic of Iran (Iran) with a history of several thousand years has been recognized as one of the bases of biological, medical and cultural sciences among other modern societies.

One of the most valuable sciences among the ancient Iranians was medical science, which has concrete historical backgrounds in the three branches of herbal medicine, animal medical science, human medical science and surgery. It must be acknowledged that one of the key pillars of today's human rights is achieving the ancient science of ancient countries.

The Jameh Ehyagaran Teb Sonnat Va Salamat Iranian which is an international NGO, is committed to work and practice to expand the knowledge of health and the use of nature in treatment, as well as utilizing Iranian traditional medicine science to reach the UN member states. Undoubtedly, this demand is for the benefit of human beings about their right to health and also in cooperation with the United Nations, it will create a global movement and a health revolution in the world.

We therefore request you to include UN policies for the development of Iranian health sciences worldwide. Definitely, the oriental sciences, especially the original Iranian sciences, such as Iranian traditional medicine or Persian medicine, are well known to the people all over the world. The science of traditional Iranian medicine, most of which is aimed at protecting health, is based on knowledge of temperament. On the other hand, today's human beings have in many cases suffered from a lack of understanding and also lack of self-knowledge in discussing how to live their lives, which is a violation of one's own human rights. If a person is unaware of his or her inner circumstances, there will surely be many problems in choosing the type of food and lifestyle that will impair that person's quality of life.

Knowledge of Iranian medicine and practitioners of this knowledge seek to enhance the quality of today's human life by expanding the cognitive disciplines of Iranian traditional medicine. Certainly, this is in line with the basic human right to a healthy life and is one of the most basic human rights laws. It is reaffirmed that there are many facial, skin, nutritional, and nutritional differences between people in different parts of the world and this is a biological issue among the people of Europe, Africa, Asia and the Oceania.

The knowledge of Iranian traditional medicine, which is based on the knowledge of the temperaments of different people, has provided the foundation for the people's health all over the world. This knowledge certainly enhances the quality of human life, which is one of the main concerns of the World Health Organization and also the Human Rights Organization.

Therefore, this organization calls for the necessary cooperation for the recognition and development of this science in the world in order to realize the health right for all the people all over the world.
