Report of the Argentine Republic on its implementation of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001)*

Argentina has undertaken to cooperate comprehensively with the United Nations in combating international terrorism. The Government is therefore taking steps to implement fully the provisions of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) and to cooperate with Member States both bilaterally and at the regional and international levels.

In the domestic sphere, Argentina has taken the necessary operational decisions, conducted a review of existing legislation in the light of the provisions of resolution 1373 (2001) and is taking whatever measures may be necessary.

At the same time, it has taken steps to enhance its participation in the relevant international agreements.

Replies to the questions from the Counter-Terrorism Committee relating to the implementation of resolution 1373 (2001)

A. Paragraph 1:

Decides that all States shall:

(a) Prevent and suppress the financing of terrorist acts;

What measures if any have been taken to prevent and suppress the financing of terrorist acts in addition to those listed in your responses to questions on 1(b) to (d)?

(b) Criminalize the wilful provision or collection, by any means, directly or indirectly, of funds by their nationals or in their territories with the intention that the funds should be used, or in the knowledge that they are to be used, in order to carry out terrorist acts;

What are the offences and penalties in your country with respect to the activities listed in this subparagraph?

Argentine law does not characterize terrorism or terrorist acts as a separate offence nor does it lay down penalties for such acts. Argentine criminal law says nothing about terrorism being a component of any criminal offence or a general or specific aggravating circumstance. Consequently, it does not characterize as offences actions aimed at financing terrorism or terrorist acts in the manner described in paragraph 1 (b) of the resolution.

In order to analyse and evaluate to what extent Argentine criminal law is in line with international conventions concerning terrorism and prepare any draft legislation that may be necessary, an inter-ministerial committee is being set up. The committee will comprise experts from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, International Trade and Worship, the Ministry of the Interior, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights and the Office of the Public Prosecutor, as well as independent experts well known for their experience and competence in the area. The committee's task will be to characterize as offences the criminal acts referred to in the aforementioned international conventions so that they can be incorporated into the Penal Code within 180 days.

However, certain criminal acts which, owing to their impact in terms of damage to persons or goods, may be related to terrorist acts, are covered by other offences under Argentine criminal law.

Thus, article 210 of the Penal Code defines the offence of unlawful association as participation in an association or group of three or more persons existing for criminal purposes; simply being a member of the association is an offence. This could cover participation of individuals in an organization existing for the purpose of committing certain criminal acts defined in the law which, owing to their impact in terms of damage to persons or goods, may be related to terrorist acts. Such participation might include the financing of criminal acts. The penalty provided for is 3 to 10 years' ordinary or rigorous imprisonment.

Article 210 bis of the Penal Code, concerning aggravated unlawful association lists, inter alia, cooperation or assistance in the creation or maintenance of an unlawful association existing for criminal purposes if this action jeopardizes the operation of the Constitution, as a punishable act. The penalty is from 5 to 20 years' ordinary or rigorous imprisonment.

Certain offences which could be considered acts of terrorism would be covered by the provisions of Title VII, "Offences against public safety", particularly under chapter 1, "Fire and other criminal damage" (art. 186, 187, 188 and 189 bis of the Penal Code), chapter 2, "Offences against the safety of transport and communications" (art. 190 and 191) and chapter 4, "Offences against public health — poisoning or adulterating drinking water, food or medicines" (art. 200 and 202); and of Title VIII, "Offences against public order" (art. 210, 210 bis, 211, 212 and 213 bis), which carry penalties of from 2 to 25 years' ordinary or rigorous imprisonment. The offences defined in articles 217 and 218 of the Aviation Code would also apply in the case of terrorist attacks on aviation.

Argentine legislation defines terrorist acts as "Criminal acts committed by members of unlawful associations or organizations established for the purpose of creating alarm or fear, which are carried out by means of explosive or inflammable substances, weapons or other deadly items, when used to endanger the life or physical integrity of an indeterminate number of persons" (Act No. 25,241 on repentant offenders). These acts are not described for the purpose of defining a specific offence and penalty, but solely for the purposes of the application of this Act which provides for a reduced penalty for anyone who collaborates effectively in the investigation of such acts. Thus, the purpose of this provision is to obtain information in order to prevent or suppress terrorist acts.

Act No. 25,246 on concealment and laundering of the proceeds of criminal acts, of 13 April 2000, published on 11 May 2000, was incorporated into the Penal Code. Article 5 of this Act establishes the Financial Intelligence Unit (UIF). Article 6, which describes the Unit's functions, states that: "The Financial Intelligence Unit shall be responsible for the analysing, processing and transmitting of information for the purpose of preventing the laundering of assets derived, inter alia, from 'unlawful acts committed by unlawful associations (art. 210 (d) of the Penal Code) organized for the commission of offences for political or racial purposes”.

According to article 13 of the Act, the Unit may order and direct the analyses of acts, activities and operations which, under the provisions of this Act, may constitute laundering of assets derived from the unlawful acts described in article 6 of this Act and, as appropriate, submit the evidence obtained to the Office of the Public Prosecutor so that the appropriate procedures can be initiated (para. 2). It may also collaborate with the judicial organs and the Office of the Public Prosecutor in the criminal prosecution of offences covered by this Act (para. 3).

According to Article 14 of the Act, the Unit may request reports, documents, records and any other item it considers useful in carrying out its functions, from any public body, whether national, provincial or municipal, and from physical or legal persons, public or private; those receiving such requests are legally obliged to provide the requested items within the specified period (para. 1). It may also issue directives and instructions which must be observed and implemented by the subjects concerned by this Act, after consultation with the competent supervisory bodies (para. 10).

Article 19 provides that when the information obtained or the analyses carried out by the Unit contain sufficient evidence to suggest that one of the offences defined in this Act has been committed, that evidence shall immediately be submitted to the Office of the Public Prosecutor so that criminal proceedings can be initiated.

This Act modified article 278 of the Penal Code, incorporating the offence of money-laundering, defined as follows: “A prison sentence of 2 to 10 years and a fine of 2 to 10 times the amount of the transaction shall be imposed upon any person who converts, transfers, manages, sells, profits from or uses in any other manner sums of money or other assets derived from an offence in which he did not participate, in such a manner that the original assets or derived assets may as a result appear to be of legal origin, provided that their value exceeds the sum of 50,000 pesos, either by a single act or by the repetition of various interrelated acts”. The minimum penalty is set at five years’ imprisonment if the offender commits the act habitually or as a member of the association or group created for the purpose of committing acts of this nature (para. 1 (a) and (b)).

There is an administrative penal regime for legal persons committing acts of money-laundering: “A fine of 2 to 10 times the value of the assets which are the object of the offence shall be imposed upon any legal person a branch or agent of which has used assets of criminal origin in such a way that they may consequently appear to be of legal origin” (art. 23). The law also provides that failure to comply with the obligation to inform the Financial Intelligence Unit is punishable by a fine, which may be imposed upon both the physical person and the legal person in whose name he acts (art. 24).

Implementing regulations for the Act were provided for in Decree No. 1500/01, which provides that the Financial Intelligence Unit shall comprise experts from the Central Bank of Argentina, the National Securities Commission, the Programming Department for the Prevention of Drug Addiction and for Combating Drug Trafficking (SEDRONAR) and two independent experts. Decree No. 1547 of 28 November 2001 specifies the identity of the members of the Unit.

Argentina is a member of the Financial Action Task Force on Money-Laundering (FATF) and took part in the plenary meeting held in Washington, D.C., on 29 and 30 October 2001, at which the FATF special recommendations on terrorist financing and the corresponding plan of action were adopted. In accordance with the commitment it has entered into, the Argentine Government is required to adopt those recommendations and provide information to FATF.

Argentina is also a member of the South American Financial Action Group (GAFISUD), created at Cartagena on 8 December 2000. The headquarters of GAFISUD and the office of its Executive Secretary were established in Buenos Aires on 3 December 2001.

(c) Freeze without delay funds and other financial assets or economic resources of persons who commit, or attempt to commit, terrorist acts or participate in or facilitate the commission of terrorist acts; of entities owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such persons; and of persons and entities acting on behalf of, or at the direction of such persons and entities, including funds derived or generated from property owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such persons and associated persons and entities;

What legislation and procedures exist for freezing accounts and assets at banks and financial institutions? It would be helpful if States supplied examples of any relevant action taken.

For the purpose of freezing funds and other financial assets or economic resources belonging to persons or entities linked to terrorist acts, the Government incorporated the provisions of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) into the country's domestic legislation by Executive Decree No. 1235/01, dated 5 October 2001. The decree requires all agencies of the executive power, federal government departments and agencies, provincial governments, municipal authorities and the autonomous government of the city of Buenos Aires to apply within their respective jurisdictions whatever measures may be necessary to comply with the decisions contained in resolution 1373 (2001). The purpose of Decree No. 1235/01 is to publicize the resolution so that it will be known and applied by the competent authorities.

The executive power had earlier promulgated Decree No. 253 of 17 March 2000 which, by making them known in the domestic legal system, gave effect to the provisions of Security Council resolution 1267 (1999) which calls for the freezing of the funds and other financial resources of the Taliban (para. 4 (b)).

Decree No. 1035 of 17 August 2001 is designed to implement resolution 1333 (2000), which calls for the freezing of funds and financial assets of Osama bin Laden and the Al-Qa`idah network, and of individuals and entities associated with them (para. 8 (c)).

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, International Trade and Worship, pursuant to the provisions of Decree No. 1035/2001, through Ministerial Resolutions No. 2973 of 26 September 2001, No. 3165 of 11 October 2001, No. 3291 of 25 October 2001, No. 3397 of 8 November 2001 and No. 3711 of 11 December 2001, published in the official gazette of the Argentine Republic, has indicated which funds and financial resources have been designated for freezing by the sanctions committee established pursuant to resolution 1267 (1999) and has issued lists of individuals and entities identified by that Committee for the purpose of freezing their funds and financial assets pursuant to paragraph 4 (b) of resolution 1267 (1999) and paragraph 8 (c) of resolution 1333 (2000).

Pursuant to these norms, the financial regulatory authorities adopted legislation to freeze the funds and financial assets of individuals and entities included in the lists identified by the sanctions committee and publicized in the above-mentioned ministerial resolutions.

The Central Bank of the Argentine Republic (BCRA), as the governing body of the Argentine banking and financial system, issued Communication "B" 6986 of 26 September 2001, Communication "B" 7017 of 18 October 2001 and Communication "B" 7023 of 25 October 2001. The first directed "all entities in the Argentine financial system to implement Decree No. 1035/01 by immediately freezing all funds and financial assets which may have been deposited by individuals and entities and associations included in Annex 1" (which contains the lists identified by the Security Council sanctions committee), and directed "all the above-mentioned entities to implement this resolution and provide information, within one business day, on any funds and financial assets deposited by the above-mentioned persons".

The second incorporates additions to the list and extends the scope of the freezing measures and the request to provide information to "entities owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the above-mentioned persons ... and by persons and entities acting on behalf of or at the direction of such persons and entities, including with regard to funds derived or generated from property owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such persons and by the persons and entities associated with them". It also requires all entities in the financial system "to step up measures to verify the identity of their customers and [to comply with] other obligations set out in the norms on prevention of money laundering and other illicit activities". The third communication incorporates recent additions to the list of persons and entities subject to the measures on freezing of funds.

In addition, according to the Central Bank, among the preventive measures being considered are the recommendations adopted by the international financial community, which are based on the following four elements: (a) familiarity with the customer; (b) registration of financial operations which involve movements of funds exceeding a certain amount; (c) provision of information to the Central Bank on any suspicious, unusual, unjustified or unnecessarily complex transaction, which should be assessed on the basis of guidelines before being carried out; and (d) analysis of transfers to and from uncooperative countries.

The Central Bank is evaluating additional measures in accordance with the Special Recommendations on Terrorist Financing, issued by the extraordinary plenary session of the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering (FATF), held in October in Washington, D.C.

The National Superintendency of Insurance reports that it has checked its records, which list the governing boards, oversight bodies and shareholders of the insurance entities, and found no mention of any person named on the list.

The National Securities Commission (CNV), as the controlling and oversight authority, incorporated the system for the prevention of money-laundering outlined in Chapter XXII of the revised text of 2001 (N.T. 2001) into its regulatory framework, known as Regulations of the National Securities Commission. In the context of Decree No. 1035/01, the National Securities Commission, under Chapter XXVIII entitled “Transitional provisions”, added articles 7 to 10 which, pursuant to its General Resolutions No. 375 of 27 September 2001 and No. 377 of 25 October 2001, direct “securities markets, commodities exchanges, the Mercado Abierto Electrónico S.A., the Caja de Valores S.A., the futures and options markets, mutual funds investment companies, financial trustees and any individual or entity subject to control and oversight by the National Securities Commission, pursuant to Executive Decree No. 1035/01, to freeze, without delay, funds and financial assets of persons or entities identified on the lists”, and “to ensure that those or other funds or financial resources are not utilized by persons or entities whose names appear thereon” (art. 7). They further direct those mentioned in article 7 to comply with the duty to provide information, and the Mercado Abierto Electrónico S.A., the futures and options markets and the securities markets to adopt the necessary regulations for the proper execution of the executive order (art. 8, 9 and 10).

As far back as 1998, the Federal Administration of Public Income (AFIP) had set up a system of information, under General Resolution AFIP-DGI No. 160/98 of 2 July 1998, requiring all financial entities, stockbrokers and open market dealers to report all bank and/or securities transactions in which the amounts credited exceed US$ 8,000, both for companies and individuals, whether national or foreign.

General Instruction 591/01, issued within the framework of the application of these norms and Act No. 25,246 mentioned above, instructs AFIP departments to establish the necessary computer links with a view to detecting operations which, a priori, seem suspicious.

Apart from the above-mentioned cases of freezing funds and financial resources, under Argentine procedural rules, funds in bank accounts cannot be frozen without a court order.

Moreover, in the Argentine legal system, provisional attachment (art. 518 of the Code of Penal Procedure (CPP)) and seizure of assets (art. 231 of the Code of Penal Procedure) are precautionary measures taken to preserve assets during the penal proceedings, while confiscation (art. 23 of the Penal Code) is ancillary to the penalty imposed at the sentencing stage.

(d) Prohibit their nationals or any persons and entities within their territories from making any funds, financial assets or economic resources or financial or other related services available, directly or indirectly, for the benefit of persons who commit or attempt to commit or facilitate or participate in the commission of terrorist acts, or entities owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by such persons and of persons and entities acting on behalf of or at the direction of such persons.

What measures exist to prohibit the activities listed in this subparagraph?

As for prohibiting nationals or persons or entities in the national territory from making funds, financial assets or economic resources or other related services available, it should be noted that deterrent measures and sanctions against such activities are defined in the characterizations of the offences and penalties contained in the Law on Concealment and Laundering of Assets of Criminal Origin and in the characterizations contained in the Penal Code, referred to in preceding paragraphs.

Moreover, the generic offence of participation in the commission of a crime, referred to in articles 45 and 46 of the Penal Code, is applicable in this case.

Administrative sanctions against entities are outlined in the Act on Concealment and Laundering of Assets of Criminal Origin and in the general norms to be applied by the Inspectorate of Entities when an entity violates the object for which it was established; these include deprivation of the legal capacity to operate under the Argentine legal system.

B. Paragraph 2:

Decides also that all States shall:

(a) Refrain from providing any form of support, active or passive, to entities or persons involved in terrorist acts, including by suppressing recruitment of members of terrorist groups and eliminating the supply of weapons to terrorists;

What legislation or other measures are in place to give effect to this subparagraph? In particular, what offences in your country prohibit (i) recruitment to terrorist groups and (ii) the supply of weapons to terrorists? What other measures help prevent such activities?

The Argentine Republic provides no support whatsoever to terrorism and strongly condemns States that do so. It has coordinated and helped set up mechanisms at the subregional level and in MERCOSUR to prevent and combat terrorism. It has actively participated in the meeting of legal experts of the Rio Group held in Santiago, Chile, from 5 to 6 November 2001, whose purpose was to study ways in which the countries of the Group could comply with the requirements of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) and its guidelines. Argentina participated in the Declaration on Terrorism by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Rio Group, adopted in New York on 14 November 2001. It promoted and took part in the adoption of the Political Declaration against Terrorism by the Ibero-American summit meeting held in Lima on 24 November 2001. At the inter-American level, Argentina is taking an active role in the Inter-American Committee against Terrorism (CICTE), of which it is Vice-Chairman, and is promoting the drafting of an inter-American convention on the prevention and punishment of terrorism, with a view to complementing and supporting United Nations efforts in this field. It is noteworthy that Argentina hosted the Second Inter-American Specialized Conference on Terrorism (Mar del Plata, 23 and 24 November 1998), which adopted the Commitment of Mar del Plata, leading to the establishment of the Inter-American Committee against Terrorism (CICTE).

(i) Recruitment of members of terrorist groups

At the domestic level, Argentine criminal law includes the category of "recruitment" under the offence of unlawful association (art. 210 of the Penal Code), which could be applied to members of terrorist groups, whether as perpetrators, accomplices or participants.

Article 211 (on public intimidation) imposes a penalty of two to six years' imprisonment on anyone who, in order to frighten the public or incite disturbances or disorder, makes signs, raises alarms, threatens to commit an act that will endanger the public or uses other material means suited to producing such effects. The use of explosives, harmful chemicals or similar materials for such purposes, provided that the act does not constitute an attack against public security, is penalized by 3 to 10 years' imprisonment.

With regard to an attack against public security, article 213 of the Penal Code provides that "anyone who organizes or takes part in permanent or temporary groups not covered by article 210 of this Code whose primary or secondary purpose is to impose their ideas or combat those of others by force or threat shall be punished with three to eight years' confinement or imprisonment solely by virtue of being a member of the group".

With regard to operational measures, Argentina's framework law is Domestic Security Act No. 24,059 and its regulations.

The operational and intelligence unit is the National Police Force (ENP), established with the institutional support of the Argentine Federal Police (PFA), the Argentine National Gendarmerie (GNA), the Argentine Coast Guard (PNA), the National Aeronautical Police (PAN) and the provincial police of the 23 districts that make up the national territory.

One of the most important of the other agencies that cooperate with ENP is the Intelligence Secretariat (formerly the Secretariat of State Intelligence (SIDE)), which now also includes the support formerly provided by the National Intelligence Centre (CNI), pursuant to the new National Intelligence Act No. 25,520 of 6 December 2001.

The main preventive effort is being made in large cities and key border areas (land, river and sea borders and the airspace above them); in particular, the so-called "tri-border" area (where Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay converge) is being carefully watched.

The Domestic Security Secretariat coordinates any joint and combined ENP operations in which it participates, and also any inter-agency operations, both in Argentina and abroad, that relate to the problem of domestic security.

Pursuant to Domestic Security Act No. 24,059, ENP is actively involved in intelligence and preventive operations to detect and/or neutralize the activities of groups or organizations that are or might be linked to terrorist organizations.

These activities also extend to the effort to control the potential sale of illegal weapons (by monitoring materiel depots, weapons for civilian use, explosives, gunpowder, munitions and related materials) in the national territory, including by setting up roadblocks throughout the country, in accordance with Act No. 20,429, articles 23 and 25 (on weapons, gunpowder, explosives and related materials).

On 18 May 1996, the Tri-border Tripartite Command was set up, originally composed of permanent members of the domestic security forces of Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay. Its primary purpose is to strengthen border cooperation in matters of domestic security, and especially to combat international terrorism, drug trafficking, money-laundering, smuggling of weapons, munitions and explosives and other offences of organized transnational crime.

Uruguay currently participates in the Tripartite Command as an observer; the MERCOSUR associated States Bolivia and Chile are scheduled to become observers soon.

PFA, PNA and GNA are permanent institutional members from Argentina. Also invited to participate are the National Aeronautical Police, the Intelligence Secretariat (formerly SIDE), customs and mission police and others, depending on the security needs at any particular moment.

In recent years, the basic operation of the Tripartite Command has allowed for a useful exchange of information and joint and combined action in a context of systematic cooperation among the active forces and effective institutional integration.

(ii) Supply of weapons

With regard to the supply of weapons, Argentine law imposes a penalty of 5 to 15 years' imprisonment on anyone who, "for the purposes of helping to commit crimes against public security or causing damage to machinery or production, manufactures, supplies, acquires, steals or possesses bombs, nuclear materials or devices, explosives, inflammables, asphyxiating or toxic substances or substances or materials used in their preparation" (art. 189 bis of the Penal Code).

The same penalty applies to anyone who provides instructions for the preparation of the substances or materials referred to in the previous paragraph, when they know or should have known that they are aiding or abetting the commission of offences against public security or acts intended to cause damage to machinery or production.

The Penal Code imposes penalties of from three to six years' imprisonment for merely carrying a weapon for civilian use without proper authorization or for the mere possession of a war weapon or the materials referred to in the first paragraph of this section without proper authorization. The penalty is 4 to 8 years' imprisonment or confinement for the stockpiling of weapons and up to 10 years for the stockpiling of war weapons, munitions, or parts or machinery to produce such weapons (art. 189 bis).

With regard to government policies designed to meet public security needs, the National Arms Registry (RENAR) is responsible for recording and controlling transactions relating to firearms, munitions or explosives; this work is relevant to achieving the intended aim, while at the same time ensuring that citizens can exercise their controlled right to possess and use the above-mentioned materials legally.

As for gunpowder, explosives and related materials, article 20 of Act No. 20,429 (Weapons Act) provides that importers, exporters, manufacturers, clients and all those who trade, manufacture or use gunpowder, explosives and related materials must register with the Ministry of Defence. Gunpowder, explosives and related materials may be imported, exported, manufactured, marketed and used only by agents registered with the National Arms Registry referred to in the previous paragraph.

The current system for controlling sensitive exports and war materiel is regulated by the provisions of Decree No. 603 of 9 April 1992, which set up the National Commission for the Control of Sensitive Exports and War Materiel.

Since 9 October 2001, Argentina has been a party to the understanding between MERCOSUR, the Republic of Bolivia and the Republic of Chile concerning the Joint Mechanism for the Registering of Buyers and Sellers of Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives and other Related Materials of 23 July 1998 and the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives and Other Related Materials, signed in Washington, D.C., on 14 November 1997.

(b) Take the necessary steps to prevent the commission of terrorist acts, including by provision of early warning to other States by exchange of information;

What other steps are being taken to prevent the commission of terrorist acts, and in particular, what early warning mechanisms exist to allow exchange of information with other States?

As a result of the events of 11 September 2001, the Government of the Argentine Republic has taken the following steps:

1. Issued a permanent alert to the federal forces (PFA, PNA and GNA) "... on the control of all locations whose importance or state of unrest makes them susceptible to terrorist acts ..."
2. Issued a permanent alert to the provincial police, recommending full deployment of branches and/or specialized groups that specialize in preventing and combating terrorism.
3. Announced a temporary alert of all civil defence offices in the provinces and in the City of Buenos Aires.
4. Issued a note to the security secretariats of MERCOSUR and associated countries to expedite the circulation of an information bulletin in the context of regional action to "coordinate procedures for immediate collaboration between competent agencies of the signatory countries in concrete situations of terrorist risk" (adopted on 8 June 2001).
5. Coordinated with the Department of International Organizations of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to study the feasibility of convening a special meeting of the Inter-American Committee against Terrorism (CICTE) under the auspices of the Organization of American States as soon as possible.

It is important to note that Argentina's ENP forces participate in the Specialized Working Group on Terrorism, a subgroup of the Permanent Working Group established at the meeting of Ministers of the Interior of the members of MERCOSUR and Bolivia and Chile for the coordination of action against international terrorism.

The Domestic Security Secretariat is the regulatory body for Argentina and directs its delegation's participation.

The above-mentioned measures have made it possible to devise and strengthen early-warning mechanisms and detailed procedures for monitoring world and regional events at an effective level of cooperation.

ENP also actively participates in the exchange of intelligence and in many joint preventive operations.

As for the National Intelligence System, the Domestic Security Secretariat keeps in close and continual institutional contact with the Intelligence Secretariat (SI), the agency that directs the National Intelligence System in accordance with its mandate under the new National Intelligence Act referred to above.

The Argentine Coast Guard is developing strict security measures in Argentine port terminals consistent with international guidelines and similar procedures adopted internationally by other countries:

- International Maritime Organization (IMO), Maritime Safety Committee Circular 443.
- Code of Federal Regulations of the United States (Security of passenger vessels and terminals).
- Recommendations of the International Civil Aviation Organization (applied to air terminals).
- Navigation and Vessel Inspection Circular No. 3-96, CH-1 of the United States Coast Guard.

The Argentine Coast Guard has also tailored its operational activity to the new international procedures, redefining the following five “Priority Areas of Operational Sensitivity” (ASOP):

ASOP ICIA: comprises the production of basic support intelligence in all fields to neutralize and prevent any type of potential threat to domestic security.

ASOP NORDESTE: comprises the tri-border area and deals with the problems of navigation across and along the Paraná, Paraguay and Iguazú rivers.

ASOP DELTA: comprises the island group of San Nicolás-San Isidro and all the watercourses connecting it with the Eastern Republic of Uruguay where there is intensive navigation by both commercial vessels and pleasure craft.

ASOP RIOPLA: comprises the focal area of the River Plate, with special reference to the ports of Tigre, Buenos Aires, Dock Sud and La Plata, because of its connection with international merchant shipping and the large number of passenger vessels.

ASOP ATLÁNTICA: comprises the exclusive economic zone, ports and international shipping arriving in our country or engaged in innocent passage.

In port and passenger terminals, the Argentine Coast Guard has introduced security measures which also comply with international guidelines and establish the following levels of security:

Security level I: a precautionary level of security adopted when there is a verifiable threat of an illicit action against a vessel or terminal.

Security level II: a precautionary level of security adopted when there is a possible threat of an illicit action against a vessel or terminal and information indicates that terrorists are likely to be active in that connection.

Security level III: a precautionary level of security adopted when the threat of an illicit action against a vessel or terminal is probable or imminent and information indicates that terrorists have chosen specific targets.

On the basis of the global, regional and national domestic security situation, the Argentine Coast Guard has adopted security level II for port and passenger terminals in view of the intensive processing of international tourist passenger vessels and in accordance with the measures adopted by the United States Coast Guard, in conformity with the standards of Navigation and Vessel Inspection Circular No. 3-96, CH-1, the Code of Federal Regulations of the United States, the maritime safety manual and Circular 443 of the IMO Maritime Safety Committee.

In addition, the Argentine Coast Guard has set up special surveillance of vital facilities throughout its area of jurisdiction (sources of water supply, the piles of international bridges, power stations and dams).

For the fight against international terrorism, GNA through the Intelligence Directorate and the Special Counter-Terrorism Intelligence Unit, maintains close reciprocal cooperation with the national agencies of the ENP and related international agencies.

The National Aeronautical Police (PAN), within its specific field of jurisdiction, keeps the airport security measures fully operational; to that end, and in compliance with Law 21.521/77 and with the provisions of the National Airport Security Programme, published in Boletín Oficial No. 29.738 of 24 September 2001, resolution 383/01 was implemented at level III threat corresponding to a situation in which information obtained indicates that terrorist groups or another hostile organization with a known capacity to attack civil aviation will probably carry out attacks against targets in third States, or that action that will have a direct impact on civil aviation in the Argentine Republic has begun or is about to begin.

Furthermore, members of PAN act as liaison officers with the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol) and the special operations group coordinated by the Domestic Security Secretariat and responsible for the entire range of intelligence and operational issues in the fight against transnational organized crime.

(c) Deny safe haven to those who finance, plan, support, or commit terrorist acts, or provide safe havens;

What legislation or procedures exist for denying safe haven to terrorists, such as laws for excluding or expelling the types of individuals referred to in this subparagraph? It would be helpful if States supplied examples of any relevant action taken.

In Argentina, refugee status is regulated by the Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees of 1951 and its Protocol of 1967. Decree 464/1985 establishing the Committee on Eligibility for Refugee Status set up the national body through which requests for safe haven are channelled.

Furthermore, UNHCR has published a Handbook on Procedures and Criteria for Determining Refugee Status which provides guidance for the decisions of the Committee.

According to the Handbook, Article 1F, of the 1951 Convention “enumerates the categories of persons who are not considered to be deserving of international protection” and who are excluded from refugee status. Article 1F states that the provisions of the Convention “shall not apply to any person with respect to whom there are serious reasons for considering that:

(a) He has committed a crime against peace, a war crime or a crime against humanity, as defined in the international instruments drawn up to make provision in respect of such crimes;

(b) He has committed a serious non-political crime outside the country of refuge prior to his admission to that country as a refugee;

(c) He has been guilty of acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.”

The Convention does not refer explicitly to terrorism. However, the specified reasons for exclusion are typical of illegal acts to which terrorist action normally gives rise and therefore members of terrorist organizations are implicitly excluded from refugee status.

In that connection, it should be pointed out that Argentina considers terrorist acts as serious ordinary crimes and that the reasons for exclusion referred to in article 1F (b) apply directly, in principle, to applicants with respect to whom there are serious reasons for considering that they have committed such acts.

In addition, the Convention provides that in order for these clauses to apply it is sufficient to establish that there are “serious reasons for considering” that one of the acts described has been committed. Formal proof of previous penal prosecution is not required.

Similarly, the Committee on Eligibility for Refugee Status applies the criteria of UNHCR where there is doubt as to the “common” or “political” nature of the crime committed. UNHCR recommends the application of less rigorous standards to serious common crimes than to political crimes but establishes at the same time that in the latter case, the acts committed must be proportional to the alleged objective and that in no case can they involve the perpetration of atrocities.

With respect to the case of crimes against peace, war crimes or crimes against humanity (article 1F (a)), the UNHCR criteria, which are applied in Argentina, require that, although those provisions are aimed principally at persons who have performed official functions, they are also applicable to persons who have committed such crimes in the framework of various non-governmental groupings, whether officially recognized or clandestine.

(d) Prevent those who finance, plan, facilitate or commit terrorist acts from using their respective territories for those purposes against other States or their citizens;

What legislation or procedures exist to prevent terrorists acting from your territory against other States or citizens? It would be helpful if States supplied examples of any relevant action taken.

In addition to the measures and rules referred to in paragraph 1 (d), it should be pointed out that under article 210 of the Penal Code, which defines the offence of unlawful association, anyone who decides to participate in an association or group of three or more persons existing for criminal purposes, simply by virtue of being a member of the association is criminally punishable irrespective of whether the crimes are committed in the territory of the Republic, in places subject to its jurisdiction or elsewhere against other States or their citizens. According to this definition, the participation of individuals in an organization that is intended to commit certain criminal acts characterized as crimes which, on the basis of their consequences in terms of injury to persons or damage to property, might be analogous to acts of terrorism abroad, could be regarded as criminal. Such participation might include the financing, planning or facilitation of such acts.

From the operational point of view, all the forces belonging to the ENP have drawn up and are implementing operational and intelligence plans and programmes providing for coordination and cooperation within the national internal security system.

The Security Secretariat has actively been performing its coordination function as required by law.

PAN, through the Department of Aviation Security, keeps in force a special directive known as annex ALFA which establishes the objective of putting into effect security measures, since the events of 11 September 2001 in the United States of America, in all Argentine airports and which also contains recommendations on the inspection and registration of passengers, the inspection of aircraft, checked baggage, cargo, control of entry points, boundaries of the public/aeronautical sector, embarkation halls, cleaning staff and special considerations. PAN assists the National Directorate of Immigration; the control of passenger documentation at international airports is carried out by the immigration authorities by agreement with that body.

On the basis of a bilateral agreement on air transport services between the United States of America and Argentina, PAN has personnel qualified and trained in international aviation security, crisis management, hostage negotiation, tactical response group and the recovery of hostages and aircraft, and countermeasures in the event of incidents involving explosives, the protection of dignitaries and VIPs.

For its part, PAN has strengthened the security measures in the frontier zone by means of the following:

- Creation of river monitoring units: in order to provide adequate and effective security in the sector, specially trained personnel operate in a law-enforcement capacity in the specific functions of safety of shipping, protection of the environment and public safety, supported by adequate transport and technological backup.

These river monitoring units reinforce the forces normally deployed in the area, joining them immediately wherever their presence is required.

- Redeployment of aerial units: in order to achieve better and more effective coverage of the critical sector, air units have been moved to Misiones and Corrientes provinces.

Following the attacks against the Israeli embassy and the Asociación Mutual Israelita Argentina (AMIA), the Argentine National Gendarmerie made a nationwide survey of all foreign consular offices, in particular Arab and Israeli offices, which also covered the schools, sports clubs and headquarters of such communities, in order to define specific security and support procedures capable of assisting in the prevention of terrorist acts; evacuation drills and plans for the coordination of assistance and rescue activities were also included, in conjunction with other institutions linked with civil defence.

GNA, together with other federal forces, is part of the special investigation unit for the AMIA incident created by decree 452/00 which are collaborating actively in the investigation of the incident. In addition, coordination plans for particular components of the force have been prepared in order to strengthen the capability for the prevention, investigation and possible suppression of terrorist acts.

GNA has the task of protecting various Argentine diplomatic missions, ensuring physical security within the facilities and the security of persons working there. For that purpose, the required security surveys are made and agreement is reached with similar forces in the countries where the diplomatic headquarters are located so as to coordinate security measures to prevent any terrorist action.

(e) Ensure that any person who participates in the financing, planning, preparation or perpetration of terrorist acts or in supporting terrorist acts is brought to justice and ensure that, in addition to any other measures against them, such terrorist acts are established as serious criminal offences in domestic laws and regulations and that the punishment duly reflects the seriousness of such terrorist acts;

What steps have been taken to establish terrorist acts as serious criminal offences and to ensure that the punishment reflects the seriousness of such terrorist acts? Please supply examples of any convictions obtained and the sentence given.

Argentine criminal law does not recognize the category of "serious criminal offences". Nevertheless, and taking into account the standard of the sentence for unlawful association (article 210 of the Penal Code), it is arguable that criminal acts established as crimes which, by virtue of their consequences in terms of injury to persons or damage to property might be analogous to acts of terrorism, could be regarded as serious criminal offences.

The interministerial commission referred to in paragraph 1 (a) and (b) provides for the prosecution of persons who commit the offences referred to and the inclusion of the penalties corresponding to those offences, bearing in mind the seriousness of the acts in relation to other criminal acts covered by the Argentine penal code.

The Argentine Republic suffered two serious terrorist attacks, against the Embassy of Israel in 1991 and against the Asociación Mutual Israelita Argentina (AMIA) in 1994, which were both investigated by the Argentine courts.

The case of the Israeli Embassy (case S.143 XXIV) came before the Supreme Court of Justice, in accordance with the provision of the Constitution, which confers jurisdiction on the Court in cases affecting diplomatic legations. The Court established a Special Secretariat to handle the investigation, but it is still trying to find those responsible. The Court has issued a number of national and international arrest warrants for those members of Islamic Jihad regarding whom there is enough information for them to be charged and prosecuted.

The attack against AMIA (case 1156, labelled "633 Pasteur Street. Offence: murder, injuries, damage") is being heard by the National Court for Federal Criminal and Correctional Cases No. 9, Registry No. 17. The proceedings are under way and letters rogatory have been sent to various countries; many of them still await a reply.

In February 2000, part of the case was moved for trial before Federal Oral Tribunal No. 3, where hearings started on 24 September 2001, while the investigation of the rest of the case is continuing. The cases brought to trial relate to persons who participated in the attack as accessories after the fact or as participants in a variety of offences, including murder, injury or damage aggravated under Act No. 23,592 concerning the suppression of discriminatory acts or omissions. Some of the suspects, although their cases were dismissed as regards their participation in the attack, were found guilty by Oral Tribunal No. 4 of possessing and stockpiling weapons of war. It should be noted that a reward of up to US$ 3 million has been offered for anyone providing information and that anyone cooperating with the investigation would be eligible for a reduced sentence, as stated above.

(f) Afford one another the greatest measure of assistance in connection with criminal investigations or criminal proceedings relating to the financing or support of terrorist acts, including assistance in obtaining evidence in their possession necessary for the proceedings;

What procedures and mechanisms are in place to assist other States? Please provide any available details of how these have been used in practice.

The Argentine Republic is party to a number of bilateral and multilateral agreements concerning extradition and legal assistance in criminal matters.

- Bilateral agreements concerning legal assistance in criminal matters:

Australia (1990), Brazil (1880), Canada (2000), Colombia (1997), Chile (1935), Italy (1987), Paraguay (1880), Peru (1999), Spain (1987), United States (1990).

- Multilateral agreements concerning legal assistance in criminal matters:

Protocol on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, signed by the Common Market of the Southern Cone (MERCOSUR) (Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay), 1996.

- Bilateral extradition agreements:

Australia (1988), Belgium (1886), Brazil (1961), Italy (1987), Netherlands (1893), Paraguay (1996), Republic of Korea (1995), Spain (1987), Switzerland (1906), United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (1889), United States (1997) and Uruguay (1996).

The 1889 extradition treaty with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland is in force also in the following countries: Canada, Kenya, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea and South Africa.

- Multilateral extradition agreements:

Treaty on International Criminal Law (Montevideo, 23 January 1889); Inter-American Convention on Extradition (Montevideo, 26 December 1933).

Over the past few years, the Republic has also been negotiating a series of new bilateral treaties on extradition and legal cooperation with countries with which treaties had previously been lacking and updating the older existing treaties. A large number of administrative agreements also exist between the relevant Argentine agencies and their counterparts in third countries.

In the absence of a treaty, requests for extradition or legal assistance in criminal matters are regulated by Act 24.767 concerning international cooperation in criminal matters. Article 1 of the Act provides that the Argentine Republic shall afford any State that so requests the fullest cooperation in the investigation, trial or punishment of offences under the jurisdiction of that country. In other words, legal assistance in criminal matters and extradition are mandatory for the Argentine authorities in the circumstances provided for under the Act, even when there is no treaty with the requesting State.

The broad spirit of cooperation enshrined in the law is expressed in certain principles, such as the principle that, in determining the competence of the requesting country with regard to the offence to which the request relates, that country's legislation shall apply; the fact that the offence comes also under Argentine jurisdiction shall not constitute an obstacle to the provision of assistance, except in certain extradition cases (art. 5). Although the extradition of nationals is not prohibited under the Act, nationals are given the option of being tried by an Argentine court. In that case extradition is not in order (art. 12). Lastly, it should be noted that legal assistance must be extended even when the action prompting the request is not an offence in Argentina, except in certain cases, such as the confiscation of goods or the searching of houses (art. 68).

(g) Prevent the movement of terrorists or terrorist groups by effective border controls and controls on issuance of identity papers and travel documents, and through measures for preventing counterfeiting, forgery or fraudulent use of identity papers and travel documents;

How do border controls in your country prevent the movement of terrorists? How do your procedures for issuance of identity papers and travel documents support this? What measures exist to prevent their forgery, etc.?

(i) Border controls

The primary responsibility for international border control in our country falls to federal forces whose jurisdiction and competence extend to the international border. In this context, the duties of each force may be summarized as follows:

- The National Aeronautical Police (PAN) monitors the national and international airports, assisting the immigration authorities and, in particular, with airport security. It operates around the clock, 24 hours a day.
- The Argentine Coast Guard (PNA) monitors both authorized crossing points (ports) and unauthorized points (other river, lake and sea borders). It, too, operates around the clock.

PNA has fixed and mobile units made up of men and vehicles for patrolling on land, by air (using helicopters and seaplanes), river (using small craft and coast guard vessels) and sea (using large coast guard vessels).

It also maintains close cooperation with similar forces in neighbouring countries.

PNA is also charged with assisting the National Directorate of Migration (DNM).

- The Argentine National Gendarmerie (GNA) has a permanent staff which basically covers the whole land border. Its responsibilities also cover authorized border crossing points and unauthorized sectors.

It has a fixed operational unit and also mobile units comprising patrols on foot, on horseback, by mule, by motorbike, in small craft (on the waters of the Uruguay river above San Javier) and in seaplanes (helicopters or aeroplanes).

There is constant and close cooperation with similar forces in neighbouring countries.

At some major crossings, such as Santo Tomé-Sao Borja, Paso de los Libres-Uruguaiana, Colón-Paysandú, Iguazú-Fray Bentos and Cristo Redentor (the border with Chile) controls are carried out jointly with customs and migration control bodies and similar forces from neighbouring countries.

- The Argentine Federal Police (PFA) polices the railways and is responsible for international rail crossing points.

In the rest of the country, it assists ENP, with its workforce concentrated mostly in Buenos Aires but also throughout the country.

This body coordinates the activities of the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol) in Argentina and other South American countries.

It also works actively with the Federal Judiciary throughout the country to combat terrorism and transnational organized crime.

Security level II, currently enforced and applied by the PNA in port and passenger terminals, involves the use of tighter controls, as follows:

- Passengers are subject to questioning for security purposes, their movements are monitored at all times and all hand luggage is searched, manually or automatically.
- Luggage is inspected according to the passengers' profile and attitude. Between 30 per cent and 70 per cent of checked luggage is searched manually or automatically and luggage is kept under constant guard until embarkation.

PNA has also initiated action to encourage the various operators of port terminals, especially passenger terminals, to acquire technology enabling them to check crews, passengers and luggage commensurately with the prevailing level of security.

The Federal Forces have stepped up the availability of courses dealing with terrorism, focusing not only on the measures required to update techniques but also on operational implementation and intelligence, the latter including both intelligence and counter-intelligence.

The DNM has greatly tightened checks on persons entering the country at airports and at land, sea and river crossing points, paying particular attention to the nationals of a number of countries that require particular vigilance.

It has also cut down on local border traffic and set up new control guidelines for the Iguazú tourist crossing in what is commonly known as the "tri-border" area in the interests of improving the security operations of the immigration authorities.

A border-crossing monitoring group undertakes periodic operations in support of the auxiliary immigration police at particularly significant land crossings or those with heavy traffic, while, in airports where control facilities have been assigned to the PAN, staff from DNM are participating in the inspection of foreign documents.

Similarly, at regional level, there is a continuing exchange of information regarding arrest warrants, expulsions, impediments, investments and visas granted or denied to non-MERCOSUR foreigners under the MERCOSUR, Bolivia and Chile Security Information Exchange plan.

Under a MERCOSUR plan concerning cooperation and mutual assistance for regional security, it has been decided to introduce extra entry and exit controls at all crossing points in order to prevent or discourage illegal activities in those places. There may be an exchange of observers or liaison officers between the States parties, which would strengthen relations among the border forces.

Mention should also be made of the security plan for the tri-border area agreed by the Governments of Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay in 1998. As regards migration, it involves the exchange of information among the consular offices of the three countries, in a given city, relating to visas denied to nationals of a specific group of countries. That information is then transmitted to their respective ministries for foreign affairs, and passed on to all consular offices of each country.

(ii) Control of travel and identity documents

With regard to identity and travel documents, mention should be made of the advances in security features now incorporated in new passports and federal identity cards in order to avoid forgeries and also the incorporation into such documents of information in scannable form. The main international airports have scanners that can take in a whole page and the idea is to continue installing scanners in other airports over the next five years, since they are a vital tool for the detection of false documentation.

C. Paragraph 3:

Calls upon all States to:

(a) Find ways of intensifying and accelerating the exchange of operational information, especially regarding actions or movements of terrorist persons or networks; forged or falsified travel documents; traffic in arms, explosives or sensitive materials; use of communications technologies by terrorist groups; and the threat posed by the possession of weapons of mass destruction by terrorist groups;

What steps have been taken to intensify and accelerate the exchange of operational information in the areas indicated in this sub-paragraph?

(i) Control of travel and identity documents

Primary responsibility for the production of identity documents in Argentina is distributed as follows:

- The National Identity Document: its issuance is centralized at the National Registry, which has its headquarters in Buenos Aires and offices in each of the provinces.
- Travel documents (passports): these are issued by the Federal Police in coordination with the National Registry, under the very strict quality and security controls required by international practice.

- The MERCOSUR Identity Card: this is issued by the Federal Police and is essentially valid within Argentina and the MERCOSUR countries. Its design incorporates the latest quality and security features in accordance with international standards.
- The Provincial Identity Card: this is issued by the provincial police forces in their respective areas and generally features a good level of security. It is basically used within the province concerned.

As for security measures to prevent the falsification of these documents, the strict and continuous application of quality controls and technological standards is accompanied by the everyday preventive and suppressive action of the National Police Force (ENP) in relation to the authenticity of documents. Occasional cases of falsification of documents appear from time to time and, as a result, valid conclusions are drawn regarding design errors and quality control is improved.

As for measures to intensify and accelerate the exchange of operational information regarding, inter alia, actions or movements of individual terrorists or terrorist networks, falsified or forged travel documents, traffic in arms, explosives, weapons of mass destruction or other sensitive materials, use of communications technologies by terrorist groups, operational measures are based upon mutual inter-agency cooperation. The measures include:

- Continuous action by the federal system of justice.
- Operational efforts and intelligence work by the federal forces of the National Police Force (PFA, GNA, PNA and PAN).
- Operational efforts and intelligence work by the provincial police forces, which are also part of the National Police Force.
- Additional support from collaborating organizations (such as the former SIDE and CNI, SEDRONAR, AFIP).
- Mutual cooperation, particularly with the MERCOSUR States but also with other countries.

Following the events of 11 September 2001, steps were taken to revitalize the functioning of the counter-terrorism system and improve domestic and international cooperation, particularly within MERCOSUR (recent actions by the agencies already mentioned in this report).

Within the current legal and judicial framework, Act No. 25,241 (the "repentant offenders law") has contributed particularly to investigative effectiveness; it provides for the use of active investigative methods which promise good results.

(ii) Exchanges of operational information on trafficking in arms, explosives, sensitive materials and weapons of mass destruction by terrorist groups

- Customs Service computer system: The export of weapons has been prohibited, since they are included among the goods listed in Decree No. 1035 of 15 August 2001 concerning Afghanistan. Under General Instruction No. 63/01 of 6 September 2001, the computer system will now block any attempt to export arms.

- RENAR computerized system: Since the entry into force in 1993 of Act No. 24,492, Argentina has had a computerized database of registered firearms which lists owners, manufacturers, importers, exporters and retailers. By law, the National Registry of Weapons (RENAR) must keep a nationwide register of individual and business users of firearms and a register of the weapons themselves.

All imported and exported goods are checked by an inspection commission comprising officials from the National Registry of Weapons, Customs, Aeronautical Police, the Argentine Coastguard or National Gendarmerie and the customs clearance and transportation agent. The procedure is recorded in the inspection record (for imported or exported goods as appropriate) and the information is fed into the national computerized database so that the sale of the goods can subsequently be tracked and monitored.

RENAR has recently implemented new operational procedures for the monitoring and recording of cross-border movements of arms, explosives and armoured vehicles. New tools have been produced for this purpose, standardizing operational procedures through the development of a more efficient computerized system in order to ensure that those who transport controlled items into or out of the country provide personal and technical information concerning the goods being moved. To that end, operational agreements with the Argentine Coastguard, Gendarmerie and Aeronautical Police, the bodies responsible for the aforementioned controls, have been updated.

In the framework of MERCOSUR, there are plans for a joint register mechanism of buyers and sellers of firearms, explosives, ammunition and related materials, involving Bolivia, Chile and the MERCOSUR countries. An agreement concluded in 1998 provides for the establishment of such a mechanism, which is to comprise the databases and other information storage systems belonging to the competent bodies. The information they contain will be available on request, via the Security Information System of MERCOSUR, Bolivia and Chile.

The register will list physical or legal persons who, individually or in the form of any type of business, are involved in activities aimed at the sale of the goods concerned. It will also list ports of arrival or departure authorized for trade in firearms, explosives and other related materials.

For various reasons, it has not yet been possible to implement the planned system, despite the time that has elapsed. Until the system and the sharing of information it provides for are effectively put into practice, Argentina has therefore proposed that the existing system at the Ministry of the Interior should be used, in respect of firearms only, in connection with the National Registry of Weapons. It has invited the member States of MERCOSUR and the associated States to act accordingly in order to strengthen this important aspect of subregional security.

– Registry of Chemical Weapons

Resolution 904/98, dated 30 December 1998, set up a Registry of Chemical Weapons under the Sub-Secretariat for Industry, to record the identity of physical and legal persons involved in the manufacture, sale, export or import of substances appearing on the lists, if the quantities by weight exceed the restrictions imposed by the Chemical Weapons Convention.

Any person engaged in activities involving chemicals included in list No. 1 as defined under the Convention and who produce, prepare, consume, import or export chemicals or precursors included in list No. 2 or No. 3 must make a declaration to the Registry. The same obligation applies to any person legally responsible for an industrial complex or plant which synthesizes certain organic chemicals.

As for the sharing of information on the threat represented by the possession by terrorist groups of weapons of mass destruction, Argentina participates in groups for the exchange of information on sensitive dual-use exports. These groups are the Nuclear Suppliers Group (NSG); the Australia Group (control of exports of chemical precursors and biological agents); the Wassenaar Arrangement on Export Controls for Conventional Arms and Dual-Use Goods and Technologies; and the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR).

(b) Exchange information in accordance with international and domestic law and cooperate on administrative and judicial matters to prevent the commission of terrorist acts;

What steps have been taken to exchange information and cooperate in the areas indicated in this subparagraph?

From the operational viewpoint, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, International Trade and Worship is the central authority in the area of international judicial cooperation (assistance and extradition). In some cases, agreements have provided for that function to be carried out by the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. This has made it possible to have free-flowing communications with the central authorities in other countries, facilitating judicial assistance in criminal matters and leading to improved effectiveness in complying with requests for assistance.

At the internal level, the central authorities in Argentina are working in coordination with the Interpol Department of the Argentine Federal Police on all aspects of assistance, arrests and extradition. An official of that Department acts as liaison between it and the Ministry, providing for improved fluidity and swiftness in dealing with requests for cooperation in penal matters and prompt notification of arrests.

Communications between the two bodies have been streamlined through the use of e-mail, and a programme is being prepared in order to standardize extradition applications made by or received by Argentina and international detention requests, with all possible information (name of the person being sought, requesting/requested State, alleged offences, nationality, type of offences, reasons for refusal of extradition, court concerned, etc.). This information facility will operate within the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Argentina.

The central authorities in Argentina maintain direct contacts with the judiciary throughout the country.

Interpol has been provided with the addresses and telephone and fax numbers of those officials of the General Directorate of Legal Affairs of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs who are in charge of judicial cooperation matters.

Mechanisms for prevention and suppression of international terrorism have been strengthened by implementing the following measures, inter alia:

- A special unit was created (Decrees 452/00 and 107/01) to investigate the terrorist attack of 18 July 1994 against AMIA. The unit comprises members of the PFA, GNA and PNA, of the Federal Penitentiary Service and of the Anti-Corruption Office (Ministry of Justice and Human Rights). It is attached to the Political Affairs Secretariat of the Ministry of the Interior, and has the leading responsibility for providing support and coordination to all the bodies represented on it.
- Intensification of judicial activity at the federal level, throughout the country.
- Enactment of Law No. 25,246/00 on the prevention of money-laundering, which provided for the creation of the Financial Intelligence Unit (FIU) as a discrete structure to conduct and coordinate investigations of money-laundering.
- Creation under Decree No. 1,500/91 of the FIU. It is essentially made up of experts from the Central Bank, the National Securities Commission and SEDRONAR, as well as two independent experts.
- A considerable increase, subject to institutional resources, of the operational and intelligence capacities of all federal forces and provincial police forces belonging to the National Police Force (ENP), and of the related bodies cooperating with them.
- Strengthening of cooperation at the regional and international levels, with particular emphasis on the MERCOSUR area.

The cooperation of the Intelligence Secretariat (SI — the former SIDE) in this area is of particular importance:

- With the recent enactment of Act No. 25,520 on National Intelligence, the National Intelligence System has been redesigned. The Intelligence Secretariat (SI — the former SIDE) now exercises functional leadership and the authority to direct the bodies making up the System.

The current National Coordination and Analysis Directorate for Crime Prevention will be renamed the National Criminal Intelligence Directorate, pursuant to article 48 of the aforementioned Act, and will play a very important role in the National Intelligence System in terms of the coordination of the National Police Force (ENP), as described in Interior Security Act No. 24,059, in all matters related to internal security.

(c) Cooperate, particularly through bilateral and multilateral arrangements and agreements, to prevent and suppress terrorist attacks and take action against perpetrators of such acts;

What steps have been taken to cooperate in the areas indicated in this subparagraph?

At the bilateral level, Argentina has concluded treaties which provide for cooperation in combating terrorism, either specifically or as part of the fight against transnational organized crime. The States with which Argentina has entered into bilateral agreements are as follows: Bolivia (1996), Chile (1993), Egypt (1998), Italy (1992), Paraguay (1995), Turkey (1995) and Ukraine (1998). There are also inter-agency counter-terrorism agreements such as that between the Ministry of the Interior of Argentina and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) of the United States of America (1999).

In the area of MERCOSUR, special mechanisms have been set up to improve cooperation in the operational sphere, through an understanding concerning cooperation and mutual assistance for regional security in MERCOSUR, the Republic of Bolivia and the Republic of Chile (Buenos Aires, 23 July 1998).

Argentina is currently negotiating a number of bilateral agreements on matters relating to terrorism. Also, the competent government departments have entered into numerous administrative agreements on the subject with their counterparts in other countries.

In keeping with its position with regard to the fight against terrorism, the Argentine Republic supports the conclusion of multilateral treaties which strengthen international cooperation mechanisms. It participates actively in the context of the United Nations and the inter-American system, as has already been described.

(d) Become parties as soon as possible to the relevant international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism, including the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism of 9 December 1999;

What are your Government's intentions regarding signing and/or ratifying the conventions and protocols referred to in this subparagraph?

In the multilateral sphere, the Argentine Republic has signed the 12 international conventions relating to terrorism and is a party to nine of them:

- Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft. Tokyo, 14 September 1963.

Of the three remaining instruments, the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings (New York, 15 December 1997) is under consideration by the national Congress with a view to its adoption. As to the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms located on the Continental Shelf (Rome, 10 March 1988) and the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism (New York, 18 November 1999), the respective instruments of adoption are under ministerial review and will then be transmitted to Congress.

(e) Increase cooperation and fully implement the relevant international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism and Security Council resolutions 1269 (1999) and 1368 (2001);

Provide any relevant information on the implementation of the conventions, protocols and resolutions referred to in this subparagraph.

In order to ensure the effective implementation of these treaties on the part of the Argentine Republic, an inter-ministerial commission is currently being formed to review and assess the need to adopt domestic legislation, particularly with regard to the categorization as criminal offences of the acts referred to in the treaties, as mentioned in relation to paragraphs (a) and (b).

As to resolution 1368 (2001), Argentina participated actively in convening the inter-American system and in the adoption of resolutions by the consultation meeting of the OAS Ministers for Foreign Affairs and the consultative body of the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance.

(f) Take appropriate measures in conformity with the relevant provisions of national and international law, including international standards of human rights, before granting refugee status, for the purpose of ensuring that the asylum-seeker has not planned, facilitated or participated in the commission of terrorist acts;

What legislation, procedures and mechanisms are in place for ensuring asylum-seekers have not been involved in terrorist activity before granting refugee status? Please supply examples of any relevant cases.

In Argentina, refugee status is determined by the Committee on Eligibility for Refugee Status, an inter-ministerial body established by executive decree No. 464 of 14 March 1985, with the participation of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

That decree provides for the establishment, within the Ministry of the Interior/National Directorate of Immigration, of a Committee on Eligibility for Refugee Status consisting of four regular members and four alternate members. The regular members are:

- (a) The National Director of Immigration;
- (b) The Head of the Legal Affairs Department in the National Directorate of Immigration;
- (c) The Head of the Aliens Admission Department in the National Directorate of Immigration;
- (d) A representative of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, International Trade and Worship.

The committee's functions include:

- (a) Studying issues raised by the Refugee Institute and recommending policies to be followed at the national level;
- (b) Deciding on the categorization as refugees of aliens who request refugee status or for whom such status is requested.

A representative of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees attends the committee's deliberations, with the right to speak.

The committee has broad powers to gather information about persons seeking refugee status, since public bodies at the national, provincial and municipal levels are required to provide whatever information, advice and/or assistance it requests.

The procedure before the committee includes the following steps: first, the applicant must complete a form and draw up a detailed written description of the circumstances which prompted him to leave his country. He is also required to provide supporting evidence. His personal data, information concerning his departure from his country and the circumstances described in the written submission are then exhaustively checked in a series of personal interviews carried out by specialized staff from the committee secretariat.

The case is then presented to the committee by the secretariat. The committee analyses and verifies the information, assessing the objective and subjective aspects. The information provided by the secretariat is checked against the information supplied by the regional office of UNHCR so as to ensure that there are no inconsistencies. The committee carefully verifies that all the principles referred to in the reply to the previous paragraph have been fulfilled. In the event that any member of the committee has doubts about the credibility of the case, the committee may call the applicant to appear in person before it.

With regard to the mechanisms following the determination of refugee status, the provisions in force which are implemented by the immigration authority after recognition of that status establish a procedure which makes it possible to locate any criminal record of the refugee which might exist, including possible terrorist activities.

As part of the administrative procedure for the documentation of aliens, Interpol is requested to supply reports on the national or international record of the person concerned (without identifying his status as refugee so as not to infringe upon the principle of confidentiality); should any grounds for exclusion mentioned in the previous reply be identified, this would give rise to a review of the status granted.

So far, there have been no cases of persons whose refugee status has had to be withdrawn on the grounds mentioned.

In the inter-American context, there is the category of "diplomatic asylum" which is governed by the 1954 Caracas Convention. In order to prevent this category being used by persons who have participated in the commission of terrorist acts, all Argentine diplomatic offices abroad have been sent circulars containing the lists of persons identified by the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267 (1999), with instructions that requests for diplomatic asylum from these persons or from persons associated with the entities identified by that Committee should not be considered.

(g) Ensure, in conformity with international law, that refugee status is not abused by the perpetrators, organizers or facilitators of terrorist acts, and that claims of political motivation are not recognized as grounds for refusing requests for the extradition of alleged terrorists;

What procedures are in place to prevent the abuse of refugee status by terrorists? Please provide details of legislation and/or administrative procedures which prevent claims of political motivation being recognized as grounds for refusing requests for the extradition of alleged terrorists. Please supply examples of any relevant cases.

(i) Procedures relating to refugee status

Argentina, like other Latin American countries, implements the Cartagena Declaration on Refugees, of 22 November 1984.

By means of this important Declaration, the countries of the region undertake, inter alia, to take appropriate measures to prevent refugees from participating in activities which are a threat to the country of origin. The Declaration also confirms the apolitical and exclusively humanitarian nature of recognition of refugee status.

Although, by its very nature, the Cartagena Declaration is not binding for the signatory States, the Committee on Eligibility for Refugee Status (CEPARE) duly takes into account the principles enshrined in the Declaration in determining the refugee status of asylum-seekers.

(ii) Exclusion of acts of terrorism from the exception for political crimes as a ground for denying extradition

Numerous extradition treaties signed by the Argentine Republic state that terrorist acts shall not be considered as included within the exception of non-extradition for political crimes (Republic of Korea, Spain, United States of America, Uruguay). An identical provision is included in article 9 of Act No. 24,767 on international cooperation in criminal matters, already referred to, which is additionally applicable in areas not governed by such treaties.

It should be noted that the extradition agreement with Uruguay and the extradition agreement among the MERCOSUR countries, Bolivia and Chile (which is not in force) include definitions of terrorist acts for the purposes of this provision.

D. Paragraph 4

Notes with concern the close connection between international terrorism and transnational organized crime, illicit drugs, money-laundering, illegal arms-trafficking and illegal movement of nuclear, chemical, biological and other potentially deadly materials, and in this regard emphasizes the need to enhance coordination of efforts on national, subregional, regional and international levels in order to strengthen a global response to this serious challenge and threat to international security;

(i) International sphere

The Argentine Republic is a signatory to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and also to the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (Palermo, 12 December 2000).

It is considering becoming a signatory to the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition (New York, 12 July 2001), supplementing the above-mentioned Convention.

On 9 October 2001, Argentina ratified the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives and Other Related Materials (Washington, D.C., 14 November 1997), which in some respects supplements the provisions of the anti-terrorism agreements.

In the subregional context, the Memorandum of Understanding of 24 July 1998 between MERCOSUR, the Republic of Bolivia and the Republic of Chile concerning a joint mechanism for registration of buyers and sellers of firearms, explosives, ammunition, and other related materials of 23 July 1998 is supplementary to the mechanism for regional security mentioned with reference to paragraph 3 (c) of the resolution.

The Argentine Republic is party to the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances (Vienna, 1988) and participates actively on the Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission (CICAD).

(ii) Domestic sphere

With regard to money-laundering, the legislation of Argentina provides for penetrating bank secrecy (Act No. 21,526 on Financial Entities). Argentina has entered into agreements stipulating that judicial assistance shall not be denied on the grounds of bank secrecy, in view of the significant role it plays in transnational organized crime.

As was already mentioned, Argentina is a member of the international Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering (FATF) and the South American Financial Action Group on money-laundering (GAFISUD).

At the national level, illicit trafficking in weapons and illicit circulation of nuclear, chemical, biological and other potentially lethal materials are regulated as follows:

- National Commission for the Control of Sensitive Exports and Military Material: The current system of controls is governed by Decree No. 603 of 9 April 1992, which provided for the creation of the National Commission for the Control of Sensitive Exports and Military Material.
- Inter-Ministerial Commission for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons: Decree No. 920/97 provided for the establishment of the Inter-Ministerial Commission for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (ANCAQ), which is composed of the Ministry of Defence, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of Economic Affairs.
- Protection of nuclear material: Physical protection measures are applied in nuclear power plants. The emphasis in physical protection is on prevention and deterrence, particularly through the use of passive measures. Police guards have provided physical protection since the start-up of power-plant operations.

The applicable legislation consists of national Act No. 24,804 on nuclear power and Act No. 25,018 on the management of radioactive wastes. With respect to safeguards, the quadripartite Agreement for the Application of Safeguards (between Argentina, Brazil, the Brazilian-Argentine Agency for Accounting and Control of Nuclear Materials (ABACC) and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) (INFCIRC/435)) has been in effect since 1994.

With regard to national licensing and control of nuclear power generation, the standards of the Nuclear Regulatory Authority apply in each case (Standard AR 10.13.1: Basic standard for physical protection of nuclear material and facilities; and Standard AR 10.14.1: Safeguards against diversion of nuclear material and nuclear-related material, facilities and equipment).

The guidelines contained in IAEA INFCIRC/254 are applied to the import and export of nuclear equipment and technology. In addition, in relation to the security of its existing nuclear facilities, Argentina is a party to the Convention on Nuclear Safety, which it ratified in February 1997 by Act No. 24,776.

Argentina is also moving ahead with the passage of a bill that would incorporate the provisions of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction in national legislation.

The Inter-Ministerial Commission for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons has approved a draft decree concerning controls on imports of chemical substances on lists 1 and 2 of the Chemical Weapons Convention. The draft is in the process of being made operative.

Efforts are under way to amend article 189 of the Penal Code to incorporate new types of crimes identified in the conventions ratified by the State or proposed by export control groups (information-exchange groups), in order to set penalties for criminal activities related to weapons of mass destruction (nuclear, biological and chemical), anti-personnel mines, and illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms. The draft amendment includes penalties for non-compliance with the controls on sensitive exports and military material established by Decree No. 603/92.

The Ministry of Justice is also working on amendments to article 189 of the Penal Code that would adapt the current legislation to the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives and Other Related Materials, which Argentina recently ratified.

Inter-ministerial procedures are in progress concerning the signing and subsequent ratification of the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime.

The Ministry of Defence has begun the process of updating the annexes to Decree No. 603/92 in order to incorporate the new lists of military and dual-use items adopted by the Wassenaar Arrangement plenary meeting.

To combat the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons and their potential use by terrorist groups, the following regular liaison persons (with indication of street and e-mail addresses, fax and telephone numbers and the names of the officials involved) have been designated within the Argentine Federal Police for exchange of information and consultation at the international level:

- Directorate of International Terrorism and Complex Crimes;
- Interpol Department;

- Environmental Emergency Section of the Federal Superintendency of Firefighters.

Proposal of experts for the Counter-terrorism Committee

Argentina proposed the names of two experts to assist the Committee in its work:

- An expert on extradition: Dr. Guillermo Fierro
- An expert on customs law and practice: Dr. Oscar Héctor Requeijo

Designation of contact points

The Argentine Ministry of Foreign Affairs designated the following persons as contact points for the Counter-terrorism Committee:

(a) In Argentina: Ambassador Domingo Santiago Cullen (Director for International Organizations in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, International Trade and Worship);
