Enclosure

Supplementary questions concerning the second report submitted by Guatemala pursuant to resolution 1373 (2001)*

- 1.1. The Counter-Terrorism Committee has agreed on further questions and comments for the consideration of the Government of Guatemala with regard to the implementation of the resolution.*
- 1.2. Effective implementation of paragraph 1 requires that the legal obligation to report suspicious transactions imposed on banks and financial institutions should extend to all professions engaged in financial transactions (such as lawyers, accountants) and that they should all be subjected to penalties for non-compliance in order to enable the effective prevention of the financing of terrorism. Could Guatemala please comment on the action it intends to take in this regard.*

Articles 18 and 26 of the Act Against the Laundering of Money or Other Assets, Decree No. 67-2001 of the Congress of the Republic, govern the obligation imposed on banks and financial institutions to report unusual or suspicious transactions to the Office of the Controller of Banks.

Likewise, article 2 (a) of that Act provides for criminal proceedings to be brought against any person who, by reason of his or her post, employment, occupation or profession, is obligated to know that sums of money or assets are the proceeds of or have originated in the commission of an offence.

It should also be pointed out that, as of November this year, the Office of the Controller of Banks, through the Special Audit Office (Financial Analysis Unit) has introduced a series of forms designed to identify legal and natural persons, register transactions in excess of US$ 10,000 and report unusual or suspicious transactions.

Those forms are already being used by institutions of the national financial system, in particular banks, financial institutions, savings banks, bureaux de change, market entities (stock market), the Central Bank etc. Based on those forms, a “know your customer” policy is currently being developed and a reporting mechanism for suspicious transactions in the area of asset laundering has been created, which could be used in the future as a basis for the implementation of anti-terrorist measures. Copies of the aforementioned forms are attached.

We believe that it is important to note that those documents will make it possible to investigate transactions from an administrative standpoint with a view to determining whether or not there are grounds for suspicion.

- 1.3. Effective implementation of this paragraph requires, in accordance with articles 2 and 4 of the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, that each State have in place provisions specifically criminalizing the wilful provision or collection, by any means, directly or indirectly, of funds by its nationals, or in its territory, with the intention that the funds should be used to carry out terrorist acts. The acts sought to be criminalized are thus capable of being committed without any specific act of terrorism actually occurring or being attempted, either within or outside the* country. Please outline the provisions of Guatemalan criminal law that criminalize the offences set forth in article 2 of the Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism.

With regard to paragraph 1.3., Guatemala has ratified the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism and therefore recognizes it as law.

Consequently, action is being taken to strengthen criminal law through the formulation of a draft act dealing specifically with counter-terrorism.

The introductory section of article 12 of the draft act states: “Anyone who commits the offence of financing terrorism shall be sentenced to 20 to 30 years’ imprisonment and a fine equal to the sum used in the commission of the offence, without prejudice to the applicable civil liabilities”.

1.4. In the context of subparagraph 1 (c) of the resolution, please outline the procedure that leads to the freezing of terrorist funds upon request of foreign authorities.

The request must be made through the diplomatic channel and the judge presiding over the relevant legal proceedings must make a ruling which makes it possible to order the precautionary measure of freezing of funds, provided that the definition of the crime in the requesting State corresponds with that laid down in article 391 of the Guatemalan Penal Code, Decree No. 17-73 of the Congress of the Republic.

1.5. Effective implementation of paragraph 1 of the resolution also requires the existence of legal provisions or administrative measures that ensure that funds and other economic resources collected by non-profit organizations (e.g. religious, charitable or cultural organizations) are not diverted for other than the stated purposes, particularly for financing of terrorism. Please explain whether such provisions or measures are in place in Guatemala and, if not, how Guatemala proposes to monitor the use of funds etc. by non-profit organizations.

Under article 19 (d) of the Act against the Laundering of Money or Other Assets, Legislative Decree No. 67-2001, all financial entities subject to the monitoring and supervision of the Office of the Controller of Banks must implement specific measures to know and identify customers. In that connection, as of 1 November 2002, the entire financial sector has been obliged to identify customers who make transactions, thereby allowing, in accordance with the established warning signs, the Office of the Controller of Banks, through the Special Audit Office, to be notified of any unusual or suspicious transactions in accordance with the account monitoring system.

Article 13 of the draft counter-terrorism act defines the offence in the specific case of terrorism as follows:

“Any juridical person with non-profit status which, operating from national territory, collects or procures funds from overseas by any means, simulates or engages in social functions or is engaged in such functions but misappropriates or uses funds with a view to supporting or financing terrorism in Guatemala, shall be sentenced to a fine equal to the sum collected or misappropriated.

Directors, managers, administrators, officials or employees of the responsible juridical person who commit the offence in the course of their duties shall be sentenced to 25 to 50 years' imprisonment".

1.6. Please elaborate on how the draft amendments to Decree-Law No. 39-89 on arms control will be conducive to the implementation of the obligation to eliminate the supply of weapons to terrorists, as required by subparagraph 2 (a) of the resolution.

The acquisition of weapons in Guatemala is governed by the Arms and Ammunition Act, Decree-Law No. 39-89, and its Regulations. Article 18 of the Act establishes the functions of the Department of Arms and Munitions Control, as follows:

- (a) Authorizing, registering and controlling the importation, manufacture, sale, donation, exportation, warehousing, de-warehousing, transport and bearing of weapons;
- (b) Authorizing, registering and controlling the importation, manufacture, exportation, warehousing, de-warehousing and transport of ammunition;
- (c) Authorizing and controlling the operation of armouries, shooting ranges and ammunition reconditioning machines;
- (d) Registering and controlling the possession of arms;
- (e) Keeping a registry of the ballistic fingerprints of all firearms;
- (f) Keeping a registry of the trademarks of the businesses and sporting associations which sell arms and ammunition;
- (g) Carrying out at least every thirty (30) days, or whenever it is deemed necessary, a physical inventory of the stock of firearms and ammunition in commercial establishments and places of deposit;
- (h) Inspecting shooting ranges and their record books whenever it is deemed necessary to do so;
- (i) Carrying out other functions assigned to it by this Act.

The draft amendments to Decree-Law 39-89 on arms control are still being processed by the legislature and moves are under way to improve that control.

1.7. Please outline the existing or proposed legal provisions that, in addition to articles 371 and 372 of the Guatemalan Penal Code, criminalize the use of Guatemalan territory for the purpose of financing, planning, facilitating or committing terrorist acts against other States or their citizens. Effective implementation of subparagraphs 2 (d) and (e) of the resolution requires that such additional provisions should be incorporated in the penal law of Guatemala.

In November 2002, Guatemala completed a draft anti-terrorist act. Article 5 of that draft act describes the offence of "terrorist groups" and defines the perpetrator of that offence: "Anyone who recruits, organizes, participates or gives support with a view to setting up terrorist groups within national territory in order to commit acts of terrorism in Guatemala and abroad, regardless of the location in which the act is committed, shall be sentenced to 10 to 20 years' imprisonment".

1.8. According to the supplementary report, the Guatemalan Penal Code is applicable to acts which, according to a treaty or agreement, are punishable in Guatemala, even if they were not committed on Guatemalan territory. In cases to which this provision of the Penal Code is not applicable, will Guatemala extradite foreigners and stateless persons who have committed any of the acts listed in subparagraph 2 (e) of the resolution outside its territory, but who are currently in Guatemala, in order to ensure that those persons are brought to justice as required by that subparagraph?

Under article 27 of the Political Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala, extradition is governed by the provisions of international treaties.

The offences listed in subparagraph 2 (e) of resolution 1373 (2001) are those committed by any person who participates in the financing, planning, preparation or perpetration of terrorist acts or in supporting terrorist acts.

The State of Guatemala is able to extradite foreigners and stateless persons who, while on Guatemalan territory, have committed offences which, in accordance with Guatemalan legislation and the international treaties to which it is party, constitute acts of terrorism, provided that extradition agreements between Guatemala and the requesting State are in force and that the provisions of those agreements allow it. This is to ensure that such persons are brought to justice.

1.9. Please list the offences set forth in the 12 international conventions and protocols against terrorism which have already been incorporated into the penal legislation of Guatemala. Please also provide a progress report regarding the establishment of the other offences set forth in those conventions and protocols as criminal offences under Guatemalan law. Copies of the domestic legal provisions would be appreciated.

Guatemala has ratified 10 of the above-mentioned conventions, and their implementation is being taken into consideration in the design of a draft anti-terrorism act and the draft act for the prevention and suppression of the financing of terrorism, by means of which new definitions are being incorporated into domestic criminal legislation.

The internal armed conflict in Guatemala, which lasted for over 36 years, was partly responsible for Chapter IV of the Penal Code containing “offences against public order”, which include terrorism and illegal association. Guatemalan penal legislation is therefore in advance as far as legislation addressing such issues is concerned.

The action taken by the Government of Guatemala in respect of each of the conventions is described below:

1. International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism

“Article 2

1. Any person commits an offence within the meaning of this Convention if that person by any means, directly or indirectly, unlawfully and wilfully, provides or collects funds with the intention that they should be used or in the knowledge that they are to be used, in full or in part, in order to carry out:

(a) An act which constitutes an offence within the scope of and as defined in one of the treaties listed in the annex; or

(b) Any other act intended to cause death or serious bodily injury to a civilian, or to any other person not taking an active part in the hostilities in a situation of armed conflict, when the purpose of such act, by its nature or context, is to intimidate a population, or to compel a government or an international organization to do or to abstain from doing any act.

3. For an act to constitute an offence set forth in paragraph 1, it shall not be necessary that the funds were actually used to carry out an offence referred to in paragraph 1, subparagraphs (a) or (b).

4. Any person also commits an offence if that person attempts to commit an offence as set forth in paragraph 1 of this article.

5. Any person also commits an offence if that person:

(a) Participates as an accomplice in an offence as set forth in paragraph 1 or 4 of this article;

(b) Organizes or directs others to commit an offence as set forth in paragraph 1 or 4 of this article;

(c) Contributes to the commission of one or more offences as set forth in paragraph 1 or 4 of this article by a group of persons acting with a common purpose. Such contribution shall be intentional and shall either:

(i) Be made with the aim of furthering the criminal activity or criminal purpose of the group, where such activity or purpose involves the commission of an offence as set forth in paragraph 1 of this article; or

(ii) Be made in the knowledge of the intention of the group to commit an offence as set forth in paragraph 1 of this article.”

At present, Guatemala’s criminal legislation does not contain specific regulations on the provisions of article 2 of the United Nations Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, which relate to the criminalization of the financing of terrorism.

However, legal analysis reveals that, based on the current provisions of the Penal Code, Decree No. 17-73 of the Congress of the Republic, financing of terrorism may be prosecuted and penalized according to the degree of responsibility for the offence of terrorism, pursuant to articles 36, 37 and 391 of the aforementioned legislation.

Such illegal activity may also be penalized through application of the offence of “illegal armed groups”, contained in article 398 of the Penal Code, since economic cooperation falls within its scope.

It should also be pointed out that, pursuant to articles 1 and 2 of the Act against the Laundering of Money or Other Assets, Legislative Decree No. 67-2001 of the Congress of the Republic, the aforementioned offences may also be regarded as underlying the laundering of assets or deriving from that activity, since in Guatemala money-laundering can be defined as the generation of funds from the commission of any offence.

Likewise, the Guatemalan Office of the Controller of Banks is currently reviewing the draft act for the prevention and suppression of the financing of terrorism, which is almost ready to be submitted to the Congress of the Republic. That draft brings together the norms and standards set out in Security Council resolution 1373 (2001), the Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism and the eight Special Recommendations of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF). It expressly defines the offence of financing of terrorism and provides for strict penalties involving deprivation of liberty for perpetrators and accomplices. It defines the offence as a crime against humanity, which will facilitate passive and active extradition procedures.

2. International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings

“Article 2

1. Any person commits an offence within the meaning of the Convention if that person unlawfully and intentionally delivers, places, discharges or detonates an explosive or other lethal device in, into or against a place of public use, a State or government facility, a public transportation system or an infrastructure facility:

(a) With the intent to cause death or serious bodily injury; or

(b) With the intent to cause extensive destruction of such a place, facility or system, where such destruction results in or is likely to result in major economic loss.

2. Any person also commits an offence if that person attempts to commit an offence as set forth in paragraph 1.

3. Any person also commits an offence if that person:

(a) Participates as an accomplice in an offence as set forth in paragraph 1 or 2; or

(b) Organizes or directs others to commit an offence as set forth in paragraph 1 or 2; or

(c) In any other way contributes to the commission of one or more offences as set forth in paragraph 1 or 2 by a group of persons acting with a common purpose: such contribution shall be international and either be made with the aim of furthering the general criminal activity or purpose of the group or be made in the knowledge of the intention of the group to commit the offence or offences concerned.”

Guatemala’s criminal legislation contains definitions that fulfil the requirements of the Convention concerning the commission of the aforementioned offences. The following definition of the offence of malicious destruction is contained in article 284 of the Penal Code, Decree No. 17-73: “Anyone who causes damage by using powerful means of destruction or through flooding, explosion, collapse or demolition of a building commits the offence of malicious destruction. Perpetrators shall be sentenced to 5 to 15 years’ imprisonment”. Similarly, article 288 governs offences relating to rail disasters and articles 292 to 297 govern attacks against other forms of transport, attacks against the safety of public utilities, interruption or obstruction of communications and the disabling or obstruction of defences.

Those offences all undermine public safety, in that they can be committed in various ways, inter alia with any explosive object or substance or any other lethal object.

Article 292. Attacks against other forms of transport. Anyone who endangers a means of public transport or impedes or hinders its progress shall be sentenced to one to three years' imprisonment.

If the act results in damage, the perpetrator will be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 293. Wilful disasters. Anyone who wilfully causes any of the disasters listed in the preceding articles of this chapter shall be sentenced to one to three years' imprisonment.

If, as a consequence of those disasters, death or serious injury results to one or more persons, the perpetrator shall be sentenced to two to six years' imprisonment.

Article 294. Attacks against the safety of public utilities. Anyone who endangers the safety of or prevents or hinders the operation of water, light, electrical or other public utilities shall be sentenced to one to five years' imprisonment.

Article 295. Interruption of or interference with communications. Anyone who seeks to undermine the security of telecommunications or postal communications, or who interrupts or interferes with such services in any way shall be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 296. Seizure or destruction of correspondence. Anyone who assaults a mail carrier with the intention of intercepting or stopping mail or of seizing or destroying it shall be sentenced to three to six years' imprisonment.

Article 297. Anyone who, in connection with any disasters, damage or loss provided for in this chapter, removes, conceals or disables installations, materials, tools, equipment or other items intended for defence or rescue operations, or who prevents or hinders the provision of defence or rescue services, shall be sentenced to the same punishment as the perpetrators of the offence in question.

3. Convention on offences and certain other acts committed onboard aircraft

“Chapter I Scope of the Convention

“Article 1

“1. This Convention shall apply in respect of:

“(a) Offences against penal law;

“(b) Acts which, whether or not they are offences, may or do jeopardize the safety of the aircraft or of persons or property therein or which jeopardize good order and discipline on board.”

“Chapter IV
Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft

“Article 11

“1. When a person on board has unlawfully committed by force or threat thereof an act of interference, seizure, or other wrongful exercise of control of an aircraft in flight or when such an act is about to be committed, Contracting States shall take all appropriate measures to restore control of the aircraft to its lawful commander or to preserve his control of the aircraft.”

The said convention has been ratified by Guatemala and is therefore part of the country's legal system. In this regard, title VII of the Penal Code of Guatemala deals with related offences against collective security, including offences against communication and transport means and other public services referred to articles 288 to 300 such as crimes against the safety of maritime, river and air transport; maritime, river and air disasters; crimes against the safety of public utility services; piracy and aircraft hijacking.

Article 288. Creating a risk of railway disaster. The disturbance of railway service in any of the following ways shall be punishable by two to five years' imprisonment:

1. By destroying, damaging or causing the breakdown of a railway line, rolling-stock or railway structure or installation;
2. By placing on the track obstacles that may cause derailing;
3. By transmitting false notice relating to the movement of trains or by interrupting telephone, telegraph or radio communications;
4. By carrying out any other act that might result in a disaster.

Article 289. Railway disaster. In the event that the acts referred to in the preceding article result in a disaster, the person responsible shall be sentenced to 4 to 12 years' imprisonment.

Article 290. Attacks against the safety of maritime, river or air transport. Anyone who endangers his own or someone else's vessel or aircraft or commits any act likely to prevent or hamper maritime, river or air navigation shall be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 291. Maritime, river or air disasters. In the event that the acts referred to in the foregoing article result in shipwreck or the stranding of a vessel or in the fall or destruction of an aircraft, the person responsible shall be sentenced to 4 to 12 years' imprisonment.

Article 292. Attacks against other means of transport. Anyone who endangers, hinders or obstructs any other public transport means shall be sentenced to one to three years' imprisonment.

If the act results in damage, the person responsible shall be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 293. Wilful disasters. Anyone who wilfully causes any of the disasters listed in the preceding articles of this chapter shall be sentenced to one to three years' imprisonment.

If, as a consequence of those disasters, death or serious injury results to one or more persons, the perpetrator shall be sentenced to two to six years' imprisonment.

Article 294. Attacks against the safety of public utilities. Anyone who endangers the safety of or prevents or hinders the operation of water, light, electrical or other public utilities shall be sentenced to one to five years' imprisonment.

Article 295. Interruption of or interference with communications. Anyone who seeks to undermine the safety of telecommunications or postal communications, or who interrupts or interferes with such services in any way shall be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 296. Seizure or destruction of correspondence. Anyone who assaults a mail carrier with the intention of intercepting or stopping mail or of seizing or destroying it shall be sentenced to three to six years' imprisonment.

Article 297. Anyone who, in connection with any disasters, damage or loss provided for in this chapter, removes, conceals, disables installations, materials, tools, equipment or other items intended for defence or rescue operations, or who prevents or hinders the provision of defence or rescue services, shall be sentenced to the same punishment as the perpetrators of the offence in question.

Article 298. Abandonment of transport service. A driver, captain, pilot or engineer of a railroad train, ship, aircraft or any other means of public transport who abandons his post before the completion of the corresponding trip, voyage or flight shall be sentenced to 1 month's to 1 year's imprisonment and a fine of 20 to 2,000 quetzales unless the act constitutes another offence punishable by a greater penalty.

Article 299 of the Penal Code of Guatemala provides as follows:

"Piracy. Anyone who commits, on the sea, in lakes or in navigable rivers, any act of depredation or violence against a vessel or against persons aboard a vessel shall be deemed to have committed the crime of piracy, unless he has been authorized to do so by a belligerent State or the vessel with which he performs such act belongs to the navy of a recognized State.

The following persons shall also be deemed to have committed the crime of piracy:

1. Anyone who seizes any vessel or anything belonging to the crew of such vessel by fraud or violence committed against its commander;
2. Anyone who hands over to pirates a vessel, its cargo or anything belonging to its crew;
3. Anyone who, using violence, opposes the defence, by the commander or the crew, of a vessel which is the target of piracy;
5. Anyone who, operating from national territory, traffics with or provides assistance to pirates.

Anyone guilty of piracy shall be sentenced to three to five years' imprisonment." In addition, article 300 of the Penal Code provides as follows: "The provisions contained in the preceding article shall apply to anyone who commits hijacking against aircraft or persons therein."

Article 300. Aircraft hijacking. The provisions contained in the preceding article shall apply to anyone who commits hijacking against aircraft or persons therein.

4. Convention for the suppression of unlawful seizure of aircraft

“Article 1

“Any person who on board an aircraft in flight:

“(a) Unlawfully, by force or threat thereof, or by any other form of intimidation, seizes, or exercises control of, that aircraft, or attempts to perform any such act, or

“(b) Is an accomplice of a person who performs or attempts to perform any such act commits an offence (hereinafter referred to as ‘the offence’).”

The said convention has been ratified by Guatemala and is therefore part of the country’s legal system. In this regard, title VII of the Penal Code of Guatemala deals with related offences against collective security, including offences against communication and transport means and other public services. Chapter III describes the offences that relate to piracy and aircraft hijacking.

Regarding the definition of an accomplice, Guatemalan penal law defines as an offence, in general terms, the participation of an accomplice with a view to the perpetration of any offence to which penal sanctions apply. More specifically, the rules in question are contained in article 37 of the Penal Code, which states the following:

“Accomplices are: (1) persons who incite or encourage others in their determination to commit an offence; (2) persons who promise to assist or cooperate after the commission of the offence; (3) persons who provide information or supply the appropriate means for the commission of the offence; (4) persons who serve as links or act as intermediaries between participants in order to arrange their participation in the offence.”

Concerning the application of penalties to accomplices, it should be pointed out that the treatment given is less drastic, inasmuch as article 63 of the Penal Code provides that in respect of them the penalty specified in the Code for the perpetrators of an offence committed shall be imposed, but shall be reduced by one third.

5. Convention for the suppression of unlawful acts against the safety of civil aviation

“Article 1

“1. Any person commits an offence if he unlawfully and intentionally:

“(a) Performs an act of violence against a person on board an aircraft in flight if that act is likely to endanger the safety of that aircraft; or

“(b) Destroys an aircraft in service or causes damage to such an aircraft which renders it incapable of flight or which is likely to endanger its safety in flight; or

“(c) Places or causes to be placed on an aircraft in service, by any means whatsoever, a device or substance which is likely to destroy that aircraft, or to cause damage to it which renders it incapable of flight, or to cause damage to it which is likely to endanger its safety in flight; or

“(d) Destroys or damages air navigation facilities or interferes with their operation, if any such act is likely to endanger the safety of aircraft in flight; or “(e) Communicates information which he knows to be false, thereby endangering the safety of an aircraft in flight.

“2. Any person also commits an offence if he:

“(a) Attempts to commit any of the offences mentioned in paragraph 1 of this Article; or

“(b) Is an accomplice of a person who commits or attempts to commit any such offence.”

The said convention has been ratified by Guatemala and is therefore part of the country's legal system. In this regard, title VII of the Penal Code of Guatemala deals with related offences against collective security, including offences against communication and transport means and other public services. Chapters I, II and III describe the offences that relate to destruction, piracy and aircraft hijacking.

Article 284. Malicious destruction. Anyone who causes damage by using powerful means of destruction or through flooding, explosion, collapse or demolition of a building commits the offence of malicious destruction.

Perpetrators shall be sentenced to 4 to 12 years' imprisonment.

Article 288. Creating a risk of railway disaster. The disturbance of railway service in any of the following ways shall be punishable by two to five years' imprisonment:

1. By destroying, damaging or causing the breakdown of a railway line, rolling-stock or railway structure or installation;
2. By placing on the track obstacles that may cause derailling;
3. By transmitting false notice relating to the movement of trains or by interrupting telephone, telegraph or radio communications;
4. By carrying out any other act that might result in a disaster.

Article 289. Railway disaster. In the event that the acts referred to in the preceding article result in a disaster, the person responsible shall be sentenced to 4 to 12 years' imprisonment.

Article 290. Attacks against the safety of maritime, river or air transport. Anyone who endangers his own or someone else's vessel or aircraft or commits any act likely to prevent or hamper maritime, river or air navigation shall be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 291. Maritime, river or air disasters. In the event that the acts referred to in the foregoing article result in shipwreck or the stranding of a vessel or in the fall or destruction of an aircraft, the person responsible shall be sentenced to 4 to 12 years' imprisonment.

Article 292. Attacks against other means of transport. Anyone who endangers, hinders or obstructs any other public transport means shall be sentenced to one to three years' imprisonment.

If the act results in damage, the perpetrator will be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 293. Wilful disasters. Anyone who wilfully causes any of the disasters listed in the preceding articles of this chapter shall be sentenced to one to three years' imprisonment.

If, as a consequence of those disasters, death or serious injury results to one or more persons, the perpetrator shall be sentenced to two to six years' imprisonment.

Article 294. Attacks against the safety of public utilities. Anyone who endangers the safety of or prevents or hinders the operation of water, light, electrical or other public utilities shall be sentenced to one to five years' imprisonment.

Article 295. Interruption of or interference with communications. Anyone who seeks to undermine the safety of telecommunications or postal communications, or who interrupts or interferes with such services in any way shall be sentenced to two to five years' imprisonment.

Article 296. Seizure or destruction of correspondence. Anyone who assaults a mail carrier with the intention of intercepting or stopping mail or of seizing or destroying it shall be sentenced to three to six years' imprisonment.

Article 297. Anyone who, in connection with any disasters, damage or loss provided for in this chapter, removes, conceals or disables installations, materials, tools, equipment or other items intended for defence or rescue operations, or who prevents or hinders the provision of defence or rescue services, shall be sentenced to the same punishment as the perpetrators of the offence in question.

Article 298. Abandonment of transport service. A driver, captain, pilot or engineer of a railroad train, ship, aircraft or any other means of public transport who abandons his post before the completion of the corresponding trip, voyage or flight shall be sentenced to 1 month's to 1 year's imprisonment and a fine of 20 to 2,000 quetzales unless the act constitutes another offence punishable by a greater penalty.

Article 299 of the Penal Code of Guatemala provides as follows:

"Piracy. Anyone who commits, on the sea, in lakes or in navigable rivers, any act of depredation or violence against a vessel or against persons aboard a vessel shall be deemed to have committed the crime of piracy, unless he has been authorized to do so by a belligerent State or the vessel with which he performs such act belongs to the navy of a recognized State.

The following persons shall also be deemed to have committed the crime of piracy:

1. Anyone who seizes any vessel or anything belonging to the crew of such vessel by fraud or violence committed against its commander;
2. Anyone who hands over to pirates a vessel, its cargo or anything belonging to its crew;

3. Anyone who, using violence, opposes the defence, by the commander or the crew, of a vessel which is the target of piracy;

5. Anyone who, operating from national territory, traffics with or provides assistance to pirates.

Anyone guilty of piracy shall be sentenced to 3 to 5 years' imprisonment." In addition, article 300 of the Penal Code provides as follows: "The provisions contained in the preceding article shall apply to anyone who commits hijacking against aircraft or persons therein."

Article 300. Aircraft hijacking. The provisions contained in the preceding article shall apply to anyone who commits hijacking against aircraft or persons therein.

6. Protocol for the suppression of unlawful acts of violence at airports serving international civil aviation, supplementary to the convention for the suppression of unlawful acts against the safety of civil aviation

"Article II

"1. In Article 1 of the Convention, the following shall be added as new paragraph 1 bis:

"1 bis. Any person commits an offence if he unlawfully and intentionally, using any device, substance or weapon:

"(a) Performs an act of violence against a person at an airport serving international civil aviation which causes or is likely to cause serious injury or death; or

"(b) Destroys or seriously damages the facilities of an airport serving international civil aviation or aircraft not in service located thereon or disrupts the services of the airport, if such an act endangers or is likely to endanger safety at that airport."

The said protocol has been ratified by Guatemala and is therefore part of the country's legal system. In this regard, book two, title VII of the Penal Code of Guatemala deals with related offences against the life and integrity of persons. In accordance with Guatemalan penal law, the acts described in the relevant provisions shall be attributed to the accused when they are the consequence of an action or omission normally intended to produce such a consequence. The offence is international when the result was planned or when, although he did not seek such a result, the perpetrator, knowing it is punishable, commits the act. The offence has been committed when all the elements of its criminal definition are present; an attempt has been made when, for the purpose of committing an offence, its execution has begun by means of relevant, concrete actions, and the offence is not completed for reasons independent of the will of the perpetrator.

It is understood that all punishments stipulated in the law should be imposed on the perpetrator of an offence that has been committed. The punishment imposed on the perpetrator of an attempt and the accomplice to a committed offence shall be the same as that stipulated in the law for the perpetrators of a committed offence, reduced by one third. The punishment imposed on the accomplices to an attempt shall be the same as that stipulated in the law for the perpetrators of a committed offence, reduced by two thirds (Penal Code, arts. 10, 11, 13, 14, 62, 63 and 64).

Article 474 of the Penal Code: Accessory after the fact (ordinary). Perpetrators of the offence referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be sentenced to two to four years' imprisonment.

Perpetrators of the offence referred to in paragraph 2 of this article shall be sentenced to a fine of 50 to 1,000 quetzales.

If the perpetrator of the offence sells or traffics the items in question, whether they are new or used, he shall be sentenced to six months' to two years' imprisonment and a fine of 100 to 2,000 quetzales.

The State of Guatemala has taken effective measures to prevent and punish terrorist acts, including abduction, homicide and other attacks against the lives and physical integrity of persons, including internally protected persons.

8. International Convention Against the Taking of Hostages

Article 1

1. Any person who seizes or detains and threatens to kill, to injure or to continue to detain another person (hereinafter referred to as the "hostage") in order to compel a third party, namely, a State, an international intergovernmental organization, a natural or juridical person, or a group of persons, to do or abstain from doing any act as an explicit or implicit condition for the release of the hostage commits the offence of taking of hostages ("hostage-taking") within the meaning of this Convention.

2. Any person who:

- (a) Attempts to commit an act of hostage-taking, or
- (b) Participates as an accomplice of anyone who commits or attempts to commit an act of hostage-taking likewise commits an offence for the purposes of this Convention.

Article 2

Each State Party shall make the offences set forth in article 1 punishable by appropriate penalties which take into account the grave nature of those offences.

The said Convention has been ratified by Guatemala and is therefore part of the country's legal system; accordingly, our Penal Code contains definitions of offences which could at some point be applied to the commission of this offence, since it embodies the main elements set out in the Convention. For instance, the offence of kidnapping or abduction is defined in article 201 of the Penal Code, which provides that any person commits this offence who carries it out for the purpose of obtaining ransom or an exchange of persons or the taking of any decision against the will of the abductee, or for any other similar or identical purpose. Article 387 also refers to the commission of the offence of sedition, which applies to any person who, while not repudiating the authority of the established Government, publicly and riotously engages in an uprising in order to obtain by force or violence concessions not granted by the Government.

It should be noted that in relation to the offence that most closely resembles the content of the Convention (which for Guatemala is the offence of kidnapping), the applicable penalties are drastic, since they include the death penalty.

Article 201 has been amended by article 1 of Decree-Law No. 81-96, which provides as follows:

“Kidnapping or abduction. Perpetrators or masterminds of the offence of kidnapping or abduction of one or more persons for the purpose of obtaining ransom or an exchange of persons or the taking of any decision against the will of the abductee, or for any other similar or identical purpose, shall be subject to the death penalty and, if it cannot be imposed, to 25 to 50 years’ imprisonment. In such cases no extenuating circumstances shall be considered.

Accomplices and accessories shall be sentenced to 20 to 40 years’ imprisonment.

Anyone imprisoned for the offence of kidnapping or abduction shall not be granted a reduction of penalty on any ground whatsoever.”

Article 201 bis as supplemented by Decree-Law No. 58-95:

“Anyone commits the offence of torture who, on the order or with the authorization, support or consent of the State authorities, intentionally inflicts on a person severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, or does so for the purpose of obtaining from him or a third person information or a confession concerning an act which he has committed or is suspected of committing, or persists in intimidating a person or, by this means, other persons.

Members of groups or gangs organized for terrorist, insurgent, subversive or any other criminal purpose also commit the offence of torture.

Perpetrator(s) of the offence of torture shall also be tried for the offence of kidnapping.

The consequences of acts carried out by the competent authority in the lawful performance of its duties and in the safeguarding of public order shall not be considered torture.

Perpetrator(s) of the offence of torture shall be sentenced to 25 to 30 years’ imprisonment.”

Article 201 ter has been supplemented by article 1 of Decree Law No. 33-96, which provides as follows:

“Enforced disappearance. Anyone commits the offence of enforced disappearance who, on the order or with the authorization or support of the State authorities, in any way deprives one or more persons of their freedom on political grounds, concealing their whereabouts and refusing to reveal their fate or acknowledge their detection, as does any official or public employee, whether or not a member of the State security forces, who orders, authorizes, supports or consents to such actions.

Depriving one or more persons of their freedom, even if not on political grounds, constitutes the offence of enforced disappearance when it is committed by members of the State security forces if, in the exercise of their functions, they act arbitrarily, abusively or with excessive force. Members of groups or gangs organized for terrorist, insurgent, subversive or any other criminal purpose also commit the offence of enforced disappearance if they commit kidnapping or abduction or participate as members or collaborators of such groups or gangs.

The offence shall be considered a continuing offence until the victim has been released. Anyone convicted of enforced disappearance shall be sentenced to 25 to 40 years' imprisonment. The death penalty shall be imposed in lieu of the maximum prison sentence if the victim sustains serious or severe injuries, permanent psychic or psychological trauma, or dies as a result of the enforced disappearance."

"Article 387. Sedition. Anyone commits the offence of sedition who, while not repudiating the authority of the established Government, publicly and riotously engages in an uprising in order to achieve by force or violence any of the following objectives: (1) deposing an official or a public employee who has been lawfully appointed or elected or preventing him from taking office; (2) directly preventing the promulgation or enforcement of laws or judicial or administrative decisions; (3) committing acts of hatred or vengeance against the person or property of an authority or its agents; (4) committing, for political and social purposes, an act of coercion against individuals, a social class or the property of the State or a public entity; (5) raiding a penitentiary or detention centre or assaulting persons taking prisoners or detainees from one place to another, either in order to release them or to mistreat them.

Instigators or ringleaders of the offence of sedition shall be sentenced to one to five years' imprisonment and a fine of 100 to 200 quetzales.

Those who are merely perpetrators of sedition shall be sentenced to six months to two years' imprisonment."

9. Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material

Article 7

1. The intentional commission of:

(a) An act without lawful authority which constitutes the receipt, possession, use, transfer, alteration, disposal or dispersal of nuclear material and which causes or is likely to cause death or serious injury to any person or substantial damage to property;

(b) A theft or robbery of nuclear material;

(c) An embezzlement or fraudulent obtaining of nuclear material;

(d) An act constituting a demand for nuclear material by threat or use of force or by any other form of intimidation;

(e) A threat:

- (i) To use nuclear material to cause death or serious injury to any person or substantial property damage, or
 - (ii) To commit an offence described in subparagraph (b) in order to compel a natural or legal person, international organization or State to do or to refrain from doing any act;
 - (f) An attempt to commit any offence described in paragraphs (a), (b) or (c); and
 - (g) An act which constitutes participation in any offence described in paragraphs (a) to (f);
- shall be made a punishable offence by each State Party under its national law.

The above-mentioned Convention has been ratified by Guatemala and is therefore part of the country's legal system and regulations associated therewith. The Arms and Ammunition Act No. 39-89 of the Congress of the Republic, Title VII, Single Chapter, contains the offences and penalties relating to these types of illegal acts, which are governed specifically by the following articles: article 83, illegal importing of weapons; article 85, illegal manufacturing of firearms; article 91, illegal transport and/or transfer of firearms; article 93, illegal possession of offensive firearms, explosives, chemical, biological and nuclear weapons, mines and experimental weapons; article 95, illegal possession and storage of offensive firearms, explosives, chemical, biological and nuclear weapons, mines and experimental weapons; article 97 (C), illegal carrying of explosives, chemical, biological and nuclear weapons, mines and experimental weapons.

As regulated currently by the Arms and Ammunition Act, the penalties for the commission of the offences listed vary from 1 to 12 years' imprisonment and confiscation in all cases of the weapons or instruments that are the subject-matter of the offence. In view of the foregoing, the specific Antiterrorist Act which the Congress of the Republic will approve in due course provides for more drastic penalties, ranging from 25 to 30 years' imprisonment.

Furthermore, within the framework of this Convention, on 14 December 2001 Guatemala signed the Additional Safeguards Protocol with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), as a token of our country's solidarity with the global efforts to combat nuclear terrorism, since Guatemala has no nuclear plants and does not possess nuclear material. Guatemala is a party to the Treaty of Tlatelolco.

10. Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection

Article II

Each State party shall take the necessary and effective measures to prohibit and prevent the manufacture in its territory of unmarked explosives.

Article III

1. Each State party shall take the necessary and effective measures to prohibit and prevent the movement into or out of its territory of unmarked explosives.

There are currently no factories in Guatemala whose purpose is to produce plastic explosives, which is why there are no specific regulations related to the marking of such explosives; that does not mean, however, that relevant provisions would not be enacted if the occasion arose.

As for the adoption of necessary and effective measures to prohibit or prevent the movement into or out of Guatemalan territory of unmarked explosives, it is the responsibility of the Ministry for National Defence, under Decree No.123-85, Government Monopoly Act, which is empowered to take the necessary measures, as appropriate to exercise effective control.

In accordance with Guatemalan penal law, the acts described in the relevant provisions shall be attributed to the accused when they are the consequence of an action or omission normally intended to produce such a consequence. The offence is intentional when the result was planned or when, although he did not seek such a result, the perpetrator, knowing it is punishable, commits the act. The offence has been committed when all the elements of its criminal definition are present; an attempt has been made when, for the purpose of committing an offence, its execution has begun by means of relevant, concrete actions, and the offence is not completed for reasons independent of the will of the perpetrator.

It is understood that all punishments stipulated in the law should be imposed on the perpetrator of an offence that has been committed. The punishment imposed on the perpetrator of an attempt and the accomplice to a committed offence shall be the same as that stipulated in the law for the perpetrators of a committed offence, reduced by one third. The punishment imposed on the accomplices to an attempt shall be the same as that stipulated in the law for the perpetrators of a committed offence, reduced by two thirds (Penal Code, arts. 10, 11, 13, 14, 62, 63 and 64).

Perpetrators and accomplices, and to a lesser degree accessories after the fact, are criminally responsible in accordance with their participation in the crime. In that respect, the Penal Code provides:

Article 35 of the Penal Code: Responsible parties. Perpetrators and accomplices are criminally responsible for the offence.

Article 36 of the Penal Code: "Perpetrators are (1) persons who directly participate in the commission of the acts that constitute the offence; (2) persons who directly oblige or induce another person to commit it; (3) persons who cooperate in the commission of the offence, whether in its preparation or in its execution, by carrying out an act without which the offence could not have been committed; (4) persons who, having planned the execution of the offence with another person or other persons, are present at the moment of its commission."

Article 37 of the Penal Code: Accomplices are (1) persons who incite or encourage others in their determination to commit an offence; (2) persons who promise to assist or cooperate after the commission of the offence; (3) persons who provide information or supply the appropriate means for the commission of the offence; and (4) persons who serve as links or act as intermediaries between participants in order to arrange their participation in the offence."

Article 474 of the Penal Code: "Accessory after the fact (ordinary). An accessory after the fact (ordinary) is a person who, having no previous understanding or agreement with the authors or accomplices of the offence, but who is aware that it has been committed, carries out one of the following actions:

- (1) Conceals the offender or helps him to flee;
- (2) Refuses to hand over to the authorities, without reasonable motive, a person who is accused or pursued or convicted, and who is in the residence or dwelling of the person to whom the request is made;

(3) Helps the author or accomplice to evade or shirk investigations by the authorities;

(4) Receives, conceals, suppresses, destroys, uses, keeps, hides, trades or barter, in any form, objects, effects, instruments, evidence or traces of the offence.

Accessories after the fact shall be sentenced to two months' to three years' imprisonment."

Article 475 of the Penal Code: Accessory after the fact (extraordinary). An accessory after the fact (extraordinary) is a person who: (1) Habitually harbours, conceals or protects offenders in any way or conceals weapons or evidence of an offence, even if he or she does not have specific knowledge of the offence. (2) When, in accordance with the circumstances, he must presume that an offence has been committed, commits any of the acts referred to in the preceding article.

Perpetrators of the offence referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be sentenced to two to four years' imprisonment.

Perpetrators of the offence referred to in paragraph 2 of this article shall be sentenced to a fine of 50 to 1,000 quetzales.

If the perpetrator of the offence sells or traffics the items in question, whether they are new or used, he shall be sentenced to six months' to two years' imprisonment, and a fine of 100 to 2,000 quetzales.

The State of Guatemala has taken effective measures to prevent and punish terrorist acts, including abduction, homicide and other attacks against the lives and physical integrity of persons, including internationally protected persons.

1.10 Subparagraph 3 (d) of the Resolution requires all States to become parties as soon as possible to all 12 international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism. The CTC would appreciate receiving information on the progress made regarding the ratification by Guatemala of:

- The Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation; and
- The Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf.

Both texts have been sent to the General Secretariat of the Presidency of the Republic to be transmitted to the Congress of the Republic for their approval, pending ratification by the President of the Republic.

1.11 Article 21 of the Regulations for the Protection and Determination of Refugee Status in the Territory of the State of Guatemala stipulates that a refugee may be extradited solely in accordance with the provisions of international treaties duly ratified by Guatemala. According to:

- Art. 8 (2) of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft,
- Art. 8 (2) of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation,
- Art. 8 (2) of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,

- Art. 10 (2) of the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages,
- Art. 11 (2) of the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material,
- Art. 11 (2) of the Convention on the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation,
- Art. 9 (2) of the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings, and
- Art. 11 (2) of the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism,

A State which makes extradition conditional on the existence of treaties may, at its option, consider these conventions as a legal basis for extradition. Please confirm that Guatemala has chosen to consider each of these treaties as a basis for extradition in relation to the other States which are parties to the treaty.

Article 51 of the Regulations for the Protection and Determination of Refugee Status in the Territory of Guatemala states that “the handing over for extradition of a refugee shall take place solely in accordance with the provisions of international treaties duly ratified by the State of Guatemala”.

In this respect, Guatemala is governed by the provisions of international extradition treaties, and therefore considers that such a proceeding would be in accordance with the conventions in force listed in this question; if a State requests extradition based on the existence of one or some of those conventions, Guatemala could accept them at its discretion as a legal basis for the extradition request.

Guatemala confirms that from the time of its ratification or adherence to the conventions cited, it committed itself internationally to implement them in relation to all States that are parties to them.

The foregoing applies to all the conventions listed with the exception of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, to which Guatemala is not yet a party.

1.12 Could Guatemala please confirm: that claims of political motivations are not recognized as grounds for refusing requests for the extradition of refugees and other persons who are alleged to have participated in the financing, planning, preparation or perpetration of terrorist acts or to have supported terrorist acts, and that terrorist offences are considered as ordinary crimes for the purposes of article 8 of the Guatemalan Penal Code.

According to article 27 of the Political Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala, extradition is governed by the provisions of international treaties and Guatemala recognizes the right of asylum and grants it in accordance with international practices. Extradition of Guatemalans shall not be attempted for political offences, and in no case will they be handed over to a foreign government, except as established in international treaties and conventions with respect to crimes against humanity or against international law.

Article 8 of the Penal Code provides that extradition may be attempted or granted solely for ordinary crimes, and in no case may it be attempted or granted for political offences or related ordinary crimes.

Article 51 of the Regulations for the Protection and Determination of Refugee Status in the Territory of the State of Guatemala states that the handing over for extradition of a refugee shall take place solely in accordance with the provisions of international treaties duly ratified by the State of Guatemala.

In accordance with the Convention on Refugee Status, article 1, subparagraph (f), its provisions shall not be applicable to an individual if there are grounds to believe he has committed a violation of international law, a war crime or a crime against humanity as defined in the international instruments drawn up to make provision in respect of these crimes, or acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

The State of Guatemala must determine, in specific cases, whether in its view political motivations exist, in order to be able to accept or reject extradition requests. Political motivations are not taken into consideration in cases of terrorism.

The Penal Code, in article 282, considers the following offences against collective security to be crimes: arson, criminal damage, disabling of defences, manufacture or possession of explosives; attacks against the communications media, means of transport or other public services; offences of international importance; offences against public order: terrorism, public intimidation, illicit association, trafficking in explosives, etc.
