Report of the Government of Chad pursuant to resolution 1373 (2001)

N'Djamena, 25 March 2003

The fight against international terrorism is a major and ongoing priority for the Government of Chad. The Minister for Foreign Affairs and African Integration underlined the Government's commitment in this regard of 17 February 2003 in his letter to the Chairman of the Counter-Terrorism Committee.

In accordance with Security Council resolution 1373 (2001), adopted after the terrorist attacks carried out against the United States of America by al-Qa'idah on 11 September 2001, major preventive measures have been introduced:

- Increased cooperation between the national police and the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol), notably under the auspices of the Interpol subregional office in Abidjan and the Central African Police Chiefs Committee (CAPCCO);
- Renewal of close cooperation in intelligence matters between Chad and its neighbours within the framework of the Charter on Security of the Community of Sahel-Saharan States (CEN-SAD);
- Introduction of strict border controls with a view to preventing terrorists from entering Chad illegally; creation of mixed security commissions with all neighbouring countries;
- Introduction of permanent monitoring of all non-governmental organizations and all suspicious persons; cooperation with the permanent secretariat on non-governmental organizations and the Supreme Council on Islamic Affairs.

In the financial sphere, the movement of capital and funds that could be used for terrorist activities is being closely monitored. By way of example, a Lebanese national named Mahamat Moudar Ibrahim, who had diverted 50 million CFA francs to Bangui for terrorist purposes, was arrested in N'Djamena and handed over to the Central African authorities on 27 November 2002 under the harmonized legislation on money-laundering of the Central African Economic and Monetary Committee (CAEMC).

Furthermore, Chad is stepping up its efforts to combat criminal activities, such as drug and weapons trafficking and organized transnational crime, that might be used to finance terrorism (Act No. 22/PR/95 of 28 September 1995 on drug control).

With respect to legislative and legal matters, measures have been introduced to ensure that Parliament adopts an anti-terrorism law during its current session and that the international protocols on terrorism, as well as the relevant United Nations resolutions, are applied more vigorously. Accordingly, on 25 February 2003, the Council of Ministers adopted the Organization of African Unity Convention on the Prevention and Combating of Terrorism.

Lastly, refugee status will no longer be conferred upon any person suspected of terrorism.

These are the measures that Chad has taken to mount an effective campaign against terrorist activities in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and international law.

Chad reaffirms its determination to play an active part in the fight against terrorism being conducted so courageously by the United Nations, because terrorism is a scourge that represents a genuine threat to international peace and security and undermines the development efforts of States.
