UNITED NATIONS STANDING ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON SECURITY QUESTIONS
IN CENTRAL AFRICA

REPORT OF THE SUBREGIONAL CONFERENCE ON THE PROLIFERATION OF
AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN SMALL ARMS IN CENTRAL AFRICA

N'DJAMENA, CHAD, 25-27 OCTOBER 1999

I. INTRODUCTION

In the context of the programme of activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, the Subregional Conference on the Proliferation of and Illicit Traffic in Small Arms was held in N'Djamena from 25 to 27 October 1999.

The holding of the Conference was a response to the concerns repeatedly expressed at various meetings of the Advisory Committee regarding the devastating effects of the excessive accumulation of small arms in Central Africa and their spread among the population.

Since its establishment in 1992 by the Secretary-General of the United Nations in implementation of a General Assembly resolution, the Committee has set itself the objective of reducing the considerable quantities of armaments existing in the subregion, particularly arms that are the subject of illicit traffic, because of the threats they pose to the peace, stability and development of the countries concerned.

On the occasion of their first Summit, held in Yaoundé on 8 July 1996, the heads of State and Government of the countries members of the Committee emphasized that the increased and uncontrolled proliferation of weapons was a source of insecurity and a threat to the stability of States in the subregion, and declared that they were in favour of cooperation to fight that phenomenon with the assistance of the United Nations.

The ministers of the countries members of the Committee have also regularly included in the agenda for their meetings questions relating to arms limitation, and have called for the adoption of measures capable of promoting it.

At their tenth meeting, which took place in Yaoundé from 26 to 30 October 1998, the ministers of the countries members of the Committee, having once again expressed their grave concern about the phenomenon of the illegal circulation of small-calibre weapons, which constituted a major factor for insecurity in the subregion, recommended the holding of a subregional conference on those questions and the elaboration of legal monitoring instruments and the adoption of other appropriate measures to deal with that scourge. In that connection, they gave the Bureau of the Committee a mandate to request the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the heads of the international organizations concerned to provide the necessary assistance for speedily organizing such a conference.

The following 10 members of the Committee took part in the Conference: Angola, Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Equatorial Guinea and Sao Tome and Principe. Rwanda was invited, but did not attend.

This Conference, which brought together senior civilian members of government services, senior officers in the armed forces and senior police officials from the Central African countries, afforded an opportunity for an in-depth, open and direct exchange of views among them on the extent, manifestations and consequences of this scourge in the subregion, the efforts under way in their countries to deal with it and possible bilateral or subregional initiatives to that end.

The participants' analysis and discussions of these sensitive issues were enriched by presentations given by experts active in the front line of the campaign against small arms in other regions of Africa and the world, or coming from international organizations particularly concerned with the issue. They included:

Mr. L. T. P. Dzonzi, Deputy Inspector-General of Police in Malawi, representing the Southern African Regional Police Chiefs Cooperation Organization (SARPPCO);

Mr. Mohamed Coulibaly, Executive Assistant in the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, representing the Programme for Coordination and Assistance for Security and Development in Africa (PCASD);

Lieutenant Colonel Mai Moctar Kassouma, Chairman of the National Commission for Illicit Arms Collection and Control (CNCCAI) in Niger;

Mr. Orlando Correa, expert in institutional security, Cabinet of the President, Brazil;

Mr. Okan Aysu, of the Anti-Terrorist Department of Interpol, France.

Mr. William Aurélien Eteki Mboumoua, former Head of the Advisory Mission on the Proliferation of Small Arms in the Sahara-Sahel Subregion, who had been engaged by the Secretariat as a consultant for purposes of preparing for the conference, gave introductory presentations on the themes discussed.

The Secretariat General of the Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS) was represented by H.E. Mr. Nelson Cosme, Deputy Secretary-General for Human Integration, Peace, Stability and Security of ECCAS.

The secretariat of the conference comprised Ms. Pamela Maponga, Secretary of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, assisted by Ms. Annette Ekberg, Ms. Nicole Moran and Mr. Ferdinand Ngoh Ngoh.

H.E. Mr. Claude Baillargeon, Ambassador of Canada to Cameroon, the Central African Republic and Chad, also took part in the work of the conference, and informed participants of his country's interest in the question of the proliferation of small arms and its concern to contribute to the international effort to combat that scourge.

The opening ceremony was presided over by H.E. Mr. Mahamat Saleh Ahmat, Minister of State and Minister of Justice of Chad, on behalf of H.E. Mr. Mahamat Saleh Annadif, Minister for Foreign Affairs and Cooperation of Chad.

The following public figures also graced the ceremony by their presence:

H.E. Mr. Oumarou Yerima Djibrilla, Minister of the Interior, Security and Decentralization of Chad;

H.E. Brigadier General Oumar Kadjallami Boukar, Minister of National Defence and Reintegration of Chad.

Three important statements were made on this occasion by:

Ms. Pamela Maponga, Secretary of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa;

H.E. Nelson Cosme, Assistant Secretary-General for Human Integration, Peace, Stability and Security of ECCAS;

H.E. Mr. Mahamat Saleh Ahmat, Minister of State and Minister of Justice of Chad.

The participants drew inspiration from these statements for their discussions.

The participants decided to entrust guidance of the work of the conference to the Bureau of the Committee.

The work of the conference was therefore chaired by Lieutenant General Pierre Semengue of Cameroon.

Mr. Séraphin Kabila of the Democratic Republic of the Congo acted as Rapporteur General.

The closing ceremony was presided over by H.E. Mr. Mahamat Saleh Annadif, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Chad.

II. THE WORK OF THE CONFERENCE

In conformity with the methodology proposed by the organizers, the N'Djamena conference gave rise to substantial communications by the participants on the situation of their respective countries and to presentations by the invited high-level experts, followed by dynamic and constructive exchanges both during the work in plenary and in the workshops, resulting in relevant recommendations on specific measures to be taken to face the scourge of the proliferation of small arms in Central Africa.

A. Under Theme No. 1 on the overview of the situation with respect to the proliferation of small arms in Central Africa, participants unanimously recognized the seriousness of the current situation.

Small arms have indeed become a real scourge for the countries of the subregion in recent years. Used indiscriminately in the many internal and inter-State armed conflicts that are constantly rending Central Africa and making it the preferred area of action for smugglers and arms merchants wishing to market their engines of death, small arms have claimed a considerable number of victims, particularly among civilians. They have in addition led to a general rise in insecurity and violence, even in countries that have been spared war, thus contributing to political destabilization and endangering development efforts.

1. Participants began by discussing the issue of the extent of the proliferation of and illicit traffic in small arms in Central Africa and its impact on the stability, security and development of the countries of the region.

(a) With respect to the causes of the excessive and destabilizing accumulation of small arms, participants mentioned:

The murderous conflicts which are the order of the day in Central Africa. Clashes, mutinies and tension have occurred or are persisting in many countries of the region, setting factions, armed groups, mutineers, militias, insurgent troops and rebel movements against government forces;

The permeability of borders;

The uncontrolled movements of refugees which mean that these arms spread throughout the subregion, bringing about a general rise in violence and insecurity;

The insufficiency of the services provided by humanitarian organizations for refugees and displaced persons, which transforms the refugee camps into centres of arms trafficking;

The uncontrolled supply of armaments to specialized security units and to public figures who do not hand back their arms when their term of office ceases;

The establishment by officials of militias or private armies;

The establishment of parallel militarized units;

The raiding of armed forces and police arsenals to obtain weapons for use in mutinies, thefts or the activities of unreliable elements of the security forces;

The establishment of self-defence groups and the distribution of weapons to civilians by political parties, mutineers or poachers;

The infiltration of armed troops from countries at war;

The increase in the number of security companies and political party militias;

Transit of weapons headed for conflict zones;

The existence of small-scale and clandestine arms manufacture;

The sale and rental of weapons by dishonest elements in the forces of law and order;

The irregular purchase of weapons for purposes of individual protection;

Secessionist and insurrectionist tendencies;

The difficulties involved in demobilizing and disarming former combatants;

Foreign interference in the conflicts in the subregion;

Organized cross-border crime;

The proliferation of mercenary companies affiliated with multinational mining, oil and other corporations;

The falsification of genuine government orders and the issuing of fake orders by arms traders.

(b) With respect to the manifestations and consequences of the proliferation and accumulation of small arms in their respective countries, the participants deplored:

- (i) The rise in major crime characterized by a significant increase in theft, looting, armed robbery, attacks on private homes, rapes, racketeering, extortion of funds, and murders including premeditated murders, in short a rise in crime in both urban and rural areas;
- (ii) The development of the phenomenon of bandits on major road routes known as road blockers or zaraguinas;
- (iii) The destruction of fauna in the national parks by poachers;
- (iv) The increased feeling of insecurity among the population;
- (v) The decline in foreign investment and tourist activities;

- (vi) The exacerbation of inter-tribal conflicts as well as of conflicts between livestock raisers and farmers;
- (vii) The development of transnational organized crime;
- (viii) The loss of control by the central authorities over certain parts of the national territory;
- (ix) Political destabilization and the disruption of democratization processes;
- (x) The slowing down of economic activity and hence of development.

2. The participants in the Conference also examined the efforts being made by their various countries at the national level to combat the proliferation of the illicit traffic in small arms.

These efforts, as was noted, are taking place on two levels, the regulatory and legislative level and the level of establishment of structures responsible for suppressing unlawful activities associated with the possession or use of firearms.

Where the legal arsenal is concerned, every Central African State has laws or regulations governing the manufacture, possession, holding, purchase, marketing or transfer of firearms, munitions and explosives. This regulatory system is more or less flexible depending on the type of weapons concerned, weapons of war or hunting weapons. The penalties for firearms-related offences may also vary from country to country, as may the judicial bodies responsible for trying such offences. In all cases, possession of a firearm is subject to prior authorization by the competent authority.

Participants nevertheless recognized that the existence of such legislation was not sufficient to prevent the proliferation, traffic or unlawful use of arms. Violations of the legislation in question are generally committed by criminals, or by individuals seeking to ensure their own protection and that of their families and property, fulfil political aims or engage in a lucrative form of trade.

It was also noted that political authorities could encourage breaches of arms-related legislation for political reasons, particularly by distributing weapons to the population or to groups committed to their cause.

The structures responsible for combating the proliferation of small arms vary from country to country. It was recognized that combating the proliferation of small arms within each of these countries is the task of various structures - the gendarmerie, the police, the army, the customs service, etc.

The problem of rapid coordination among these various structures was noted, by virtue of the absence of national structures specializing in combating the proliferation of small arms.

The participants then indicated the various actions or initiatives being taken at the national level to combat this scourge, such as:

Operations for the recovery of arms by force by means of searches and monitoring of the security forces;

Awareness promotion among the population to encourage voluntary handing in of arms;

The application of programmes for buying back arms;

The granting of amnesty to persons in possession of arms who voluntarily return them to the authorities;

Restrictions on the arming of private security firms;

The strengthening of security measures at arms depots.

In many cases, those various actions had permitted the recovery of appreciable quantities of arms.

3. In addition to the efforts at the national level, participants referred to bilateral and subregional actions and initiatives for combating the phenomenon of small arms proliferation.

Thus, bilateral or multilateral agreements had been signed between and among various central African countries providing for exchange of information between security services on illicit movements of arms, organization of joint monitoring or search operations, organization of joint and/or simultaneous patrols to ensure security of common borders, cooperation between custom services on the borders, and intensification of the periodic meetings between administrative and military authorities on the borders. Those joint actions had in many cases yielded satisfactory results.

Some subregional initiatives capable of making an active contribution to combating the proliferation of small arms were referred to, in particular the establishment of the Committee of Central African Police Chiefs.

Still with respect to subregional cooperation, participants deplored the fact that the many decisions and recommendations relating to combating the proliferation of small arms adopted in previous years in the context of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa had for the most part never been implemented through lack of follow-up. They recognized in that respect the need to establish in each country national structures for following up on the Committee's recommendations, and the need for real political will to implement them.

B. Under Theme No. 2, relating to the drawing up of an effective programme of action for combating the proliferation of and illicit traffic in small arms in Central Africa, before setting about the elaboration of national and subregional measures capable of enabling them to find appropriate responses to this scourge, participants listened to and drew inspiration from the introductory statement by the consultant and the communications presented by the invited experts on the experience of their countries, their subregion or their respective organizations.

1. The review of the experience of other regions and of the activities of international organizations covered the following topics:

- The activities of SARPCCO, which was established in 1995 as an SADC effort to combat the traffic in weapons and cross-border crime;
- The activities of PCASED, which was established by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) in order to support the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) member States' efforts to implement the moratorium on the import, export and manufacture of small arms adopted by the heads of State and Government of West Africa in October 1998;
- The efforts made since 1994 by CNCCAI to combat the proliferation of illicit and small arms;
- Efforts to combat the proliferation of small arms in Brazil and Latin America; ongoing projects conducted by the Southern Common Market (MERCOSUR) and the Organization of American States (OAS); and, in particular, the implementation of the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Weapons, Munitions, Explosives and Other Related Materials;
- Interpol activities in support of mutual assistance and exchange of information between the police forces of its countries members in order to combat arms trafficking; and, in particular, its International Weapons and Explosives Tracking System (IWETS); and
- Activities of the United Nations and, in particular, the Department for Disarmament Affairs, to combat the proliferation of small arms at the global level; and assistance provided to States in that regard.

2. Recommendations for practical measures to combat the proliferation of small arms, based on comments made during the review of Theme 1 and on the statements made by the experts and the consultant, were formulated during the workshops.

These workshops, one devoted to the development of national measures and the other to that of subregional ones, led to a rich, constructive discussion during which the participants considered various solutions and approaches that might provide an appropriate response to the scourge of small arms proliferation in Central Africa.

The Conference later adopted the following recommendations:

National measures

1. Application of the rules of good management and good governance;

/...

2. Creation of a national committee responsible for coordinating efforts to combat the proliferation of and illicit traffic in arms in States that lack such a body and strengthening of those committees in countries where they exist;
3. Creation of a committee to follow up the Committee's recommendations in States that lack such a body and strengthening of those that already exist;
4. Review and strengthening of national legislation to combat the possession of firearms;
5. Public awareness-raising as to the danger of firearms possession;
6. Collection and destruction of unauthorized weapons;
7. Collection and use of all available statistics and information on the manufacture of and trade in small arms and ammunition;
8. Strengthening of inspections at border crossings;
9. Strengthening of the operational capabilities of existing mechanisms by training the relevant officials and providing adequate material and technical resources;
10. Prohibition of private or political party militias and regulation of the activities of security firms;
11. Involvement of political parties, traditional authorities, organizations of civil society and, in particular, women's groups in all aspects of the effort to combat the proliferation of and illicit traffic in small arms.

Subregional measures

1. Effective functioning of ECCAS bodies, including the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa (COPAX);
2. Harmonization of the Central African States' national legislation to combat the proliferation of and illicit traffic in small arms;
3. Creation of a uniform weapons register at the national and subregional levels and of a database on the current inventory, classified according to country, arms merchant and shipper;
4. Request by the ECCAS Secretariat General for support from the Secretary-General of the United Nations in the implementation of programmes for the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of combatants;
5. Recommendation that the ECCAS Secretariat General should request the Secretary-General of the United Nations to assist countries of the subregion in their efforts to reorganize the armed forces and the police;
6. Recommendation that the current Chairman of ECCAS should contact the Secretary-General of the United Nations with a view to urging all States to give effect to the recommendations contained in the guidelines for international arms transfers in the context of General Assembly resolution 46/36 H of 6 December 1991;

7. Recommendation that the ECCAS Secretariat General should request the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa to assist in implementation of the activities of COPAX and to provide other assistance in the areas of peace and security;

8. Recommendation that consideration should be given to the possible development, in cooperation with international institutions and donors, of regional projects for arms collection and small-scale development projects to promote the economic and social rehabilitation of criminals;

9. Recommendation that a subregional bureau of Interpol should be established and that the Central African countries should cooperate more actively with Interpol.

- Implementation in each country of a mechanism responsible for follow-up to the recommendations of the Conference

Lastly, the participants welcomed the cordial relations that had prevailed throughout their work and thanked the President of Chad, His Excellency Mr. Idriss Déby, and the Government and people of Chad for the warm welcome and fraternal care that they had received during their visit to N'Djamena.

DONE at N'Djamena on 27 October 1999.

The Committee also welcomed the efforts of the Cameroonian Government to promote good governance, in particular to combat corruption and mismanagement of public property.

The Committee expressed deep concern at the continuing incidents between Cameroon and Nigeria on the Bakassi peninsula and called on the two parties to refrain from any action that could heighten tensions while awaiting the decision of the International Court of Justice, which Cameroon had seized of the matter.

The Committee, while reiterating its appeal to the international community and friendly countries to assist in maintaining the peace between Cameroon and Nigeria while awaiting the verdict of the International Court of Justice, requested the Court to take the necessary steps to ensure a rapid conclusion of the proceeding pending before it.

The Committee again urged Nigeria to comply strictly with the interim measures of protection laid down by the Court in its ruling of 15 March 1996, and called upon the two parties to refrain from taking any action that could create difficulties for the application of the final judgement of the Court.

The Committee welcomed the high-level contacts held between Cameroon and Nigeria with a view to promoting a climate of peace and harmony in their bilateral relations. It expressed the wish, accordingly, for the international community to contribute to strengthening the climate of confidence created by those contacts and to encourage the two countries to refrain from taking any action that could undermine the integrity of their respective territories.

It reiterated its appeal for the opening of a national dialogue in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and took note of the efforts made by the Government in preparation for that dialogue.

It recommended the convening of an international conference on peace, security and development in the Great Lakes countries which could lay the foundations for a durable peace in this troubled region.

Central African Republic

The Committee welcomed the gradual restoration of peace and security to the Central African Republic following the serious crises generated by the successive rebellions of 1996 and 1997, thanks to the combined efforts of the Central African people, the Inter-African Mission to Monitor the Implementation of the Bangui Agreements (MISAB) and MINURCA.

It welcomed the conditions of transparency, calm and democracy under which the 1998 legislative elections and the September 1999 presidential elections in the Central African Republic were held and expressed its gratitude to the international community for its support to the success of those elections.

It took note with satisfaction of the continuing programme to collect weapons circulating in the country carried out with the assistance of MINURCA despite the material and logistical difficulties encountered.

It appealed to the international community to assist Chad in its mine clearance programme.

IV. INTERGOVERNMENTAL COOPERATION IN SECURITY MATTERS IN CENTRAL AFRICA

The Committee took note with satisfaction of the actions and initiatives taken by the States members within the framework of cooperation in security matters aimed, in particular, at lessening tensions and combating insecurity in the border areas, as well as making it possible to have exchanges between the various national structures dealing with these questions.

In view of the cross-border nature of most of the security problems in the subregion and the need to respond to them in a joint and concerted manner, the Committee again strongly recommended greater cooperation and dialogue among the security forces of the Central African countries, particularly within the framework of periodic meetings and the organization of joint operations.

The Committee particularly welcomed in this regard:

- The organization of mixed patrols between Congo and Angola and between the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Congo to secure their common borders;
- Cooperation between Congo and the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the repatriation of refugees who had fled the fighting;
- Cooperation between the security forces of Gabon and Cameroon which had, in particular, led to the arrest and transfer by the Gabonese authorities of criminals who had committed offences in Cameroon;
- The holding of periodic meetings of the standing joint technical commission for security matters between Chad and Cameroon;
- The meetings between the military authorities of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Central African Republic on the population movements on the borders of the two countries;
- The signing in Yaoundé on 29 April 1999, at the meeting of the Committee of Central African Police Chiefs, of the agreement on criminal police cooperation. It appealed to the countries which had not yet done so to take all necessary steps to proceed to the rapid signing of this text and guarantee its full effectiveness.

The Committee expressed grave concern about the resurgence of organized crime and insecurity in the countries of the subregion, particularly the development of the phenomenon of roadblocks.

It also recommended the establishment of an anti-crime fund. The Bureau was mandated to study and propose ways and means of allocating sufficient resources to the fund.

In an effort to promote peace and security in Central Africa and recalling the importance of the Non-Aggression Pact concluded in 1996 among the countries of Central Africa for peace and security in the subregion, the Committee invited the countries that had signed the Pact to ratify it. It recommended that the Bureau should draw the attention of the countries which had not yet done so to the need to sign and/or ratify the Pact so that it could enter into force before the end of 2000.

The Committee expressed grave concern about the security problems created in the subregion by the massive influx of refugees and armed elements coming from other countries. It advocated increased bilateral contacts aimed at lessening the tension aroused by this situation. It also requested the Bureau to take the initiatives needed for the holding of a subregional conference on the matter during the fourteenth ministerial meeting.

The Committee expressed its great concern over the disinformation campaign being waged by certain non-governmental organizations and representatives of the international media against the political situation, human rights and good governance in Cameroon and Equatorial Guinea. It noted with concern that other Central African countries had also been the victims of such false and unfounded accusations and stressed the need for a strong denunciation of such actions, taking into account their impact on peace and stability in the subregion. It called for increased vigilance and the active mobilization of international public opinion and public opinion in Central Africa against this phenomenon. It encouraged the States of Central Africa to continue with calm and determination to pursue the programmes of political, economic, social and cultural reforms which they had initiated.

V. EVALUATION OF THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DECISIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF PREVIOUS MINISTERIAL MEETINGS OF THE STANDING ADVISORY COMMITTEE

A. Establishment of an early warning mechanism

The Committee took note of the progress made in the establishment of an early warning mechanism, in particular that the Gabonese Government had made available a building in Libreville which was undergoing renovation.

The Bureau of the Committee was mandated to contact the United Nations about holding a meeting of ECCAS, Gabon, as host country of the mechanism, the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity, in order to take the necessary steps for its effective startup, particularly release of funds for this purpose.

B. Organization of military exercises in connection with peacekeeping operations between the armed forces of the countries of Central Africa

The Committee, after taking note of the meeting of the chiefs of the armed forces general staffs and the meeting of the military experts of ECCAS member States, held in Gabon from 14 to 15 May 1998 and 1 to 25 June 1998 respectively, stressed the importance of joint simulation exercises for peacekeeping operations as an effective means of promoting confidence and strengthening comradeship-in-arms and the operational capacities of the armed forces of the Central African countries in maintaining peace. It therefore reaffirmed its wish to plan and carry out exercises of this type.

The Committee mandated the Bureau to take all appropriate steps to:

- Finalize the documentation for the Biyongho-98 exercise project designed by the military experts of the Committee and in particular to review the lowering of the budget as initially proposed;
- Obtain from the States members of the Committee a substantial contribution making it possible to hold this exercise;
- Expedite the initiatives undertaken vis-à-vis the United Nations, other international organizations and donor countries to request logistical and financial support for the effective implementation of the project.

C. Establishment of a subregional parliament in Central Africa

The Committee took note with satisfaction of the developments in the project to establish a subregional parliament in Central Africa, particularly the decision taken by the heads of State and Government of the countries in the subregion, meeting at Malabo, Equatorial Guinea, in June 1999 to set up a network of parliamentarians for that purpose.

The Bureau of the Committee was mandated to take steps, in liaison with ECCAS, for the convening of a meeting of subregional experts and parliamentarians charged with studying the modalities for the implementation of the network and securing the financing necessary for its functioning.

D. Establishment of a subregional centre for human rights and democracy

The Committee took note of the initiatives of the Bureau vis-à-vis the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR) with a view to the establishment of the subregional centre for human rights and democracy and welcomed the proposal for the forthcoming appointment in Yaoundé, Cameroon, of an official of UNHCHR as a regional adviser for the launching of the project.

/...

It recommended that the Bureau should undertake consultations with UNHCHR towards the early launching of the Centre.

E. Establishment of a subregional mechanism for the prevention, management and settlement of conflicts

The Committee took note with satisfaction of the developments in the implementation of the project, particularly:

- The establishment by the heads of State and Government of the countries in the subregion, meeting at Yaoundé, Cameroon, on 25 February 1999, of a Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa (COPAX);
- The decision taken by the heads of State and Government of Central African countries, meeting at Malabo, Equatorial Guinea, on 24 June 1999, to integrate COPAX into the structures of ECCAS;
- The Committee also welcomed the efforts of the Secretariat General of ECCAS to revise the Treaty establishing the Community, in accordance with the decision taken by the heads of State and Government of the countries in the subregion and, in particular, the formation of a group of lawyers responsible for preparing the respective draft text.

The Committee indicated its willingness to provide assistance to the Secretariat General of ECCAS with a view to expediting the revision of the Treaty establishing the Community, decided on at the Malabo Summit, particularly, in order to take the integration of COPAX into consideration.

VI. CONSIDERATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SUBREGIONAL CONFERENCE ON THE PROLIFERATION OF AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN SMALL ARMS IN CENTRAL AFRICA
