Attachment*Statement of the State Duma of the Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation*Judgement of the European Court of Human Rights in the so-called Ilaşcu case

In connection with the publication on 8 July 2004 by the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg of a judgement in the so-called Ilaşcu case, the State Duma of the Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation considers it necessary to state as follows:

The said judgement concerns events that took place prior to the accession of the Russian Federation to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. In the opinion of the deputies of the State Duma, that fact releases the Russian Federation from any liability under international law under the judgement since the Convention does not have retroactive force. This understanding is, in particular, clearly reflected in General Assembly resolution 56/83 of 12 December 2001 which provides that: "An act of a State does not constitute a breach of an international obligation unless the State is bound by the obligation in question at the time the act occurs".

The demand of the European Court of Human Rights that the Russian Federation should immediately release the two applicants is without foundation and absurd. These applicants are currently in prison in the territory of the Republic of Moldova. A decision to release them must be taken by the authorities of that State. Attempts by other States to influence them or to undertake any action with a view to the release of the applicants would be unequivocally regarded as interference in the internal affairs of the Republic of Moldova.

The deputies of the State Duma consider that the material and obvious legal defects of the judgement of the European Court of Human Rights in the so-called Ilaşcu case can be explained only by the "made to order" nature of the case and the bias of the Court in considering it. The deputies of the State Duma are convinced that the reaction of the Russian Federation will be adequate.

Russia has always complied with its international obligations and it will continue to do so and no provocations can shake the determination of the Russian Federation to defend its national interests by lawful means.
