Article 2: Scope of application

1. France proposes to add a new paragraph after paragraph 4 of article 2 to read as follows:

“(…) Paragraph 1 of this article shall not be construed as including the element of the transnational nature of an offence in the description of offences established under articles 3, 4, 4 ter and 17 bis or the element of the involvement of an organized criminal group in the description of offences established under articles 4, 4 ter and 17 bis.”

2. The proposed new paragraph makes it possible, without altering the scope of application of the Convention, as defined in paragraph 1 of article 2, to indicate unequivocally that, while the existence of the elements of an offence's transnational nature and an organized criminal group's involvement is essential to the operation of the Convention, such elements are not relevant to the establishment of the offences themselves.

3. The paragraph is also intended:

(a) To indicate to States Parties that, when incorporating the Convention into their domestic law, they do not have to create:

(i) Any specific offences of laundering of criminal proceeds or corruption or interference with the administration of justice that are transnational in nature and involve an organized criminal group (the first component of paragraph 5); nor

(ii) Any offence of participation in an organized criminal group that is transnational in nature. There is deliberately no mention of the involvement of an organized criminal group, which would be tautological in relation to the offence of participation (the second component of paragraph 5);

(b) To avoid any risk of complication regarding the proof of offences established under the Convention.
