Contents

I. Introduction

1.   The triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system was undertaken by the General Assembly at its sixty-second session, and led to the adoption of resolution 62/208 on 19 December 2007.

2.   To ensure follow-up to the resolution, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General, after consultation with the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, to submit "a report to the Economic and Social Council, at its substantive session of 2008, on an appropriate management process, containing clear guidelines, targets, benchmarks and time frames for the full implementation of the present resolution, that defines results to be achieved through the implementation of the present resolution in a format that will allow for adequate monitoring and evaluation of these results, and interdepartmental and inter-agency measures that need to be set in motion, for the implementation of the present resolution".[1] The present report responds to that request.

3.   It also integrates the elements of a programme of work for the full implementation of actions addressing transactions costs and efficiency in the resolution, including the simplification and harmonization of business practices, which the Assembly requested to be submitted to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session in 2008.[2] The report furthermore addresses the mandate contained in Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/27, inviting the Secretary-General to arrange for the submission of a consolidated list of issues that are central to improved coordination of operational activities. This year, the triennial comprehensive policy review management report serves as the consolidated list of issues, as it highlights the response of the funds and programmes to the coordination issues that were comprehensively identified by Member States in the triennial comprehensive policy review, as reflected in the programme of work contained in the management report.

4.   This report is the principal basis for the detailed progress reports to be submitted by the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council in 2009 and 2010 on the implementation of resolution 62/208.

5.   It is also expected to support the reporting to governing bodies of United Nations system organizations on the follow-up to the triennial comprehensive policy review. The General Assembly in effect affirmed that the governing bodies of the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations development system should take appropriate actions for the full implementation of resolution 62/208.[3] It reiterated its request to the executive heads of those organizations to submit a yearly progress report to their governing bodies on measures taken and envisaged for the implementation of the resolution for the triennial comprehensive policy review.[3]

6.   The report gives due attention to the call of the Assembly to accelerate the full implementation of resolution 59/250 of the 2004 triennial comprehensive review, and of earlier General Assembly resolutions on the triennial comprehensive policy review,[4] which should be considered as an integral part of resolution 62/208.

7.   The present report is the outcome of wide participation by and extensive consultations with the organizations of the United Nations development system and the inter-agency mechanisms, in particular the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) and its pillars — the United Nations Development Group (UNDG), the High-level Committee on Management (HLCM) and the High-level Committee on Policy (HLCP). These consultations are essential to securing broad commitments to actions and results, and support for collective approaches to implementation.

8.   Section II provides an overview of the management process, highlighting some key management actions to be taken. Section III and the annex provide the detailed measures for the implementation of the various provisions of resolution 62/208. The annex is in the form of a matrix, which includes the resolution's guidelines, actions, targets, benchmarks, time frames and the entities responsible for the actions.

9.   In developing section III and the annex, innovations were introduced in the reporting on the management process for the implementation of the triennial comprehensive policy review. The matrix has been enhanced in order to strengthen the results-orientation of the management process through stronger linkages among the policy directions, management actions and results (targets) that are more measurable.

10.   The report should be seen in conjunction with the report on the functioning of the resident coordinator system,[5] annual reports of the executive boards and heads of the United Nations funds and programmes and other reports submitted to the Council at its operational activities segment.

11.   The management process should assist the Economic and Social Council in effectively fulfilling its role in providing coordination and guidance to the United Nations system to ensure that the policy orientations relevant to the operational activities for development are implemented on a system-wide basis, in accordance with the guidance of the General Assembly.[6]

II. Overview of the management process

12.   The 2007 triennial comprehensive policy review took place at a key juncture. It provided the opportunity to reflect on how to guide and bolster the United Nations system development cooperation at a time when the global partnership for development set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,[7] the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development[8] and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation")[9] is being further strengthened. It enabled the launch of new measures to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the United Nations system operational work ahead of major upcoming events that will call for a renewed effort by the system, such as the twelfth session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD XII), the high-level General Assembly event, to be held on 25 September 2008, to review the Millennium Development Goals, and the Doha Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus.

13. In this regard, the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development confirmed the role, the unique characteristics and the contribution of United Nations development cooperation to national development efforts. The resolution emerging from the review establishes fundamental directions to guide the response of operational activities for development to emerging developments and challenges. It calls for specific measures to ensure that the United Nations system functions effectively and efficiently in supporting national efforts to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and delivers effective results.

14. The 2007 triennial comprehensive policy review affirmed the overarching importance of national ownership and leadership over United Nations system operational activities as a key principle. The measures being taken by the United Nations system as a whole to implement the triennial comprehensive policy review reflect this approach. They focus on the supportive role of the United Nations system vis-à-vis national development efforts and priorities, drawing on the recognized technical competences of the various organizations concerned. They purposefully move away from earlier approaches whereby the system was seen as executing projects and "delivering" self-standing assistance in programme countries.

15. The management process reported in section III and the annex revolves around the following key concepts running through resolution 62/208:

(a) Operational activities for development are carried out for the benefit of and at the request of programme countries and in accordance with their own policies and priorities for development;

(b) The internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, offer a framework for planning, reviewing and assessing the operational activities of the United Nations system for development;

(c) The United Nations system should focus on long-term development goals and on enhancing national capacity to pursue poverty eradication, sustained economic growth and sustainable development;

(d) Reform aims to make the United Nations system more efficient, effective and coherent in its support to developing countries. The United Nations system should deliver its support in a coherent manner, drawing from its diversity and the technical competencies of its member organizations.

16. The structure of the management process for the implementation of resolution 62/208 follows the structure of the resolution, which should facilitate the Council's annual review of the progress in its implementation. The process addresses five main areas:

(a)   Overall approach to the role and functioning of the United Nations system's development cooperation in support of national development priorities and strategies of programme countries and the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals;

(b)   Funding of operational activities of the United Nations development system and statistical reporting;

(c)   Contribution of the United Nations operational activities to national capacity development and development effectiveness;

(d)   Improved functioning of the United Nations development system;

(e)   Follow-up.

17.   The highlights of the management actions in each of these areas are discussed below.

A.   Overall approach to the role and functioning of development cooperation of the United Nation system

18.   Management actions in this section correspond to the policy directions contained in the introduction of the resolution. Most actions build on ongoing efforts to implement General Assembly resolution 59/250 and earlier resolutions on the triennial comprehensive policy review.

19.   As underscored by resolution 62/208, the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, will continue to provide direction to development cooperation of the United Nations system within the framework of national ownership.[10] At the country level, this is being supported through the UNDG Action Plan on the Development Outcome of the 2005 World Summit, covering the period 2006-2008.[11] It identifies strategies and potential roles and actions by the United Nations development system at the country level in support of the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals. It will be reviewed in 2008 to identify ways to improve the United Nations country level support to the development goals.

20.   Key principles such as national ownership and leadership and integration of operational activities with national planning and programming[12] are reflected in the guidelines for the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF). UNDG and the United Nations country teams will ensure that new Frameworks abide by these principles.

21.   Besides action at the country level, resolution 62/208 places considerable emphasis on the role of inter-agency mechanisms such as CEB and UNDG in the follow-up to the triennial comprehensive policy review.[13] The response of CEB to the triennial comprehensive policy review will be organized through its subsidiary bodies. The oversight by CEB to ensure system-wide coherence, effectiveness and efficiency is expected to be strengthened by the recent integration of UNDG into the framework of CEB as a third pillar, together with HLCP and HLCM. This integration is also expected to strengthen linkages between the normative and the operational work of the United Nations development system. The triennial comprehensive policy review and the Economic and Social Council operational and coordination segments provide the framework for intergovernmental review of the work of CEB.[14]

B. Funding for operational activities

22.   Funding continues to be a priority area of the triennial comprehensive policy review. The United Nations system will respond to guidance in this area both at the level of individual United Nations organizations, and through collective and collaborative efforts. Some of these efforts are innovative, while others are a continuation of previous initiatives. In general, these efforts address four main areas: (a) maintaining an upward trend and an expanding base of financial support for operational activities for development; (b) achieving a better balance between core or regular funding and non-core or extrabudgetary funding; (c) ensuring the integrity of core funding; and (d) enhanced accountability and management of voluntary non-earmarked funding.

23.   Several initiatives are being undertaken by individual United Nations system organizations to improve the adequacy and predictability of funding. The triennial comprehensive policy review requests that the Secretary-General undertake measures aimed at improving the situation in this area.[15] The key actions for ensuring a growing trend in funding, especially for core resources, rest principally with Member States that contribute resources to the United Nations system. Thus the role and actions of the Secretary-General will be mainly ones of advocacy and dialogue with donors. In this regard, the 2008 Doha conference on the follow-up to the Monterrey Consensus may be an important venue to launch an initiative led by the Secretary-General.

24.   While striving to mobilize core funds and use complementary funding modalities, the United Nations system is working towards harmonized approaches with regard to the cost recovery of support to programme implementation. The purpose is to avoid using core resources to cover the management of extrabudgetary funds.[16]

25.   As requested by the Assembly in its resolution 62/208, initiatives undertaken by the United Nations system aim at strengthening results-based planning, budgeting, monitoring and reporting at the country level. A common results-based planning, monitoring and reporting system for use at the country level will be introduced on a pilot basis in 2008.[17]

26.   One of the innovations of the 2007 triennial comprehensive policy review was the importance accorded to the quality of information and reporting on the funding of the United Nations development system. This is reflected in the requests to the Secretary-General to start a number of actions to improve financial data of the United Nations system.[18] The United Nations Secretariat will initiate work in close cooperation with all United Nations system entities, especially HLCM, to improve the coverage and quality of financial data, and to encourage a gradual expansion of the harmonization in data collection and reporting across the United Nations system.

C. Contribution to national capacity development and development effectiveness

27.   The theme of contribution to national capacity development and development effectiveness is highlighted in resolution 62/208. It encompasses four dimensions of the United Nations system's development efforts: (a) capacity-building and development; (b) South-South cooperation; (c) gender equality and empowerment; and (d) transition from relief to development.

Capacity-building and development

28.   The initiatives in this area (see annex, sect. III.A) are guided by the principle that capacity development is a core function of the United Nations system. Many of these actions build on efforts initiated in response to resolution 59/250. The UNDG 2006 position statement on capacity development[19] is being carried forward with the preparation of the UNDG capacity assessment methodology user guide, which is expected to be finalized by early 2009. The guide aims to support United Nations country teams in their UNDAF preparation. Both documents serve as the basis for a "coherent and coordinated approach by the United Nations system in its support to the capacity-building efforts of programme countries".[20] UNDG has adopted the approach of making use of the common country assessment and UNDAF processes as capacity-building tools themselves.

29.   In addition, the United Nations system is putting together specific initiatives that respond to the call of resolution 62/208 to ensure sustainability in national capacity-building. These specific actions or practices (see annex, sect. III.A) plan the increased use of national capacities and national systems (including in procurement). They also include avoiding the use of parallel project implementing units that were often introduced in the past.

30.   The United Nations system is responding to the repeated calls of the General Assembly to support the promotion and transfer of new and emerging technologies.[21] It is reviewing (through CEB) how it can best respond to capacity-building challenges in this domain. United Nations country teams are meanwhile being encouraged to include technological capacity as an area for capacity assessment and development with the agreement of national partners.

South-South cooperation

31.   The United Nations system is engaged in efforts to further support South-South cooperation. UNDG will encourage United Nations country teams to promote South-South and triangular cooperation as modalities for capacity-building in implementing UNDAF. An enhanced role is envisioned for the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation, notably to facilitate exchange of information and best practices.

Gender equality and women's empowerment

32.   In response to the requests of the General Assembly regarding gender equality and the empowerment of women, the United Nations system is promoting actions that focus on increasing the substantive support provided by the United Nations system at the country level on gender mainstreaming; strengthening accountability in this area; and creating an enabling environment within the system that promotes increased participation of women in senior management. The CEB policy and strategy for gender mainstreaming and UNDG guidance to United Nations country teams in this area continue to provide frameworks for the system's efforts at both Headquarters and country levels. The Interagency Network on Women and Gender Equality (IANWGE) will complete by 2009 an action plan to implement the CEB strategy. UNDG and the Network are planning to review current guidelines on gender mainstreaming in 2009. United Nations country teams are also expected to draw more support from an update of tools on gender issues. Accountability will be pursued through proposals on a system-wide gender-monitoring and evaluation system to be submitted to CEB in 2009, and reporting by United Nations country teams in the resident coordinator annual reports. A United Nations country team gender equality scorecard containing performance indicators on gender equality and women's empowerment will be rolled out for use by United Nations country teams. Meanwhile, the United Nations system is expected to intensify its recruitment of qualified women candidates to key senior posts.

Transition from relief to development

33.   Actions being promoted by the United Nations system in the area of transition from relief to development revolve around three main aspects: the development of effective tools for national capacity-building; improving coordination and inter-agency support mechanisms to the field; and enhancing the timeliness and predictability of resources. Several actions build on initiatives already under way, existing instruments and structures. The post-conflict needs assessment will continue to serve as a tool for the United Nations to work in partnership with the World Bank in designing country-tailored support.[22] A post-disaster needs assessment instrument is to be developed. Increased support will be provided to United Nations country teams in situations of transition from relief to development and early recovery, as well as in the area of disaster risk reduction. UNDAF guidelines will be updated to incorporate disaster risk reduction.[23] The UNDG Office and the Peacebuilding Support Office will intensify cooperation. An effort will be made to improve the timeliness and responsiveness of existing tools for resource mobilization, such as multi-donor trust funds and transitional appeals.

[23] Ibid., para. 85.

Increased coordination will be pursued within the United Nations system and with the World Bank.

D. Improved functioning of the United Nations development system

34.   Improved functioning of the United Nations development system is the third pillar in resolution 62/208 and the one closer to the theme of reform of the United Nations. The response of the system includes actions aimed at achieving greater strategic consistency and impact; increased efficiency; and reduction in transactions costs. This part of the implementation plan of the triennial comprehensive policy review is strongly guided by three principles: national ownership; strengthening national capacities as a goal for the United Nations; and ownership of the resident coordinator system by the United Nations development system as a whole.

Coherence, effectiveness and relevance

35.   The initiatives to address system-wide coherence and effectiveness cover a wide range of aspects. They include: common programming processes; the role, functioning and management of the resident coordinator system; system-wide support to and participation in the resident coordinator system; the selection of senior officials for operational activities; and the alignment of strategic planning and programming processes and frameworks. Many actions build on ongoing efforts, while others constitute new initiatives.

36.   Efforts will continue to align all planning and programming documents of the United Nations development system, including UNDAF and the common country assessment, with national planning and programming cycles and processes. The system will also work to enhance UNDAF as the main instrument for bringing together the contributions of the United Nations development system organizations.[24] Enhanced cooperation and closer alignment of these mechanisms with the frameworks and programming process of the Bretton Woods institutions will be explored at CEB.

37.   Another area of focus relates to improving the functioning of the resident coordinator system and further establishing the central role of the resident coordinator. The request of the last triennial comprehensive policy review for appropriate support resources and development of accountability systems is reiterated in resolution 62/208. It is planned to carry forward the efforts of the past years, including strengthening quality support for country programming processes.

38.   The United Nations system will focus attention on further enhancing the performance appraisal system for the resident coordinators and the United Nations country teams, improving training for resident coordinators in areas of competency of specialized agencies and enhancing the pool of candidates for the post of resident coordinator. The selection process for resident coordinators/humanitarian coordinators will also be addressed. CEB/HLCM will meanwhile work to harmonize the recruitment for senior high-level posts within the United Nations system. An important theme of discussion is currently that of managing working relationships, including conflict resolution, within the United Nations country team, building on the principle of a collegial, participatory, and accountable resident coordinator system. As one new element, resolution 62/208 establishes a relation of accountability, of the resident coordinator with the national authorities on the results achieved with UNDAF.[25] UNDG will develop a tool to support this reporting.

39. In this context, a key measure launched after the 2004 triennial comprehensive policy review was an increased number of UNDP country directors appointed in complex country situations to enable UNDP resident representatives who are also resident coordinators to more fully devote their time to resident coordinator functions, with the country director or deputy resident representative being responsible for managing the day-to-day functions of UNDP management.

40. The Assembly, in its resolution 62/208, also reaffirmed the concept of inclusiveness in the functioning of the resident coordinator system. This explains the major ongoing effort of the United Nations system regarding the expansion and sustained participation of non-resident and specialized agencies in country programming activities, which will ensure access to the full potential and technical expertise of the United Nations system by programme countries. UNDG will review the implementation of the action plan on non-resident agencies in this regard. The development of a system-wide knowledge management system will also be pursued under CEB. It will improve the response of the United Nations system to this call for inclusiveness.

41. As indicated in resolution 62/208, one important benefit that coordination should generate is possible savings through reduced transactions costs. Linked to these efforts is the launch of an annual report to the Economic and Social Council on the functioning of the resident coordinator system, which will over time include an analysis of benefits and costs.[26]

Transactions cost and efficiency

42. The theme of transaction costs is tackled in several parts of resolution 62/208, relating to the efficient functioning of the United Nations system. The United Nations system is determined to make further progress in the harmonization and reform of business practices to enable efficiency gains and reduction of administrative and procedural burdens and costs both on the United Nations system and its partners at the country level. The initiatives being undertaken by HLCM and UNDG to accelerate progress in this area are detailed in the annex. These actions will complement those aimed at the development of national capacities through the more intensive use of national capacities.[27] Actions may be clustered around the following main directions: (a) reporting by United Nations system governing bodies to the Economic and Social Council on harmonization and simplification; (b) strengthening of national capacities; (c) the development of harmonized approaches; (d) reduction of overhead and transactions costs; (e) the accrual of savings from efficiencies for programme use; (f) maintaining the integrity of core resources; and (g) the submission of a detailed programme of work to the Economic and Social Council in 2008. Cost-recovery measures,[28] joint country-level efforts,[29] the increased use of national public and private systems for support services,[30] the rationalization of country presence,[31] and harmonized approaches on a range of operational functions[32] will all contribute to tackling transaction costs. A fuller programme on system-wide simplification and harmonization is expected to be developed by 2010.

Regional dimensions

43.   Initiatives in this area aim at fostering greater collaboration among regional institutions, including both United Nations system and non-United Nations system entities, towards more coherent support to country-level development. Regional coordination mechanisms will be further strengthened to this end. Regional commissions and United Nations country teams are expected to increase cooperation in common country assessment and UNDAF processes, as well as in other analytical products. Joint initiatives are envisioned with non-United Nations entities. At the system-wide level, CEB is planning to take up the regional dimensions of coordination as part of its programme of work.

Country-level capacity of the United Nations system

44.   Initiatives are under way to ensure that the United Nations system develops the necessary skills and expertise to meet the demands of programme countries. United Nations country teams will assess the capacities available to them to better respond to countries' needs. A high-level inter-agency process will review this assessment to develop a long-term human resources strategy to equip the United Nations system with the necessary skills. Progress will be reported as part of a report by the Secretary-General on human resources challenges at the country level, which is proposed to be submitted to the Economic and Social Council in 2009. CEB/HLCM will intensify efforts to pursue harmonization in such areas as inter-agency mobility.

Evaluation of operational activities for development

45.   The 2007 triennial comprehensive policy review recognized that evaluation has a vital role to play to link United Nations system operational activities for development to the goal of national capacity development. It identified the individual UNDAF processes as unique opportunities to strengthen national evaluation capacities. The latest UNDAF guidelines will be updated further, notably to encourage end-of-cycle UNDAF evaluations to be conducted in close cooperation with the Government.

46.   CEB/HLCM will work to define a system-wide approach to strengthening evaluation throughout the system. United Nations system organizations and their governing bodies are expected to adopt policies on evaluation consistent with the United Nations Evaluation Group (UNEG) norms and standards. Meanwhile, the United Nations system will strive to work towards the definition of a common conceptual understanding of the measurement of the United Nations development system's "development impact" at the country level. This would enable the United Nations system to better assess the effectiveness of operational activities for development, which is one of the main components of the comprehensive policy review.[33]

47. A specific effort is under way to promote exchange of experiences and lessons learned among the programme country pilots. It may be noted that UNEG is currently completing an evaluability study of the programme pilot countries as requested by CEB. Further guidance will be sought from Member States regarding the request to conduct an independent evaluation of lessons learned from the programme pilot country efforts.[34]

E. Follow-up

48. The Council is responsible for the follow-up to resolution 62/208, as was the case in previous triennial comprehensive policy reviews. The Secretary-General will present the Council with progress reports on the implementation of this resolution in 2009 and 2010, based on the implementation plan detailed in the annex.

49. Resolution 62/208 calls for a number of reports to be prepared in addition to the present report. In 2008, the Secretary-General will submit three reports to the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council.[35] Two other reports will be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixty-third session.[36] There are also complementary reports to be submitted by governing bodies of funds, programmes and organizations of the United Nations system and relevant inter-agency bodies, such as on harmonization and simplification.[37] The United Nations Secretariat, through the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, works to ensure that all entities of the system are duly consulted on and involved in the report preparation processes. It is also making concrete efforts to ensure appropriate communication and consultations with those organizations and entities of the United Nations system responsible for certain reporting requirements.

50. As mentioned above, the General Assembly reaffirmed, in paragraph 140 of its resolution 62/208, that the governing bodies of the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations development system should take appropriate actions for the full implementation of resolution 62/208.

[35] In addition to the present report, the Council is presented with the report on the functioning of the resident coordinator system and the report on the comprehensive statistical analysis of the financing of operational activities for development of the United Nations system for 2006 (A/63/71-E/2008/46).

[36] In addition to the report on the comprehensive statistical analysis of the financing of operational activities for development of the United Nations system for 2006 (A/63/71-E/2008/46), the General Assembly will receive: (a) a report of the Secretary-General on trends in contributions to operational activities for development of the United Nations system and measures to promote an adequate, predictable and expanding base of the United Nations development assistance; and (b) a report of the Secretary-General on the implications of aligning the strategic planning cycles of the United Nations funds and programmes with the comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development (see General Assembly resolution 62/208).

[37] This information will be presented in the form of a conference room paper.

III. Management process for the implementation of resolution 62/208: actions, targets and benchmarks

51. The management process for the implementation of resolution 62/208 is presented in the form of a matrix (see annex). The format of the matrix aims to strengthen the results-orientation of the management process through stronger linkages between and better delineation of the policy directions, management actions and planned results. The matrix has been organized to reflect the following categories of information:

- Focus area, which corresponds to a main section of the resolution

- Key result area, a specific (sub)-theme under a section

- Guiding principles, which essentially reflect general principles of the General Assembly that will guide actions

- Directions, which are policy orientations with instructions or objectives to achieve; they essentially correspond to formal instructions from the General Assembly

- Actions undertaken by the United Nations system, which are specific actions to implement the direction to be taken by the main United Nations system entities, intergovernmental mechanisms and/or United Nations organizations; in certain instances, corresponding to "executive actions", they are taken directly from the resolution

- Targets, benchmarks and time frames, which indicate specific results to be achieved, expressed, whenever possible, in measurable terms, with target time frames for achievement; the targets are intended to be achieved within 2008 and 2010

- The organizations and/or bodies responsible for actions are correspondingly identified.

52. The comprehensive policy review is the principal vehicle through which the General Assembly establishes the main intergovernmentally agreed parameters of the operational activities for development of the United Nations system. The management process for the implementation of resolution 62/208 should serve as a detailed road map for the funds and programmes, the specialized agencies, relevant interdepartmental and inter-agency bodies, and other parts of the United Nations development system in developing their strategic plans to implement the triennial comprehensive policy review guidance within the context of their development cooperation mandates. It should also enable these entities to undertake systematic tracking of the progress in the implementation of resolution 62/208.

Management process for the implementation of resolution 62/208

Focus area

Section I: Overall approach to the role and functioning of the United Nations system's development cooperation in support of national development priorities and strategies of programme countries and the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals

Guiding principles

- The fundamental characteristics of operational activities should be their voluntary and grant nature, neutrality and multilateralism, and their ability to respond to the development needs of programme countries (see para. 3 of resolution 62/208)

- Operational activities are carried out for the benefit of, and at the request of, programme countries and in accordance with their own policies and priorities for development (see para. 3); there is no "one size fits all" approach (see para. 4); national development plans, policies and priorities constitute the only viable frame of reference for programming at the country level (see para. 10)

- The internationally agreed goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, offer a framework for planning and assessing the activities of the United Nations for development (see preambular para. 11 and para. 14); the private sector and civil society as contributors to the internationally agreed development goals (see preambular para. 13)

- Development, peace and security, and human rights are interlinked and mutually reinforcing; development is a central goal in itself (see preambular para. 12)

- Operational activities for development of the United Nations system should be valued and assessed on the basis of their impact on the capacity of programme countries to pursue poverty eradication, sustained economic growth and sustainable development (see para. 7)

- Primary responsibility of national Governments for coordinating all types of external assistance on the basis of national strategies and priorities (see para. 6)

- Reform aims to make the United Nations development system more efficient and effective in its support to developing countries and should enhance organizational efficiency and achieve concrete development results (see para. 9)

- Strengthening the role and capacity of the United Nations system to assist countries in achieving their development goals requires continuing improvement in its effectiveness, efficiency, coherence and impact, along with a significant increase in resources and an expansion of its resource base on a continuous, more predictable and assured basis (see para. 11)

- Importance of consistent, reliable and comprehensive statistical data and analysis about the United Nations operational activities (see para. 16)

- The Triennial Comprehensive Policy Review establishes the main intergovernmentally agreed parameters of United Nations system operational activities for development (see para. 97)
