Elements of Crimes

(Prepared on the basis of the discussion papers proposed by the Coordinator)*

General introduction<sup>1</sup>

1. Pursuant to article 9, the following Elements of Crimes shall assist the Court in the interpretation and application of articles 6, 7 and 8, consistent with the Statute. The provisions of the Statute, including article 21, and the general principles set out in Part 3 are applicable to the Elements of Crimes.
2. As stated in article 30, unless otherwise provided, a person shall be criminally responsible and liable for punishment for a crime within the jurisdiction of the Court only if the material elements are committed with intent and knowledge. Where no reference is made in the Elements of Crimes to a mental element for any particular conduct, consequence or circumstance listed, it is understood that the relevant mental element, i.e., intent, knowledge or both, set out in article 30 applies. Exceptions to the article 30 standard, based on the Statute, including applicable law under its relevant provisions, are indicated below.
3. Existence of intent and knowledge can be inferred from relevant facts and circumstances.
4. With respect to mental elements associated with elements involving value judgement, such as those using the terms “inhumane” or “severe”, it is not necessary that the accused personally completed a particular value judgement, unless otherwise indicated.
5. Grounds for excluding criminal responsibility or the absence thereof are generally not specified in the elements of crimes listed under each crime.
6. The requirement of “unlawfulness” found in the Statute or in other parts of international law, in particular international humanitarian law, is generally not specified in the elements of crimes.
7. The elements of crimes are generally structured in accordance with the following principles:
  - As the elements of crimes focus on the conduct, consequences and circumstances associated with each crime, they are generally listed in that order;

* The Preparatory Commission considered the elements of the crime of genocide and of war crimes at its fourth session and deferred its consideration of the elements of crimes against humanity to its next session.

<sup>1</sup> N.B. The text of the general introduction, which applies to all crimes and will not be repeated for each type of crime, will have to be revisited towards the end of the second reading of Elements of Crimes for any possible inconsistencies with the elements listed under each crime and to include possible additional language common to all types of crimes, such as comments on sexual crimes. If a decision is taken to use short titles for the crimes, there should be a sentence in the general introduction explaining that the short titles have no legal effect.

- When required, a particular mental element is listed after the affected conduct, consequence or circumstance;
- Contextual circumstances are listed last.

Article 6

Genocide

Introduction

With respect to the last element listed for each crime:

- The term “in the context of” would include the initial acts in an emerging pattern;
- The term “manifest” is an objective qualification;
- Notwithstanding the normal requirement for a mental element provided for in article 30, and recognizing that knowledge of the circumstances will usually be addressed in proving genocidal intent, the appropriate requirement, if any, for a mental element regarding this circumstance will need to be decided by the Court on a case-by-case basis.

Article 6 (a)

Genocide by killing

Elements

1. The accused killed one or more persons.
2. Such person or persons belonged to a particular national, ethnical, racial or religious group.
3. The accused intended to destroy, in whole or in part, that national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such.
4. The conduct took place in the context of a manifest pattern of similar conduct directed against that group or was conduct that could itself effect such destruction.

Article 6 (b)

Genocide by causing serious bodily or mental harm

Elements

1. The accused caused serious bodily or mental harm to one or more persons.<sup>2</sup>
2. Such person or persons belonged to a particular national, ethnical, racial or religious group.

<sup>2</sup> This conduct may include, but is not necessarily restricted to, acts of torture, rape, sexual violence or inhuman or degrading treatment.

3. The accused intended to destroy, in whole or in part, that national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such.
4. The conduct took place in the context of a manifest pattern of similar conduct directed against that group or was conduct that could itself effect such destruction.

Article 6 (c)*Genocide by deliberately inflicting conditions of life calculated to bring about physical destruction*Elements

1. The accused inflicted certain conditions of life upon one or more persons.
2. Such person or persons belonged to a particular national, ethnical, racial or religious group.
3. The accused intended to destroy, in whole or in part, that national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such.
4. The conditions of life were calculated to bring about the physical destruction of that group, in whole or in part.<sup>3</sup>
5. The conduct took place in the context of a manifest pattern of similar conduct directed against that group or was conduct that could itself effect such destruction.

Article 6 (d)*Genocide by imposing measures intended to prevent births*Elements

1. The accused imposed certain measures upon one or more persons.
2. Such person or persons belonged to a particular national, ethnical, racial or religious group.
3. The accused intended to destroy, in whole or in part, that national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such.
4. The measures imposed were intended to prevent births within that group.
5. The conduct took place in the context of a manifest pattern of similar conduct directed against that group or was conduct that could itself effect such destruction.

<sup>3</sup> The term “conditions of life” may include, but is not necessarily restricted to, deliberate deprivation of resources indispensable for survival, such as food or medical services, or systematic expulsion from homes.

Article 6 (e)

Genocide by forcibly transferring children

Elements

1. The accused forcibly transferred one or more persons.<sup>4</sup>
2. Such person or persons belonged to a particular national, ethnical, racial or religious group.
3. The accused intended to destroy, in whole or in part, that national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such.
4. The transfer was from that group to another group.
5. The person or persons were under the age of 18 years.
6. The accused knew, or should have known, that the person or persons were under the age of 18 years.
7. The conduct took place in the context of a manifest pattern of similar conduct directed against that group or was conduct that could itself effect such destruction.

Article 7***

Crimes against humanity

Chapeau* for crimes against humanity

The following general paragraphs would be included as an introduction to the Elements of Article 7.<sup>5</sup>

“Consistent with the general principles of law defined in article 30, it is presumed that all conduct described in the elements must be intentionally committed and the elements do not repeat the general intent implied in each action. Likewise, the elements presume that the conduct is not otherwise legally justified under applicable law referred to in article 21, paragraph 1(b) and (c), of the Statute. Hence, the element of ‘unlawfulness’ that exists in the Statute and in the jurisprudence of many of these offences has not been repeated in the elements of crimes. Absence of a lawful justification for a particular action need not be proved by the Prosecutor unless the issue is raised by the accused.

* The Preparatory Commission did not consider the elements of crimes for article 7 at its fourth session.

<sup>4</sup> The term “forcibly” is not restricted to physical force, but may include threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression or abuse of power, against such person or persons or another person, or by taking advantage of a coercive environment.

<sup>5</sup> The inclusion of general paragraphs and footnotes in this text is without prejudice to the final structure of the Elements of Crimes. There is still some concern regarding the formulation of these general paragraphs. There is also an appreciation that a reconsideration could have an impact on the substance of the elements. Some delegations felt the need to define the terms “widespread” and “systematic”. Others expressed concern regarding the need to ensure consistency between parts of the chapeau and certain elements of specific crimes.

“The first two elements for each crime against humanity describe the context in which the conduct must take place. These elements clarify the requisite participation in and knowledge of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population. However, this element should not be interpreted as requiring proof that the accused had knowledge of all characteristics of the attack or the precise details of the plan or policy of the state or organization. In the case of an emerging widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population, the intent clause of the second element indicates that the mens rea is satisfied if the accused intended to further such an attack. As always, existence of knowledge or intent can be inferred from relevant facts and circumstances.

“‘Attack directed against a civilian population’ in these context elements is understood to mean a course of conduct involving the multiple commission of acts referred to in article 7, paragraph 1, of the Statute against any civilian population, pursuant to or in furtherance of a State or organizational policy to commit such attack. The acts need not constitute a military attack. It is understood that a ‘policy to commit such attack’ requires that the State or organization actively promote or encourage such conduct as an attack against a civilian population.”

Article 7 (1) (a) Crime against humanity of murder

1. The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
2. The accused knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
3. The accused<sup>6</sup> killed<sup>7</sup> one or more persons.

Article 7 (1) (b) Crime against humanity of extermination

1. The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
2. The accused knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
3. The accused killed<sup>8</sup> one or more persons as part of, or in the context of, a mass killing of members of a civilian population, either directly or indirectly, inter alia, by inflicting conditions of life calculated to bring about the destruction of part of a population.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>6</sup> The term “accused” has been used provisionally and needs to be discussed to ensure consistency with the Statute.

<sup>9</sup> Some delegations believe that death is not required. Other delegations believe that the accused must cause multiple deaths. In the latter case, the fourth element might not be necessary.

4. The accused intended the conduct to be part of such mass killing.<sup>10</sup>

Article 7 (1) (c)

Crime against humanity of enslavement

1. The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
2. The accused knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
3. The accused exercised any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership over one or more persons, such as by purchasing, selling, lending or bartering such a person or persons, or by imposing on them a similar deprivation of liberty.<sup>11</sup>

Article 7 (1) (d)

Crime against humanity of deportation or forcible transfer of population

1. The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
2. The accused knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
3. The accused deported or forcibly transferred<sup>12</sup> one or more persons to another State or location, by expulsion or other coercive acts.
4. Such person or persons were lawfully present in the area from which they were so deported or transferred and the accused was aware of the factual circumstances that established the lawfulness of such presence.<sup>13</sup>

<sup>10</sup> This element is intended to provide the nexus between the actus reus (killing one or more persons) and the specific context of this crime (a mass killing of members of the civilian population). It is not related to the concept of “specific intent” as understood in relation to genocide.

<sup>11</sup> It is understood that such deprivation of liberty may, in some circumstances, include exacting forced labour or otherwise reducing a person to a servile status. It is also understood that the conduct described in this element includes trafficking in persons, in particular women and children.

<sup>13</sup> Some delegations wish to insert the phrase “without grounds permitted under international law” after the word “transferred” in element 3 in order to reflect the lex specialis governing deportation as stipulated in the Statute. Those delegations wish also to include the phrase “under international law” after the words “lawfully present” in the first line of element 4.

Article 7 (1) (e)*Crime against humanity of imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty

1. The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
2. The accused knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
3. The accused imprisoned one or more persons or otherwise severely deprived one or more persons of physical liberty.
4. The gravity of the conduct was such that it was in violation of fundamental rules of international law and the accused was aware of such gravity.<sup>14</sup>

Article 7 (1) (f)*Crime against humanity of torture

1. The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
2. The accused knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
3. The accused inflicted severe physical or mental pain or suffering upon one or more persons.
4. Such person or persons were in the custody or under the control of the accused.
5. Such pain or suffering did not arise only from, and was not inherent in or incidental to, lawful sanctions, and the accused was so aware.<sup>15</sup>

Article 7 (1) (g)-1*Crime against humanity of rape<sup>16</sup>

1. The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
2. The accused knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.
3. The accused invaded the body of a person by conduct resulting in penetration, however slight, of any part of the body<sup>17</sup> of the victim or of the perpetrator with a sexual organ, or of the anal or genital opening of the victim with any object or any other part of the body.

<sup>14</sup> Some delegations want to add the concept of universal recognition to qualify “fundamental rules of international law”.

<sup>16</sup> Elements for crimes of sexual violence are based on the elements of corresponding war crimes. It is understood that the agreement on these formulations is predicated on the compromise regarding the chapeau.

4. The invasion was committed by force, or by threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression or abuse of power, against such person or another person, or by taking advantage of a coercive environment, or the invasion was committed against a person incapable of giving genuine consent.<sup>18</sup>

4. Such conduct was of a gravity comparable to the other offences in article 7, paragraph (1) (g), of the Statute.

<sup>20</sup> Some delegations were of the view that this element may require further drafting.

The attack was such that it would cause incidental death or injury to civilians or damage to civilian objects or widespread, long-term and severe damage to the natural environment and that such death, injury or damage would be of such an extent as to be clearly excessive in relation to the concrete and direct overall military advantage anticipated.<sup>42</sup>
3. The accused knew that the attack would cause incidental death or injury to civilians or damage to civilian objects or widespread, long-term and severe damage to the natural environment and that such death, injury or damage would be of such an extent as to be clearly excessive in relation to the concrete and direct overall military advantage anticipated.<sup>43</sup>
4. The conduct took place in the context of and was associated with an international armed conflict.
5. The accused was aware of factual circumstances that established the existence of an armed conflict.

<sup>42</sup> The expression “concrete and direct overall military advantage” refers to a military advantage that is foreseeable by the accused at the relevant time. Such advantage may or may not be temporally or geographically related to the object of the attack. The fact that this crime admits the possibility of lawful incidental injury and collateral damage does not in any way justify any violation of the law applicable in armed conflict. It does not address justifications for war or other rules related to jus ad bellum. It reflects the proportionality requirement inherent in determining the legality of any military activity undertaken in the context of an armed conflict.

<sup>43</sup> This element may have to be re-evaluated to clarify the relevant value judgement in the light of paragraph 4 of the General Introduction.

4. The conduct resulted in death or serious personal injury.
5. The accused knew that the conduct could result in death or serious personal injury.
