Report of the Credentials Committee

[Original text: English]
[9 December 1959]

- 1. At its 795th plenary meeting on 15 September 1959, the General Assembly, in accordance with rule 28 of its rules of procedure, appointed a Credentials Committee for its fourteenth session consisting of the following Member States: Afghanistan, Australia, Ecuador, France, Honduras, Italy, Pakistan, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and United States of America.
- 2. The Credentials Committee met on 9 December 1959.
- 3. Mr. José Correa (Ecuador) was unanimously elected Chairman of the Committee.
- 4. The Chairman drew the attention of the Committee to the memorandum by the Secretary-General according to which credentials issued by the Head of the State or Government or by the Minister for Foreign Affairs had been submitted to the Secretary-General by all Member States for their representatives, as provided in rule 27 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.
- 5. The representative of the USSR introduced a draft resolution providing that the Committee decide "to regard as invalid the credentials of the persons describing themselves as representatives of the Government of the Republic of China to the fourteenth session of the United Nations General Assembly, in view of the fact that those credentials are inconsistent with the provisions of rule 27 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly".
- 6. The Chairman, basing himself on resolution 1351 (XIV), adopted by the General Assembly at its
- *For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Plenary Meetings, 795th and 852nd meetings.

- 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, and on well-established precedents in the Credentials Committee, ruled that the USSR draft resolution was out of order, since the Assembly had already taken a decision on this matter for the present session.
- 7. The representative of the USSR, in challenging the ruling of the Chairman, stated that, in his opinion, the resolution adopted by the General Assembly pertained to a different question, namely, the inscription of an item in the agenda, and that now the Credentials Committee was examining the credentials of representatives of Member States and was entitled to take a decision on the matter.
 - 8. The Chairman's ruling was upheld by 7 votes to 2.
- 9. The representative of the United States introduced a motion that the Committee "take no decision regarding the credentials submitted on behalf of the representatives of Hungary". He stated that, at every session since 1956, the General Assembly had refused to accept the credentials of the representatives of the present Hungarian régime by taking no decision on them. As the present régime defied all efforts to improve the situation in Hungary, the Committee should adopt the same attitude.
- 10. The representative of the USSR stated that he protested against the renewed attempt of the representative of the United States to challenge the validity of the credentials issued by the Government of the Hungarian People's Republic, the only legitimate Government of that country, enjoying full support and confidence of the people. He added that the adoption of the proposal would constitute an intervention in the internal affairs of a Member State, which was contrary to Article 2 of the Charter.
- 11. The United States motion was adopted by 7 votes to 2.

- 12. A proposal was submitted by the Chairman that, subject to the decision relating to Hungary, the Credentials Committee find the credentials of all representatives in order and recommend that the General Assembly approve its report.
 - 13. This proposal was adopted unanimously.
- 14. The representative of the USSR stated that his vote in favour should not be interpreted as a modification of his position taken in respect of the credentials of China and Hungary.

Recommendation of the Credentials Committee

15. The Credentials Committee therefore recommends that the General Assembly adopt the following draft resolution:

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 852nd plenary meeting on 10 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Credentials Committee (A/4346, para. 15). For the final text, see resolution 1457 (XIV) below.

Letter dated 14 September 1959 from the Secretary-General to the President of the General Assembly

[Original text: English] [17 September 1959]

In accordance with the provisions of Article 12, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations, and with the consent of the Security Council, I have the honour to send you herewith a notification to the General Assembly, listing matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council.

(Signed) Dag HAMMARSKJOLD Secretary-General

NOTIFICATION BY THE SECRETARY-GENERAL UNDER ARTICLE 12, PARAGRAPH 2 OF THE CHARTER

In accordance with the provisions of Article 12, paragraph 2, of the Charter and with the consent of the Security Council, I have the honour to notify the General Assembly of matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and also of matters with which the Security Council has ceased to deal.

The matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which have been discussed during the period since my notifications to the last session (A/3919, A/4008) are as follows:

- 1. The Palestine question.
- 2. Report by the Secretary-General on the letter received from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Royal Government of Laos, transmitted by a note from the Permanent Mission of Laos to the United Nations, 4 September 1959.

During this period, the Security Council has not discussed the following matters of which it remains seized:

- 1. The Iranian question.
- 2. Special agreements under Article 43 of the Charter and the organization of the armed forces to be made available to the Security Council.
- The general regulation and reduction of armaments and information on the armed forces of the United Nations.
- Appointment of a Governor for the Free Territory of Trieste.
- 5. The Egyptian question.
- 6. The Indonesian question.
- 7. The India-Pakistan question.
- 8. The Czechoslovak question.
- 9. The question of the Free Territory of Trieste.
- 10. The Hyderabad question.
- 11. Identic notifications dated 29 September 1948 from the Governments of the French Republic, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, addressed to the Secretary-General.
- 12. International control of atomic energy.
- 13. Complaint of armed invasion of Taiwan (Formosa).
- Complaint of bombing by air forces of the territory of China.
- 15. Complaint of failure by the Iranian Government to comply with provisional measures indicated by the International Court of Justice in the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company case.
- 16. Question of an appeal to States to accede to and ratify the Geneva Protocol of 1925 for the prohibition of the use of bacterial weapons.
- 17. Question of a request for investigation of alleged bacterial warfare.

^{*}For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Plenary Meetings, 803rd meeting.

- Letter dated 29 May 1954 from the acting Permanent Representative of Thailand to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council.
- 19. Cablegram dated 19 June 1954 from the Minister for External Relations of Guatemala addressed to the President of the Security Council.
- Letter dated 8 September 1954 from the representative of the United States of America addressed to the President of the Security Council.
- 21. Letter dated 28 January 1955 from the representative of New Zealand addressed to the President of the Security Council concerning the question of hostilities in the area of certain islands off the coast of the mainland of China.

Letter dated 30 January 1955 from the representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics addressed to the President of the Security Council concerning the question of acts of aggression by the United States of America against the People's Republic of China in the area of Taiwan (Formosa) and other islands of China.

- 22. Situation created by the unilateral action of the Egyptian Government in bringing to an end the system of international operation of the Suez Canal, which was confirmed and completed by the Suez Canal Convention of 1888.
- 23. Actions against Egypt by some Powers, particularly France and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, which constitute a danger to international peace and security and are serious violations of the Charter of the United Nations.
- 24. The situation in Hungary.
- 25. Military assistance rendered by the Egyptian Government to the rebels in Algeria.
- 26. Letter dated 30 October 1956 from the representative of Egypt addressed to the President of the Security Council.
- 27. Letter dated 13 February 1958 from the representative of Tunisia to the President of the Security Council concerning: "Complaint by Tunisia in respect of an act of aggression committed against it by France on 8 February 1958 at Sakiet-Sidi-Youssef".

- 28. Letter dated 14 February 1958 from the representative of France to the President of the Security Council concerning: "Situation resulting from the aid furnished by Tunisia to rebels enabling them to conduct operations from Tunisian territory directed against the integrity of French territory and the safety of the persons and property of French nationals".
- Letter dated 20 February 1958 from the representative of Sudan addressed to the Secretary-General.
- 30. Complaint of the representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in a letter to the President of the Security Council dated 18 April 1958 entitled: "Urgent measures to put an end to flights by United States military aircraft armed with atomic and hydrogen bombs in the direction of the frontiers of the Soviet Union".
- 31. Letter dated 29 May 1958 from the representative of Tunisia to the President of the Security Council concerning: "Complaint by Tunisia in respect of acts of armed aggression committed against it since 19 May 1958 by the French military forces stationed in its territory and in Algeria".
- 32. Letter dated 29 May 1958 from the representative of France to the President of the Security Council concerning: (a) "The complaint brought by France against Tunisia on 14 February 1958"; (b) "The situation arising out of the disruption, by Tunisia, of the modus vivendi which had been established since February 1958 with regard to the stationing of French troops at certain points in Tunisian territory".
- 33. Letter dated 17 July 1958 from the representative of Jordan to the President of the Security Council concerning: "Complaint by the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan of interference in its domestic affairs by the United Arab Republic".

It will be recalled that, on 25 November 1958, the Secretary-General notified the General Assembly (A/4008) that the Security Council has ceased to deal with the following matter:

"Letter dated 22 May 1958 from the representative of Lebanon addressed to the President of the Security Council concerning: 'Complaint by Lebanon in respect of a situation arising from the intervention of the United Arab Republic in the internal affairs of Lebanon, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security'."

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's communication (A/4216).

India: request for the inclusion of an item in the provisional agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [14 July 1959]

LETTER DATED 13 JULY 1959 FROM THE PER-MANENT REPRESENTATIVE OF INDIA TO THE UNITED NATIONS, ADDRESSED TO THE SECRE-TARY-GENERAL

In accordance with the instructions of the Government of India and pursuant to rule 13 (e) of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly I have the honour to propose the following item for inclusion in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly:

"Question of the representation of China in the United Nations".

An explanatory memorandum in terms of rule 20 of the rules of procedure is attached.

(Signed) C. S. JHA

Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary Permanent Representative of India to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

- 1. Today the United Nations has secured the participation of the effective Governments of most of the world. It is self-evident that the United Nations can achieve its purposes only if it includes those Governments which are able and willing to fulfil the obligations contained in Articles 2 and 4 of its Charter. It is necessary to consider the question of the representation of China in the United Nations not only from the point of view of the legitimate rights of the Chinese people and their Government, but also from the point of view of the effectiveness of the Organization itself. There is no doubt that only the People's Government of China is in a position to comply with those decisions and recommendations of the United Nations which affect the Chinese specifically or which are addressed to all Member States.
- 2. The Government of India has, therefore, for the last few years sought proper representation of China in the United Nations. If a country like China with a vast territory and population is not properly represented in the United Nations the work and worth of this most important Organization is certain to be ineffective in many important fields where international co-operation and endeavour are vital. No major measures of peace and security can successfully be undertaken without proper consultation with and co-operation of China, and, in the view of the Government of India, all possible efforts must be made to secure the proper representation of China in the United Nations. It was because of the importance of China in the activities of the United Nations that she was made a permanent member of the Security Council and it is unfortunate from every point of view that the United Nations has not yet been able to have the benefit of her participation through her true representatives. The Government of India hopes that the General Assembly at its forthcoming session, will remove this shortcoming and agree to China being properly represented in the United Nations by the representatives of the People's Government of China. Accordingly, the Government of India has proposed that an item entitled "Question of the representation of China in the United Nations" be included in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.

Organization of the fourteenth session: memorandum by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [10 September 1959]

1. The Secretary-General has the honour to place before the General Committee the following observations and suggestions regarding the arrangements for the meetings of the General Assembly and its Main Committees during the fourteenth session.

SCHEDULE OF MEETINGS

2. It is suggested that both plenary and committee meetings should begin promptly at 10.30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

3. It is proposed that a five-day working week be established, it being understood that extended morning meetings on Saturdays may be scheduled should this prove necessary.

CLOSING DATE FOR THE SESSION

4. In accordance with the provisions of rule 2 of the rules of procedure, the Secretary-General wishes to suggest that the General Committee propose to the General Assembly 5 December 1959 as the closing date of the fourteenth session.

VERBATIM RECORDS OF MAIN COMMITTEES

5. The Secretary-General wishes to draw to the Committee's attention that, in previous years, in accordance with a recommendation made by the Fifth Committee at the second session, verbatim records have been authorized "for one Main Committee at a time, the committee which, in the opinion of the General Committee, has the most important items on its agenda".2/ The Secretary-General suggests that verbatim services be provided for the First Committee; in addition, the Secretary-General will also be in a position to have the debates of the Special Political Committee transcribed.

SEATING ARRANGEMENTS

6. In accordance with established practice, the Secretary-General caused lots to be drawn for the purpose of choosing the Member to occupy the first desk on the Assembly floor from which the alphabetical seating order will begin. Ghana was the name drawn and, consequently the delegation of Ghana will sit at the first desk at the extreme right of the President. At the initial meetings of the Main Committees, the same seating order will be observed. There will be, however, a weekly rotation of five places in the Main Committees thereafter.

Adoption of the agenda and allocation of items: memorandum by the Secretary-General

1. The Secretary-General has the honour to place before the General Committee for its consideration the following observations and proposals in connexion with the report to be made to the plenary meeting by the General Committee on the adoption of the agenda of the fourteenth session and the allocation of agenda items:

I. ADOPTION OF THE AGENDA

2. All proposals for the inclusion of items in the agenda of the fourteenth session have been communicated to Members of the General Assembly in the following documents:

Provisional agenda of the fourteenth session (A/4150);

Supplementary list of items for the agenda of the fourteenth session (A/4189);

Secretary-General: request for the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the fourteenth session (A/4209).

- 3. In connexion with item 12 of the provisional agenda, relating to the report of the Economic and Social Council, the Secretary-General wishes to draw attention to Council resolution 730 I (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959 in which it recommended that the General Assembly should adopt a draft resolution on technical assistance in the field of narcotics control. The Secretary-General suggests that the Council's resolution be considered under item 12 by the Third Committee during the consideration of chapter VI of the Council's report.
- 4. The Secretary-General also wishes to draw attention to Economic and Social Council resolution 731 G (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959 on advisory social welfare services, in which the Council requested the General Assembly "when it considers the level of budgetary appropriations for 1960 and following years, to take into consideration the necessity for further development of the programme of advisory social welfare services and the desirability of increasing the relevant financial provision to this end. It is suggested that this resolution should also be considered in connexion with item 12 during the consideration of chapter X of the Council's report by the Fifth Committee.

- 5. It will be recalled that the General Assembly, in resolution 1278 (XIII) of 5 December 1958, requested the Trusteeship Council to report to the Assembly at its fourteenth session concerning economic assistance for Somalia. The Council's report on this matter forms part of its annual report to the Assembly, and the Secretary-General suggests, therefore, that this question be considered in connexion with item 13.
- 6. As regards item 66, relating to amendments to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice, the proposals in question involve, in addition to their budgetary implications, certain questions of policy affecting the administration and functioning of the Court. In these circumstances, an appropriate procedure for dealing with this item might be for the General Assembly to refer it to the Fifth Committee, on the understanding that the Fifth Committee would seek the advice of the Sixth Committee on the questions of policy involved, other than those of a budgetary nature, before its consideration of the item.
- 7. Item 59 on the provisional agenda and items 2 and 5 on the supplementary list deal with matters which are related to the general question of disarmament. If the General Committee should decide to recommend the inclusion of these items, it may also wish to recommend that some or all should be considered as subheadings under the general heading of "Question of disarmament" which has been proposed as an additional item in document A/4209. This latter item includes the report of the Disarmament Commission.

- 8. Taking into account paragraphs 3 to 7 above, the agenda of the fourteenth session would read as follows:³/
- 1. Opening of the session by the Chairman of the delegation of Lebanon (P.1).
- 2. Minute of silent prayer or meditation (P.2).

First report of the General Committee

- 1. The General Committee, at its 121st and 122nd meetings held on 16 September 1959, considered the provisional agenda of the fourteenth session (A/4150), the supplementary list of items (A/4189) and a request by the Secretary-General for the inclusion of an additional item (A/4209).
- 2. The General Committee approved a suggestion by the Secretary-General (A/BUR/151, para. 3) that Economic and Social Council resolution 730 I (XXVIII) should be considered under item 12 by the Third Committee during the consideration of chapter VI of the Council's report.
- 3. The General Committee approved a suggestion by the Secretary-General (A/BUR/151, para. 4) that Economic and Social Council resolution 731 G (XXVIII) should also be considered in connexion with item 12 during the consideration of chapter X of the Council's report by the Fifth Committee.
- 4. The Committee approved a suggestion by the Secretary-General (A/BUR/151, para. 5) that the question of economic assistance to Somalia be considered in connexion with item 13.
- 5. The Committee further approved a suggestion by the Secretary-General (A/BUR/151, para. 6) that item 66 (Proposed amendments to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice) be referred to the Fifth Committee, on the understanding that the Fifth Committee would seek the advice of the Sixth Committee on the questions of policy involved, other than those of a budgetary nature, before its consideration of the item.
- 6. With regard to item 60 (Question of the representation of China in the United Nations), proposed by India,

- the representative of India was invited to the table and made a statement.
- 7. The representative of the United States of America proposed that the General Committee recommend to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

"The General Assembly

- "1. Decides to reject the request of India (A/4139) for the inclusion in the agenda of its fourteenth regular session of the item entitled 'Question of the representation of China in the United Nations';
- "2. Decides not to consider at its fourteenth regular session, any proposals to exclude the representatives of the Government of the Republic of China or to seat representatives of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China."
- 8. Following various statements the draft resolution was put to the vote, with the following results:

Paragraph 1 was approved by 12 votes to 7, with 1 abstention.

Paragraph 2 was approved by 11 votes to 7, with 2 abstentions.

The draft resolution as a whole was approved by 12 votes to 7, with 1 abstention.

9. After statements had been made by the representatives of France and Morocco on item 61 (Question of Algeria), by the representatives of the Union of South Africa, India and Liberia on items 62 (Treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa) and 63 (Question of race conflict in South Africa resulting from the policies of "apartheid" of the Government of the Union of South Africa) and by the representative of the United States of America on item 64 (Question of the consistent application of the principle of equitable geographical representation in the election of the President of the General Assembly), the Committee decided to recommend the inclusion of these items in the agenda.

- 10. In connexion with item 70 the representative of Brazil submitted a proposal to include in that item, as sub-headings (\underline{b}), (\underline{c}) and (\underline{d}), items 59, 65 and 68 entitled respectively "Prevention of the wider dissemination of nuclear weapons", "Question of French nuclear tests in the Sahara" and "Suspension of nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests".
- 11. Following discussion, the Brazilian proposal was put to the vote by roll-call, with the following results:

The inclusion of sub-heading (a) was approved by 16 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.

The inclusion of sub-heading (\underline{b}) was approved by 11 votes to 9.

The inclusion of sub-heading (c) was approved by 10 votes to 9, with 1 abstention.

The inclusion of sub-heading (\underline{d}) was approved by 11 votes to 9.

The proposal as a whole was approved by 11 votes to 6, with 2 abstentions.

I. ADOPTION OF THE AGENDA

12. Taking into account paragraphs 2 to 11 above, the General Committee recommends the adoption of the following agenda for the fourteenth session:

[For items 1 to 58, see A/BUR/151, para. 8.]

- 59. Question of Algeria.
- 60. Treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa.
- 61. Question of race conflict in South Africa resulting from the policies of "apartheid" of the Government of the Union of South Africa.

Special Political, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Committees

[See A/BUR/151, para. 9.]

III. ORGANIZATION OF THE SESSION

14. On the proposal of the Secretary-General (A/BUR/150), the General Committee recommends that the General Assembly approve the following arrangements relating to the schedule of meetings:

- (a) That both plenary and committee meetings should begin at 10.30 a.m. and 3 p.m.;
- (b) That a five-day working week be established, it being understood that extended morning meetings on Saturdays may be scheduled should this prove necessary.
- 15. The General Committee recommends that the General Assembly approve, in accordance with rule 2 of the rules of procedure, 5 December 1959 as the closing date of the fourteenth session.
- 16. The Committee takes note of the suggestion by the Secretary-General that verbatim services be provided for the First Committee and notes that the Secretary-General will also be in a position to have the debates of the Special Political Committee transscribed.

Second report of the General Committee

[Original text: English] [22 September 1959]

- 1. The General Committee, at its 123rd meeting held on 22 September 1959, considered the request by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (A/4218) for the inclusion of an additional item, as an important and urgent matter, in the agenda of the fourteenth session. The item proposed is entitled:
 - "General and complete disarmament".
- 2. An explanatory memorandum was submitted, in accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure, on this question. The General Committee also had before it the "Declaration of the Soviet Government on general and complete disarmament" (A/4219).
- 3. The General Committee decided, without objection, to recommend the inclusion of this item in the agenda of the fourteenth session.
- 4. At the suggestion of the representative of Austria, the General Committee further decided to recommend that the item be allocated to the First Committee, on the understanding that the Committee would itself decide on the manner and order in which the Committee might wish to deal with it, along with the other items relating to disarmament matters which might be allocated to it for consideration and report.

Third report of the General Committee

[9 October 1959]

- 1. At its 124th meeting on 9 October 1959, the General Committee had before it requests by the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic (A/4233), by the Secretary-General (A/4232) and by the Federation of Malaya and Ireland (A/4234) for the inclusion of additional items in the agenda of the fourteenth session.
- 2. The General Committee first considered the item proposed by the Byelorussian SSR entitled:
- "International encouragement of scientific research into the control of cancerous diseases".

The representative of the Byelorussian SSR was invited to the table and made a statement. The Committee decided, without a vote, to recommend to the General Assembly that the item be included in the agenda and that it be allocated to the Third Committee.

3. The General Committee then considered the item proposed by the Secretary-General entitled:

"The United Nations Library: gift of the Ford Foundation".

It decided, without a vote, to recommend to the General Assembly that the item be included in the agenda and that it be allocated to the Fifth Committee.

4. The General Committee finally considered the item proposed by the Federation of Malaya and Ireland entitled:

"Question of Tibet".

The representatives of the Federation of Malaya and Ireland were invited to the table and made statements. After discussion, the Committee decided, by 11 votes to 5 with 4 abstentions, to recommend to the General Assembly that the item be included in the agenda. It further decided, by 12 votes to none, with 6 abstentions and with 2 members not participating in the vote, to recommend that the item be discussed in plenary meeting without reference to a Committee.

Low-cost housing

Peru: revised draft resolution

[Original text: Spanish] [27 October 1959]

The General Assembly,

Endorsing Economic and Social Council resolution 731 B (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959 approving the long-range programme of concerted international action in the field of low-cost housing and related community facilities,

Recognizing that the continuous efforts of Governments and private organizations, as well as coordinated action on the part of international bodies, are necessary in order to deal with the problem of housing and the rapid rate of urban expansion,

1. Recommends that the appropriate organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies should give due consideration to the requests of Governments for technical assistance in this field;

- 2. Recommends that Member States should institute or accelerate programmes to promote the construction of low-cost housing and stimulate active participation by the people in these programmes through self-help, mutual aid, co-operation and other similar measures:
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with interested Governments, to collect and disseminate information concerning the needs of countries in the process of development with respect to essential building materials for low-cost housing and community improvement programmes, concerning the availability of such materials and equipment in certain countries in excess of their own needs, and concerning more advanced techniques and other technical methods in this field:
- 4. Invites the Secretary-General to submit a report on the results of his inquiry at an appropriate time, and the Economic and Social Council to transmit this report, with its comments thereon, to the General Assembly.

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Third Committee, 930th to 942nd meetings; Fifth Committee, 716th, 733rd to 737th and 756th meetings; and ibid., Plenary meetings, 841st and 846th meetings.

Juvenile delinquency

Greece and Italy: draft resolution

[Original text: French] [23 October 1959]

The General Assembly,

Noting that many countries have reported an increase in the number of offences committed by groups of socially maladjusted young people,

Considering that such a phenomenon should be carefully studied at the international level, with a view to assessing its gravity and finding remedies for it,

Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with States Members of the United Nations and in co-operation with the non-governmental organizations and experts concerned with the matter, to undertake an inquiry on the different forms of juvenile delinquency engaged in by groups of minors and young adults, and on the measures taken in varrious countries to prevent and combat such delinquency.

Report of the Economic and Social Council (chapters VI and VII) Report of the Third Committee

[Original text: English and Spanish] [17 November 1959]

- 1. When allocating item 12 of the agenda of its fourteenth session (Report of the Economic and Social Council), the General Assembly decided, at its 803rd plenary meeting, held on 22 September 1959, to refer chapters VI and VII of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143) to the Third Committee for consideration and report.
- 2. The Committee agreed to consider section IV of chapter VI when discussing agenda item 33 (Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refu-
- * Incorporating A/4250/Corr.1 and 2.

- gees), and section V of chapter VII when discussing agenda item 64 (Draft Declaration of the Rights of the Child) (see the reports of the Committee on these items A/4278 and A/4249, respectively).
- 3. The Committee considered the remaining sections of chapters VI and VII at its 930th to 942nd meetings, held between 20 and 30 October 1959.

UNITED NATIONS CHILDREN'S FUND

4. The Chairman of the Executive Board of UNICEF called the attention of the Committee to the main trends during 1959 in UNICEF programme aid and in its financial situation.

- 5. In the field of nutrition, UNICEF, in collaboration with FAO and WHO, was achieving progress in helping countries find effective ways to improve the diet of their children. At its September session, the UNICEF Board, on the basis of expert evaluations, defined policy to give nutrition programmes aided by UNICEF greater long-run values.
- 6. The Chairman pointed out that, in the control of communicable diseases mainly affecting children, the largest expenditures by UNICEF were for malaria campaigns. The Board decided to continue its aid to campaigns to which it had already been given. However, little scope would remain for aiding new campaigns within the $10 million annual allocation ceiling set by the Board. The question would be re-examined in 1961.
- 7. More rapid progress in expanding the networks of basic health services for mothers and children was needed; it would, however require a considerable increase in training schemes within countries. It was desirable that those services should be an integral part of broader health services, and, wherever possible, an integral part of community development.
- 8. Progress was being made in developing closer relations between UNICEF and the United Nations Bureau of Social Affairs. At its September 1959 session, the Board had for the first time approved aid for a community development project in an urban area. As a result of the policy adopted by the Board in March 1959, a number of countries had asked for aid in providing social services for children and a special technical consultant of the Bureau was discussing with interested Governments specific proposals for UNICEF aid.
- 9. The first projects involving UNICEF aid for the training of teachers in health and nutrition education would probably be presented to the Board in 1960.
- 10. The Board was concerned about the income of UNICEF. Income from all sources in 1959 was $500,000 less than in 1958, a decrease which reversed the trend of recent years. At the same time, reflecting increasing requests from Governments for UNICEF aid, allocations reached a higher level than at any time since 1950 and used all unallocated resources carried over from the previous years.
- 11. The Board had agreed that in future it would hold only one main session a year. It was hoped that that would make it easier for a number of Governments to include in their delegations to the Board outstanding persons with experience in the substantive work of UNICEF.
- 12. In the course of the debate, a number of delegations underlined the importance of UNICEF aid in encouraging local initiative and government planning and action to provide a sound basis for permanent and expanding services for children. Especially commended was the increasing emphasis on improving the quality of the programmes aided, including the training of national personnel capable of giving leadership and - supervision at all levels throughout the service. Of special value, as a preventive measure, was the educating of mothers in better methods of child care, nutrition, and disease control. A number of representatives referred to the importance of UNICEF aid in helping their own countries carry out programmes of economic and social improvement.

- 13. The manner in which the work of UNICEF was co-ordinated with that of the other organs of the United Nations and agencies made UNICEF aid an essential complement to technical assistance. Satisfaction was expressed at the growing co-operation with the United Nations Bureau of Social Affairs. The recent UNICEF review of malaria policy reflected the intimate co-operation which had developed with WHO. Several delegations, however, called attention to the problems of financial relationship which had arisen between UNICEF and FAO during the course of the past year and they emphasized the need for replacing the interim arrangements agreed upon by the UNICEF Board in September 1959 by a long-term solution which would be mutually satisfactory. The belief was expressed that UNICEF should be independently capable of dealing in a concerted manner with the physical and mental problems of children, and that UNICEF should therefore have the authority to employ various types of experts on its own staff.
- 14. The importance of the continuation by the UNICEF Board of periodic evaluations of progress was stressed. The survey of the administrative structure of UNICEF which the Board had decided in September should be undertaken was considered by several delegations as evidence of the responsible nature of UNICEF in assuring maximum effectiveness and efficiency in the expenditure of funds. On the other hand, in referring to the important progress that was being made in malaria campaigns, several delegations pointed to the necessity of maintaining a balance in the programmes aided by UNICEF. The view was advanced that large-scale aid for disease control was a less appropriate task for UNICEF than was aid for basic maternal and child welfare services; if progress were limited in that field because of lack of trained national personnel and funds provided under the "matching" scheme, UNICEF should find ways of overcoming those difficulties.
- 15. It was pointed out that, despite the effectiveness of UNICEF aid, only 55 million mothers and children were benefiting directly from UNICEF-aided projects while there were 550 million children in the countries receiving UNICEF aid. The discrepancy between need and accomplishment was aggravated by the rising costs of aid provided by UNICEF and by the large increase in the child population in those countries. The income of UNICEF for 1959 would be less than in 1958 and the Fund had been required to draw substantially upon its reserves in order to meet requests for aid. Part of the pledge of the largest donor, the United States of America, would be lost in 1959 because contributions from other Governments, although they had increased in the aggregate, were not sufficient to match the United States pledge in full. Several delegations expressed the hope that increased support for UNICEF would be forthcoming specially from the economically more advantaged countries; a goal of $50 million a year in government contributions was suggested.

- 16. In view of the Fund's financial situation, some delegations cautioned against UNICEF venturing too ambitiously into new fields of aid at the expense of its traditional fields; other delegations, however, emphasized the need for flexibility in helping Governments meet the needs of children, and they advocated a forward-looking approach to additional ways of helping children. It was clear to both groups that, given the tremendous needs of children and the opportunities for the effective use of aid through UNICEF, more adequate financial support was needed.
- 17. At the 941st meeting, Afghanistan, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, France, Pakistan, Sweden, Tunisia and the United Arab Republic submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.770), the operative paragraph of which read as follows:
 - "Appeals to Governments to continue their support of UNICEF and contribute to the Fund to the greatest extent possible."
- 18. Bulgaria introduced an amendment (A/C.3/L.774) to the twelve-Power draft resolution A/C.3/L.770) providing for the replacement of the words "to continue their support" in the operative paragraph by the words "to support".
- 19. After a discussion, the representative of Canada proposed the following text to replace the operative paragraph:
 - "Draws attention to the need for support of UNICEF to the greatest extent possible."
- 20. The representative of Ceylon suggested that the operative paragraph should be redrafted to read:
 - "Appeals to Governments to contribute to the Fund to the greatest extent possible and to continue their support."
- 21. The representative of Bulgaria replaced his delegation's amendment (A/C.3/L.774) by the operative part of General Assembly resolution 1257 (XIII), which reads as follows:
 - "1. Expresses the hope that all Governments will contribute to the United Nations Children's Fund as generously as possible;
 - "2. Congratulates the Fund on its outstanding achievements."
- 22. The representatives of the United States of America and Italy proposed that the Bulgarian amendment be amended by the insertion of the following phrase in operative paragraph 1, after the word "Governments": "of States Members of the United Nations or members of the specialized agencies".
- 23. At the 942nd meeting, the Committee voted as follows on the proposals before it:
- (a) The oral sub-amendment by Italy and the United States of America to the Bulgarian amendment was adopted by a roll-call vote of 39 to 17, with 16 abstentions. The voting was as follows:
- In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Italy, Japan, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay.

Against: Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Indonesia, Iraq, Ireland, Jordan, Libya, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Burma, Cambodia, Cuba, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Ghana, Honduras, India, Israel, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Sudan, United Arab Republic, Yemen.

- (b) The Bulgarian amendment, as amended, was adopted by 54 votes to none, with 15 abstentions.
- (c) The twelve-Power draft resolution, as amended, was adopted by 69 votes to none, with 1 abstention (see paragraph 82, draft resolution I, below).

WORLD SOCIAL SITUATION

- 24. The representative of the Secretary-General referred to the work of the Population Commission and the Social Commission during the period under review, and drew attention to the second International Survey of Programmes of Social Development (E/ CN.5/332)2/covering the period 1953-1957. He pointed out that the Survey indicated that, in general, consolidation rather than expansion of established social programmes had been the salient characteristic of the last five-year period, and stressed the need for coordinated action in the social and economic fields. One of the immediate results of the rapid increases in population and the accelerated rate of urbanization had generally been the failure to make adequate progress in housing construction. There had been a deterioration in general housing conditions, which was related to the difficulties encountered in financing low-cost housing programmes. It was excepted that the longrange programme of concerted international action in the field of housing would mobilize the available resources of the international organizations to provide greater assistance to Governments than had been possible in the past.
- 25. Migration to urban centres was continuing, with the result that population growth in the cities exceeded their absorptive capacity. This called for balanced development of rural and urban programmes. Programmes of community development in rural areas had been carried out successfully in under-developed countries, particularly in Asia, and it was hoped to expand similar activities in other regions of the world. Lack of finances and trained personnel had been the major obstacles in most countries to the progress of community development and the undertaking of new programmes to cope with rapid urbanization. Close attention had been given to the problem of training personnel for a wide range of social programmes, especially under the advisory social welfare services programme. The Secretary-General had submitted to the General Assembly his recommendations for additional resources to support technical assistance in the social field. The requested increase was important, especially for the development of United Nations long-range programmes in Africa.

- 26. Some delegations noted the progress made in such social fields as public health, nutrition and education. Despite the results achieved, however, it was felt that such problems could neither be studied nor solved in isolation from general economic development. It was pointed out that economic development would be meaningless unless accompanied by social progress and a rise in the levels of living. The distribution of financial and technological resources was further widening the gap between the industrially developed and the economically underdeveloped countries.
- 27. Other delegations felt that a solution of social problems should be sought within the framework of general economic development in all countries, and they called for an agreed reduction of military budgets to enable more funds to be earmarked for social projects.
- 28. The point was made that if rationalization of population distribution and adequate absorption of demographic growth were to be achieved, the people, especially in rural areas, would have to be provided with such social welfare measures as modernization of land systems, housing, co-operatives, and medical and educational facilities. It was stressed that that would constitute the basis for higher productivity of labour.
- 29. Several delegations endorsed the recommendation of the Population Commission to the effect that each Government had the responsibility of studying the relationship between population growth and social and economic progress.
- 30. A number of delegations drew attention to migration problems and stressed, in particular, increased migration from rural to urban areas. In this connexion, they urged concerted action on the national and the international level to relieve the world-wide housing shortage. It was felt that highest priority should be given to the supply of low-cost housing to meet the needs of low-income families.
- 31. The value of community development methods and programmes was emphasized by several speakers. It was felt, however, that the slowing-down of the rate of expansion of social programmes was due to a shortage of the funds available at both the national and the international level, and it was regretted that the shortage of funds prevented the United Nations from meeting urgent requests for assistance, particularly from African countries.
- 32. Some delegations were of the view that the success of programmes in the social field depended in the final analysis on the availability of properly trained personnel, and attached special importance to the need for greater progress in the field of education. The training of qualified personnel in the various social fields, it was felt, should be given priority at both the national and international levels. Reference was made to the important part played by voluntary organizations in rural development and social services.
- 33. Stress was laid on the importance of the proposal for the organization of an International Health and Medical Research Year. Hope was expressed that at its next session the World Health Assembly would take action in favour of organizing such a Year.

INTERRELATIONSHIP OF THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL FACTORS OF DEVELOPMENT

34. Afghanistan, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Greece, Indonesia, Italy, Lebanon, the United Arab Republic and the United States of America submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.765/Rev.1) on balanced economic and social development. The text read as follow:

"The General Assembly,

- "Recognizing that economic and social development are interrelated and that social factors act as an objective and as a means of furthering economic development,
- "Recalling its resolution 1161 (XII) of 26 November 1957 in which it noted that knowledge was lacking on how to combine the elements of economic and social progress in such a way as to promote optimum development,
- "1. Notes with approval the decision of the Economic and Social Council in its resolutions 723 B (XXVIII), section II, and 723 C (XXVIII), section II, of 17 July 1959, to amend the terms of reference of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East and of the Economic Commission for Latin America to include the social aspects of economic development and the interrelationship of the economic and social factors;
- "2. Looks forward to the report of the Secretary-General on a study of a balanced economic and social development due to be presented in 1961, in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolution 663 E (XXIV) of 31 July 1959;
- "3. Recommends that the Economic and Social Council continue to give further attention to this interrelationship and to consider ways in which its work in the social field can be strengthened, including the advisability of the Social Commission meeting annually."
- 35. The sponsors stressed the interdependence of economic development and social development and social development and were concerned over the limited resources available for the work of the United Nations in the social field. It was felt that anual meetings of the Social Commission were desirable in view, inter alia, of the rapid change of social conditions in the under-developed countries.
- 36. Following oral suggestions by the representative of the United Kingdom, the sponsors agreed on the following revised text for the first preambular paragraph of the joint draft resolution (A/C.3/L.765/Rev.1):
 - "Recognizing that economic development and social development are interrelated and that social progress is an end in itself and a means of furthering economic development."

A revised text of the eleven-Power draft resolution (A/C.3/L.765/Rev.2) incorporating this revised paragraph was submitted to the Committee.

- 37. The Committee voted as follows on the eleven-Power revised draft resolution:
 - (a) First paragraph of the preamble:
- (i) The words "recognizing that economic development and social development are interrelated" were unanimously adopted.
- (ii) The remainder of the paragraph was adopted by 49 votes to 4, with 16 abstentions.
- (b) The remainder of the revised draft resolution was adopted unanimously.
- (\underline{c}) The revised draft resolution, as a whole, was adopted by 68 votes to none, with 2 abstentions (see paragraph 82, draft resolution II, below).

LOW-COST HOUSING

- 38. Peru submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.764), the operative part of which read as follows:
 - "1. Recommends that the specialized agencies of the United Nations should give favourable consideration to the requests of Governments for technical assistance in this field;
 - "2. Recommends that Member States should, in co-operation with all institutions which are in position to influence public opinion, information media and educational institutions, intensify their promotion of housing and related facilities through the organization of 'Housing Weeks', exhibitions, conferences, congresses and similar activities;
 - "3. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with interested Governments, to consider the desirability of collecting and disseminating information concerning the needs of countries in the process of development with respect to essential building materials for low-cost housing and community improvement programmes, concerning the availability of such materials and equipment in certain countries in excess of their own needs, and also concerning more advanced techniques and other technical methods in this field;
 - "4. Invites the Secretary-General to submit a report on the results of his inquiry at an appropriate time, and the Economic and Social Council to transmit this report, with its comments thereon, to the General Assembly."
- 39. Several delegations agreed with the principles and ideas of the Peruvian draft resolution but felt that its wording could be improved.
- 40. To this effect, the United Kingdom submitted an amendment (A/C.3/L.773) to the Peruvian draft resolution which, in its revised form (A/C.3/L.773/Rev.l), provided for the replacement of operative paragraph 3 by the following text:
 - "Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with interested Governments and the specialized agencies concerned, to collect and disseminate information concerning the technical and material needs of countries in the process of development in the field of housing, and concerning the relevant experience gained by countries which might be able to assist them."
- 41. The representative of Peru, in revising his draft resolution, took the amendment into consideration and

- also accepted a suggestion by the representative of Argentina that the word "Endorsing" at the beginning of the first preambular paragraph should be replaced by the word "Considering". The representative of Peru subsequently submitted revised texts of his draft resolution (A/C.3/L.764/Rev.1 and A/C.3/L.764/Rev.2). He accepted the suggestion of the representative of Mexico that in operative paragraph 2 of the revised draft resolution (A/C.3/L.764/Rev.2) the phrase "as part of their national plans" should be inserted after the words "Member States" (see paragraph 42 below).
- 42. Peru introduced a further revision of its draft resolution (A/C.3/L.764/Rev.3 and Corr.1), which read as follow:

"The General Assembly,

- "Considering that Economic and Social Council resolution 731 B (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959 approves the long-range programme of concerted international action in the field of low-cost housing and related community facilities,
- "Recognizing that the continuous efforts of Governments and private organizations, as well as coordinated action on the part of international bodies, are necessary in order to deal with the problem of housing and the rapid rate of urban expansion.
- "1. Recommends that the appropriate organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies should give due consideration to the requests of Governments for technical assistance in this field;
- "2. Recommends that Member States should, as part of their national plans, institute or accelerate programmes to promote the construction of low-cost housing and stimulate active participation by the people in these programmes through self-help, mutual aid, co-operation and other similar measures;
- "3. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with interested Governments and the specialized agencies concerned, to collect and disseminate information concerning the technical and material needs of countries in the field of housing, and concerning the relevant experience gained by other countries which might be able to assist them;
- "4. Invites the Secretary-General to submit a report on the results of his inquiry at an appropriate time, and the Economic and Social Council to transmit this report with its comments thereon, to the General Assembly."
- 43. Saudi Arabia submitted amendments (A/C.3/L.776) to the revised draft resolution, the effect of which would be to revise operative paragraph 3 to read:
 - "Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with interested Governments and the specialized agencies concerned, to collect and disseminate information in the field of housing concerning the technical and material needs of all countries with housing problems and concerning the relevant experience gained by others which might be able to assist them."
- 44. The Committee voted as follows on the Peruvian draft resolution and the Saudi Arabian amendment:

- (a) The text of operative paragraph 3 proposed by Saudi Arabia (A/C.3/L.776) was adopted by 38 votes to 20, with 11 abstentions.
- (b) The revised draft resolution of Peru (A/C.3/L.764/Rev.3), as amended, was adopted by 72 votes to none, with 1 abstention (see paragraph 82, draft resolution III, below).

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

45. Argentina, France, Greece, Italy and the United Kingdom submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.768/Rev.1) which read as follows:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below, resolution 1394 (XIV).]

- 46. The sponsors stressed the advisability and usefulness of a study of the question at the international level and noted the increasing concern which the phenomenon of juvenile delinquency was causing in many countries. It was felt that the study would also be very timely in view of the fact that the second United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders was to be held in London in August 1960.
- 47. A number of speakers supported the five-Power draft resolution. It was suggested, however, that the Secretary-General's attention should be called to the economic and social factors involved in juvenile delinquency. On the other hand, the view was expressed that the campaign against juvenile delinquency fell within the domestic jurisdiction of Member States and that an international organization was not competent to study a problem the causes of which varied considerably from one country to another.
- 48. At the 941st meeting, the five-Power draft resolution (A/C.3/L.768/Rev.1) was adopted by 57 votes to none, with 9 abstentions (see paragraph 82, draft resolution IV, below).

INTERNATIONAL CONTROL OF NARCOTIC DRUGS

- 49. Some delegations noted with satisfaction the progress achieved in the implementation of treaties. A number of delegations welcomed the Council's recommendation that a continuing programme of technical assistance in the field of international control of narcotics should be established within the regular budget of the United Nations. Several delegations also expected positive results from the plenipotentiary conference to be held in 1961 to take final action on the proposed single convention on narcotic drugs. It was pointed out, on the other hand, that, in spite of national and international efforts, the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs was still heavy, and that drug addiction continued to be a serious problem in many parts of the world.
- 50. The representatives of some Governments, in particular those of Afghanistan, Cambodia and Turkey, reported on measures taken to combat the illicit production of narcotic drugs.
- 51. The Committee had before it Economic and Social Council resolution 730 I (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959, in which the Council recommended a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly. The operative part of the draft resolution read as follows:

- "1. Decides to establish a continuing programme of technical assistance in narcotics control within the regular budget of the United Nations;
- "2. Requests the Secretary-General to provide technical assistance in its various forms in the field of narcotics control, subject to the direction of the Economic and Social Council and in accordance with approved policies in so far as they are applicable; and at the request of and in agreement with Governments; and with the co-operation of the specialized agencies, where appropriate, and without duplication of their existing activities;
- "3. Authorizes the Secretary-General to take into account the programme established by the present resolution in preparing the budgetary estimates of the United Nations;
- "4. Invites the specialized agencies concerned, the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, to continue to maintain and develop their technical assistance activities touching the field of narcotics control;
- "5. Expresses the hope that non-governmental organizations, including foundations and universities, will also give assistance in this respect within their fields of interest;
- "6. Requests the Secretary-General to report regularly to the Economic and Social Council and to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on technical assistance in the field of narcotics control, including action taken under this and other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council."
- 52. The representative of the Secretary-General, explaining the background to the Council's resolution, said that in recent years both the national services and the international bodies concerned with narcotics control had increased their activities. In spite of their efforts, the counter-measures against the illicit traffic were barely holding their own. The Commission on Narcotic Drugs had accordingly felt that the customary methods of control ought to be supplemented by technical assistance, and, in 1956, Governments had been invited to apply for technical assistance in narcotics control under the regular technical assistance programmes. It had, however, proved difficult for Governments to fit such requests into their regular programmes, and most requests had had to be met from contingency allocations, which were available only at the beginning of a project and not for continuing use. It had to be recognized that in many cases narcotics control projects benefited other countries more than the country which would have to apply for the technical assistance. The Council had consequently come to the conclusion that new arrangements were necessary. They were intended to supplement the normal procedures and the financial provision for them was accordingly on a modest scale.
- 53. At the 937th meeting, the draft resolution recommended by the Council was approved by 66 votes to none, with 3 abstentions (see paragraph 82, draft resolution V, below).

THE QUESTION OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

54. Austria, Ceylon, Ecuador, Sweden, Uruguay and Venezuela submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.767) which read as follows:

"The General Assembly

"Invites the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to undertake a study of the question of capital punishment, of the laws and practices relating thereto, and of the effect of the abolition of capital punishment on the rate of criminality. The study should begin as soon as the work programme of the Commission permits."

55. Introducing the draft resolution on behalf of the sponsors, the representative of Sweden expressed the view that the question of capital punishment would be a suitable subject for the next study of the Commission on Human Rights as soon as that Commission completed its study on freedom from arbitrary arrest, detention and exile. The contemplated study on capital punishment should be based, inter alia, on the relevant articles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and on article 6 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. In this connexion, reference was made to the important debates in the Third Committee concerning the right to life, and the limitations thereof. Furthermore, it was thought that the time had come to reassess the value of capital punishment as a deterrent. So far, no exhaustive studies of capital punishment have been made at the international level. Such a study would cover philosophical, sociological, anthropological, historical, legal and other aspects of the question.

56. Some speakers felt that the proposed study might tend to involve interference in the domestic affairs of States. Others cited the fact that the United Nations had undertaken a number of studies on criminal law and procedure and on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders. Furthermore, it was felt that such a study would not necessarily lead to the drafting of an international convention on the abolition of capital punishment.

57. Some doubt was expressed as to whether the Commission on Human Rights was the most appropriate organ to deal with the question of capital punishment.

58. Italy submitted amendments (A/C.3/L.775) to the six-Power draft resolution (A/C.3/L.767), calling for the insertion of the following preambular paragraph:

"Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 731 F (XXVIII) of 30 Juyly 1959 on the future of the United Nations social defence programme," and the addition of the following phrase at the end of the operative paragraph "and, as appropriate, be carried out in consultation with the Social Commission." In submitting these amendments the representative of Italy stated that his delegation did not intend to oppose the study of capital punishment in the context of fundamental rights and freedoms. He felt that use should be made of the competence and experience which the Social Commission had acquired in matters of social defence and criminality.

59. The sponsors of the six-Power draft resolution accepted the amendments of Italy (A/C.3/L.775). They stated, however, that as a result of this acceptance, it would be necessary to revise their draft resolution by inserting in the preamble a reference also to Economic and Social Council resolution 624 B (XXII) of 1 August 1956 on reports and studies in the field of human rights.

60. Accordingly, a revised draft resolution (A/C.3/L.767/Rev.1) was submitted by the six Powers and Italy. The operative paragraph of the revised draft resolution read as follows:

"Invites the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to undertake a study of the question of capital punishment, of the laws and practices relating thereto, and of the effects of capital punishment, and the abolition thereof, on the rate of criminality. The study should begin as soon as the work programme of the Commission permits and, as appropriate, be carried out in consultation with the Social Commission."

61. The representative of Sweden stated that she would like to alter further the seven-Power draft resolution (A/C.3/L.767/Rev.1) by the deletion of the preambular paragraph and by the revision of the operative paragraph so that the text would read as follows:

"Invites the Economic and Social Council to initiate a study of the question of capital punishment, of the laws and practices relating thereto, and of the effects of capital punishment, and the abolition thereof, on the rate of criminality."

The other six sponsors of the revised draft resolution (A/C.3/L.767/Rev.1) agreed to the alterations proposed by the representative of Sweden.

62. The revised draft resolution, as amended, was adopted by the Committee by a roll-call vote of 43 to 1, with 30 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Finland, France, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Against: Liberia.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Albania, Belgium, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, Iran, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Spain, Sudan, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Yemen, Yugoslavia

HUMAN RIGHTS

63. Many delegations commented on advisory services in the field of human rights, stressed the value of regional seminars and expressed support for the 1960 seminar programme. In this connexion, it was noted that the main factors which contributed to the success of the programme were the preparatory work of the Secretariat, the choice of well-defined subjects and the ability of the participants. Some members, while giving due importance to the holding of seminars

- at the regional level, thought that interregional and world-wide seminars might profitably discuss topics of universal interest. Some delegations felt that seminars should be followed up by various activities at the national and local levels, particularly by the provision of experts and fellowships.
- 64. Some speakers thought that the periodic reports on human rights laid the groundwork for improvements in positive law. It was pointed out that, while it was useful to define certain rights in declarations, international conventions remained and important means of promoting human rights and their preparation should be undertaken whenever circumstances were not decisively unfavourable.
- 65. Several delegations referred to the work of the United Nations in the field of freedom of information. While some delegations welcomed the decisions of the Commission on Human Rights and the Economic and Social Council to keep all aspects of freedom of information under constant review, others thought that emphasis should be laid on the development of media of information in under-developed countries. Divergent views were also expressed concerning the draft Declaration on Freedom of Information.
- 66. Some delegations expressed the hope that a declaration on the right of asylum would be drawn up after the receipt of Governments' comments on the present draft. Some delegations expressed great interest in the various studies undertaken by the Commission on Human Rights, especially the study on the right of everyone to be free from arbitrary arrest, detention and exile.
- 67. Many delegations commented on the activities of the United Nations related to the status of women. They paid a tribute to the valuable work of the Commission on the Status of Women and noted with satisfaction its results, as well as the improvement of the status of women during the period under review. Several members regretted the fact that the Council had not found it possible to endorse the recommendation of the Commission for an equal age of retirement and equal pension rights for women. Some representatives expressed their concern that WHO had declined to undertake the study of ritual practices, which had been entrusted to it by the Council. It was hoped that WHO would bear in mind the importance of the eradication of those practices. The representative of WHO, in his reply, stated the position of his organization on that question.
- 68. A number of delegations emphasized the value of regional seminars on the status of women and noted their importance in furthering the advancement of women's rights.
- INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND EXCHANGES IN THE FIELDS OF EDUCATION, SCIENCE AND CULTURE
- 69. Czechoslovaquia submitted a draft resolution, the revised text of which (A/C.3/L.766/Rev.1) read as follows:
- [Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below, resolution 1397 (XIV).]
- 70. The sponsor stated that experience had proved the vital importance of international co-operation in

- the fields of education, science and culture in promoting mutual understanding among nations and the development of peaceful and neighbourly relations. Recent developments in international relations made the time propitious for immediate action. Science, education and culture had to be viewed within the framework of economic and social developments, since the material level and the cultural level of development were interrelated and interdependent. She cited the Geophysical Year and the exchange of exhibits between the United States and the Soviet Union as examples of positive action, and believed that international co-operation should include such fields as the peaceful uses of atomic energy and the exploration of outer space.
- 71. The representative of UNESCO informed the Committee that a first draft of the survey of international relations in the fields of education, science and culture would be ready in January 1960 and that an expert committee would meet in Paris in February to draw up draft recommendations which would be submitted, together with the report, to the Executive Board of UNESCO in April 1960. The survey would then be transmitted to the Secretary-General of the United Nations at the beginning of April and the recommendations on 1 May. He also expressed the hope that a large number of States and organizations would co-operate with UNESCO so that the report would be representative of the general practices and tendencies, and illustrative of the problems encountered.
- 72. A number of representatives expressed support for the Czechoslovak draft resolution.
- 73. At the 938th meeting the revised Czechoslovak draft resolution was adopted by 72 votes to none, with 1 abstention (see paragraph 82, draft resolution VII, below).

ORGANIZATION AND OPERATION OF THE COUNCIL

- 74. During the discussion of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143), it was remarked that the Council, which had, in its early years, been mainly concerned with laying the foundations for future operations, had recently begun to place increasing emphasis on the provision of practical assistance to Member States. In this connexion, satisfaction was expressed with the Council's establishment of the Committee on Programme Appraisals, whose report (see Council resolution 743 D (XXVIII)) would serve as a basis for a review by the Council of the sum total of economic and social endeavour. That review should enable the Council to ensure that new projects should be planned on a co-operative basis from the beginning and that the programmes carried out jointly by different bodies formed a coherent whole.
- 75. It was felt that all Member States should, from time to time, have the opportunity to serve on the Council and the hope was also expressed that an increase in its membership would prove feasible. If not, it was suggested that non-members ought to make greater use of their right to send observers to sessions of the Council.
- 76. At the 941st meeting, Mexico submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.769) which read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,

"Mindful of its responsibility for discharging the functions of international co-operation in the economic and social fields entrusted to it under the Charter with a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations,

- "1. Takes note of the observations made by the Secretary-General suggesting that the Economic and Social Council 'consider a development of its procedures... in such a way as to render possible a searching examination and discussion of key issues of decisive general importance at a policy-making level', and 'that short special meetings at the ministerial level, within or under the aegis of the Economic and Social Council, might make an invaluable contribution to the formulation of international economic policies adequate to vital requirements for concerted action';
- "2. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with Member States, to study this question more fully and submit specific proposals to the Economic and Social Council in due course."
- 77. The sponsor stated that his draft resolution was based on suggestions made in the Introduction to the Annual Report of the Secretary-General on the Work of the Organization (A/4132/Add.1) concerning a reorganization of the Council's work in such a way as to make possible the formulation, under optimun conditions, of international economic policies adequate to meet the vital requirements for concerted action.
- 78. He believed that special meetings at the ministerial level would help to increase the effectiveness of the Council's work. That idea had been expressed on several occasions at the twenty-eighth session of the Council, and the Secretary-General had emphasized the importance of a discussion of key issues at a high level at his Press conference on 23 July 1959.
- 79. Several delegations supported the idea contained in the Mexican draft resolution and felt that it should be very carefully considered. They also felt that it was highly advisable for the Council to take steps to improve its methods of work and accelerate the economic and social development of the less favoured countries. The suggestion regarding the organization of meetings at the ministerial level, which was referred to in the draft resolution, was extremely useful and should be very carefully studied. For that reason, they felt that such a proposal should be examined in detail by the Council and that the summary records of the Third Committee's debates on the subject should be communicated to it.
- 80. On this understanding, the representative of Mexico withdrew his draft resolution.
- 81. It was then agreed that the relevant section of the report of the Third Committee and the summary records of the General Assembly debates on this subjects should be transmitted to the Council.

Letter dated 12 November 1959 from the Chairman of the Fifth Committee to the President of the General Assembly

[17 November 1959]

- 1. At its 738th meeting, held on 5 November 1959, the Fifth Committee considered, in first reading, the 1960 estimates for section 19a of the budget—Narcotic Drugs Control Advisory Services. At that time, I informed the Committee of the contents of the attached letter, dated 26 October 1959, from the Chairman of the Third Committee in respect of draft resolution V, adopted by the Third Committee at its 937th meeting (A/4250), on the establishment of a programme of technical assistance in the field of narcotic drugs control.
- 2. In first reading the Fifth Committee decided, unanimously, to include a provision of $50,000 under section 19a for 1960 in respect of the programme dealt with by the draft resolution adopted by the Third Committee, and subject to the approval by the General Assembly of that draft resolution. It was understood that I would notify you of this action so that the General Assembly could be informed of the effect on the budget of its adoption of the draft resolution submitted by the Third Committee.

(Signed) Jiří NOSEK Chairman of the Fifth Committee

- LETTER DATED 26 OCTOBER 1959 FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE THIRD COMMITTEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY
- 1. I have the honour to inform you that at its 937th meeting, held on 26 October 1959, the Third Committee adopted a draft resolution on technical assistance in the field of narcotics control, as recommended by the Economic and Social Council.
- 2. The text of the said resolution, a copy of which I attach herewith, is to be found in document A/C.3/L.771. In that document, I drew the Third Committee's attention to the fact that the adoption of this resolution would involve additional budgetary provisions as from 1960. These requirements were the subjects of a report by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/777 paras. 42-43) and of comments by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (A/4223, para. 18).
- 3. I am forwarding the text of this draft resolution to you, so that the Fifth Committee may, in accordance with rule 154 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, have an opportunity to determine the effects of this proposal on the United Nations budget estimates.

Report of the Economic and Social Council (chapter X)

Report of the Fifth Committee

[2 December 1959]

- 1. At its 756th meeting, held on 2 December 1959, the Fifth Committee considered chapter X of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143) dealing with the financial implications of actions taken by the Council at its twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth sessions.
- 2. The Committee noted that it had, in its consideration of the 1960 estimates, taken action on revised estimates (A/C.5/777) submitted by the Secretary-General as a result of these actions, and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions thereon (A/4223). It had also taken action on revised estimates for section 19 (Public administration), again on the basis of reports of the Secretary-General (A/C.5/799) and the Advisory Committee (A/4281). Accordingly, the Fifth Committee decided, without objection, to recommend to the General Assembly that it take note of chapter X of the report of the Economic and Social Council.

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

3. The Fifth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 841st plenary meeting, held on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted draft resolutions I, II, III, IV, V, VI and VII submitted by the Third Committee (A/4250, para. 82). For the final texts, see resolutions 1391 (XIV), 1392 (XIV), 1393 (XIV), 1394 (XIV), 1395 (XIV), 1396 (XIV) and 1397 (XIV) below.

At its 846th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Fifth Committee (A/4316, para. 3). For the final text, see resolution 1434 (XIV) below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1391 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS CHILDREN'S FUND

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter VI, section III, of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143),

Recognizing the value of the United Nations Children's Fund in focusing international and national attention on the needs of children,

Noting the growing significance of aid given through the Fund in helping countries to initiate permanent health, nutrition and welfare services for their children, and in improving the quality and effectiveness of these services,

Considering that the aid provided through the Fund constitutes a practical way of international co-operation to help countries to carry out the aims proclaimed in the Declaration of the Rights of the Child, 3/

Aware of the importance of the Fund as an essential element in international efforts to help countries, and in particular under-developed ones raise their standards of living and strengthen their capacity for economic and social progress.

Impressed however with the magnitude of the many needs as yet unfulfilled, and the opportunities which exist for the effective use of additional assistance from the Fund,

Concerned that, despite continued and, in some cases, increased support from many Governments, the Fund's income for 1959 will be lower than that of 1953, thus reversing the trend of recent years,

- 1. Expresses the hope that all Governments of States Members of the United Nations and members of the specializaed agencies will contribute to the United Nations Children's Fund as generously as possible;
- 2. Congratulates the Fund on its outstanding achievements.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1392 (XIV). INTERRELATIONSHIP OF THE ECO-NOMIC AND SOCIAL FACTORS OF DEVELOP-MENT

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that economic development and social development are interrelated and that social progress is an end in itself as well as a means of furthering economic development,

Recalling its resolution 1161 (XII) of 26 November 1957, in which it noted that knowledge was lacking on how to combine the elements of economic and social progress in such a way as to promote optimum development,

- 1. Notes with approval the decision of the Economic and Social Council in its resolutions 723 B (XXVIII), section II, and 723 C (XXVIII), section II, of 17 July 1959 to amend the terms of reference of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East and of the Economic Commission for Latin America to include the social aspects of economic development and the interrelationship of the economic and social factors;
- 2. Looks forward to the report of the Secretary-General on a study of a balanced economic and social development due to be presented in 1961, in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolution 663 E (XXIV) of 31 July 1957;
- 3. Recommends that the Economic and Social Council continue to give further attention to this interrelationship and to consider ways in which its work in the social field can be strengthened, including the advisability of the Social Commission meeting annually.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1393 (XIV). LOW-COST HOUSING

The General Assembly,

Considering that the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 731 B (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959 approved the long-range programme of concerted international action in the field of low-cost housing and related community facilities,

Recognizing that the continuous efforts of Governments and private organizations as well as coordinated action on the part of international bodies, are necessary in order to deal with the problem of housing and the rapid rate of urban expansion,

- 1. Recommends that the appropriate organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies should give due consideration to the requests of Governments for technical assistance in this field;
- 2. Recommends that Member States should, as part of their national plans, institute or accelerate programmes to promote the construction of low-cost housing and stimulate active participation by the people in these programmes through self-help, mutual aid, co-operation and other similar measures;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with interested Governments and the specialized agencies concerned, to collect and disseminate information in the field of housing concerning the technical and material needs of all countries with housing problems and concerning the relevant experience gained by others which might be able to assist them;

^{3/} See resolution 1386 (XIV).

4. Invites the Secretary-General to submit a report on the results of his inquiry at an appropriate time, and the Economic and Social Council to transmit this report, with its comments thereon, to the General Assembly.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1394 (XIV). JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

The General Assembly,

Noting that many countries have reported an increasing concern with the phenomenon of juvenile delinquency and related forms of social maladjustment, including antisocial group behaviour,

Considering that such a phenomenon should be carefully studied at the international level, with a view to assessing its gravity and finding remedies therefor,

Recalling the discussions on juvenile delinquency which took place in the General Assembly in connexion with article 10 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and with principle 9 of the Declaration of the Rights of the Child, $\frac{3}{2}$

Recalling also that the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 731 F (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959 expressed the belief that the United Nations should retain leadership and responsibility in the matter of social defence and strengthen technical assistance in this field,

Noting the provision made for studies on this matter in the programme of work of the Social Commission for 1959-1961, including studies for consideration at the second United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, to be held in 1960,

Expresses the hope that the Secretary-General, in carrying out these studies in consultation with Member States and in co-operation with the specialized agencies, non-governmental organizations and experts concerned with the matter, will give this problem the urgent attention which its increasing gravity deserves.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1395 (XIV). TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE IN NARCOTICS CONTROL

The General Assembly,

Considering that, under Chapter IX of the Charter of the United Nations and under the international narcotics treaties, the United Nations exercises responsibilities in the field of narcotcis drugs,

Considering that technical assistance is a means by which countries may be helped to increase the effectiveness of their measures to control the production, distribution and use of narcotic drugs, to reduce and eliminate drug addiction and to combat the illicit traffic,

Recognizing the particular usefulness of technical assistance for those countries with an important problem of drug addiction or illicit traffic, or both,

Taking account of the arrangements previously established by the General Assembly concerning the regular technical assistance programmes and the advisory services of the United Nations, and concerning the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance,

Noting that in many cases narcotics control projects would benefit the international community as much or more than the country receiving technical assistance, and that the effectiveness of the control system embodied in the international narcotics treaties would be increased if technical assistance were available to countries which require it,

Noting that the specialized agencies concerned—the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations—are rendering valuable services to their members in matters within their competence touching questions of narcotics control.

- 1. Decides to establish a continuing programme of technical assistance in narcotics control within the regular budget of the United Nations;
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General to provide technical assistance in its various forms in the field of narcotics control, subject to the direction of the Economic and Social Council and in accordance with approved policies in so far as they are applicable, at the request of and in agreement with Governments, and with the co-operation of the specialized agencies where appropriate and without duplication of their existing activities;
- 3. Authorizes the Secretary-General to take into account the programme established by the present resolution in preparing the budgetary estimates of the United Nations;
- 4. Invites the specialized agencies concerned—the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations—to continue to maintain and develop their technical assistance activities touching the field of narcotics control;
- 5. Expresses the hope that non-governmental organizations, including foundations and universities, will also give assistance in this respect within their fields of interest;
- 6. Requests the Secretary-General to report regularly to the Economic and Social Council and to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on technical assistance in the field of narcotics control, including action taken under the present and other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1936 (XIV). STUDY OF THE QUESTION OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

The General Assembly

Invites the Economic and Social Council to initiate a study of the question of capital punishment, of the laws and practices relating thereto, and of the effects of capital punishment, and the abolition thereof, on the rate of criminality.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1397 (XIV). INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND EX-CHANGES IN THE FIELDS OF EDUCATION, SCIENCE AND CULTURE

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1043 (XI) of 2l February 1957 on international cultural and scientific cooperation and 1164 (XII) of 26 November 1957 on the development of international co-operation in the fields of science, culture and education, as well as Economic and Social Council resolution 695 (XXVI) of 31 July 1958 on a survey of international relations and exchanges in the fields of education, science and culture and General Assembly resolution 1301 (XIII) of 10 December 1958 on measures aimed at the implementation and promotion of peaceful and neighbourly relations among States,

Re-emphasizing the importance of the promotion and furthering of international co-operation in the fields of education, science and culture for the improvement of mutual understanding among nations and the development of peaceful and neighbourly relations,

Noting that the positive results achieved lately in the development of mutual exchanges among States in those fields have created conditions which may contribute towards a relaxation of international tension,

Bearing in mind that the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization has taken steps to prepare a survey of international relations and exchanges in the fields of education, science and culture including any recommendations for separate and joint action to promote further international co-operation in those fields, as requested by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 695 (XXVI).

Expresses the hope that the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization will be able to submit this survey to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session, and that it will provide a basis for further action directed towards the development of international co-operation in these fields.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1434 (XIV). REPORT OF THE ECONOMIC AND SO-CIAL COUNCIL (CHAPTER X)

The General Assembly

Takes note of chapter X of the report of the Economic and Social Council (4/4143).

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

Letter dated 13 July 1959 from the representative of France on the Trusteeship Council addressed to the Secretary-General

[Original text: French] [15 July 1959]

On 14 November 1958 the United Nations General Assembly adopted resolution 1253 (XIII) stating that.

"... on the day which will be agreed upon between the Government of France and the Government of Togoland, and on which the Republic of Togoland becomes independent in 1960, the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the General Assembly on 13 December 1946 shall cease to be in force, in accordance with Article 76 b of the Charter of the United Nations."

I have the honour to inform you, on behalf of my Government, that the French Republic, as administering Power, has accepted the proposal of the Government of the Republic of Togoland that 27 April 1960 should be fixed as the date of Togoland's independence.

In accordance with the aforementioned resolution, the Trusteeship Agreement of 13 December 1946 will therefore cease to be in force as from 27 April 1960.

New York

I have the honour to forward to you the enclosed documents:

- (a) Text of a resolution adopted by the Legislative Assembly of Somalia on 25 August 1959 inviting the Government of Italy, in their capacity as Administering Authority, to submit to the competent organs of the United Nations a request to consider advancing the attainment of independence by the Territory;
- (b) Text of a statement by H.E. Alberto Folchi, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs of Italy, made on 30 August 1959 in relation thereto;
- (c) Text of a letter addressed by H.E. Abdullahi Issa, Prime Minister of Somalia, to H.E. the Administrator, Ambassador Mario Di Stefano, officially requesting that the Italian Government submit to the examination of the competent organs of the United Nations the initiative taken by the Legislative Assembly of Somalia by approving the aforementioned resolution in accordance with the desire of the people of Somalia. The letter also requests that the Italian Government submit to the attention of the General Assembly the wish of the Government of Somalia that, upon the attainment of independence, Somalia be admitted to membership in the United Nations.

The Italian Government, in the exercise of their functions of Administering Authority and in compliance with the wish of the people of Somalia, as expressed through their Legislative Assembly, has instructed me to bring the above information to the attention of the Members of the United Nations.

I should be grateful, therefore, if you would kindly circulate to the Members of the United Nations the present letter as well as the enclosures attached.

Annex I

MOTION APPROVED BY THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF SOMALIA ON 25 AUGUST 1959

The Somali Legislative Assembly,

Recalling the resolution of the General Assembly of the United Nations adopted at its 250th plenary meeting, on 21 November 1949,

Recalling articles 3, 21 and 24 of the Trusteeship Agreement for the Territory of Somalia,

 $\frac{Recalling}{Principles} \ article \ 4 \ of the \ Declaration of the \ Constitutional \\ Principles \ annexed \ to \ the \ Trusteeship \ Agreement,$

Taking note of the Decree of the Administrator of Somalia of $\overline{7}$ May $\overline{195}6$, No. 1, which establishes the Government of Somalia,

Mindful of the repeated official statements of the Italian Government, both before international bodies and before this Assembly, to the effect that they would be ready to give favourable consideration to an eventual request of the Somali people—expressed through its constitutional bodies—aiming at achieving independence in advance of the date set forth in the trusteeship mandate,

Considering that the Administering Authority, thanks to its loyal and effective observance of the commitments taken under the trusteeship mandate, has enabled Somalia to reach the completion of its self-government organization and of its administrative structure well in advance of the time provided for in the Trusteeship Agreement,

Noting with satisfaction the degree of political maturity reached by the Somali people and the development of its free institutions, which have enabled it to achieve tangible progress both in the economic and social fields,

Approves the following motion:

"The Somali Legislative Assembly addresses an urgent request to H.E. the Administrator of Somalia to convey to the Administering Authority the unanimous desire of the Somali people, as expressed formally through their own constitutional bodies, that the Italian Government submit to the competent organs of the United Nations a request to advance the attainment of complete and full independence by Somalia at the earliest possible date, in derogation to article 24 of the Trusteeship Agreement, mentioned above, which provides for the expiration of the trusteeship mandate on 2 December 1960."

STATEMENT TO THE PRESS BY H.E. ALBERTO FOLCHI, UNDER-SECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF ITALY, MADE AT ROME ON 30 AUGUST 1959

In a statement to the Press, which he made on 30 August 1959, the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Folchi, recalled that the motion approved by the Somali Legislative Assembly was clearly in reference to previous statements made by the Italian Government to the effect that Italy, in its capacity as Administering Authority, was willing to consider any request of the Somali Government aiming at an earlier termination of the trust administration provided that the Somali people themselves expressed this wish through their own proper constitutional bodies.

In requesting this earlier termination of the Trusteeship Agreement, Mr. Folchi went on to say, the motion of the Legislative Assembly of Mogadiscio stated that such a development would be made possible by the substantial progress achieved in the political, economic, social and educational fields by Somalia, thanks to Italy's loyal and valid assistance towards the objectives of the Trusteeship System.

Mr. Folchi then stated that he was happy to confirm that the Italian Government was prepared to consider the request for the advancement of the date of Somalia's independence. The terms and the means through which this would be achieved were naturally to be agreed upon with the Somali Government, taking into account Italy's commitments towards the United Nations.

"It will be necessary in particular", the Under-Secretary pointed out, "to complete beforehand the plan for the transfer of powers presented to the Trusteeship Council of the United Nations at its twenty-fourth session; to perfect the political development of the Territory in order to arrive at the day of independence with a constitution drafted and approved; and, finally, to lay the foundations of the future friendly relations between Italy and independent Somalia, subject to the ratification of both Parliaments."

"The Italian Government", the Under-Secretary stressed once again in concluding his statement, "is certainly willing to support the request of the Somali Legislative Assembly and expresses the sincere hope that this purpose may be achieved without undue delay and that the conditions upon which the termination of the Trusteeship Agreement is contingent may be met in full agreement with the United Nations and with the full satisfaction of the Somali people."

Annex III

LETTER DATED 31 OCTOBER 1959 FROM THE PRIME MINISTER OF SOMALIA TO THE ADMINISTRATOR

Mogadiscio

I have the honour to refer Your Excellency to the resolution unanimously adopted by the Legislative Assembly of Somalia on 25 August 1959.

By this resolution the Legislative Assembly urged Your Excellency kindly to convey to the Administering Authority the unanimous wish of the people of Somalia that it submit to the competent organs of the United Nations a request to advance as early as possible the date of independence in derogation to article 24 of the Trusteeship Agreement.

As your Excellency is aware, the resolution of which in due course Your Excellency has informed the Italian Government and the Advisory Council of the United Nations, recalls official statements of the Italian Government mentioning the possibility of advancing the date of attainment of independence if the Somali people so wished.

The resolution furthermore indicates that the request embodied in its operative paragraph is based, inter alia, on the fact that the Administering Authority, thanks to its loyal and active observance of the commitments taken under the Trusteeship Agreement, will make it possible for Somalia to achieve the completion of its political and administrative framework in advance of the date set for the termination of the mandate.

Now, in conformity with the deliberations of the Council of Ministers at the meeting of 26 September 1959-of which I informed Your Excellency by my note of 1 October 1959, No. 301013-I have the honour to ask Your Excellency to be so good as to invite the Italian Government to forward to the General Assembly of the United Nations, now in session, for its consideration, the request concerning the advancement of the date of Somalia's independence. I also have the honour to ask Your Excellency kindly to invite the Italian Government to submit at the same time to the General Assembly of the United Nations a request that it consider the advisability of recommending the immediate admission of Somalia to the United Nations upon the attainment of its independence.

I hardly need to stress that this last request reflects the fervent longings of the Somali people and the solemn engagement taken by the Government of Somalia before this Legislative Assembly.

The Government of Somalia has the honour to reiterate in this connexion its certainty that the Administering Authority will see to it that our wishes are conveyed to the United Nations and that the Advisory Council of the United Nations will, on its part, give them whole-hearted support.

While renewing our expressions of deep gratitude to the Government of Italy, I seize this opportunity to ask Your Excellency to accept the assurances of my highest esteem and consideration.

(Signed) Abdullahi ISSA

INTRODUCTION

- l. Pursuant to the provisions of article 25 of the Trusteeship Agreement for the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration, the Administering Authority submitted on 16 July 1959 to the Trusteeship Council the plan called for in that article "for the orderly transfer of all the functions of government to a duly constituted independent government of the Territory" (T/1477).
- 2. The United Nations Advisory Council presented its observations on the plan orally on 21 July 1959, at the 1021st meeting of the Trusteeship Council, held during the twenty-fourth session. Introducing these observations the Chairman of the Advisory Council noted that certain points of the plan still required further clarification by the Administering Authority.
- 3. Furthermore, the Trusteeship Council approved several recommendations relating to the plan for the transfer of powers and its implementation (A/4100, pp. 66-68).
- 4. In one of those recommendations, the Trusteeship Council took note of the statements of the Administering Authority "that information on the remaining arrangements for the transfer of powers will, after consultation with the Government of Somalia and the United Nations Advisory Council, be transmitted to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session and that the United Nations Advisory Council will submit a special report in this connexion to the forthcoming session of the General Assembly." Under that recommendation the Advisory Council transmits to the General Assembly the present memorandum.
- 5. When the Administrator informed the Advisory Council on 22 August 1959 that he had established the Office for the Transfer of Powers and Related Matters, the Advisory Council welcomed the arrangement which would facilitate consultations. The Advisory Council was at all times ready to render its aid and advice to the Administering Authority.
- 6. During a consultation held on 3 October 1959 the Administrator informed the Advisory Council that the - Somali Government had decided to accept the Trustee-ship Council's recommendation concerning the broadening of the composition of the Political Committee; that it had also accepted the recommendation concerning the popular confirmation of the constitution by means of a referendum. Principles of the referendum were however not elaborated. On the other hand, the Advisory Council was informed that the Somali Government was not yet prepared to accept the recommendation relating to the broadening of the composition of the Constituent Assembly.

- 7. The Advisory Council decided on the same day to communicate to the Administrator and through him, to the Prime Minister, its position with respect to the implementation of the Trusteeship Council's recommendations, 1/
- 8. On 30 October 1959 the Administrator informed the Advisory Council that a draft law entrusting the Legislative Assembly with constituent powers had been tentatively prepared. In accordance with this draft law it will be in fact the responsibility of the Legislative Assembly meeting as a constituent assembly to decide on the desirability of implementing all the Trusteeship Council's recommendations related to constitutional matters and to the election of the future Head of State. The Advisory Council reserved its right to offer its advice when it received the final text of the proposal.
- 9. On 6 November 1959 the Administrator transmitted to the members of the Advisory Council a draft memorandum on the beginning of the implementation of the recommendations adopted by the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-fourth session.
- 10. On 13 November 1959 the Advisory Council received from the Administering Authority copies of a report on the recommendations adopted by the Trusteeship Council on 6 August 1959, during its twenty-fourth session.

REMAINING ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE TRANSFER OF POWERS 2/

A. Legislative measures conferring upon the Legislative Assembly the powers of a Constituent Assembly

Plan for the transfer of powers

11. The plan presented to the Trusteeship Council on 21 July 1959 contained the following statements:

"By means of appropriate legislative measures, provision will be made for conferring upon the Legislative Assembly the powers of a Constituent Assembly for the purpose of drafting the constitution.

"For its part, the Administering Authority states as of now, that it considers the preparation of the constitution to be a matter reserved exclusively for the deliberations and decisions of the Somali Assembly."

Observations of the Advisory Council

12. The Advisory Council interpreted this statement to mean that "the appropriate legislative measures" entrusting the Legislative Assembly with the powers of a Constituent Assembly could not be repealed by the Administrator and that he would not exercise with regard to these legislative measures the reserved powers which he has with regard to normal legislative acts.

Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council

13. At its twenty-fourth session the Trusteeship Council noted the statement of the Administering Authority that the veto powers of the Administrator would not be exercised in respect of the proposals of the Political Committee and the Constituent Assembly for the constitution.

Implementation

- 14. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 the Administering Authority noted that the Somali Government approved in principle on 2 November a draft law which will be laid before the Legislative Assembly as soon as possible and confer upon it the powers of a constituent assembly.
- 15. The main points of this draft law were described as follows:
 - "(a) Full constituent powers are conferred upon the present Legislative Assembly as regards the elaboration and approval of the constitution of Somalia;
 - "(b) The Constituent Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure and regulations in the widest sense;
 - "(c) The Constituent Assembly shall not be subject to rules 5 and 6 of the Ordinance No. 2 of 5 January
- 2/In this memorandum the sub-heading "Plan for the transfer of powers" refers to the plan set out in document T/1477; the sub-heading "Observations of the Advisory Council" to the observations presented to the Trusteeship Council during its twenty-fourth session (1021st meeting); and the sub-heading "Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council" to the recommendations in A/4100, part II, chapter III.

- 1956 concerning the powers of sanction and promulgation normally vested in the Administrator; 3/
- "(d) Once the Constitution is approved, the Constituent Assembly's mandate will terminate;
- "(e) Both during and after its working as the Constituent Assembly the Legislative Assembly shall continue its normal functions according to Law No. 26 of 12 December 1958."
- 16. The Advisory Council has not yet received the draft for its comments.
- B. Broadening of the composition of the Political Committee and the Constituent Assembly

Plan for the transfer of powers

- 17. The plan contained the following statement:
- "Among the powers which may be conferred upon the Constituent Assembly under such legislative measures is that of deciding whether, and in what form, other representatives (administrative, cultural, regional, trade-union, economic, etc.) of the Territory should take part in a consultative capacity in the preparation of the draft constitution."
- 18. The plan then noted various forms of consultation and concluded as follows:
 - "For its part, the Administering Authority states as of now, that it considers the preparation of the constitution to be a matter reserved exclusively for the deliberations and decisions of the Somali Assembly."

Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council

- 19. At its twenty-fourth session the Trusteeship Council noted with concern the reports of disturbances during the pre-election period and of total or partial non-participation of the opposition parties in the 1959 general elections. It considered that political reconciliation was one of the most important tasks facing the authorities in Somalia before independence.
- 20. It expressed the hope that steps would be taken to broaden the composition of the Political Committee and the Constituent Assembly to include representatives of all existing political parties and other important social and cultural organizations of the Territory.

Implementation

21. With regard to the recommendation concerning the broadening of the Constituent Assembly the Administrator informed the Advisory Council on 3 November 1959 that while the Somali Government accepted the recommendation concerning the broadening of the Political Committee and the popular confirmation of the constitution, it did not yet accept the recommendation to broaden the Constituent Assembly but that the attitude of the Somali Government in this matter might not however be considered as final. At the Administrator's suggestion the Advisory Council commented on the issue in a letter addressed to him and dated 5 October 1959, the text of which is given in annex I.

^{3/} It will be noted that the Administrator retains, however, the power to dissolve the Legislative Assembly and thus the Constituent Assembly itself.

- 22. In the report of the Administering Authority received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 it was stated that for various reasons the implementation of the recommendation concerning the broadening of the Constituent Assembly would face difficulties not easy to overcome.
- 23. In the same report it was stated that all these questions should be reserved to the exclusive deliberations of the Constituent Assembly.
- 24. With regard to the recommendation concerning political reconciliation, it was stated in the same report that the present political situation in Somalia was much less tense; a reconciliation between the majority party and the twelve dissident members of the Legislative Assembly who had sent petitioners to the Trusteeship Council's twenty-fourth session was proceeding and on 9 November 1959 the Central Committee of the Somali Youth League had decided in principle to readmit them to the party.
- 25. The report contained no information concerning the three opposition parties.

C. Popular confirmation of the constitution

Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council

26. In a recommendation approved at its twenty-fourth session the Trusteeship Council expressed the hope that the Legislative Assembly and the Government of Somalia would consider providing for popular confirmation of the constitution.

Implementation

27. The Administrator informed the Advisory Council that the Somali Government accepted this recommendation in principle. The guiding principles of the referendum have not yet been formulated.

D. Constitution

Plan for the transfer of powers

28. In section B of the plan, entitled "Constitution", and in annex II to the plan, outlining the draft of the constitution, the preparatory studies for the constitution drafted by the Technical Committee and the principal guiding criteria of the constitution were described.

Observations of the Advisory Council

29. While the Advisory Council endorsed the statement of the Administering Authority that the preparation of the constitution was a matter exclusively reserved for the deliberations and decisions of the Somalis it expressed the hope that the people of Somalia would see to it that their constitution would reflect and endorse fully the principles set out in the Trusteeship Agreement and in the Declaration of Constitutional Principles annexed to it.

Implementation

30. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 the Administering Authority stated that the attention of the Government and the Assembly as well as the people of Somalia has been called repeatedly to the basic principles set forth by the Trusteeship Agreement and the Declaration of Constitutional Principles annexed to it; that in particular the Administrator drew attention to these principles in his opening address to the Legislative Assembly on 31 October 1959; that the Somali

Government has decided to establish a post of Minister without Portfolio in charge of matters related to the constitution; and that a member of the Legislative Assembly with special qualifications and special juridical experience would be appointed to this post.

E. Promulgation of the constitution

Plan for the transfer of powers

31. The plan contains a statement that it will be for the Legislative Assembly "acting as a constituent assembly, to decide whether the constitution of Somalia—which, it is to be hoped, can be approved without delay and which should obviously come into force on the date of the proclamation of independence—should be promulgated by the Head of the Somali State on that same date or in some other fashion."

Implementation

- 32. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 the Administering Authority expressed the hope that the constitution would be elaborated and approved with all possible speed, so that it might be enacted on the day of the proclamation of independence.
- 33. With regard to the promulgation of the constitution the following procedures have been suggested:
 - "(a) If the Constitution is approved and confirmed by a referendum at the date of independence, then it could be put into force on that date on a definitive basis;
 - "(b) If at that date the Constitution had not been completed or the popular confirmation was still lacking, the provisions of the Constitution as already approved by the Constituent Assembly could enter into force on a provisional basis on the date of the proclamation of independence;
 - "(c) In both cases the Constitution will have to be promulgated by the Head of the Somali State, as his first official act upon assuming his functions."
- 34. The Legislative Assembly, not having begun its work as a constituent assembly, has not yet deliberated on these matters.

F. The Head of State

Plan for the transfer of powers

- 35. The plan stated that the Head of State may be elected "subject to the procedures and formalities laid down by the constitution. . .on the basis of a special law to be enacted on the eve of the proclamation of independence or even before then".
- 36. This proposal should be compared with the provisions concerning the approval of the constitution, in which it was stated that the constitution "should obviously come into force on the date of the proclamation of independence" and "should be promulgated by the Head of the Somali State on that same date, or in some other fashion".

Observations of the Advisory Council

37. The Advisory Council noted that a link in the outline of procedure for the election of the Head of State was missing. In order to avoid contradictions it considered it necessary to synchronize the provisions concerning the constitution and devise appropriate ways and means to establish a procedure for the election of the Head of State.

Implementation

38. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 the Administering Authority stated that the Government of Somalia has decided to give first priority to the elaboration of provisions relating to the election and powers of the Head of State.

39. It listed several possibilities:

- (a) Once the constitution is approved by the Constituent Assembly and becomes definitive by means of popular consultation, the Assembly could embody in a special law the provisions of the chapter of the constitution concerning the nomination and the functions of the Head of State. On the basis of such a special law it would be possible to proceed to a final nomination of the Head of State.
- (b) In the case of paragraph $33(\underline{b})$ above, the Assembly could elect a Head of State on a provisional basis. Such a nomination would be based on a special law incorporating in full or in part the provisions contained in the respective chapter of the constitution.
- (c) The possibility cannot be excluded of entrusting the functions of the provisional Head of State to a collegial body on a temporary basis.
- G. Electoral system (electoral law, electoral registers, law on citizenship, census)

Plan for the transfer of powers

40. In the plan the Administering Authority noted that new elections for the Legislative Assembly were held from 4 to 8 March 1955; that the Legislative Assembly is composed of ninety deputies, all of them Somali citizens who were elected by direct vote and universal suffrage, with women entitled both to vote and to stand for election; and that "the term of the Assembly shall be five years (this being, of course, a general principle subject to the condition that the constitution of the new independent State as drawn up and approved by the Legislative Assembly will provide that the normal term of the Assembly is to be five years)".

Observations of the Advisory Council

- 41. In its comments on the plan, the Advisory Council called attention to shortcomings and deficiencies in the present electoral law to some of which the Administrator of the Territory himself deemed it necessary to refer, particularly to the fact that Somaliland has not yet a comprehensive law on citizenship, which deprives some of the Territory's residents of the right to vote. The Advisory Council was of the opinion that a list of voters in the Territory could and should be compiled.
- 42. The Advisory Council expressed the hope that the Legislative Assembly would prepare and approve an electoral law for general elections which would improve the present one and avoid its shortcomings in order that forthcoming elections would be as perfect as possible.

Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council

43. Noting reports of the dissatisfaction of the opposition parties with certain of the provisions of the new electoral law and with election procedures, the Trusteeship Council recommended at its twenty-fourth session that, in order to obviate difficulties in the future, every effort should be made to complete as soon as possible the compilation of complete and accurate electoral registers, to enact legislation defining citizenship, and to improve the present electoral law so as to eliminate its shortcomings.

- 44. The Trusteeship Council took note of the declarations of the Administering Authority and of the Minister of Industry and Commerce of the Government of Somalia to the effect that the census enumeration would be resumed. Considering that the importance of a proper census for all purposes, including those of administration and development, could not be over-emphasized, the Council expressed the hope that every effort would be made to complete this important operation as soon as possible.
- 45. Furthermore, the Trusteeship Council expressed the hope that the Government of Somalia would also consider the holding of general elections to the Legislative Assembly as soon as practicable after independence as a means of furthering political stability in the country.

Implementation

- 46. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 it was stated that "it will be the task of the Constituent Assembly, when considering the Constitution, to decide if and how the general principles regulating elections in Somalia should be modified."
- 47. With regard to the electoral registers, it was stated in the same report that, according to a draft which is in preparation, the Government of Somalia will provide that all citizens who have a right to vote shall be listed in special registers entrusted to district commissioners. No time-limit was fixed for this registration.
- 48. With regard to the law on citizenship the report noted that in the course of the present session the Legislative Assembly will consider a bill to regulate the question of "acquired citizenship", as an addition to Law No. 2 of 1 December 1957 on "original citizenship".
- 49. Furthermore the Government decided to resume census operations for the extra-municipal population under Law No. 6 of 30 September 1956.
- 50. The Advisory Council has not yet received the draft laws concerning the subjects referred to above.

H. Administration

Plan for the transfer of powers

51. Section D of the plan, entitled "Administration," presented an outline of the present organization of the Italian Administration. It also contained a discussion of the question "Dissolution of the Italian Administration," in which it dealt with the dissolution of the Planning Office and with the drafting of administrative and accounting regulations for the independent Somali State.

Observations of the Advisory Council

52. With regard to both subjects dealt with specifically the Advisory Council interpreted the term "the absorption of the Planning Office and of the Office of the Magistrate of Accounts" by the Somali Government as meaning that the Administering Authority intended to "Somalize" these offices.

Implementation

53. The Advisory Council has been informed that the Planning Office and the Office of the Magistrate of Accounts were intended to be Somalized in due time.

I. Somalization of the government service

Plan for the transfer of powers

54. The plan outlined the present position of Somalization, which has achieved good results.

Observations of the Advisory Council

- 55. The Advisory Council expressed the hope that the remaining departments entrusted to Italian heads of departments would be taken over by the Somalis before the attainment of independence, but that Italian experts would be retained wherever it was deemed necessary by the Somali Government.
- 56. In this connexion the Advisory Council hoped that more United Nations experts, as well as experts from other States Members of the United Nations, would be made available to the Somali Government, and that the Administering Authority would take the necessary steps in this matter.

Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council

57. The Trusteeship Council, at its twenty-fourth session, taking note that fourteen of the nineteen departments of the Territory's Government were directed by Somalis and that in the autonomous public organizations the process of appointing Somalis was well advanced, commended the Administering Authority for the continued progress in the Somalization of the administrative services of the Territory. Noting, however, that some important technical departments continued to remain in the hands of Italians and that Somali technical and diplomatic personnel was still insufficient, the Council hoped that the training of Somalis for these services would be further accelerated.

Implementation

58. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959, the Administering Authority stated that only five out of nineteen departments were still under Italian departmental heads. Since those departments were all part of ministries headed by Somali ministers it was no longer a matter of further Somalization but merely of appointments made on the basis of strict professional qualifications by the Government of Somalia in its exclusive competence.

J. Foreign relations

Plan for the transfer of powers

59. The plan outlined the participation of Somalia in foreign affairs and the preparation of some officials of the diplomatic and consular posts.

Observations of the Advisory Council

60. The Advisory Council suggested that this outline might be amplified. The Somali budget for 1960 should contain appropriations for the future Ministry of Foreign Affairs so that personnel, buildings, offices and other equipment would be ready when Somaliand becomes independent; a streamlined plan for the organization and functioning of the Foreign Ministry should be approved well in advance of independence.

Implementation

61. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 it was stated that the 1960 draft law concerning the budget under consideration by the Legislative Assembly contains a reserve fund which will be set aside for expenses of the establishment and operation of the future Ministry of Foreign Affairs; and that a number of diplomatic and consular appointments are being considered to countries with which Somalia entertains traditionally close relations.

K. Judiciary

Plan for the transfer of powers

62. The plan described in a general way the judicial organization of the Territory.

Observations of the Advisory Council

63. The Advisory Council noted that the Somalization of district judges was proceeding but that it would not be possible to have qualified Somali judges appointed as regional judges or judges of the Court of Justice on the date of independence.

Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council

64. The Trusteeship Council noted with concern that in a number of cases district commissioners continued to exercise judicial functions. It urged the Administering Authority and the Somali Government to accelerate the appointment of Somali district judges and to intensify the programme for training suitable Somali candidates to fill higher judicial posts.

Implementation

65. In the report received on 13 November 1959 the Administering Authority stated that special training courses are being held at the Court of Justice for judicial and clerical training; and that it is intended to provide for the staff of the thirty district judges as soon as possible.

L. External security

Plan for the transfer of powers

66. The plan made it clear that the armed forces of the Territory consisted of the police force, which numbered 3,600 Somali men. After independence, this police force would be responsible both for good order and for defence of the Territory.

Observations of the Advisory Council

- 67. The Advisory Council noted that during the period of trusteeship the Administering Authority had the reserved responsibility for foreign affairs and defence. Both of these responsibilities of the Administering Authority will cease on Somalia's achievement of independence, when its Government should be ready to take over.
- 68. Since the plan did not elaborate the question of the Territory's external security resulting from the termination of the Administering Authority's responsibility, the Advisory Council suggested that the Administering Authority, in consultation with the Somali Government and the Advisory Council, should explore ways and means to provide for the particular defence of Somaliland after independence and report thereupon to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session.

Implementation

69. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959 it was stated that further consultations with the Somali Government and the Advisory Council would be necessary.

M. Movable property of the Italian Government and the Somali Government

Plan for the transfer of powers

70. The plan presumed "a partial or total" transfer of equipment and stocks of the Somali Air Transport Service and the Autonomous Police Company.

Observations of the Advisory Council

71. The Advisory Council expressed the hope that the equipment of the Air Service in the Territory would be left to the Somalis.

Implementation

72. The Advisory Council was informed by the representative of the Administering Authority that arrangements with the Somali Government might be made on the achievement of independence.

N. Monetary circulation fund of Somalia (Somalcassa) Plan for the transfer of powers

73. The plan noted the development of Somalcassa, which would assume the functions of a central bank of Somalia. The Administering Authority referred to the stability of the Somali currency and to the guaranteed coverage of the somalo.

Observations of the Advisory Council

74. The Advisory Council suggested that the Administering Authority should amplify its proposals with regard to currency exchange regulations after independence. Considering the present export and import trends between Somalia and Italy, as well as those expected after independence, "lira" credit balances accrued by Somalia in Italy should be made available and convertible to the Somali Government for purchases in other monetary areas.

75. The Advisory Council also suggested that the Administering Authority might clarify its position "vis-a-vis" the profits gained by Somalcassa during the trusteeship period, amounting to approximately 10 million somalos.

Recommendations of the Trusteeship Council

76. The Trusteeship Council noted with satisfaction that steps were now being taken to select qualified Somali candidates for service in the Somalcassa and expressed the hope that sufficient Somali personnel would be trained to assume full control of the operations of the Central Bank of Somalia upon independence.

Implementation

77. The Advisory Council was informed that special training was now provided for selected Somali employees of the Somalcassa. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959, it was stated that a special law will transform the Somalcassa into a central bank of Somalia and that another law will regulate credit operations.

78. These draft laws have not yet been received by the Advisory Council.

O. Somali Social Insurance Scheme (CASS)

Plan for the transfer of powers

79. The plan presumed that the Cassa Assicurazioni Sociali della Somalia (CASS) would be in a position to assume its own management if that should be decided upon by the Somali Government, and would continue to use the buildings, equipment and supplies of the Istituto Nazionale per le Assicurazioni contro gli Infortuni Sul Lavoro (INAIL), which would be transferred to CASS.

Observations of the Advisory Council

80. The Advisory Council suggested that it might be clarified that CASS would obtain adequate support and that conditions enabling it to start its operations on a sound basis would be assured.

Implementation

81. In the report received by the Advisory Council on 13 November 1959, it was stated that all the facilities (buildings and equipment) of INAIL would be transferred to CASS; and that INAIL would provide for adequate technical assistance if requested by the Somali Government.

Annex I

LETTER DATED 5 OCTOBER 1959 FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE ADVISORY COUNCIL TO THE ADMINISTRATOR OF SOMALIA

The Advisory Council was pleased to have a conference with your Excellency on 3 October 1959 during which it was informed about the contents of a letter dated 28 September 1959 addressed to you by the Prime Minister relating to some recommendations of the Trusteeship Council adopted at its recent twenty-fourth session in relation with the plan for the transfer of powers.

Following this conference the Council met on the same day, 3 October, and agreed to communicate to your Excellency and, through you, to the Prime Minister and President of the Legislative Assembly the following.

The Advisory Council was pleased to learn that, wishing to comply with the Trusteeship Council's recommendations, your Excellency will take the necessary measures to broaden the composition of the Political Committee for the drafting of preparatory studies for the Constitution of Somalia and that measures providing for popular confirmation of the Constitution will be adopted. The Advisory Council will of course comment on these measures as soon as they will be communicated to it.

On the other hand the Advisory Council learned that the Somali Government could not yet accept the Trusteeship Council's recommendations concerning the broadening of the composition of the Constituent Assembly. The Council was however pleased to learn from your Excellency that the question was still under consideration and that your Excellency will endeavour still to explain to the Somali Government the importance of considering this recommendation favourable and implementing it.

The Advisory Council sincerely hopes that recommendations approved by the Trusteeship Council would not be rejected as this would place it and all concerned in an embarrassing situation before the United Nations General Assembly in the current session especially at a time when we all desire to work for establishing the best possible atmosphere in the interest of Somalia.

The Advisory Council considers that the implementation of recommendations relating to the plan for transfer of powers is of paramount importance. It deems it appropriate to invite the attention to the factors which led to the formulation and adoption of the said recommendation by the Trusteeship Council.

It may be recalled in this respect that the recommendation to broaden the composition of the Constituent Assembly has been approved unanimously by all members of the Drafting Committee and similarly by all the members of the Trusteeship Council including Italy, and with His Excellency Minister Hagi Farah Ali Omar and other Somali members present.

On 30 July 1959, Minister Hagi Farah Ali Omar made a declaration before the Trusteeship Council in which he took note of the comments of the members of the Trusteeship Council concerning the broadening of the composition of the Constituent Assembly and stated: "The duration of the present legislature, the development of electoral systems, the broadening of representation within the Political Committee for the study of the Constitution and within the Constituent Assembly, are all immediate problems. We shall approach them and solve them, taking into account, as heretofore, the suggestions of the Trusteeship Council. I propose to comment and elaborate on these suggestions to my Government colleagues in Somalia in order to convey adequately the sentiments of friendship and solidarity which have inspired them." Your Excellency will note that this declaration has been made on 30 July 1959 whereas the recommendation itself has been approved by the Trusteeship Council on 6 August. It is therefore evident that the representative of the Somali Government was well acquainted with and accepted the recommendation in this matter. In the same declaration of 30 July, Minister Hagi Farah Ali Omar deemed it useful to stress that the special representative of the Administering Authority, Dr. Luigi Gasbarri, "has not only represented here the Administering Power, but also the Government of Somalia, which formally entrusted him with this task in respect of the conspicuous functions and responsibilities exercised by the Somali Government in the internal administration of the Territory".

It may also be recalled that in another recommendation the Trusteeship Council noted "with concern the reports of total and partial non-participation of the opposition parties in the 1959 general elections" and considered "that political reconciliation is one of the most important tasks facing the authorities in Somalia before independence". In this connexion, the Trusteeship Council "heard with satisfaction the joint declaration made before it by the various political parties, which, in its view, gives promise of the realization of a harmonious political atmosphere in the Territory". Thanking the Trusteeship Council "in the name of all the petitioners" Minister Hagi Farah Ali Omar stressed "tolerance and mutual understanding" deriving from the common statement of the petitioners as "self-evident".

It was with a view to avoid possible complications, to further political stability in the Territory, and to strengthen its Government that the recommendation was fully backed by the Advisory Council and unanimously approved by the Trusteeship Council. The Trusteeship Council's report is now under consideration of the General Assembly which, we hope, will accept the recommendations, if complied with, as final.

This recommendation has been approved with a view to strengthen Somali unity and its Government. The United Nations General Assembly, we believe, would be placed in a most difficult position if "the sentiments of friendship and solidarity which have inspired" the recommendation—as Mr. Hagi Farah Ali Omar so eloquently stated—should not be met in the same spirit.

The Advisory Council does not recall an instance when the Government of a Trust Territory did not comply with a Trusteeship Council's recommendation approved with the concurrent vote of the Administering Authority itself, in the very presence of the Trust Territory's representatives.

It may be pertinent that your Excellency call the attention to the fact that Law No. 26 of 12 December 1958 on political elections (which is itself subject of Trusteeship Council recommendation No. 11) did not contain any mention to the acting of the present Legislative Assembly as a Constituent Assembly, a factor which makes it still more desirable to implement the Trusteeship Council recommendation.

It is the sincere desire of the Advisory Council to assist Somalia and the Somalis to achieve independence as soon as possible under conditions guaranteeing its stability, unity and harmony. It believes that your Excellency as the Head of the Italian Trusteeship Administration will spare no effort to achieve this. It believes that the leaders of the present Government of Somalia feel a sacred trust of their historic mission to provide their country with a Constitution which would reflect the wishes and aspirations of all their people so that it could proudly embody a preamble similar to that of the United Nations, "We the peoples of the United Nations"—"We the people of Somalia".

The Advisory Council feels sure that this appeal to the statesmanship of all concerned will not be in vain.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

OPINIONS EXPRESSED BY THE SOMALI LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY AND POLITICAL PARTIES ON THE PLAN FOR THE TRANSFER OF POWERS

During the first session of the Somali Legislative Assembly its members did not express particular opinions on the arrangements relating to the plan for the transfer of powers with the exception of a motion requesting the attainment of independence of Somalia before the date set in the Trusteeship Agreement and "as soon as possible", approved unanimously on 25 August 1959. The second session was convened on 31 October 1959, when the Administrator recalled in his opening address the arduous constitutional tasks on which the Legislative Assembly was about to embark. He also quoted the Trusteeship Council's recommendations relating to the implementation of the plan but there was no general discussion on the remaining arrangements for the plan. The Legislative Assembly started to discuss various subjects not related to the plan as specific drafts have not yet been presented to it. In particular a draft entrusting it with powers of a constituent assembly has not yet been prepared and consequently the Advisory Council has not been able to comment on it.

On 21 and 22 October and 5 November the Advisory Council heard opinions of different representatives on the arrangements for the transfer of powers and on the recommendations of the Trusteeship Council relating to them.

Representatives of the Central Committee of the Somali Youth League (SYL) thanked the Advisory Council for all it had done and was doing for Somalia and expressed respect for the recommendations of the Trusteeship Council. They regretted that, owing to the absence of the president of the party, they were not in a position to discuss questions of substance, but they hoped that the Council would continue to give their country its support and assistance when the important question of earlier independence and the question of the frontier between the Trust Territory and Ethiopia was examined by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

The representatives of the Great Somalia League (GSL), Somali National Union (SNU) and Independent Constitutional Somali Party (HDMS) expressed concern because the Trusteeship Council's recommendations relating to the broadening of the Constituent Assembly and the electoral system had not yet been implemented. Summing up their opinions, they accepted the recommendations of the Trusteeship Council; if those recommendations were not implemented, they would have to request new elections under United Nations supervision before termination of the period of trusteeship. They assured the Advisory Council of their respect for the recommendations of the United Nations. The recommendation concerning the establishment of a climate of peace and harmony in Somalia had been accepted by them but they regretted that a similar show of good will had not been shown by the Government of the Administering Authority. They also stated that it was the Administering Authority's responsibility as supreme authority until the end of trusteeship to implement the recommendations of the Trusteeship Council. They further requested that the Trusteeship Council's recommendations should be respected. They questioned whether the present Government could be considered as the duly constituted independent Government referred to in article 25 of the Trusteeship Agreement. They reiterated that in case of nonimplementation of the Trusteeship Council's recommendations new elections under United Nations supervision should be held before independence in order that all government functions might be transferred to a government thus duly created.

Study of opportunities for international co-operation on behalf of the former Trust Territories which have become independent

Cuba, Haiti, Iran, Philippines, Tunisia and Venezuela: draft resolution

[Original text: French] [13 November 1959]

The General Assembly,

Noting that three Trust Territories—the Cameroons under French administration, Togoland under French administration and Somaliland under Italian administration—will attain independence during 1960 and that other Trust Territories will also attain independence during the following years,

Considering that the United Nations, under the Trusteeship System and in co-operation with the Administering Authorities, has contributed to ensuring this attainment of independence in the best possible circumstances,

Considering also that these countries, generally speaking, are under-developed and that during the first years of their independence they will have to find speedy solutions to a considerable number of problems, including those in the administrative, economic, social and educational fields,

Considering that it would be necessary and normal for the international community to continue to show special concern for the former Trust Territories and to be prepared to grant every possible assistance if those countries, having become independent and sovereign, should desire such assistance.

Considering that it would be appropriate, before planning an action programme on behalf of countries which were formerly under trusteeship, to survey the various ways and means of providing international assistance, both of those now in existence and of those which might be devised and developed,

- 1. Decides to set up a Committee of five members composed of . . . responsible for studying all opportunities of international co-operation which could be of interest to the former Trust Territories which have become independent, within the spheres and in the framework of existing programmes of international technical assistance and within any other sphere or in any other framework now existing or yet to be created;
- 2. Authorizes the Committee, in its study of this problem, to seek the co-operation of such international organizations, governmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and persons as it may deem advisable to approach;
- 3. Authorizes the Committee to consult with the Governments of countries which were formerly under trusteeship and which have become independent for the purpose of ascertaining their views with respect to these questions;
- 4. Recommends that the Committee should report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session concerning the results of this study and also concerning any conclusions and recommendations which it deems appropriate;
- 5. Recommends that the Secretary-General should make available to the Committee the staff and resources necessary for carrying out the study.

Assistance to Trust Territories about to become independent

United States of America: draft resolution

[Original text: English] [16 November 1959]

The General Assembly,

Welcoming the forthcoming independence of the Trust Territories of the Cameroons under French administration, Togoland under French administration and Somaliland under Italian administration during 1960.

Recalling the basic objectives of the Trusteeship System as set forth in Article 76 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the many problems with which the emerging Trust Territories must inevitably be faced upon their attainment of independence, particularly in the economic and social fields,

Desiring that all possible aid in the field of technical assistance be available from the existing facilities in the United Nations to those emerging Trust Territories which might request it,

Invites the Secretary-General to consider sympathetically and promptly all requests which he might receive to provide Territories emerging from a trust status or newly independent States with such high-level technical experts as they might desire.

Date of independence of the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration Argentina, Canada, Iran, Ireland, Japan and United States of America: draft resolution

[16 November 1959]

The General Assembly,

Recalling the terms of article 24 of the Trusteeship Agreement with respect to the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration (hereinafter referred to as Somalia) which provides that the Agreement shall cease to be in force ten years after the date of the approval of the Trusteeship Agreement by the General Assembly, at the conclusion of which the Territory shall become an independent sovereign State,

Recalling its resolution 442 (V) of 2 December 1950, by which it approved the Trusteeship Agreement,

Having considered the information submitted by the Administering Authority (A/4262) to the effect that the Government of Somalia has conveyed the wish expressed by the Legislative Assembly that the Trusteeship Agreement be terminated as soon as possible, so that the Trust Territory may achieve independence at a date earlier than 2 December 1960, as well as the statement of the representative of the Italian Government that the Administering Authority is prepared to support this wish,

Having heard the statements made by the Chairman of the United Nations Advisory Council for Somalia,

Noting the wish expressed by the Government of Somalia that, on the date of attainment of its independence. Somalia should be admitted to membership of the United Nations,

Noting further, with satisfaction, that the Government of Italy has expressed its readiness to initiate the necessary procedure to this end in the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the statements made by the representative of Italy and the representative of the Government of Somalia that, although it is not possible at this stage to give the precise date for earlier independence, pending approval of the constitution which is at present under consideration by the Somali Government and the Legislative Assembly, it is envisaged that the preparation for, and the attainment of independence will be achieved several months in advance of 2 December 1980;

- 2. Congratulates the Government of Italy as Administering Authority and the Government and the people of Somalia on taking steps in order to attain the basic objectives of the International Trusteeship System several months in advance of 2 December 1960;
- 3. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance and advice provided by the United Nations Advisory Council for Somalia to the Administering Authority;
- 4. Resolves accordingly, in agreement with the Administering Authority, that on a date not later than 2 December 1960, to be agreed upon between the Government of Italy and the Government of Somalia in consultation with the United Nations Advisory Council, on which Somalia shall become independent, the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the General Assembly on 2 December 1950 shall cease to be in force, the objectives of trusteeship having been attained;
- 5. Requests the Government of Italy to notify the Secretary-General of the date referred to in paragraph 4 above on which the Trusteeship Agreement shall cease to be in force;
- 6. Requests the Secretary-General to communicate to all Member States the notification of the Government of Italy referred to in paragraph 5 above;
- 7. Recommends that upon attainment of independence, Somalia be admitted to membership of the United Nations in accordance with Article 4 of the Charter of the United Nations.

Date of independence of the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration

Argentina, Canada, Iran, Ireland, Japan, Nepal, United States of America and Uruguay: revised draft resolution

[21 November 1959]

The General Assembly,

Recalling the terms of article 24 of the Trusteeship Agreement with respect to the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration (hereinafter referred to as Somalia) which provides that the Agreement shall cease to be in force ten years after the date of the approval of the Trusteeship Agreement by the General Assembly, at the conclusion of which the Territory shall become an independent sovereign State,

4/Document A/C.4/L.613/Rev.1/Add.1, dated 23 November 1959, indicated the addition of Uruguay to the list of sponsors of the draft resolution.

Recalling its resolution 442 (V) of 2 December 1950, by which it approved the Trusteeship Agreement,

Having considered the information submitted by the Administering Authority (A/4262) to the effect that the Government of Somalia has conveyed the wish expressed by the Legislative Assembly that the Trusteeship Agreement be terminated as soon as possible, so that the Trust Territory may achieve independence at a date earlier than 2 December 1960, as well as the statement of the representative of the Italian Government that the Administering Authority is prepared to support this wish,

Having heard the statements made by the Chairman of the United Nations Advisory Council for Somalia,

Having heard the views of the petitioners,

Noting the wish expressed by the Government of Somalia that, as soon as possible after the date of attainment of its independence Somalia should be admitted to membership of the United Nations, and noting further that the Government of Italy has expressed its readiness to sponsor the application that will be made by the Government of Somalia to be admitted to membership of the United Nations,

- 1. Takes note of the statements made by the representative of Italy and the representative of the Government of Somalia that, although it is not possible at this stage to give the precise date for earlier independence, pending approval of the consitution which is at present under consideration by the Somali Government and the Legislative Assembly, it is envisaged that the preparation for, and the attainment of, independence will be achieved several months in advance of 2 December 1960;
- 2. Congratulates the Government of Italy as Administering Authority and the Government and the people of Somalia on taking steps in order to attain the basic objectives of the International Trusteeship System several months in advance of 2 December 1960;
- 3. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance and advice provided by the United Nations Advisory Council for Somalia to the Administering Authority and to the Government of Somalia;
- 4. Expresses its confidence that the recommendations and observations of the Trusteeship Council, which have been accepted by the Administering

- Authority and the Government of the Trust Territory, concerning the broadening of the composition of the Political Committee and the Constituent Assembly, a popular ratification of the constitution now under preparation through a referendum, and a modification of the existing electoral law will be implemented before the date on which the Trusteeship Agreement is terminated and that the Administering Authority will furnish a report on the implementation of these recommendations to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-sixth session;
- 5. Resolves accordingly, in agreement with the Administering Authority that on a date not later than 2 December 1960, to be agreed upon between the Government of Italy and the Government of Somalia with the assistance and advice of the United Nations Advisory Council, and to be communicated by the Administering Authority to the Trusteeship Council before the end of its twenty-sixth session, on which Somalia becomes independent, the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the General Assembly on 2 December 1950 shall cease to be in force, the basic objectives of trusteeship having been attained;
- 6. Requests the Government of Italy to notify the Secretary-General of the date referred to in paragraph 5 above on which the Trusteeship Agreement shall cease to be in force;
- 7. Requests the Secretary-General to communicate to all Members States the notification of the Government of Italy referred to in paragraph 6 above;
- 8. Recommends that, upon attainment of independence, Somalia be admitted to membership of the United Nations in accordance with Article 4 of the Charter of the United Nations.

Report of the Fourth Committee

[3 December 1959]

INTRODUCTION

- 1. At its 803rd meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly allocated to the Fourth Committee the following two items on its agenda:
 - "13. Report of the Trusteeship Council."
 - "39. Offers by Members States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Trust Territories: report of the Trusteeship Council."
- 2. The first item consisted of the general report of the Trusteeship Council covering its activities from 2 August 1958 to 6 August 1959 (A/4100). The second item consisted of a special report of the Trusteeship Council on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Trust Territories called for by the General Assembly in its resolution 1277(XIII) of 5 December 1958: it formed section D of chapter VII of part I of the general report of the Trusteeship Council. At its 933rd meeting the Committee decided to consider these two items together. During the course of their consideration, the Committee also had before it a letter dated 5 November 1959 (A/4262) from the Permanent Representative of Italy addressed to the Secretary-General transmitting a request of the Somali Legislative Assembly that the date of the attainment of independence by Somalia should be advanced.
- 3. In connexion with the report of the Trusteeship Council, the Committee received the following thirteen requests for oral hearings, 5/ which were granted without objection at the meeting indicated:
- (a) Request from Mr. Philippe Mbarga Manga on behalf of the Conseil national kamerunais de la Conference des peuples africains (883rd meeting);
- (b) Request from Mr. Isaac Tchoumba Ngouankeu on behalf of the same organization (883rd meeting); behalf of the Association Bamiléké du Kamerun (883rd meeting);

- (j) Request from Mr. Silas Mbong on behalf of Members of Parliament elected on the platform of national reconciliation and independence (917th meeting);
- (k) Request from Mr. Jean-Paul Sende on behalf of former members of the Resistance, "maquisards," refugees, exiles and political prisoners (918th meeting);
- (1) Request from Mr. Hagi Mohamed Hussen, President of the Great Somalia League, Hajji Scikei Abatti, Secretary-General of the Somali National Union and Mr. Scek Mohamed Ahmed, President of the Somali Independent Constitutional Party concerning conditions in Somalia (941st meeting):
- (m) Request from Mr. Michel Rwagasana, General Secretary of the Union national rwandaise concerning conditions in Ruanda-Urundi (961st meeting).

The requests, except where otherwise indicated, concerned conditions in the Cameroons under Frenchad-ministration.

^{5/} The requests were contained in documents A/C.4/409 and Add.1-6 and A/C.4/423, or were read at the meeting in question.

- 4. At the 933rd meeting the report of the Trusteeship Council was introduced by its President, who also made a statement at the 935th meeting in his capacity as Chairman of the Sub-Committee on the Questionnaire. At the 947th and 962nd meetings, statements were made by the Chairman of the United Nations Advisory Council for the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian Administration. 6
- 5. From the 933rd to the 940th meeting and at the 943rd meeting, the Committee heard statements by, and members addressed questions to, the following petitioners in respect of conditions in the Cameroons under French administration:
- Mr. Ndeh Ntumazah (One Kamerun), Mr. Isaac Tcnoumba Ngouankeu (Conseil national kamerunais de la Conférence des peuples africains), Mr. Blaise Manga-Bilé (Groupe parlementaire des Démocrates camerounais), Mr. Ernest Ouandié (Union des populations du Cameroun), Mr. Théodore Mayi Matip (representing former members of the Resistance, "maquisards," refugees, exiles and political prisoners) and Mr. Nonga Yomb (representing members of Parliament elected on the platform of national reconciliation and independence). The hearing of John Kale in relation to conditions in Ruanda-Urundi took place at the 934th, 938th, 939th and 944th meetings. 11 At its 957th and 964th meetings, the Committee heard the following petitioners from Somalia: Mr. Abubacar Hamoud Socoro (Somali National Union), Mr. Scek Yero Abdio (Somali Independent Constitutional Party) and Mr. Mohamed Hussen Hamud (Great Somalia League). At the 963rd meeting, the Committee heard Mr. Michel Rwagasana (Union nationale rwandaise) in relation to conditions in Ruanda-Urundi.
- 6. Following statements by various representatives of Administering Authorities at the 933rd, 935th and 937th meetings, the general debate took place from the 940th to the 942nd and from the 944th to the 952nd meetings. During the course of and at the conclusion of the general debate, draft resolutions on the following subjects were submitted:
 - I. Report of the Trusteeship Council.
 - II. Dissemination of information on the United Nations and on the International Trusteeship System in Trust Territories.
- III. Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Trust Territories.
- IV. Preparation and training of indigenous civil cadres in the Trust Territories.
- V. Attainment of self-government or independence by Trust Territories.
- VI. Study of opportunities for international co-operation on behalf of the former Trust Territories which have become independent.
- VII. Assistance to Territories emerging from a trust status and newly independent States.
- VIII. Date of the independence of the Trust Territory of Togoland under French administration.

- IX. Assistance to the Trust Territory of Togoland under French administration.
- X. Date of the independence of the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration.
- XI. Plans of political reforms for the Trust Territory of Ruanda-Urundi.
- XII. Future of the Trust Territory of the Cameroons under French administration.

The consideration of those proposals is described separately under the subjects to which they relate.

I. REPORT OF THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

- 7. At the 951st meeting, Ireland submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.604) whereby the General Assembly would: (1) take note of the report of the Trusteeship Council; (2) recommend that the Trusteeship Council, in its future deliberations should take into account the comments and suggestions made during the discussion of its report at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.
- 8. The draft resolution was discussed at the 955th meeting and adopted without objection.
- 9. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution I.
- II. DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION ON THE UNITED NATIONS AND ON THE INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM IN TRUST TERRITORIES
- 10. At the 949th meeting Bulgaria, Burma, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Ghana, Greece Guatemala, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Iran, Morocco, Nepal, the United Arab Republic and Venezuela submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.602) concerning the dissemination of information on the United Nations and on the International Trusteeship System in Trust Territories. The text of the draft resolution was as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolution 1276 (XIII) of 5 December 1958, whereby the Assembly, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to prepare for the twenty-fourth session of the Trusteeship Council a report on the early establishment of United Nations information centres in or near the Trust Territories,

"Noting from the report (T/1467) submitted by the Secretary-General to the Trusteeship Council pursuant to General Assembly resolution 1276 (XIII) that information centres may be established only after the State concerned has requested or agreed to the establishment of these centres and after the Assembly has provided the necessary funds, and that thus far no requests have been received by the Secretary-General from the Administering Authorities for the establishment of information centres in any of the Trust Territories,

"Having perused the further report (T/1463) submitted by the Secretary-General to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-fourth session under Council resolution 36 (III) of 8 July 1948 and observing therefrom that the dissemination of information on the United Nations among the peoples of the Trust Territories is still far from satisfactory,

^{6/} The Advisory Council also submitted a written memorandum (A/C.4/434).

I/ The Committee decided also to take into consideration the written petitions contained in documents T/PET.3/95-97.

"Keeping in view the special status of Trust Territories and their inhabitants and also the General Assembly's own special responsibilities under Chapters XII and XIII of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Reiterating that it is essential, in its view, that the peoples of Trust Territories should receive adequate information concerning the purposes and operation of the United Nations and of the International Trusteeship System,

"Noting the recommendation of the Committee of Experts on United Nation's Public Information that United Nations information centres constitute the most inportant means of disseminating information about the United Nations (A/3928, para. 227 (e)),

- "1. Requests the Secretary-General to initiate discussions with the Administering Authorities concerned with a view to establishing, during 1960, in at least some of the larger Trust Territories such as Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi and New Guinea, United Nations information centres in which the responsible positions would be occupied preferably by indigenous inhabitants of the Trust Territories concerned;
- "2. Also requests the Administering Authorities to extend their co-operation and assistance to the Secretary-General in implementing the recommendations made in paragraph 1 above;
- "3. Further requests the Secretary-General to prepare, for the fifteenth session of the General Assembly, a report on the implementation of the present resolution."
- 11. Subsequently Uruguay joined (A/C.4/L.602/Add. 1) the sponsors of the draft resolution.
- 12. The proposal was discussed and put to the vote at the 953rd meeting with the following results:

The third paragraph of the preamble was adopted by 48 votes to 3, with 18 abstentions.

The words "during 1960" in operative paragraph 1 were adopted by 42 votes to 14, with 13 abstentions.

Operative paragraph 1 was adopted by 49 votes to 1, with 19 abstentions.

The draft resolution as a whole was adopted by a roll-call vote of 59 to none, with 12 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Argentina, Austria, Brazil Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Japan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, France, Italy, Netherlands, New Zealand, Portugal, Spain, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

13. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution II

III. OFFERS BY MEMBER STATES OF STUDY AND TRAINING FACILITIES FOR INHABITANTS OF TRUST TERRITORIES

14. At the 951st meeting, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia and Indonesia submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.605) concerning offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Trust Territories, the text of which read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Bearing in mind that most of the Trust Territories do not have sufficient facilities for higher education which would ensure the education of highly qualified indigenous cadres,

"Considering the urgent need in the Trust Territories for indigenous personnel who could take over the functions held by those non-indigenous persons who up to now have occupied the most important positions in the administration of these Territories,

"Expressing regret at the fact that the greater part of the scholarships offered by Member States remain unutilized,

"Expressing regret also that some Administering Authorities do not provide all students who have been accorded scholarships with facilities to leave the Trust Territories in order to take advantage of such scholarships, as attested by the periodic report of the Secretary-General on the progress of the scholarships programme (T/1462),

"Recalling its resolution 557 (VI) of 18 January 1952, which invited the Member States to make scholarships available to qualified students from the Trust Territories,

- "1. Takes note of part I, chapter VII, section D, of the report of the Trusteeship Council (A/4100), as well as of the periodic report of the Secretary-General on the progress of the scholarship programme;
- "2. Reaffirms its resolution 1277 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 and once again invites the Administering Authorities to take all necessary measures consistent with the interests and needs of the Trust Territories and their people to ensure that scholarships and training facilities offered by Member States may be utilized by inhabitants of these Territories, and to render every assistance to those persons who have applied for or have been granted scholarships or fellowships, particularly with regard to facilitating their travel formalities;
- "3. Requests all Administering Authorities which have not done so to give the fullest publicity in the Trust Territories under their administration to all offers of study and training facilities made by Member States;
- "4. Requests the Secretary-General to give such assistance as is possible, and as may be sought by the Member States concerned and by the applicants;
- "5. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare for the fifteenth session of the General Assembly a report concerning the actual use of scholarships offered by Member States to students from the Trust Territories;

- "6. Requests the Trusteeship Council to resume, at its sessions to be held in 1960, the consideration of this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session;
- "7. Decides to place this question as a separate item on the provisional agenda of its fifteenth session.
- 15. The draft resolution was discussed at the 955th meeting, at which time the sponsors orally revised operative paragraph 5 by inserting the words "and training facilities" after "scholarships". Ethiopia joined (A/C.4/L.605/Add.1) in the sponsorship of the revised draft resolution, which was adopted unanimously.
- 16. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution III.

IV. PREPARATION AND TRAINING OF INDIGENOUS CIVIL CADRES IN THE TRUST TERRITORIES

17. At the 953rd meeting, Burma, Ghana, India, Indonesia and Pakistan submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.609) on the preparation and training of indigenous civil cadres in the Trust Territories, the text of which read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Noting from chapters on individual Trust Territories included in part II of the report of the Trusteeship Council (A/4100) that there are serious shortages of qualified civilian and technical personnel in all these Territories,

"Considering that appropriately trained indigenous civil and technical cadres are essential to the functioning of administration of these Territories when they emerge from trusteeship to independence,

"Considering also that it is equally necessary and desirable that before the accession of Trust Territories to independence, positions of high responsibility should be held by suitably trained indigenous persons so that the transfer of power from the Administering Authorities to the administrations of the Territories upon the termination of trusteeship should take place smoothly without causing administrative dislocation,

"Considering further that while the Administering Authorities are becoming increasingly aware of the vital need of developing civil and technical cadres of indigenous persons and are taking steps to fulfil it, the measures adopted for the training of indigenous personnel in various fields of administration and for transferring positions of high responsibility to them are inadequate and need to be expanded and accelerated,

- "1. Urges the Administering Authorities to take expeditious measures on a planned basis aimed at the rapid development of indigenous civil and technical cadres and for the replacement of expatriate personnel by local officers;
- "2. Draws the attention of the Administering Authorities to the facilities provided by the United Nations under the programmes of technical assistance and public administration for training in administration and related functions and requests them to make fuller use of these facilities;

- "3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the utilization by the Administering Authorities of the facilities for training offered by the United Nations in this field and to submit it to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-sixth session."
- 18. The draft resolution was considered at the 958th meeting and put to the vote with the following results:

The words "are inadequate and" in the fourth preambular paragraph were adopted by a roll-call vote of 28 to 27, with 18 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, Iraq, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Morocco, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Chile, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Peru, Portugal, Sweden Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay.

Abstaining: Argentina, Brazil, Ceylon, China, Colombia, Federation of Malaya, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, Iran Nepal, Pakistan, Paraguay, Spain, Thailand, United Arab Republic, Venezuela, Yemen.

The draft resolution as a whole was adopted by a roll-call vote of 63 to none, with 10 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Argentina, Austria, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Japan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Morocco, Nepal, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, France, Italy, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Union of South Africa.

- 19. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution IV.
- V. ATTAINMENT OF SELF-GOVERNMENT OR IN-DEPENDENCE BY TRUST TERRITORIES
- 20. At the 950th meeting, Burma, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guatemala, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iraq, the United Arab Republic, Venezuela and Yugoslavia submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.603) concerning the attainment of self-government or independence by Trust Territories. According to the draft resolution, the General Assembly would: (1) request the Administering Authorities concerned to propose, after consultation with the representatives of the inhabitants, for the consideration of the General Assembly at its fifteenth session, time-tables and targets for the attainment of independence by the Trust Territories of Tanganyika and Ruanda-Urundi in the near future; (2) invite the Administering Authorities concerned to formulate, in respect of the remaining Trust Territories, early successive intermediate targets and dates in the fields of political, economic, social and educational development so as to create, as soon as possible, favourable conditions for the attainment of self-government or independence: (3) request the Trusteeship Council, in its examination of the annual reports submitted by the Administering Authorities and in formulating the terms of reference of the 1960 visiting mission to Trust Territories in Africa, to keep in view the provisions of the present resolution.

- 21. The draft resolution was discussed at the 954th meeting, at which time Guinea, Morocco and Poland joined the sponsors (A/C.4/L.603/Add.1).
- 22. The draft resolution was then put to the vote, with the following results:

Operative paragraph 1 was adopted by a roll-call vote of 43 to 17, with 14 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, EL Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Paraguay, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Sudan, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

Abstaining: Argentina, Austria, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Honduras, Japan, Panama, Peru, Thailand, Turkey.

The draft resolution as a whole was adopted by a roll-call vote of 48 to 16, with 10 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Argentina, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, Chile, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Japan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Paraguay, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Sudan, Thailand, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

Abstaining: Austria, Brazil, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Honduras, Panama, Peru, Spain, Turkey.

- 23. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution V.
- VI. STUDY OF OPPORTUNITIES FOR INTERNA-TIONAL CO-OPERATION ON BEHALF OF THE FORMER TRUST TERRITORIES WHICH HAVE BECOME INDEPENDENT
- 24. At the 952nd meeting, Cuba, Haiti, Iran, the Philippines, Tunisia and Venezuela submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.606), providing for the establishment of a committee of five members to study all opportunities for international co-operation which could be of interest to the former Trust Territories which had become independent and to report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.
- 25. At the 954th meeting Canada submitted an amendment (A/C.4/L.612) to the six-Power proposal to the effect that the words "through the Economic and Social Council" should be added to paragraph 4 after the word "should".
- 26. Following a discussion at the 955th and 956th meetings, the sponsors submitted a revised text of their proposal (A/C.4/L.606/Rev.1) as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Noting that three Trust Territories—the Cameroons under French administration, Togoland under French administration and Somaliland under Italian administration—will attain independence during 1960 and that other Trust Territories will also attain independence during the following years,

"Considering that the United Nations, under the Trusteeship System and in co-operation with the Administering Authorities, has contributed to ensuring this attainment of independence in the best possible circumstances,

"Considering also that these countries, generally speaking, are under-developed and that during the first years of their independence they will have to find speedy solutions to a considerable number of problems in the administrative, economic, social and educational fields,

"Considering that it would be necessary and normal for the international community to continue to show special concern for the former Trust Territories and to be prepared to grant every possible assistance if those countries, having become independent and sovereign, should desire such assistance,

"Considering that it would be appropriate to survey the various ways and means of providing international assistance.

"1. Decides to set up a Committee of five members composed of ... responsible for studying all opportunities of international co-operation which could be of interest to the former Trust Territories which have become independent within the spheres and in the framework of programmes of international assistance:

- "2. Authorizes the Committee, in its study of this problem, to seek the co-operation of such international organizations, governmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and eminent persons as it may deem advisable to approach;
- "3. Authorizes the Committee to consult with the Governments of countries which were formerly under Trusteeship and which have become independent for the purpose of ascertaining their views with respect to these questions;
- "4. Recommends that the Committee should report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session concerning the results of this study and also concerning any conclusions and recommendations which it deems appropriate;
- "5. Recommends that a copy of this report should also be submitted to the Economic and Social Council, with a request that it communicate its opinion and comments thereon to the fifteenth session of the General Assembly;
- "6. Recommends that the Secretary-General should make available to the Committee the staff and resources necessary for carrying out the study."
- 27. The Canadian amendment (A/C.4/L.612) was thereupon withdrawn.
- 28. At the same meeting Ceylon submitted amendments $(A/C.4/L.616)^{8/}$ to the revised draft resolution, which as orally revised read as follows:
 - "1. In operative paragraph 1, replace the words 'Decides to set up a Committee of five members composed of ... responsible for studying' by the words 'Invites the Economic and Social Council to make a study, under Article 62, paragraph 1, of the Charter, of'.
 - "2. In operative paragraph 2, replace the words 'Authorizes the Committee, in its study of this problem, to seek' by the words 'Recommends that the Council, in its study of this problem, should seek'.
 - "3. In operative paragraph 3, replace the words 'Authorizes the Committee to consult' by the words 'Recommends that the Council should consult'.
 - "4. In operative paragraph 4, replace the word 'Committee' by the word 'Council'.
 - "5. Delete operative paragraphs 5 and 6."
- 29. The draft resolution and the related amendments were put to the vote at the 957th meeting with the following results:

The first amendment of Ceylon was adopted by a roll-call vote of 41 to 9, with 24 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Albania, Australia, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, Chile, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Guinea, Hungary, India, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Libya, Mexico, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Yugoslavia.

Against: Argentina, Brazil, Cuba, France, Haiti, Iran, Tunisia, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Austria, Belgium, Canada, China, Colombia, Costa Rica Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Lebanon, Liberia, Morocco, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Turkey, United Arab Republic, United States of America.

The remaining amendments of Ceylon were adopted without objection.

The words "in the best possible circumstances" in the second paragraph of the preamble of the revised draft resolution were adopted by 42 votes to 3, with 19 abstentions.

The word "special" in the fourth paragraph of the preamble was adopted by 19 votes to 8, with 43 abstentions.

The words "and eminent persons" in operative paragraph 2 were rejected by 19 votes to 15, with 34 abstentions.

The revised draft resolution as a whole as amended was adopted by a roll-call vote of 45 to 3, with 26 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Albania, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Federation of Malaya, France, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Hungary, India, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, Guatemala, Honduras, Iran, Lebanon, Nepal, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Turkey, United States of America, Venezuela.

- 30. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution VI.
- VII. ASSISTANCE TO TERRITORIES EMERGING FROM A TRUST STATUS AND TO NEWLY INDEPENDENT STATES
- 31. At the 953rd meeting the United States of America submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.611), by which the Secretary-General would be invited to consider sympathetically and promptly all requests which he might receive to provide Territories emerging from a trust status or newly independent States with such high-level technical experts as they might desire. In a revised form submitted at the 958th meeting (A/C.4/L.611/Rev.1), the United States draft resolution read as follows:

^{8/} Document A/C.4/L.616 contained six amendments, the first four of which were identical with the amendments quoted in paragraph 28 and the last two of which read as follows:

[&]quot;5. Delete paragraph 5.

[&]quot;6. In operative paragraph 6, replace the word 'Committee' by 'Council'."

"The General Assembly,

"Welcoming the forthcoming independence of the Trust Territories of the Cameroons under French administration, Togoland under French administration and Somaliland under Italian administration during 1960,

"Recalling the basic objectives of the Trusteeship System as set forth in Article 76 of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Recognizing the many problems with which the emerging Trust Territories must inevitably be faced upon their attainment of independence, particularly in the economic and social fields,

"Desiring that all possible aid in the field of technical assistance be available from the existing facilities in the United Nations to those emerging Trust Territories which might request it,

"Invites the Secretary-General to give urgent and sympathetic consideration, without prejudice in any way to present assistance given to other States Members of the United Nations, to all requests which he might receive to provide Territories emerging from a trust status or newly independent St. 'es with:

- "(a) Such high-level technical experts as they might desire;
- "(b) All other forms of technical aid required by the special circumstances under which they have acceded to independence."
- 32. The revised draft resolution was considered at the 961st meeting, at which time the representative of Iran proposed orally that the words "and newly independent States" should be inserted after "emerging Trust Territories" in the third and fourth paragraphs of the preamble. The representative of Ceylon proposed orally that the words "and the specialized agencies" should be inserted after "United Nations" in the fourth paragraph of the preamble and the words "and the executive heads of the specialized agencies concerned after "the Secretary-General" in the operative paragraph. Both proposals were accepted by the sponsor.
- 33. Afghanistan, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia and Pakistan joined in the sponsorship (A/C.4/L.611/Rev.1/Add.1) of the revised draft resolution.
- 34. The revised draft resolution (A/C.4/L.611/Rev.1 and Rev.1/Add.1) as further revised orally was then adopted unanimously.
- 35. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution VII.

VIII. DATE OF THE INDEPENDENCE OF THE TRUST TERRITORY OF TOGOLAND UNDER FRENCH ADMINISTRATION

36. At the 952nd meeting Iran and Mexico submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.607) by which the General Assembly would: (1) note that the Governments of France and of the Republic of Togoland had agreed that the date on which Togoland should become independent was to be 27 April 1960; (2) express its satisfaction with the terms and spirit in which that agreement had been concluded; (3) reiterate its decision that on the date of the independence of Togoland, which had now been established as 27 April 1960, the Trusteeship Agreement for Togoland under French administration approved by the General Assembly on 13 December 1946 would cease to be in force.

- 37. At the 955th meeting Guinea submitted an amendment (A/C.4/L.615) to the draft resolution, providing for the following additional paragraph:
 - "4. Recommends that, upon the attainment of independence on 27 April 1960, Togoland shall be admitted to membership of the United Nations according to Article 4 of the Charter of the United Nations."
- 38. The proposal and the related amendment were discussed at the 953th meeting, at which time the amendment of Guinea and the draft resolution as amended were successively adopted without objection.
- 39. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution VIII.

IX. ASSISTANCE TO THE TRUST TERRITORY OF TOGOLAND UNDER FRENCH ADMINISTRATION

- 40. At the 952nd meeting Colombia, Cuba, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico and the United Arab Republic submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.608), by which the General Assembly would: (1) note with satisfaction the assistance given to this date to Togoland under French administration by agencies of the United Nations; (2) trust that the Administering Authority would continue to transmit without delay requests for assistance that might be made by the Government of Togoland, and that the Secretary-General, the Special Fund, the Technical Assistance Board and the specialized agencies would give urgent and sympathetic consideration to these requests.
- 41. The draft resolution was considered at the 958th meeting and adopted without objection.
- 42. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution IX.

X. DATE OF THE INDEPENDENCE OF THE TRUST TERRITORY OF SOMALILAND UNDER ITALIAN ADMINISTRATION

43. At the 955th meeting, Argentina, Canada, Iran, Ireland. Japan and the United States of America submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.613) on the date of independence of the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration. By that draft resolution, the General Assembly, having noted, inter alia, the wish expressed by the Legislative Assembly of Somalia that the Trusteeship Agreement should be terminated at a date earlier than 2 December 1960, would have resolved in particular, in agreement with the Administering Authority, that on a date not later than 2 December 1960, to be agreed upon between the Government of Italy and the Government of Somalia in consultation with the United Nations Advisory Council, on which Somalia should become independent, the Trusteeship Agreement for the Territory should cease to be in

- 44. The Committee began its consideration of the draft resolution at the 962nd meeting, at which time Nepal submitted an amendment (A/C.4/L.617), providing for the addition, after operative paragraph 2, of the following new paragraph:
 - "3. Expresses its confidence that the recommendations and observations of the Trusteeship Council, which have been accepted by the Administering Authority and the Government of the Trust Territory, concerning the broadening of the composition of the Political Committee and the Constituent Assembly, a popular ratification of the constitution now under preparation through a referendum, and a modification of the existing electoral law, will be implemented before the date on which the Trusteeship Agreement is terminated, and that the Administering Authority will furnish a report on the implementation of these recommendations to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-sixth session."
- 45. At the 964th meeting, when consideration of the draft resolution was resumed, the sponsors submitted a revised text of their draft resolution (A/C.4/L.613/Rev.1) which differed from the preceding text mainly in that the paragraph proposed by Nepal was accepted. It also provided that the date of independence would be communicated to the Trusteeship Council before the end of its twenty-sixth session. Nepal accordingly withdrew its amendment and became a co-sponsor.
- 46. At the same meeting, the United Arab Republic submitted amendments (A/C.4/L.618) to the revised draft resolution, which would, inter alia, set the date for independence as not later than 15 October 1960 and would include the United Nations Advisory Council as one of the parties which would agree upon the exact date.
- 47. At the 965th meeting, the representative of Italy informed the Committee that his Government and the Government of Somalia were in agreement that the date of independence should be 1 July 1960, or, if the constitutional preparations had not been completed by that date, 12 October 1960.
- 48. At the 966th meeting, Tunisia submitted amendments (A/C.4/L.619), revised during the course of the same meeting (A/C.4/L.619/Rev.1), by which the general Assembly would in particular note with satisfaction the statement of the representative of Italy, express the hope that Somalia would attain independence on 1 July 1960 and resolve that the date should not be later than 12 October 1960.
- 49. At the same meeting, Liberia submitted subamendments (A/C.4/L.620) to the revised Tunisian amendments, in accordance with which the General assembly would, inter alia, decide that the Trusteeship Agreement should cease to be in force on 1 July 1960.
- 50. When consideration of the question was resumed at the 972nd meeting, the representative of Italy and the representative of the Government of Somalia informed the Committee that, after further consideration, their Governments were in agreement that the preparations for independence would be completed by 1 July 1960 and that independence would be proclaimed on that date.
- 51. At the same meeting the sponsors of the draft resolution submitted a second revised text (A/C.4/

L.613/Rev.2), the operative part of which read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

n. .

- "1. Takes note of the statements made by the representative of Italy and the representative of the Government of Somalia that the preparations for independence will be completed by 1 July 1960 and that independence will be proclaimed on that date:
- "2. Congratulates the Government of Italy as Administering Authority, and the Government and people of Somalia on taking steps in order to attain the basic objectives of the International Trusteeship System in advance of 2 December 1960;
- "3. Expresses its appreciation for the aid and advice provided by the United Nations Advisory Council for Somalia to the Administering Authority, and also to the Government and the people of Somalia in their progress towards independence;
- "4. Expresses its confidence that the recommendations and observations of the Trusteeship Council, which have been accepted by the Administering Authority and the Government of Somalia, concerning the broadening of the composition of the Political Committee and the Constituent Assembly, a popular confirmation of the constitution now under preparation through a referendum, and a modification of the existing electoral law will be implemented before the date on which the Trusteeship Agreement is terminated and that the Administering Authority will furnish a report on the implementation of these recommendations to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-sixth session;
- "5. Resolves accordingly, in agreement with the Administering Authority, that on 1 July 1960, when Somalia shall become independent, the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the General Assembly on 2 December 1950 shall cease to be in force, the basic objectives of trusteeship having been attained:
- "6. Recommends that, upon the attainment of independence Somalia be admitted to membership of the United Nations in accordance with Article 4 of the Charter of the United Nations."

The various amendments were thereupon withdrawn.

- 52. Ghana, Iraq, Liberia, Pakistan, the Philippines and the United Arab Republic associated themselves (A/C.4/L.613/Rev.2/Add.1) with the sponsors of the draft resolution.
- 53. The revised draft resolution (A/C.4/L.613/Rev.2 and Rev.2/Add.1) was adopted unanimously.
- 54. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution X.
- XI. PLANS OF POLITICAL REFORMS FOR THE TRUST TERRITORY OF RUANDA-URUNDI
- 55. At the 955th meeting, Ghana submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.614) on plans of political reforms for the Trust Territory of Ruanda-Urundi, according to which the General Assembly would draw the attention of the Trusteeship Council to the statement of a petitioner on that Territory and would request the Trusteeship Council to report in detail to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session on the plans of political reforms envisaged for that Territory by the Administering Authority.

56. At the 965th meeting, following the hearing of a second petitioner on the situation in the Territory, Ghana submitted a revised text of its draft resolution (A/C.4/L.614/Rev.1), which read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Having taken note of the statement of the Administering Authority (A/C.4/432) concerning the political reforms envisaged for the Trust Territory of Ruanda-Urundi under Belgian administration,

"Having taken note of the petitions and communications dealing with the recent outbreak of violence in the Territory (T/PET.3/95, 96 and Add.1, 97-99; T/COM.3/L.32),

"Having taken note also of the statement of the Administering Authority on the incidents leading to the outbreak of violence which have resulted in the sending of troops to the Territory,

"Having heard the views of the petitioners,

- "1. Draws the attention of the Trusteeship Council to the statements of the petitioners on the Trust Territory of Ruanda-Urundi;
- "2. Requests the Trusteeship Council to consider in detail the plans of political reforms envisaged for the Territory by the Administering Authority and to include its observations and recommendations on the plans in its report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session, taking into account the provisions of Assembly resolution ... (XIV) on the attainment of self-government or independence by Trust Territories;
- "3. Further requests the Trusteeship Council to dispatch its 1960 visiting mission to Trust Territories in East Africa early in 1960 so as to make it possible for the mission to report to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-sixth session on the conditions and causes of the recent disturbances in the Territory."
- 57. The revised draft resolution was considered at the 966th meeting and adopted unanimously.
- 58. The text of the draft resolution is set forth in paragraph 61 of the present report as draft resolution XI.
- XII. FUTURE OF THE TRUST TERRITORY OF THE CAMEROONS UNDER FRENCH ADMINISTRATION
- 59. At the 953rd meeting Ghana, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco and the United Arab Republic submitted a draft resolution (A/C.4/L.610) on the future of the Trust Territory of the Cameroons under French administration, which read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolution 1349 (XIII) of 13 March 1959,

"Recalling in particular the fourth paragraph of the preamble, in which it noted with satisfaction 'the adoption by the Legislative Assembly of the Cameroons under French administration of the amnesty law of 14 February 1959 and the assurances given by the Prime Minister of the Cameroons that this law is being put into effect on the widest possible basis and with the least possible delay',

"Recalling the fifth paragraph of the preamble, in which it noted the 'statements of the representatives of the Cameroons Government that it welcomes the return of all Cameroonians who in recent years have left the country and invites them to re-enter normal life without fear of reprisal',

"Recalling the sixth paragraph of the preamble, in which it has been assured 'by the representatives of the Administering Authority and the Government of the Cameroons that there exist in the Territory freedom of the Press, of assembly and of political association, and other fundamental freedoms',

"Recalling further paragraph 2 of the operative part in which the Assembly expressed its confidence that 'at the earliest possible date after the attainment of independence on 1 January 1960, elections will be held for the formation of a new assembly which should take decisions regarding the establishment, in their final form, of the institutions of the free and independent Cameroons',

"Having heard the views of the petitioners,

- "1. \underline{Notes} the unfavourable conditions prevailing in the Territory;
- "2. Reaffirms its resolution 1349 (XIII) and requests the Government of the Cameroons to implement the above-mentioned paragraphs;
- "3. Appeals to all concerned to end by their common efforts the unfavourable conditions prevailing in the Territory for the interest of their country;
- "4. Notes the recent statement of the Prime Minister of the Cameroons that the elections shall be held at the beginning of 1960 and that these elections shall be free and democratic;
- "5. Recommends that the fundamental rights laid down in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights shall be respected in order to re-establish full and free democratic political activities in the Territory;
- "6. Recommends that a commission of three members appointed by the President of the General Assembly be immediately dispatched to the Territory to assist the Government and the people of the Cameroons in achieving, between now and the date of independence, the purposes of resolution 1349 (XIII) and the present resolution so that the Territory will accede to independence in an atmosphere of peace and harmony."
- 60. The draft resolution was considered at the 959th and 960th meetings, being put to the vote at the latter meeting with the following results:

The preamble was adopted by 73 votes to none, with 6 abstentions.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 846th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted draft resolutions I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, X and XI submitted by the Fourth Committee (A/4320, para. 61). For the final texts, see resolutions 1409 (XIV), 1410 (XIV), 1411 (XIV), 1412 (XIV), 1413 (XIV), 1414 (XIV), 1415 (XIV), 1416 (XIV), 1417 (XIV), 1418 (XIV) and 1419 (XIV), respectively, below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1409 (XIV). REPORT OF THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Trusteeship Council covering the period from 2 August 1958 to 6 August 1959, (A/4100),

- 1. Takes note of the report of the Trusteeship Council;
- 2. Recommends that the Trusteeship Council, in its future deliberations, should take into account the comments and suggestions made during the discussion of its report at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1410 (XIV). DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION ON THE UNITED NATIONS AND ON THE INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM IN TRUST TERRITORIES

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1276 (XIII) of 5 December 1958, whereby the General Assembly, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to prepare, for the twenty-fourth session of the Trusteeship Council, a report on the early establishment of United Nations information centres in or near the Trust Territories,

Noting from the report (T/1467) submitted by the Secretary-General to the Trusteeship Council pursuant to General Assembly resolution 1276 (XIII) that information centres may be established only after the state concerned has requested or agreed to the establishment of these centres and after the Assembly has provided the necessary funds, and that thus far no requests have been received by the Secretary-General from the Administering Authorities for the establishment of information centres in any of the Trust Territories,

Having perused the report (T/1463) submitted by the Secretary-General to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-fourth session under Council resolution 36 (III) of 8 July 1948 and observing therefrom that the dissemination of information on the United Nations among the peoples of the Trust Territories is still far from satisfactory,

Keeping in view the special status of Trust Territories and their inhabitants and also the General Assembly's own special responsibilities under Chapters XII and XIII of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reiterating that it is essential, in the General Assembly's view, that the peoples of Trust Territories should receive adequate information concerning the purposes and operation of the United Nations and of the International Trusteeship System,

Noting the recommendation of the Committee of Experts on United Nations Public Information that United Nations information centres constitute the most important means of disseminating information about the United Nations (A/3928, para. 227 (e)),

- 1. Requests the Secretary-General to initiate discussions with the Administering Authorities concerned with a view to establishing, during 1960, in at least some of the larger Trust Territories, such as Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi and New Guinea, United Nations information centres in which the responsible positions would be occupied preferably by indigenous inhabitants of the Trust Territories concerned;
- 2. Also requests the Administering Authorities to extend their co-operation and assistance to the Secretary-General in implementing the recommendations made in paragraph 1 above;
- 3. Further requests the Secretary-General to prepare, for the fifteenth session of the General Assembly, a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1411 (XIV). OFFERS BY MEMBER STATES OF STUDY AND TRAINING FACILITIES FOR INHABITANTS OF TRUST TERRITORIES

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that most of the Trust Territories do not have sufficient facilities for higher education which would ensure the education of highly qualified indigenous cadres,

Considering the urgent need in the Trust Territories for indigenous personnel who could take over the functions held by those non-indigenous persons who up to now have occupied the most important positions in the administration of these Territories,

Expressing regret that the greater part of the scholarships offered by Member States remain unutilized,

Expressing regret also that some Administering Authorities do not provide all students who have been accorded scholarships with facilities to leave the trust Territories in order to take advantage of such scholarships, as attested by the periodic report of the Secretary-General on the progress of the scholarship programme (T/1462),

Recalling its resolution 557 (VI) of 18 January 1952, inviting the Member States to make scholarships available to qualified students from the Trust Territories,

- 1. Takes note of part I, chapter VII, section D, of the report of the Trusteeship Council (A/4100), as well as of the periodic report of the Secretary-General on the progress of the scholarship programme;
- 2. Reaffirms its resolution 1277 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 and once again invites the Administering Authorities to take all necessary measures consistent with the interests and needs of the Trust Territories and their peoples to ensure that scholarships and training facilities offered by Member States may be utilized by inhabitants of these Territories, and to render every assistance to those persons who have applied for or have been granted scholarships or fellowships, particularly with regard to facilitating their travel formalities;
- 3. Requests all Administering Authorities which have not done so to give the fullest publicity in the Trust territories under their administration to all offers of study and training facilities made by Member States;
- 4. Requests the Secretary-General to give such assistance as is possible and as may be sought by the Member States concerned and by the applicants;
- 5. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare, for the fifteenth session of the General Assembly, a report concerning the actual use of scholarships and training facilities offered by Member States to students from the Trust Territories;
- 6. Requests the Trusteeship Council to resume, at its sessions to be held in 1960, the consideration of this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session;
- 7. Decides to place this question as a separate item on the provisional agenda of its fifteenth session.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1412 (XIV). PREPARATION AND TRAINING OF INDIGENOUS CIVIL CADRES IN THE TRUST TERRITORIES

The General Assembly,

Noting from chapters on individual Trust Territories in part II of the report of the Trusteeship Council (A/4100) that there are serious shortages of qualified civilian and technical personnel in all these Territories.

Considering that appropriately trained indigenous civil and technical cadres are essential to the functioning of the administration of these Territories when they emerge from trusteeship to independence,

Considering also that it is equally necessary and desirable that, before the accession of Trust Territories to independence, positions of high responsibility should be held by suitably trained indigenous persons so that the transfer of power from the Administering Authorities to the Administrations of the Territories upon the termination of trusteeship should take place smoothly without causing administrative dislocation,

Considering further that, while the Administering Authorities are becoming increasingly aware of the vital need of developing civil and technical cadres of indigenous persons and are taking steps to fulfil it, the measures adopted for the training of indigenous personnel in various fields of administration and for transferring positions of high responsibility to them are inadequate and need to be expanded and accelerated,

- 1. Urges the Administering Authorities to take expeditious measures on a planned basis aimed at the rapid development of indigenous civil and technical cadres and for the replacement of expatriate personnel by local officers;
- 2. Draws the attention of the Administering Authorities to the facilities provided by the United Nations under the programmes of technical assistance and public administration for training in administration and related functions, and requests them to make fuller use of these facilities;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the utilization by the Administering Authorities of the facilities for training offered by the United Nations in this field and to submit it to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-sixth session.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1413 (XIV). ATTAINMENT OF SELF-GOVERNMENT OR INDEPENDENCE BY TRUST TERRITORIES

The General Assembly,

Considering that the basic objective of the International Trusteeship System under the Charter of the United Nations is the progressive development of the inhabitants of Trust Territories towards self-government or independence,

Recalling its resolutions 558 (VI) of 18 January 1952, 1064 (XI) of 26 February 1957, 1207 (XII) of 13 December 1957 and 1274 (XIII) of 5 December 1958,

Noting with satisfaction that the dates for the attainment of independence by Togoland under French administration, the Cameroons under French administration and Somaliland under Italian administration have already been set,

Noting further that the time-table proposed by the Administering Authority provides for the attainment of independence by Western Samoa under New Zealand administration in the course of 1961, and that processes leading to the termination of trusteeship over the Cameroons under United Kingdom administration in 1961 have already been set in motion,

Believing that the formulation of plans and targets in advance can assist in the acceleration of the progress of the inhabitants of Trust Territories towards independence,

Considering therefore that at this stage it is both necessary and desirable to foresee the course of developments leading to the attainment of independence by the Trust Territories of Tanganyika and Ruanda-Urundi in the near future.

Having examined part I, chapter V, of the report of the Trusteeship Council (A/4100),

- 1. Requests the Administering Authorities concerned to propose, after consultation with the representatives of the inhabitants, for the consideration of the General Assembly at its fifteenth session, time-tables and targets for the attainment of independence by the trust Territories of Tanganyika and Ruanda-Urundi in the near future;
- 2. Invites the Administering Authorities concerned to formulate, in respect of the remaining Trust Territories. early successive intermediate targets and dates in the fields of political, economic, social and educational development so as to create, as soon as possible, favourable conditions for the attainment of self-government or independence;
- 3. Requests the Trusteeship Council, in its examination of the annual reports submitted by the Administering Authorities and in formulating the terms of reference of the 1960 visiting mission to Trust Territories in Africa, to keep in view the provisions of the present resolution.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1414 (XIV). STUDY OF OPPORTUNITIES FOR INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION ON BEHALF OF THE FORMER TRUST TERRITORIES WHICH HAVE BECOME INDEPENDENT

The General Assembly,

Noting that three Trust Territories—the Cameroons under French administration, Togoland under French administration and Somaliland under Italian administration—will attain independence during 1960 and that other Trust Territories will also attain independence during the following years,

Considering that the United Nations, under the Trusteeship System and in co-operation with the Administering Authorities, has contributed to ensuring this attainment of independence in the best possible circumstances,

Considering also that these countries, generally speaking, are under-developed, and that during the first years of their independence they will have to find speedy solutions to a considerable number of problems in the administrative, economic, social and educational fields,

Considering that it would be necessary and normal for the international community to continue to show special concern for the former Trust Territories and to be prepared to grant every possible assistance if those countries, having become independent and sovereign, should desire such assistance,

Considering that it would be appropriate to survey the various ways and means of providing international assistance,

1. Invites the Economic and Social Council to make a study, under Article 62, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations of all opportunities for international co-operation which could be of interest to the former Trust Territories which have become independent, within the spheres and in the framework of programmes of international assistance;

- 2. Recommends that the Economic and Social Council, in its study of this problem, should seek the cooperation of such international, governmental and non-governmental organizations as the Council may deem it advisable to approach;
- 3. Recommends that the Economic and Social Council should consult with the Governments of countries which were formerly under trusteeship and which have become independent, for the purpose of ascertaining their views with respect to these questions;
- 4. Recommends that the Economic and Social Council should report to the General Assembly, at its fifteenth session, concerning the results of this study and also concerning any conclusions and recommendations which it deems appropriate.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1415 (XIV). ASSISTANCE TO TERRITORIES EMERG-ING FROM A TRUST STATUS AND TO NEWLY INDEPENDENT STATES

The General Assembly,

Welcoming the forthcoming independence of the Trust Territories of the Cameroons under French administration, Togoland under French administration and Somaliland under Italian administration during 1960,

Recalling the basic objectives of the Trusteeship System as set forth in Article 76 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the many problems with which the emerging Trust Territories and newly independent States must inevitably be faced upon their attainment of independence, particularly in the economic and social fields,

Desiring that all possible aid in the field of technical assistance be available from the existing facilities in the United Nations and the specialized agencies to those emerging Trust Territories and newly independent States which might request it,

Invites the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the specialized agencies concerned to give urgent and sympathetic consideration, without prejudice in any way to present assistance being given to other States Members of the United Nations, to all requests which they might receive to provide Territories emerging from a trust status or newly independent States with:

- (a) Such high-level technical experts as they might desire:
- (b) All other forms of technical aid required by the special circumstances in which they have acceded to independence.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1416 (XIV). DATE OF THE INDEPENDENCE OF THE TRUST TERRITORY OF TOGOLAND UNDER FRENCH ADMINISTRATION

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1253 (XIII) of 14 November 1958, by which it was decided, in agreement with the Administering Authority, that on the day which would be agreed upon between the Government of France and the Government of Togoland and on which the Republic of Togoland is to become independent in 1960, the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the General Assembly on 13 December 1946 shall cease to be in force, in accordance with Article 76 b of the Charter of the United Nations,

Having considered the communication of 13 July 1959 sent to the Secretary-General by the representative of France to the Trusteeship Council (A/4138), Trusteeship Council resolution 1950 (XXIV) of 14 July 1959, and the statements made at the 933rd and 935th meetings of the Fourth Committee on 30 October and 2 November 1959 by the representative of France and by the representative of Togoland, duly accredited as a member of the delegation of France,

- 1. Notes that the Governments of France and of Togoland have agreed that the date on which the Republic of Togoland shall become independent is to be 27 April 1960;
- 2. Expresses its satisfaction with the terms and spirit in which this agreement has been concluded;
- 3. Reiterates its decision that on the date of the independence of Togoland, which has now been established as 27 April 1960, the Trusteeship Agreement for Togoland under French administration, approved by the General Assembly on 13 December 1946, shall cease to be in force;
- 4. Recommends that, upon the attainment of independence on 27 April 1960, Togoland shall be admitted to membership in the United Nations in accordance with Article 4 of the Charter of the United Nations.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1417 (XIV). ASSISTANCE TO THE TRUST TERRITORY OF TOGOLAND UNDER FRENCH ADMINISTRATION

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1254 (XIII) of 14 November 1958 relating to assistance to Togoland under French administration,

Considering that requests for assistance to Trust Territories deserve sympathetic consideration by the United Nations,

Considering further that Togoland under Frenc administration is about to attain the objectives of the International Trusteeship System, and that 27 April 1960 has now been established as the date of the independence of the Republic of Togoland, 10/

¹⁰/See resolution 1416 (XIV).

Having considered part II, chapter VI, of the report of the Trusteeship Council (A/4100) in connexion with the development of Togoland under French administration and the assistance given to it by the Administering Authority and by agencies of the United Nations,

Having heard the statement made at the 935th meeting of the Fourth Committee on 2 November 1959 by the Minister of State of the Republic of Togoland as a member of the delegation of France,

- 1. Notes with satisfaction the assistance given to this date to Togoland under French administration by agencies of the United Nations;
- 2. Trusts that the Administering Authority will continue to transmit without delay requests for assistance that may be made by the Government of Togoland and that the Secretary-General, the Special Fund, the Technical Assistance Board and the specialized agencies will give urgent and sympathetic consideration to these requests.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1418 (XIV). DATE OF THE INDEPENDENCE OF THE TRUST TERRITORY OF SOMALILAND UNDER ITALIAN ADMINISTRATION

The General Assembly,

Recalling the terms of article 24 of the Trusteeship Agreement with respect to the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration (hereinafter referred to as Somalia) which provides that the Agreement shall cease to be in force ten years after the date of the approval of the Trusteeship Agreement by the General Assembly, at the conclusion of which the Territory shall become an independent sovereign State,

Recalling its resolution 442 (V) of 2 December 1950, by which it approved the Trusteeship Agreement,

Having considered the information submitted by the Administering Authority (A/4262) to the effect that the Government of Somalia has conveyed the wish expressed by the Legislative Assembly that the Trusteeship Agreement be terminated as soon as possible so that the Trust Territory may achieve independence at a date earlier than 2 December 1960, as well as the statement of the representative of the Italian Government that the Administering Authority is prepared to support this wish,

Having heard the statements made by the Chairman of the United Nations Advisory Council for Somalia,

Having heard the views of the petitioners,

Noting the wish expressed by the Government of Somalia that, as soon as possible after the date of attainment of its independence, Somalia should be admitted to membership in the United Nations, and noting further that the Government of Italy has expressed its readiness to sponsor the application that will be made by the Government of Somalia to be admitted to membership in the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the statements made by the representative of Italy and the representative of the Government of Somalia that the preparations for independence will be completed by 1 July 1960 and that independence will be proclaimed on that date;

- 2. Congratulates the Government of Italy, as Administering Authority, and the Government and the people of Somalia on taking steps in order to attain the basic objectives of the International Trusteeship System in advance of 2 December 1960;
- 3. Expresses its appreciation for the aid and advice provided by the United Nations Advisory Council for Somalia to the Administering Authority and also to the Government and the people of Somalia in their progress towards independence;
- 4. Expresses its confidence that the recommendations and observations of the Trusteeship Council, which have been accepted by the Administering Authority and by the Government of Somalia, concerning the broadening of the composition of the Political Committee and the Constituent Assembly, a popular confirmation of the constitution nowunder preparation through a referendum, and a modification of the existing electoral law will be implemented before the date on which the Trusteeship Agreement is terminated, and that the Administering Authority will furnish a report on the implementation of these recommendations to the Trusteeship Council at its twenty-sixth session:
- 5. Resolves accordingly, in agreement with the Administering Authority that on 1 July 1960, when Somalia shall become independent, the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the General Assembly on 2 December 1950 shall cease to be in force, the basic objectives of trusteeship having been attained;
- 6. Recommends that, upon the attainment of independence, Somalia shall be admitted to membership in the United Nations in accordance with Article 4 of the Charter of the United Nations.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1419 (XIV). PLANS OF POLITICAL REFORMS FOR THE TRUST TERRITORY OF RUANDA-URUNDI

The General Assembly,

Having taken note of the statement of the Administering Authority, (A/C.4/432) concerning the political reforms envisaged for the Trust Territory of Ruanda-Urundi under Belgian administration,

Having taken note of the petitions and communications dealing with the recent outbreak of violence in the Territory (T/PET.3/95, 96 and Add.1, 97-99; T/COM.3/L.32),

Having taken note also of the statement of the Administering Authority on the incidents leading to the outbreak of violence which have resulted in the sending of troops to the Territory,

Having heard the views of the petitioners,

- 1. Draws the attention of the Trusteeship Council to the statements of the petitioners on the Trust Territory of Ruanda-Urundi;
- 2. Requests the Trusteeship Council to consider in detail the plans of political reforms envisaged for the Territory by the Administering Authority and to include the Council's observations and recommendations on the plans in its report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session, taking into account the provisions of Assembly resolution 1413 (XIV) on the attainment of self-government or independence by Trust Territories;

3. Further requests the Trusteeship Council to dispatch its 1960 visiting mission to Trust Territories in East Africa early in 1960 so as to make it possible for the mission to report to the Council, at its twenty-sixth session, on the conditions and causes of the recent disturbances in the Territory.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics: draft resolution

[Original text: Russian] [8 December 1959]

The General Assembly,

Guided by the provisions of Article 86 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Considering that, with the attainment on 27 April 1960 of independence by the Trust Territory of Togoland under French administration, France will cease to be a Member State administering Trust Territories, and that pursuant to Article 86, paragraph 1 c, of the Charter the composition of the Trusteeship Council should be changed accordingly,

- 1. Decides to elect two members of the Trusteeship Council at the present session, in accordance with Article 86 of the Charter;
- 2. Resolves to resume, on 28 April 1960, its fourteenth session with a view to taking a decision on the change in the composition of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with Article 86, paragraph 1 c, of the Charter, in connexion with the reduction in the number of Members of the United Nations administering Trust Territories.

The General Assembly,

Guided by the provisions of Article 86 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Considering, first, that on 27 April 1960, with the attainment of independence by the Trust Territory of Togoland under French administration, France will cease to be a Member State administering Trust Territories and that, in accordance with Article 86, paragraph 1 c, of the Charter, the composition of the Trusteeship Council should be modified accordingly and, secondly, that on 1 July 1960, with the attainment of independence by the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration, Italy will cease to be a Member State administering Trust Territories and that, in accordance with Article 86, paragraph 1 c, of the Charter, the composition of the Trusteeship Council should be modified accordingly,

Considering that a study should be made of the situation which will result both from the imminent impossibility of observing the principle of parity at the same time as that of the inclusion of the permanent members of the Security Council in the composition of the Trusteeship Council, and from the impending disappearance of the category of elected members who play a very important part in the work of the Trusteeship Council,

1. Decides:

- (a) To elect two members of the Trusteeship Council at the present session, in accordance with Article 86 of the Charter;
- (b) That on the date upon which France ceases to be an administering member of the Trusteeship Coun-

- cil and becomes a member under Article 86, paragraph 1 b, and upon which two of the members elected under sub-paragraph c of the same Article cease to be members of the Trusteeship Council, the Council shall proceed, by drawing lots, to designate two countries, which shall not, however, belong to the same region of the world;
- (c) That on the date upon which Italy ceases to be an administering member and leaves the Trusteeship Council and upon which one of the members elected under Article 86, paragraph 1 c, ceases to be a member of the Trusteeship Council, the Council shall proceed, by drawing lots, to designate one country;
- 2. Decides to include the question of the composition of the Trusteeship Council in the provisional agenda of the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

Tunisia: revised draft resolution

[Original text: French] [12 December 1959]

The General Assembly,

Guided by the provisions of Article 86 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Considering, first, that on 27 April 1960, with the attainment of independence by the Trust Territory of Togoland under French administration, France will cease to be a Member State administering Trust Territories and that, in accordance with Article 86, paragraph 1 c, of the Charter, the composition of the Trusteeship Council will have to be modified in consequence and, secondly, that on 1 July 1960, with the attainment of independence by the Trust Territory of Somaliland under Italian administration, Italy will cease to be a Member State administering Trust Territories and that, in accordance with Article 86, paragraph 1 c, of the Charter, the composition of the Trusteeship Council will have to be modified in consequence.

Considering the desirability of studying the situation which would result both from the fact that it will soon be impossible to observe simultaneously the principles of parity and of the inclusion of the permanent members of the Security Council in the membership of the Trusteeship Council, and from the fact that the category of elected members whose role in the work of the Trusteeship Council had proved important will be eliminated in the very near future,

1. Decides:

- (a) To elect two members of the Trusteeship Council at the present session, in accordance with Article 86 of the Charter;
- (b) That on the date upon which France ceases to be an administering member of the Trusteeship Council and becomes a member under Article 86, paragraph 1 b, two of the members elected under sub-paragraph c of that Article shall cease to be members of the Trusteeship Council;
- (c) That on the date upon which Italy ceases to be an administering member and leaves the Council, one of the members elected under Article 86, paragraph 1 c, shall cease to be a member of the Trusteeship Council;
- 2. Decides that, in the absence of voluntary resignations, the Trusteeship Council shall proceed, by drawing lots, on 27 April 1960 and 1 July 1960 respectively, to designate the elected countries which shall cease to be members of the Trusteeship Council;
- 3. Recommends that consideration should be given to equitable geographical distribution among the remaining elected members, namely, that the two main groups at present represented by the elected members should continue to be so represented;
- 4. Decides to resume consideration of the whole question of the membership of the Trusteeship Council at its next session.

The General Assembly

- 1. Decides, in accordance with rule 7 of the rules of procedure, to convene on 28 April 1960 a special session of the General Assembly for deciding the question of changing the composition of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1 c of Article 86 of the Charter of the United Nations;
- 2. Decides to elect at the fourteenth session two members of the Trustee-ship Council in accordance with paragraph 1 c of Article 86 of the Charter.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 857th plenary meeting, on 13 December 1959, the General Assembly elected two members to the Trusteeship Council to fill the vacancies occurring on the expiration of the terms of office of Haiti and India.

The following States were elected: Bolivia and India.

At the same meeting, the General Assembly also considered in connexion with agenda item 17 the question of the composition of the Trusteeship Council. The draft resolutions submitted by Tunisia (A/L.275/Rev.1) and by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (A/L.274, A/L.277) on this subject were not adopted.

Memorandum by the Secretary-General

[11 August 1959]

I. INTRODUCTORY NOTE

1. The President of the International Court of Justice, by a communication dated 26 October 1958, informed the Secretary-General of the death, on the previous day, of Judge José Gustavo Guerrero. A vacancy in the Court thus arose for the remainder of the term of Judge Guerrero. That term expires on 5 February 1964.

^{*}For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Plenary Meetings, 813th meeting.

- 2. The Security Council, at its 840th meeting on 25 November 1958, adopted a resolution (S/4118) deciding that an election to fill the above vacancy should take place during the fourteenth session of the General Assembly or during a special session before the fourteenth session. This resolution was brought to the attention of the General Assembly in a letter, dated 26 November 1958, from the President of the Security Council addressed to the President of the General Assembly (A/4011).
- 3. By communications dated 14 November 1958, the Secretary-General invited the national groups of the States parties to the Statute of the Court to make nominations for the vacancy. The nominations which he has received have been submitted to the General Assembly and to the Security Council in documents A/4179-S/4204 and Corr.1 which also contain the curricula vitae of the candidates. The list of candidates will further be printed in the Journal of the United Nations on the day of the election and the names of the candidates will also appear on the ballot papers distributed during those elections.
- 4. The object of this memorandum is to set out the present composition of the International Court of Justice, and to describe the procedure in the General Assembly and the Security Council in regard to the election.

II. COMPOSITION OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

III. PROCEDURE IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND IN THE SECURITY COUNCIL

- 6. The election will take place in accordance with the following:
- (a) The Statute of the Court, in particular Articles 2 to $\overline{4}$, 8 to 12 and 14;
- (b) Rules 151 and 152 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;
- (c) Pules 40 and 61 of the provisional rules of procedure of the Security Council.
- 7. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 264 (III) of 8 October 1948, Liechtenstein, San Marino and Switzerland, which are parties to the Statute of the Court but not Members of the United Nations, participate, in the General Assembly, in electing the members of the Court in the same manner as the Members of the United Nations.
- 8. On the day of the election, the General Assembly and the Security Council will proceed, independently of one another, to elect a member of the Court in the place of Judge Guerrero (Article 8 of the Statute).
- 9. According to Article 2 of the Statute, the judges are to be elected, regardless of their nationality, from among persons of high moral character who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law. Article 9 requires electors to bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.
- 10. The candidate who obtains an absolute majority of votes both in the General Assembly and in the Security Council will be considered as elected (Article 10, paragraph 1, of the Statute).
- 11. The consistent practice of the United Nations has been to interpret the words "absolute majority" as meaning a majority of all the qualified electors, whether or not they vote. The qualified electors in the General Assembly are all the Members, together with the three non-member States mentioned in paragraph 7 above which are parties to the Statute of the Court. With the present number of Members of the United Nations and non-members parties to the Statute, forty-two votes constitute an absolute majority in the General Assembly.
- 12. In the Security Council, six votes constitute an absolute majority and no distinction is made between permanent and non-permanent members of the Council (Article 10, paragraph 2, of the Statute).
- 13. The electors in the General Assembly and in the Security Council will indicate the candidate for whom they wish to vote by placing a cross against his name on the ballot paper. Each elector may vote for only one candidate. Under Article 7 of the Statute, only those candidates whose names appear in the list prepared by the Secretary-General are eligible for election, unless the special procedure outlined in Article 12, paragraph 2, is used.
- 14. If in the first ballot in either the General Assembly or the Security Council no candidate receives an absolute majority, a second ballot will be held, and balloting will continue in the same meeting until a candidate has obtained an absolute majority of votes. When this occurs in either organ (and not until that time), the President of that organ will notify the President of the other organ of the name of that candidate. Such notification is not communicated by the President to the members of an organ until that organ has itself given a candidate the required majority of votes.

- 15. If, upon comparison of the names of the candidates so elected, it is found that different persons have received absolute majorities in the General Assembly and in the Security Council, the Assembly and the Council will proceed, again independently of one another, in a second meeting and, if necessary, a third meeting, to elect a candidate by further ballots, the results being again compared after one candidate has received an absolute majority in each organ.
- 16. The above procedure will be continued until the General Assembly and the Security Council have given - an absolute majority of votes to the same candidate. If, however, after the third of these meetings the vacancy remains unfilled, the Assembly and the Council may, at any time, at the request of either body, form a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by each body. This joint conference may, by an absolute majority, agree upon a candidate and submit his name for the approval of the Assembly and of the Council. If unanimously agreed, the joint conference may submit the name of a candidate not included in the list of nominations provided that candidate fulfils the required conditions (Article 12 of the Statute).
- 17. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected will, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seat by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge will have a casting vote (Article 12 of the Statute).

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

On 29 September 1959, the General Assembly, at its 813th plenary meeting, and the Security Council, at its 849th meeting, voting independently, elected Mr. Ricardo J. Alfaro (Panama) as a member of the International Court of Justice to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge José Gustavo Guerrero (El Salvador).

In accordance with Article 15 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice, the term of office of Mr. Ricardo J. Alfaro will expire on 5 February 1964.

Report of the Special Political Committee

[4 November 1959]

- 1. In accordance with resolutions 1299 (XIII) and 1300 (XIII) of 10 December 1958, items 19 (Question of amending the United Nations Charter, in accordance with the procedure laid down in Article 108 of the Charter, to increase the number of non-permanent members of the Security Council and the number of votes required for decisions of the Council), 20 (Question of amending the United Nations Charter, in accordance with the procedure laid down in Article 108 of the Charter, to increase the membership of the Economic and Social Council) and 21 (Question of amending the Statute of the International Court of Justice, in accordance with the procedure laid down in Article 108 of the Charter of the United Nations and Article 69 of the Statute of the Court, with respect to an increase in the number of judges of the International Court of Justice) were included in the provisional agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly. At its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly decided to place those three items on its agenda and to refer them to the Special Political Committee for consideration and report.
- *For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Special Political Committee, 128th to 140th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 843rd meeting.

- 2. At its 127th meeting, on 7 October, the Special Political Committee decided to consider the three items jointly as the first subject on its agenda. It considered them at thirteen meetings (128th to 140th meetings) held between 13 and 30 October 1959.
- 3. A draft resolution submitted by El Salvador (A/SPC/L.32) was circulated on 19 October. The text read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Realizing that many delegations have expressed the opinion that, in view of the considerable increase in the membership of the United Nations in recent years, there should be an increase in the membership of some of the principal organs of the United Nations,

"Recalling its resolution 1300 (XIII) of 10 December 1958, in which it recognized that in view of the increase in the membership of the United Nations since its establishment, an increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council is desirable,

"Noting that an increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council and other principal organs would necessitate the amendment of certain provisions of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Considering that, in order to solve this problem, further efforts must be made with a view to obtaining the agreement of the greatest possible number of Member States, including all the permanent members of the Security Council,

- "1. Decides to postpone until its fifteenth session the consideration of items 19, 20 and 21 of the agenda of the fourteenth session;
- "2. Decides that these items shall be placed on the provisional agenda of its fifteenth session;
- "3. Decides to set up a Good Offices Committee consisting of representatives of [three or five] States, with authority to engage in any consultations it may consider advisable with the representatives of Member States, and in particular the permanent members of the Security Council, with a view to studying the possibilities of arriving at an agreement which will facilitate the amendment of the Charter on the lines indicated above:
- "4. Requests the Good Offices Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 4. On 20 October, the Special Political Committee completed its general debate on these items after having heard more than fifty speakers, and agreed to adjourn its meeting to enable members to study draft resolutions which were being prepared by several delegations, as well as the draft resolution of El Salvador, which had been circulated on 19 October (see paragraph 3).
- 5. At the 134th meeting, on 21 October, the representative of El Salvador introduced a revised text (A/SPC/L.32/Rev.1) of his draft resolution, in which operative paragraph 3 was modified. In the new version the General Assembly would ask the Good Offices Committee to study the possibilities of arriving at an agreement which would facilitate the amendment of the Charter "to increase the membership of the Economic and Social Council and other principal organs of the United Nations".
- 6. At the same meeting, the representative of Ceylon introduced the following draft resolution (A/SPC/L.33 and Add.1), sponsored by Afghanistan, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, Ghana, Jordan, Indonesia, Iraq, Lebanon, Libya, Pakistan, and Saudi Arabia:

"The General Assembly,

"Noting the recent expansion in the membership of the United Nations and the further increase which is anticipated,

"Noting that nevertheless no increase in the membership of the principal organs of the United Nations has yet taken place,

"Recognizing that there is a strong volume of opinion among Member States that the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council should be enlarged so as appropriately to reflect the increase in the membership of the United Nations,

"Recognizing that such increase cannot be achieved except by amendment of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Expressing the hope that the strong desire manifested by a large number of Member States will help in bringing about an expansion of membership in these organs as early as possible,

- "Decides to include the items dealing with the question of an increase in these organs in the provisional agenda of the fifteenth session."
- 7. After a discussion of the two draft resolutions before it, the Committee decided, at its 135th meeting, on 23 October, to adjourn in order that members might study the possibility of merging the two texts.
- 8. At the 136th meeting, on 26 October, after conversations with the sponsors of the twelve-Power draft resolution, the representative of El Salvador introduced a new revised text (A/SPC/L.32/Rev.2) of his delegation's draft resolution. The revised draft read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Realizing that many delegations have expressed the opinion that in view of the considerable increase in the membership of the United Nations in recent years, there should be an increase in the membership of the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council,

"Recalling its resolution 1300 (XIII) of 10 December 1958, in which it recognized that in view of the increase in the membership of the United Nations since its establishment, an increase in the membership of of the Economic and Social Council is desirable,

"Noting that an increase in the membership of those organs would necessitate the amendment of certain provisions of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Expressing the hope that the strong desire manifested by a large number of Member States will help to bring about such amendment at the earliest opportunity.

"Considering that, in order to solve this problem, further efforts must be made with a view to obtaining the agreement of the greatest possible number of Member States,

- "1. Decides that items relating to an increase in the membership of the said organs shall be placed on the provisional agenda of its fifteenth regular session,
- "2. Decides to set up a committee consisting of representatives of [three or five] States to study the possibility of arriving at an agreement which will facilitate the amendment of the Charter so as to increase the membership of the aforementioned organs;
- "3. Requests the committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 9. The representative of El Salvador later amended operative paragraph 2 of the draft resolution to provide that the Committee should consist of representatives of five States.
- 10. At the 136th meeting, the representative of Ceylon introduced an amendment (A/SPC/L.34) to the revised draft resolution of El Salvador. Sponsored jointly by Afghanistan, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Iraq Nepal, and Saudi Arabia, the amendment called for the deletion of operative paragraphs 2 and 3 of the revised draft resolution (A/SPC/L.32/Rev.2), relating to the establishment of the committee.
- 11. Ethiopia, Liberia and Tunisia, joined by Nepal at the 138th meeting, submitted amendments (A/SPC/

L.35 and A/SPC/L.36 and Add.1) calling for the addition of the words "which would make it possible to improve the present distribution of seats in those organs" to the first preambular paragraph of the revised draft resolution of El Salvador (A/SPC/L.32/Rev.2) and to the second preambular paragraph of the twelve-Power draft resolution (A/SPC/L.33 and Add.1).

- 12. The Committee considered the draft resolutions and amendments at its 134th to 138th meetings. At the 138th meeting, the Committee adopted, by 38 votes to 27, with 11 abstentions, a procedural motion by the representative of Ireland to close the debate under rule 118 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.
- 13. At its 138th and 139th meetings on 28 and 29 October, the Committee voted on the draft resolutions and amendments before it, as well as on certain procedural motions. The results of its decisions are indicated below.
- (a) The nine-Power amendment (A/SPC/L.34) calling for the deletion of operative paragraphs 2 and 3 of the revised draft resolution submitted by El Salvador (A/SPC/L.32/Rev.2), was voted on by roll-call. The result of the vote was 35 in favour and 35 against, with 11 abstentions. The amendment was therefore not adopted. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Australia, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia, Ghana, Guinea, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Austria, Bolivia, Canada, China, Cuba, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ireland, Laos, Thailand.

(b) The four-Power amendment (A/SPC/L.35) consisting in the addition of a phrase to the first preambular paragraph of the revised draft resolution of El Salvador (A/SPC/L.32/Rev.2), was adopted by a roll-call vote of 63 to none, with 18 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India. Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Laos, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Luxembourg, Mexico, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Federation of Malaya, Hungary, Jordan, Morocco, Poland, Romania, Thailand, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Yugoslavia.

(c) A motion by the representative of the United Arab Republic, under rule 130 of the rules of procedure, to the effect that separate votes should be taken on the preamble and each of the operative paragraphs of the revised draft resolution of El Salvador was rejected by a roll-call vote of 41 to 35, with 6 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Australia, Austria, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic Cambodia, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia, Ghana, Guinea, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Argentina, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Liberia, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Abstaining: Canada, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Ireland, Laos, Thailand.

(d) The revised draft resolution of El Salvador (A/SPC/L.32/Rev.2), as amended by the four-Power amendment, was voted upon as a whole, and was adopted by a roll-call vote of 47 to 25, with 10 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Laos, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Abstaining: Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Indonesia, Ireland, Jordan, Lebanon, Philippines, Sudan, Thailand, Tunisia.

(e) A motion by the representative of El Salvador under rule 132 of the rules of procedure, to the effect that the Committee should decide not to put to the vote the twelve-Power draft resolution (A/SPC/

L.33 and Add.1), and the four-Power amendment thereto (A/SPC/L.36 and Add.1), was adopted by a roll-call vote of 36 to 34, with 10 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Israel, Italy, Liberia, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Venezuela.

Against: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia, Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Cuba, Ethiopia, Greece, Iceland, Japan, Laos, Tunisia, Turkey.

Following the announcement by the Chairman of the results of the voting, some representatives said they wished to correct their votes. The Committee then engaged in a procedural discussion as to whether a representative could be permitted, once the results had been announced, to change the vote he had cast if that change would reverse the announced result. At its 139th meeting, on 29 October, the Committee agreed without objection that in the existing special circumstances a second vote should be taken on the motion of El Salvador. Some representatives said that that procedure should not be considered as a precedent.

(f) The procedural motion of El Salvador under rule 132 of the rules of procedure, to the effect that the Committee should decide not to put to the vote the twelve-Power draft resolution (A/SPC/L.33 and Add.1) and the four-Power amendment thereto (A/SPC/L.36 and Add.1) was rejected by a roll-call vote of 41 to 35, with 4 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Israel, Italy, Liberia, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Against: Afghanistan, Albania, Australia, Austria, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Cuba, Iceland, Japan, Turkey.

(g) The Committee then voted on the twelve-Power draft resolution and the four-Power amendment, relating to the second preambular paragraph. The four-Power amendment (A/SPC/L.36 and Add.1) was adopted by a roll-call vote of 40 to 1, with 41 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Australia, Austria, Bolivia, Burma, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Cuba. Ecuador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana. Greece, Guinea, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Japan, Laos, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, United Arab Republic, Venezuela, Yemen.

Against: China.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Albania, Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, France, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Italy, Jordan, Liberia, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Spain, Thailand, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa. Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Yugoslavia.

(h) The twelve-Power draft resolution as a whole (A/SPC/L.33 and Add.1), as amended (A/SPC/L.36 and Add.1) was adopted by a roll-call vote of 39 votes to none, with 43 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Australia, Austria, Burma, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Norway, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, United Arab Republic, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: None.

Recommendations of the Special Political Committee

14. The Special Political Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolutions:

QUESTION OF AN INCREASE IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE SECURITY COUNCIL AND OF THE ECO-NOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Draft resolution I

The General Assembly,

Realizing that many delegations have expressed the opinion that, in view of the considerable increase in the membership of the United Nations in recent years, there should be an increase in the membership of the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council which would make it possible to improve the present distribution of seats in those organs,

Recalling its resolution 1300 (XIII) of 10 December 1953 in which it recognized that, in view of the increase in the membership of the United Nations since its establishment, an increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council is desirable.

Noting that an increase in the membership of those organs would necessitate the amendment of certain provisions of the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing the hope that the strong desire manifested by a large number of Member States will help to bring about such amendment at the earliest opportunity,

Considering that, in order to solve this problem, further efforts must be made with a view to obtaining the agreement of the greatest possible number of Member States,

- 1. Decides that items relating to an increase in the membership of the Security Council and of the Economic and Social Council shall be placed on the provisional agenda of is fifteenth session;
- 2. Decides to set up a Committee consisting of representatives of five States to study the possibility of arriving at an agreement which will facilitate the amendment of the Charter so as to increase the membership of the afore-mentioned organs;

3. Requests the Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

Draft resolution II

The General Assembly,

Noting the recent expansion in the membership of the United Nations and the further increase which is anticipated.

Noting that nevertheless no increase in the membership of the principal organs of the United Nations has yet taken place which would make it possible to improve the present distribution of seats in those organs,

Recognizing that there is a strong volume of opinion among Member States that the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council should be enlarged so as appropriately to reflect the increase in the membership of the United Nations,

Recognizing that such increase cannot be achieved except by amendment of the Charter,

Expressing the hope that the strong desire manifested by a large number of Member States will help in bringing about an expansion of membership in these organs as early as possible,

Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifteenth session the items dealing with the question of an increase in these organs.

El Salvador and Japan. amendment to draft resolution I submitted by the Special Political Committee (A/4256, para. 14)

Replace paragraphs 2 and 3 of the operative part by the following text:

2. Declares that if progress is not made during the fifteenth session of the General Assembly towards the achievement of an increase in the membership of the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, it should set up at that session a committee to study the possibilities of arriving at an agreement which will facilitate the amendment of the Charter to achieve the increase of membership referred to above.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 843rd plenary meeting, on 25 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted draft resolution I submitted by the Special Political Committee (A/4256, para. 14), as amended (A/L.269). For the final text, see resolution 1404 (XIV) below.

At the same meeting, the General Assembly decided not to vote on draft resolution II submitted by the Special Political Committee (A/4256, para. 14).

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1404 (XIV). QUESTION OF THE INCREASE IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE SECURITY COUNCIL AND OF THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

The General Assembly,

Realizing that many delegations have expressed the opinion that, in view of the considerable increase in the membership of the United Nations in recent years, there should be an increase in the membership of the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council which would make it possible to improve the present distribution of seats in those organs,

Recalling its resolution 1300 (XIII) of 10 December 1958, in which it recognized that, in view of the increase in the membership of the United Nations since its establishment, an increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council is desirable,

Noting that an increase in the membership of those organs would necessitate the amendment of certain provisions of the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing the hope that the strong desire manifested by a large number of Member States will help to bring about such amendment at the earliest opportunity,

Considering that, in order to solve this problem, further efforts must be made with a view to obtaining the agreement of the greatest possible number of Member States,

- 1. Decides that items relating to an increase in the membership of the Security Council and of the Economic and Social Council shall be placed on the provisional agenda of its fifteenth session;
- 2. Declares that, if progress is not made during the fifteenth session of the General Assembly towards the achievement of an increase in the membership of the Security Council and of the Economic and Social Council, the Assembly should set up at that session a committee to study the possibilities of arriving at an agreement which will facilitate the amendment of the Charter to achieve the increase in membership referred to above.

843rd plenary meeting, 25 November 1959.

Report of the Committee on arrangements for a conference for the purpose of reviewing the Charter

[8 September 1959]

- 1. Under resolution 992 (X) of 21 November 1955, the General Assembly decided to appoint a Committee consisting of all the Members of the United Nations to consider, in consultation with the Secretary-General, the question of fixing a time and place for a general conference, to be held at an appropriate time, to review the Charter, and the organization and procedures of such a conference. The Committee was requested to report, with recommendations, to the General Assembly at its twelfth session.
- 2. The report of the Committee (A/3593) was considered by the General Assembly during its twelfth session, and at its 705th plenary meeting, on 14 October 1957, the Assembly accepted the recommendation in the draft resolution (A/AC.81/L.1) contained in the Committee's report that the Committee be kept in being and be requested to report, with recommendations, to the General Assembly not later than at its fourteenth session (resolution 1136 (XII)).
- 3. Accordingly, at its third meeting on 2 September 1959, the Committee elected Mr. Abdul Rahman Pazhwak (Afghanistan) as Chairman and Mr. Carlos Adrián Perdomo (Honduras) as Vice-Chairman to replace, respectively, Mr. Abdul Hamid Aziz (Afghanistan) and Mr. José Vicente Trujillo (Ecuador) who were no longer members of their delegations and hence were not available in New York.
- 4. Mr. Franz Matsch (Austria) continued to be the Rapporteur of the Committee.
- 5. The representatives of the following Member States took part in the discussion: Afghanistan, the United Kingdom, Ghana, Ceylon, Italy, the Soviet Union, the United Arab Republic, the United States, India, Romania, Yugoslavia, the Philippines, Poland and China. The Rapporteur was requested to prepare
- *For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Plenary Meetings, 841st meeting.

- a draft of the Committee's report to the General Assembly and to submit it for the Committee's consideration at its next meeting. The representatives of the USSR and Ghana hoped that the report would reflect all the views expressed by the Committee members. The representatives of Ghana, Ceylon and the Philippines spoke in favour of deciding, at this stage, a definite date for convening a conference for the purpose of reviewing the Charter. The representative of Afghanistan, whilst expressing the hope that the appropriate time for review might not be too far distant, did not think that any drastic review of the Charter was necessary. Nevertheless, he felt it was high time that use should be made of the provisions of Article 108 of the Charter to alter the size and composition of bodies such as the Trusteeship Council.
- 6. The majority of the speakers expressed the view that a review of the Charter would be useful on account of the political, economic and social changes that had occurred in the world situation since 1945, but thought that the present time was not propitious for the convening of such a conference and therefore favoured a postponement. The hope was voiced that the forthcoming exchange of views and negotiations may improve the international atmosphere. In their view, the Committee should be kept in being and should submit recommendations either to the fifteenth or sixteenth session of the General Assembly.
- 7. The representatives of the USSR, Romania and Poland said that they objected to the convening of a general conference for the purpose of reviewing the Charter and accordingly considered that it would be inappropriate to keep the Committee in being any longer. In their view, the Charter as it stood was fully adequate to the task of strengthening the general peace and developing international co-operation. They recalled the difficulties which had had to be overcome in the past, at the time of the framing of the Charter, in order to reconcile the divergent viewpoints of many States with different social and political systems. Too superficial an approach to the problem of reviewing the Charter might undermine the very foundations of the United Nations and plunge it into a state of disorder and uncertainty. What was needed to make the work of the United Nations more effective was not revision of its Charter but the consistent application of its purposes and principles. They stated that, without the participation of the People's Republic of China, whose rights as a Member of the United Nations and permanent member of the Security Council had been violated, it would be impossible and inadmissible to discuss questions relating to a review of the United Nations Charter and that such a discussion would constitute yet another violation of that instrument.

- 8. At the end of the discussion, the representative of the United Kingdom, supported by the representative of the Philippines, noted that, in the prevailing view of the speakers, the time was not propitious for the convening of a Charter reviewing conference and that the Committee should recommend to the General Assembly to keep it in being and to instruct it to report again not later than at the sixteenth session of the Assembly.
- 9. The Rapporteur presented at the Committee's fourth meeting on 3 September 1959 a draft of the Committee's report to the Assembly (A/AC.81/L.2) with the suggestion that an additional paragraph containing a draft resolution for adoption by the Assembly be incorporated in the report as paragraph 10 of the report. A number of suggestions and amendments to the draft report were made by members, including a new substitute text for paragraph 8 of the draft report by the representative of the USSR and a substitute text of paragraph 9 made by the representative of Belgium. These suggestions and amendments were accepted by the Rapporteur for incorporation in the final text. At the request of the representative of the USSR, however, the Committee voted on the amended paragraph 9 and the additional paragraph 10 of the draft report and approved them by a vote of 71 to none, with 9 abstentions.

Recommendation of the Committee on arrangements for a conference for the purpose of reviewing the Charter

10. The Committee on arrangements for a conference for the purpose of reviewing the Charter therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 841st plenary meeting, on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Committee on arrangements for a conference for the purpose of reviewing the Charter (A/4199, para. 10). For the final text, see resolution 1381 (XIV) below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1381 (XIV). REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENTS FOR A CONFERENCE FOR THE PURPOSE OF REVIEWING THE CHARTER

The General Assembly,

Recalling the provisions of its resolutions 992 (X) of 21 November 1955 and 1136 (XII) of 14 October 1957.

- 1. Decides to keep in being the Committee on arrangements for a conference for the purpose of reviewing the Charter and to request the Committee to report, with recommendations, to the General Assembly not later than at its sixteenth session:
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue the work envisaged in paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 992 (X).

Interim report of the Secretary-General evaluating the Second United Nations International Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy in relation to the holding of similar conferences in the future

- 1. In its resolution 1344 (XIII) of 13 December 1958, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General and the United Nations Scientific Advisory Committee, in consultation with the International Atomic Energy Agency and the interested specialized agencies, "to undertake a thorough evaluation of the Second Conference in relation to the need, nature and timing of similar conferences in this field". The General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit an interim report to the Assembly at its fourteenth session and to report at the fifteenth session on the results of the study made with the Scientific Advisory Committee.
- 2. The Secretary-General consulted with the Scientific Advisory Committee about this matter at its meeting of 28 October 1959, and the present interim report has the concurrence of the Committee.
- 3. It would be premature at this time to present any firm conclusions about a third conference of the Geneva type. More study and consultation are needed. The publication of the English version of the Proceedings of the Second United Nations International Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy, comprising thirty-two volumes and an index, was completed only in September of this year, and the later volumes, therefore, have been available for only a short time. The proceedings present a large body of important material covering the whole range of peaceful uses of atomic energy, and some time is required to digest this material. It is also pertinent that a number of specialized conferences and symposia regarding the peaceful uses of atomic energy have been - held or are in prospect for 1959 and 1960 by the International Atomic Energy Agency and certain of the specialized agencies, some of them as a direct outgrowth of suggestions made at the Second Geneva Conference. Moreover, the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation is in a new stage of its work as a result of General Assembly resolution 1347 (XIII) of 13 December 1958. Such matters, of course, will have a bearing on the conclusions eventually to be reached concerning possible future conferences of the Geneva type.

- 4. There are other factors which will affect conclusions about holding another comprehensive conference on the peaceful uses of atomic energy within the next few years. These include: (a) the constantly increasing range and complexity of the field and the consequent effect on the size and scope of such conferences; (b) an estimate of the usefulness of the Second Conference (1958) in stimulating subsequent activities and in providing a general survey of work done the world over in the application of the peaceful uses of atomic energy for all purposes; (c) the amount of time, effort and financial expenditure involved in a comprehensive conference and the contribution made to the exchange of information and the development of the peaceful uses of atomic energy, as compared with the contributions from small and specialized conferences; (d) the desirability of affording an opportunity to meet together for large numbers of scientists of different scientific disciplines but working in related fields; (e) new and prospective developments in the atomic energy field which would justify the effort involved in holding another comprehensive conference; (f) the question of the desirability of considering a comprehensive conference in some broad scientific field other than that of the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

5. The Secretary-General and the Scientific Advisory Committee will take these and other factors into account in the preparation of the report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session, following the necessary consultations with the International Atomic Energy Agency and the interested specialized agencies.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 838th plenary meeting, on 17 November 1959, the General Assembly took note of the interim report of the Secretary-General (A/4261).

Progress report for 1959 of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation

[15 June 1959]

- 1. The United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation was established by resolution 913 (X) of 3 December 1955 at the tenth session of the General Assembly. It has the following members: Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Japan, Mexico, Sweden, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.
- 2. The Committee held its sixth session at Headquarters between 23 March and 1 April 1959. Professor Rolf Sievert of Sweden and Dr. V. R. Khanolkar of India served as Chairman and Vice-Chairman, respectively.
- 3. The Committee considered its future work in the light of the requests made by the General Assembly in resolution 1347 (XIII) of 13 December 1958, of its previous comprehensive report to the General Assembly (A/3838 and Corr.1) and of the discussions in the First Committee between 5 and 8 December 1958 (1011th to 1014th meetings). The Committee discussed its work under the following headings:
- (a) Maintenance and stimulation of the flow of information to the Committee:
 - (b) The pattern of scientific study by the Committee;
- * For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Plenary Meetings, 839th meeting.

- (c) The reporting practice of the Committee;
- (d) The manner and areas in which research may usefully be stimulated;
 - (e) The pattern of meetings of the Committee;
- (f) The organization of work and staff needs of the Committee;
 - (g) Relations of the Committee with other bodies;
 - (h) Immediate programme of work for 1959 and 1960.
- 4. In the course of its discussions, the Committee noted that it had received, and hoped it would continue to receive, much useful information on fall-out, radiation levels and radio-biological questions from States Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies and of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). In order to carry out the task assigned to it by the General Assembly, the Committee found it necessary to suggest that this collection of information be supplemented by a variety of activities and discussions undertaken by the United Nations, its specialized agencies, IAEA and certain non-governmental organizations. The Committee further decided to request the Secretary-General to continue to provide it with assistance as in the past; to recommend to the General Assembly that its normal pattern of meetings be similar to that of past years, with appropriate adjustments found desirable in the light of the Committee's past experience and present situation; and to centre its discussion in the immediately forthcoming sessions on radio-active fall-out and radio-biological questions. The Committee intends to continue to report progress annually to the General Assembly and to submit a further comprehensive report in 1962. The conclusions and recommendations approved by the Committee are set out in detail in annex I.

ANNEX I

Summary of conclusions reached by the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation at its sixth session

I. MAINTENANCE AND STIMULATION OF THE FLOW OF INFORMATION TO THE COMMITTEE

1. The Committee decided to recall to States Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies and of IAEA the comprehensive report of the Committee (A/3838 and Corr.1) and the decision of the General Assembly to request the Committee to continue its useful work; and to invite them to send any further data of the type already contained in the comprehensive report so as to enable this report to be kept up to date or extended, having in mind as a guide its earlier detailed requests for such information.

II. THE PATTERN OF SCIENTIFIC STUDY BY THE COM-MITTEE

A. Stratospheric fall-out mechanism

2. The Committee decided to discuss problems relating to the stratospheric fall-out mechanism at its next session, and to emphasize the need for further information of specific kinds bearing on this problem. It also welcomed the co-operation of the World Meteorological Organization (WMO), asked that Organization to assist it in its discussions by making available relevant information from conferences, and invited the participation of a group of experts of WMO in its discussions of the problem.

B. Food-chain problem

3. The Committee emphasized the continued importance for its work of further studies of the movement of radio-active nuclides in food-chains and the value of the work carried out and of the information submitted to the Committee by States Members of the United Nations, members of the specialized agencies and of IAEA. It welcomed the proposal of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) that that Organization, in association with other interested international agencies, should give detailed and continuing consideration to this subject on an international basis, expressed its immediate concern with the soil-plant-animal human diet relationships for isotopes such as Sr90, Sr89, Cs137 and I131, and also with the levels of these isotopes in diets and the factors which govern the contribution made by diets of various types to human body burdens; and it recommended that FAO give specialized consideration to the difficult problems of sampling food and agricultural materials. The Committee also agreed to make available for agricultural studies by FAO relevant data submitted to it.

C. Studies of exposed groups of populations

4. Recognizing that an appreciable contribution to the present irradiation of human populations caused by man-made sources originates in a number of countries from the medical uses of radiation, the Committee expressed its belief that a careful study of the radiation doses received by patients is desirable and should include not only doses to the gonads but exposure of significance for the possible induction of malignant diseases; it also expressed its belief that the results of such a study should be correlated with the results of epidemiological investigations of possible radiation-induced diseases. It noted that the International Commission on Radiological Protection and the International Commission on Radiological Units and Measurements are appropriate and competent bodies to study the problems of dose estimation involved, and observed that the World Health Organization (WHO), having interests and activities in epidemiological studies, is an appropriate and competent body to consider questions of radiation-induced diseases. The Committee therefore invited the International Commission on Radiological Protection and the International Commission on Radiological Units and Measurements:

- (a) To define the relevant parameters needed to describe any one exposure as fully as possible;
- (b) To consider the methods of obtaining reliable information with regard to these parameters and the procedures of measurement and computation, with special attention to the concept of "significant dose" as used in the comprehensive report of the Committee;
- (c) To survey the available information with regard to the number of patients undergoing different types of treatment and examination involving ionizing radiation, and to indicate, wherever possible, what are the exposures as described in the relevant parameters;
- (d) To submit to the Committee, as soon as possible, and, in any event, before the end of 1960, a report upon their deliberations and conclusions on the subjects mentioned in (a) to (c) above, and to make any appropriate recommendations.

The Committee also invited WHO:

- (a) To further consider the development of suitable methodology for the investigation of radiation-induced diseases;
- (b) To examine the question of epidemiological studies of human malignant diseases in relation to medical radiation exposures;
- (c) To take steps as may be appropriate for the stimulation and furtherance of such studies.

The Committee requested the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements to implement the above invitations, including provision for the reimbursement of expenses incurred by the International Commission on Radiological Protection and the International Commission on Radiological Units and Measurements.

D. Adaptation and use of national vital and health statistics for genetic purposes

5. The Committee considered it desirable that a seminar be held in the near future to review how best to use and adapt national civil registration practices and vital and health statistics for genetic purposes and other considerations relevant to the radiation problem and that such a seminar be held under the joint sponsorship of the United Nations and WHO, if possible in 1960. It therefore decided to recommend to the General Assembly that such a seminar be held and to suggest to WHO that it co-sponsor such a seminar.

E. Population studies

6. The Committee expressed its continued interest in studies of populations exposed to relatively high levels of natural radiation, and stated that it considered such studies to be important, and would welcome reports on their progress.

F. Human genetics

7. The Committee suggested to WHO that it continue its work in the field of human genetics and that it consider convening in the near future an expert group for the discussion of the distribution and maintenance of genetic defects in populations; it stated that it would welcome the results of such a meeting in the light of its intention to consider this question at a subsequent session of the Committee. The Committee also stated that it considered important the study of the significance of alterations in the sex ratio as a possible indicator of radiation-induced genetic disturbance in human populations, and it sought the close co-operation of WHO in a study of this problem.

G. Accidental exposure

8. The Committee considered it important that it should be aware of available information as to accidental exposure of human beings to large doses of ionizing radiation and the biological effects produced, and requested its secretary to prepare and circulate short bibliographies on these subjects prior to meetings of the Committee.

H. Hazards of incorporated radio-active atoms

9. The Committee recognized that the recent progress in molecular biology of DNA is an important and most critical approach to the understanding of fundamental radio-biology and of genetic effects of ionizing radiation in particular. It noted that the genetic effects of radio-isotopes incorporated into the body have so far been considered mostly as consequences of molecular changes caused by ionizations only; that the recoil of the decayed radio-active atom and the change of its chemical characteristics could, however, also lead to mutations if the radio-isotopes (H3, C14, P32, P33) have been incorporated into DNA molecules of the genetic material; and, further, that experiments made to obtain basic data on relative efficiencies of ionization and of transmutation or recoil in specific locus mutation would enhance the accuracy of the quantitative assessment of the biological hazards of radio-active contamination. In formulating its conclusion, the Committee also pointed out that certain viruses and microorganisms give the greatest promise of the profitable attack on this problem because of the precise genetic technique available. The Committee considered that, since some of the somatic effects may reflect mutations in somatic cells or damage of their genetic apparatus, studies of the molecular effects of radio-active decay of incorporated radio-isotopes may be important not only for the understanding of genetic hazards but also for the explanations of such somatic effects as carcinogenesis, ageing or even acute lethality.

I. Urgent need of further research in general biology

- 10. The Committee decided to point out that further advance in radio-biology depends mainly upon progress in general biology, and that better understanding of complex cellular mechanisms is required before any satisfactory explanation of primary radiation effects can be expected; that, as in other similarly complex fields of applied biological science, continuing progress can only be achieved by giving enough support and research effort to the fundamental biology; and that, since an assessment of radiation damage produced at very low dose levels can hardly be based only on statistical experimentation, understanding of the basic radio-biological mechanism may be the only rational approach to the evaluation of radiation risk and to the eventual prevention of it. The Committee drew the attention of scientific organizations and research institutions to the great benefit that would come from better knowledge in fundamental biology, not only through understanding the effects of ionizing radiation, but also through the deep influence of such knowledge on the whole field of genetics and on other important problems like carcinogenesis or ageing.
- 11. In the two following general fields, the Committee noted that more data are urgently needed:
 - (a) Molecular biology, especially studies in polynucleotides;
 - (b) Cell physiology and cell chemistry.
- It also stressed that additional information on the following particular problems will be of immediate profit:
- (a) Structure of polynucleotides, their role in the transfer of genetic information and in protein synthesis;
- (b) Mechanisms of mutation and possible recovery processes of genetic damage; comparative nature of induced and spontaneous mutation; the fate of mutational changes in a population;
 - (c) Role of genetic mechanisms in somatic cell variation;
- (d) Chemical composition of cell structures carrying genetic information; role of specific minerals, such as strontium and calcium as microelements necessary for normal cell function;
- (e) Regulation of cell growth and cell differentiation; role of different cell structures in normal functioning of the cell; problem of ageing on the cellular level;
- (f) Nature of cellular processes leading to tumour development.

The Committee recognized the value of recent advances in relevant methodology such as the method of $\underline{\text{in vitro}}$ cultivation of mammalian cells.

12. The Committee stated that it was conscious of the overall importance of progress in general biology, and it therefore recommended that the specialized agencies and other bodies give adequate support to fundamental biological research, stimulate this research by organizing frequent exchanges of new information, possibly by holding inter-disciplinary symposia, and help in the training of specialists by granting an appropriate number of fellowships in general biological disciplines.

III. THE REPORTING PRACTICE OF THE COMMITTEE

13. The Committee expressed its intention to submit annual progress reports to the General Assembly, to report to the Assembly on each phase of its scientific work separately, as it is completed, and to submit a further comprehensive report during or before 1962, including a summary of interim scientific reports and modifications necessary to update the Committee's 1958 comprehensive report, which would constitute a self-contained document rather than material in the form of annexes updating the Committee's 1958 comprehensive report.

IV. THE PATTERN OF MEETINGS OF THE COMMITTEE

14. After giving careful consideration to the place and frequency of its future meetings, and reviewing its experience at previous meetings, the Committee decided that it would normally be desirable to hold two meetings every year, one in the first half of the year, which would include the preparation of a progress report to be submitted to the General Assembly through the Secretary-General, and the other in the second half of the year, which would be devoted mainly to the evaluation of technical data which had become available to the Committee during the course of the year. The Committee stated that it considered it absolutely essential to its work that the sum of its sessions be attended by the widest group of experts whose advice its members can collectively bring to bear, and, moreover, that it desired the corresponding burdens in time and expense incurred by Governments, to be more equitably distributed among its members. It therefore considered it very desirable that the Committee meet from time to time at Geneva, and also that it meet in other places following an invitation from a Government or a United Nations agency made in accordance with the principles of General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII) of 13 December 1957, and that it hold one session in 1960 at Geneva or such other place as may be approved, in accordance with the principles of the above resolution.

V. THE ORGANIZATION OF WORK AND STAFF NEEDS OF THE COMMITTEE

15. The Committee requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide it, on the same basis as in the past, with scientific staff assisted, as appropriate, by the services of scientific consultants, with a small working library, and with other ad hoc services; and it emphasized the value of travel by members of the scientific staff for purposes of consultation during their work.

VI. RELATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE WITH OTHER BODIES

- 16. The Committee welcomed the offers of co-operation it had received from the specialized agencies, from the IAEA and from the International Commission on Radiological Protection and the International Commission on Radiological Units and Measurements. It anticipated that its work would be assisted by the IAEA because of that Agency's expanding work in subjects related to the question of radiation.
- 17. The Committee decided to draw the attention of the General Assembly to the requests for studies and information that it has made to specialized agencies, to IAEA and to other bodies, and to emphasize that these requests were made in order to assist the Committee to carry out the obligation assigned to it by the General Assembly for evaluating the effects of ionizing radiation on man and on his environment.

VII. IMMEDIATE PROGRAMME OF WORK FOR 1959 AND 1960

- 18. The Committee decided that at its forthcoming sessions it would include the following as main subjects for discussion:
 - (a) At the seventh session:
 - (i) The physical aspects of fall-out;
- (ii) Physical and biological problems concerning the transmission of fission products through food-chains;
- (iii) The relationship between radiation dose and effects, particularly at small-dose levels.
 - (b) At the eighth session:
- (i) Physical and biological problems concerned with carbon-14.
 - (ii) Genetic problems.

At this session, a report from FAO on food-chain problems might be expected.

ANNEX II

Financial implications

At the time of adoption of the conclusions set forth in annex I, the Committee was informed that the request to the Secretary-General contained in paragraph 4 would, on the basis of information supplied by the two non-governmental organizations concerned, require an expenditure of not more than $10,000, and that the recommendation contained in paragraph 5 would, on certain simple assumptions, involve the expenditure of approximately $35,000 to $40,000, to be apportioned between the sponsors.

Financial implications of the proposals contained in document A/4119 Note by the Secretary-General

[13 November 1959]

1. An indication of the types of new costs associated with the proposals contained in the progress report for 1959 of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (A/4119) was given in its annex II. The present statement supplements the information given therein.

STUDIES OF EXPOSED GROUPS OF POPULATIONS 1/

2. Work on these studies has been begun by the International Commission on Radiological Protection and the International Commission on Radiological Units and Measurements. Inasmuch as the studies will not be completed until the middle of 1960 and reimbursement to the two organizations is not required until that time, the amount ($10,000) earmarked for this purpose within the 1959 global appropriation under section 1 has been surrendered. The same amount would now be requested in supplementation of the consultancy funds under section 6 of the initial budget estimates for 1960.

ADAPTATION AND USE OF NATIONAL VITAL AND HEALTH STATISTICS FOR GENETIC PURPOSES²/

- 3. In pursuance of the recommendation of the Scientific Committee, the Secretary-General has invited WHO to co-sponsor the proposed seminar. In accepting the Secretary-General's invitation, WHO has offered to share in the costs of the seminar by paying at least $9,200 of the expenses.
- 4. The proposed plan for the seminar as developed jointly by the Secretariat of the United Nations and the secretariat of WHO would call for the convening, immediately before the summer session of the Economic and Social Council at Geneva, of an international expert workshop of approximately five days' duration. The purpose of the workshop would be to explore fully the possibilities of a systematic linkage and application to certain genetic and other radiation problems of information already widely recorded for large populations (e.g., civil registration and health records), together with other relevant records, such as those of radiation exposures or particular conditions and traits. It is believed that funds should be provided to assure the participation of approximately twenty-five experts from ten to twelve countries to present or discuss papers. Other participants, perhaps resulting in a total attendance of some 100 persons, would consist of experts nominated by Governments or other individuals whose travel and subsistence expenses would not be a charge to the United Nations budget. It is not proposed to pay fees or honoraria for the submission of papers, but proceedings of the seminar, consisting primarily of the scientific papers submitted and records of discussion, would be published.

5. On the basis just outlined, the additional requirements of the United Nations budget would come to a total of $29,800, in respect of which miscellaneous income would be received from WHO in the amount of at least $9,200. Details of the cost items for which provision would have to be made in the 1960 appropriations are shown below.

Revised

estimate

6. Excluded from the above enumeration is an anticipated cost of $2,700 for additional temporary assistance language staff at Geneva which it is believed can be met without increase in the appropriations as now foreseen. The language services in this particular case would be limited to minimal adhoc interpretation into English and French, and possible summary records for the opening and closing plenary meetings.

PATTERN OF MEETINGS OF THE COMMITTEE 3/

7. For the reasons shown in its report, the Scientific Committee has recommended that its normal pattern of meetings be similar to that in past years, with certain adjustments. Specifically, it proposes that it meet from time to time at Geneva and also that it meet in other places following an invitation from a Government or a United Nations agency, made in accordance with the principles of General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII) of 13 December 1957. As to the pattern of meetings for 1960, it is the proposal of the Committee that one of its sessions be held at Geneva or such other place as may be approved in accordance with the principles of resolution 1202 (XII).

8. If the Scientific Committee's conclusion concerning the pattern of meetings normally desirable for it is approved, the Secretary-General will continue to make budgetary provision for two meetings of the Committee each year. Bearing in mind the Committee's conclusion that it would be very desirable, from time to time, for its meetings to be held elsewhere than in New York, the Secretary-General anticipates that specific proposals to that end would, from time to time, be formulated by the Committee in consultation with him. Any such proposal would then be taken into account by the Secretary-General in preparing his initial budget estimates for the year in question, or, if time did not so permit, by seeking the concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions. The budgetary effect of this adjustment of pattern, in any year in which it might be reflected by the Committee holding one of its sessions in Geneva instead of New York, would be to reduce the requirement for travel of representatives by approximately $3,800 and to increase the requirements for travel of staff, inasmuch as it would be necessary to provide for the overseas round-trip travel of the Committee secretary and other staff scientists, at a variable amount not exceeding approximately $8,000.

9. So far as 1960 is concerned, the Secretary-General has scheduled the first session of the Scientific Committee for January at Headquarters. He would expect the place of the second session to be determined during that meeting and would propose in the meantime that the 1960 budget provision be revised to allow for the holding of the second session at Geneva (September 1960). It would be his understanding, however, that an alternative decision during the Committee's first session to accept an invitation from a Government or a United Nations agency would be dealt with in accordance with the requirements of General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII). In such event, therefore, the Secretary-General would submit a statement of the financial arrangements and expenditures involved to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions for concurrence at an early date in 1960.

10. The budgetary revisions involved for 1960 are as shown below.

Initial

estimate

			(Geneva) s dollars
Travel and subsistence of representatives (two-week session, fiftee members) (section 1)	n	,200	16,400
Travel and subsistence of Headquarter staff (Committee secretary, five staff scientists, two general service staff (section 8)	if ()	_	8,600
Temporary language staff at Genev (local recruits or continued subsistence for Headquarters staff retaine at Geneva) (section 6)	- d	_	1,000
TOTAI	_	,200	26,000

In view of the special staffing arrangements for other meetings which may take place in 1960, it is possible that the expenditure of $1,000 for temporary language staff can in fact be absorbed, so that the actual increase in budgetary provisions required would be $4,800.

RECAPITULATION

11. The 1960 budget estimates contain provision for the continuation of the Scientific Committee secretariat and the holding of two sessions of the Committee at Headquarters. The 1959 global provision of $23,000 for special activities has not been carried into 1960, except for the inclusion under section 12 of $1,000 for purchase of library materials. Hence, implementation of the proposals just described would necessitate revisions in the 1960 budget estimates as follows.

New provision
United States dollars

Section 1

Travel and subsistence of members (reduction in cost of Committee's second session at Geneva)	(3,800)
United Nations-WHO seminar	29,800
Section 6
Temporary assistance (consultant payment for studies of exposed groups of populations: deferred from 1959)	10,000
Section 8
Travel of staff to meetings (for Committee's second session at Geneva)	8,600
TOTAL	44,600

The estimate of miscellaneous income would also be revised to take account of a sum of at least $9,200 to be received from WHO towards expenses of the United Nations-WHO seminar.

Financial implications of the draft resolution contained in document A/L.268 Note by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [16 November 1959]

- 1. The financial implications of the proposals contained in the progress report for 1959 of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation have been put before the General Assembly in document A/4119/Add.1, indicating requirements in 1960 of $44,600. Should the draft resolution presented in document A/L.268 be adopted by the General Assembly, there would be certain additional financial implications in connexion with new studies.
- 2. The studies which the Scientific Committee is asked to undertake in sections II and III of the operative part of the draft resolution and upon which the - Committee is required, by section V of the draft resolution, to report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session, are of the kind which the Committee would usually ask expert working groups to undertake. In order to avoid disruption of the Committee's own plan of work by these studies, the Secretary-General would wish to be able to arrange, upon request by the Committee, for two expert working groups. These groups might consist of four experts each, to meet between the Committee's two sessions in 1960 for a probable period of not more than four days each. The estimated cost of travel and subsistence for each group would be about $3,500, or a total of $7,000.
- 3. The total financial implications of the draft resolution therefore come to $51,600.

Czechoslovakia: draft resolution

[Original text: English] [12 October 1959]

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the great importance of studies relating to the effects of ionizing radiation upon man and his environment.

Recalling the conclusions of the report of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation and General Assembly resolution 1347 (XIII) of 13 December 1958,

Bearing in mind that the radio-active fall-out found in the stratosphere is a long-lasting threat and evergrowing danger looming over the health of mankind,

Bearing in mind further that in the atmosphere new dangerous particles of radio-active fall-out have been discovered.

- 1. Takes note of the progress report of 1959 of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (A/4119 and Add.1) as well as the programme of its further work;
- 2. Requests the Scientific Committee to devote, in its future activities, more attention to the complex of problems of radio-active fall-out, in particular with regard to the biological and genetic effects of C14, and to accord special attention to these problems in its report for the fifteenth session of the General Assembly:
- 3. Calls upon the respective governmental and nongovernmental organizations and all States to assist the Scientific Committee more intensively, in particular by providing information relating to radio-active fall-out and its physical, biological and genetic effects.

[Original text: English] [2 November 1959]

The General Assembly,

Recalling the conclusions of the report of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation and General Assembly resolution 1347 (XIII) of 13 December 1958,

Reaffirming the great importance of studies relating to the effects of ionizing radiation upon man and his environment,

Recognizing the universal desire that urgent steps be taken to enlarge knowledge of the biological effects of radiation and of the extent of the hazard from manmade radiation.

Noting with appreciation that numerous reports and substantial data have been provided to the Committee by Governments and specialized agencies, and that assistance is being rendered to the Committee by them, by the International Atomic Energy Agency, by international non-governmental and national scientific organizations, and by individual scientists,

Noting with satisfaction the increasingly close cooperation between the Committee and the International Atomic Energy Agency,

Bearing in mind the views of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination concerning co-operation among the organizations concerned in the field of atomic radiation, as endorsed in Economic and Social Council resolution 743 B (XXVIII) of 31 July 1959,

Convinced that for the purpose of its immediate programme of work it is desirable to provide the Scientific Committee with further information on fall-out, radiation levels and radio-biological questions, and to supplement this information by a variety of activities and discussions undertaken by the United Nations, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and certain non-governmental organizations,

I

Approves the recommendations of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation in connexion with the plans and suggested activities contained in its progress report for 1959 (A/4119 and Add.1) and in annex 1 thereto;

П

- 1. Notes the request of the Committee for further information and data of the type already contained in its comprehensive report (A/3838 and Corr.1) and, for the purpose of stimulating the flow of such information and data;
- 2. Requests the Committee, in consultation with the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the World Meteorological Organization to consider and study more effective arrangements, including means of overcoming any technical difficulties in this field, if Member States so request, for:
- (a) Sample collection on a basis of uniform standards by States Members of the United Nations or members of the specialized agencies or of the International Atomic Energy Agency;

(b) Analyses of samples by Member States possessing specialized facilities and willing to undertake analyses for other States which wish to collect samples but do not at the present time have the necessary facilities for analyses;

Ш

Requests the Committee also, in consultation with the World Health Organization, the International Atomic Energy Agency, to the extent relevant, and other interested organizations, to consider and study more effective arrangements, including means of overcoming any technical difficulties in this field if Member States so request, for encouraging genetic, biological and other studies, including those concerned with C ¹⁴, that will elucidate the effects of radiation exposure on the health of human populations;

ΤV

- 1. Invites Governments of Member States having facilities for laboratory analysis to make known to the Committee the extent to which they are prepared to receive and analyse samples;
- 2. Invites the International Atomic Energy Agency to consider and inform the Committee what assistance it might give in this connexion with respect to the analysis of samples;
- 3. Requests the Committee to correlate the offers of sample collection with the offers of analyses in such a way as to ensure comparability of results, making full use of the work of the International Atomic Energy Agency in the field of metrology of radio-nuclides;

- 1. Expresses the hope that all concerned will continue to assist the Committee, co-operate in the consideration of the arrangements contemplated above and furnish the Committee with all relevant scientific information for collation, study and dissemination;
- 2. Requests the Committee to submit as soon as practicable a report on its study of such questions to the Secretary-General for publication and dissemination to all States Members of the United Nations or members of the specialized agencies or of the International Atomic Energy Agency, and for consideration by the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 839th plenary meeting, on 17 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by Argentina, Austria, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Ghana, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand and Norway (A/L.268), as amended orally.4/ For the final text, see resolution 1376 (XIV) below.

Note by the Rapporteur

1. By resolution 1348 (XIII), of 13 December 1958, the General Assembly established an $\underline{\text{Ad Hoc}}$ Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space consisting of the representatives of Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Iran, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Poland, Sweden, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Arab Republic, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America.

- 2. The work of the Ad Hoc Committee was conducted at United Nations Headquarters in New York. It began on 6 May and concluded on 25 June 1959.
- 3. The representatives of the following States took part in the work: Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, France, Iran, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States.
 - 4. The Committee elected the following officers:

Chairman: Mr. Koto Matsudaira (Japan)

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Mario Amadeo (Argentina)

Rapporteur: Mr. Joseph Nisot (Belgium)

- 5. The Committee established two committees of the whole: one a technical committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. D. C. Rose (Canada); and the other, a legal one, under the chairmanship of Professor Antonio Ambrosini (Italy). The Technical Committee prepared part II of the report and the Legal Committee part III of the report. At the request of the Ad Hoc Committee, the Secretary-General presented a report which covered paragraph 1 (a) of the General Assembly resolution and constituted the basis for part I of the Committee's report.
- 6. The Ad Hoc Committee and its committees of the whole have held twenty-five meetings. They were given valuable assistance by the United Nations Secretariat, especially by Mr. Sanford Schwarz, Secretary of the Ad Hoc Committee and of the Technical Committee; Mr. Oscar Schachter, Secretary of the Legal Committee; and Mr. Geoffrey S. Murray, the representative of the Secretary-General.
- 7. By the terms of resolution 1348 (XIII), the Ad Hoc Committee was required to report to the General Assembly on the four following matters described in paragraph 1 of the resolution:
 - "(a) The activities and resources of the United Nations of its specialized agencies and of other international bodies relating to the peaceful uses of outer space;
 - "(b) The area of international co-operation and programmes in the peaceful uses of outer space which could appropriately be undertaken under United Nations auspices to the benefit of States irrespective of the state of their economic or scientific development, taking into account the following proposals, inter alia:
 - "(i) Continuation on a permanent basis of the outer space research now being carried on within the framework of the International Geophysical Year;
 - "(ii) Organization of the mutual exchange and dissemination of information on outer space research;
 - "(iii) Co-ordination of national research programmes for the study of outer space, and the rendering of all possible assistance and help towards their realization;
 - "(c) The future organizational arrangements to facilitate international co-operation in this field within the framework of the United Nations;

- "(d) The nature of legal problems which may arise in the carrying out of programmes to explore outer space."
- 8. Each of these four matters is the subject of a separate part of the present report, which the Ad Hoc Committee adopted unanimously on 25 June 1959: part I: paragraph 1 (a); part II: paragraph 1 (b); part III: paragraph 1 (c).

Part I

Paragraph 1 (a) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII)

- 1. The Ad Hoc Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, at its first meeting on 6 May 1959, requested the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the subject matter of paragraph 1 (a) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII), namely, "The activities and resources of the United Nations, of its specialized agencies and of other international bodies relating to the peaceful uses of outer space". On 16 June, the Secretary-General submitted a comprehensive and valuable report (A/AC.98/4) to the Committee on these matters, which stands as a part of the documentary records of the Committee.
- 2. The present part I is based on the Secretary-General's report. The Committee has sought to summarize the pertinent data in such a way as to facilitate future United Nations discussions relating to the peaceful uses of outer space.

I. INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC ORGANIZATIONS

A. The international scientific unions

- 3. The principal non-governmental international bodies which are interested and active in space research are the international scientific unions in the several major fields of science which benefit by experiments utilizing sounding rockets, satellites, and space probes. These are: International Astronomical Union, International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry, International Scientific Radio Union, International Union of Pure and Applied Physics, International Union of Biological Sciences, International Union of Theoretical and Applied Mechanics, International Union of Physiological Sciences, International Union of Biochemistry.
- 4. The International Union of Mathematics has also expressed some interest. The interests of the remaining three international scientific unions, i. e., International Geographical Union, International Union of Crystallography, and International Union of the History of Science lie outside the space field.
 - 5. The objects of the unions are:
- (a) To promote the study of problems relating to their scientific fields;
- (b) To initiate, facilitate and co-ordinate research into, and investigation of, those problems which require international co-operation:
- (c) To provide for discussion, comparisons and publication.
- 6. The unions are maintained by the voluntary, part-time work of a small group of active scientists elected for limited terms. The administration is small and flexible. The activities are directed toward organizing meetings ranging in size from small symposia on specialized topics to large congresses devoted to all aspects of the whole discipline, and in maintaining or encouraging publications.

7. The unions maintain contact with scientists in the various countries through national committees or equivalent bodies, one for each discipline. Annual national contributions to the unions are paid by the national committees, the total for all thirteen unions amounting to between $150,000 and $200,000 per year. The national committees are often organized by or related to the national academies or research councils in the respective countries.

B. The International Council of Scientific Unions

- 8. The establishment of the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU) in 1931 provided a central organization to deal with problems of common interest and to encourage international scientific co-operation.
 - 9. Further objects of the Council are:
- (a) To encourage international scientific activity in subjects which do not fall within the purview of any existing international organization;
- (b) To enter, through the national adhering organizations, into relations with the Governments of the countries adhering to the Council in order to promote scientific investigation in these countries;
- (c) To maintain relations with the United Nations and its specialized agencies;
- (d) To make such contacts and mutual arrangements as are deemed necessary with other international councils or unions, where common interests exist in the field of the natural sciences covered by the Council.
- 10. The General Assembly of the ICSU consists of representatives of the thirteen scientific unions and of national representatives from the national academies or research councils of the forty-five countries adhering to the ICSU. The Assembly meets triennially and elects an Executive Board, which meets annually. There is an administrative office in The Hague with a small full-time secretariat.
- 11. The financial resources of the ICSU consist of contributions from the national adhering bodies amounting to about $50,000 per year and an annual grant of about $200,000 from UNESCO to support the scientific activities of the unions.
- 12. There are always a certain number of tasks which lie on the borderline between two or more unions. The Council takes special care to fill needs for co-operation or joint activities involving the disciplines of several unions or many national academies. Typical examples are the International Geophysical Year, Antarctic Research and Space Research. The Council copes with these tasks as they arise in international scientific life by the formation of special committees such as the Special Committee for the International Geophysical Year (CSAGI), which was formed in 1953 and will continue to the end of June 1959, the Special Committee on Oceanographic research, first established in 1957, and the Special Committee on Antartic Research, 1958.

C. The International Geophysical Year

- 13. The activities of ICSU in space research began as a part of the programme of CSAGI.
- 14. At a CSAGI conference in Rome, in 1954, a resolution was passed urging that as many nations as possible consider the development of satellites carrying scientific instruments, which would be placed in orbits around the earth during the International Geophysical Year. The resolution stated:

"In view of the great importance of observations during extended periods of time of extra-terrestrial radiations and geophysical phenomena in the upper atmosphere, and in view of the advanced state of present rocket techniques, CSAGI recommends that thought be given to the launching of small satellite vehicles, to their scientific instrumentation, and to the new problems associated with satellite experiments, such as power supply, telemetering, and orientation of the vehicle."

- 15. Within a year, both the United States and the USSR indicated their intention to launch satellites. Successively, attention was devoted by CSAGI to the several phases of the earth-satellite-tracking programmes. Special emphasis was placed on the need for wide international co-operation in tracking satellites to develop their full scientific potential. Many nations indicated a willingness to set up satellite-observation stations.
- 16. Being non-governmental in organization, and with limited financial resources, CSAGI achieved great success through the voluntary co-operation of the participating national committees. Particularly in the rocket and satellite programmes, the financial and logistic support of the programme by the several national Governments was essential.
- 17. With the termination of the International Geophysical Year, there was a wide-spread desire to continue international co-operation in the planning and co-ordination of space research as well as other activities of the year. This led to a programme of International Geophysical Co-operation 1959 and to the formation of several special committees, including a Committee on Space Research (COSPAR).

D. The Committee on Space Research

- 18. The Committee on Space Research (COSPAR) was established, provisionally for an initial period of one year ending 31 December 1959 by a resolution of the eighth General Assembly of the ICSU (held at Washington, D.C., from 2 to 6 October 1958). The resolution stated that the primary purpose of COSPAR was "to provide the world scientific community with the means whereby it may exploit the possibilities of satellites and space probes of all kinds for scientific purposes, and exchange the resulting data on a cooperative basis".
- 19. The Committee is concerned with scientific research in the broadest sense. This is made clear by the provisional charter according to which the Committee shall promote fundamental research on space, on an international scale but shall not normally concern itself with such technological problems as propulsion, construction of rockets, guidance and control. This objective shall be achieved through the maximum development of space research programmes by the international community of scientists working through the ICSU and its adhering national academies and international scientific unions. The Committee shall report to ICSU those measures needed in the future to enable all countries in the world to participate, together, with those countries which are already actively engaged in research programmes within the domain of COSPAR, in international programmes of space research.

- 20. The Committee's composition has been provisionally established to consist of:
 - (a) The representatives of national scientific institutions of the seven countries launching satellites or having a major programme in rocket research; 1/
 - (b) The representatives of the national scientific institutions of three of the countries involved in tracking or other forms of space research on an agreed system of rotation;
 - (c) The representatives of nine international scientific unions.
- 21. The Committee has held two meetings to date, an organizational meeting in London in November 1958 and a second meeting at The Hague in March 1959. The actions taken may be summarized as follows.
- 22. All the countries that had taken part in the rocket and satellite programme of the International Geophysical Year, namely. Australia, Canada. France, Japan, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States, were admitted to membership in group (a) mentioned above (para. 20). India, Peru and the Union of South Africa were invited as the first rotating members in group (b), but only the Union of South Africa accepted and was present at the second meeting. Group (c) consists of the representatives of the nine unions previously listed as interested and active in space research.
- 23. Three continuing working groups were established as follows: (1) Tracking and Transmission of Scientific Information; (2) Scientific Experiments (including biological experiments); (3) Data and Publications. Ad hoc committees were established to consider matters relating to experiments with biological implications and contamination by atomic explosions.
- 24. The task of the Working Group on Tracking and Transmission of Scientific Information is: (a) To delineate problems that may exist in this area; (b) To propose and facilitate specific working arrangements for and among operating networks; (c) To study the compatibility of frequencies, equipment and the problems of radio interference. Among the matters of concern to this working group are methods whereby tracking systems can obtain "acquisition data" in time to permit the tracking of space probes and satellites by the tracking equipment; problems of synchronizing observations on different networks; telemetry techniques; and the continuing need for optical, as well as radio, tracking. In connexion with point (c) above, the working group has not been called upon to assume responsibility for requesting frequency allocations, but it will work to ensure adequate and timely action through the existing organizations responsible for such activity (the International Telecommunication Union (ITC) and the International Radio Consultative Committee).

- 25. The task of the Working Group on Scientific Experiments is: (a) to evaluate scientific experiments submitted by countries which do not have facilities for launching space vehicles in order to determine the scientific desirability and feasibility of incorporating them in some form of space vehicle; (b) to draw attention to fields of research not receiving sufficient emphasis, which might profitably be investigated through the use of space vehicles; (c) to arrange for co-ordinated activities by participating countries.
- 26. The task of the Working Group on Data and Publications is to study the need for various forms of data exchange and for the publication of results, continuing in this connexion the use of existing world data centres and arranging for the continued operation of any recommended means for such publication and exchange.
- 27. The Committee further recommended that COSPAR should: (a) inform all participating committees engaged in rocket programmes about the purposes of a proposed series of "rocket weeks" requesting suggestions and proposals for scheduling such cooperative groups of firing, including specific suggestions for a first such week to be held in November 1959; (b) inform the same participating committees of the United States offer to undertake the launching into space of suitable and worthy experiments proposed by scientists of other countries.
- 28. At COSPAR's second plenary meeting, in March 1959, delegates from Australia, Canada, France, Japan, the Union of South Africa, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States reported on the programmes being carried out by their respective national scientific institutions.
- 29. The Soviet delegate, illustrating the status of space research in the Soviet Union, divided the primary scientific tasks of space research into three catefories: (a) the study of the phenomena occurring on the earth and in the upper atmosphere, and the influence of cosmic rays; (b) the properties of cosmic space as a medium in which man has to work and to travel; (c) the study of the phenomena on the planets and the stars which are impossible to observe from the earth's surface because of interference by the earth's atmosphere. The research in the upper parts of the atmosphere and in outer space was being continued by the Soviet Union. Rockets would be used as a routine means of studying the upper atmosphere; their number and the number of launching places would be increased. Satellite research would be continued including experiments of a biological and astrophysical nature.
- 30. At the same meeting, the United States delegate stated that, although the scientific planning was still in its preliminary stages, it was hoped that, in each of the next two years, between 75 and 100 sounding rockets might be launched in the United States as well as approximately one or two satellites or space probes every two months. In the rocket-sounding programme, emphasis would be placed on experiments relating to atmospheric structure; electric and magnetic fields; astronomy; energetic particles in the ionosphere. The satellite programme would emphasize atmospheres; ionospheres; astronomy; energetic particles; electrical and magnetic fields and gravitation. Space probes would investigate energetic particles, fields and ionospheres. In each case the objectives were set out in detail and the planned programme was outlined separately for the long-range and for the immediate future.

E. Other international organizations

- 31. The following international organizations are non-governmental, but they are not affiliated with the
- 32. The Council for International Organizations of Medical Sciences has a professed interest in the medical aspects of manned space flight, a subject whose research interest is also represented during the present preliminary stages by the International Union of the Physiological Sciences, represented in the ICSU and in COSPAR.
- 33. The union of International Engineering Organizations and several of its constituent organizations have a potential interest in the progress of space research.
- 34. The International Astronautical Federation was founded in 1950 by representatives of a number of national societies interested in rocketry and space exploration meeting in the first International Astronautical Congress. The constitution of the Federation, adopted in 1952, states that the purposes of the organization are to promote and stimulate the achievement of space flight as a peaceful objective, to secure the wide-spread dissemination of technical information, to stimulate public interest in space flight through the major media of mass communication, and to foster research and development.

II. INTER-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS

A. United Nations

- 35. As with other problems in international political co-operation and international economic and social collaboration among its Members, the ground on which the activities and resources of the United Nations in this field rest is the provision in Article 1, paragraph 4 of the Charter that the United Nations shall be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of their common ends, and the pledge, given by Members in Article 56, "to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement" of solutions of international economic, social, health, cultural and educational problems. The General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, and their subsidiary organs, as central organs for harmonizing the actions of Members, have developed international co-operative activities in the fields of scientific interest.
- 36. The Secretary-General has similarly used his functions to promote co-operation among Governments. In this he has acted sometimes on his own initiative and sometimes in response to requests from the General Assembly asking him to make studies, to take procedural steps or, in some cases, to make proposals.
- 37. There are other areas of United Nations activity to which developments in the peaceful uses of outer space are relevant. These lie in the domain of the promotion of the economic, social and cultural development of States and in the progressive development of international law. The Economic and Social Council is concerned with major inventions or technological improvements which affect existing patterns of economic and social activity. The progress anticipated in the near future in outer space in the fields of meteorology, climatology, telecommunications, transport, and possibly biology, is important from the standpoint of long-range economic policies.

- 38. One of the more important functions of the United Nations is to assist in co-ordinating the activities of the specialized agencies. In this capacity, through the Economic and Social Council, the Organization follows the work of the specialized agencies and assists in inter-agency co-ordination, at the Secretariat level, through the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination and its Preparatory Committee.
- 39. Of relevance also is the function of the General Assembly, under Article 13 of the Charter, to initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification.

B. United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization

40. In accordance with its constitutional responsibilities, UNESCO has, since its inception, undertaken as one of its major tasks the promotion of scientific co-operation between its Member States. In doing so, UNESCO has worked in the closest collaboration with the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). To this end the General Conference, at each of its sessions, has included in the regular programmes of the Organization a resolution relating to the promotion of scientific research through international co-operation. The relevant resolution in the programme for 1959 1960 (resolution 2.41, adopted by the General Conference at its tenth session (November-December 1958)), reads as follows:

"The Director-General is authorized, in cooperation with the United Nations, specialized agencies, and other appropriate international organizations and national and regional research bodies, on the advice of advisory committees when appropriate, to study scientific problems, the solution of which may help to improve the living conditions of mankind; to stimulate research on these problems; to promote when appropriate the adoption of international or regional measures for the development of such research, particularly in the following fields:

- "(a) General problems of scientific research; "(b) Humid tropical zone;
- " (\overline{c}) Marine sciences;
- "(d) Cell biology;
- "(e) Basic research in nuclear physics;
- "(f) New sources of energy;
- "(g) Numerical processing of information and electronic computation;
 - "(h) Interdisciplinary brain research;
 - "(i) Exploration of extra-terrestrial space.

"He is further authorized to participate in the activities of Member States, at their request, in scientific research in the fields of humid tropics research, marine sciences, basic research in nuclear physics and the numerical processing of information and electronic computation."

- 41. In the past, UNESCO has carried out a programme of this type either by drawing up practical proposals to be implemented by groups of member States, or by assuming direct responsibility for international scientific research projects.
- 42. In fulfilling its scientific functions, UNESCO resorts to a number of methods:
 - (a) Co-operation with international non-governmental scientific organizations. UNESCO has created, or sponsored the creation of international non-governmental organizations, such as the Union of International Engineering Organizations and the Council of International Medical Organizations. Special mention should be made of the collaboration between UNESCO and the ICSU. An agreement between the two organizations, signed in 1951, provides that they will assist each other with a view to facilitating the execution of their joint programme in the field of international scientific co-operation. and that they shall consult each other on all questions falling within their common sphere of interest. Thus, UNESCO has undertaken to grant the ICSU an annual subvention designed to facilitate the co-ordination of the activities of the Council's member organizations and to provide funds for such scientific projects included in the programme of the ICSU as are of international interest and in line with UNESCO's aims; the ICSU has undertaken to give specialized advice to UNESCO, at the latter's request, on the planning of its programme in the field of international scientific co-operation, and to advise UNESCO on its working relationship with the non-governmental organizations within its field. It has further undertaken to give particular attention to, and to develop to the utmost, those of its programme activities which come within the framework of UNESCO's basic programme.
 - (b) The organization of international scientific conferences on important new subjects which are not yet being dealt with by international governmental or non-governmental organizations and of symposia on specific subjects related to the implementation of UNESCO's programme.
 - (c) The establishment of a programme of coordinated research, surveys, training, etc., carried out with the help of special advisory committees composed of leading scientists and representatives of international scientific unions.
- 43. Mention should also be made of the Provisional Computation Centre established by a bilateral agreement concluded in September 1957 between UNESCO and the Italian Institute of Higher Mathematics (Istituto Nazionale di Alta Matematica), pending the establishment of an international computation centre on a permanent basis. The Provisional Centre has been created for a period of two years, but will automatically cease to exist when the inter-governmental Convention establishing an International Computation Centre comes into force.
- 44. The Provisional Centre commenced its activities in January 1958, in Rome. The main functions of the Centre are: (a) to ensure mutual assistance and international collaboration between existing bodies dealing with computation and information processing, in particular as regards scientific and technological studies; (b) to promote the exchange of information both on scientific matters and on the facilities existing in various countries; (c) to assist, on request, the countries which do not possess their own computation equipment (this assistance may consist either in undertaking certain computation tasks with the help of existing services or in giving advice for the creation of national centres); (d) to help international organizations which require its assistance; (e) to promote the training of specialized staff; (f) to act as a link between the users and the designers of computation equipment.

C. World Meteorological Organization

- 45. The objectives of the World Meteorological Organization (WMO), as stated in the World Meteorological Convention of 1947, are:
 - (a) To facilitate world-wide co-operation in the establishment of networks of stations for the making of meteorological observations or other geophysical observations related to meteorology, and to promote the establishment and maintenance of meteorological centres to provide meteorological services;
 - (b) To promote the establishment and maintenance of systems for the rapid exchange of weather information;
 - (c) To promote standardization of meteorological observations and to ensure the uniform publication of observations and statistics;
 - (d) To further the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, agriculture, and other human activities:
 - (e) To encourage research and training in meteorology and to assist in co-ordinating the international aspects of such research and training.
- 46. The organization acts as a clearing-house for the exchange of information among its members, and for the promotion of agreements among its members regarding both the routing and exceptional transmission of meteorological data. It is not, however, an operational organization. It operates neither weather stations nor communication facilities. Its recommendations and agreements are carried out only through the co-operation of the meteorological services of the member countries.
- 47. Since earth satellites represent a new observational tool of great potential value to meteorology, early in 1958 WMO began to consider its role in connexion with international co-operation and programmes in the peaceful uses of outer space.
- 48. The subject was placed on the agenda of the tenth session of the Executive Committee of WMO (held from 29 April to 17 May 1958). The Committee decided (resolution 14 (EC-X)) that WMO should accept responsibility for meteorological questions related to artificial satellites in so far as they call for action or study by a specialized agency of the United Nations. The Committee further requested the Chairman of its technical Commission for Aerology to nominate a rapporteur to study the meteorological aspects of artificial satellites and to report to the eleventh session of the Executive Committee on any possible activities which might legitimately be undertaken by WMO in this field.

- 49. The report, prepared by Mr. H. Wexler, was submitted in April 1959 to the Third World Meteorological Congress, which laid down (resolution T.9 (Cg-III)) the following policy: the organization would encourage the development and use of artificial satellites as a means of providing valuable meteorological data, and collaborate as required with the United Nations, other specialized agencies and scientific organizations, in particular COSPAR, in artificial-satellite programmes of interest to meteorologists or on which the advice of meteorologists would be useful.
- 50. The eleventh session of the Executive Committee, which took place immediately after the Third Congress, took note (resolution P.6 (EC-XI)) of the latter's policy and directives. It further arranged for an evaluation to be made of the above-mentioned report by the relevant technical commissions of WMO. The Executive Committee also set up a panel of experts, including representatives from its Commissions for Aerology and Synoptic Meteorology, with the following terms of reference: (a) to keep a continuing review of the possible uses of artificial satellites for meteorological purposes; (b) to make suggestions as to how WMO can best assist in these activities; (c) to present a report to the next session of the Executive Committee.
- 51. The organization is thus officially seized of the question of artificial satellites in so far as they have meteorological aspects and applications. It is understood that the members of WMO are commonly agreed that, while it is difficult to foresee all the aspects of the utilization of data from artificial satellites, satellites not only have opened the way to investigations of fundamental problems which are needed for the understanding of the general atmospheric circulation, the behaviour of rainfall patterns, and other phenomena of meteorological interest, but also offer an opportunity for the immediate operational use of observational data in forecasting throughout the world.
- 52. The organization has directed its attention to both these aspects. The meteorological research interest in space is high because observations from satellites could well furnish completely new types of data having an ultimate significance which cannot be foreseen. The operational aspect is also of great importance as it offers a practical means for obtaining otherwise unknown synoptic information, for example concerning cloud-cover over the uninhabited oceans. This is of particular significance in respect of the large oceanic areas of the Southern Hemisphere, but the resulting benefit would apply to the whole world. It would be possible, for instance, to conduct realistic studies of the exchange of energy between the polar regions-particularly the Antarctic continent-and the equatorial belts. This exchange necessarily affects the general circulation, with consequential effects to the north, no less than to the south, of the Equator.
- 53. Bearing in mind that the meteorological components will probably be only a portion of the total instrumentation in any particular satellite, the meteorological utility could well be examined against the background of the over-all daily observational programme which has been organized by the members of WMO. As an example, mention can be made of the fact that several hundred radiosonde observations are made each day, at an annual cost running into millions of dollars. An effective meteorological design related to their research and synoptic use could thus strongly - support a co-ordinated programme of research in other directions.

- 54. From a practical point of view, the operational use of satellite weather data would require coordinated facilities, for interrogating the satellites and rapidly reducing the data to a form amenable for use in synoptic meteorology, and for the systematic world-wide exchange of the data for immediate use.
- 55. The interrogating stations need not be designed solely for meteorological purposes. The existing space-vehicle tracking stations could be so utilized with a little co-ordination, but it would probably be necessary to institute an additional number related to the extent of the over-all satellite programme which could be supported at any one time. Consideration could be given to the question whether it would not be a natural extension of WMO's present responsibilities for it to take part in the planning of the space-vehicle tracking stations and in the design of the necessary computational practices and techniques for the reduction of the data to amenable forms for practical use. The existing WMO concern and responsibility in the design of codes for the world-wide exchange of data and the co-ordination of meteorological telecommunications could readily be extended to deal with satellite data.

D. International Telecommunication Union

56. The International Telecommunication Union (ITU) is the body responsible for the international co-ordination and rational use of all forms of telecommunications by landline, submarine cable or radio means. It is advised by two technical committees, the International Telegraph and Telephone Consultative Committee and the International Radio Consultative Committee (CCIR), which deal with line and radio problems respectively. In the field of radio communication, ITU drafts regulations which, among other things, define the conditions, procedure and standards for all applications of radio to the communication of intelligence in any form, including telegraphy, telephone, picture transmission, broadcasting television, radar, navigational aids, and scientific uses such as radio astronomy.

International control of radio transmission: the technical problem

57. Radio communication involves the radiation of electromagnetic waves, one of the important characteristics of which is their frequencies. Different bands of frequencies are allotted for different services within a spectrum which has rapidly become overcrowded as the applications of radio have increased, and this is in spite of the fact that, for the present and in the foreseeable future, the radio spectrum covers the range of 10 kilocycles per second to 3 million megacycles per second. It is thus necessary for all users to conform to very strict rules regarding the area within the band which they may use for their transmissions. Radio transmissions, and the codes and procedure used in connexion therewith, are subject to the control of national administrations, who, as members or associate members of ITU, are allotted precise radio frequencies and may operate transmissions only within their allotment. Consequently, the basic function of ITU is to establish international regulations and codes of operation, and to act as the world agent for the equitable and effective distribution of radio frequencies to all users. These regulations and frequency allocations are subject to adjustments from time to time as may be required, owing to changing conditions or as a result of the improvement of radio techniques. Among the problems facing engineers are the vagaries in the propagation of radio waves around the earth, interference due to atmospheric disturbances, and variations in the troposphere (lower atmosphere) and ionosphere (upper atmosphere) through which the waves travel. The ionosphere, in particular, is subject to disturbance due to solar activity, with the consequent dislocation of terrestrial radio transmissions. It is obvious, therefore, that any launching of rockets or earth satellites which carry radio transmitters must be of concern to all persons connected with telecommunications, since these transmitters are potential sources of further interference with other terrestrial users of the radio spectrum. Over the past year many statements have been made, and there is considerable documentation about the pollution of the radio spectrum and the consequent difficulties for world communications.

58. As an indication of the future dangers that could be expected for the telecommunication services, it is easily possible for a satellite equipped with an effective radio transmitter to be supplied with batteries charged by solar radiation to continue in orbit for many decades. This could seriously interfere with communications that operate on the same frequency or adjacent frequencies to that used by the satellite for its transmission during its travel around the earth every hundred-odd minutes. But it is well to remember that it is explicit in the ITU regulations that no such avoidable interference may be caused.

59. According to the 1947 Convention drawn up at Atlantic City, ITU (a) acts as the general agent for the allocation of radio frequencies; (b) promotes the development of technical facilities by establishing standards and operating rules in order to improve telecommunication services; and (c) harmonizes the activities of nations for the attainment of these ends. To implement this work, the Convention set up an eleven-member International Frequency Registration Board, whose duties are to record the frequencies allocated by members to users in accordance with the provisions in the Radio Regulations and to furnish advice regarding the maximum practicable number of radio channels in those portions of the spectrum where harmful interference may occur. To assist it in this aspect of its work, ITU has also the advice of CCIR. This is a scientific body which meets every three years to consider various technical radio questions and to make recommendations for action either by its national members or by ITU. Further, CCIR has adopted the practice, in recent years, of calling upon URSI for its advice. This is a strictly non-political body which fosters international research in scientific radio, and brings a detached scientific approach to any radio problem including those that might in application have a political coloration. It is possible, or even likely, that COSPAR, if it continues in being, could similarly act in an advisory capacity in collaboration with URSI.

60. At the meeting held by CCIR at Los Angeles in April 1959, a recommendation concerning the allocation of frequencies to transmitters on space vehicles was made; this will be presented during the Administrative Radio Conference of ITU, which will open on 17 August 1959 at Geneva. In its working paper presented to the Ad Hoc Committee, ITU indicates that the Conference agenda will also carry the item "Communications with outer space". Whether this will necessitate the amendment of the 1947 Convention remains to be seen. There appears to be no doubt, however, that efforts will be made for the reallocation of the radio spectrum to provide special bands for communications with and between locations in space.

The International Radio Consultative Committee and its recommendations

61. As already mentioned, the Committee meets in Plenary Assembly at intervals of about three years to consider questions that had been referred to one or more of fourteen study groups dealing with specific subjects. Recommendations adopted at its plenary meetings are submitted to ITU as a basis for action. Some technical and frequency problems are, however, settled by direct agreement at CCIR level. The very nature of radio communication makes mutual international agreement on frequency allocation essential. The Committee makes a study of the propagation of radio waves and reception characteristics in different parts of the world to enable it to recommend to ITU the best frequencies for the various services, from the point of view of reliability and freedom from interference. Atmospheric disturbances have been analysed and an atlas of thunderstorm activity prepared to facilitate the planning of world-wide radio communication systems.

62. In recent years frequencies had been assigned to radio astronomers, and their need for the exclusive use of certain bands in the radio spectrum has had to be recognized. The Committee has recommended that ITU should afford complete protection to the frequencies used in radio astronomy: (a) molecular or atomic nuclear frequencies, particularly in the hydrogen line of the spectrum; (b) bands allocated for standard frequency and time-signal transmissions; and (c) seven other frequency bands that needed to be kept clear of man-made interference. The case of radio astronomy has thus established a precedent for the allocation and protection of frequency bands for a specific scientific purpose.

63. In the case of space research, COSPAR has already recommended that special frequencies should be assigned, and CCIR, at its Plenary Assembly held at Los Angeles in April 1959, considered the technical aspects of the matter. In a detailed technical report entitled "Factors Affecting the Selection of Frequencies for Telecommunication with and between Space Vehicles" (document 662), the relevant requirements are considered. In some cases, it is desired to use radio waves which will be deviated in the transmission through the ionosphere and troposphere, so that the characteristics of these regions can be studied by tracking signals received from satellites in known positions. In some other cases, it is desired to use frequencies for which the atmosphere is guite transparent, so that the waves pursue a straight-line trajectory between the space vehicle and the receiver. In a third case, frequencies are required for intercommunication between the space vehicle and the receiver. Finally, frequencies are required for intercommunication between space vehicles under conditions that the corresponding waves may not be receivable at the earth's surface and so cause no interference with world communications using the same frequencies.

- 64. These brief comments serve to illustrate the fact that the allocation of frequencies for use in communications with and between space vehicles is a matter that requires some considerable study of the technical problems involved.
- 65. The Los Angeles Plenary Assembly of CCIR made recommendations and adopted the following resolutions: "Selection of Frequencies used in Telecommunication with and between Artificial Earth Satellites and other Space Vehicles" (document 531); "Influence of the Troposphere on Frequencies used for Telecommunication with and between Space Vehicles" (document 530); and "Effects of the Ionosphere on Radio Waves for Telecommunication with and between Space Vehicles beyond the Lower Atmosphere" (document 538).
- 66. In addition to making these recommendations and resolutions, CCIR set up a new study group to study the technical questions regarding systems of telecommunications with and between locations in space. While the work of the study group will produce more specific recommendations as to what frequencies are appropriate for space communications, it seems likely that the progress of space science will necessitate ITU having to take early action in allotting frequencies for use in space vehicles, even if these are only available on a temporary basis.

E. International Civil Aviation Organization

- 67. The objects of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) are to develop the principles and techniques of international air navigation and to foster the planning and development of international air transport so as to ensure the safe and orderly growth of international civil aviation throughout the world.
- 68. While ICAO has not so far carried out any specific activity directly related to the peaceful uses of outer space, a number of problems of outer space fall within the field of interest of the Organization.
- 69. The Convention on international civil aviation, concluded at Chicago on 7 December 1944, recognizes the sovereignty of each State over the air space above its territory, but includes no definition of air space. Such a definition would determine the scope of application of that Convention as well as of ICAO's sphere of action. Furthermore, while the subject of the Convention is "aircraft", a definition of "aircraft" is not given therein. The Organization has adopted technical annexes to the Convention in which aircraft is defined as "any machine that can derive support in the atmosphere from the reactions of the air".
- 70. The launching of vehicles into outer space involves their passage through air space; such vehicles may subsequently re-enter air space. At the national level, the necessary co-operation between the responsible agencies has already been developed. At the international level, an equal degree of co-operation will be required in order to ensure the safety of air navigation during the time of launching or of re-entry of space craft through space used by aircraft.
- 71. One of the objects of ICAO is to "meet the needs of the peoples of the world for safe, regular, efficient and economical air transport". Technical developments may advance to the point where space vehicles will be used for transport of mail and other goods, and even of persons. Evidently, ICAO would have an interest in any system regulating the two activities.

72. In February 1959, the Council of ICAO decided to bring to the attention of the Assembly of the organization, due to meet on 16 June 1959, a suggestion made to the Council that a study be made of the legal status of outer space and the regulation of the use of space craft, particularly with reference to the traffic of civil aircraft in air space. However, since the question relating to outer space is under special consideration by the United Nations, the Council has pointed out that any action by ICAO on the subject should take into account the need for co-ordination with the deliberations of the United Nations,

F. International Atomic Energy Agency

73. No work is contemplated by IAEA in the field of outer space in the immediate future. However, IAEA has an interest in the nuclear technology of outer space and might advise on its health and safety aspects.

G. World Health Organization

74. WHO is not now doing any work specific to outer space nor does it contemplate doing so in the immediate future. The organization can, however, be most useful to any outer space programme in stimulating research, publishing medical findings and holding symposia and seminars pertinent to medical or health problems associated with space exploration and travel.

H. Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization

75. The Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO) has at present no programmes in the field of outer space. However, in view of its over-all responsibilities for international shipping matters, particularly the problems of safety at sea, navigation and improved communications, it can be expected to become associated with outer space developments affecting these responsibilities.

Part II

Paragraph 1 (b) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII)

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Mandate of the Committee

1. The task of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space under paragraph 1(b) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII) is to report on:

"The area of international co-operation and programmes in the peaceful uses of outer space which could appropriately be undertaken under United Nations auspices to the benefit of States irrespective of the state of their economic or scientific development, taking into account the following proposals, inter alia:

"(i) Continuation on a permanent basis of the outer space research now being carried on within the framework of the International Geophysical Year;

- "(ii) Organization of the mutual exchange and dissemination of information on outer space research;
- "(iii) Co-ordination of national research programmes for the study of outer space, and the rendering of all possible assistance and help towards their realization."
- 2. In preparing this report, the Committee has reviewed the present position and trends in peaceful space activities from a scientific and technical point of view. Drawing on the experience of its members in international scientific co-ordination, it has then analysed the present methods and organs for co-operation in the use of outer space and considered areas of present and future need for co-operation.
- 3. The Committee completed its task by specifying areas in which co-operation might appropriately be undertaken under the auspices of the United Nations.

B. Brief history

- 4. Man's interest in space is age-old. Until the last decade, however, his inquiries into the properties and objects of outer space have been confined to observations and measurements made from the surface of the earth or near that level. Mountain-top observatories, aircraft and balloons served in the past to sharpen the scientist's measurements, but it remained for the high altitude rocket to open the domains of outer space to direct observation without the obscuring and distorting effect of the earth's atmosphere.
- 5. Rocket exploration of the upper atmosphere began in 1945. Since then both the development of rocket vehicles and of the techniques for making measurements by rocket-borne instruments have advanced rapidly. The year 1957 saw the advent of man-made satellites circulating around the earth in the adjoining space, and in 1959 vehicles were launched which passed out of the area predominantly controlled by the earth's gravitation to become new planets circulating around the sun. It is now possible to explore the earth's atmosphere with many kinds of instruments to all heights, to place instrumented satellites above the atmosphere, and to probe the depths of space between the planets with automatically operating scientific equipment. Numerous facilities with varying capacities for the launching of scientific research rockets exist around the world, and many countries are expanding their activities in rocket research.
- 6. Looking into the future, and bearing in mind the rapid development during the past decade, it seems possible now to make reasonably realistic forecasts about expected developments valid for the next two to four years. Admittedly, present views into the future must be subject to continuous review and extension as new lines of thought are developed on the basis of technological achievements.

C. Problems that face us

7. In space activities, scientific and technological, there has been a great surge forward which opens new perspectives for human progress. Even more than in astronomy, they inherently ignore national boundaries. Space activities must to a large extent be an effort of Planet Earth as a whole. Along with the opportunities in prospect for all peoples in the spaceage, there are problems which face us in arranging for these advances in science and technology on a global scale.

- 8. Means must be found to utilize scientific and technical talent wherever it may exist, either in connexion with space experiments and undertakings themselves or in the invaluable supporting research and activities which must go along with them. Means must be found for co-ordination and facilitation of the activities of the scientific community. A wide-spread problem is the encouragement and support of space activities nationally commensurate with the obvious international and popular interest. For some aspects the question of international financial support becomes important and would be on an unusually high scale compared with most previous international undertakings in science and technology.
- 9. Coming sooner than many realize are problems connected with effectively taking advantage of the practical applications of space science, some of which, like weather, are already over the horizon while others will surely rise in the near future.
- 10. The Committee recognizes that the great forward surge of space activities may also tend to widen the gap between the technologically advanced nations actively launching vehicles into space and other nations watching and wishing to take part in space activities, but feeling unable to do so. The problem is to make available and to exploit the possibilities that exist for participation by nations at all levels of development, from supporting research or operation of tracking stations to launching small vehicles or joining with others in more advanced undertakings. A related problem lies in arranging the sharing of basic scientific information and topical data so that wide-spread participation is possible.
- 11. The Committee feels strongly that the conduct of space activities must be effectively open and orderly. It is therefore important to find means for having peaceful space activities clearly announced right from the earliest stages and to make such activities known both to scientific specialists and to the world at large in an efficient manner. A determined attack on these problems is urgent, because the development of space activities is advancing at a staggering rate.
- 12. Finally, there is the over-all question of whether man's advancement in outer space will redound to his benefit. Here man's intent is of overriding importance, a point which was recognized during discussions at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, when the resolution which established the Committee was adopted. The Committee has borne in mind throughout the fact that other organs within the United Nations have been given the important tasks of lessening international friction, encouraging mutual trust and confidence and facilitating progress on disarmament.

D. References to conclusions

13. The following sections of this report contain numerous specific conclusions. The Committee considered the desirability of restating these conclusions explicitly in a final section, but found that to do so would require considerable repetition of the text. The following section index calls attention to these conclusions:

	Paragraphs in part II
Open and orderly conduct of space activities	7-12, 121-131

14. Attention is also drawn to the general conclusions given at the end of the report.

II. SPACE ACTIVITIES

- 15. At the outset it is desirable to emphasize that scientific work in outer space embraces many disciplines involving both pure research and applied research. In the area of pure science, the primary objective is the advancement of knowledge of the environment in which the earth moves, and later the extension of this knowledge to other parts of the solar system, and even further afield. In the applied and more technological area there are two phases:
- (a) The development of space vehicles of a great variety of sizes and uses;
- (b) The use of these vehicles to advance applied science in such fields as meteorology and communication.
- 16. The development of vehicles which make possible the scientific study of outer space has, to a large extent, been the outcome of military objectives and therefore problems of national security have prohibited the free exchange of information. Nevertheless, the technology of these vehicles has developed along parallel lines in several countries and it may be stated that the problems are now more those of engineering than of science. In view of this, the Technical Committee has not considered it necessary to deliberate on the vehicles used for the exploration of outer space, but has started with the premise that these are available even though the larger vehicles are at present only available to countries whose industrial, technological and, especially, financial resources make them possible.
- 17. Although great resources are required to construct a space vehicle of extreme range, this does not in any way mean that scientific activities in space are limited only to large countries. Knowledge of the physical state of the upper atmosphere (the exact limits of which cannot be defined) at levels inaccessible to aircraft and balloons is far from satisfactory. Between the range attainable by aircraft and balloons and the lowest practicable satellite level, comparatively inexpensive rockets can be used for the conduct of scientific experiments, and many countries should be able to participate in the experiments. The feasibility of such experiments has been well demonstrated by the excellent work carried out by Australian, Canadian, French, Japanese, Soviet, United Kingdom and United States scientists, who have made valuable contributions quite apart from the more spectacular results of satellites and space probes.

A. Scientific investigations

- 18. The kinds of measurements made in space science programmes are mostly similar to, or developments of, those made from balloons or sounding rockets in the past several years. In this area of advancing space technology, more complex measurements in the lower atmosphere can be made. The regions accessible to measurement are now being extended to the earth's outer atmosphere, into interplanetary space, to the moon and planets and the sun. The simple experiments of today will soon develop into work with complex satellite or space observatories. Some of the aims of space investigations are to increase our knowledge by direct or improved observation of the following:
- (a) The atmospheres of the earth, sun and planets, as well as possible vestiges of an atmosphere on the moon, including the electrically conducting regions or ionospheres in these atmospheres;
- (b) Electric, magnetic, and gravitational forces throughout space in the solar system, whose strength and properties have hithertoonly been inferred by very indirect reasoning;
- (c) Diluted gas and scattered dust particles in space between the planets and within comets;
- (d) Electrified particles, in some cases emanating from the sun, and always influenced by electric and magnetic forces within the solar system; such particles include those producing the polar auroras, those stored in the radiation belts in the vicinity of the earth, and the very energetic cosmic rays;
- (e) The details of the external form and the internal composition of the earth, planets, and moon;
- (f) Conceivable living organisms outside the earth, either on the surfaces of other planets or elsewhere;
- (g) Stellar and galactic objects and phenomena. Special problems, such as the verification of certain conclusions from Einstein's general theory of relativity, are also among the objectives of space experiments.
- 19. These objectives are attainable by series of individual experiments, each with its special instruments, especially designed and tested to withstand the rigours of launching and of the space environment. A whole new technology is involved in the systems for taking the results of the experiments and transmitting them back to earth.

- 20. The first use of earth satellites and space probes was made under the auspices of the IGY. The IGY enterprise was sponsored by the ICSU, a non-governmental body, and was carried out through the cooperation of national scientific groups in some sixty-six countries, each of which decided on its scientific programme and arranged for its support. Many countries had programmes in the IGY category "Rockets and Satellites". As a means of continuing this kind of voluntary international co-ordination and cooperation, the ICSU has established COSPAR.
- 21. It is too early in the space age to envisage all, or even the ultimately most important, applications of space research; however, experience from other areas of scientific inquiry started or spurred by some marked scientific or technological advance gives considerable assurance that the findings of space science will have a strong influence on the future of mankind.

B. Applications furthering human welfare

- 22. As a result of these scientific investigations, it can be expected that there will be many developments leading to practical applications which in turn will add materially to the comfort and well-being of the world at large. A few of the possible applications of space technology are now coming into focus and are at present in the earliest stages of development. How and when these applications will mature will depend on many factors which cannot now be predicted. Some of the applications which are now foreseen are: the collection of data, particularly for immediate meteorological purposes; the improvement of long-distance radio communication; a means of improving man's view of the size and shape of the earth and of the distribution of land masses and water; and an all-weather global navigational system.
- 23. These and other applications of satellites that develop as a result of advancing technology will not become feasible immediately, but must necessarily depend upon an orderly sequence of technological developments. It must be realized, however, that the time when these applications will become available depends on many other factors over which the scientist can exercise no control.

C. Improvement of weather forecasting

- 24. Historically, meteorologists had to rely first on observations that could be made on the ground. Over the years, a meteorological network has been established using ground stations and many types of vehicles ranging from ships and aircraft to balloons. Despite the geographical extension of this network into many parts of the world, it is still inadequate. The earth is covered by such extensive regions of water, ice, and desert that only about one-fifth of the atmosphere is under regular observation, and wide areas of storms or other extremes of weather remain inadequately observed until they arrive at populated areas. Vertically, balloons rarely reach higher than 30 kilometres, and they ascend slowly, drifting away from the observation station to inconvenient distances.
- 25. Meteorological rockets ascending vertically can be used for routine measurement of pressures, temperatures and humidity. This can be done inexpensively up to heights of 60 kilometres. Rockets can also be made to eject small bits of metal foil or other good targets for radar and in this way permit measurement - of wind direction and speed up to as much as 45 kilometres in height. Rockets carrying cameras can be used to photograph cloud areas from above, and thus aid in the detection of squalls, hurricanes, typhoons and other large cloud formations.

- 26. In a different way, satellites circulating in closed orbits around the earth will soon provide meteorologists with another tool for surveying the large inadequately observed parts of the globe. Thus man will obtain a downward look at clouds, and with a proper distribution of such satellites, it should be possible to keep track of each major storm, to note the birth of new storms and rain areas, and the death of old ones.
- 27. Some of the earth satellite techniques required for this extension of the capabilities of meteorological systems may be available within a few years; others may require a development period of over a decade. An ultimate system to accomplish regular collection of meteorological data on a global basis might make use of perhaps six to eight satellites in 800-to-1,600-kilometre-altitude polar orbits as well as several satellites in 35,000-kilometre-altitude equatorial orbits.
- 28. Future progress in weather forecasting over longer periods than a few days depends on the delineation of large-scale features of weather over the globe, as distinct from local studies in limited areas. Another significant application is the comparison between the heat received from the sun and that reflected or radiated from the earth into space. Such satellite measurements may assist in anticipating climatic changes and may possibly contribute to the development of new systems of long-range weather forecasting.
- 29. The use of meteorological satellite systems would not, of course, replace other observation techniques. These, with sounding rockets important among them, would continue to be needed to provide detailed knowledge of the structure of the atmosphere at lower altitudes. The total quantity of data collected would be tremendous and, since the data would have to be used within a few hours, there would be a requirement for new techniques for interpretation and utilization. In this connexion it may be appropriate to suggest that the International Computation Centre at Rome, established with the assistance of UNESCO, is concerned with precisely such problems.
- 30. A foreseeable benefit would be to extend weather forecasting capabilities from the present limit of days to periods of several weeks and beyond. No less important than the obvious practical assistance to weather forecasting will be the contribution to basic knowledge of the workings of the atmosphere which may assist in anticipating climatic changes. Ultimately these advances should afford direct benefits to agriculture, industry and transportation.

D. Improvement of radio communications

31. Currently available means of world-wide communications suffer from severe limitations of capacity. For example, the present transatlantic cables are expected to be saturated by 1962. Owing to the anticipated increase in messages during the coming decade, a new cable with several times the capacity of the present ones will be saturated by the time it is available.

- 32. Apart from enclosed cables, world-wide communications depend on the presence of reflecting regions in the high atmosphere which permit radio waves to be sent from one part of the world to another, despite the obstacle presented by the curvature of the earth. Nature has provided such reflecting regions in the high levels of the atmosphere, from 70 kilometres upwards, where free electric charges are created when the sun shines on the air. However, these natural reflecting layers are only useful on certain radio wave-lengths and are ineffective on others. Since they are often disturbed by electromagnetic processes on the sun and by polar auroras, their properties are erratic at certain times and places which can only be anticipated in part.
- 33. In view of these circumstances, it has become desirable to search for new means of economical world communications; a promising approach to a truly world-wide system is the use of earth satellites as passive reflectors or active repeaters.
- 34. In the case of the passive reflector, an antenna using much shorter waves will beam a powerful signal at the satellite, which will reflect it in such a manner that it may be received by suitable equipment anywhere within reach, or will reflect the signal in specific directions. Such a satellite might be used simultaneously by many, subject only to allocation of non-interfering frequencies. An operational system might involve some twenty-five satellites together with extensive ground equipment.
- 35. The technique of using active repeaters in satellites will involve directing a signal to a satellite, which in turn will rebroadcast it to the ground. Rebroadcasting may be accomplished instantaneously or with suitable delay until the satellite has moved into a good position relative to the intended receiver. Three such satellites spaced 120 degrees apart in 35,000-kilometre-altitude orbits at the equator might comprise a useful system.
- 36. Each of the two techniques appears to have advantages and disadvantages. Passive reflector systems involve simple satellites, but appear to require relatively large numbers and involve heavy requirements for ground transmitting and receiving equipment. Active repeater systems appear to require fewer satellites and reduced ground equipment; however, they would be susceptible to defective operation, have a limited frequency range, and require a continuing power supply on board.
- 37. Communications satellites are currently in a very early stage of development. Their technical aspects remain to be explored, as does the full extent of their economic and other implications. However, the substantial increase in the amount of information that may be transmitted internationally in a given interval of time may ultimately have a major impact on the relations of countries throughout the world.
- 38. It should be noted that preliminary experiments conducted at moderate cost with vertically ascending rockets give ample scope for important contributions from scientists in many countries to this technical problem.

E. Geodetic and mapping satellites

39. Geodetic and mapping satellites offer the means of improving man's view of the size and shape of the earth and the distribution of land masses and water. Optical observation of geodetic satellites has the potentiality of yielding the observer's location to less than 30 metres, while mapping satellites provide a means for charting the little-explored regions of the world. Improved data on geographical details of the earth may be of economic as well as scientific significance.

F. Navigation satellite

40. The navigation satellite may provide the basis for an all-weather long-range navigation system for surface vehicles and aircraft. With the use of suitable ranges of frequencies for transmission, it would be possible to establish positions with great precision irrespective of the prevailing weather. At the present time, there is no such world-wide all-weather system of navigation.

G. Manned space flight and exploration

- 41. Initial interest in man's role in space has been concerned with the utilization of his unique characteristics which allow him to absorb a wide variety of observation, to remember and to make decisions in a way that cannot be duplicated by machines. Such human qualities as persistence, resourcefulness and the relative reliability of the complex human system further indicate the need for man's inclusion in the development of space flight and exploration.
- 42. Although unmanned vehicles will have preceded man in the exploration of space, perhaps effecting landings on the moon, penetrating interplanetary space, and at least approaching the planets, the addition of man to these efforts will constitute a dramatic innovation, one which is only in part "scientific" in purpose and only in a special sense a "practical" application of space vehicles. The motivation of manned space exploration goes deeper than any scientific and other practical results. Apparent throughout man's history is a basic urge to discover and to explore, to go where no man has gone before, to go everywhere man has the means of going. As it becomes possible for man to explore outer space, he can confidently be expected to do so.
- 43. The first demonstrations of manned space flight can be expected in the near future, probably in the form of experiments with rockets followed by relatively simple manned orbital vehicles. Looking well beyond such initial efforts, it is possible to foresee the initiation of true manned exploration of space, that is, the use of space vehicles to enable man to reach, investigate and return from the moon, interplanetary space, and ultimately at least the near planets. There does not appear to be any foreseeable prospect of manned exploration of interstellar space.
- 44. Although no insuperable problems have yet been identified, the scientific and technical problems of true manned space exploration are substantial, and the period required for full perfection of the necessary vehicles, equipment instrumentation and techniques will be measured in terms of decades rather than years.

III. TOOLS FOR SPACE ACTIVITIES

45. The development of vehicles for scientific activities in outer space is the key to executing a successful space programme. Over the centuries, man has accumulated a good deal of knowledge about his planet, the solar system and the universe, but any real penetration of space must still await the development of adequate vehicles. In terms of the mission to be accomplished by these vehicles, they can be classified as follows: (a) sounding rockets; (b) earth satellites; and (c) deep space probes.

A. Sounding rockets

- 46. Rocket exploration of the atmosphere began in 1945. Since then both the development of rocket vehicles and of the techniques for making measurements by rocket-borne instruments has advanced rapidly.
- 47. The phrase "sounding rockets" designates a rocket research vehicle that is used to sound the upper atmosphere, in much the same sense that the mariner sounds the ocean depths or the meteorologist uses sounding balloons for observations in the lower atmosphere. There exists a wide variety of sounding rockets; some can reach heights of only tens of kilometres, while others reach to hundreds or even thousands of kilometres. In an effort to distinguish between sounding rockets and the deep space probe to be discussed below, an arbitrary definition is adopted as follows: a sounding rocket is a vehicle launched vertically or nearly vertically that reaches an altitude of no more than one earth's radius, or approximately 6,000 kilometres.
- 48. This definition is somewhat arbitrary, though not completely so. There are advantages to this definition in that vehicles to attain heights greater than about one earth's radius are substantially more expensive than those designed for lesser heights. Thus, one may anticipate the participation of many countries in sounding rocket programmes, whereas participation in the launching of deep space probes will probably be limited for economic reasons. Similarly, a sounding rocket operation can generally be carried out entirely within the domains of a single country.
- 49. With present technology, the state of the upper atmosphere can be studied by means less expensive than rockets, up to heights of about 30 kilometres. Relatively inexpensive sounding rocket experiments may start from this level and extend upwards. Satellites, as has been noted, cannot cover the intermediate levels between the 30 kilometres mentioned previously and the lowest practical satellite orbits of about 200 kilometres, yet knowledge of the physical state of the atmosphere at these levels is far from satisfactory.
- 50. Whereas we have much to learn about the methods and techniques of fully exploiting satellite and space probles, sounding rocket technology is now at the stage of becoming fully developed.

B. Earth satellites

- 51. An earth satellite is simply a man-made moon revolving about the earth. The work of the past year or two has already shown the possibilities of artificial earth satellites as a new technique for exploring the physical characteristics of the earth's atmosphere and the space beyond.
- 52. When launched in a satisfactory manner as to speed and direction, these satellites travel in elliptical orbits around the earth at heights which may range - from a few hundred to many thousands of kilometres. Such a satellite forms a vehicle which may house a number of scientific instruments, and can carry out a number of functions simultaneously.

- 53. The data associated with the experiments can be obtained from a satellite in three ways: (a) by transmission directly to the earth by radio communication; (b) through storage in a suitable recorder which can be interrogated by radio command when the satellite is in a suitable position relative to a receiving station; or (c) eventually, through physical recovery of records from satellites that are returned to the earth.
- 54. In the case of (a), it is necessary to have suitable receiving stations deployed over the earth to collect the information at various points as the satellite travels round its trajectory. In the case of (b), although the stored information can be extracted when required, it is still necessary to have a network of tracking stations over the earth, in order to establish the positions of the satellite at the times the various scientific observations were made.
- 55. The orientation of the orbit of the satellite is predetermined by the launching conditions. When set at an appropriate angle to the meridian, this trajectory may either cover the entire surface of the earth as it rotates as it would in passing over the poles, or it may be confined to a relatively small zone about the equator. For different investigations, different orbital trajectories may be required and careful planning on an international scale is required to make the best use of this expensive type of technique.
- 56. Among the space vehicle operational techniques yet to be perfected are those related to the re-entry and recovery of vehicles. At this time, not all the problems associated with this type of operation can be fully evaluated, but because of the nature of the problem, it may be desirable to consider ways and means of minimizing the possibility of accidents.

C. Space probes

- 57. A space probe is defined as an exploratory vehicle, not an earth satellite, that goes into space beyond one earth's radius from the surface of the earth. Such vehicles can be instrumented for numerous important scientific investigations.
- 58. By launching a payload at a sufficiently great speed, a rocket can be used to project scientific instruments into interplanetary space. If the aim of such a space probe is simply to make measurements deep in space, far from earth without any particular reference to any celestial body such as a moon or planet, then it suffices to project the object at a sufficiently great speed in a general outward direction. On such a mission, control mechanisms can be kept at a minimum. On the other hand if, for example, it is desired to project the object close to the moon or close to Venus, then exacting control and timing requirements must be met.

D. Network of observing stations

59. Ground observing stations are essential to the successful conduct of any space activity involving satellites or space probes. The primary functions of such stations are: (a) tracking the space vehicle by radio, radar and optical methods, and (b) receiving and recording the radio signals transmitted from the vehicle. These signals contain in coded form the observational measurements made in the vehicle: this is called telemetry. Some stations may be used to give instructions by radio to the vehicle. In general, a world-wide network of stations is needed, although in some cases only a small number may be required. For sounding rocket experiments, for instance, usually only a single station or close-spaced group of stations is needed.

- 60. Tracking is done by radio techniques for satellites while they transmit. Optical and radar techniques can be employed throughout the life of a satellite. High accuracy of position and time are essential to allow the orbit to be determined well enough to predict future positions for many days in advance. Prompt reporting of tracking observations to computation centres, rapid calculations, and prompt dissemination of prediction information are requirements for an effective tracking network. Customarily, all available observations are used for calculations intended to improve subsequent predictions, while only the most precise tracking observations are used for determination of the definitive orbit needed in interpreting the scientific experiments which may be carried on the satellite.
- 61. Radio is almost the only way to track space probes. When these are at large distances from the earth, the signals are inevitably very weak and require the use of large radio telescopes such as those used in radio astronomy for detection. However, few stations are needed in the tracking network for such experiments because at great distances the vehicle is observable from about half of the earth.
- 62. Telemetering signals are commonly recorded at the same stations which do radio tracking. For space probes this is almost essential because of the extreme sensitivity of receiving equipment needed for both purposes. However, for satellite experiments, telemetry may be recorded easily with radio receivers without the complicated arrangements for measuring the angular position of the radio transmitter. For many experiments, more telemetry stations are needed than tracking stations.
- 63. The operation of tracking and telemetry equipment in this network of ground stations has been an important way in which many countries have participated in space science beginning with the International Geophysical Year. Some countries have also used tracking-type observations of satellite radio transmissions to make significant findings about the earth's ionosphere. No single country extends over a sufficient range of latitude and longitude to be able to track earth satellites adequately from its own stations. Earth satellite experiments have been wholly dependent upon international co-operation. This has been accomplished within the IGY-type framework. Necessary improvements and extensions can be handled within the existing framework.
- 64. Radio transmissions from satellites and space probes are the only practical way for the scientist to get information on experiments in progress; they also are the only practical way to track the course of the vehicle, at least until the orbit or trajectory is well determined. Thus the availability of radio frequencies which will not be interfered with by terrestrial radio transmissions is a matter of life and death to the progress of space activities. This is one of the important matters requiring international action in the field of space. The prospective number of satellites and space probes to be launched in the next few years is in the hundreds.

IV. SUPPORTING RESEARCH

- 65. Many research activities not directly connected with actual flights of sounding rockets, satellites and space probes are essential to the progress of space science and technology. A large portion of scientific research in the field of extra-terrestrial space is done on the ground either at sea level or in high mountains or with the help of balloons up to the altitude of about thirty kilometres. In addition, there are important studies to be done in the laboratory before or after the experiments using space vehicles; such studies may be theoretical or experimental. Contributions in these areas of research have been made in a large number of countries in recent years. In the future, the prospering of space science will continue to depend heavily on work done in countries and by groups of scientists that may not require direct access to space vehicles.
- 66. Examples of supporting research areas and topics would include the following:
- A. Research which may lead to new or improved equipment to be flown in space vehicles

This includes:

- (a) Instrument components: power supplies, telemetres, light sources, image intensifiers, photon counters, photomultipliers, micro-electronics;
- (b) Instruments: magnetometres, spectrometres, pressure gauges, ion probes;
 - (c) Materials: photosensitive, heat resistant;
- (d) Environmental tests: acceleration effects, radiation effects, vibrational effects;
- (e) Biological: life support systems, foods, removal of gases and poisons;
- (f) Psychological: confinement, effects of sensory deprivation.
- B. Research which may lead to more nearly optimum trajectories or knowledge of orbits

This includes:

- (a) Aerodynamics;
- (b) Propulsion: methods, including plasma, ions and photons;
 - (c) Guidance techniques and systems;
 - (d) Tracking methods;
- (e) Computational methods for obtaining orbits and trajectories.
- C. Ground-based physical observation and research

This includes:

- (a) Planetary astronomy: physical observations of planets and planetary atmospheres by optical and radio techniques;
- (b) Solar activity: optical flares, radio outbursts, corona, direct and indirect evidence of particle ejections;

- (c) Comets: photometry and spectroscopy;
- (d) Cosmic rays: study of primary or secondary cosmic ray particles accessible to ground or mountaintop stations and balloons;
- (e) Meteors: number, size, orbits by optical and radio techniques;
 - (f) Meteorites: composition, structure;
- (g) Ionospheric studies: vertical soundings, scattering, whistlers;
- (h) Geomagnetism: survey of field at surface, variations, disturbances.

D. Theoretical research and mathematical methods

This includes:

- (a) Magnethohydrodynamics;
- (b) Cosmology;
- (c) Astrophysics;
- (d) Celestial mechanics;
- (e) $\underline{\text{Information theory}}$, including data processing and reduction.
- 67. Exchange of information is needed in all phases of space research. However, in the areas which are described here, this exchange is particularly valuable because scientific groups in so many countries participate in theoretical, laboratory and ground-based research. Modern techniques could be used to solve documentation and language problems involved in such exchange, which could also be encouraged by symposia, conferences and exchanges of research staff. Mechanisms for some of this exchange of information are being carried over from the period of the International Geophysical Year.

V. INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION IN THE CON-DUCT OF SPACE ACTIVITIES

68. There is a wide area of activities in which international co-operation is desirable, and in some cases required, in order to realize to the fullest the potential benefits of space activities. In some cases, there is simply a requirement for mutual agreements on how to approach specific problems. Once such agreements have been arrived at for the open and orderly conduct of space activities, they can form the basis of an international routine. In other cases, there is need for active co-operative endeavours in which groups of nations assist each other in carrying out various phases of space activities. The following list is illustrative of these kinds of international co-operation.

A. International agreements

Use of radio frequencies

69. Accomplishment of most uses of space vehicles will depend heavily upon the adequate availability of communications channels. Allocation of frequencies specifically for use by space vehicles and in space activities will be necessary to assure that channels will be available as needed. There already exists in ITU and its advisory bodies the means for handling this problem. The Committee agrees that there is an urgent need for international co-ordination of radio frequencies for use in association with space vehicles for tracking, telemetry and research purposes. Interference by space vehicles might seriously affect radio services on the earth. Similarly, radio interference from terrestrial sources could cripple the conduct of space programmes. The Committee strongly urges that ITU and the States members of the 1959 Administrative Radio Conference of ITU allocate adequate frequencies for space programmes, with adequate bandwidths for the foreseeable needs of space programmes in the next three years.

Registration of orbital elements

70. Precise orbital elements are determined by launching countries from data acquired during the launching and initial orbital phases. In addition to scientific and technical usefulness, information concerning precise orbital elements might assist in identifying individual satellites. The problem of identification will become increasingly difficult as satellite traffic overloads the ground facilities. It will, therefore, probably be useful for orbital elements to be registered at a central point.

Continuing radio transmission

71. Solar-powered transmitters as well as possible future types of equipment may continue to transmit long after the experimental or other purpose of a satellite has been fulfilled. Such continued transmission can result in interference with transmission from space vehicles still performing a useful purpose. Therefore, it will be necessary to provide for termination of transmission at the end of the satellite's useful life.

Removal of spent satellites

72. The continued orbiting of satellites beyond the period of their useful operational life imposes the necessity of continuing their observation and registration. The foreseeable increase in this space "traffic" problem is formidable. Destruction or recovery of such spent satellites, if possible, might be desirable to limit the "traffic" problem to those satellites actually performing useful functions. This is feasible in larger satellites, which are capable of carrying the necessary braking rockets required to cause the satellites to descend at the end of their useful lives. The "traffic" problem is, of course, not in space itself, but in the capacity of ground tracking networks.

Re-entry and recovery of space vehicles

73. Among the space vehicle operational techniques yet to be perfected are those related to the planned reentry and recovery of space vehicles. International co-operation may greatly aid the successful accomplishment of such operations while minimizing the possibility of accident. International arrangements will probably be especially important in the case of re-entry of manned vehicles.

Return of equipment

74. Where space vehicles re-enter the earth's atmosphere either through design or misadventure and any equipment or instrumentation is recovered by countries other than the launching country, arrangements are needed for restoring such instrumentation and equipment to the launching country.

Identification of origin

75. Provision can be made in all space vehicles for identification of the launching country. Such identification would be useful where equipment is recovered from space vehicles which have re-entered the earth's atmosphere or where a question of liability arises in connexion with possible damage caused upon re-entry.

Contamination

76. Scientific studies indicate that certain activities related to lunar and planetary impacts might result in biological, chemical, and radiation contamination jeopardizing subsequent physical and chemical studies and endangering possible living organisms. Release of chemical markers, radio-activity resulting from nuclear explosions, generation of gases in connexion with "soft" landings and the spreading of terrestrial micro-organisms carried within space vehicles represent possible sources of contamination to the moon and planets. The re-entry of space vehicles which have effected landings on the moon and planets might contaminate the earth on their return. It will probably be desirable to continue such studies of this problem as are already under way, for example, in COSPAR, with a view to arriving at appropriate agreements to minimize the adverse effects of possible biological, radiological, and chemical contamination.

B. International co-operation in joint projects Simultaneous sounding rocket launchings

77. In the use of sounding rockets to investigate the upper atmosphere and to conduct rocket astronomy experiments, there are several fields of investigation which would be promoted more effectively if simultaneous launchings were made in many countries, as happened during the International Rocket Week in 1958 during the International Geophysical Year, and as is planned for the autumn of 1959 by COSPAR. Organizations such as the ICSU and the International Astronautical Federation are available to plan the scientific and technological programmes respectively, but some encouragement by the United Nations may be worthwhile.

International use of launching ranges

- 78. Thought should be given to means of making available launching ranges for vertical sounding rockets on an international scale for the conduct of experiments for scientific purposes. This has already been done in several cases by mutual agreement between nations or research institutions. This procedure is suitable at the present stage and will continue to be valuable during coming years.
- 79. In the more distant future, however, these thoughts might be elaborated towards considering the creation of an international rocket range. This step is much more ambitious than earlier arrangements, but its impact on truly international space research would be substantial. Much advice on the selection of programmes for international launching of vertical sounding rockets can be given through the organizations associated with the international scientific unions; possibilities also exist in the United Nations family for the exchange of personnel and for negotiations relating to agreement between Governments on scientific matters. But undoubtedly government negotiation initiated, for instance, through the United Nations, would be a necessary step to take before it would be possible to establish one or more international ranges for sounding rocket research.

Instrumentation of satellites and deep space probes

- 80. In some cases it may be desirable to arrange international co-operative projects to provide instruments and scientific payloads in space vehicles. There are several ways in which this may be done.
- 81. First, one or more scientists from various countries may be invited to become part of the team that is preparing the payload for launching into space. These scientists would work on their part of the instrument equipment in appropriate laboratories in the launching nations, participating as required in all phases of the work. This method seems quite workable and can confidently be expected to be effective.
- 82. Secondly, a scientist in the launching nation can be designated to prepare an experiment devised by a scientist of another country. He would then work in close co-operation with the originator, and represent him as necessary during all phases of the project. This method, too, is workable and can be effective.
- 83. Thirdly, one might envisage a scientist in one country preparing an experiment, sending the instrumentation as a box, or a group of boxes, to the launching nation for installation in the payload of the space vehicle. From experience, it can be said that this method will succeed only in exceptional cases, and should not be encouraged during the foreseeable future to the detriment of other approaches.
- 84. It appears that a strong element in the preparation of such joint instrumentation of space vehicles is the direct negotiation between the responsible scientific administrations. Similar conditions apply to the ground network of observatories at which the measurements must be made by scientists who may be trusted to organize their own co-operation in the most efficient manner.
- 85. It is worth noting that the international scientific organizations, such as the international scientific unions or UNESCO, can contribute substantially to the organization and planning of such forms of cooperation. In this field, however, it may well prove advantageous to have the supporting authority and goodwill of the United Nations, particularly to assist in the resolving of international problems confronting the scientists.

Tracking and telemetering

- 86. As discussed in paragraphs 59 to 64 of this part, the tracking of a space vehicle and the reception of telemetered signals from it are an essential part of obtaining the scientific or technical data for which the space vehicle is launched. In many cases it will be desirable to have several nations co-operate in the tracking of a space vehicle. Particularly in the case of earth satellites it may be desirable to continue such co-operative tracking for long periods of the satellite's operating life. In the case of space probes, on the other hand, co-operative tracking may well be required only during the first one or two days of the flight, after which only periodic tracking will be required which can probably be handled by the launching nation with its own facilities and tracking stations.
- 87. With regard to the telemetering of scientific information from space vehicles, similar remarks apply. It will be usual for the telemetering system to be an integral part of the tracking system. It will frequently be desirable to take continuous records for periods of from hours to days. In such cases, international co-operative reception and recording of the signals will be needed.

Data processing

88. The processing of tracking and telemetering data to useful form can be a formidable task, particularly in the case of earth satellites from which tremendous amounts of data may be received. It may be desirable to organize an international co-operative programme for such data processing.

Interpretation of data

89. The theoretical analysis and interpretation of experimental data from space vehicles comprise an area in which international co-operation is highly desirable. The most effective use can be made of experimental results by the participation of scientists throughout the world in interpreting those results and applying them to a further understanding of the universe and to the development of practical applications.

international exchange of data

90. Strong international support of existing organizations in the collection, cataloguing and dissemination of data and results obtained from space activities, including supporting research, is necessary if the world is to benefit fully from and to contribute to the advancement of the space era. Such support includes not only the financial assistance and management provided by the nations operating the already existing world data centres, but also an extension of the number and scope of such centres in view of the bigger role assigned to them by the channelling of data and results from all branches of space research and activities.

91. It appears also that some centralized advice and co-ordination in this area will be required, and this might well be continued within the UNESCO-ICSU framework.

Education

92. There will be a continuing need to inform, not only the scientific and engineering communities, but also Governments and the public about space activities. Since UNESCO has had much experience in the preparation and dissemination of texts, manuals, lectures, television programmes, etc., it might be a suitable organization to assume the responsibility for this in the areas of space activities.

Meteorological satellites

93. It is to be foreseen that a meteorological satellite system of world-wide usefulness will be in operation some years from now. Some international arrangement will be necessary to insure maximum effectiveness of this system in benefiting commerce, industry, agriculture, etc., and WMO is an appropriate organization to undertake such co-ordination, having in fact already begun to consider this question.

Communications satellites

94. In the foreseeable future a system of communications satellites may be placed in operation. As in the case of a meteorological system, the communications system will require international co-operation for maximum effectiveness. Problems of frequency allocations, the handling of message traffic, etc., will have to be solved. It would be well for ITU to begin a study of these problems at once.

International launchings

95. Launchings of satellites and space probes by an international team would be an extremely complex and organizationally difficult operation, which probably should not be attempted in the immediate future. On the other hand, it may be desirable on occasion for a single nation to undertake to launch a scientific satellite or space probe under the auspices of the ICSU or the United Nations. In such an international project the scientific payload would be instrumented as a cooperative endeavour by some group of nations. In this manner scientists who would not otherwise have the opportunity of performing experiments in space vehicles may be brought more deeply into space research and engineering.

Advice on space activities

96. Much advice on an international scale on the selection of programmes, on the types of data that should be interchanged and placed in the world data centres, can be given through the organizations associated with the international scientific unions. Possibilities also exist in UNESCO for the exchange of personnel and for negotiations relating to agreements between Governments on scientific matters.

97. In support of these organizations and activities on the international scene, it would also be desirable to have national committees concerned with space activities in the individual countries; appropriate steps to encourage this should be taken.

VI. AREAS OF SPACE ACTIVITY IN WHICH INTER-NATIONAL CO-OPERATION SHOULD BE STRENGTHENED

A. Conduct of space science

98. Advances in scientific knowledge are usually made by individual specialists or small groups who have reached the frontiers of knowledge in quite a narrow field. By way of example, if one considers such a frontier as the source and nature of the ionization of the upper atmosphere, the number of leading research workers in such a field is by no means too large for the personal exchange of views at meetings or by correspondence. A century ago it would have been only a few individuals who corresponded or met occasionally for a philosophical exchange of ideas or results. As the numbers grew, scientific organizations became desirable and since their aim was the advancement of knowledge which knows no national boundaries, scientific organization necessarily was cosmopolitan and soon became international in character. Many such organizations now exist and form the group of international scientific unions represented in the ICSU. It must be emphasized that these unions matured only when the demand for them had grown. Thus, though their organization had been carefully worked out, the need was very apparent before the plan matured.

99. Even with these organizations, actual cooperative projects are often and very effectively carried out between interested and enthusiastic individuals or groups who have studied each other's publications, and, after meeting occasionally to exchange views, have decided to undertake a joint project. Where a national boundary exists between two such groups and an expenditure of money is involved, government approval or support may often be necessary. Such joint scientific activities, however, are by no means bilateral in the sense of excluding others. Their existence and nature is often known to interested colleagues elsewhere and the results are reported at scientific meetings. It may be expected that in the field of space research joint activities of this kind among specialized groups will continue to be an important means of advance. As long as these activities are carried on in an orderly and open manner, they should be fostered and supported since they represent the normal methods of co-operation among colleagues.

100. It is against this background of scientific cooperation that the impact of space science and its possible application must be examined. It is evident that co-operation in space activities will require international organizations of several kinds, but it is necessary to determine these requirements area by area, examining to what extent present organizations are adequate and establishing what need there may be for extensions or additions.

101. The crucial question is thus how international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space should be fostered. For example, international co-operation in programmes employing sounding rockets for basic research should probably be carried out by an organization dealing with space research under the aegis of the ICSU or a specific international scientific union, but an active interest on the part of the United Nations would probably be necessary to extend such a programme in due course from the experimental stage into common practical application. Such interest by the United Nations might be expressed by a recommendation that Member States encourage their national scientific centres to expand their international relations in the field of space science generally. Another way might be to ask the Secretary-General to keep the development of international co-operation in this specific field under review and report to the next session of the General Assembly on the progress made. Encouragement of this kind might be effected through the establishment of a special United Nations body charged with keeping under review the co-operative arrangements of international scientific organizations, specialized agencies and States, in order to be able to report on the development in breadth and depth of programmes for the exchange of scientists and experts. Alternatively, this body might be advisory to the Secretary-General in this and other matters relating to outer space, leaving to him to report to the General Assembly with recommendations.

102. The General Assembly, in paragraph 1 (b) of resolution 1348 (XIII), asked for something more than a review of these areas where international cooperation is feasible. It referred expressly to the consideration of programmes of co-operation in the field of outer space under the auspices of the United Nations and did not envisage the limitation of programmes of international co-operation to non-governmental organizations.

103. While the Committee is of the belief that world does not yet need an international agency for outer space, there is an evident need for efforts of coordination and encouragement by the United Nations in some areas by way of support for international cooperation in this field.

Promotion of scientific activities in this field

- 104. Where the objective is scientific, whether academic or applied, regulatory provisions requiring agreements among Governments are necessary only peripherally to promote scientific co-operation. Most needs are cared for successfully by the international scientific unions.
- 105. Exploration into the unknown, such as those symbolized by space probes, are well covered by the activities of the international scientific unions and their affiliated bodies. Through their services, the scientific community exchanges views and ideas, circulates reasonable amounts of information, or establishes co-operation at various levels of formality. The administration of the international scientific unions is largely based on voluntary work by active scientists, supported by a minimum of professional staff. For example, the cost of the entire international administration of the IGY for the administrative period 1952-1959 is estimated at less than $250,000.
- 106. The international scientific unions devote themselves to progress and consolidation in the advancing parts of science; they are less concerned with technical applications of established knowledge, or programmes of broader education and information. Their administrative structure of periodic assemblies and committee meetings, and to a lesser extent of permanent, large agencies, constitutes an inherent limitation on the consideration of problems of a longer range as distinct from day-to-day actions.
- 107. The expansion of activities into outer space was initiated during the IGY and the first steps towards co-operation were part of that programme. It must be realized, however, that activities in outer space now expand at such a rate and into so many fields that the international scientific unions must share the load of international organizations in this whole field with a number of other and different international organizations, such as those dealing with engineering and telecommunications.
- 108. Among typical topics falling well within the scope of the international scientific unions can be cited: (a) to plan and co-ordinate general programmes for earth satellites and space probes; (b) to stimulate research supporting space science; and (c) to plan and co-ordinate simultaneous launchings of rockets in many parts of the world. The possibility of directing the attention of scientists from many different specialities to common problems in space exploration is a particularly valuable feature of the international scientific unions.

Development of national scientific capabilities in this field

109. It was mentioned earlier that scientific work in outer space involves no new scientific disciplines in the present epoch. Space vehicles are vehicles designed purely to carry instruments or living organisms into parts of the earth's environment which could not previously be reached. Previous knowledge of such regions had to be deduced from indirect measurements. The present objective is to use space vehicles to advance knowledge in the fields of physics, geophysics, astronomy, chemistry and biology related to the environment in which the earth moves. A number of applications have been discussed, those nearest achievement being in meteorology and communications. When these have crystallized out of the research stage, a technology will develop and their application spread into common use.

- 110. In such applications, particularly in meteorology, both sounding rockets and satellites may be used. The development and use of the sounding rocket by several countries, large and small, shows that the use of this vehicle is not limited to countries having the greatest technological facilities. As they are used they will become cheaper and available to even more countries. The need for world-wide coverage of atmospheric studies at altitudes between about 30 kilometres and 200 kilometres will make international co-operation among many countries a necessity as soon as these applications have reached an appropriate phase.
- 111. There can be no monopoly of the research activities that are a part of space science. It is perhaps useful to point out also that no country could possibly have a monopoly on the production of scientists capable of making contributions in the specialized branches of science that are involved. These include atmospheric physics, ionospheric physics, aurora studies, meteor studies, many branches of astrophysics, and the physics, psycholgy and biology of unsual environments.
- 112. Earlier sections of this report have emphasized that the majority of the problems involved in these disciplines are still in the research stage; that there is need for work in them all over the world; and that laboratory work and theoretical work done on the ground on a small scale at no great cost can make important contributions which are required in the scientific utilization of satellites and space probes, although it is true that the launching of these is likely to remain for some time to come a preserve of the countries with the greatest technical facilities.
- 113. In any scientific endeavour the most effective way to learn is by experience, particularly in cooperation with those active in the field. Some of the countries active in space science offer fellowships and visiting professorships which may be held in Government-supported laboratories or unversities where research in space is undertaken. Since no new basic science is involved, the requirements for any country to start research in space science are to assist its trained scientists in the fields of physics, geophysics, astronomy or biology, in visiting centres of active space research in these fields, and to give them some facilities and time in their home institutions to undertake original work.
- 114. It is quite possible that the opportunities for visits and exchange of personnel are now adequate. In spreading information about opportunities for participation in space activities to many States not now taking part, and in the provision of material for wide-spread education, UNESCO occupies a key position.
- 115. Discussions indicate that there is need for a greater and more up-to-date exchange of scientific information, preferably through existing channels, which, however, require clearing and broadening. The arrangment of symposia on certain aspects of space science is also an important activity, to which UNESCO's attention might be drawn. These are projects best undertaken by organizations of the type of the international scientific unions which co-operate with UNESCO. Because the effects of space developments concern all mankind, it is essential that opportunities for co-operation and extensive distribution of information be made available to all countries, irrespective of the state of their scientific and economic development.

- 116. States with capabilities for launching satellites should be supported in including in them scientific experiments devised by other countries. The international scientific unions could properly play an important role in this kind of co-operation.
- 117. National contact with non-governmental international scientific organizations is normally made through academies or research councils recognized as the appropriate bodies to advise their Governments. More efficient contact between scientists in different countries can be furthered through the formation of national committees on space science. Such bodies could build on the experience of IGY national committees.

B. Application of the results of space science

- 118. As discussed in paragraphs 22 to 40 above, foreseeable applications in the field of outer space include the following: meteorological satellites, communications satellites, television and broadcasting satellites, geodetic satellites, and navigation satellites.
- 119. The foregoing activities will need an everincreasing degree of inter-governmental agreement.
- 120. Such inter-governmental scientific and technical agencies as WMO, ITU and its affiliated committees, ICAO and others, are the important channels for international co-operation in this field. Their attention is partly directed towards maintaining order in the conduct of many kinds of international activities, such as radio communication, the enormous data exchanged between weather services and others; in part it is also directed towards planning and preparation when new techniques are maturing to the stage where they can be put into practical application. Their experience in these fields should be brought to bear urgently on space activities.

C. The open and orderly conduct of space activities

- 121. From the description and analysis of the various aspects of peaceful uses of outer space, certain common lines emerge, and one can discern the outlines of a pattern, still sketchy and incomplete, but worth elaborating.
- 12?. In all projects there is an emphasis placed on the need for systematic and regular description of progress, exchange of information stage by stage, and adherence to certain agreed rules. It is necessary to improve the means for the distribution and assimilation of knowledge about space activities throughout the world, so that there can be no doubt of the orderly character of such activities, and so that all countries may have the opportunity to take part in them irrespective of the state of their scientific and economic development.
- 123. Reviewing the wealth of present projects from this angle, some typical examples can be quoted.

- 124. A regular census of satellites which are circling the earth must be maintained. Their number will become considerable in the near future and they will ultimately be useful to many countries (see paras. 22-40 and 93-94). The register should contain data about orbits and radio transmission (see paras. 69-70); it will soon be useful to make periodic reviews of the position in order to agree when an individual satellite's useful life is ended and on the action to be taken to terminate its radio transmission or to remove the satellite (see paras. 71-72). Tracking of space vehicles and radio recording ofdata depend entirely on orderly procedures (see paras. 59-64).
- 125. International plans for the wide-spread use of sounding rockets to moderate heights have already been carried out (see para. 77). Their scope is widening (see paras. 15-17 and 24-30), spreading into further applications and to many countries. Looking into the future, thought might be given to the creation of international launching centres for sounding rockets (see paras. 78-79).
- 126. Re-entry and recovery of space vehicles returning to the earth are techniques in the course of perfection and calling for co-operation (see paras. 73-75). Such re-entry may also involve the execution of international agreements, based on legal considerations, about procedures for dealing with information relating to the territories of may countries and of common benefit (see paras. 39-40).
- 127. Channels of information must be maintained and broadened to serve scientists already working on problems of outer space (see paras. 80-85, 89 and 104-108) to bring in new groups of scientists and students (see paras. 92 and 109-117) and to inform the general public reliably and effectively.
- 128. This set of examples, which is not exhaustive, shows that a principle of open and orderly conduct lies at the root of international co-operation directed towards the peaceful use of outer space. Adherence to this principle would further the progress of space science and technology, both in the narrow sense as activities in themselves, and in their relation to human progress. Such experience is not new, but is common to co-operation in any branch of science; as one example, it guided the success of the recent IGY.
- 129. Another feature is also apparent. Space activities have wide implications, spreading beyond pure science into technical applications, international cooperation, and effects on the world at large. These implications involve many international organizations covering a wide range of interests, such as scientific societies, government organizations, international news services, etc.
- 130. This wide dispersion calls for a rallying point related to the United Nations, small in size and well informed. There exists already a variety of organizations to carry heavy loads of work in different areas of space activity, but there is a need for a centre, to which inquiries can be directed at any time, and by which information can be communicated effectively to the appropriate body in much the same way as the ICSU meets a similar need for the existing international scientific unions.
- 131. Such a small central body, with expert technical knowledge, would have to act in intimate contact with existing technical agencies and international organizations. Starting modestly, its work would be directed to assisting and correlating the many efforts towards open and orderly conduct of space activities. As a corollary, it would naturally serve as a means for current summary of the position in this rapidly expanding field. Thereby it would provide a most useful continuing service for any panel of experts which from time to time might meet for more extensive reviews.

VII. GENERAL CONCLUSIONS

- 132. As the first technical area in which immediate international action is required, the Committee calls attention to the conclusion regarding allocation of radio frequencies for space activities.
- 133. On the basis of the specific conclusions reached in previous sections of this report and listed in paragraphs 13 and 14, the following general conclusions have emerged:
- (1) There is a need for a suitable centre related to the United Nations that can act as a focal point for international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space.
- (2) Progress, plans and needs in connexion with the peaceful uses of outer space should be reviewed again by the United Nations in about one year.

Part III

Paragraph 1 (d) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII)

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Mandate of the Committee

- 1. The task of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space under paragraph 1 (d) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII) is to report on:
 - "The nature of legal problems which may arise in the carrying out of programmes to explore outer space."
- 2. The scope of the mandate thus given the Committee was the subject of discussion. It was recognized that the terms of reference of the Committee referred exclusively to the peaceful uses of outer space. One view expressed was that the task of the Committee related only to the identification and listing of legal problems which might arise in the carrying out of programmes to explore outer space and that the Committee was not called upon to formulate either general or particular solutions of those problems. Another view was that the Committee, in identifying and listing the problems, should give some indication of the significance and implications of each problem and the priority which might be given to its solution. Others stressed the importance of giving attention to certain relevant general principles, such as those contained in the preamble and operative paragraph 1 (b) of resolution 1348 (XIII). It was also pointed out that, while paragraph 1 (d) of resolution 1348 (XIII) referred only to problems which might arise in the exploration of outer space, it was not always possible in relation to certain activities to differentiate between exploration and exploitation of outer space and that both the exploration and the exploitation of outer space were expressly mentioned in the preamble to the resolution.

3. The Committee recognized that it would be impossible at this stage to identify and define, exhaustively, all the juridical problems which might arise in the exploration of outer space. Recognizing the multiplicity of these juridical problems, the Committee considered that it could most usefully fulfil its mandate from the General Assembly, in view of the complex character of these problems, by: (1) selecting and defining problems that have arisen, or are likely to arise in the near future, in the carrying out of space programmes; (2) dividing the problems into two groups, those which may be amenable to early treatment and those which do not yet appear to be ripe for solution; and (3) indicating, without definite recommendation, various means by which answers to such problems might be pursued. The identification of legal problems entails, of necessity, some consideration of possible approaches to their solution, particularly with a view to presenting the best informed comment that can be made on the matter of priorities.

B. General observations

- 4. The Committee considered the relevance to space activities of the provisions of the United Nations Charter and of the Statute of the International Court of Justice, which synthesized the idea of co-operation between men and the joint achievement of great projects for the benefit of all mankind; it observed that as a matter of principle those instruments were not limited in their operation to the confines of the earth. It considered as a worthy standard for international cooperation and programmes in the peaceful uses of outer space which could appropriately be undertaken under United Nations auspices, to the benefit of States irrespective of the state of their economic or scientific development, the principles set forth in the operative paragraph 1 (b) and the preamble of resolution 1348 (XIII), in which the General Assembly called attention to Article 2, paragraph 1, of the Charter, which states that the Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members, recognized the common interest of mankind in outer space and the common aim that it should be used for peaceful purposes only, and expressed the desire of promoting energetically the fullest exploration and exploitation of outer space for the benefit of mankind.
- 5. It was unanimously recognized that the principles and procedures developed in the past to govern the use of such areas as the air space and the sea deserved attentive study for possibly fruitful analogies that might be adaptable to the treatment of legal problems arising out of the exploration and use of outer space. On the other hand, it was acknowledged that outer space activities were distinguished by many specific factual conditions, not all of which were now known, that would render many of its legal problems unique.
- 6. The Committee agreed that some of the legal problems of outer space activities were more urgent and more nearly ripe for positive international agreement than others. It was felt that the progress of activities in outer space and of advances in science and technology would continually pose new problems relevant to the international legal order and modify both the character and the relative importance of existing problems. For example, future arrangements among Governments or private groups of scientists for co-operation in space research or the dissemination of space data may entail legal problems ranging from administrative or procedural arrangements to regulation or control. The Committee noted the indispensable usefulness of close and continuous cooperation between jurists and scientists to take these and other developments into account.

- 7. The Committee considered that a comprehensive code was not practicable or desirable at the present stage of knowledge and development. Despite the progress already made, it was emphasized that relatively little is so far known about the actual and prospective uses of outer space in all their possible varieties of technical significance, political context, and economic utility. It was pointed out that the rule of law is neither dependent upon, nor assured by, comprehensive codification and that premature codification might prejudice subsequent efforts to develop the law based on a more complete understanding of the practical problems involved. Although an attempt at comprehensive codification of space law was thought to be premature, the Committee also recognized the need both to take timely, constructive action and to make the law of space responsive to the facts of space.
- 8. For these reasons it was agreed that the rough grouping of legal problems according to the priority hereafter suggested should itself be kept under regular review by whatever means the General Assembly should deem fitting.

II. LEGAL PROBLEMS SUSCEPTIBLE OF PRIORITY TREATMENT

A. Question of freedom of outer space for exploration and use

9. During the IGY 1957-1958 and subsequently, countries throughout the world proceeded on the premise of the permissibility of the launching and flight of the space vehicles which were launched, regardless of what territory they passed "over" during the course of their flight through outer space. The Committee, bearing in mind that its terms of reference refer exclusively to the peaceful uses of outer space, believes that, with this practice, there may have been initiated the recognition or establishment of a generally accepted rule to the effect that, in principle, outer space is, on conditions of equality, freely available for exploration and use by all in accordance with existing or future international law or agreements.

B. Liability for injury or damage caused by space vehicles

10. Since injury or damage might result from the launching, flight and return to earth of various kinds of space vehicles or parts thereof, a number of problems exist with respect to defining and delimiting liability of the launching State and other States associated with it in the space activity causing injury or damage. First of all there is the question of the type of interest protected: that is, the kind of injury for which recovery may be had. Second, there is the question of the type of conduct giving rise to liability: should liability be without regard to fault for some or all activities, or should it be based upon fault? Third, should a different principle govern, depending on whether the place of injury is on the surface of the earth, in the air space or in outer space? Fourth, should liability of the launching State be unlimited in amount? Finally, where more than one State participates in a particular activity, is the liability joint or several?

- 11. What machinery should be utilized for determining liability and ensuring the payment of compensation if due? The Committee considered that early consideration should be given to agreement on submission to the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in disputes between States as to the liability of States for injury or damage caused by space vehicles.
- 12. When it considered the foregoing questions, the Committee noted that, in so far as concerns liability for surface damage caused by aircraft, there was formulated at Rome in 1952, under the aegis of ICAO, the Convention on damage caused by foreign aircraft to third parties on the surface. In the opinion of the Committee, that Convention and ICAO experience in relation thereto could be taken into account, inter alia, in any study that might be carried out in the future concerning liability for injury or damage caused by space vehicles. It was pointed out, however, that no international standards regarding safety and precautionary measures governing the launching and control of space vehicles had yet been formulated, and this fact also could be taken into account in studying analogies based on existing conventions.

C. Allocation of radio frequencies

- 13. It was recognized that there are stringent technical limits on the availability of radio frequencies for communications. The development of space vehicles will pose new and increasing demands on the radio spectrum. It was emphasized that rational allocation of frequencies for communications with and among space vehicles would be imperative. In this way, what might otherwise come to constitute paralysing interference among radio transmissions could be avoided.
- 14. Attention was drawn to the fact that there is already in existence and operation an international organization suited to the consideration of problems of radio frequency allocation for outer space uses, namely, the ITU. A technical committee of this organization has already issued a recommendation and a report which bear the following titles: "Selection of Frequencies Used in Telecommunication with and between Artificial Earth Satellites and other Space Vehicles" and "Factors Affecting the Selection of Frequencies for Telecommunication with and between Space Vehicles". The findings contained in these two documents will be presented to the Administrative Radio Conference of the ITU which will open in Geneva on 17 August 1959.
- 15. Attention should also be given to the desirability of terminating transmissions from space vehicles once these transmissions have outlived their usefulness. Such a measure would help conserve and make optimum use of the frequencies which are assigned for outer space communications. In considering this problem, it would be necessary to balance this factor against the interest in conserving a means for continuous identification of space vehicles.

D. Avoidance of interference between space vehicles and aircraft

16. As the launchings of space vehicles become more numerous and wide-spread throughout the world, practical problems will clearly arise in regard to the prevention of physical interference between space vehicles, particularly rockets, and conventional aircraft. The latter are already employed in great numbers across the earth and in many areas air traffic is already congested. It was considered that Governments could give early attention to the problem of interference between aircraft and space vehicles and that technical studies could usefully be undertaken, if necessary with the assistance of competent specialized agencies.

E. Identification and registration of space vehicles and co-ordination of launchings

- 17. It is expected that the number of space vehicles will progressively increase. In the course of time, their numbers may become very large. This indicates the necessity of providing suitable means for identifying individual space vehicles. Such identification of space vehicles could be obtained by agreement on an allocation of individual call-signs to these vehicles; the call-signs could be emitted at stipulated regular intervals, at least until identification by other means had been established. Another means of identification is by orbital or transit characteristics of space vehicles.
- 18. As part of the problem of identification, there arises the question of placing suitable markings on space vehicles so that, particularly in the event of their return to earth, they may be readily identified.
- 19. Identification would be facilitated by a system of registration of the launchings of space vehicles, their call-signs, markings and current orbital and transit characteristics. Registration would also serve a number of other useful purposes. For one example, one serious problem is the potential overloading of tracking facilities. Registration of launchings would help to avoid this. Registration might also afford a convenient means for the notification of launchings to other States, thus enabling them to make appropriate distinctions between the space vehicles so notified and other objects, and to take appropriate measures to protect their interests if necessary.
- 20. A further measure, beyond registration, would be agreement on the co-ordination of launchings.

F. Re-entry and landing of space vehicles

21. Problems of re-entry and landing of space vehicles will exist both with respect to unmanned space vehicles and later with respect to manned vehicles of exploration. Where space vehicles are designed for re-entry and return, it will be appropriate for the launching State to enter into suitable arrangements with the State on whose territory the space vehicle is intended to land and other States whose air space may be entered during descent. Recognizing, moreover, that such landings may occur through accident, mistake or distress, members of the Committee called attention to the desirability of the conclusion of multilateral agreements concerning re-entry and landing, such agreements to contain suitable undertakings on co-operation and appropriate provisions on procedures. Among the subjects that might be covered by such agreements would be the return to the launching State of the vehicle itself and—in the case of a manned vehicle-provision for the speedy return of personnel.

22. It was also considered that certain substantive rules of international law already exist concerning rights and duties with respect to aircraft and airmen landing on foreign territory through accident, mistake or distress. The opinion was expressed that such rules might be applied in the event of similar landings of space vehicles.

III. OTHER PROBLEMS

A. Question of determining where outer space begins

- 23. Under the terms of existing international conventions and customary international law, States have complete and exclusive sovereignty in the air space above their territories and territorial waters. The concurrent existence of a region in space which is not subject to the same régime raises such questions as where air space ends and where outer space begins. It was noted that these limits do not necessarily coincide. While they have been much discussed in scholarly writing, there is no consensus among publicists concerning the location of these limits.
- 24. A view was expressed that it might enventually prove essential to determine these limits. The Committee reviewed a number of possibilities in this connexion, including those based upon the physical characteristics of air and of aircraft. The difficulties involved were agreed to be great. An authoritative answer to the problem at this time would require an international agreement, and the opinion was expressed that such an agreement now, based on current knowledge and experience, would be premature. It was considered that, in the absence of an express agreement, further experience might lead to the acceptance of precise limits through a rule of customary law.
- 25. In the absence of a precise demarcation, another possible approach would be to set tentatively, on the basis of present experience and knowledge, a range within which the limits of air space and outer space would be assumed to lie. It was suggested that an approach of this kind should avoid a boundary so low as to interfere with existing aviation regimes or so high as unreasonably to fetter activities connected with the use and exploration of outer space.
- 26. There was also discussion as to whether or not further experience might suggest a different approach, namely, the desirability of basing the legal régime governing outer space activities primarily on the nature and type of particular space activities.
- 27. One development might be the conclusion of inter-governmental agreements, as necessary, to govern activities sufficiently close to the earth's surface and bearing such a special relationship to particular States as to call for their consent. Each such agreement could contain appropriate provisions as to the permissibility of a given activity by reference not only to altitude and "vertical" position but also to trajectory, flight mission, known or referred instrumentation, and other functional characteristics of the vehicle or object in question.
- 28. It was generally believed that the determination of precise limits for air space and outer space did not present a legal problem calling for priority consideration at this moment. The Committee noted that the solution of the problems which it had identified as susceptible of priority treatment was not dependent upon the establishment of such limits.

- B. Protection of public health and safety: safeguards against contamination of or from outer space
- 29. The Committee took note of the apprehensions that have been expressed that activities in outer space might bring to those regions, by inadvertence, living or other matter from the earth capable of interfering with orderly scientific research. It was agreed that further study should be encouraged under appropriate auspices to specify the types of risks, the gravity of dangers, and the technical possibility, as well as the cost, of preventive measures. Such a study should also cover safeguards against similar contamination of the earth as a result of space activities as well as protection against other hazards to health and safety that might be created by the carrying out of programmes to explore outer space. These studies could be undertaken with a view to the possible formulation of appropriate international standards.

C. Questions relating to exploration of celestial bodies

- 30. The Committee was of the view that serious problems could arise if States claimed, on one ground or another, exclusive rights over all or part of a celestial body. One suggestion was that celestial bodies are incapable of appropriation to national sovereignty. Another suggestion was that the exploration and exploitation of celestial bodies should be carried out exclusively for the benefit of all mankind. It was also suggested that some form of international administration over celestial bodies might be adopted.
- 31. The Committee noted that, while scientific programmes envisaged relatively early exploration of celestial bodies, human settlement and extensive exploitation of resources were not likely in the near future. For this reason the Committee believed that problems relating to the settlement and exploitation of celestial bodies did not require priority treatment.

D. Avoidance of interference among space vehicles

- 32. It was agreed that, apart from problems of communications and overloading of tracking facilities, there was for the present little danger of interference of space vehicles with each other. It was pointed out that this situation might change in time, particularly if vehicles in space are used extensively for either global or interplanetary travel. There was discussion about the possible relevance to space travel of rules and experience developed in relation to air traffic. It was decided that more scientific information would be needed before rules could be drafted.
 - E. Additional questions raising legal problems
- 33. The Committee recognized that various other technical developments would probably call for legal arrangements and regulation. Particular reference was made in this connexion to meteorological activities in outer space which may require international measures to insure maximum effectiveness.

Part IV

Paragraph 1 (c) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII)

- I. MANDATE OF THE COMMITTEE UNDER PARA-GRAPH 1 (c) OF RESOLUTION 1348 (XIII)
- 1. The task of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space under paragraph 1 (c) of General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII) is to report on:

"The future organizational arrangements to facilitate international co-operation in this field within the framework of the United Nations".

2. The Ad Hoc Committee felt that its report under this paragraph should briefly survey the types of organizational arrangements which were possible within the framework of the United Nations, and relate these to studies made by the Committee in connexion with paragraphs 1 (a), 1 (b) and 1 (d) of resolution 1348 (XIII). In performing this task the Committee was cognizant of the fact that these studies pointed to the need for continued study and review in this rapidly advancing field.

II. ORGANIZATIONAL POSSIBILITIES

3. There are a number of possible organizational arrangements within the framework of the United Nations.

A. United Nations agencies

- 4. The most elaborate and comprehensive organizational arrangement for facilitating international cooperation is the creation of a specialized agency. A specialized agency is an autonomous inter-governmental organization whose constitution is the product of international convention appropriately ratified by Member States. The entity thus created is brought into relationship with the United Nations, under Articles 57 and 63 of the Charter, through an agreement negotiated between the Economic and Social Council and the agency which is approved by the General Assembly. Such an organization reports annually on its activities to the Economic and Social Council.
- 5. Specialized agencies are contemplated in the Charter and are accorded certain privileges; they may, for example, be given the right by the General Assembly to refer questions to the International Court of Justice, and they automatically become members of inter-secretariat bodies such as the Joint Pension Fund and the Administrative Committee on Coordination. They maintain, however, their status as autonomous inter-governmental organizations, and they have responsibility for such activities as budgetary arrangements, staff rules and regulations, and rules of procedure.
- 6. Examples of specialized agencies now in existence which have some interest in outer space are UNESCO, ITU, WHO, WMO, and ICAO. Those, as well as other agencies not so clearly interested in space activities, differ widely one from another in character of functions and in relationship to the United Nations.
- 7. The scope and nature of the functions of these agencies suggest the possibility of a comparable United Nations agency to deal with space activities. However, the tasks recommended in accompanying sections of this report would not appear to require the present establishment of a United Nations agency, with a professional staff, to co-ordinate and supplement other efforts, public and private, in international space co-operation.

B. Semi-autonomous bodies within the United Nations

8. The General Assembly may, by resolution, establish semi-autonomous operating bodies within the United Nations with mandate or terms of reference established by the General Assembly. The chief executive officer of such a body has broad authority under his mandate but is administratively responsible to the Secretary-General. Three such bodies, with somewhat differing structure, are in existence: the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA).

- 9. In the case of UNICEF, the Director was appointed by the Secretary-General for an indefinite term, without reference to or approval of the General Assembly or the Economic and Social Council. His salary and those of his staff are paid for out of the UNICEF budget, which is based on voluntary contributions of Member States. For administrative purposes, however, the staff generally operates as any other office of the United Nations Secretariat. The Executive Board of UNICEF is elected by the Economic and Social Council for definite terms.
- 10. In the case of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the High Commissioner is appointed by the Secretary-General, with the approval of the General Assembly, for a limited term. The Director of UNRWA is appointed by the Secretary-General in consultation with an advisory commission but without reference to or approval of the General Assembly or the Economic and Social Council. In each case, there is an executive committee or advisory group. Financial arrangements also vary somewhat, the programme of the High Commissioner being financed partly from the regular United Nations budget and partly from voluntary contributions, whereas the UNRWA and UNICEF programmes are financed entirely by voluntary contributions.
- 11. If, at some future time, it was believed that an international agency with a small professional staff would be a useful addition to other co-operative efforts in space, a semi-autonomous body within the United Nations might be appropriate.

C. Performance of functions by existing specialized agencies

12. As is apparent from other parts of the report of this Committee, existing United Nations specialized agencies can perform various useful functions with regard to space activities. Thus, UNESCO, ITU, ICAO, WMO and WHO can all play a role in carrying out technical studies. It does not, however, seem that any of these agencies should be asked to undertake over-all responsibility for future arrangements to facilitate international co-operation in the field of outer space activities, although each can undoubtedly continue to play an important part within the area of its special competence and interest. Their functional interests should of course be welcomed and encouraged.

D. Other arrangements within the United Nations

13. The General Assembly may, by resolution, establish a permanent committee, outline the work to be accomplished, and authorize the Secretary-General to employ appropriate personnel. This was done in the case of the Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation and in the case of the Secretary-General's Advisory Committee on the peaceful uses of atomic energy. In the case of the former, the Committee itself is responsible for reporting to the General Assembly. In the case of the latter, the General Assembly resolution places this responsibility

- on the Secretary-General. Personnel of the United Nations supporting these two committees are members of the United Nations Secretariat and are covered by all of its administrative orders. The activities of experts and any outside assistance by them is covered by the regular United Nations budget.
- 14. Another possibility would be for the General Assembly to ask the Secretary-General to establish a small technical unit within the Secretariat to carry out certain limited functions. Arrangements could also be made for the establishment of an expert advisory committee composed of representatives of interested specialized agencies and key scientists to assist the Secretary-General in the execution of any functions that might be assigned to the Secretariat.

III. CONCLUSIONS

- 15. The Ad Hoc Committee has felt that its report under paragraph 1 (c) should briefly survey the types of long-term organizational arrangements which are possible within the framework of the United Nations, and relate these to the reports made in connexion with paragraphs 1 (a), 1 (b) and 1 (d) of resolution 1348 (XIII). The findings in the reports on those paragraphs underline the importance already attached by the General Assembly to the common interest of mankind in outer space. While its studies fortify the belief expressed in General Assembly resolution 1348 (XIII), which stressed the need for vigour in the development of programmes of international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space, the Committee recognizes that continued study and review of the problem is necessary. Accordingly, the Committee has limited its conclusions to the steps toward such development to be taken at the present stage without taking a position on the longer-range measures.
- 16. The Committee believes that it would not be appropriate at the present time to establish any autonomous inter-governmental organization for international co-operation in the field of outer space. Likewise, the Committee considers that it would not be suitable to ask any existing autonomous inter-governmental organization to undertake over-all responsibility in the field of outer space.
- 17. The sections of this report dealing with legal and scientific aspects of the question of the peaceful uses of outer space suggest certain general functions and tasks that might appropriately be undertaken within the framework of the United Nations at the present time. These include:
- (a) To provide a focal point for facilitating international co-operation with respect to outer space activities undertaken by Governments, specialized agencies and international scientific organizations;

- (b) To study practical and feasible measures for facilitating international co-operation, including those indicated by the Ad Hoc Committee in its report under paragraph 1 (b) of the resolution;
- (c) To consider means, as appropriate, for studying and resolving legal problems which may arise in the carrying out of programmes for the exploration of outer space:
- (d) To review, as appropriate, the subject matter entrusted by the General Assembly to the Ad Hoc Committee in resolution 1348 (XIII).
- 18. The Committee believes that, for the most part, the questions involved under (b), (c) and (d) above may be such as to require consideration at the governmental level. The General Assembly, if it agrees with this conclusion, may wish to consider the establishment of an Assembly committee, composed of representatives of Member States and having such membership as the Assembly may decide, to perform these functions, to report to the General Assembly and to make recommendations as appropriate.
- 19. The Committee considers that the functions suggested in paragraph 17 (a) above, which primarily is intented to implement the conclusion of the Technical Committee that "there is a need for a suitable centre related to the United Nations that can act as a focal point for international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space", are of a different character. These are functions of the type frequently entrusted to an international secretariat. The General Assembly may therefore wish to consider, among other possibilities, that of requesting the Secretary-General to organize a small expert unit within the Secretariat for this purpose. Because the precise character of such a Secretariat unit can be developed only in the light of experience and after consultation with the various bodies involved, it may be desirable to provide a means whereby the Secretary-General can avail himself of the advice and assistance of those directly concerned in this field.
- 20. Consideration might therefore be given to provision for a small committee advisory to the Secretary-General, which could include representatives of the appropriate specialized agencies, scientists designated by international scientific organizations, and representatives of Member States, as necessary.
- 21. It would be possible for the General Assembly to adopt some or all of the suggestions described in paragraphs 18, 19 and 20, in any combination it deems appropriate.
- 22. The Committee believes that it would be appropriate for existing specialized agencies to continue to pursue lines of endeavour within their competence in regard to outer space activities. The Committee believes that the General Assembly might ask these agencies to include in their reports to the United Nations information on their activities in connexion with outer space.

INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION IN THE PEACE-FUL USES OF OUTER SPACE

Α

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the common interest of mankind as a whole in furthering the peaceful use of outer space,

Believing that the exploration and use of outer space should be only for the betterment of mankind and to the benefit of States irrespective of the stage of their economic or scientific development, Desiring to avoid the extension of present national rivalries into this new field.

Recognizing the great importance of international co-operation in the exploration and exploitation of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Noting the continuing programmes of scientific cooperation in the exploration of outer space being undertaken by the international scientific community,

Believing also that the United Nations should promote international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space,

- 1. Establishes a Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, consisting of: Albania, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, Hungary, India, Iran, Italy, Japan, Lebanon, Mexico, Poland, Romania, Sweden, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, whose members will serve for the years 1960 and 1961, and requests the Committee:
- (a) To review, as appropriate, the area of international co-operation, and study practical and feasible means for giving effect to programmes in the peaceful uses of outer space which could appropriately be undertaken under United Nations auspices, including, inter alia:
- (i) Assistance for continuation on a permanent basis of the outer space research carried on within the framework of the International Geophysical Year;

- (ii) Organization of the mutual exchange and dissemination of information on outer space research;
- (iii) Encouragement of national research programmes for the study of outer space, and the rendering of all possible assistance and help towards their realization;
- (b) To study the nature of legal problems which may arise from exploration of outer space;
- 2. Requests the Committee to submit reports on its activities to the subsequent sessions of the General Assembly.

В

The General Assembly,

Noting with satisfaction the successes of great significance to mankind that have been attained in the exploration of outer space in the form of the recent launching of artificial earth satellites and space rockets,

Attaching great importance to a broad development of international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space in the interests of the development of science and the improvement of the well-being of peoples,

- 1. Decides to convene in 1960 or 1961, under the auspices of the United Nations, an international scientific conference for the exchange of experience in the peaceful uses of outer space;
- 2. Requests the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, established in part A of this resolution, in consultation with the Secretary-General and in co-operation with the appropriate specialized agencies, to work out proposals with regard to the convening of such a scientific conference;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with the conclusions of the Committee, to make the necessary organizational arrangements for holding the conference.

[Original text: English] [12 December 1959]

- 1. By resolution 1348 (XIII), of 13 December 1958, the General Assembly established an Ad Hoc Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space to report to the Assembly at its fourteenth session on the problems relating to the peaceful uses of outer space.
- 2. The Ad Hoc Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space met between 6 May and 25 June 1959. On the latter date, it adopted its report (A/4141).
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee (A/4214), without objection, included the report as item 25 in the agenda of the fourteenth session.

- 4. The First Committee considered the item at its 1079th to 1081st meetings, on 11 and 12 December 1959.
- 5. At the 1079th meeting, a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.247) was submitted by Brazil, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Japan, Poland, Romania, Sweden, the USSR, the United Arab Republic, the United Kingdom and the United States.
- 6. By part A of the draft resolution, the General Assembly, recognizing the common interest of mankind in furthering the peaceful use of outer space and the great importance of international co-operation in this field, would: (1) establish a Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space with the following members to serve during 1960 and 1961: Albania, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, Hungary, India, Iran, Italy, Japan, Lebanon, Mexico, Poland, Romania, Sweden, the USSR, the United Arab Republic, the United Kingdom and the United States, and request the Committee (a) to review, as appropriate, the area of international cooperation, and study practical and feasible means for giving effect to programmes in the peaceful uses of outer space which could appropriately be undertaken under United Nations auspices, including, inter alia: (i) assistance for continuation on a permanent basis of the outer space research carried on within the framework of the International Geophysical Year; (ii) organization of the mutual exchange and dissemination of information on outer space research; and (iii) encouragement of national research programmes for the study of outer space, and the rendering of all possible assistance and help towards their realization; and (b) to study the nature of legal problems which may arise from exploration of outer space; (2) request the Committee to submit reports on its activities to the subsequent sessions of the General Assembly.
- 7. Under part B of the draft resolution, the General Assembly would: (1) decide to convene in 1960 or 1961, under the auspices of the United Nations, an international scientific conference for the exchange of experience in the peaceful uses of outer space; (2) request the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, in consultation with the Secretary-General and in co-operation with the appropriate specialized agencies, to work out proposals with regard to the convening of such a scientific conference; (3) request the Secretary-General, in accordance with the conclusions of the Committee, to make the necessary organizational arrangements for the conference.

- 8. At the same meeting, Belgium submitted an amendment (A/C.1/L.248) to add the words "of interested Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies" after the words "an international scientific conference".
- 9. At the 1081st meeting on 12 December 1959, the amendment submitted by Belgium (A/C.1/L.248) was adopted by a roll-call vote of 44 to 16, with 15 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Federation of Malaya, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Laos, Lebanon, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Spain, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Against: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Poland, Romania, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Cambodia, Ceylon, Cuba, Ethiopia, Finland, Ghana, Jordan, Libya, Nepal, Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Sweden, Tunisia, Yemen.

- 10. At the same meeting, the draft resolution (A/C.1/L.247), as amended, was adopted by 74 votes to none, with 1 abstention.
- 11. Following the vote, the representative of Morocco indicated that his delegation wished to be recorded as abstaining on the Belgian amendment and as voting in favour of the amended draft resolution.

Recommendation of the First Committee

12. The first Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 856th plenary meeting, on 12 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the First Committee (A/4351, para. 12). For the final text, see resolutions 1472 A (XIV) and 1472 B (XIV) below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1472 (XIV). INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION IN THE PEACEFUL USES OF OUTER SPACE

P

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the common interest of mankind as a whole in furthering the peaceful use of outer space,

Believing that the exploration and use of outer space should be only for the betterment of mankind and to the benefit of States irrespective of the stage of their economic or scientific development.

- (b) To study the nature of legal problems which may arise from the exploration of outer space;

2. Requests the Committee to submit reports on its activities to the subsequent sessions of the General Assembly.

856th plenary meeting, 12 December 1959.

В

The General Assembly,

Noting with satisfaction the successes of great significance to mankind that have been attained in the exploration of outer space in the form of the recent launching or artificial earth satellites and space rockets,

Attaching great importance to a broad development of international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space in the interests of the development of science and the improvement of the well-being of peoples,

- 1. Decides to convene in 1960 or 1961, under the auspices of the United Nations, an international scientific conference of interested Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies for the exchange of experience in the peaceful uses of outer space;
- 2. Requests the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, established in resolution A above, in consultation with the Secretary-General and in cooperation with the appropriate specialized agencies, to work out proposals with regard to the convening of such a conference;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with the conclusions of the Committee, to make the necessary organizational arrangements for holding the conference.

856th plenary meeting, 12 December 1959.

Telegram dated 26 October 1959 from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea addressed to the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General

[Original text: Russian] [29 October 1959]

- 1. On instructions from the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, I have the honour to transmit this letter to you and, through you, to the representatives of all States Members of the United Nations.
- 2. As a result of the actions of the United States of America, the Korean question, which must be settled by the Korean people itself, has again been illegally placed on the agenda of the present session of the General Assembly.
- 3. Since the Korean question is under discussion, it is quite natural that a representative of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, a party directly concerned in the matter, should participate in that discussion.
- 4. For more than ten years, however, as a result of the manoeuvres of the United States, the United Nations has discussed the Korean question on a unilateral basis without participation by a representative of the Government of the Democratic People's Repub-

- lic of Korea, and has mechanically adopted each time a United States "draft resolution" providing for the extension to all Korea of the reactionary Syngman Rhee régime; it is thus continuing to obstruct the peaceful unification of Korea.
- 5. The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea insists that the prestige of the United Nations, whose noble mission is to defend the peace and security of peoples and the right of nations to self-determination, should no longer be undermined by United States intrigues with regard to Korea; it also demands that a representative of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea should without fail be given an opportunity to take part in the discussion of the Korean question at the present session of the United Nations General Assembly.
- 6. I hope that this letter will be communicated forthwith to the representatives of all States Members of the United Nations, and that I shall be notified of the action taken as a result.

Letter dated 15 October 1959 from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea addressed to the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General, transmitting a memorandum by the Government of the Democratic People's Republic in connexion with the ninth annual report of UNCURK

[3 November 1959]

I am authorized by the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and have the honour to transmit to you, and through you, to all delegations of States Members of the United Nations the memorandum of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in connexion with the ninth annual "Report of the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea" submitted to the United Nations General Assembly at the fourteenth session for consideration.

I hope that the memorandum will be transmitted to the delegations of all States Members of the United Nations without delay and that I will be given a reply on the result.

Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea

MEMORANDUM OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE DEMOCRATIC PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF KOREA IN CONNEXION WITH THE NINTH ANNUAL "REPORT" OF UNCURK

- 1. The ninth annual "report" of the "United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea" [A/4187] submitted to the fourteenth session of the United Nations General Assembly was published at U.N. Headquarters on 8 September 1959.
- 2. The "report" of the "Commission" is, as its previous ones submitted to the United Nations, filled with worn-out contents concealing the aggressive policy of the United States towards Korea and slandering the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.
- 3. In this connexion, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea considers it necessary to expose the falsity of the "report" submitted by "UNCURK", which was created illegally through the machinations of the United States and which covers the aggressive policy of the U.S. imperialists and continues to hamper the peaceful unification of Korea, thereby enabling the representatives to the United Nations General Assembly to understand correctly the negative nature of the "Commission" and the present situation in Korea.

I

- 4. In the first part of the "report", the "United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea" touches upon questions relating to the unification of Korea.
- 5. Speaking of the so-called United Nations resolution on the Korean question which the U.S. imperialists manufactured by giving pressure to the United Nations in an attempt to expand the Syngman Rhee puppet régime to North Korea, the "Commission" tries to shift onto the Democratic People's Republic of Korea the responsibility for to date failing to materialize the unification of Korea.

- 6. But this is a practice which only those who fear or do not want a proper appraisal of things can resort to.
- 7. The responsibility for the continuation to this day, when fourteen years have elapsed since Korea was liberated from the colonial rule of Japanese imperialism, of the abnormal situation of territorial division and national split lies precisely upon the U.S. imperialists continuing to occupy South Korea and their stooge, the Syngman Rhee clique.
- 8. This is clearly proved by the historical facts of the past.
- 9. The realistic measures for settlement of the Korean question, one of the questions of postwar settlement, were envisaged in the decision of the Conference of Foreign Ministers held at Moscow in December 1945, on the basis of which the Korean question should have been settled long ago.
- 10. But the U.S. imperialists frustrated the work of the joint Soviet-United States commission established to implement this decision, which was consistent with the interests of the Korean people, and unilaterally laid the Korean question before the second session of the United Nations General Assembly.
- 11. The placing of the Korean question on the agenda of the United Nations constituted a gross violation of Article 107 of the United Nations Charter and was illegal from the outset.
- 12. Under the pressure of the U.S. imperialists the United Nations discussed the Korean question without the participation of the representative of the Korean people, adopted a resolution entirely running counter to the interests of the Korean people and illegally sent to Korea the "United Nations Temporary Commission on Korea", thus flagrantly encroaching upon the national rights of the Korean people.
- 13. The U.S. imperialists carried out separate elections in South Korea on 10 May 1948 under the wings of the said "Commission" and with cruel police pressure, manufactured the Syngman Rhee puppet government and further aggravated the danger of territorial division and national split.
- 14. Under these circumstances the entire Korean people rose in the national salvation struggle for tiding over the crisis created in the fatherland. The conference of the leaders of North and South Korean political parties and social organizations which was convened to realize the burning aspiration of the entire people for the unification and independence of the country, decided to reject resolutely the South Korean "National Assembly" manufactured illegally and the South Korean puppet government to be established by the "National Assembly" and to found the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea through democratic elections and establish the Government of the Democratic Peo- ple's Republic of Korea with North and South Korean representatives participating.

- 15. On the basis of the decision of the conference, democratic general elections were held throughout North and South Korea on 25 August 1948. In these elections 99.97 per cent of the total electorate went to the polls in North Korea and 77.52 per cent of the total electorate in South Korea went to the polls, despite rude suppression and open terror.
- 16. As a result, there were established the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the supreme organ of sovereign power representing the genuine will of the Korean people, and the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, which is a legal government.
- 17. The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea has, since the day of its founding, maintained the position that the Korean question is a matter concerning the Korean people themselves and that it must be settled peacefully by the Korean people themselves on a democratic basis without any interference from outside, and taken numerous reasonable and practical measures for its realization.
- 18. The Presidium of the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, in particular, proposed on 19 June 1950 to actualize the peaceful unification by means of uniting the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the South Korean "National Assembly" into a single, all-Korea legislative organ.
- 19. In reply to this reasonable and peaceful proposal, the U.S. imperialists instigated the Syngman Rhee clique to provoke an aggressive war.
- 20. They had prepared this war long before. Numerous documents and materials found in the secret archives of the Syngman Rhee puppet government clearly testify to this.
- 21. In a letter of 30 September 1949, addressed to Robert T. Oliver, his American adviser, Syngman Rhee pointed out: "I feel strongly that now is the most psychological moment when we should take an aggressive measure. . . . Our line of defense must be strengthened along the Tumen and Yalu rivers."
- 22. On 17 June 1950, immediately prior to the outbreak of war, John Foster Dulles visited South Korea as a special envoy of Truman, the then U.S. President and inspected the 38th parallel. He said to the officers and soldiers of the South Korean puppet army: "The time is not far off when you will be able to display your strength." And he told Syngman Rhee and Shin Sung Mo, his then Minister of National Defense: "Start the aggression against the North accompanied by a counter-propaganda on the grounds that the North has invaded the South first. If you can but hold out for one week, everything will go on smoothly, for during this period the United States... will compel the United Nations to take action in whose name land, naval and air forces would be mobilized."
- 23. The situation developed according to the evil design of the U.S. imperialists. No sooner had they instigated Syngman Rhee to provoke the war than they hurriedly convened the United Nations Security Council and manufactured, without the participation of the representatives of the Soviet Union and the People's

- Republic of China—permanent members of the Security Council—the "resolution" on dispatching the "U.N. forces" to Korea.
- 24. In the war against the Korean people the U.S. imperialists, making fraudulent use of the U.N. flag and unscrupulous about the ways and means, committed brutal atrocities unprecedented in war history, including the use of bacterial and chemical weapons.
- 25. But they met with shameful defeat at the hands of the Korean people, who had risen for the freedom of their fatherland and national independence, and were compelled in the end to sign the Armistice Agreement.
- 26. The armistice opened up a new possibility for the peaceful settlement of the Korean question.
- 27. Paragraph 60 (article IV) of the Armistice Agreement 1/2 provides that, in order to insure the peaceful settlement of the Korean question, a political conference of a higher level shall be held within three months after the Armistice Agreement becomes effective to settle through negotiation the questions of the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Korea, the peaceful settlement of the Korean question, etc.
- 28. But, due to the destructive action of the U.S. side, the convocation of the political conference was frustrated at the preliminary talks.
- 29. The Geneva Foreign Ministers Conference held in April 1954 [Korean Political Conference], was a good opportunity for the peaceful settlement of the Korean question.
- 30. Proceeding from the basic position of the Government of our Republic on the peaceful unification of the country, the delegation of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea advanced reasonable proposals.
- 31. In its proposals, the delegation envisaged the holding of general elections to a legislative organ which would establish a united government of Korea on the basis of the free will of the entire Korean population and, for this end, to organize an all-Korea committee composed of North and South Korean representatives. It was also proposed that all foreign forces withdraw from the entire territory of Korea within a definite period of time and that the countries concerned, which are most interested in preserving peace in the Far East, reach an agreement on ensuring the peaceful development of Korea and creating conditions which would be conducive to speedily settling the task of materializing the unification.
- 32. These proposals were the most constructive ones capable of settling the Korean question peacefully at an early date, eliminating new military adventures and ensuring peace in Korea.
- 33. The delegations of the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China, which sincerely desire the peaceful unification of Korea, gave full support to the proposals of our delegation.
- 34. But the U.S. delegation and its supporters rejected all the constructive proposals of our delegation, thereby exposing once again their evil intention - to prevent the Koreans from materializing the peaceful unification of Korea by themselves. Hence, the Geneva Conference failed to bring about any positive result on the Korean question.

- 35. Since then, despite the continued obstructionist machinations of the U.S. imperialists, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea has consistently made sincere efforts to materialize the peaceful unification of the country at an early date.
- 36. The Supreme People's Assembly and the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea advanced numerous reasonable proposals and measures for convocation of a joint conference of the representatives of various political parties and social organizations and personages of all walks of life in North and South Korea, or a joint session of the supreme legislative organs of North and South Korea, with a view to discussing the question of the peaceful unification of the country; for convocation of an international conference for the peaceful settlement of the Korean question; for free contacts and visits between North and South Korean political parties and social organizations and their leading figures; for the reduction of the numerical strength of the armed forces of North and South Korea to 100,000 or less for each side; for declaration by North and South not to resort to the use of force against each other; and for economic and cultural intercourse, trade, travel and correspondence between North and South Korea.
- 37. The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea has also taken a series of compatriotic measures of relief for the unemployed, foodless peasants and war orphans swarming in the streets and villages of South Korea, as well as for the typhoon and flood sufferers.
- 38. But the U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee clique have rejected and are still rejecting all these proposals and measures of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.
- 39. Particularly, proceeding from the created situation, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea issued an important statement on 5 February last year in an endeavour to open a new phase for accelerating the peaceful unification of the country. In the statement, the Government of our Republic urged the simultaneous withdrawal of the U.S. forces and all other foreign troops including the Chinese People's Volunteers from North and South Korea and at the same time, proposed that all-Korea free elections be held within a definite period after the withdrawal of foreign troops and that negotiations be conducted between North and South on matters pertaining to economic and cultural intercourse between the two parts and the all-Korea elections.
- 40. The statement was supported, not only by the Korean people, but by the countries of the socialist camp headed by the Soviet Union and the wide public opinion of the whole world.
- 41. Especially, the Government of the People's Republic of China fully supported the statement and took the initiative in withdrawing the Chinese People's Volunteers. Thus the Chinese People's Volunteers completed their withdrawal already in October last year.

- 42. The United States should have also withdrawn its forces from South Korea following the example of the Chinese People's Volunteers.
- 43. But, instead of so doing, the United States rejected the withdrawal of its forces and is continuing to occupy South Korea under pretext of the "United Nations resolution" which was largely condemned by the world public opinion.
- 44. The drafters of the "report" of "UNCURK", while protecting that absured pretext, charge the Democratic People's Republic of Korea with unwillingness "to respond to the call by the General Assembly" of the United Nations, alleging that "so long as this unwillingness persists, the prospects of unification...remain remote" [A/4187, para.6].
- 45. The drafters of the "report" attempt to preach that general elections should be held in Korea under the supervision of the United Nations and that the U.S. forces can withdraw only after they have "achieved" their aggressive plan on the whole of Korea.
- 46. As has been substantiated on a number of occasions, however, the United Nations has from the beginning taken its one-sided position on the Korean question under the pressure of the United States and has become totally impotent and even lost its moral authority as far as the peaceful settlement of the Korean question is concerned. Under the cover of the United Nations emblem, the U.S. aggressors brought to the Korean people calamities of war without precedent in their history. Under the name of the United Nations, they have brought the Korean people intolerable misfortunes and pains.
- 47. The United Nations signed the Armistice Agreement as one of the belligerents in the Korean War.
- 48. All these facts confirm that the United Nations cannot take an impartial stand on the Korean question.
- 49. It is therefore entirely justified that we reject the United Nations "resolution on Korea".
- 50. Affecting ignorance of the tension now created in South Korea by the U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee clique, the drafters of the "report" of the "Commission" distort the truth, as if they were "abiding by" the Armistice Agreement.
- 51. In fact, before the ink with which they had signed the Armistice Agreement dried, the U.S. imperialists ignored it and concluded the "Republic of Korea-U.S. Defense Treaty" with the Syngman Rhee clique, thereby entering the road of "justifying" the occupation of South Korea by their aggressive forces and further strengthening their colonial rule over South Korea.
- 52. The U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee clique continue to violate the provisions of the Armistice Agreement which prohibit each side from engaging in hostile acts against the other. Of the hostile acts committed by the U.S. side during the period immediately after the conclusion of the Armistice Agreement on 27 July 1953 up to 14 October 1959, those formally protested by the Korean-Chinese side alone amounted to 863 cases.
- 53. The U.S. imperialists expanded the South Korean puppet army from sixteen divisions at the time of the armistice to thirty-one divisions already in 1956, thereby making Syngman Rhee boast that his army is the "fourth" strongest army in the world.

- 54. The U.S. side, which systematically violates the Armistice Agreement, committed all kinds of provocative acts to undermine the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission, which stood in the way of its violations and, in the end, unilaterally expelled in June 1956 the inspection teams of the Commission from the territory of South Korea. In June 1957, the U.S. side declared its unilateral abrogation of Paragraph 13 (d) of the Armistice Agreement prohibiting the introduction into Korea of reinforcing combat materials. The U.S. side introduced into South Korea a large quantity of new-type weapons, including 280 mm. atomic cannons, "Honest John" rockets and "Matador" guided missiles. Staging large-scale "atomic attack" manoeuvres near the military demarcation line, the U.S. side is running madly about converting South Korea into an atomic war base, thereby continuing to obstruct the peaceful unification of Korea and creating a grave danger to peace in Korea, Asia and the whole world.
- 55. As is seen above, the responsibility for the failure of materializing the peaceful unification of Korea lies, not upon the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, but entirely upon the U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee clique.

- 56. The "United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea", in the next part of its "report", tries to draw the false picture that democracy is fully displayed under the "representative government" in South Korea.
- 57. But diametrically opposite is the case.
- 58. The Syngman Rhee "régime" set up with the support of the bayonets of the U.S. imperialists, is an anti-popular, fascist, terrorist group which serves for the colonial and war policies pursued by the U.S. imperialists.
- 59. It is ridiculous to talk about the so-called democratic representative government in today's South Korea, where the Syngman Rhee clique, completely isolated from the people is barely surviving propped up by the bayonets of the U.S. imperialists.
- 60. The anti-popular and undemocratic nature of the Syngman Rhee rule finds vivid expression in the composition of South Korean "National Assembly".
- 61. Of 233 members of the fourth session of the "House of Representatives", manufactured under conditions of terror, intimidation and extortion, there is not a single representative of the working people, who are the absolute majority of the South Korean inhabitants.
- 62. The Syngman Rhee clique, panic-stricken at the anti-U.S. and anti-Syngman Rhee sentiments mounting beyond control among the people, are attempting to find a way out by unprecedented suppression, massacre and terror against them.
- 63. Whoever utters the words "peaceful unification" is persecuted in South Korea today.
- 64. The Syngman Rhee clique arrested and imprisoned more than 240,000 innocent people last year alone.
- 65. Even according to the data made public by the "Supreme Court" of South Korea, "during the period

- from January to the end of June this year, all district courts received a total of 55,800 cases of penal offence, which means that 300 criminal cases are put on trial every day on an average" (Radio Seoul, 20 September this year).
- 66. The Syngman Rhee clique has now put into effect more than 360 laws and ordinances applied under the Japanese imperialist rule and the U.S. military government which were used in severely suppressing the Korean people. (Chosun Ilbo, a South Korean newspaper, dated 26 June 1959).
- 67. The "rules on demonstration and assembly", included in the "ordinances" of the U.S. military government strictly prohibit any "unauthorized gathering". A gathering of more than three persons is still defined as illegal and the persons involved are arrested and detained.
- 68. Towards the end of last year, the Syngman Rhee clique forced through the "National Assembly" such unprecedentedly malicious laws as the new "National Security Law", "Local Self-Government Law" and over ten other amendments to the "Taxation Law" for the purpose of infringing the freedoms of individuals and further intensifying the fascist police oppression of the wide strata of the people. Suppressing the freedom of speech and press, it closed seventy-five periodicals during the last year alone, and this year another score of periodicals including Kyunghyang Shinmun, a leading newspaper of the opponents.
- 69. Nevertheless, pointing to "the closure of one of the newspapers, again avowedly for security reasons", the drafters of the "report" said: "This action has been challenged in the courts... These and various other official acts have been freely and vigorously debated by supporters and opponents alike in the Press and the National Assembly, as well as having been argued in the courts" [A/4187, para. 22]. With these ambiguous terms, they attempt to cover up the already exposed oppression of speech by the Syngman Rhee clique.
- 70. Today the Syngman Rhee clique has been isolated from the people more than ever before.
- 71. Confronted with such a situation, the Syngman Rhee clique, in an attempt to keep itself in power, is bent on intensifying the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists and further expanding the fascist police machine, while making frantic efforts to eliminate from state politics all those parties and personages not belonging to their side.
- 72. For instance in August this year, taking advantage of the revised "Local Self-Government Law" which replaced the "election system" of local officials with the "appointment system", the Syngman Rhee clique replaced with its loyal servants 559 "mayors of cities, heads of townships and myuns" and police chiefs before the expiration of their terms of office. What is more, on the ground that the "National Assembly" hampers their arbitrary administrative actions, Syngman Rhee and his clique paralyze its functions and suppress the opposition members still more severely. This is fully proved by the fact alone that on 24 December last year, the Syngman Rhee clique passed a number of bills including the new "National Security Law" immediately after having detained the opposition members in the basement of the "National Assembly" hall. Even the drafters of the "report" could not help admitting this by pointing out that "the past year has seen a number of internal political controversies" in South Korea [A/4187, para. 22].

73. Thus in today's South Korea, antagonism and feud are engendered among the ruling circles themselves and the so-called officials abuse their authority to squeeze the people by means of fraud and extortion, threat and intimidation. Even Kim Su Sun, a "National Assembly" member, went so far as to make the following figurative criticism:

"Big fishes eat middle fishes, middle fishes eat small fishes, small fishes eat pious people and pious people eat skeletons. The law of survival of the fittest that had prevailed in the society of barbarians before Christ is being applied openly" (Dong-A Ilbo, a South Korean newspaper, dated 2 September 1954).

- 74. Today the anti-popular, fascist, terrorist rule of the Syngman Rhee clique is arousing legitimate condemnation from South Korean public opinion and the wide public opinion of the world.
- 75. Cho Byung Ok, former Minister of Home Affairs of the puppet government and the supreme member of the Democratic Party, deplored it by saying:

"In this country where fair elections, which are the rudiments and basis of democratic politics, do not exist there can be no peaceful change-over of power and democratic politics are about to be eliminated" (a dispatch of the press service Dongyang Tongshin from Seoul, dated 13 September this year).

- 76. Referring to the "Government of the Republic of Korea", the December issue last year of the Chuo-Koron, an influential Japanese monthly magazine, said in an article that "with common sense it is entirely impossible to imagine that such a régime could possibly exist on earth today", and added that South Korea is "a sort of huge prison".
- 77. After his visit to South Korea, a correspondent of the London Times commented to the effect that to expect democracy in South Korea was just like waiting for a rose to blossom in a garbage bin.
- 78. Such is the reality of South Korea under the "representative government" praised by the drafters of the "report".
- 79. The last part of the "report" of the "Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea" touches upon the question of South Korean "economic situation and prospects".
- 80. It is stated in the "report" that at present the economy of South Korea "has, in general, continued to improve during the period under review" [A/4187, para. 25], and the "aid" given by the United States and the United Nations is highly praised. Such appraisal and praise, however, do not tally with the present objective realities of South Korea. They could not but confirm once again the true colour of the "Commission", whose mission it is to cover up the colonial plunder and militarization policy of the United States towards South Korea, and the nature of its activities.
- 81. Seeking, from the first days of their occupation of South Korea, to make it their military base for aggression and to convert it into a colonial market under their monopoly, the U.S. imperialists have systematically destroyed and plundered the national industry and rural economy of South Korea through the so-called "aid" and have completely seized and controlled South Korea politically, economically and militarily.

- 82. Not only have the U.S. imperialists shipped various surplus goods into South Korea under the name of "defence aid" and make an enormous amount of colonial super profit by selling them to the South Korean people at high prices, but they also allot most of the proceeds from the sale of these goods to the "national defence expenses" of the puppet government. Of the total amount of "economic aid", including the amount "earmarked" as of June 1959, 75.4 per cent was for direct military expenses (South Korean Economic Year Book, 1959). The remaining "economic aid" was also for military purpose in nature.
- 83. Even William E. Warne, economic co-ordinator of the "United Nations Command" said that "most of the U.S. aid is appropriated for supporting the South Korean army but not for producing production equipment", and admitted that "such kind of aid is ineffective in helping the Republic of Korea, which has far-reaching prospects" (Seoul Shinmun, a South Korean newspaper, 26 March 1958).
- 84. Furthermore, under the name of "aid" the U.S. monopoly capitalists are committing extortions in South Korea. The prices of such important commodities as coal, petroleum, fertilizer, etc., which are supplied to South Korea as goods under U.S. "aid", are far higher than those in international markets. The construction expenses for such establishments as the Choongju Fertilizer Factory under the "ICA 2/aid" were twice as high as the generally recognized construction cost for similar establishments (Economic Year Book, 1959). Such open, fraudulent acts being committed in South Korea are by no means a secret today.
- 85. Even Chang Taek-Sang, former Prime Minister of the puppet government and now a pro-American member of the "National Assembly", said that "the more U.S. dollars flow in, the deeper the Republic of Korea goes into bankruptcy" (South Korean journal Jayoo Segye, May 1958 issue).
- 86. The economic situation of South Korea under the colonial subordination of the United States shows that South Korea is being plunged into a more acute economic crisis and is losing even the last vestige of the possibility of developing an independent economy.
- 87. Today, the national industry in South Korea has totally gone bankrupt and ruined. The number of factories in South Korea has decreased by 56 per cent as compared with 1943, a year under Japanese imperialism, and that in manufacturing industry, in particular, reduced by 36 per cent in 1958 as compared with 1955. According to the survey made by the "Daihan Chamber of Commerce", of 2,757 enterprises inspected in the first half of 1958, 64.6 per cent suspended operation or were at a standstill (Kyunghyang Shinmun, 18 December 1958), and at the beginning of November of the same year enterprises at a standstill and out of operation were 75 per cent of the entire enterprises (a Dongyang Tongshin dispatch from Seoul, 12 November 1958).

- 88. As to the textile industry, too, which occupies the most important place in the manufacturing industry of South Korea, those factories which continued operating as of the end of last year were only 31 per cent of the medium and small enterprises in this field (South Korean magazine Industry and Economy, September 1958).
- 89. As a result, the total volume of the industrial output of South Korea has been reduced to half as compared with the last years of Japanese imperialism. Even this presents a sharp colonial lopsidedness due to the lack of foundation of an independent national industry. In 1958, textiles, foodstuffs and other industries accounted for 75 per cent of the total volume of industrial output, whereas metal and machine industries held only 5 to 6 per cent (Economic Year Book, 1959).
- 90. The "United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea" itself could not entirely ignore in its "report" the grave economic situation of South Korea.
- 91. The "Commission", while trying hard to describe the situation favourably to the United States or, at least, to picture it in mild terms, admitted the dependent nature of the South Korean economy, by saying in vague terms that despite certain "improvements, imbalances in the economy remain" and that "the financial state and operation of the factories themselves are not always satisfactory" [A/4187, paras. 28 and 29].
- 92. With the South Korean industry totally devastated, the South Korean rural villages have been the main object of exploitation by the U.S. imperialists. Keeping the feudal land ownership intact in South Korea, the U.S. imperialists are amplifying the highly lucrative colonial exploitation.
- 93. Nevertheless, the "report" of the "United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea" does not touch upon any of the essential matters on the situation of the South Korean rural economy. Though it may accord with the stand of the "Commission", which tries to close its eyes to the evil consequences of the U.S. policy of colonial enslavement towards South Korea, it could never help clarifying the truth as it stands.
- 94. The total area under cultivation is on a steady decline in South Korea. Compared with the time of the Japanese imperialist rule, it has dwindled by 600,000 chungbo 3/ and the total grain yield by 40 per cent (Economic Year Book, 1958 issue, and South Korean Monthly Survey of the Bank of Korea, January 1958 issue), and in particular, the total cotton crop is only one-fifth.
- 95. Even in 1958, which "UNCURK" has described in its "report" as the year of "the largest" rice crop "in the history of the Republic" [A/4187, para. 26], nearly 5,290,000 suk 4 of food were imported (a dispatch of the Segye Tongshin press service, dated 28 July 1958 from Seoul). No substantial change has taken place in the agricultural equipment. Conventional, backward farm implements and manual labour prevail.

- 96. The U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee puppets have not taken any measures for forest and water conservation and irrigation, which are rudimentary for maintaining agricultural production.
- 97. The damage brought every year to the rural economy by drought, storm and flood is enormous. As a result, the amount of property damaged by flood increases yearly. It was 10,500 million hwan in 1956, 24,300 million hwan in 1957 and 27,400 million hwan in 1958 respectively (a Dongyang Tongshin dispatch of 16 July 1958 from Seoul). According to data released by the special relief committee for typhoon-disaster victims under the South Korean "National Assembly", the damages caused by typhoon and flood in September this year alone amount to 105,417,456,000 hwan (a Dongyang Tongshin dispatch of 8 October 1959 from Seoul) and the number of the calamity-stricken people has now exceeded one million.
- 98. Consequently, South Korea, once known as a granary, has today been turned into an area of chronic famine.
- 99. Such extreme bankruptcy and ruin of industry and agriculture have been reflected directly in the foreign trade of South Korea. This finds expression in the "large deficits" in the balance of trade, which even the drafters of the "report" admit. In 1958, the volume of imports of South Korea increased about 23 times compared with that of exports (Economic Year Book, 1959), and the volume of exports decreased by 26 per cent as compared with the previous year (Monthly Survey of the Bank of Korea, June 1959 issue).
- 100. The over-all ruin of the productive forces and the expenditure for maintaining and strengthening the machinery of fascist rule of the puppet Syngman Rhee clique, including the huge military expenses for supporting the puppet army, plus the predatory policy of the U.S. imperialists in South Korea, have brought about extreme confusion in the financial situation of South Korea. In the financial budget of the puppet government for 1959, military and police expenses account for more than 70 per cent of the total budgetary amount of the "general account" (a dispatch of the Haptong Tongshin press service dated 26 December 1958 from Seoul). In orden to secure this huge amount of military and police expenses, the U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee clique are increasing to the utmost the taxes levied upon the South Korean population. During the period from 1949 to 1959 the amount of taxes increased 143 times. In the total amount of budgetary revenue for 1959 revenue from taxation amounts to 62 per cent.
- 101. Not satiated with this, however, the U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee clique are making up for the prodigiously swollen financial disbursement by issuing "State bonds" and obtaining loans from banks.
- 102. As of the end of 1958, the amount of "State bonds" issued by the puppet government and loans obtained from banks came to over 360,000 million hwan. The issue of notes jumped from 23,132,000,000 hwan in 1953 to 116,319,000,000 hwan in 1958 (Monthly Survey of the Bank of Korea, April 1959 issue).
- 103. The "report" of the "Commission" stated that prices were, "on an average lower than they were in the previous period" [A/4187, para. 27]. But, quite contrary to this, prices are skyrocketing in South Korea.

- 104. Taking 1947 as the base year, the price index rose from 100 to 21,143 by the end of 1958 (Monthly Survey of the Bank of Korea, June 1959 issue). "As of September 25, 1959, wholesale prices in Seoul rose by 11.6 per cent in comparison with the corresponding period of the previous year and 4.2 per cent compared with the previous month" (a Dongyang Tongshin dispatch of 26 September 1959).
- 105. "The highest prices in 5,000 years", the words which are frequently on the lips of the South Korean people now, are one of the main factors which ruin their lives in the extreme.
- 106. In South Korea unemployed and semi-employed now total 6,600,000 (Industry and Economy, 5 March 1959), who are wandering about the streets in search of employment and food.
- 107. On the pretext of the so-called "rationalization of management", the U.S. imperialists and the treacherous Syngman Rhee clique are discharging workers "en masse", while prolonging the working hours to 12-20 hours in enterprises (Industry and Economy, 20 November 1958).
- 108. The wages of South Korean workers are merely one-third of their minimum living cost and those of the workers in manufacturing industry correspond to 31.8 to 36.8 per cent (Monthly Survey of the Bank of Korea, January 1959 issue). It is a common phenomenon that even such starvation wages are kept in arrears for several months.
- 109. Labour accidents are yearly increasing in South Korea because labour protection and security measures are almost lacking. Even according to the figures released by the puppet "Ministry of Health and Social Affairs", in 1958 the number of workers who suffered from labour accidents increased by 66 per cent compared with 1957 (Economic Year Book, 1959).
- 110. Because of usury, exploitation of rent, heavy tax collection and the sharp disparity in the exchange of industrial goods for agricultural produce, the peasants' living is also steadily deteriorating.
- 111. The number of foodless peasant households reaches 700,000 to one million every year in South Korea (South Korean journal Jaijung, April 1957 issue; Kyunghyang Shinmun of 17 April 1958).
- 112. In the one year from September 1957 to September 1958 the amount of debts of the South Korean peasant households grew from 88,500 million hwan to 120,000 million hwan, a 35 per cent increase (South Korean newspaper Pusan Ilbo of 30 November 1958). During the period from 1953 to the end of 1957, 400,000 peasant households left their farm lands (a Segye Tongshin dispatch, 10 September 1958).
- 113. The living of the South Korean craftsmen, intellectuals, medium and small traders and industrialists is also in a wretched plight. Only the U.S. imperialists and the traitorous Syngman Rhee clique are enriching themselves at the expense of the sufferings of the South Korean people.
- 114. All the facts mentioned above testify that the economic situation of South Korea under the U.S.

imperialist occupation does not show any improvement or stability as described in the "report" of the "Commission".

IV

- 115. The situation in the northern half, where the people are the masters of the country, is quite different from that in the southern half under the U.S. occupation.
- 116. Today people are leading a happy life in the northern half.
- 117. The national economy has been completely destroyed during the war forced upon it by the U.S. imperialists. But the people are well off now. This is solely because the policy of the Government of our Republic is thoroughly popular, wise and just.
- 118. Commencing the post-war rehabilitation and construction, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was confronted with the far-reaching task of doing away with the colonial lopsidedness left over by the protracted, pernicious, colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists and laying foundations for the future socialist industrialization of the country instead of simply rehabilitating the war-devastated economy. It thus set forth the general line of giving priority to the development of heavy industry, simultaneously developing light industry and agriculture in order to stabilize the ruined living of the people.
- 119. The three-year plan for the post-war rehabilitation and development of the national economy (1954-1956), drafted in conformity with the above line, was successfully carried out. The first five-year plan (1957-1961) was fulfilled in respect of the gross value of industrial production at the end of June of this year, two years and a half ahead of the set time.
- 120. In 1958, the total value of industrial production was twice that of 1956, four times that of the pre-war year of 1949 and 4.3 times that of the pre-liberation year of 1944; while the output of the machine-building and metal-working industries was 40 times that of 1946, and of light industry 80 times that of the days of the Japanese imperialist rule.
- 121. The tempo of the industrial production increased by more than 42 per cent each year throughout the post-war period of five years, and during the first half of this year, it increased by as much as 75 per cent compared to the corresponding period of last year. Specifically, pig iron increased 2.3 times, structural steel 132 per cent, metal-cutting machines 5.4 times, cement 182 per cent and fabrics 136 per cent.
- 122. Thus, the industrial production this year is expected to be seven times that of the pre-war year 1949.
- 123. With the powerful base of heavy industry and the reliable base of light industry established thanks to rapid industrial development, the northern half, formerly a backward agricultural country, has today been turned into an advanced industrial-agricultural country.
- 124. Hence we are making on our own various kinds of machines and equipment required by all fields of the national economy, while producing a large amount of tractors, lorries, ships and heavy machines.

- 125. The rural economy has also developed, incessantly scoring fresh successes. The total grain crop last year exceeded by 1.4 times that of the pre-war period and was twice that of 1946, just after liberation.
- 126. This year an unusual bumper crop is expected thanks to the great success attained in expanding the irrigated acreage by 377,000 chungbo in only six months following September last year, to the carrying out of forest and water conservation to prevent flood and drought damage and to the large-scale introduction of intensive farming methods. The irrigation of paddy and dry fields as well as the electrification and mechanization of the rural areas will be completed in the very near future.
- 127. The rapid development of industry and agriculture resulted in raising the people's living standard to a considerable extent. In 1958 the real income of the factory and office workers was 1.6 times more than in 1949.
- 128. After the war, price cuts were carried out on a number of occasions, with the result that the index of State retail prices in 1958 was reduced by 45 per cent compared with that in 1953 and the price index of foodstuffs by 28 per cent.
- 129. The poor peasants who had occupied approximately 40 per cent of the total peasant households immediately after the war changed their status, with the living standard of the peasantry in general enhanced to the level of middle peasants.
- 130. The people's cultural life, too, underwent a great change. In 1958 alone the working people were given modern houses with the floor space of 2,240,000 square meters and 244 million won was appropriated for their social insurance, rest, health and education, etc.
- 131. Effective 1 November 1958, the compulsory middle-school education system was put into practice. A universal compulsory technical education system will be enforced in the near future. A free education system has been already put into effect at schools of all levels throughout the country.
- 132. In addition, a wide network of schools for the working people has been established in all enterprises, thereby ensuring everybody the right to and the possibility of studying.
- 133. A system of free treatment was also established in the medical institutions, the network of which is expanding year after year. In the previous year, the number of institutions for medical treatment and the prevention of diseases increased by 155 times compared with that of the period of the Japanese imperialist rule.
- 134. On the basis of such achievements, the people in the northern half are now able to lead a happy and prosperous life.

- 135. The situations of North and South Korea, which were liberated on the same day and at the same time, are in sharp contrast.
- 136. The cause of the sufferings of the South Korean inhabitants and of the national misfortunes of the entire Korean people emanating from the division of the country lies in the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists.
- 137. While occupying South Korea under the pretext of implementing the so-called "U.N. resolution", they are trying to conceal their aggressive intention and evade the responsibility for hindering the peaceful unification of Korea.
- 138. Every year, as is their customary practice, the U.S. imperialists place the Korean question on the agenda of the United Nations General Assembly, to make it discuss the question illegally without the participation of the representative of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the party concerned.
- 139. Thus, the U.S. imperialists have continued to hinder the peaceful solution of the Korean question by forcing the General Assembly to adopt repeatedly and mechanically the worn-out "resolution" manufactured for the purpose of expanding the reactionary rule of the Syngman Rhee clique to North Korea.
- 140. The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea considers that the United Nations, as the organ of peace, must not be utilized any longer by the U.S. imperialists for their aggressive policy against Korea and must not take action derogatory to its prestige, but must take measures for the immediate withdrawal from South Korea of the U.S. imperialist aggressive troops disguised as the "U.N. forces" and for the immediate dissolution of "UNCURK".
- 141. The Korean question concerns the Korean people themselves. It should be settled by the Korean people themselves on a democratic basis with no foreign interference whatsoever. It should be solved speedily and peacefully by means of establishing a united organ of sovereign power through general elections in North and South Korea.
- 142. To this end, the U.S. imperialist troops should withdraw from South Korea at the earliest date; representatives of North and South Korea should sit together at one place to conduct negotiations on the peaceful unification of their fatherland; the free activities of political parties and social organizations should be ensured throughout North and South Korea; and contacts between North and South, including economic and cultural intercourse, should materialize.
- 143. The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is convinced that the States Members of the United Nations and their representatives will pay their due attention to its righteous stand on, and its consistent efforts for, the peaceful unification of the country.

[Original text: English] [30 November 1959]

- 1. At its 294th plenary meeting, on 7 October 1950, the General Assembly adopted resolution 376 (V) on the problem of the independence of Korea, and established the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea (UNCURK).
- 2. On 11 August 1959, in accordance with its terms of reference, UNCURK submitted a report (A/4187 and Corr.1) covering the period from 31 July 1958 to 11 August 1959.
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly included in the agenda of the fourteenth session the item entitled "The Korean question: report of the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea", and referred it to the First Committee.
- 4. By a telegram dated 26 October 1959 (A/C.1/822), the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea requested the participation of a representative of that Government in the discussion of the Korean question at the fourteenth session.
- 5. The First Committee also had before it a letter dated 15 October 1959 from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea addressed to the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General (A/C.1/823).
- 6. The First Committee considered the item at its 1061st to 1066th meetings from 23 to 27 November 1959.

- 7. At the 1061st meeting, the Committee had before it two draft resolutions:
- (a) A draft resolution submitted by the Soviet Union (A/C.1/L.243), which provided that the Committee, recognizing that, in the absence of representatives of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and of the Republic of Korea, discussion of the Korean question could not be productive, should decide to invite representatives of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Republic of Korea to participate, without the right to vote, in the discussion of the Korean question;
- (b) A draft resolution submitted by the United States (A/C.1/L.244), which provided that the Committee should decide to invite a representative of the Republic of Korea to participate, without the right to vote, in the discussion of the Korean question.
- 8. At the same meeting, a motion by the United States of America for priority for its draft resolution was adopted by 38 votes to 18, with 15 abstentions. The United States draft resolution (A/C.1/L.244) was adopted by 49 votes to 10, with 15 abstentions, while the USSR draft resolution (A/C.1/L.243) was rejected by 40 votes to 22, with 11 abstentions.
- 9. On 24 November 1959, Australia, Belgium, Colombia, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the Philippines, Thailand, Turkey, the Union of South Africa, the United Kingdom and the United States submitted a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.245). The preamble provided that the General Assembly would: (a) reaffirm its resolutions 112 (II), 195 (III), 293 (IV), 376 (V), 811 (IX), 910 A (X),

1010 (XI), 1180 (XII) and 1264 (XIII); (b) note that, despite the exchange of correspondence between the communist authorities concerned and the United Kingdom on behalf of the Governments of countries which had contributed forces to the United Nations Command in Korea, in which those Governments expressed their sincere desire to see a lasting settlement of the Korean question in accordance with United Nations resolutions and their willingness to explore any measures designed to bring about reunification on this basis, the communist authorities continued to refuse to cooperate with the United Nations in bringing about the peaceful and democratic resolution of the Korean problem; (c) regret that the communist authorities continued to deny the competence and authority of the United Nations to deal with the Korean question, claiming that any resolution on that question adopted by the United Nations was null and void; and (d) note further that the United Nations forces, which had been sent to Korea in accordance with resolutions of the United Nations, had in greater part already been withdrawn and that the Governments concerned were prepared to withdraw their remaining forces from Korea when the conditions for a lasting settlement laid down by the General Assembly had been fulfilled. The operative part provided that the Assembly should: (1) reaffirm that the objectives of the United Nations in Korea were to bring about by peaceful means the establishment of a unified, independent and democratic Korea under a representative form of government, and the full restoration of international peace and security in the area; (2) call upon the communist authorities concerned to accept those established United Nations objectives in order to achieve a settlement in Korea based on the fundamental principles for unification set forth by the nations participating on behalf of the United Nations in the Korean Political Conference held at Geneva in 1954, and reaffirmed by the Assembly, and to agree at an early date on the holding of genuinely free elections in accordance with the principles endorsed by the Assembly; (3) request UNCURK to continue its work in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the Assembly; and (4) request the Secretary-General to place the Korean question on the provisional agenda of the fifteenth session.

10. At its 1066th meeting, on 27 November 1959, the First Committee adopted the fourteen-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/L.245) by a roll-call vote of 49 to 9, with 19 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Laos, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Venezuela.

Against: Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, Finland, Ghana, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Nepal, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, United Arab Republic, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Recommendation of the First Committee

11. The First Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 851st plenary meeting, on 9 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the First Committee (A/4307, para. 11). For the final text, see resolution 1455 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1455 (XIV). THE KOREAN QUESTION

The General Assembly,

Having received the report of the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea (A/4187 and Corr.1),

Reaffirming its resolutions 112 (II) of 14 November 1947, 195 (III) of 12 December 1948, 293 (IV) of 21 October 1949, 376 (V) of 7 October 1950, 811 (IX) of 11 December 1954, 910 A (X) of 29 November 1955, 1010 (XI) of 11 January 1957, 1180 (XII) of 29 November 1957 and 1264 (XIII) of 14 November 1958,

Noting that, despite the exchange of correspondence between the communist authorities concerned and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland on behalf of the Governments of countries which have contributed forces to the United Nations Command in Korea, in which these Governments expressed their sincere desire to see a lasting settlement of the Korean question in accordance with United Nations resolutions and their willingness to explore any measures designed to bring about reunification on this basis, the communist authorities continue to refuse to co-operate with the United Nations in bringing about a peaceful and democratic solution of the Korean problem,

Regretting that the communist authorities continue to deny the competence and authority of the United Nations to deal with the Korean question, claiming that any resolution on this question adopted by the United Nations is null and void,

Noting further that the United Nations forces which were sent to Korea in accordance with resolutions of the United Nations have for the greater part already been withdrawn, and that the Governments concerned are prepared to withdraw their remaining forces from Korea when the conditions for a lasting settlement laid down by the General Assembly have been fulfilled,

- 1. Reaffirms that the objectives of the United Nations in Korea are to bring about, by peaceful means, the establishment of a unified, independent and democratic Korea under a representative form of government, and the full restoration of international peace and security in the area;
- 2. Calls upon the communist authorities concerned to accept these established United Nations objectives in order to achieve a settlement in Korea based on the fundamental principles for unification set forth by the nations participating on behalf of the United Nations in the Korean Political Conference held at Geneva in 1954, and reaffirmed by the General Assembly, and to agree
- at an early date on the holding of genuinely free elections in accordance with the principles endorsed by the Assembly;
- 3. Requests the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea to continue its work in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;
- 4. Requests the Secretary-General to place the Korean question on the provisional agenda of the fifteenth session of the General Assembly.

851st plenary meeting, 9 December 1959.

Proposals for the continuation of United Nations assistance to Palestine refugees Document submitted by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [15 June 1959]

INTRODUCTION

At the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, in the course of its consideration of the annual report of the Director of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA), I undertook to make such proposals for the continuation of United Nations assistance to Palestine refugees as I might consider helpful or necessary to put forward to the General Assembly. It was understood that in the preparation of such proposals I would look into the technical operation of UNRWA, whose present mandate is due to expire on 30 June 1960. 1/

After a careful examination of the problem of the Palestine refugees in its various aspects, I recommend the continuation of UNRWA pending, as expressed by the General Assembly (resolution 393 (V)), the "reintegration of the refugees into the economic life of the Near East, either by repatriation or resettlement...". At present, this is envisaged in the other relevant General Assembly resolution (resolution 194 (III)), as resulting from the choice of the refugees themselves.

I base my recommendation on an analysis of the three predominant factors in the refugee problem—the psychological, political and economic—an analysis which is given in part I of this document. Part II contains recommendations for certain arrangements which would constitute improvements in the continued work of UNRWA. In keeping with my undertaking to the General Assembly, this report is limited to the question of United Nations assistance to the refugees; thus, no proposals for a solution of the Palestine problem as a whole, or for the refugee problem as such, are set out in this paper. However, a development along the lines herein discussed might facilitate steps towards a resolution of such problems with justice and equity for all concerned.

GENERAL ANALYSIS

- 1. Previous resolutions of the General Assembly on the subject of the Palestine refugees, the recent annual reports of the Director of UNRWA and relevant debates in the General Assembly reflect the predominant factors in the refugee problem. As generally recognized, these are psychological, political and economic in nature. An understanding of the problem is easier if the different aspects are considered separately first. I shall begin with a consideration of the economic aspect because this establishes a framework within which the political and psychological aspects can be viewed more constructively.
- 2. Viewed from the economic angle, the reintegration of close to one million Palestine refugees into the productive life of the Near East presents problems similar to those faced in all cases of reintegration into the economic life of a largely unemployed population. This will be true wherever and however the reintegration takes place in the Near East. We can, therefore, concentrate our attention for the moment on an economic analysis, dealing with the area as a whole.

- 3. As complete an analysis as available information permits, together with the supporting statistical data, is annexed hereto. It gives a survey of the key economic indicators and projections with regard to all of the countries concerned in the Near East and for the area as an economic unit, primarily for the ten-year period 1960-1970.
- 4. As it appears from these statistics, the national income per caput in all the Arab countries remains very low, although the rate of increase of the national income is now fairly high in some cases. At income levels like these, it is not to be anticipated that reintegration of a refugee population, over and above the absorption of the natural population increase, could be brought about if it had to be accompanied by a lowering of the income per caput. If this did happen, the result might well be a fall in the rate of capital formation, which would hamper still further an increase of income.
- 5. In these circumstances, it is realistic to assume that the reintegration of the refugees in the Near East would have to run parallel to an increase in the national income at least proportional to the number reintegrated. That, in turn, would require that the added population be productively employed with at least capital equipment equivalent to that available to those already in productive life. The conclusion is that the reintegration must go hand in hand with such a new capital formation. If the reintegration, in practice, would have to be co-ordinated with some increase of the per caput income-which seems to be, if not necessary, at least highly desirable—the increase in national income and in capital formation would, of course, have to be more than equivalent to the addition to the population.
- 6. Given the present economic situation in the area, we can, in general terms, state that the reintegration of the refugees through normal economic processes into the productive life will, for the immediate future at least, require capital imports sufficient to render possible an increase in national income and capital formation preferably more than proportional, but at least proportional, to the increase in population. From an economic viewpoint, such capital imports would represent sound investment in an area with great potentialities and great needs for a more diversified production. In the long run, with increasing revenues from oil in some parts of the region, the emphasis would switch from capital imports to investment of surpluses in the areas where reintegration takes place.
- 7. The capital formation will to a large extent have to take the form of agricultural and industrial investments. The agricultural investments would have to take place in semi-arid areas of low natural productivity, which would probably require fairly great amounts in order to be put into satisfactory production. In this context, the Israel experience of the capital needed per head of the population for such a development of investments is of interest. I refer to the annex regarding these and other relevant data.

- 8. An additional factor that has to be taken into account is that agriculture, in order to remain competitive, will probably have to be highly mechanized, which, in turn, will render necessary the opening up of new areas of production, with ensuing investment, in order to absorb the agricultural population set free in the process of mechanization.
- 9. The population increases foreseen in the area are considerable. On the other hand, the natural resources of part of the region may in the years ahead yield considerably increased income in foreign exchange. Thus, and quite apart from the refugee problem, a significant degree of general economic development for the area as a whole will be required and possible. In general, the region can be seen as economically viable in the long run provided there is a fair degree of mobility of capital or labour, or both, among at least some of its parts. This will be encouraged if the area can begin soon economic development of appropriate scope, thereby providing attractive investment opportunities for a significant portion of such surplus capital as may become available from its natural resources.
- 10. Viewed from an economic angle, the reintegration of the Palestine refugees into productive life, although it must be considered as a fairly long process, is perfectly within reach provided that the area can be developed through sufficient capital formation; the recent acceleration in the rate of progress and the great natural resources are encouraging elements. However, capital imports would probably have to be considerable, if it is found desirable that reintegration be furthered without considerable delays.
- 11. Viewed in the perspective of what has been said, the unemployed population represented by the Palestine refugees should be regarded not as a liability but, more justly, as an asset for the future; it is a reservoir of manpower which in the desirable general economic development will assist in the creation of higher standards for the whole population of the area. It follows that, irrespective of the fact that humanitarian reasons would urgently call for continued assistance to the refugees, such assistance is strongly indicated as a sound part of any programme of economic development for the area.
- 12. In the light of these considerations, and disregarding for the moment both political and psychological factors as well as the humanitarian aspects of the problem, I strongly and unreservedly recommend the continuance of the United Nations activities in support of the refugees, for all the time and to all the extent necessary, pending the reintegration of the refugee population into the productive life of the area, for which there are economic reasons to hope in connexion with its general development. This will require the prior, or at least concurrent, resolution of political and psychological problems, to which the discussion can now turn.
- 13. The question arises where the integration of the refugee population can or should come about. Short of further and intense studies it is impossible to say where that could best be achieved from an economic viewpoint. The absence of these studies, however, should not delay the general development to which reference has just been made. This can and should proceed on the basis of information already available. There is no immediate danger of over-development in any particular part of the area.

14. The question where integration should be sought has, as is well known, an important political aspect. In paragraph 11 of resolution 194 (III) the General Assembly:

"Resolves that the refugees wishing to return to their homes and live at peace with their neighbours should be permitted to do so at the earliest practicable date, and that compensation should be paid for the property of those choosing not to return and for loss of or damage to property which, under principles of international law or in equity, should be made good by the Governments or authorities responsible".

The stand thus taken by the General Assembly would involve integration of refugees into the productive life of Israel as well as of the Arab countries in accordance with the choice of the refugees themselves. This stand has been consistently maintained by the Arab Governments concerned. However, Israel, stressing that the resolution relates to "refugees wishing ... to live at peace with their neighbours...", has limited itself to offering, with conditions, a form of compensation to former landowners in the country and does not exclude an extension of the uniting-of-families scheme under which former Arab residents have already come back to Israel territory.

15. The economic development which has been presented here as necessary to an integration of the refugees requires that we overcome various political difficulties which now hamper progress in the desirable direction. One of them is the Palestine problem in its various aspects; another one the problem of inter-Arab relationships; a third one the problem of an Arab economic co-operation so framed as to render possible the exploitation of the natural resources of the area to the full benefit of all the countries in the area. In the two last aspects mentioned, important progress has been registered. Attention may be drawn especially to the decision of the Economic Council of the Arab League to implement a previous decision regarding an Arab development fund and to establish a preparatory council for Arab economic unity. However, fairly complete mobility of capital within the area can only be regarded as a long-range objectivenot an immediate possibility. Regarding the Palestine problem no progress towards a solution is now in view.

16. While, under prevailing conditions, there is nothing to prevent internal economic development in each of the countries from proceeding to the extent possible, at least a gradual approach to the solution of the political problems mentioned above is a condition for that degree of development, on a regional or on a national basis, which is attainable and highly desirable in view of the unsatisfactory level of income in the area. In these circumstances, it is not adequate to direct attention primarily to the relationship which exists between these political problems and the question of the refugees. In fact, a solution of those political problems should be sought, inter alia. in order to create conditions for a sound general economic development in the area, irrespective of its significance for the reintegration of the refugees. If the problems are solved sufficiently well to provide for such conditions, the proper political setting would probably ipso facto be created also for a solution of the refugee problem in its political aspects.

17. Although the refugee problem may, usefully, in the first instance be studied in economic and political terms, it is basically a human problem. No reintegration would be satisfactory, or even possible, were it to be brought about by forcing people into their new positions against their will. It must be freely accepted, if it is to yield lasting results in the form of economic and political stability. The views now voiced by spokesmen of refugees would seem to indicate that the refugees would not voluntarily accept integration into the productive life unless they have been given freedom of choice in accordance with the United Nations decision-or in some other acceptable way—as they now regard such freedom as the means through which the wrong that they consider themselves to have suffered could be put right and their individual self-respect safeguarded. However, it should be noted that a de facto economic integration—that is, an integration which does not result from a choice in accordance with the resolution-would not prejudice any rights established by the resolution. In view of this serious psychological problem it is to be hoped that in the course of the lengthy process which must be anticipated in the economic sphere, ways will be found to bring about a mutually satisfactory adjustment of stands and reactions on all sides which would resolve these psychological difficulties by the time the integration of most of the refugees becomes an economic possibility.

18. It follows from the preceding argument that my previous recommendation for the continuance of the work of UNRWA is not conditioned by political considerations although such considerations may lend added strength to the economic reasons on which I base my recommendation. The perspective is not a discouraging one, provided that the world is willing to assist the region in its economic development and provided, further, that step by step and as economic conditions permit, progress regarding the political and psychological obstacles is sought in a constructive spirit and with a sense of justice and realism.

19. Just as I support the continuance of UNRWA pending progress in the economic field, I recommend, after a careful study of the technical operation of UNRWA, certain arrangements which seem to me to be indicated as essential improvements in the continued work of the Agency. In part II of this paper, I will turn to those improvements, the main significance of which is that the UNRWA operation should be so conducted as to be in harmony with the general view of the refugee problem which I have set out above.

Part II

TECHNICAL CONSIDERATIONS

1. The technical matters to which I would invite the General Assembly's attention fall under four main headings: (a) who is to receive assistance; (b) how this assistance should be administered; (c) of what it should consist; and (d) the status of the administering authority, UNRWA.

(a) Recipients of assistance

- 2. The annual reports of the Directors of UNRWA 2 / have made frequent references to a problem under this heading which has given serious and continuing concern. I refer to the facts that (a) there are at present a considerable number of persons who receive assistance from UNRWA to which they are not now entitled, and (b) there is an approximately equivalent number of persons who are entitled to assistance but who cannot be given it because of limited funds. In the first category are mainly those who receive assistance on behalf of the unreported dead, those who are fraudulently registered as refugees, and those who are now earning incomes sufficient for their own support; in the latter category are mainly certain children and some persons who have lost a previous source of income and are now in need. According to the best estimates available, the numbers in the two categories are, as indicated, approximately equal and there is therefore no question, for the present at least, of misuse of internationally contributed funds. Moreover, from a purely economic point of view, the only relevant question is need, and on this basis, it is clear that most of those who receive assistance, with the exception of those with steady incomes, do need it.
- 3. What must be of concern to an agency of the United Nations, however, is the equity with which available assistance is distributed. If UNRWA were to be terminated at the end of its present mandate in 1960, matters could be allowed to stand as they are; but the indefinite continuation of UNRWA makes it necessary and desirable, particularly from the point of view of the refugees themselves, that the position be regularized.
- 4. This should consist in the application in full of what UNRWA has in fact endeavoured to do over the past several years, but with only partial success. It should be recalled at this point that UNRWA's working definition of a person eligible for its services is someone who, at the time of the outbreak of the conflict in 1948, had lived for two years in that part of the former Palestine which has become the State of Israel. and who lost both his home and his means of livelihood as a result of that conflict and is in need of assistance. This definition is not contained in any resolution of the General Assembly but has been stated in annual reports of the Director and tacitly approved by the Assembly. It has in fact two parts: the first concerns the status of a person as a bona fide refugee, and this of course does not change; the second has to do with a refugee's economic position or need for assistance, which can change from day to day. This distinction provides the key to a system of administration satisfactory to all concerned.
- 5. What is specifically required is a rectification of the present rolls on the basis of the first part of the definition, that is, the deletion from the rolls of those who are ineligible or those who are no longer eligible (the fraudulently registered and the unreported dead) and the addition thereto of those who are eligible (mainly the children and adults not previously registered). Since births have exceeded deaths over the past several years, this process cannot help but result in an increase in the ration rolls. Thereafter, arrangements must be in effect for keeping the rolls current. It will be essential to have the full co-operation of the host Governments and the refugees on the one hand and, on the other, assurances by the contributing countries that UNRWA has sufficient funds.

- 6. The application of the second part of the definition -the determination of need-is and ought to remain an entirely distinct process administratively. The fact that this is a problem at all, that is, that there is a fairly significant number or refugees receiving assistance which they do not need, is ample evidence of the willingness and the desire of the refugee to work and become self-supporting whenever he can. What is important, particularly in terms of the analysis in part I, is that the refugee be encouraged to take advantage of economic opportunity when it occurs, and for this purpose he must have the assurance that he can again claim assistance if and when he needs it within a reasonable period. It must be recalled at this juncture that in the present state of economic development throughout most of the Near East, the kind of economic opportunity that is available to any unemployed population is to a very large extent casual or seasonal or, if of a longer term nature, often subject to sudden change. Moreover, wages offered to a refugee are usually based on the assumption that he will continue to receive assistance from UNRWA. All of this means that income is often precarious, and considerable flexibility of administration is consequently essential.
- 7. The Agency has developed the technical means for handling this matter through what it calls the graduated income scale. Such scales have been worked out in relation to the level of income and cost of living in each of the host countries. They are so designed that assistance is withdrawn progressively as income rises and, as an incentive, the amount of additional income which brings with it a reduction in the particular service is always greater than the value to the refugee of that particular service on the open market. Again, the full co-operation of the host Governments and the refugees will be required and sufficient funds must be assured so that UNRWA can employ the scales with the necessary flexibility.
- 8. Although this matter is not, strictly speaking, within the terms of reference of the present study, I cannot let this occasion pass without referring to certain groups of persons who are excluded by a technicality from receiving assistance from UNRWA, i.e., those who have lost their means of livelihood but not their homes, under the UNRWA definition. They have been variously called "economic refugees" or, in the more technical language of UNRWA, "other claimants for relief". A full report was prepared by the Director of UNRWA and submitted to the General Assembly in 1955. 3/ These persons include particularly the frontier villagers in Jordan, certain of the Bedouin and the Gaza poor, that is, mainly persons who still have their homes, but whose means of livelihood have been lost or greatly affected. The stand of the General Assembly is understood to be that UNRWA should not give these people assistance. There is, however, no doubt that many of them are in greater need now than some of the refugees in UNRWA's care. In simple humanity, something should be done for them.

(b) Administration of assistance

- 9. There are, in logic, two ways whereby assistance from the United Nations can be administered: by the Governments of the countries in which the refugees live (on the basis of a financial subsidy), or by an organ of the United Nations itself. The latter alternative also offers two choices, at least theoretically: to continue UNRWA or to create a new organization to take its place. The Agency has the experienced personnel, has demonstrated its efficiency and has gained the confidence of the refugees and the host Governments in its integrity. There would seem to be no reason to change and every reason to retain the organization as such. There are, therefore and in fact, only two alternatives: administration by the host Governments or by UNRWA.
- 10. Heretofore, because of the underlying philosophy of short-term assistance, the question whether UNRWA should administer all or any part of the assistance was hopelessly entangled in political considerations. The establishment of the principle of long-term assistance to the refugees removes all grounds for consideration of the matter from a political angle; the way is clear for an examination of the question on purely technical grounds but in the broadest sense, i.e., what is the most efficient and effective way of providing assistance, taking into account the interests of all concerned. It is also possible to see the problem as not entirely one of hard and fast distinctions between administration by UNRWA or by host Governments, but to envisage an acceleration of a trend towards methods-already followed-whereby UNRWA and the host Governments would share in the administration.
- 11. From this point of view, it seems clear that, for the present, UNRWA should continue to have at least primary administrative responsibility for the food programme, the construction, maintenance and sanitation of camps, and the health programme. This is because of the technical skills and/or the degree of administrative centralization required for efficient operation. The Agency should also continue for the present to have primary administrative responsibility in that part of the self-support programmes which require special technical skills not yet available in sufficient quantity in the area, for example, vocational training, and in the economic analysis which provides the basis for installation grants and the like.
- 12. Primary administrative responsibility for the programme of general education, however, could, with advantage to all concerned, be assumed by the host Governments. There is relatively little in the way of centralized management required since the present programme has been carefully geared to the curricula and standards of host countries. The transfer and subsequent integration of staff (to the extent the host countries, as the new employers, wished), as well as buildings and equipment, into the host countries' present systems would be a relatively simple matter administratively since a considerable amount of integration has already taken place, and the host countries are already making a substantial financial contribution, which has never been adequately acknowledged. Arrangements would, of course, have to be made whereby UNRWA contributed an annual subsidy on the basis of appropriate assurances as to the accountability of funds. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization could be counted on to continue its present practice of providing technical guidance.

(c) Types of assistance-programmes of self-support

- 13. It is customary to describe the programmes of UNRWA under two headings: relief, including general education; and rehabilitation or self-support, including especially vocational training and individual grants.
- 14. In recommending the indefinite continuation of assistance by the United Nations, I had in mind the continuation of the relief programme at the same standards at least, as those that now prevail. If these could be raised there would be a net gain for all concerned. The efficiency of UNRWA in the use of funds provided is already well known; less fully appreciated perhaps is the extent to which many refugees augment assistance by their own efforts but still live at the edge of subsistence. Nor, I believe, is it at all appreciated to what extent the UNRWA type of relief operation can in fact be regarded as a form of much needed technical assistance for the area as a whole. For example, the health programme not only cares for the individual refugee, it also introduces new standards and concepts of such care for the refugee population as a whole; hut construction meets a current and obvious need; it also provides training in construction and in community development; even the administration, involving some 10,000 refugees in all, including doctors, nurses and teachers, can be regarded as a training programme for persons in the skills just mentioned as well as in civil administration. I do not wish to push this point too far, but it is worth mentioning in relation to an operation which is all too often viewed pessimistically because it is called relief. More correctly, it finds its place in the broader context of general economic assistance discussed in part I.
- 15. The second part of the Agency's programme has, of course, an even more direct role to play in this economic development. In paragraph 11 of part I, it was indicated that the Palestine refugees can and should be regarded as an asset for the future. This will be true in proportion to the extent that the refugees have been adequately trained and equipped to take advantage of the economic opportunities that emerge.
- 16. The Agency's specific experience is in harmony with the foregoing generalization. Because there has not been a satisfaction of the political and psychological aspects of the problem, the refugees have refused to participate as a group in large-scale projects designed specifically for them since they feel this would mean giving up rights. Nor was it ever realistic to have assumed that they could or should be the exclusive beneficiaries of such projects at the expense of the indigenous population. The refugees do, however, welcome opportunities to become self-supporting as individuals. To this end, they can be helped by UNRWA, through its programmes of vocational and agricultural training for young people and individual financial grants for adults, to take advantage of economic opportunities they have found on their own initiative. The Agency has already developed the skill for carrying out and expanding these programmes. It is to be hoped that similar but more varied programmes may also become feasible in the future. Thus far the obstacle to the expansion of the training and grants programmes has been mainly financial: UNRWA has been barely able in the past two years to collect enough money to maintain its relief and education programmes. It is accordingly absolutely essential that it receive sufficient funds over and above these in order to implement a self-support programme of appropriate scope.

(d) Agreements with host Governments

17. It will be appropriate-if UNRWA is to be maintained as recommended here-for all of the present agreements with the host Governments to be reviewed and revised or renegotiated to the extent necessary. UNRWA, which is a subsidiary organ of the United Nations and an agent of the General Assembly, in accordance with the stand of the General Assembly, must have an appropriate status and be provided with the facilities, including non-interference in matters of internal administration, to ensure maximum efficiency in operation and in the use of internationally contributed funds. It is my conviction that this can be achieved in such a way that the scale of the Agency's operations will not pose any problems for the host countries as regards their national sovereignty. In this context, the United Nations Charter and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations will, of course, be the basic instruments.

ANNEX

ECONOMIC DIMENSIONS OF THE PROBLEM OF THE PALESTINE REFUGEES

- 1. A first essential step in a broad consideration of the problem of the Palestine refugees is to determine its economic dimensions. This can only be done against the background of the recent rate of economic growth of the area and of the potentialities for further growth. If, for the purpose of this first step, we were to regard the refugees as representing a largely unemployed population not integrated into the surrounding economy, we could determine what, in purely economic terms, the reintegration of an unemployed population of this magnitude would involve. More specifically, what is attempted here is to obtain an approximate measure of the amount of capital investment which this process would require and, in particular, the amount of external capital needed, under the general condition that present rates of economic growth of the area should at least be maintained and if possible be accelerated. The analysis does not go beyond this stage and therefore does not enter into any discussion of lines of action. Nor does it take any account of the political and psychological aspects of the problem, which must, of course, be given their due weight in any final analysis. It merely attempts to establish what, in any given circumstances, would be minimum economic requirements for a solution of the problem.
- 2. Per caput incomes in the area remain low and therefore, if we are to be realistic in appraising these minimum requirements, we must take it as a condition that the reintegration should be accomplished without any lowering of per caput income. This means that national incomes in the area would have to grow at least fast enough to compensate both for the natural increase in the population and for the reintegration of the refugees. If this result were to be achieved only at the expense of a fall in per caput income, the rate of capital formation would also be expected to decline, and thus hamper still further the increase in income.

- 3. Accordingly, the reintegration of the refugees into the economic life of the Middle East requires an increase in national income at least proportional to the number reintegrated. Actually, it is highly desirable that national income should grow at a greater rate than this in order that the relatively low per caput incomes should also be able to grow. To achieve such a result, any addition to the labour force must be supplied the necessary means of production in the form of capital equipment and land, over and above what is necessary to maintain the existing stock, so that national income would grow at a more rapid rate than the population.
- 4. In recent years, some economic growth has been experienced throughout the area. Statistics indicating the extent and nature of this growth are available. It will be sufficient here to recapitulate the salient points. Since 1950, there has been a marked increase in the gross national product in all countries of the area for which data are available—the increases being greatest in Iraq, Israel and Syria. On a per caput basis, income has risen less rapidly because of population growth.
- 5. The two major factors influencing the rate of economic growth are the level of capital formation and the increase in the population. Population has been growing throughout the area by natural increase at a rapid rate of from 2 to 3 per cent per annum, and in Israel also by large-scale immigration. Gross capital formation has also been increasing throughout the area and has been at a high level in some parts of it. Expressed as a percentage of gross national product, gross capital formation has varied considerably in different countries of the area. It has been lowest in Egypt, varying from 10 to 16 per cent, and highest in Iraq, where in 1956 it had risen to nearly 27 per cent, and in Israel where it has fluctuated around 26 per cent in the years 1953-1956, after having reached the exceptionally high level of nearly 42 per cent in 1950. Since in all the countries of the area for which data are available there has, in recent years, been an increase in per caput incomes (slight in the case of Egypt, but significant in Lebanon, Iraq, Israel and Syria), gross capital formation has been large enough both to provide for the maintenance of the existing stock of capital and to add sufficient new equipment to employ a growing labour force productively.
- 6. The capital which has been necessary to bring about the results described above has been derived from a variety of sources and no single generalization applicable to all countries in the area can be made on this subject. Taken as a whole, the area has been a net importer of capital. However, only Israel and Jordan are dependent on foreign sources for a major part of their capital, and in both countries direct foreign aid represents a major part of the capital inflow. Between 1950 and 1958 Israel received about $2,400 million in this way, $1,000 million being accounted for by official United States financing and by German operations, and the remainder by donations and loans provided largely through Jewish organizations in the United States and elsewhere. During the same period, Jordan received some $200 million in official United States and United Kingdom aid. Lebanon also depends on external sources of capital, largely in the form of a sustained flow of immigrant remittances, without which domestic saving would fall considerably short of investment. Capital imports into the United Arab Republic have been relatively small; thus, Syria has financed most of its investment from domestic savings, and Egypt has been able to live very largely on its own means with the help of previously accumulated sterling balances. With the possible exception of Saudi Arabia, the major oil-producing countries have had a surplus of capital over and above their own needs and opportunities for investment; Iraq, though involved in considerable development plans, has not until recently been able to invest the whole of its income in productive projects; because of lack of local investment opportunities, the oilproducing sheikdoms of the Persian Gulf, foremost among which is Kuwait, have been accumulating substantial capital surpluses.
- 7. In the light of the facts described above, it is possible to assess more precisely the economic dimensions of the problem of the reintegration into the economic life of the area of approximately one million additional persons. To do this it is necessary to make some fairly simple projections into the immediate future of trends in population growth, national income and other significant economic magnitudes. It should be emphasized that his appraisal is not a forecast of what will happen, but a projection, on what appear to be the most reasonable assumptions, of certain significant trends. By this means the economic order of magnitude of the problem, and therefore of the steps needed to overcome it, are established in as rational a manner as is possible.

- 8. The essential conclusions of this study can be stated in fairly simple terms, though the calculations and procedures by which they have been reached have been complicated and laborious. However, a brief account may be given here of the procedures employed in arriving at the conclusions set out in the following paragraphs.
- 9. Using the year 1955 as a base year, the growth of the population and labour force was projected for each country to 1970. On the basis of the estimated results for the years 1950-1956 and other considerations, gross national product was then projected for each country. Gross and net domestic savings were projected for the same period. Estimates were made for each country of the amount of new investment needed to employ an additional worker, and this figure, together with the estimated increase in the labour force, provided the basis for an estimate of total investment needed to employ the additional labour force and achieve a modest increase of per caput income. Taking into account both domestic savings and the expected inflow of private foreign capital and outstanding foreign official financial commitments, and comparing the results with the total investment required to absorb the labour force at an accelerated rate of development, an estimate was reached of the additional foreign investment needed. The Palestine refugees were then taken into account, those among them who were of working age being considered as an additional labour force to be reintegrated into the economy, necessitating an additional investment the size of which could be simply calculated on this established basis. In order to arrive at more realistic quantities, the figures were also broken down into five-year periods.
- 10. Put in the simplest and most general terms, the analysis indicates that for the area as a whole the labour force, exclusive of the Palestine refugees, may be expected to increase by 5.6 million between 1960 and 1970. In order for this increase in the labour force to be absorbed into productive employment so that per caput incomes will continue to increase at a modest rate, new net investment from all sources of approximately $12,000 million will be required over the period.
- 11. The funds necessary to finance such investment may be considered as coming from two major sources: domestic savings and various flows to the area from outside. Total availability of capital, however, varies substantially from country to country. Some countries of the area are capitaldeficit countries quite apart from any investment for the reintegration of refugees; others, the major oil-producing countries, are capital-surplus countries because of the revenues arising from an expected increase in oil production. The capital-deficit countries are those of greatest population concentration and include those in which the refugees are situated. Their dependence on outside capital to finance part of their development, in order to achieve a modest rate of increase in per caput income, is likely to increase. Both provinces of the United Arab Republic, which in recent years have been able very largely to finance their own development, will no longer be able to do so and will have to rely increasingly on outside capital to finance the employment of their growing labour force. Lebanon may also be expected to look to outside sources for some of its development. As in the past, Jordan will have to rely on foreign aid for almost the full amount of its investment. Israel will, as in the past, stand in need of capital imports on a large scale especially in view of its officially estimated further inflow of immigra-
- 12. In contrast, oil income in the oil-producing countries is expected to increase substantially during the period under

- consideration. This is especially true in regard to the latter period of the 1960-1970 decade. Iraq, which since 1952 has been self-sufficient as regards capital needs, will probably become a capital-surplus country; so will Saudi Arabia, though to a lesser extent; Kuwait, along with the other oil-producing sheikdoms of the Persian Gulf, will experience a vast increase in the size of its capital surplus. Depending on whether the lower or the higher oil-revenue estimates are utilized, the total surplus is expected to be in the order of magnitude of $5,300 million or $8,200 million, respectively, in the period 1960-1970.
- 13. Considering the area as a whole, and assuming perfect intra-regional mobility of capital, total availability of investment resources in the area would depend on the selection of oil-revenue estimates. If the lower estimates are used, gross savings of the area would be $17,600 million. Of this quantity some $5,400 million would be required to make good the depreciation of capital so that about $12,200 million would be available for new net investment. Adding to this the flow of foreign capital estimated at $1,850 million, we have a total net availability of capital in the area as a whole of approximately $14,000 million. This leaves a net surplus of $2,000 million. If, however, the higher oil-revenue estimates are used, the net surplus of capital in the area becomes $5,000 million. It is to be noted, however, that the availability of capital surpluses shown above represents a highly favourable and therefore an extreme view. The other extreme is that oil-revenue surpluses do not become available for investment in the capital-deficit countries of the area. Under this alternative assumption, and in order to achieve modest increases in per caput incomes, the capital-deficit countries of the area will need approximately $3,000 million in the period 1960-1970.
- 14. It is useful to remember that the Middle Eastern countries included in this study fall, mainly from an economic point of view, into three groups: the oil-producing Arab countries, the non-oil-producing Arab countries, and Israel. Our analysis shows that, in order to be able to provide employment opportunities for the increase in the labour force (inclusive of official estimates for immigration) in the period 1960-1970, Israel will need a total capital investment of approximately $2,000 million. Of this amount, a foreign capital inflow already assured is expected to meet about one-half, leaving a deficit of close to $1000 million which, for the purposes of this analysis, it is assumed would be obtained by Israel, as in the past, from sources outside the area. Thus, the $3,000 million capital deficit referred to in paragraph 13 above, exclusive of Israel, would become $2,100 million.
- 15. If, for the sake of clarification, we now consider the non-oil-producing Arab countries (United Arab Republic, Lebanon and Jordan), we discover that in the period 1960-1970 they are expected to save close to $6,800 million, $3,100 million of which would be needed to maintain the capital stock. This means a total net savings of approximately $3,700 million. To this we should add about $700 million, representing expected receipts from foreign sources, which would give a total of investment funds of approximately $4,400 million. In order to be able to create employment opportunities for all the natural increase in the labour force and to ensure slightly better living conditions for the people, these countries will need additional investment resources in the magnitude of $2,100 million.
- 16. The sum of $2,100 million should be regarded as a minimum in that it is based on the assumption of modest increases in income. In all these countries per caput incomes are low and in some of them there is considerable underemployment of labour. Therefore, an acceleration in the rate of development over that envisaged is much to be desired, and it may be anticipated that, with better prospects for a steady capital inflow, some of the development plans which Governments may draw up within the next decade will aim at higher rates of growth than their present plans imply. In particular, in certain countries a more rapid rate of industrialization might be necessary in order to overcome the problem of under-employment and to make it possible to realize the maximum benefits of improved agricultural techniques. Given a will on the part of the non-oil-producing Arab countries to take the necessary measures to promote economic development, the limit to the possible rate of growth is more likely to be set by the availability of capital than by other factors. It is, however, important to note that, strategic as capital is in the process of development, the rate of economic growth is also seriously affected by such factors as the preparation and execution of specific projects, the supply of skilled labour, and the possibilities of social adaptation to technological changes, not to mention the political factors.

17. In the light of the considerations set out above, it may be stated that an increase in the volume of capital for the non-oil-producing Arab countries, of the order of 20 per cent above the modest rate used as a basis for estimating minimum capital requirements between 1960 and 1970, would significantly increase the rate of economic development. This proposed 20 per cent increase represents a sum equal to $1,300 million, and is derived from a total capital of $6,500 million estimated to be the minimum capital requirements of the non-oil-producing Arab countries. Following this approach, the total capital needs of the non-oil-producing Arab countries, at an accelerated rate of growth, would become $7,800 million, $4,400 million of which is expected to become available from domestic savings and, to a much lesser extent, from other sources, leaving a deficit of $3,400 million.

18. It is not necessary for our present purposes to attempt a measurement of the favourable consequences of an enhanced rate of economic development. Suffice it to say that both income and domestic savings are likely to increase significantly, thus reducing the capital needs of these countries in subsequent stages of development. Moreover, such an accelerated rate of growth would greatly assist in the establishment of a larger and more stable economic base at higher levels of income, and create better employment opportunities and a more attractive climate for investment.

19. Turning again to the region as a whole, if we now consider the approximately one million refugees as an additional population to be reintegrated with the region, an additional investment will be needed. We shall assume that such a reintegration takes place under conditions which would at least maintain the level of per caput incomes resulting from the expanded volume of investment discussed in paragraph 17 above. We may then suppose that the capital cost of providing one job for the refugees, within the context of such improved conditions, is $3,300. This figure, which represents the simple capital-labour ratio for the area, is very close to other estimates. Now, as the present refugee population represents a labour force of approximately 380,000 which will increase to 500,000 by 1970, the total capital investment required to reintegrate the refugees by that date would be approximately $1,700 million. It will be recalled that in paragraph 17 above it was estimated that the non-oilproducing Arab countries would have a capital deficit of $3,400 million by 1970. Taking this amount together with the $1,700 million estimated as necessary to reintegrate the refugees, wherever this may be within the area, a total capital shortfall of $5,100 million, exclusive of the capital surpluses of the oil-producing countries. It is to be expected, however, that a significant part of this capital will come from the capital surplus derived from oil production which will find increasing opportunities in the non-oil-producing countries.

20. The picture which emerges then is one of a region with great development potentialities, ultimately capable of meeting a large part, if not all, of its capital requirements. To bring the picture more sharply into focus, however, we must take into account two other circumstances. On the one hand, we must distinguish clearly between the capital-surplus and the capital-deficit Arab countries. On the other hand, we must recognize that, if an accelerated rate of development is to be initiated and sustained, there will be a considerable gap in investment funds in the immediate and early stages which will have to be filled by funds from outside the area. In the longer run, the extent to which these capital-deficit Arab countries will attract investment funds from the capital-surplus Arab countries of the area will depend largely upon their success in starting and sustaining their economic development on a scale sufficient to create an adequate demand for the employment of their available resources.

21. The foregoing analysis concerns the entire period from 1960-1970, with a view to establish orders of magnitude in regard to the total capital requirements and availabilities of the Arab Middle East and to providing a background for an assessment of the potential economic growth of the area. To gain insight into the immediate, and therefore more urgent, problems, however, it is necessary to focus attention on a shorter period, extending to 1965. Thus, the crucial question which remains to be answered is, What scale of investment is required to achieve this more immediate objective? Our estimates show that by 1965 the non-oil-producing Arab countries will need to provide for an additional labour force of approximately 1.8 million which will require, at an accelerated rate of growth, a net investment of $3,900 million for their employment. Out of this amount, net domestic savings will supply approximately $1,900 million and expected foreign capital inflow $500 million, adding to a total of $2,400 million. This would leave a shortfall of capital of approximately $1,500 million. Over the same period, the oil-producing Arab countries of the area may be expected to have a capital surplus of over $2,000 million and it may reasonably be supposed that a substantial part of this surplus will be invested in the capital-deficit Arab countries.

22. To provide the means for productive employment to the Palestine refugees—irrespective of where in the area they may be integrated—would require by 1965 an additional investment of $1,500 million. The total shortfall of capital by 1965 would then be of the order of $3,000 million. If we consider this amount together with the shortfall of the non-oil-producing Arab countries and the expected flow of capital into these countries from the oil-producing countries of the area, we may obtain an indication of the scale on which capital from outside the area would be needed during the next five years or so. The shortfall thus to be made good will be of the order of $1,500 million to $2,000 million.

23. If within the next five years foreign capital of this order of magnitude is actually invested, it would—together with capital likely to become available from within the areacreate a demand for labour sufficient to absorb, with rising per caput income, the increase in the labour force arising from the growth of population in the United Arab Republic, Lebanon and Jordan. It would also give productive employment to the Palestine refugees, irrespective of where in the area such employment might be created. After this initial period, the need for capital from outside the area might be expected to diminish considerably. This decline in the need for outside capital would be an expected consequence of the increase in the pace of economic development and the rise in the domestic supply of capital as a result of the general process of economic development, and of the growth of oil production.

24. The reintegration of the Palestine refugees into the surrounding economic life of the area is possible only within the context of general economic development. This condition sets certain economic dimensions to the problem. What those economic dimensions are, in terms of capital investment, has been approximately indicated. No attempt to deal with the problem on a scale considerably smaller than this analysis suggests can be expected to be more than partially successful. There are, however, two critical aspects: the scale on which investment needs are conceived, and the timing of the investment. An immediate investment from outside the area in the order of magnitude indicated in paragraph 22 is a necessary condition for the initiation of the process of economic development on a sufficient scale.

25. Not only are the rate of economic development of the area in recent years and the fact that there are still undeveloped natural resources encouraging factors in themselves, but they should lead us to regard the refugee population not as a liability but as an asset for the future. The more rapidly the refugees can be productively employed, the greater the contribution they will be able to make to national income and thus also to the availability of domestic capital.

The estimates of income, domestic savings and surplus capital available for investment reflect estimates of oil production and income based largely on a 1958 unpublished study by the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation. The conclusions of this study are more conservative than other estimates such as the projections of Middle East oil production published in 1958 by the Chase Manhattan Bank. According to the Chase Manhattan projections of oil production, the 1960-1970 surplus capital available for investment would be over $8,000 million instead of $5,300 million. For more details, see technical appendix.

Seventeenth progress report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine (1 June 1958 — 31 August 1959)

Document A /4225

[22 September 1959]

Note by the Secretary-General: The Secretary-General has the honour to communicate to the Members of the United Nations, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 512 (VI) of 26 January 1952, the seventeenth progress report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine.

INTRODUCTION

- 1. As indicated in its previous reports, the Conciliation Commission, during the last few years, has directed its efforts principally to the programme of identification and valuation of Arab refugee immovable property holdings in Israel and the release of Arab refugee bank accounts and safe deposits blocked in Israel. The release operation in regard to Arab refugee bank accounts and safe deposits has proceeded satisfactorily while the technical work of identification of immovable property is virtually completed and the work of valuation has already begun. The Commission deems it appropriate at this stage to submit a report reviewing the progress made to date.
- 2. In its resolution 512 (VI) of 26 January 1952 on Palestine, the General Assembly expressed the view that the Governments concerned had the primary responsibility for reaching a settlement and that the Conciliation Commission for Palestine should be available to assist the parties to that end. In urging the Governments concerned to seek agreement, the General Assembly recommended that they make full use of United Nations facilities.

- 3. Following the adoption of that resolution, the Commission, while remaining at the disposal of the Governments concerned for any assistance it could render, concluded that in the existing circumstances it could best lend its assistance to the parties by seeking the release of Arab refugee bank accounts and safe deposits blocked in Israel and by compiling all available data for identification and valuation of Arab refugee property. The Commission's decision was encouraged by the fact that at the Conference held in Paris from 13 September to 19 November 1951 a certain area of agreement had emerged from the general negotiations and further progress seemed possible on these two specific questions.
- 4. The Commission thus took note of the reaffirmation by the delegation of Israel at the Paris Conference on 14 November 1951 that Israel was ready to contribute to the settlement of the question of compensation for Arab property abandoned in Israel and of its suggestion that concrete discussions on the question of valuation should be held immediately with the Commission or with any other United Nations body designated for the purpose. 4/At its meeting on 28 April 1952, the Commission decided to ask the Land Specialist of its refugee office to proceed to Jerusalem to undertake discussions on a technical level with the competent Israel authorities with a view to reaching agreement on the procedure and substance of the proposed discussions. No progress was, however, made towards initiating these discussions.

- 5. During his trip the Land Specialist was also instructed to sound out the possibilities of undertaking an examination of the extent, location and value of individual Arab refugee property holdings. He held discussions both with Israel authorities and with interested Arab circles. The results of these discussions led the Commission to decide that this technical work should be started without delay. He was therefore instructed to set up the necessary machinery for the task. In accordance with the suggestions made by the Land Specialist, the Commission in late 1952 set up an office at the United Nations Headquarters in New York for the identification and valuation of Arab immovable property. Since then, the office has been engaged in the tasks of identification and, currently, of valuation, of the immovable property.
- I. DESCRIPTION OF THE TECHNICAL WORK ON THE IMMOVABLE PROPERTY OF ARAB REFU-GEES

A. Identification

- 6. As mentioned in the Commission's last report (A/3835), the essence of the identification work consists in preparing a separate record form for each parcel of land owned by Arab individuals including partnerships, companies and co-operative societies, giving its most important particulars. Somewhat similar forms of a different colour were prepared for parcels of land which were owned by religious bodies. Lists were also prepared of State Domain, Jewish and other parcels not owned by Arab individuals, giving their areas.
- 7. Record forms have also been prepared for parcels falling under the categories mentioned below, the form making the exact status clear in each case:
- (a) Parcels which were recorded as State Domain but which were subject to transfer to Arabs on the payment by them of the unimproved value of the land (badl mithl);
- (b) Parcels which were recorded as State Domain but which had been occupied by Arabs for many years and which the Mandatory Government regarded as let to the occupiers under implied leases;
- (c) Parcels which were recorded as State Domain and which were let to Arabs under long-term leases;
- (d) Parcels which were owned by non-Arabs but which were let to Arabs on long-term leases.
- 8. The identification was extended to embrace the areas of "no man's land" in the Jerusalem-Ramle area and the "demilitarized zones" in the northern region. The border villages, that is, those whose lands were cut by the armistice lines, presented a special problem. Where the Land (Settlement of Title) Ordinance had been applied to a village, it was possible to - draw the armistice line approximately on a largescale map and to include only those parcels which fell on the Israel side. In villages to which the Ordinance had not been applied, however, there are no maps showing the location of parcels within the village boundaries, and therefore it was thought best to include all Arab-owned parcels in fiscal blocks cut by the line.

- 9. No attempt has been made to distinguish between properties belonging to Arabs who are refugees and properties belonging to Arabs who are not. To make such a distinction would have been outside the resources of the office; and throughout the whole process the principle was adopted of including rather than excluding, on the grounds that it would be comparatively easy to exclude certain properties later on (if, for example, they were found to belong to Arabs residing in Israel, or to be on the Arab side of the armistice line in "non-settled" border villages), but difficult to include later on properties which should have been included but were omitted.
- 10. The purpose of the identification was to bring into existence a compact record of individual Arab landholdings in Israel, which could be used, if the parties so desired, as a basis for verifying individual claims to ownership, and which would contain the material necessary to value each holding.

B. Valuation

- 11. Valuation is a natural corollary of identification. Land differs from most commodities in that the unit (hectare, acre or dunum) can vary so enormously in value that any description would not be complete without a valuation. For instance, figures from 2 to 100,000 Palestine pounds per dunum were quoted in official Palestine Government correspondence in 1946.
- 12. The valuations will be based on the information contained in the record forms mentioned above, and the value at which the office will seek to arrive is the market value of each individual property as at 29 November 1957. That date, on which the General Assembly adopted resolution 181 (II) on the future government of Palestine, was chosen because it was the last date before the exodus of refugees when land values in Palestine were reasonably stable. The evidence on which the valuations will be based is the official record of prices realized in sales which took place between 1 January 1946 and 29 November 1947. Obviously, only a small proportion of properties were sold during the period of approximately two years mentioned above, and it was necessary to devise some means for relating the values established for properties which were sold to similar properties in the same location which were not. For this purpose it was considered that the tax categories of land in rural areas and net annual values as assessed for urban property tax in urban areas were the most reliable guide, and they are therefore being used in conjunction with the effective sale prices mentioned above.

C. Documents

- 13. The documents examined by the office were all official records of the former Mandatory Government of Palestine. They included:
- (a) Microphotographs of registers of title supplemented by the original registers when the microfilm was missing or defective;

^{4/} See Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixth Session, Supplement No. 18, annex C, appendix I, p. 18.

- (b) Registers of deeds;
- (c) Tax distribution lists and, failing these, tax-payers' registers;
- (d) Field valuation sheets and, failing these, valuation lists and taxpayers' registers;
- (e) Schedules of rights (only in respect of blocks for which no registers of title had been prepared);
 - (f) Parcel classification schedules;
 - (g) Land registrars' returns of dispositions;
 - (h) Village maps and block plans.

To the above must be added some other related records of relatively minor importance which were examined when necessary.

14. The microfilm was photocopied in London from the original set then in the possession of the United Kingdom authorities, and was taken to New York and from there to Jerusalem. It was not always possible to have the other documents brought to the Commission's office in Jerusalem, and they were therefore examined in places such as Damascus, Gaza, Amman and Tel Aviv.

D. Information extracted

- 15. The information which the office sought to complete on the record form for each Arab-owned parcel was as follows:
- (a) Location (sub-district, town or village, locality, registration or fiscal block number, parcel number);
 - (b) Area (in metric dunums and square metres);
- (c) Description (nature of the land, e.g., arable, plantation, building; description of buildings with number of rooms etc.);
 - (d) Name(s) of owner or owners;
- (e) Shares (where there was more than one owner the share of each partner is given in the form of a fraction);
- (f) Rural property tax category (under the Rural Property Tax Ordinance, rural land was divided for taxation purposes into seventeen categories, ranging from the most valuable, i.e., citrus plantations, to the least valuable, i.e., uncultivable land);
- (g) Urban property tax assessment (under the Urban Property Tax Ordinance, urban property was assessed for taxation on the basis of its net annual value; where the land was not built upon, its net annual value was a prescribed percentage of its capital value as building land);
- (h) Encumbrances (including charges such as mortgages, leases and attachments);
- (i) Particulars of any sale which took place between 1 January 1946 and 29 November 1947, whether of the property as a whole or of shares in it, including the financial consideration as declared by the parties and as assessed by the registrar of lands.
- 16. The following table shows from what sources the different items of information were extracted for various classes of property. (By "settled land" is meant land to which the title had been settled under the Land (Settlement of Title) Ordinance; by "nonsettled land" is meant land to which the above-mentioned Ordinance had not been applied—by "rural" and "urban" is meant the areas to which the Rural Property Tax Ordinance and the Urban Property Tax Ordinance had been applied respectively.) The letters in the table below relate to the documents listed under section C above.

E. Present status of the technical work

- 17. The work of identification is virtually complete as far as it can be carried out on the information contained in the documents mentioned in section C above. About 450,000 record forms of properties owned by Arab individuals have been prepared and this must represent an overwhelming proportion of the total number of such properties. Nevertheless, it is hardly to be expected that an investigation of this kind can be complete in all respects. The principal deficiencies are mentioned below.
- 18. The taxation records, which were used as the basis of identification of rural lands to which the Land (Settlement of Title) Ordinance had not been applied, gave the name of the "reputed owner" of each parcel. Unfortunately, the name or names were not always given in full and often a partnership was described in such form as "A... and others" with no indication of the shares held by the respective partners. The areas of parcels were also approximate, and no mention was made of any encumbrances which might have existed. The same is true, to a lesser degree, of the taxation records which applied to urban areas. In regard to these latter areas, it has been found possible to make use of the registers of deeds to remedy this defect, and work on these lines is being continued.
- 19. Uncultivable and some marginal land in rural areas was placed in category 16 under the Rural Property Tax Ordinance, and because such land was not liable to tax, the authorities did not always make a distinction in their records of villages to which the Land (Settlement of Title) Ordinance had not been applied, between land of that kind which was used in common by all the inhabitants of a village and that which was privately owned. In villages of this kind the office was obliged to use the taxation records as the basis of its identification, and was therefore unable to make the distinction.
- 20. The Beersheba sub-district contained about 12.5 million dunums, most of which was desert. About 2 million dunums, however, were regarded as cultivable and were liable to payment of tithe (the Rural Property Tax Ordinance did not apply to this sub-district). The office was unable to discover the tithe records, which might possibly have been used for identification purposes. The registers of deeds were examined and registration therein was found to account for only about 200,000 dunums, of which some 300 parcels, totalling about 64,000 dunums, were registered in the names of Arabs. It is a reasonable inference that any non-Bedouin, whether Arab or Jew, acquiring land in the Beersheba sub-district would have taken steps to register it, so as to be in a position to resist possible encroachments. If this is so, the remainder of the 2 million dunums of cultivable land might be regarded as having been cultivated by the Bedouin. Further inquiries are being made about land ownership in the Beersheba sub-district generally.

21. As regards valuation, analyses have been made of the sale prices realized for rural land in two subdistricts and for urban property in three towns. This work will now be continued at an accelerated pace, and it is proposed to complete it for all the remaining sub-districts, including their urban areas, before beginning to apply the results to the valuation of individual properties. A certain number of experimental valuations have already been made by arithmetical application of the results of the analyses and the figures have been compared with the known values of the parcels concerned. The correspondence between the figures has been close enough to encourage confidence in the practicability of the method. Even better results are expected when the analysis has been extended over a wider area and further study has improved the techniques used in applying it.

F. General observations on the work of identification and valuation

22. The Commission has taken into account the fact that the General Assembly has always been concerned with the property rights of Arab refugees within the terms of paragraph 11 of resolution 194 (III) of 11 December 1948. It is obvious that in carrying out this work the Commission is not attempting to lay down a basis for an over-all settlement of the refugee problem. The work of identification and valuation is technical in nature and is a prerequisite of any settlement with regard to the rights of individuals to their immovable property. One of the considerations which prompted the Commission to begin the programme was that the understanding of a project such as this would become increasingly difficult as time went on.

23. As indicated in paragraph 13 above, the material for the preparation of this work has been collected from many sources, all official records of the Mandatory Government of Palestine. A few of these records have not been located as yet, while some others, by their very nature, were deficient in that they did not give precise information on the names of owners, their shares and the areas of parcels. However, the Commission is confident that with records already found and made available to its staff, the validity of the work as a whole would be unimpaired even if some of the difficulties were not overcome. Each identification and valuation of a parcel is justifiable in itself.

II. RELEASE OF ARAB REFUGEE BANK ACCOUNTS BLOCKED IN ISRAEL AND TRANSFER OF SAFE-DEPOSIT AND SAFE-CUSTODY ITEMS

24. An agreement was reached in 1952 between the Conciliation Commission for Palestine and the Government of Israel for the complete release of Arab refugee accounts blocked in Israel. After certain technical difficulties had been overcome, the final release operation went into effect at the beginning of 1955. As of 30 June 1959, a total of £2,781,164 of the accounts have been released.

25. In this connexion, it should be noted that a considerable number of Arab refugee account holders have not yet withdrawn the balances of their accounts in Palestine branches of Barclay's Bank (Dominion, Colonial and Overseas) and of the Ottoman Bank. Moreover, none of the Arab refugee accounts held by other banks in Israel have been released since the Government of Israel has not as yet made available the foreign exchange necessary for the release of those accounts.

26. During his trip to the Middle East early this year, the Acting Principal Secretary of the Commission consulted with the Manager of Barclay's Bank in Israel and the Deputy Director of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) on efforts to be made to locate and inform various remaining account holders. As a result of these consultations, copies of a list of all outstanding account holders prepared by Barclay's Bank have been made available in principal UNRWA offices in Lebanon, Jordan, the United Arab Republic and in Gaza, and may be consulted there. At the same time a press release was issued in the area inviting holders of such accounts to apply to the British Bank of the Middle East, the Ottoman Bank, and Banque de Syrie et du Liban, for the recovery of their balances.

27. In regard to the Arab refugee accounts in other banks, the Chairman of the Commission, in a letter dated 26 March 1959 to the Permanent Representative of Israel, reiterated its request that it be informed as soon as possible of the steps which the Government of Israel contemplated regarding the release of those accounts. During his visit to the area, the Acting Principal Secretary also held talks with Israel authorities on the matter. However, the release of those accounts has not yet been effected.

28. As regards the question of the transfer of safe-deposit and safe-custody items, procedures for such transfer to Jordan and Lebanon were worked out in 1955 and the operation has proceeded satisfactorily. Arrangements agreed upon in 1956 with the former Government of Syria and, on a preliminary basis, with the former Government of Egypt remain unimplemented. Although this is a normal banking operation, the Commission will remain available to provide any assistance that may be requested.

29. As of 30 June 1959 the position in regard to the transfer of valuables is as follows:

Total of safe custody items	1,136 29
redeemed	297 263
Total of safe-deposit lockers Lockers released	154 121

30. It should be noted that very few applications have been received during the period covered in the present report.

Addendum

Note by the Secretary-General: The Secretary-General has the honour to communicate to the Members of the United Nations, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 512 (VI) of 26 January 1952, the following addendum to the seventeenth progress report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine.

- 1. In paragraphs 25 and 27 of its seventeenth progress report, the Conciliation Commission gave an account of developments in connexion with the question of the release of Arab refugee bank accounts blocked in Israel in banks other than Barclay's and the Ottoman Bank. (Accounts in these two banks had already been released.)
- 2. In a letter dated 11 November 1959, the Acting Permanent Representative of Israel informed the Commission that the Government of Israel had decided to release the above accounts and that it would be glad to formulate, in consultation with the Commission, the technical arrangements for their release. The Commission had informed the representative of Israel that it would welcome consultation for this purpose.

Report of the Special Political Committee

[8 December 1959]

- 1. In accordance with the request made in paragraph 21 of resolution 302 (IV) of 8 December 1949, and in paragraph 8 of resolution 1315 (XIII) of 12 December 1958, the Director of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East submitted to the General Assembly his report for the year ending 30 June 1958 (A/4213).
- 2. Pursuant to an undertaking made during the course of the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General submitted a document (A/4121) on 15 June 1959 containing proposals for the continuation of United Nations assistance to Palestine refugees, taking into account an examination of the technical operations of the Agency.
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly decided to include the two documents mentioned above in the agenda of its fourteenth session under the title "United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East", and allocated the item to the Special Political Committee for consideration and report.
- 4. The Special Political Committee considered the question at its 148th to 162nd meetings, from 10 to 30 November 1959 and at its 169th and 171st meetings of 7 and 8 December, respectively.
- 5. At the 148th meeting, the Chairman, with the consent of the Committee, invited the Director of the Agency to take a place at the Committee table. At the same meeting, statements were made by the Secretary-General and the Director of the Agency.
- 6. On 23 November, a draft resolution (A/SPC/L.38) sponsored by Indonesia and Pakistan was circulated. Under the terms of this resolution the General Assembly, inter alia, noting with deep regret that repatriation or compensation of the refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of resolution 194 (III) had not been effected, and that, therefore, the situation of the refugees continued to be a matter of serious concern, and noting also the recommendation of the Secretary-General and of the Director of the Agency for the continuation of UNRWA, would decide to extend the mandate of the Agency for a period of five years, would request the Agency to continue its consultations

- with the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine in the best interests of their respective tasks, with particular reference to paragraph 11 of resolution 194 (III); and would express its thanks to the Director and the staff of the Agency for their continued faithful efforts to carry out the mandate of the Agency and to the specialized agencies and the many private organizations for their valuable and continuing work in assisting the refugees.
- 7. At the 161st meeting, on 30 November, the Chairman informed the Committee that he had received a letter from the representative of Iraq (A/SPC/40) requesting that Mr. Izzat Tannous, Director of the Palestine Arab Refugee Office in New York, should be allowed to speak before the Committee. With the consent of the Committee, Mr. Tannous made a statement at that meeting.
- 8. At the conclusion of the general debate at the 162nd meeting, on 30 November, the Committee decided, at the suggestion of the representative of the United Kingdom, to suspend consideration of the item for a few days so as to enable the delegations concerned to proceed to consultations on the text of a draft resolution.
- 9. At the 169th meeting, on 7 December, the representatives of Indonesia and Pakistan introduced a revised text (A/SPC/L.38/Rev.1) of their draft resolution. According to the revised draft resolution, the General Assembly would: (1) decide to extend the mandate of UNRWA for a period of three years with a review at the end of two years; (2) request the Governments concerned to co-operate with the Agency in efforts to rectify the situation described in paragraphs 17 and 18 of the Director's report; (3) request the Director to arrange with the host Governments the best means of giving effect to the proposals contained in paragraph 47 of his report; (4) request the Palestine Conciliation Commission to make further efforts to secure the implementation of paragraph 11 of resolution 194 (III); (5) direct attention to the precarious financial position of the Agency and urge Governments to consider to what extent they could contribute or increase their contributions so that the Agency could carry out its programmes; (6) direct the Agency to continue its programme of relief for the refugees, and, in so far as was financially possible, expand its programme of self-support and vocational training; and (7) express its thanks to the Director and the staff of the Agency for their continued faithful efforts to carry out the mandate of the Agency and to the specialized agencies and the many private organizations for their valuable and continuing work in assisting the refugees.

- 10. At the 171st meeting, held on 8 December, the Committee proceeded to vote on the revised draft resolution (A/SPC/L.38/Rev.1). A separate vote was requested on operative paragraphs 4 and 5.
- (\underline{a}) Operative paragraph 4 was adopted by a roll-call vote of 54 to 1, with 18 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

Infavour: Afghanistan, Albania, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Federation of Malaya, France, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Israel.

Abstaining: Burma, Canada, Chile, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Finland, Guatemala, Iceland, Netherlands, Peru, Fhilippines, Portugal, Sweden, Thailand, Union of South Africa, Uruguay.

(b) Operative paragraph 5 was adopted by a roll-call vote of 64 to none, with 7 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

Infavour: Afghanistan, Albania, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Dominican Republic, Guinea, Liberia, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Union of South Africa.

(c) The revised draft resolution as a whole was adopted by 71 votes to none, with 1 abstention.

Recommendation of the Special Political Committee

11. The Special Political Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 851st plenary meeting, on 9 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Special Political Committee (A/4342, para. 11). For the final text, see resolution 1456 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1456 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS RELIEF AND WORKS AGENCY FOR PALESTINE REFUGEES IN THE NEAR EAST

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194 (III) of 11 December 1948, 302 (IV) of 8 December 1949, 393 (V) of 2 December 1950, 513 (VI) of 26 January 1952, 614 (VII) of 6 November 1952, 720 (VIII) of 27 November 1953, 818 (IX) of 4 December 1954, 916 (X) of 3 December 1955, 1018 (XI) of 28 February 1957, 1191 (XII) of 12 December 1957, and 1315 (XIII) of 12 December 1958,

1/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth session, Supplement No. 14 (A/4213).

Noting the recommendation of the Secretary-General and the Director of the Agency for the continuation of the Agency,

Noting with deep regret that repatriation or compensation of the refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 (III), has not been effected, and that no substantial progress has been made in the programme endorsed in paragraph 2 of resolution 513 (VI) for the reintegration of refugees either by repatriation or resettlement and that, therefore, the situation of the refugees continues to be a matter of serious concern,

Having reviewed the Agency's budget and noting with concern that contributions from Member States are not sufficient,

Recalling that the Agency, as a subsidiary organ of the United Nations, enjoys the benefits of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations,

- 1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East for a period of three years with a review at the end of two years;
- 2. Requests the Governments concerned to cooperate with the Agency in efforts to rectify the situation described in paragraphs 17 and 18 of the Director's report;
- 3. Requests the Director of the Agency to arrange with the host Governments the best means of giving effect to the proposals contained in paragraph 47 of his report;
- 4. Requests the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine to make further efforts to secure the implementation of paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194 (III);

- 5. Directs attention to the precarious financial position of the Agency and urges Governments to consider to what extent they can contribute or increase their contributions so that the Agency can carry out its programmes;
- 6. Directs the Agency to continue its programme of relief for the refugees and, in so far as is financially possible, expand its programme of self-support and vocational training;
- 7. Expresses its thanks to the Director and the staff of the Agency for their continued faithful efforts to carry out the mandate of the Agency, and to the specialized agencies and the many private organizations for their valuable and continuing work in assisting the refugees.

851st plenary meeting, 9 December 1959.

Detailed information on the budget estimates	4

Foreword by the Secretary-General

- 1. The United Nations Emergency Force continues effectively to serve the cause of peace in helping to maintain quiet along the perimeter of the Gaza Strip, the International Frontier in the Sinai peninsula and the western shores of the Gulf of Agaba.
- 2. In order that the General Assembly may make appropriate financial provision for maintaining the Force during 1960, should it decide to do so, I submit herewith my budget estimates for that year.
- * For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Fifth Committee, 749th to 753rd and 759th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 846th meeting.
- 3. The 1960 estimates total $18,916,000. This amount is $453,000 less than the estimate I submitted for the year 1959 (A/3984) and $84,000 below the amount of $19,000,000 approved for 1959 by the General Assembly at its thirteenth session (resolution 1337 (XIII). 1/
- 4. The estimates have been prepared on the assumption that the total military strength of the Force will average 5,300 officers and other ranks during 1960 as compared to an average strength of 5,400 for the year 1959. This reduction in military strength will be possible as a result of improved procedures and the transference of responsibility for certain ordnance and communications operations from the military to a lesser number of local civilian staff and Field Service personnel.

- 5. Having regard to the difficulties to date in financing the operations of the Force, a subject on which I shall be reporting separately to the General Assembly, I have considered it imperative to keep the 1960 estimates to the absolute minimum required for the Force to perform its present functions under existing conditions.
- 6. As a result of an unavoidable increase of $1,300,000 over the amount budgeted for 1959 to be paid to Governments providing contingents to the Force for their extra costs relating to pay and allowances, and an increase of $224,000 due to increased charges for aircraft servicing the Force, it has been possible to effect the over-all reduction referred to in paragraph 3 above only by eliminating from the 1960 estimates any provision for "Contingencies" (section 7) and "Compensation in respect of equipment, materials and supplies furnished by Governments to their contingents" (section 9). Under policies previously approved by the General Assembly it is, of course, not possible until the conclusion of the total period of service of a Government's contingent in UNEF to determine the amount of compensation due in respect of the latter item, and as a reserve of $7 million has already been authorized, I have felt that the General - Assembly might wish to defer making further provision for this purpose at this time.

- 7. It should be pointed out, however, that the authorized reserve is not represented by cash because of the large amount of arrears in payments of assessed contributions to the UNEF Special Account. If, therefore, in response to the request of several Governments which are providing contingents to the Force the General Assembly should authorize current payments of compensation in respect of such equipment, materials and supplies, the General Assembly will have to consider at the same time the problem of ensuring that funds are in fact available for this purpose.
- 8. In view of the nature of the operation of the Force and the elimination of any provision for contingencies, I trust that the General Assembly will again agree as it has done in connexion with the 1958 and 1959 budgets that, while the amounts under part B of the 1960 budget may not be transferred to other sections of the UNEF budget without the specific advance approval of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, no restriction will be placed on the authority of the Secretary-General to transfer credits between sections under part A of the budget as circumstances require.

Detailed information on budget estimates

Part A. Operation of the Force

$12,110,000
	United States dollars
Section 1. Military personnel	3,615,000
Chapter I. Allowances	1,664,000
This provision, which is based on the decision taken by the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly at its 541st meeting on 3 December 1956, provides for the payment of an allowance to Force members for the purpose of meeting incidental personal requirements. The average daily strength of officers and men throughout 1960 is estimated at 5,300. The provision also includes requirements for necessary overlapping of force members during rotations
II. Rotation of contingents	1,765,000
Governments contributing troops require rotation of their contingents at intervals which vary according to individual arrangements. This estimate provides for the costs of rotation movements during 1960 as follows:
(i) Scandinavian contingents (Danish, Swedish and Norwegian)	540,000
Provision is made for two rotations of the three Scandinavian contingents during 1960. The rotations are planned by commercially chartered flights for the Force members including limited baggage allowance with additional baggage and equipment being transported by sea. Provision is also made for special handling of limited baggage by air charter when necessitated by national contingent schedules. The total strength of the Scandinavian contingents has been increased by approximately 300 men over the 1959 Force members
(ii) Yugoslav contingent	192,000
Provision is made for two rotations of the Yugoslav contingent during 1960. The rotations are planned on the same basis as previous Yugoslav movements, with the major rotations by commercially chartered ship and advance parties travelling by Yugoslav aircraft. The estimate is based on 1958 costs
(iii) Brazilian contingent	400,000
Provision is made for two rotations of the Brazilian contingent for 1960 following the rotation pattern for 1958 and 1959. The provision is based on transportation by military ship as in previous rotations
(iv) Canadian contingent	418,000
The Canadian contingent is expected to rotate on a staggered basis by air during the year as in 1958 and 1959. The estimate is based on the agreed hourly flying rate for the use of Royal Canadian Air Force aircraft. The provision has been increased over the 1959 estimate by 40 per cent, which reflects the increased hourly rate for use of the North Star type planes. The increase in the hourly rate has been based on an analysis of operating costs conducted by the Canadian Government
(v) Indian contingent	175,000
Provision is made for one major rotation of the Indian contingent during the year. As in 1958 and 1959, it is expected that the main body will travel by commercially chartered ship at an estimated cost of approximately $130,000. Provision is also made for the rotation of approximately 125 men during the year, either by commercial sea or air, as advance parties to the main group at an approximate cost of $45,000
(vi) Casual rotation	40,000
Provision is made for the travel of military personnel from the mission area to the home country as distinct from regular rotation of contingents, when such travel has been approved by the Commander of the Force for the individual concerned because of incapacitation, governmental duty orders or other compelling reasons. The provision is requested at the same level as approved for 1959
III. Travel and subsistence	186,000
Provision is made to cover costs of travel and subsistence allowance payments to military personnel as follows:
(i) Travel	12,000
The estimate provides for travel of military personnel within the area on official business by rail and occasionally by commercial aircraft

-----------	------------	--------------	-------------

174,000

Subsistence payable at established rates to military personnel at duty stations within the area where they are not provided with quarters and rations at United Nations expense has been estimated at the same level as provided during 1958 and the first quarter 1959

It is anticipated that the personnel assigned to temporary duty at the several duty stations in 1960 will remain stable. The duty stations to which personnel are assigned are as follows:

- (a) Beirut-Liaison Office, Movement Control and Postal Units;
- (b) Pisa-Movement Control;
- (c) Port Said—UNEF Port Platoon Supply Detachment and Movement Control Unit;
- (d) Tel Aviv-Liaison Office;
- (e) Cairo-Liaison Office;
- (f) Leave Centre—located part year in Egypt and Lebanon. Personnel include Leave Centre Commandant, welfare, medical and provost personnel

Section 2. Operational expenses.....

3,678,000

Chapter

140,000

389,000

The Force's holdings as at 1 May 1959 of self-propelled vehicles total 897. This total includes 1/4-ton type vehicles, vehicles of a specialized nature, such as trucks of various types, armoured reconnaissance vehicles, wreckers, refrigerated vans, mobile machine shop, mobile radio trucks and administration vehicles which include small Citroëns, sedans, station wagons and buses. The figure of 897 is the same as on hand at the end of 1958. However, the distribution by types has changed, as there are now 584 UNEF-owned and 313 contingent-owned vehicles. It is planned that a number of the administrative sedans will be replaced and a number of over-aged military types will be no longer serviceable and will be used for spare parts or disposed of. Various changes in the organization of the vehicles establishment and the abolition of the Reserve Transport Platoon will conserve the over-all transport strength and will result in taking minimum procurement action during 1960. Considering the over-all usage and age of the vehicles, the total procurement requirements for 1960 are estimated as follows:

20 small Citroëns	15,000
7 sedans (Ford or Chevrolet)	13,300
9 station wagons (carryalls)	21,700
30 Dodge power wagons	90,000
Within present plans it is anticipated that there will be no requir for 1/4-ton or heavy cargo vehicles during 1960	ements

(ii) Miscellaneous operational equipment.....

This estimate provides for anticipated requirements in the following categories of non-expendable equipment. The provision includes funds to fulfil the established scales for accommodation stores which have been partially provided for in previous years' budgets. The provision also includes funds for replacement of worn-out accommodation stores and replacements for operational equipment including tentage:

- (a) Quartermaster equipment such as chairs, tables, desks, lamps, beds, wardrobes and similar items required to partially fulfil approved scales of issue and for replacement of destroyed and worn-out equipment ($50,000)
- (b) Engineering equipment including generators of various sizes and a large angle dozer to complement the present buildozer which is overworked by necessary demands ($64,000)
- (c) Medical and dental equipment which includes the replacement of certain X-ray apparatus and additional non-expendable surgical equipment such as trial refraction set, diathermy machine, Braun Bohler frame, X-ray film dryer and instrument cabinet ($13,900)

United States dollars

- (d) Tentage replacement will require the furnishing of approximately 200 tents during 1960 due to normal wear and tear. These tents for the most part are located in company and platoon camps on the ADL. This requirement takes into consideration substitution of certain tentage by temporary sand block shelters at battalion headquarters and Rafah warehouse base during 1959 and 1960 ($56,600)
- (e) Signal and switchboard equipment. Switchboards are required to replace equipment which has become worn out. Also approximately 60 telephone sets, type TA-43, will be required ($10,000)
- (f) Miscellaneous equipment such as water pumps, tool kits, fuel and water containers, fire-fighting equipment etc. ($54,500)

II. Maintenance and operation of equipment.......

Provision is made for operation and maintenance of approximately 1,000 self-propelled and trailer vehicles and for the maintenance and repair of heavy generators:

- (a) Spare parts for vehicles and maintenance equipment ($318,500);
- Provision for vehicle spare parts has been increased by $48,000 based on actual expenses during 1958 and because the bulk of the vehicles in the Force are one year older with a consequent increase in the requirement for spare parts and tires
- (b) Contractual vehicle repairs ($120,000);
- $120,000 was the estimate for contractual vehicle repairs in 1959 and the approximate amount that will be spent. It is anticipated that the current rate of expenditure will be maintained in 1960. Any normal increase in costs will be offset by work assigned to the UNEF Field Service Motor Repair Unit which was expanded in mid-1959 for this purpose
- (c) Contractual repairs and spare parts for stationary engines, water plants and refrigerators ($28,500);
- With the exception of water distillation plants, all major stationary engines have been overhauled during the latter part of 1958 and early 1959. Owing to the continuous operation of this equipment, a complete overhaul will again be required during 1960. Estimated costs are based on the current expenditure required for the maintenance of this equipment
- (d) Petrol, oil and lubricants ($595,000)

(ii) Operation of aircraft

745,000

The necessity of maintaining continuous air services to meet logistical and operational requirements in the extended geographical area continues as in the past. These services continue to be provided by the Royal Canadian Air Force at standard reimbursable rates as shown below. However, the rates have been reviewed by the Government of Canada based on an analysis of costs incurred during 1958 and the standard rates for all types of aircraft have been readjusted accordingly. This estimate as in previous budget submissions covers only the costs of operating governmental aircraft regularly assigned to the Force, with provision being made under other headings for all commercial air service utilized. In addition to the aircraft services normally provided by the Canadian Government during 1960, it is proposed to provide auxiliary cargo service from the Scandinavian countries to El Arish via Pisa, at irregular intervals based on requirements to meet the logistical needs of the Scandinavian forces

(a) Regularly assigned Canadian aircraft ($235,400)

Three Dakotas (DC-3 type) and four Otters (LC type) are based at El Arish under the control of the 115th Communications Flight as in 1958 and 1959. Usage of these planes follows the pattern of previous years whereby two Dakotas are used primarily for carrying freight and the third largely for passenger services such as ferrying troops and mail, and by the Commander in visiting points both within the operational area and for flights to Cairo, Beirut and Pisa. This plane, when not in use for such passenger and mail services, is used for freight purposes and supplements the other Dakotas used primarily for these purposes in meeting the general workload of the Force. Based on the year's operation prior to 1 May 1959, it is estimated that Dakotas will average 130 hours monthly or a yearly average of 1,560 hours. At the adjusted standard reimbursable rate of $102.54 per hour, the estimate for Dakotas will total $160,000

The four Otters are light craft used within the operational area and for flights to Port Said and Cairo. They continue to perform scheduled reconnaissance duties over terrain not suitable for ground patrol and also carry personnel and supplies to and from areas not reachable by heavier planes. It is expected that the flying time for 1960 will be approximately the same as during the year prior to 1 May 1959 when the average flying time for this group was 115 hours monthly or 1,380 hours per year. Based on the adjusted hourly figure of $54.65, it is estimated that the 1960 costs will total $75,300

(b) Shuttle service from Montreal, Canada to El Arish

The Canadian Government continues to furnish a North Star (DC-4 type) aircraft to make one round trip weekly between Montreal and El Arish for the purpose of transporting supplies and personnel for UNEF. Since the aircraft is not used exclusively for UNEF purposes between Canada and England, the Government of Canada bills on a pro-rata basis for that particular leg of the trip in accordance with the UNEF share of each load. Based on 1958 experience, UNEF utilizes approximately 35 per cent of payload eastbound—Montreal to Langar—and 25 per cent westbound. The cost of shuttle service between Montreal and El Arish including partial expense of Montreal-Langar and full expenses of Langar—El Arish, based on an hourly cost of $253.93, totals $487,200

(c) Shuttle service from Scandinavian countries

Provision is made for five round trips by C-119 planes between Scandinavian countries and El Arish, at a cost of $4,500 per trip, to transport personnel and materials required by the augmented Scandinavian contingents ($22,500)

(i) Stationery and office supplies.....

This estimate provides for the Force's needs of stationery and office supplies, internal reproduction supplies, and the cost of printing forms and cards. The estimate is based on the actual cost for 1958

(ii) Operational supplies and services.....

Provision is made under this heading for requirements in respect of all expendable supplies in the Quartermaster, engineering, medical, dental, ordnance, sanitation and other operational categories. Among the items involved are electrical supplies, various expendable instruments, barbed wire, concertina wire, burlap bags, building supplies, small arms ammunition for training purposes, signal equipment components including signal wire, cable and poles, welding supplies, paint, crockery, rags and waste and related items ($590,000)

This estimate also provides for the following:

- (a) Clothing and uniforms which the United Nations provides to members of contingents and Field Service personnel. Issues to members of contingents consist of berets, scarves, caps and summer uniforms. Field Service personnel receive as normal conditions of service winter and summer uniforms ($160,000)
- (b) Contractual personal services, such as cobbling, tailoring, laundering and barber services. The estimate is based on the first quarter of 1959 and the last quarter of 1958 ($76,000)
- (c) Miscellaneous additional costs include costs of UNEF medals which are awarded to Force members who have served in the mission area for a minimum of three months, medal bars, sun glasses, lister bags, cleaning of blankets, repair of tentage and furniture ($18,000)

Provision is made for costs of communications services which include expenditures incurred in New York, Geneva and all UNEF operational centres in Egypt, Lebanon and Italy. Those expenditures, as in previous years, include telephone services at all points, a proportionate share of the costs of the regular radio link between New York and Geneva and the costs of the radio link between Geneva and Gaza. It is estimated that approximately the same expenditures as provided in the 1959 budget will be required for 1960

Provision is made to cover costs of transporting and handling supplies and equipment through commercial channels. This estimate is appreciably lower than the amount budgeted for 1959, since it is expected that more supplies will be obtainable from Middle Eastern sources with resultant savings in freight costs

	Part A. Operation of the Force (continued)	United States dollars
Vī	Insurance	2,000
	This provision covers costs of commercial insurance required in connexion with transporting supplies and equipment which are not insured within the policy of self-insurance of the United Nations and for third party liability insurance on UNEF vehicles assigned to offices outside the immediate UNEF area of Gaza, Rafah, El Arish and Port Said	2,000

I. !	Rental of premises	169,000
]	Provision is made for the rental and related services of the following premises. The estimates are based on actual charges being incurred in first quarter 1959:
	(i) Living accommodations, messes, offices, warehouses, cold storage and other premises in the Gaza area, Port Said, Cairo and Beirut	114,000
	(ii) Utilities, when not included in rental of premises	43,000
	iii) Rental of land which includes provision for land used for operational purposes, such as camp and platoon sites, tracks, and land used for convenience purposes such as playing fields	12,000
п. 1	Reconditioning and maintenance of premises	175,000
,	This provision covers the estimated cost of maintenance and reconditioning of all UNEF premises utilized by the Force in Gaza area, Rafah maintenance base, El Arish and Marina, and within the military contingent installations. The estimate covers the UNEF engineer programme in implementing this work and includes essential improvement of building installations and grounds and the cost of materials, supplies and contractual arrangements. As in previous years, labour costs are included in section 6, chapter I (iv), below. The estimate is based on the requirements at the several locations as follows:
	(i) Gaza area:
	(a) Routine maintenance ($12,500)
	(b) New projects which include improvements to tented accommodations but does not include tentage for which provision is made under another budget section ($10,000)
	(ii) Rafah maintenance base:
	(a) Routine maintenance which includes care of buildings, roads, water and sewer lines and improvement of the perimeter fence ($30,000)
	(b) New projects which include renovations, additions, improvement in facilities and installations of equipment ($10,000)
(iii) El Arish and Marina:
	(a) Routine maintenance ($5,000)
	(b) New projects which include additions and renovations required during the year ($2,500)
	(iv) Military contingent installations and facilities:
	(a) Routine maintenance. It is estimated that costs during 1960 will exceed those of previous years owing to age of installations and the main- tenance of the larger facilities which have been built and acquired during the existence of UNEF ($50,000)
	(b) New project requirements will be greater than provided for 1959. A survey conducted in early 1959 indicated the need for improving the accommodations and facilities within the military contingents and work, started in 1959, is planned to be continued during 1960 ($55,000)

Part A. Operation of the Force (continued)
	United States dolla	rs
Section 4. Rations		1,785,000
This provision covers the costs of feeding the Force which includes the military force members, the international staff, and the small number of local civilians entitled to messing facilities. Continuing efforts to arrange for purchases of foods in an economical manner and to provide proper storage and methods of control, issuance and usage has made it possible to estimate the cost of rations per day per man at $0.90 for 1960 as compared to $1.20 estimated for 1959. Specialists in food processing and handling assigned to the Force provide expert advice on balanced and varied diet with recognition of the national dietetic requirements of the various contingents which make up the Force. The estimate takes into consideration reductions in requirements relating to leave schedules and also additional requirements due to overlapping of contingents during rotations
Section 5. Welfare		756,000
I. Leave Centre	567,000
The major project of the Force welfare programme continues to be the Leave Centre. During 1960, it is proposed that the Leave Centre will be located in Cairo during the periods January-April and October-December and in Beirut during the period May-September. These points have proven to offer suitable facilities for rest, recreation and entertainment to the members of the Force. Each member is entitled to spend one week at the Leave Centre for every three months of service with UNEF. Round trip transportation (by air to Beirut and rail to Cairo) is provided in addition to board and lodging at clean and comfortable hotels provided through contractual arrangements
All other costs involved in the week of leave, including special tours and personal entertainment, are met by the participants individually but Leave Centre administrative personnel assist in arranging facilities and provide guidance on personal programmes. The provision includes estimated costs of:
(i) Cairo Leave Centre based on 1959 contracts for hotels and transport ($269,000)
(ii) Beirut Leave Centre based on 1959 contracts for hotels and transport ($298,000)
II. Recreational and sports supplies	29,000
Provision is made for the cost of furnishing various types of recreational and sports supplies of an expendable nature to members of the Force
These amounts are supplemented by additional funds made available from profits accumulated from the Service Institute
III. Films	72,000
This provision is based on the costs of rental of films for the entertainment of Force members on the basis of utilizing five films each week which are scheduled for showing at the various recreational areas. It is estimated that the costs will be the same as provided for in 1959
IV. Live shows	28,000
The programme for live shows comprising groups in the entertainment field from different areas of the world is planned on the same basis as 1959: i.e. eight shows during the year at an estimated average cost of $3,500 per show. These shows are supplemented from time to time by groups provided by the individual contingents
V. Postage for personal mail	60,000
This provision provides for funds to cover the costs of personal mail of Force members. It is estimated that the costs provided for in 1959 will not be adequate based on actual costs in 1958 and, therefore, the provision has been increased from $48,000 to $60,000 for 1960. It is estimated that these costs for transporting free mail via the Beirut base post office will cost $50,000 and the same facilities via Cairo will cost $10,000
Section 6. Non-military personnel		1,938,000
Chapter
I. Salaries and wages	1,494,000
Provision is made for payment of salaries and wages of the civilian staff members required in the UNEF operations in the following categories:

(iii) Thirty-one posts in New York and Geneva established to alleviate overloads caused in various sections of the Secretariat as a result of UNEF operations. This provision remains unchanged from the previous year.

145,000

(iv) Locally-recruited personnel for the performance of general service assignments in the mission area and Italy which do not justify the more expensive assignment of military or internationally recruited personnel. Included in this group of personnel are semi-local staff performing professional assignments such as procurement officers, administrative officers and accountants, interpreters and translators, secretarial and clerical staff, but the greater part comprises tradesmen and artisans, drivers, messengers, foremen and labourers, custodians and mechanics and various types of mess personnel, including cooks, waiters, kitchen boys, stokers, etc. Local personnel are compensated in accordance with standard salary and wage scales developed after study of the best prevailing rates in the area. Also in accordance with local practices, locally recruited staff receive a modest daily allowance for serving away from their normal place of residence.

United States dollars

The increase over the 1959 budgeted amount for this purpose arises from more extensive utilization of local staff for tasks heretofore performed by military force members and also reflects small adjustments in the local salary scales plus within grade increments. Actual costs for 1958 totalled $808,000 under this budget allotment

II. Common staff costs

132,000

This estimate provides for dependency allowances, educational grants and related travel, contributions to the Joint Staff Pension Fund and contributions to medical and other social insurances payable in respect of internationally recruited staff, Field Service personnel and staff detailed to UNEF from United Nations Headquarters and other United Nations offices

III. Travel and subsistence.....

Provision is made for the costs of travel and subsistence of non-military personnel of the Force and includes:

- (a) Round-trip air travel to the mission area by international staff recruited for the mission and detailed personnel serving in the area. Also costs of travel related to transfers between missions of Field Service personnel and travel costs of field visits of senior staff from New York in connexion with the work of UNEF ($92,000)
- (b) Costs incidental to travel to and from the mission area, such as freight charges for the transportation of personal effects and other miscellaneous charges. The level of expenditure for these purposes is expected to remain at previous years' costs ($10,000)

This provision includes the cost of subsistence payments at established rates to entitle personnel stationed at mission duty stations throughout the mission area which includes Gaza, Port Said, Cairo, Tel Aviv, Beirut and Pisa. As in previous years, it includes the subsistence payment to the Military Consultant at United Nations Headquarters who serves without honorarium

Section 7. Contingencies.....

No provision is made for contingencies such as possible increase in dollar costs for locally-procured goods and services arising from exchange rate variations; additional expenditures for construction arising from any necessary redeployment of troops within the area; possible claims for compensation for death or disability attributable to UNEF service or activity; any other related unforeseen operation not provided for under these estimates required in the operation of the Force

Part B. Reimbursement to Governments of costs incurred in providing military contingents $6,800,000

United States dollars

Section 8. Extra and extraordinary costs relating to pay and allowances....

6,800,000

This estimate relates to the reimbursements referred to in paragraph 88 of the Secretary-General's report on UNEF to the twelfth regular session of the General Assembly 2/ and approved by the Assembly in resolution 1151 (XII) on 22 November 1957. It provides for the settlement of claims from participating Governments relating to expenditures incurred in respect of pay and allowances over and above those costs which the Governments concerned would in any event have been obliged to meet. The estimate for 1960 for this section is higher than estimated for 1959 as a result of changes in the composition of the Force and more exact information regarding the claims of participating Governments

United States dollars

In accordance with the principles set forth in paragraph 91 of the Secretary-General's report referred to under section 8 above and approved by the General Assembly in resolution 1151 (XII), the United Nations has assumed financial responsibility for the replacement of equipment that is destroyed or worn out and for such deterioration, beyond that provided for under normal depreciation schedules, as can be assessed at the conclusion of the total period of service of a Government's forces. Although recognizing that obligations under this budget section will increase with the usage and age of contingent-owned equipment, it is not proposed that the reserve established to meet future costs be further increased at this time beyond the amount of approximately $7 million already approved for this purpose

Budget estimates for the maintenance of the Force: report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text: English] [31 July 1959]

- 1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has examined the budget estimates which the Secretary-General has submitted (A/4160) in respect of the maintenance of the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) in 1960, should the General Assembly again decide on its continued functioning.
- 2. The Secretary-General, in connexion with his regular progress report on the Force, will present to the General Assembly his observations on the serious difficulties experienced to date in meeting the cash requirements for the operation of the Force.
- 3. The estimates for 1960 amount to a total of $18,916,000, which is $84,000 less than the approved amount of $19,000,000 for 1959. This reduction is to be achieved in spite of an increase of $1,300,000 over the 1959 provision for the reimbursement to Governments providing contingents of extra costs relating to pay and allowances, due to a change in the composition of the Force, and an increase of $224,000, due to additional charges for aircraft servicing the Force. It should be noted, however, that the 1960 estimates make no provision for contingencies or for compensation in respect of equipment, materials and supplies furnished by Governments. In the 1959 estimates, provision was included for these purposes in the amounts of $250,000 and $1,000,000 respectively.
- 4. In its report on the 1959 budget estimates \(\frac{3}{2}\) the Advisory Committee commented in some detail on the various factors influencing expenditures under the several sections of the budget. The 1960 estimates are presented in the same form as in 1959 and, apart from the two significant increases noted in the preceding paragraph, reflect in the main the same basic requirements.
- 5. The Advisory Committee understands that, as a result of another recent visit to the area by two senior officials from Headquarters, a number of further measures have been taken for the improvement and tightening-up of administrative control. In particular, an inspection service has been instituted with special responsibility for the examination of records and the
- ³/₁ Ibid., Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 65, document A/4002.

- checking of supplies at points of receipt. Other matters which are due to receive attention include: (a) The strict control of stocks; (b) The improvement of project accountability for construction and maintenance work done in the area; (c) More accurate control of stocks and supplies issued for engineering activities; (d) The use of cheaper and more durable materials for structures and the improvement of warehousing facilities for the protection of rations.
- 6. The Advisory Committee notes with satisfaction that it has been possible to reduce the estimate for rations to $0.90 per day per man from the rate of $1.20 reflected in the 1959 estimates, 4/ resulting in a decrease of $126,000 under section 4. It appears that this result has been achieved by a planned programme of procurement, an improvement in local sources of supply, better storage facilities and more effective methods of control, issuance and usage.
- 7. Under the item for reconditioning and maintenance of premises in section 3 there is an increase of $40,000 over the 1959 provision. The Advisory Committee trusts that, as suggested in previous reports ½ care will be taken to keep further capital improvements within the limits of strict necessity, bearing in mind the temporary nature of the premises and the fact that these undertakings represent a capital outlay in respect of which the United Nations may not obtain any ultimate return.
- 8. The Advisory Committee has inquired as to the progress made in the arrangements for the ultimate payment of compensation in respect of equipment, materials and supplies furnished by Governments to their contingents, in terms of paragraph 91 of the Secretary-General's report on UNEF to the twelfth session of the General Assembly. 6/ The Committee understands that as from 1 October 1958 a complete record has been maintained of all contingent-owned equipment in the area. The establishment of similar records in respect of the period before October 1958 is proving somewhat difficult, but every effort is being made to solve the problems involved. The Committee is informed that the Secretary-General will report to the General Assembly in due course on the question of the basis on which compensation should be paid as well as the timing of such payments. It may be noted that, should the need arise for any early payments of compensation, the Secretary-General will submit specific proposals in regard to the reserve of approximately $7 million which has been established for the purpose but in respect of which actual cash is not available at the present time.

^{4/} The corresponding rates in 1957 and 1958 were $2.00 and $1.25 respectively.

9. In the light of its study of the estimates, the Advisory Committee recommends that, should the Assembly decide to continue the Force in 1960, the Secretary-General's proposal for an appropriation of $18,916,000 should be approved. The Committee would suggest, however, that efforts should be made to keep 1960 expenses within a target level of $18,500,000.

10. The Advisory Committee also concurs in the Secretary-General's proposal, in paragraph 8 of his foreword to the estimates, that, while the amounts under part B may not be transferred to other sections of the UNEF budget without the specific prior approval of the Committee, the Secretary-General should have the authority to transfer credits, as required, between sections within part A of the budget. A similar authority was given to the Secretary-General in respect of part A of the 1958 and 1959 budgets.

Manner of financing the Force: report of the Secretary-General on consultations with Governments of Member States

Document A/4176*

[Original text: English, French, Spanish, Russian] [10 September 1959]

- 1. The General Assembly, in resolution 1337 (XIII) of 13 December 1958, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to consult with Governments of Member States with respect to their views concerning the manner of financing the United Nations Emergency Force in the future, and to submit a report together with the replies to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session.
- 2. Accordingly, the Secretary-General requested all Member States to submit their views on this matter and, as at 20 August 1959, forty-six Member States had responded. The views of the forty-six Member States, which are reproduced in the attached annex, may be broadly classified as follows:
- (a) Thirty-four favour assessment of UNEF's expenses among all Members, of which
- (i) Twenty-six wish the basis of assessment to be the scale of assessments adopted for the United Nations budget, and
- (ii) Eight wish adoption of some scale of assessment different from that adopted for the United Nations budget;
- (b) Eight Members expressed the opinion or referred to their earlier views that only the States which took the action resulting in the creation of the Force should pay its expenses;
- (c) Two Members indicated merely their inability to pay for the Force, and one Member proposed that the costs be defrayed entirely by voluntary contribution. One Member stated that it would prefer a thorough discussion of the matter at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly before taking a definite stand on the question.
- * Incorporating A/4176/Corr.1 and 2.

- 3. The twenty-six Members referred to under paragraph 2 (a) (i) above are: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Cambodia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, India, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Portugal, Sweden, Thailand, United States of America and Yugoslavia.
- 4. The eight Members whose views are summarized under paragraph 2 (a) (ii) are: Burma, Ceylon, Cuba, Greece, Guatemala, Mexico, Spain and Venezuela.
- 5. The eight Member States whose views are summarized under paragraph 2 (b) are: Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.
- 6. The four Member States whose views are referred to under paragraph 2 (c) are: Guinea, Jordan, Chile and Afghanistan.
- 7. Seven Member States referred to the desirability of the continued acceptance of voluntary contributions as well as assessments on all Members. These Members are: Belgium, Cambodia, Federation of Malaya, Guatemala, Japan, Luxembourg and United States of America.
- 8. Three Members indicated either that they favoured or would not object to including the costs of UNEF in the regular budget of the Organization. These Members are: Australia, Japan and Netherlands.
- 9. The Secretary-General continues to hold the view which he has previously expressed? that the costs for United Nations operations such as UNEF, based on decisions of the General Assembly or the Security Council, should be allocated among all Members on the normal scale of contributions to the budget of the Organization and that the United Nations should assume responsibility for all additional costs incurred by a contributing country because of its participation in the operation, on the basis of a cost assessment which, on the other hand, would not transfer to the United Nations any costs which would otherwise have been incurred by a contributing Government under its regular national policy.

10. The Secretary-General has indicated in the progress report on UNEF (A/4210) which he has submitted to the fourteenth session of the General Assembly, the necessity for ensuring adequate financial support for the continuing operation of UNEF as well as for the payment of contributions now in arrears, since failure to take early and effective action on these matters would seriously jeopardize the financial solvency not only of the Force but of the entire Organization. On the basis of present estimates, it is foreseen that at the end of 1959 a total of $6,200,000 will have been advanced from the United Nations Working Capital Fund or borrowed from other funds in the custody and control of the Secretary-General, and other unliquidated obligations of UNEF at that time will total $11 million. On the basis of these forecasts, it would appear that the United Nations Working Capital Fund could be entirely depleted by the end of February 1960 and that the Organization would be without funds to carry on its normal programme activities or pay for the maintenance of the Force beyond that date pending the receipt of contributions which usually are not paid in substantial amounts during the early months of the financial year.

ANNEX

AFGHANISTAN

[Original text: English]

"The Afghan Government, having examined the views expressed at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, feels that the idea that the expenses should be borne by those States which had taken the action which had necessitated the creation of the Force is one that should be given the full consideration it deserves.

"However, the Afghan Government would prefer a thorough discussion of the matter at the forthcoming session of the United Nations General Assembly, in the light of the views expressed by other Member States, before taking a definite stand on the question."

AUSTRALIA

[Original text: English]

"... the Australian Government considers that the cost of maintaining the United Nations Emergency Force should be financed, after taking into account any offers of special voluntary assistance, by contributions from all Member States assessed in accordance with the normal scale of contributions for the regular budget. The Acting Permanent Representative is also instructed to state that the Australian Government would have no objection to the expense of the Force being included in the regular budget of the Organization."

AUSTRIA

[Original text: English]

"... the costs of the Force should be borne by all Member States on the basis of the regular scale of assessments."

BELGIUM

[Original text: French]

*The Belgian Government considers it advisable to maintain in the future the system adopted for the financial year 1959, under which the estimated costs would be shared by all Member States on the basis of the regular scale of assessments, after deduction of supplementary amounts pledged or contributed by some Member States as special assistance.

"A Special Committee should, however, undertake a critical examination of the proposed budget for each financial year."

BRAZIL

[Original text: English]

"... the Brazilian Government continues to favour the position according to which the costs of the Force are borne by all Member States on the basis of the regular scale of assessments, as has been done so far."

BULGARIA

[Original text: English]

"... the People's Republic of Bulgaria will not take part in financing the United Nations Emergency Force, having in mind the considerations stated by the Bulgarian delegation to the Fifth Committee at the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth sessions, as well as to the Special Political Committee at the thirteenth session and to the General Assembly."

BURMA

[Original text: English]

"The Government of the Union of Burma have given this question their most careful consideration. While it was appropriate for all Member States to shoulder their responsibility of financing the Force on the basis of the regular scale of assessments, the Union Government feel, at the same time, that if the Force were to continue beyond the period contemplated, and for a purpose other than that for which it was initially established, the present manner of financing the Force could no longer be considered appropriate or equitable. The need to review the present system of financing is therefore evident.

"Generally, the Union Government are of the view that although the cost should necessarily be borne by all Member States, there are certain Member States which have either greater responsibility for the maintenance of peace and security, or substantial public or private investments in the area concerned, and that these Member States should therefore assume more responsibility in the future financing of the Force. It is therefore proper that an appropriate scale of assessments should accordingly be worked out."

BYELORUSSIAN SSR

[Original text: Russian]

"The Byelorussian SSR considered, and still considers, that the cost of maintaining the United Nations Emergency Force, set up in violation of the United Nations Charter, should be borne by the States which committed the aggression."

CAMBODIA

[Original text: French]

"The Royal Government of Cambodia, in confirmation of its position in the vote on resolution 1337 (XIII), considers that the General Assembly should:

- "(a) Authorize the Secretary-General to expend up to a maximum of $19 million for the continuing operation of the Force during 1959;
- "(b) Decide that the expenses authorized for 1959, less any amounts pledged or contributed by Governments of Member States as special assistance prior to 31 December 1958, shall be borne by the Members of the United Nations in accordance with the scale of assessments adopted by the General Assembly for the financial year 1959;
- "(c) Decide that the costs of the Force, which shall be fixed each year by the General Assembly, shall be borne by all Member States in accordance with the regular scale of assessments, less any amounts pledged or contributed by Member States as special assistance."

CEYLON

[Original text: English]

... that the costs of the Force should be borne by all Member States, but that the application of the regular scale of assessments for this purpose was not equitable.

CHILE

[Original text: Spanish]

"... my Government, as it has already stated on many occasions, is of the opinion that the costs of the Force in question should be defrayed by means of such voluntary contributions as the Member States may be able to make within the limits set by their constitutions, and to the extent that they consider that their resources and finances allow them to do so.

"In bringing the foregoing to your notice, I venture to inform you that my Government reserves the right to make detailed reference to this matter at the fourteenth regular session or in the course of any meeting of the United Nations General Assembly."

CUBA

[Original text: Spanish]

"... the Government of Cuba is of the opinion that all States Members of the United Nations should contribute to the maintenance of the Emergency Force which was set up under an almost unanimous resolution of the General Assembly as a measure necessary for the maintenance of peace. The method of apportionment of the expenses should, however, be better and more equitable than the one now applied since it affects the vital economic interests of countries with few financial resources, engaged in industrial development and since the facts show that these countries have never given reason to believe that they could be the cause of hostilities on such a scale that it might lead to a world war.

"Consequently, in our opinion, 80 per cent of the expenses for the maintenance of the United Nations Emergency Force should be borne by the permanent members of the Security Council which have direct and primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security. A special scale of assessments for apportioning the balance of the costs among the other Member States should be studied by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Fifth Committee; it should be based on the financial position of the countries, the benefits they derive from the establishment of UNEF and their responsibility for the maintenance of peace."

DENMARK

[Original text: English]

"Since the establishment of UNEF it has been the opinion of the Danish Government that the expenses of the Force borne by the United Nations should be apportioned among Member States in accordance with the usual scale of assessments. This principle was latest recognized by the General Assembly in its resolution 1337 (XIII) of 13 December 1958. Denmark was one of the sponsors of this resolution in which it is stated that 'the expenses authorized in paragraph 2 above, less any amounts pledged or contributed by Governments of Member States as special assistance prior to 31 December 1958, shall be borne by the Members of the United Nations in accordance with the scale of assessments adopted by the General Assembly for the financial year 1959'.

"The Danish Government is still of the opinion that the maintenance and financing of the Force, as approved by the General Assembly, must be regarded as a joint responsibility of the Members of the United Nations, and the Danish Government sees no reason for changing its position with regard to the financing of the Force."

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

[Original text: Spanish]

"... the Dominican Republic will continue to pay its quota for maintaining the United Nations Emergency Force according to the scale, or 0.05 per cent."

ECUADOR

[Original text: Spanish]

Force has been considered by the General Assembly at several sessions. On those occasions, the delegation of Ecuador expressed its views concerning the problem of financing the Force during the three years of its existence.

*As a result of the discussion in the Assembly, the cost of the Force has been met by means of voluntary contributions from some Member States and by the apportionment among all Member States of the amount not covered by voluntary contributions, such apportionment being based on the scale of assessments drawn up for the regular budget of the Organization.

"In considering the problem of financing the Force in the future, it should be stressed that the Emergency Force has constituted and constitutes a most important instrument for United Nations action in a delicate situation which has endangered world peace, and that the United Nations and consequently all its Members have an undeniable responsibility with regard to the cost of its maintenance.

"Accordingly, the regular scale of assessments can appropriately serve as basis for the apportionment of the cost of the Force. Experience has shown, however, that the additional contributions necessary for the financing of the Force impose an excessive burden on the finances of some Member States. The Assembly should therefore continue to explore the possibility of reducing the amount to be apportioned, by securing further voluntary contributions from those countries which are best able to bear them, which have a special responsibility, or which have direct interests in the area in which the Emergency Force is serving.

"The importance of the Emergency Force, on account not only of its immediate results but of its significance as a factor which has strengthened the authority of the United Nations, is such that, while every means must be sought to reduce the financial burden which the Force imposes on Member States, the existence and satisfactory operation of the Force must be ensured by continuation of the present system of financing, while not neglecting to explore methods of reducing the financial burden which the present system imposes on Member States.

"I take this opportunity to inform you that, although Ecuador did not vote in favour of the resolutions which established the present system of financing, the necessary administrative measures have nevertheless been taken for payment, within the next few months, of the contributions due for maintenance of the Force. Such action has been deemed appropriate as a demonstration of our respect for the decisions of the General Assembly and of our support of the Emergency Force which contributes so much to strengthening the authority of the United Nations, which has played a decisive role in the maintenance of world peace and which has established a valuable precedent for the future."

FEDERATION OF MALAYA

[Original text: English]

"... the Government of the Federation of Malaya would favour:

"(a) The continuation of the present arrangement of having a Special Account for the United Nations Emergency Force;

"(b) The continuation of voluntary contributions and special assistance towards the costs of the United Nations Emergency Force by Member States in a position to do so, particularly the permanent members of the Security Council;

"(c) The bearing by all Member States of the expenses of the United Nations Emergency Force in accordance with the scale of assessments decided for contributions to the regular budget of the United Nations, after taking into account the voluntary contributions and special assistance referred to in (b)."

FINLAND

[Öriginal text: English]

"When the Government of Finland decided, in November 1956, to put a contingent of troops at the disposal of the United Nations Emergency Force, they considered that the establishment and the operations of the Force constituted a joint undertaking for the maintenance of international peace and security, which is the main task of the United Nations. In joining the United Nations and thus accepting the provisions of the Charter, the Government of Finland have undertaken to give their support to such collective measures and to contribute, within their possibilities, to their success. To assume a share of the financial expenses ensuing from such measure is, in the view of the Government of Finland, one of the aspects of their obligations.

"The Government of Finland stated accordingly already in 1957 that they were prepared to pay their share of the expenses of the United Nations Emergency Force on the basis of a just and equitable method of financing. They consider that the best and most practical method would be one that takes into account the actual potentialities and economic possibilities of the Member States. In the opinion of the Government of Finland these requirements seem to be reasonably met in the regular scale of assessments, this having been established with the purpose of apportioning the expenses of the United Nations among Member States as equitably as possible."

FRANCE

[Original text: French]

*... the French Government considers, as has been stated by its representatives on various occasions during the most recent sessions of the General Assembly, that the costs of the Emergency Force should be borne by all Member States on the basis of the scale of their contributions to the regular budget of the United Nations. As the Emergency Force was established as part of the basic activities of the United Nations by a decision which, having been taken by the General Assembly, is binding on all States Members without distinction, this expense should be borne on the same terms as all the other common expenses of the United Nations.

GREECE

[Original text: French]

"The Emergency Force represents and should continue to represent the United Nations and, therefore, all the countries belonging to that Organization. Since Greece attaches primary importance to the maintenance of the universal character of the Emergency Force, its attitude with regard to the method of financing the Force is determined by a desire to avoid any solution which might alter that character. Because of its universality, the Emergency Force should be financed by all the Members of the United Nations. To proceed otherwise might create the impression that it was or could become the instrument of certain Member States, and such an impression would run counter to the interests of the United Nations and the spirit of the Charter.

"It is clear that once the principle of universality is established, the apportionment of expenses among Member States may be carried out in several ways. The most equitable arrangement, in the view of the Greek Government, would be one which took into account the greater responsibilities of the permanent members of the Security Council. Since the object of the UNEF is to safeguard international peace and security and this goal is the particular responsibility of the permanent members of the Security Council, it would only be natural for these countries, which, moreover, are among those with the greatest economic resources, to bear the greatest share of the necessary costs regardless of the scale of their contribution to the regular budget of the United Nations. Thus, the amounts which the other countries would be called upon to pay towards the operation of the Emergency Force would be considerably less than under an arrangement for apportioning those costs according to the scale of contributions to the regular budget of the United Nations.

"This method of financing and the spirit on which it is based naturally presuppose the participation of all the great Powers in paying the costs of operation of UNEF. It would be difficult, indeed, to ask the smaller countries to contribute if one or more of the great Powers refused to do so."

GUATEMALA

*The Government of Guatemala is of course in agreement with the principle that Member States are subject to the obligation laid down in Article 17 of the Charter of bearing the expenses of the Organization, and recognizes the importance of the task assigned to UNEF to preserve peace in the Near East. However, it disagrees with the procedure adopted for financing the Force because it believes that the apportionment of this financial burden on the basis of the scale of contributions adopted for the regular budget is not equitable for the following reasons:

"(1) It fails to take into account the Member States' ability to pay, thus disregarding the fact that most of them are under-developed countries or countries in the initial stages of development, forced to make the maximum use of their limited resources and to apply them to strengthening their respective national economies. It further overlooks the fact that there are other States, although in the minority, whose ample revenues place them in a position to bear the greater part of these extraordinary expenses.

"(2) Consideration should also be given to the principle of the relationship between the capacity and the obligations of Member States. The Security Council bears primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and its permanent members have a greater share than other States in that responsibility. Accordingly, in all fairness, the permanent members of the Security Council should be called upon to pay a substantial special contribution under the scale of assessments which may be adopted for this purpose.

"(3) In the interests of an equitable apportionment of this financial burden, account should also be taken of the principle applied in resolution 1212 (XII) with regard to payment of the expenses incurred in regard to the clearing of the Suez Canal, namely, that those who derive greater material benefit from an emergency operation by the United Nations should make a more substantial contribution to the expenses incurred in that operation. It would therefore be fair that those countries which derive particular benefit from the operations of the Emergency Force owing to their large public and private investments in the area should make a special contribution to the expenses incurred in respect of those operations.

"(4) In the particular case of Guatemala and of other coffee-producing countries, the unfairness of the apportionment of expenses adopted for the financing of UNEF is the more keenly felt because their economies have been weakened by the drop in coffee prices on the world market.

"In the light of the foregoing considerations, I would summarize my Government's views on this matter as follows: first, Guatemala accepts the principle of collective responsibility for the maintenance of peace and the obligation to contribute to the expenses of the Organization arising from the status of Member State; secondly, it considers that the method of assessment for the financing of UNEF is inequitable for the reasons given; thirdly, it suggests that in order to achieve the most equitable distribution of those expenses a substantial portion of the budget for the purpose should be borne only by those countries with greater economic resources, those with financial and economic interests in the area and those which, owing to their special position in the United Nations as permanent members of the Security Council, have a greater share in the responsibility for maintaining peace. The remaining expenses should be distributed among the other Member States in accordance with the scale of assessments adopted for the regular budget, without prejudice to the right of countries, whatever their situation, to offer supplementary contributions if they wish to do so."

GUINEA

"My Government fully realizes that the safeguarding of world peace is facilitated by a United Nations Emergency Force that can be sent wherever it is needed.

"However, the particular situation of Guinea, which just attained independence a few months ago, does not permit us at this time to make any financial contribution towards the cost of maintaining UNEF."

HUNGARY

[Original text: English]

The Government of the Hungarian People's Republic is of the opinion that the expenses of maintaining the United Nations Emergency Force, created in violation of the Charter, should be borne by those States whose action necessitated the creation of the Force, or whose actions have necessitated the existence of that Force.

"Therefore, the Hungarian Government opposes the distribution of the cost of maintenance of the United Nations Emergency Force among Member States either by the application of the regular scale of assessments or by any other way, and refuses to pay any part of those expenses."

JAPAN

[Original text: English]

"The Japanese Government supports the present system of financing the United Nations Emergency Force on condition that all Member States honour their obligation to bear the costs of the Force worked out on the basis of the regular scale of assessments. However, should the present situation, where more than one-third of the Member States refuse or fail to carry out their financial obligation to the Force, be permitted to continue, the accumulated deficit in the financing of the Force is bound to become a factor to be considered in drawing up the future budgets of the Force and, consequently, the deficit will, in some form or other, be imposed upon those Member States which honour their obligation. Should this happen, a considerable disparity in financial obligations among the Member States will result. Such an unfair assessment will surely cause those Member States, which are at present carrying out their obligations, to be less willing to continue to honour such obligations. Therefore, it is urgent that some means be devised to prevent this possibility from becoming a reality. If no action is taken regarding the refusal or negligence of a great number of Member States to meet their financial obligation in connexion with the costs of the Force, the Japanese Government will have to review its policy in support of the present formula of financing the expense of the Force.

"It is suggested that as a remedy against the failure of Member States to fulfil their financial obligation with regard to the United Nations Emergency Force, the expenses of the latter should be incorporated in the regular budget of the United Nations, thus making it clear that such expenses are 'the expenses of the Organization' and that payment thereof is 'financial contribution to the Organization' as prescribed under Article 17, paragraph 2 and Article 19 of the Charter. Such incorporation, if effected, should be made in such a manner as to leave the way open for voluntary contributions and special assistance to the Force to be continued.

"As for the contention that the present system of sharing the costs of the Force should be replaced by a more equitable one, no exception can be taken to it as a matter of principle. However, as a matter of reality, it is difficult to decide what constitutes equity in this case. Besides, since the Japanese Government considers that the settlement of present arrears is a prerequisite to a solution of the whole problem, and that the replacement of the present method of payment by 'a more equitable one' does not appear to resolve this fundamental question, it is unable to subscribe to the said contention."

MEXICO

"... The Mexican Government's views concerning the manner of financing the United Nations Emergency Force are still the same as those which the Mexican representative in the Special Political Committee set forth in detail at the 780th plenary meeting of the General Assembly, held on 14 November 1958.

"With particular regard to the financing of the Force in the future, as referred to in General Assembly resolution 1337 (XIII), it might be appropriate to point out that in the above-mentioned statement the Mexican representative, after referring to the expediency of examining the practicability of suggestions concerning the establishment of an 'emergency fund' on the basis of voluntary contributions for the financing in question, went on to say:

"On the other hand, if the method of contribution adopted by the Assembly was considered preferable, we think that the Fifth Committee should bear in mind, amongst other considerations, the following two principles, which we regard as fundamental.

"'The first is the principle of the relationship between powers and duties, according to which the permanent members of the Security Council have a greater degree of responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security. In conformity with this principle, the Fifth Committee should fix a special quota for the great Powers in accordance with whatever scale may seem desirable.

"The second principle is that applied in resolution 1212 (XII) concerning payment for the clearance of the Suez Canal, which might be expressed by saying that the greater the material benefit arising from a United Nations emergency operation, the higher should be the contribution made to the cost of it. We feel that in application of this principle the Fifth Committee should, among other things, fix a second special quota which would be shared proportionately among the States which have considerable public or private investments in the Middle East.

"'The establishment of these two special quotas, which should cover the greater part of the expenditure arising out of the maintenance of the Force, would make it possible to arrive at a reasonable sum of money which, in order to safeguard the principle of collective responsibility for the maintenance of peace, would be paid by all the Member States in accordance with the scale of contributions applied in the regular budget.

"'My delegation considers that the sum should be of a symbolic character, that it should not exceed 5 per cent of the total budget for the 1959 financial year and that it should be reduced by 1 per cent for each year in which the Force continues in being. This would, of course, in no way prevent any State which so desired and was able to do so from contributing a sum larger than that assigned to it as its quota.'"

NEW ZEALAND

[Original text: English]

"New Zealand has consistently supported the principle that the costs of the United Nations Emergency Force should be borne by all Member States on the basis of the regular scale of assessments. It recognizes with appreciation the actions of a small number of Member States which have made generous contributions on a voluntary basis towards the costs of UNEF. Nevertheless, it holds the view that collective security action on the part of the United Nations should command the support of all Members; only in this way can the full weight of the Organization's moral authority and material resources be brought to bear. Moreover, the equitable sharing of the financial burden of international action is in itself a practical application of the principle of sovereign equality on which membership of the United Nations is based. It is the view of the New Zealand Government that the regular scale of assessments, which is determined by each Member's capacity to pay, provides the appropriate basis on which to apportion the costs of the United Nations Emergency Force."

ROMANIA

"... the point of view of the Government of the Romanian People's Republic concerning the financing of UNEF has remained unchanged.

"The Romanian representative in the Special Political Committee (97th meeting) during the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, expressing this position, stated that:

SPAIN

[Original text: Spanish]

"In the debates on the various resolutions approved by the General Assembly, many delegations have always made it clear that the application of the ordinary scale of assessments is not equitable and imposes an exorbitant burden on some Member States. Moreover, it is impossible to apply to an extraordinary item of expenditure the same procedure as is followed for financing ordinary expenses. This contention is adequately borne out by the fact that, as an exception to the application of the scale of assessments, great weight has always been attached to the voluntary contributions which have been received by the Secretariat in order to be applied against the costs of the Force. The fact that Article 17 (2) of the Charter states that 'the expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly' does not mean that extraordinary expenditure is to be governed by the same procedure as ordinary expenses; this is indeed clearly implicit from the immediate and direct relationship between this provision and paragraph 1, which states that 'The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization'. It is therefore logical that the financing of the independent and extraordinary budget which the Assembly draws up for the Emergency Force should likewise be independent of the financing of the ordinary budget. There is nothing in the Charter to prevent the General Assembly from directing that the Emergency Force should be financed according to a scale determined independently of that applicable to normal expenses. It should also be added that the scale of assessments for financing the ordinary expenses is approved for a period of three years, to the possible detriment of some countries which would fare much better if the scale was revised at more frequent intervals. Consequently, the application of the same procedure to the financing of UNEF could cause serious injustice.

"The fact that, in moments of danger to international peace and security, Member States are asked for their co-operation and support in the adoption of methods which may safeguard peace cannot bind them to the future payment of contributions which exceed their capacity. In order to obtain, by peaceful means and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, the adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations likely to lead to a breach of the peace, Member States may be ready to assume financial obligations, but if the burden is not to be distributed more equitably than by the application of the normal scale of assessments, Member States faced with situations similar to those which prompted the establishment of the Emergency Force may, in the future, before adopting a decision, have to make certain that they will be able to bear the financial burden which will be imposed on them. Such a course could delay important decisions and thus have the most serious consequences.

"Arguments have been advanced that the Emergency Force will soon cease to exist because there will be no further need for it. Such an end is, of course, highly desirable once the purposes for which the Force was created have been attained, but there are no good grounds for assuming that it is in sight. Consequently, in view of the possibility of the Force remaining in existence, it would seem reasonable to devise a new financing procedure which would provide for the distribution of the burden in a manner more consistent with the duties and responsibilities of Member States in the specific circumstances which necessitated the creation or the maintenance of the Force.

"Article 23 of the Charter, as read with Articles 39 et seq, clearly shows that certain Powers have reserved for themselves a predominant role in the task of maintaining international peace and security. Moreover, the maintenance of international peace and security does not require of the United Nations a permanent activity, with permanent administrative and financial implications. Breaches of international peace and security are not everyday occurrences requiring continued intervention and uninterrupted action by the United Nations. They are possibilities which, when they arise, require Members to take the necessary action to discharge their basic obligations and to make it possible for the Security Council or the Assembly to meet the threat or to put an end to the breach of the peace.

"The measures that are adopted by the Security Council or, as the case may be, the Assembly with regard to acts which threaten or disturb international peace bear the stamp of the preponderant role exercised by certain Powers in the discharge of this function. Furthermore, some States are directly connected with the origin and development of the situation which prompted the adoption of such measures. Thus, both this direct relationship and this preponderant responsibility are weighty reasons for not applying to the expenses occasioned by such measures the criterion followed in fixing the scale of assessments for the ordinary budget.

"The expenses of the international Force established for the purpose of being stationed on the demarcation line between Egypt and Israel are of the exceptional nature referred to above. The distribution of these expenses among the Member States cannot therefore be based on the same criterion as that which governs the scale of contributions to the ordinary budget, for the rules applicable to the latter are determined by factors that bear no relation to the situation which prompted the Force's establishment.

"In the light of the foregoing, the distribution of the expenses necessitated by the international Force created by the United Nations to ensure compliance with General Assembly resolutions should be determined in the light of the following three considerations. First, the United Nations as such, and consequently each and every one of its Members, is concerned with the maintenance of peace and security for the common good of international society. Secondly, as Article 23 of the Charter, read in conjunction with Articles 39 et seq., clearly shows, certain Powers have reserved to themselves a preponderant role in the maintenance of international peace and security. Thirdly, some States have, both morally and politically, a greater obligation.

"The weighing of these three factors, as a means of determining the distribution of the expenses, depends on complex issues related to the situation responsible for the establishment and maintenance of UNEF. That point will have to be decided by the Assembly, in the proceedings of which each of these factors is reflected. The Assembly must also, for the same reason, determine what the relationship between these factors should be. In any event, the combination of these three factors, irrespective of the weight attached to each of them, will inevitably represent a more equitable and just criterion than the mere application of the scale of contributions that is used for the ordinary budget.

"Since, moreover, in the ordinary assessments there are maximum and minimum limits for certain States, it seems unfair that in emergency cases a disproportionate burden should be placed on the Member States which have neither an upper nor a lower limit.

"Our proposal, therefore, is that a scale of assessments should be established for extraordinary contingencies, independently of the normal scale of contributions. The scale of contributions for such contingencies would be drawn up as follows: first, it would be established on the basis of per caput income, but without taking into account the maximum or minimum limit; secondly, permanent members of the Security Council would be assigned an additional share in an amount to be determined by the General Assembly; thirdly, an increased share, also determined by the Assembly, would be borne by countries directly linked with the origin or development of the conflict which prompted UNEF's intervention. Finally, in approving that scale, the Assembly could make a declaration to the effect that the amount of an assessment did not imply the attribution of responsibility to any State."

SWEDEN

[Original text: English]

"Ever since the establishment of UNEF by the General Assembly, the Swedish Government has been of the opinion that the expenses of the Force should be borne by the United Nations and should be apportioned among the Member States in accordance with the scale of assessments adopted by the General Assembly. This opinion was first expressed by the Swedish delegation when the question was discussed in the Fifth Committee during the eleventh session of the General Assembly and, at the last session of the General Assembly, Sweden was one of the sponsors of resolution 1337 (XIII) adopted on 13 December 1958.

"Inasmuch as the Force was established by the General Assembly as an instrument of the United Nations, the functioning and financing of the Force must, in the view of the Swedish Government, be regarded as a joint responsibility for the Members of the United Nations. The Swedish Government sees no reason for changing this view, which has also been reflected in all resolutions adopted by the General Assembly regarding the continued operations of the Force and the manner of its financing.

"Consequently, the Swedish Government considers that the costs of the Force should also in the future be borne by all Member States of the United Nations on the basis of the regular scale of assessments."

"The Canadian Government has, since the establishment of UNEF, been unreservedly in favour of the principle of collective financial responsibility and has actively supported application of this principle as a basis for financing the Force at all sessions of the General Assembly at which the subject has been raised. It remains the view of the Canadian Government that the costs of the Force should be borne by all Member States in accordance with the regular scale of assessments.

"The position that application of the regular scale of assessments to the UNEF Special Account is not equitable is rejected by the Canadian Government for the reasons set out by the Canadian representative during discussions in the Fifth Committee last year. Briefly, these are: first, that if the regular scale is inequitable for the distribution of UNEF's expenses it is also inequitable when applied to the regular budget: secondly, the principle of sovereign equality, in close interdependence with the principle of collective responsibility, dominates the whole structure of the United Nations and establishes that the right to make a decision imposes an obligation to pay for the consequences of that decision: thirdly, a higher assessment against Members with a special interest in maintaining UNEF would violate the principle of collective responsibility which was not challenged in the case of other United Nations operations in which certain countries could be said to have a special interest, and, fourthly, reliance on a system of voluntary contributions would be inconsistent with the general United Nations obligation to maintain peace and security.

"The argument that expenses of the Force should be borne by those States which took the action which necessitated the creation of the Force, advanced mainly by the States which hold that the Force was established in contravention of the Charter, has never been favourably received by the Canadian Government. The Canadian Government considers that in establishing the Force the General Assembly legitimately exercises the authority conferrred on it by resolution 377 (V) and that the financial consequences of the Assembly's decision are a collective responsibility.

"The Canadian Government has noted with concern the status of UNEF finances as shown by the monthly statements on the collection of contributions to the United Nations and UNEF accounts and your UNEF budget estimates for the calendar year 1960. It is hoped that the record of contributions will improve to the extent necessary to assure adequate continuing financial support for the Force."

CHINA

"The costs of the Force should in principle be borne by all Member States of the United Nations, but the application of the regular scale of assessments in financing the Force should be changed. Such application is not equitable. To many Member States, the regular assessment is already a heavy financial burden.

"In fixing a more equitable scale of assessments for the maintenance of the Force, a differentiation should be made between capital-exporting and capital-importing countries. The former, including the ones giving economic assistance to other countries, should bear the major portion of the costs of the Force, while the latter should be required to make only token contributions.

"Besides, efforts should be continued to encourage voluntary contributions in order to reduce the amount to be raised through assessment."

"The United Nations Emergency Force came into, and has remained in being as a result of General Assembly resolutions, and must accordingly be regarded as an expression of the collective will of the General Assembly in discharge of its responsibilities. Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom consider, therefore, that the provision of the finance necessary to enable the Force to carry out its work effectively is also a collective United Nations responsibility. They would therefore regard it as logical for the Force to be financed, like other such initiatives, under the regular budget of the United Nations. If, however, the UNEF Special Account remains in being, this should be financed, like the regular budget, by assessed contributions paid by all Member States in accordance with the United Nations scale of contributions in force for the year concerned."

Introduction

- 1. This report on the United Nations Emergency Force, submitted in pursuance of General Assembly resolution 1125 (XI), paragraph 4, covers the functioning of the Force since 27 August 1958, when the last report on UNEF⁸/ was made to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General.
- 2. The period covered by this report has been, in general, one of continuing quiet along the entire line between Egypt and Israel-a condition attributable, in no small measure, to the presence of UNEF. Here is renewed testimony to the effectiveness in the performance of its task which the UNEF operation has demonstrated from the beginning. For there can be little doubt that were it not for this peace force along the long line from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea, the likelihood of disturbances in that area would be greatly increased. It would follow, of course, that the cumulative effect of numerous incidents along the line would probably soon attain a seriousness far overshadowing the effort and expense now involved in the maintenance of the Force. The success of UNEF notwithstanding, the attention of the Assembly must be seriously called to the fact that the operation is now in a crucial stage, owing to several factors. In the first place, in present circumstances, it is difficult to foresee when UNEF might be withdrawn without inviting the risk of dangerous consequences. Moreover, there is no further possibility of achieving substantial economies in the cost of the Force, since it cannot carry out its responsibilities as now defined at less than its present strength. The unquestionable need, therefore, for the time being, is to maintain the Force at the minimum strength consistent with the performance of its task. But the funds necessary for this purpose have not been forthcoming from the Member Governments. The financial aspects of this situation are dealt with specifically in part B of this report.

A. Organization and functioning of the Force

I. EFFECTIVENESS AND ORGANIZATION

- 3. In the year under review, the operation of UNEF has continued to be directed at the maintenance of peace and quiet in the area. Few serious incidents have occurred in this period, although there have been situations, which, in the absence of a restraining influence, could readily have assumed serious proportions. Under the continuing command of Lieutenant-General E. L. M. Burns, the sound organization and smooth functioning of the Force have been maintained. There have been no major changes in its organization, stationing or functioning. A moderate reduction in its over-all strength was achieved by replacing only partially the Colombian contingent which was withdrawn on 28 October 1958, and by a small scaling down in the ordnance and signals detachments.
- 4. The total strength of the Force, following the withdrawal of the Colombian contingent, was, as at April 1959, approximately 5,000 officers and other ranks. Since then, through partially replacing the Colombians by an increase of approximately 300 (all ranks) in the Scandinavian contingents, the Force has been maintained at approximately 5,350 officers and other ranks. Brazil, Canada, Denmark, India, Norway, Sweden and Yugoslavia are the countries now participating in the Force.

- 5. The present strength of the Force makes seventyone platoons available for patrol and guard duty on the armistice demarcation line (ADL), international frontier (IF) and elsewhere. The strength of each platoon varies from twenty-six to thirty-nine, all ranks. Approximately 2,500 officers and men are thus available for active duty, the rest of the Force consisting of support units.
- 6. The Commander firmly takes the position, which is endorsed by United Nations Headquarters, that the Force must be maintained at its present level if it is to continue to carry out its mission with the same degree of effectiveness which has characterized the operation thus far, and that to protect its record any further reduction in its numbers should be accompanied by an appropriate redefinition of function and responsibility. The Commander's view is supported by the fact that incidents did increase in those parts of the line where manpower shortage was mainly felt during the period between the withdrawal of the Colombian contingent and its partial replacement by the increased number of Scandinavian troops.

7. The numerical strength of each national contingent as at 1 August 1959 was as follows:

Contingents	Officers	Other ranks	Total
Brazil	39	609	648
Canada	86	897	983≗∕
Denmark	36	512	548
India	69	1,105	1.174 ^b /
Norway	85	518	1,174 ^b / 603 ^c /
Sweden	39	620	659
Yugoslavia	_75	644	719

a/ Including personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force 115 Air Transport Unit stationed at El Arish (93, all ranks).

8. The rotation policies of the contributing nations have continued without change since the previous report. From the inception of the Force, the various contingents have been rotated as follows:

Canada, India: twice (yearly rotation);

Brazil: four times (yearly basis, with half the contingent rotating each six months);

Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Yugoslavia: five times (half-yearly rotation).

9. The Scandinavian rotations during the year have been transported by Scandinavian Airlines (SAS), using DC 6-B aircraft, in special flights to El Arish, and take approximately one month. The 307 additional troops in the new Scandinavian contingents were carried by SAS regular flights to Cairo and Beirut. The personnel landing in Cairo were taken to Gaza by train, while those landing in Beirut were brought in by UNEF aircraft in eight special flights. The rotating Brazilian, Indian and Yugoslav contingents are normally carried by sea. The next rotation of the Brazilian contingent is scheduled for October and, as in previous years, a Brazilian naval vessel will be used to carry the troops b/ Including Administrative Troops (249, all ranks).

each way. The voyage by sea takes approximately three weeks in each direction. The next rotation of the Indian and Yugoslav contingents is to take place in November and December, respectively. As in previous years, the Government of India is making arrangements for the charter of a vessel to carry the rotating Indian troops. Arrangements for the next rotation of the Yugoslav contingent are also underway and the rotating troops will again be carried by a Yugoslav commercial vessel chartered by the Government, with a small advance party transported by Yugoslav military aircraft. The main body of the Canadian contingent is rotated by RCAF North Star aircraft during September, October and November of each year. Twenty special flights from Montreal to El Arish and return were completed in 1958 and a like number is anticipated for the rotation in the autumn of 1959. The Canadian reconnaissance squadron is rotated during the month of February, and four special RCAF North Star flights are required for this operation. North Star aircraft fly in and out of El Arish regularly.

10. There has been no change in the strength, organization and functioning of the 115 Air Transport Unit (RCAF) during this year. The number of aircraft employed remains at three Dakotas and four Otters. Personnel strength continues to be twenty officers and seventy-three other ranks, although as of 12 August 1959, the commanding officer of the unit becomes a wing commander instead of a squadron leader.

II. DEPLOYMENT

- 11. The major deployment of UNEF, still on the western side of the armistice demarcation line only, 9/continues to be along the Egypt-Israel armistice demarcation line and along the international frontier to the south of the Gaza Strip. These two lines total 273 kilometres in length. The Force also has a watching interest over the coastline of the Sinai Peninsula from the northern end of the Gulf of Aqaba to the Strait of Tiran, a further distance of 187 kilometres.
- 12. The positions and assignments of units of the Force are changed by the Commander from time to time. As at 1 August 1959, their deployment was as indicated below.

Gaza Strip—Four battalions are deployed along the armistice demarcation line and have areas of responsibility corresponding with the police districts of the civil administration, this arrangement facilitating closer liaison and co-operation between the police and UNEF at the battalion level. The units in the Gaza Strip are deployed as follows:

Sector 1 (from sea to Gaza-Beersheba road)—Danish/ Norwegian (DANOR). Three rifle companies man twenty-two observation posts on the ADL, which in this sector is 18 kilometres long;

Sector 2 (from Gaza-Beersheba road to Wadi Ghazza)
—Swedish. Two rifle companies man fourteen observation posts on the ADL, which in this sector runs for 11 kilometres;

Sector 3 (Deir-el-Balah)—Indian. Three rifle companies man eighteen observation posts on the ADL, which in this sector has a length of 12 kilometres; Sectors 4 and 5 (Khan Younis, Rafah)—Brazilian. Three rifle companies man nineteen observation posts on the ADL, which in this sector is 18 kilometres in length.

International frontier—The international frontier is watched over by the Canadian reconnaissance squadron and the Yugoslav reconnaissance battalion, deployed as follows:

Canadian troops: Headquarters is at Rafah. There are two outposts which send out patrols along the line. The responsibility of the unit extends up to but is exclusive of the road Abu Aweigila/El Auja;

Yugoslav troops: Their responsibility extends from the road Abu Aweigila/El Auja to the Gulf of Aqaba. The battalion has its headquarters and one company at El Arish, and also has platoon camps and outposts at El Amr, El Saba, El Quseima, El Kuntilla and Ras El Nagb.

Guards and detachments—Guards and detachments are stationed as follows:

Headquarters UNEF: The Swedish battalion provides a detachment for guard duties at UNEF headquarters;

Rafah maintenance area: One company and a platoon of the Swedish battalion are guarding the perimeter of the Rafah maintenance area, providing numerous sentries and patrols to prevent thefts which have followed any relaxation of vigilance, despite a perimeter fence;

El Arish: Guards for the UNEF air station and the RCAF quarters are furnished by the Yugoslav Reconnaissance and DANOR battalions;

Sharm el Sheikh: A detachment of the DANOR battalion is stationed at Sharm el Sheikh and Ras Nasrani to observe traffic through the Strait of Tiran;

UNEF warehouse: A small detachment of the DANOR battalion is assigned to guard duty at the UNEF port warehouse.

- 13. Prior to its withdrawal, the Colombian battalion was responsible for sector 4, deploying one company and four platoons on the ADL. When the Colombian contingent was withdrawn, the Brazilian battalion took over part of this sector, as well as continuing to cover sector 5 and Rafah Camp and to provide the small guard detachment for the port warehouse. The Indian battalion took over the other part of sector 4. The Commander reports that it was then found that both the Brazilian and Indian battalions were employed to an extreme limit, the men having no time for proper rest or relaxation. In order to reduce the number of men required for ADL duty under these circumstances, observation was carried out temporarily by mobile patrols instead of from fixed observation posts.
- 14. In April and May, the DANOR and Swedish battalions were each increased by the equivalent of a company. The Brazilian battalion subsequently was relieved of its guard duties at the Rafah maintenance area and the warehouse, and it and the Indian battalion assumed the tasks described in paragraph 12 above.
- 15. The system of mobile patrols by vehicles during the day introduced in sectors 4 and 5 by the Brazilian and Indian battalions economized on manpower, but it was found that the ADL could not be kept under constant and full observation by this means and hence was less effectively controlled against infiltrators. During the crop seasons in March and April, infiltrators often seek to cross the ADL in large numbers, if mainly to cut grass. Hence, it was found that the observation post system had to be reinstituted so as to keep a constant watch on the movements of local inhabitants in the vicinity of the ADL. Since the reactivation of the observation posts, made possible by the increase of strength in the Scandinavian contingents, no further infiltrations of importance have occurred.

Daily routine

Armistice demarcation line

16. Observation posts on the armistice demarcation line are normally manned in daytime by two men each. whose daily tour of duty is approximately six hours. the individuals taking turns within the six hours. The observation posts are in all cases intervisible and thus movement at any point along the ADL can be observed. To provide support for the observation posts when needed, a mobile reserve is maintained at company or platoon headquarters. This support is needed, for example, when, as does happen, local inhabitants in numbers too large for the two sentries alone to deal with them try to cross the ADL to harvest grass or crops. The mobile reserve is so organized as to be able to reach a trouble spot within ten to fifteen minutes after being summoned. Each observation post is connected by line telephone with neighbouring observation posts and platoon/company headquarters. This facilitates the observation and apprehension of infiltrators. At night, the men in the observation posts are withdrawn and patrols are sent out. There are numerous patrols nightly in each sector and each patrol is along the line for from three to five hours. During the night, also, reserves are maintained at platoon headquarters. A system of flare signals enables patrols to call for help from the reserves, when necessary. This is supplemented by radio communication which keeps the platoon/company commanders informed of the activities of the patrol.

17. The Brazilian, DANOR, Indian and Swedish battalions dispose of fifty-seven platoons for duty along the ADL and provide guards and detachments, as noted in paragraph 12 above. About seven of the fifty-seven platoons are held in battalion reserve, which is also the Force reserve to provide against emergencies and to allow for some training. The average platoon strength is thirty-nine, all ranks.

International frontier

18. Experience has shown that only certain areas along the international frontier are so sensitive as to require constant patrolling and observation. Rough terrain and other conditions limit the possibility of infiltration along many sectors of the IF. The policy of the Force is to patrol daily in certain areas which are sensitive and where vehicles can travel without too great difficulty. In other sectors along the IF which, though sensitive, offer very rough going for surface vehicles, numerous air reconnaissances are made at varying times, while ground patrols are sent out only from one to three times a week. In addition to this, camps and observation posts are established at especially sensitive spots, to observe the IF and to maintain mobile reserves which can be despatched speedily to any trouble spot. A system of wireless communication links the Canadian reconnaissance squadron and the Yugoslav reconnaissance battalion with aircraft engaged in air reconnaissance, and with the Brazilian battalion which is observing the ADL adjoining the IF. This facilitates the quick and immediate transmission of messages warning of any suspicious movements, and thus enables the reserves to be sent to the spot where trouble has occurred or is anticipated.

- 19. The Canadian reconnaissance squadron disposes of three troops of sixteen, all ranks, each for duty along its sector of the IF. The Yugoslav reconnaissance battalion has ten platoons for duty on the IF, for guard duty at El Arish and to provide a small reserve. Platoon strength is twenty-six, all ranks.
- 20. The Commander of the Force finds that the present allotment of operational troops meets the essential requirements of the UNEF mission, the sectors allotted now being within the capability of the battalions.
- 21. In this regard, economy in the use of military manpower has been effected not alone by replacing only 307 of the Colombian contingent of 522, but also by a reduction of sixty-one, all ranks, in the ordnance and signals detachments. Moreover, a large number of civilian personnel, recruited locally, continue to carry out essential duties, many of which would be performed by soldiers in the usual military organization. The main categories of the civilian personnel are as follows: subordinate administrative officials, clerks, secretaries, typists, draughtsmen, building tradesmen, motor mechanics and maintenance men, cooks and cooks' helpers and labourers (construction and maintenance). It is estimated by UNEF headquarters that approximately 1,000 additional military personnel would be needed to carry out the work now being done by this locally recruited personnel.

III. WELL-BEING

- 22. The general state of well-being of the Force continues to be excellent. The health record has been consistently good since the inception of the Force. The hospital situated at Rafah which, prior to 1 March 1959, had been operated jointly by Canadian and Norwegian personnel, has since that date been staffed entirely by Norwegian personnel. The Canadian medical complement of four officers and fifteen other ranks operates a medical inspection room for the Canadian troops.
- 23. The number of officers and other ranks hospitalized in the UNEF hospital during the period 1 August 1958 to 1 August 1959 totals 1,080, while twenty-seven cases requiring specialized treatment have been hospitalized outside of the area during the same period. Of those admitted to the UNEF hospital, the main causes of hospitalization have been: diseases of the digestive system, including enteric fevers and appendicitis; injuries; observation; fevers without special location (supposedly caused by viruses); acute respiratory infections; rheumatic diseases (rheumatic fever, lumbago, sciatica, etc.), and skin infections.
- 24. As a general policy, patients with chronic illnesses have been repatriated on the recommendation of the UNEF medical board. In special cases, patients have been kept in the UNEF hospital if their transfer has been considered difficult for medical reasons. The UNEF medical board dealt with a total of eighty-four such cases during the period from 1 August 1958 to 1 August 1959.

- 25. In addition to military personnel, 371 civilian patients were treated in the UNEF hospital during the period from 1 August 1958 to 10 June 1959, most of whom were United Nations staff and local employees. A number of local inhabitants suffering from acute illnesses and injuries due to accidents have also been treated at the hospital.
- 26. Since the establishment of UNEF, thirty-four fatalities have occurred, distributed among all but the Finns of the ten original contingents, and resulting chiefly from encounters with mines, accidental shootings and traffic accidents.
- 27. The leave centre at Cairo opened on 31 October 1958 and closed on 3 May 1959, during which period 362 officers and 6,162 other ranks spent their leave at the centre. The leave centre at Beirut, with a capacity of twenty officers and 280 other ranks, re-opened on 18 May 1959. A contract has been awarded to Middle East Airlines to transport UNEF leave personnel between El Arish and Beirut, calling for a maximum of ten flights per week, carrying twenty-eight passengers per flight. UNEF aircraft will be used to transport leave personnel over and above 280, the maximum to be carried by UNEF per week being forty.
- 28. The high morale of the Force has continued. The welfare programme, which continues to be an important factor in the maintenance of morale, embraces a number of activities of which sports are the most ambitious, including tournaments in basket-ball, football, volley-ball, chess, badminton, tennis, table tennis, darts, swimming, squash and golf. Other activities include a cultural exchange programme; life-saving classes; schedules of film showings for units; organized tours (at individual expense) to Jerusalem, Cairo, Alexandria, St. Catherine's Monastery, El Alamein, Luxor and Beirut; leave centre welfare programmes; projectionist courses; United Nations Week programme; Christmas programme, including supply of Christmas trees and decorations; loan service of radios, slide projectors, tape recorders and other welfare equipment; greeting and Christmas cards supply and sale; United Nations Relief and Works Agency projects (on voluntary basis); religious programme brochures supplied for Christmas and Easter in co-operation with chaplains.
- 29. Several suggestions for the improvement of the welfare service are under review, such as an increase in the number of live entertainment programmes; an increase in the number of weekly motion picture films, covering the supply of films with English captions from non-English speaking countries, including those represented by contingents in UNEF; the establishment of battalion "hobby shops" with the supply of necessary equipment and material; the provision of free sightseeing tours at the leave centres, and increased amounts of welfare equipment and supplies. The expansion of activities in the welfare programme must, of necessity, be dictated by financial considerations, but it is thought that some of the suggestions outlined above might be financed, in part, from proceeds of the service institutes.

IV. LOGISTICS

30. Generally speaking, the ration scales put into effect in May 1958 have proved adequate. Several minor changes have been made, and additional items have been added to provide variety in dessert items.

- Dried skim milk is now included in the ration scale to provide an additional source of vitamin A as well as milk for cereals.
- 31. Dietary needs and preferences of certain contingents sometimes change on rotation when the personnel come from different parts of a country. For example, recently it has been necessary to provide butter ghee and to make certain other ration changes to provide an adequate diet for vegetarians in the present Indian contingent.
- 32. Adequate refrigeration has now been provided in the supply depot in support of the effort to serve fresh fruit and vegetables throughout the year. It is hoped that this measure will provide a more acceptable diet and also reduce the cost of rations by eliminating or reducing the need for imported canned items. Steps are also being taken to improve the sanitary conditions under which bread is produced and delivered. Ration scales and issue items are kept under constant review to ensure that food of the best possible quality, variety and nutritional value is served to the Force.
- 33. During the year under review, the average sea cargo has been 1,435 long tons per month, and 440 ships have unloaded stores for UNEF at Port Said. In addition, 305 tons were carried by air. During the same period, 102.9 tons of general stores were received from the United Nations Observation Group in Lebanon together with 33 quarter-ton utility trucks, 18 water trailers and 2 station wagons.

V. LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS

34. On the whole, the relations between UNEF and the local population continue to be satisfactory. In addition to occasional acts of theft and pilferage, however, there have been a few instances of temporary friction between local groups and UNEF personnel engaged in performing their duty.

VI. INCIDENTS

- 35. As reported from all sources, the type and number of incidents which occurred between 1 August 1958 and 31 July 1959, are shown in the table at the top of the next page.
- 36. The total of 137 incidents reported for the twelve months' period may be compared with the 95 which occurred in the ten and one-half months' period covered by the report for 1958. 10/10 All but a very few of these later incidents, however, have been of a minor nature. Of this year's total, 125 were confirmed by UNEF; 5 were reported by the United Arab Republic, and investigated and confirmed by the Egypt-Israel Mixed Armistice Commission (EIMAC), and 7 were reported by the United Arab Republic but were not confirmed by either the Commission or UNEF.
- 37. Based on figures from UNEF headquarters, which include complaints presented by both parties as well as observations independently made by UNEF, a total of 452 violations of airspace by identified planes and a total of thirty-nine such violations by unidentified planes occurred in the period from 1 August 1958 to 31 July 1959. Of these, thirteen were by aircraft of the United Arab Republic (UAR) overflying on the Israel side of the line, the others involving Israel aircraft overflying Gaza and the Sinai Peninsula. All of the instances of unidentified aircraft also involved overflights on the UAR side. Of the identified planes, 410 were observed by UNEF, twenty-two were reported by the UAR and confirmed by UNEF, and twenty were reported by the UAR but not confirmed by UNEF. UNEF headquarters reports that 374 of the UNEF-observed violations by Israel aircraft involved overflights in the north-east corner of the Gaza Strip by aircraft coming from the Israel aerodrome of Wadi Sharia. It is added that this airfield is only some twenty kilometres southeast of Gaza and that the prevailing wind is such that jet aircraft in taking off head in a direction which may take them over the north-east corner of the Strip. Strong representations about such repeated violations have been made and in recent weeks a notable decrease in this type of activity has been observed.

38. In the same period, a total of 113 violations of territorial waters were observed by the Force, apparently by fishing boats for the most part. Of the total violations, sixty-nine were in UAR waters and forty-four in Israel waters. Following a United Nations protest, this type of activity has virtually ceased in recent months.

B. Financial arrangements and cost estimates

I. ACTION BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AT ITS THIRTEENTH SESSION

39. In resolution 1263 (XIII) of 14 November 1958, the General Assembly, having considered the progress report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Emergency Force, 11/2 and noting with satisfaction the effective way in which the Force continues to carry out its function, requested the Fifth Committee to recommend such action as may be necessary to finance the continuing operation of the United Nations Emergency Force.

40. In resolution 1337 (XIII) of 13 December 1958, the General Assembly, having examined the budget estimates for the Force submitted by the Secretary-General for the year 1958 12/2 and for the year 1959

(A/3984), and having considered the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the estimates in its reports, 13/(1) confirmed its authorization to the Secretary-General to expend up to a maximum of $25 million for the operation of the United Nations Emergency Force during 1958; (2) authorized the Secretary-General to expend up to a maximum of $19 million for the continuing operation of the Force during 1959; (3) approved the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the estimates for 1958 and 1959; (4) decided that the expenses authorized for 1959, less any amounts pledged or contributed by Governments of Member States as special assistance prior to 31 December 1958, should be borne by Members of the United Nations in accordance with the scale of assessments adopted by the General Assembly for the financial year 1959; (5) requested the Secretary-General to consult with the Governments of Member States with respect to their views concerning the manner of financing the Force in the future, and to submit a report together with the replies to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session.

II. UNEF ASSESSMENTS AND COLLECTION OF CONTRIBUTIONS AS AT 31 JULY 1959

41. UNEF assessments approved by the General Assembly for the three years 1957-1959 totalled $55,233,988.\frac{14}{A}\text{As at 31 July 1959}, the amount of contributions collected, including credits, totalled $34,402,366, leaving a balance due of $20,831,622, or 37.7 per cent of the total amount assessed. The assessments, collections and balances due for each year are shown below (as at 31 July 1959):

	Assessments	Collections	Balance due
	Un.	ited States dollar	rs
1957	15,028,988	10,295,843	4,733,145
1958	25,000,000	16,526,627	8,473,373
1959	15,205,000	7,579,896	7,625,104
TOTAL	55,233,988	34,402,366	20,831,622

^{14/} Over the three years, an additional amount of $18,766,012 was pledged by fourteen Governments as voluntary contributions or special assistance. $14,980,512 of these pledges had been paid as at 31 July 1959.

- 42. The record of payments follows. Twenty-seven Member States have made no payment of their 1957 assessments and eleven others have made only partial payments. Thirty-nine Members have made no payment of their 1958 assessments and four have made partial payments. Sixty-one Members have made no payment of their 1959 assessments and two have made partial payments.
- III. UNEF CASH POSITION AS AT 31 JULY 1959 AND ESTIMATED CASH RECEIPTS, DISBURSEMENTS AND ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS FOR THE REMAINDER OF 1959
- 43. As at 31 July 1959 UNEF's cash balance totalled $1.6 million, of which $1 million represented advances from the United Nations Working Capital Fund.
- 44. Estimated collections during the remaining five months of 1959 total $7.7 million, of which $3.9 million relate to assessments and $3.8 million to special assistance.
- 45. Cash disbursements during the remaining five months of 1959 will total an estimated $12.9 million. Payments of this amount would result in a cash deficit at 31 December 1959 of $6.2 million.
- 46. On the basis of the above estimates and the estimated costs of UNEF for 1959, unliquidated obligations at 31 December 1959 would total $11 million, loans outstanding from the United Nations Working Capital Fund or other funds in the custody and control of the Secretary-General would total $6.2 million, and arrears of contributions of Member States would total $16.9 million.

IV. 1960 COST ESTIMATES FOR THE MAINTENANCE OF THE FORCE

- 47. In the introduction to my annual report (A/4132/Add.1), I have indicated that the United Nations Emergency Force remains an essential element in the efforts of the United Nations to assist Member States to maintain stable and peaceful conditions in the Middle East and that it is at present impossible to foresee when the operations of the Force might be brought to an end without damage to the valuable results which it has already achieved. Moreover, on the basis of all information available to Headquarters, I accept the view of the Commander of the Force and his military associates that the Force cannot continue to carry out the responsibilities now defined for it if it is reduced below its present strength.
- 48. Accordingly, I have submitted to the General Assembly my budget estimates (A/4160) for maintaining the Force during 1960 at its present strength in order that the General Assembly, should it so decide, may make appropriate financial provision for the continued operation of UNEF.
- 49. The 1960 estimates total $18,916,000, which is $453,000 less than the estimate I submitted for the year 1959, and $84,000 below the amount approved for 1959 by the General Assembly at its thirteenth session in resolution 1337 (XIII).
- 50. These estimates have been examined by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions which has reported thereon to the General Assembly (A/4171).

V. FUTURE FINANCING ARRANGEMENTS FOR

- 51. The General Assembly in resolution 1337 (XIII), inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to consult with Member States with respect to their views concerning the manner of financing the Force in the future, and to submit a report together with the replies to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session.
- 52. My views on this important matter, together with the views of the Member States that have submitted replies in response to my request, are being presented to the General Assembly in a separate report (A/4176 and Add.1 and 2).
- 53. I am sure Member States will appreciate the absolute necessity for ensuring adequate financial support for the continuing operation of UNEF as well as for the payment of contributions now in arrears, since failure to take early and effective action on these matters would seriously jeopardize the financial solvency not only of the Force but of the entire Organization.

[3 December 1959]

- 1. The General Assembly, in its resolution 1000 (ES-I) of 5 November 1956, acting on the suggestion made in the report of the Secretary-General, 15/appointed, on an emergency basis, as Chief of the Command for the emergency international Force, Major-General E. L. M. Burns of Canada, who was then serving as Chief of Staff of the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization in Jerusalem. The Force has continued until the present day under the command of General Burns, who now has the rank of Lieutenant-General. General Assembly resolution 1122 (XI) of 26 November 1956 provided that henceforth the Force would be known as the "United Nations Emergency Force" and that the Chief of Command would be its "Commander".
- 2. The Government of Canada for some time has registered a desire to have General Burns return to national service, and General Burns himself, urged by the United Nations, has prolonged his tour of duty mainly in response to a sense of duty. Now, however, because of a new governmental assignment for him of unusual importance and urgency, for which General Burns wishes release, it has become necessary to accede to the request that he be relieved of his command before the end of the year 1959. This conclusion has been reached in the light of the fact that General Burns has served the United Nations in the Middle East for more than five years, having been Chief of Staff of the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization from 9 August 1954 until he assumed the command of the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF).
- 3. In these two capacities, and particularly as Commander of UNEF, General Burns has rendered distinguished service to the United Nations and has made a signal contribution of its efforts toward quiet and peace in the area. With devotion to the United Nations and its ideals, he has helped to mould, and has ably led, this unique and pioneering peace force. A considerable debt of gratitude is acknowledged to him for this service and also to the Government of Canada for making him available to the United Nations for a period so extended.

- 4. The impending loss of the services of General Burns gives rise to the question of a successor. There were good reasons for looking, in the first instance, to India for this purpose, among them being the fact that India provides the largest contingent in UNEF and has given full co-operation to it from the beginning. Consequently, an inquiry about possible candidates for the position of Commander was directed by the Secretary-General to India early in November. In response, the Government of India has submitted the name of an experienced officer with the rank of General who must be considered as thoroughly qualified to undertake the important responsibility involved.
- 5. The Secretary-General, therefore, acting under the authority vested in him by resolution 1001 (ES-I) of 7 November 1956, submits to the General Assembly for its approval the appointment as Commander of the United Nations Emergency Force of Major-General P. S. Gyani, a senior Major-General of the Indian Army, as successor to Lieutenant-General E. L. M. Burns. This appointment is to be effective as of the date on which General Burns relinquishes command, and is on the same terms as those which have applied to General Burns. The Government of India informs the Secretary-General that General Gyani is in line for promotion to the rank of Lieutenant-General.
- 6. The details of the training and career of Major-General Gyani are annexed to the present report.

Supplementary estimates for 1959: revised estimates for 1960: report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text: English] [17 November 1959]

1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered a report of the Secretary-General (A/C.5/800) in which, for reasons outlined in that report, he has proposed the following modifications in the approved budget for 1959 and the budget estimates for 1960 of the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF): (a) That the approved expenditure estimates under sections 1 to 8 of the 1959 budget should be increased by $950,000; and (b) That the 1960 budget estimates should be increased by $1,290,000 from the previous total of $18,916,000 to a revised amount of $20,206,000.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES FOR 1959

- 2. The 1959 budget of UNEF provided $12.5 million for the running costs of the Force (sections 1-7), $5.5 million for reimbursement of extra and extraordinary costs relating to pay and allowances of members of contingents (section 8) and $1 million towards the reserve for compensation in respect of equipment, materials and supplies furnished by Governments to their contingents (section 9).
- 3. The Secretary-General states that the provision of $5.5 million for extra and extraordinary costs will prove inadequate, to the extent of $1.7 million, for two reasons. In the first place, it would be necessary to reimburse the Governments providing replacements for the Colombian contingent (A/4210, para. 4) at a higher average rate than had been anticipated. Secondly, on the basis of expectations at that time, the original 1959 estimates had not included adequate provision for full reimbursement of the extra costs of one large contingent in the Force.

- 4. The Advisory Committee is satisfied, on the basis of detailed information on the circumstances involved, that the proposed increase of $1.7 million in the provision for extra and extraordinary costs is warranted.
- 5. An increase of $200,000 is also estimated in the costs in respect of operation of aircraft, as a result of increases in the charges per flying hour. The major part of these costs arises in connexion with the North Star flights furnished by the Canadian Government, in respect of which charges per flying hour have increased from $181.26 to $253.93, as already indicated in the estimates for 1960 (A/4160, section 2, chapter II (ii)). The Advisory Committee understands that the charges are based on the over-all cost to the Canadian Government of operating aircraft and that, under this arrangement, no separate charge is made to the United Nations in respect of aircraft which may be worn out or destroyed.

- 6. As against the total increased requirements of $1.9 million, savings of $950,000 are anticipated under sections 1 to 7 of the 1959 budget, including $90,000 as a result of the deferral of the delivery of certain motor transport equipment. Among other elements in the total anticipated savings are $191,000 under costs of military personnel (section 1), $170,000 under freight, cartage and express (section 2, chapter V) and $450,000 under rations (section 4). While a part of the savings arises from enforced economies, the revised estimates for the items in question largely reflect real savings resulting from a continued improvement of controls and a decrease in the costs of certain items such as rations.
- 7. The Advisory Committee concurs in the supplementary estimates, as submitted, including the necessary transfers from sections 1-7 to section 8. On the question whether the net additional requirement of $950,000 should be provided by a supplemental appropriation or by transfer from the $1 million provided under section 9 towards the reserve for compensation in respect of equipment, the Committee would prefer the latter approach. Accordingly, the Committee recommends that the 1959 budget should be modified, the provision of $1 million under section 9 being deleted and a further amount of $950,000 (in addition to the transfers from sections 1 to 7) included under section 8.

REVISED ESTIMATES FOR 1960

- 8. The original estimates for 1960 submitted by the Secretary-General (A/4160) amounted to $18,916,000, and the Advisory Committee recommended (A/4171) an appropriation in that amount. However, the Committee suggested that efforts should be made to keep expenses in 1960 within a target level of $18,500,000.
- 9. The Secretary-General has proposed an increase of $1,290,000 (A/C.5/800) which comprises:
- (a) $800,000 to meet increased requirements in respect of extra and extraordinary costs;

- (b) $90,000 in respect of the equipment the delivery of which has been deferred from 1959 to 1960;
- (c) $200,000 for establishing and equipping a new hospital, as the UNEF hospital and all its equipment (with the exception of one piece of X-ray equipment) was completely destroyed by a fire on 26 October 1959; and
- (d) $200,000 to provide for the substantial claims that are expected from Governments in respect of the death or disability of members of contingents.
- 10. Items (a) and (b) do not call for any further comment. As regards item (c), the Advisory Committee has inquired into the circumstances of the fire and, while the Secretary-General is awaiting a detailed report from the field, the Committee notes that all necessary emergency steps were taken to prevent the patients being injured and to ensure their continued care. An emergency field hospital unit was flown in from Norway on 29 October 1959 and will be in operation, pending the construction of a new, fire-proof hospital.
- 11. As to item (d), compensation in the event of death or disability of a member of the Force is determined by the Government concerned in accordance with the rules and procedures which normally apply to its armed forces, and the United Nations reimburses the Government in the appropriate amount. There have been to date thirty-four fatalities and a number of cases of disability or injury, and while only two payments have so far been made, a number of further claims are anticipated.
- 12. In the light of the Secretary-General's revised submission, the Committee would now recommend that an appropriation in the amount of $20 million, as compared with $20,206,000 proposed by the Secretary-General, might be approved, but that efforts should be made to hold expenditure within a revised target level of $19.5 million. It would be understood that, should death and disability claims amount to a substantial sum, it might be necessary to go beyond this target level.

Supplementary estimates for 1959: revised estimates for 1960: report of the Secretary-General

[12 November 1959]

INTRODUCTION

- 1. The General Assembly on 13 December 1958 in resolution 1337 (XIII) authorized the Secretary-General to expend up to a maximum of $19 million for the continuing operation of the United Nations Emergency Force during 1959. On 23 July 1959 the Secretary-General, in document A/4160, set forth his budget estimates for UNEF for 1960.
- 2. It has now become apparent that claims from Governments providing contingents or services to UNEF have been provided for at too low a level both in the approved budget for 1959 and in the budget estimates for 1960. The budgetary provisions for both years need to be amended to provide for the resultant increased costs. Furthermore, as far as the 1960 estimates are concerned, additional expenses are now foreseen as a result of first, a fire, which on 26 October 1959 destroyed the UNEF hospital and all its equipment, secondly, unavoidable delays in the receipt of certain equipment for which provision was made in the 1959 budget and which is now expected to be delivered in 1960, and, thirdly, claims from Governments arising from the service-incurred death and disability of members of their UNEF contingents.

SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET ESTIMATES FOR 1959

3. The Secretary-General's original cost estimates for the maintenance of the Force during 1959 were presented to the General Assembly on 7 November 1958 in document A/3984. At that time the Secretary-General, on the basis of the latest claims from Governments providing military contingents to the Force, estimated that $5,500,000 would be required under section 8 of the 1959 budget for reimbursements to those Governments of the extra and extraordinary costs relating to pay and allowances which they would incur during 1959. He noted, however, in connexion with section 8, that "the estimate for 1959 is below that for 1958 on the assumption that reimbursements in respect of the replacements for the Colombian contingent will be made at the average rate that obtains for the other contingents remaining in the Force".

- 4. Subsequent to the adoption of General Assembly resolution 1337 (XIII) it was ascertained that it would be necessary to reimburse the Governments providing replacements for the Colombian contingent at a higher average rate than had been anticipated. It was also established during the early months of 1959 that, owing to changed conditions, the provision made in the original estimates for full reimbursement of the extra costs of one large contingent in the Force had proved inadequate. It is therefore necessary to revise the 1959 budget estimates for section 8 from $5,500,000 to $7,200,000.
- 5. The Secretary-General was also informed in 1959 that the charges per flying hour for the aircraft utilized by UNEF had risen substantially and as a result the estimate under section 2, chapter II (ii) for "Operation of Aircraft" has had to be increased by more than $200,000.
- 6. With a view to offsetting the unforeseen extra costs to be reimbursed to Governments providing contingents and services to the fullest possible extent, economies have been sought in other parts of the UNEF budget. It is now estimated that, in addition to absorbing the extra costs for the operation of aircraft referred to in paragraph 5 above, additional savings of approximately $660,000 may be realized on the level of expenditure—in the amount of $12,500,000—authorized under part A of the budget.
- 7. It has, moreover, been necessary to defer until 1960 delivery of certain equipment costing $90,000 for which provision was made in the 1959 budget. Accordingly, the Secretary-General recommends that that amount together with the additional $660,000 of savings under part A of the budget be applied to reduce the extra $1,700,000 required for the reimbursements to Governments under section 8, and that the remaining balance of $950,000 required for section 8 be provided either by a supplemental appropriation of that amount or by authorizing the Secretary-General to transfer $950,000 from the $1,000,000 provided as a reserve under section 9 of the budget.

REVISED BUDGET ESTIMATES FOR 1960

- 8. When the Secretary-General's original cost estimates for the maintenance of the Force during 1960 (A/4160) were presented on 23 July 1959 it was estimated, on the basis of the latest claims from Governments providing military contingents to the Force, that the amount required for reimbursement to them for extra and extraordinary costs relating to pay and allowances under section 8 of the budget would total $6,800,000. Claims received subsequently indicate, however, that on the basis of a full year an additional amount of $800,000 will be required under section 8.
- 9. An additional $90,000 is also required in section 2, chapter I of the budget estimates to cover the cost of the equipment for which provision was originally made in the 1959 budget and delivery of which is being deferred until 1960.
- 10. Furthermore, as a result of the fire on 26 October 1959 which completely destroyed the UNEF hospital and all its equipment, provision is also required in the 1960 budget for establishing and equipping a new hospital. A tentative estimate for this purpose is $200,000 which would be distributed among the appropriate sections in part A of the budget when the details are known.
- 11. Finally, although it was hoped that no financial provision would be required under section 7 to cover contingencies during 1960, experience during the past few months has indicated that substantial claims may be expected from Governments arising from the death or disability of members of their contingents and it is now considered prudent to re-establish a provision of $200,000 to cover these and other contingencies.
- 12. The Secretary-General accordingly recommends that the General Assembly make appropriate financial provision for maintaining the Force during 1960 in the amount of $20,206,000.

Report of the Fifth Committee

[4 December 1959]

- 1. The Fifth Committee considered, at its 749th to 752nd meetings, held from 24 to 27 November 1959, the following sub-items of agenda item 28 concerning the United Nations Emergency Force: (a) Cost estimates for the maintenance of the Force, and (b) Manner of financing the Force.
- 2. In opening the discussion, the Secretary-General restated his conviction, expressed in the progress report on the Force (A/4210) that, for the immediate future at least, the Force continued to be an indispensable element in the efforts of the Organization to assist Member Governments in maintaining stable and peaceful conditions in the area in which the Force operated. In the present circumstances, it was not possible for him to foresee when the operations of the Force might be brought to an end without risking the progress thus far made, and any decrease in the size of the Force below its present reduced numbers would require a redefinition of its present function and responsibility. Thus he could see no possibility of substantial savings in the cost of maintaining the Force in 1960, beyond those that had already been taken into account in the estimates. As regarded the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the 1960 budget estimates (A/4284, para. 12), he and the Commander of the Force foresaw no real difficulties from a budgetary point of view if those recommendations were adopted. Every effort would be made to keep expenditure within the target level suggested.

- 3. The Secretary-General also referred to the guestion of compensation in respect of equipment, materials and supplies furnished by Governments to their contingents. No provision had been included in the 1960 estimates for the Force for this purpose (A/4160, para. 7); and the provision therefor in the 1959 budget would, under the recommendation of the Advisory Committee (A/4284, para. 7), be deleted. He emphasized that there could be no question, in the light of the General Assembly's decisions, as to the Organization's ultimate obligation to reimburse the Governments providing such equipment and supplies for their extra and extraordinary costs on that account. As the period of service of contingents in the Force had been prolonged much longer than originally envisaged, it was reasonable that such Governments should desire a re-examination of the General Assembly's original decision (resolution 1151 (XII)) which was that the United Nations would assume responsibility for payment only at the conclusion of the total period of service.
- 4. On the manner of financing the Force, the Secretary-General expressed deep concern that unpaid assessments for 1957, 1958 and 1959 amounted to over $19 million. By the end of 1959, it was estimated, the Special Account for the Force would need to draw over $6 million from the Working Capital Fund, and would have unliquidated obligations of over $12 million. The views of fifty Member States on the manner of financing the Force were set out in his report (A/4176 and Add.1 and 2); the views of the largest number were those which he had held from the outset. He did not believe that any generally acceptable formula could ignore the application of the regular scale of assessments.
- 5. During the discussion in the Committee, tribute was paid to the exemplary manner in which the Force was fulfilling its task. Gratitude was expressed to those countries which had provided contingents and to the officers and men who were making a notable contribution to the maintenance of general peace and security. The Secretary-General and the Commander of the Force, Lieutenant-General E.L.M. Burns, were to be congratulated. General Burns stated his own appreciation and that of the members of the Force for these expressions of confidence, which he would convey to them.

(a) Cost estimates for the maintenance of the Force

- 6. The Secretary-General had submitted original 1960 estimates (A/4160) for the expenses of the Force totalling $18,916,000. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions had reported on those estimates (A/4171), and, while recommending an appropriation on the amount estimated, that Committee had suggested that efforts should be made to keep the expenses within a target level of $18,500,000.
- 7. In a subsequent report (A/C.5/800) the Secretary-General submitted revised estimates involving an increase of $1,290,000 in the 1960 estimates, bringing them to a total of $20,206,000. In respect of these revised estimates, the Advisory Committee recommended (A/4284, para. 12) an appropriation of $20 million, but suggested that efforts should be made to hold expenditure within a revised target level of $19,500,000.

- 8. As regards 1959, the Secretary-General also found it necessary to submit further estimates (A/C.5/ 800). For certain items of the approved budget of $19 million, 16/additional requirements totalling $1,900,000 were foreseen; savings of $950,000 on other items could be estimated. To meet the net additional requirement of $950,000 under section 8, after available surpluses under sections 1 to 7 had been applied to the needs for that section, the Secretary-General recommended either a supplemental appropriation of that amount, or that he be authorized to transfer $950,000 from the $1 million provided as a reserve under section 9 of the budget. In its report the Advisory Committee concurred in the supplementary estimates. as submitted, including the necessary transfers from sections 1-7 to section 8. On the question of whether the net additional requirement of $950,000 under section 8 should be provided by a supplemental appropriation or by a transfer from the $1 million provided under section 9 towards the reserve for compensation in respect of equipment, materials and supplies provided by Governments to their contingents, the Advisory Committee preferred the latter approach. It recommended that the 1959 budget should be modified. the provision of $1 million under section 9 being deleted and a further amount of $950,000 included under section 8 (A/4284, para. 7).
- 9. At its 752nd meeting, the Fifth Committee approved, by 43 votes to 8, with 6 abstentions, the recommendation of the Advisory Committee regarding the 1959 budget for the Force. As thus approved, the 1959 budget remained within the total authorization of $19 million given by the General Assembly in resolution 1337 (XIII) of 13 December 1958 for the 1959 expenses of the Force.
- 10. The Fifth Committee's approval of the recommendation of the Advisory Committee for a 1960 appropriation of $20 million for the Force is contained in the draft resolution which it recommends for adoption by the General Assembly. The consideration in the Committee of this draft resolution is set out in subsequent paragraphs of the present report.
- 11. In connexion both with the 1959 and 1960 estimates, delegations of Member States providing contingents for the Force emphasized that while there was no provision in those estimates for increasing the reserve for compensation for equipment, materials and supplies provided by Governments to their contingents, there could be no question as to the ultimate responsibility of the Organization in this matter.

(b) Manner of financing the Force

- 12. On the manner of financing the Force, the Committee had before it the report of the Secretary-General (A/4176 and Add.1 and 2) on consultations with Governments of Member States in pursuance of paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 1337 (XIII) of 13 December 1958. The report included the communications which had been received from fifty Member States which were broadly classified as follows:
- (a) Thirty-eight favoured assessment of UNEF's expenses among all Members, of which:
- (i) Twenty-nine wished the basis of assessment to be the scale of assessment adopted for the United Nations budget, and 16/ Ibid., Thirteenth Session, Supplement No. 5 C.

- (ii) Nine wished adoption of some scale of assessment different from that adopted for the United Nations budget;
- (b) Eight expressed the opinion or referred to their earlier views that only the States which took the action resulting in the creation of the Force should pay its expenses;
- (c) Two indicated merely their inability to pay for the Force, one proposed that the costs be defrayed entirely by voluntary contributions, and one stated that it would prefer a thorough discussion of the matter at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly before taking a definite stand on the question.
- 13. Delegations speaking in the Committee reiterated the views of their Governments as set out in the Secretary-General's report, which had also been reported by the Fifth Committee in its report \(^{17}\) on this question at the thirteenth session.
- 14. At the 749th meeting of the Committee, the representatives of the United States and the United Kingdom, while stating that the Governments maintained their position that the expenses of the Force should be financed on the regular scale of assessments, announced that, subject to parliamentary approval, their Governments would make voluntary contributions to the 1960 expenses of the Force in the approximate amounts of $3.2 million and $275,000 respectively.
- 15. At the 750th meeting of the Committee, the representative of Norway introduced the draft resolution (A/C.5/L.591) submitted by Brazil, Canada, Colombia, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Yugoslavia, which read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

- "Recalling its resolutions 1089 (XI) of 21 December 1956, 1151 (XII) of 22 November 1957 and 1337 (XIII) of 13 December 1958,
- "Having considered the observations made by Member States concerning financing of the Force,
- "Having examined the budget estimates for the Force submitted by the Secretary-General for the year 1960 (A/4160, A/C.5/800) and the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions thereon (A/4171, A/4284),
- "Having noted with satisfaction that special financial assistance has been pledged voluntarily towards the expenditures for the Force in 1960,
- "Considering that it is desirable to apply voluntary contributions of special financial assistance in such a manner as to reduce the financial burden on those Governments which have the least capacity, as indicated by the regular scale of assessments, to contribute towards the expenditures for maintaining the Force,
- "1. Decides to assess the amount of $20 million against all Members of the United Nations on the basis of the regular scale of assessments;
- "2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to expendup to a maximum of $20 million for the continuing operation of the Force during 1960;
- 17/ bid., Annexes, agenda item 65, document A/4072, para. 10.

- "3. Decides that voluntary contributions pledged prior to 31 December 1959 towards expenditures for the Force in 1960 shall be applied as a credit to reduce by 50 per cent the contributions of as many Member Governments as possible, commencing with those Governments assessed at the minimum percentage of 0.04 per cent and then including in order those Governments assessed at the next highest percentages until the total amount of voluntary contributions has been fully applied;
- "4. Decides that, if Member Governments do not avail themselves of credits provided for in operative paragraph 3, then the amounts involved shall be credited to section 9 of the 1960 budget for the United Nations Emergency Force."
- 16. The representative of Norway explained that the sponsors, in submitting the draft resolution, had considered the position of those States which could not easily bear the additional financial burden of the costs of the Force. Thus, the resolution contained a formula which, in view of the generous contributions announced by the representatives of the United States and the United Kingdom, would permit of a 50 per cent reduction in the assessments of all Member States except the five highest contributors. He also noted the burden that was being borne by the sponsors of the resolution-all of whom were States who had or were providing contingents for the Force, and called attention to the provisions of operative paragraph 4 of the draft resolution which provided that, if Member Governments did not avail themselves of the credits provided for, then the amounts should be credited to the reserve for compensation in respect of equipment, materials and supplies provided by Governments to their contingents.
- 17. During the discussion of the draft resolution, appreciation was expressed for the offers of voluntary contributions which had been announced. Some of these Members who favoured assessment of all Members for the expenses of the Force but on a scale other than the regular scale welcomed the provisions of the draft resolution on the application of those contributions. While the arrangement did not meet their point of view in principle, it represented, in their opinion, a more acceptable solution for the coming year.
- 18. In their interventions, certain delegations announced the intention of their Governments, subject to parliamentary approval, to forego the credits that would otherwise accrue to them under the terms of the draft resolution.
- 19. At the 752nd meeting of the Committee, the sponsors of the draft resolutions submitted a revised draft (A/C.5/L.591/Rev.1) which would: (a) indicate the approximate amount of the voluntary contributions which had been announced; (b) reverse the order of operative paragraphs 1 and 2 of the original draft; and (c) incorporate in the new operative paragraph 2 the additional words "subject to the provisions of paragraphs 3 and 4 below", proposed as an amendment by the representative of Spain.
- 20. At the same meeting, the Committee voted on the draft resolution (A/C.5/L.591/Rev.1). The words "subject to the provisions of paragraphs 3 and 4 below" in operative paragraph 2 were adopted by 39 votes to 9 with 22 abstentions; paragraph 1 was adopted by 48 votes to 10 with 12 abstentions; paragraph 3 was adopted by 45 votes to 9 with 17 abstentions; paragraph 2 was adopted by 41 votes to 10 with 21 abstentions. The draft resolution as a whole was adopted by a roll-call vote of 45 to 10 with 17 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Colombia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Liberia, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Paraguay, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Yugoslavia.

Against: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Abstaining: Chile, China, Cuba, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Guinea, Iraq, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Mexico, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, United Arab Republic, Venezuela.

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

21. The Fifth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolutions:

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 842nd plenary meeting on 21 November 1959, the General Assembly took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the organization and functions of the Force (A/4210).

At its 846th plenary meeting on 5 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Fifth Committee (A/4335, para. 21). For the final text see resolution 1441 (XIV) below.

At the same meeting the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the delegation of Norway (A/L.272). For the final text see resolution 1442 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1441 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS EMERGENCY FORCE

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1089 (XI) of 21 December 1956, 1151 (XII) of 22 November 1957 and 1337 (XIII) of 13 December 1958,

Having considered the observations made by Member States concerning the financing of the United Nations Emergency Force,

Having examined the budget estimates for the Force submitted by the Secretary-General for the year 1960 (A/4160, A/C.5/800) and the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions thereon in its eleventh (A/4171) and twenty-eighth (A/4284) reports to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session,

Having noted with satisfaction that special financial assistance in the amount of about $3,475,000 has been pledged voluntarily towards the expenditures for the Force in 1960,

Considering that it is desirable to apply voluntary contributions of special financial assistance in such a manner as to reduce the financial burden on those Governments which have the least capacity, as indicated by the regular scale of assessments, to contribute towards the expenditures for maintaining the Force,

- 1. Authorizes the Secretary-General to expend up to a maximum of $20 million for the continuing operation of the United Nations Emergency Force during 1960;
- 2. Decides to assess the amount of $20 million against all Members of the United Nations on the basis of the regular scale of assessments, subject to the provisions of paragraphs 3 and 4 below;

- 3. Decides that voluntary contributions pledged prior to 31 December 1959 towards expenditures for the Force in 1960 shall be applied as a credit to reduce by 50 per cent the contributions of as many Governments of Member States as possible, commencing with those Governments assessed at the minimum percentage of 0.04 per cent and then including, in order, those Governments assessed at the next highest percentages until the total amount of voluntary contributions has been fully applied;
- 4. Decides that, if Governments of Member States do not avail themselves of credits provided for in paragraph 3 above, then the amounts involved shall be credited to section 9 of the 1960 budget for the Force.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1442 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS EMERGENCY FORCE

The General Assembly,

Noting from the report of the Secretary-General (A/4210/Add.1) the intention of Lieutenant-General E. L. M. Burns to relinquish his post as Commander of the United Nations Emergency Force,

- 1. Expresses its appreciation of the excellent leadership which General Burns has given to the United Nations Emergency Force;
- 2. Approves the appointment, on the existing terms, of Major-General P. S. Gyani as Commander of the Force, effective on the date when General Burns relinquishes command.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

Special Fund: financial regulations and administrative budget for 1959 Report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text: English] [23 April 1959]

1. In accordance with paragraphs 53 and 54 of the regulatory provisions set forth in part B of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII) of 14 October 1958, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has reviewed the draft financial regulations of the Special Fund and the administrative budget of the Fund for 1959. The present report, which includes the Committee's observations on both matters, is submitted in time for the meeting of the Governing Council of the Fund, to be held in May 1959.

FINANCIAL REGULATIONS

- 2. The draft financial regulations (SF/L.9), prepared by the Secretary-General in consultation with the Managing Director of the Fund, are based on General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII) and the Financial Regulations of the United Nations. To that extent, the Special Fund financial regulations are not necessarily self-contained; on any matter not specifically covered in those regulations, the appropriate provisions of the United Nations Financial Regulations would apply. A specific reference to this situation has been included in the draft regulations under review (article 20.2) at the suggestion of the Advisory Committee. In any event, the United Nations Regulations apply to all the finances of the Organization including special and trust accounts, subject only to such modifications as are specifically approved by the competent legislative bodies under the authority of the General Assembly.
- *For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Second Committee, 583rd to 591st and 600th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 841st meeting.

- 3. At the same time, there is no doubt advantage in bringing together, as has been attempted in the present case, a reasonably complete statement of the financial policies that are to be applied to the Special Fund. The Advisory Committee notes in this regard that, in merely following closely or reproducing the language of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII), there has been some sacrifice of the clarity and precision as regards financial responsibility and control which usually obtain in regulations of this type. Illustrative of this situation are articles 10.1, 15.2 to 15.4, and 17.1. This emphasizes the need to treat the present draft regulations as provisional and to review them in the light of operating experience.
- 4. Furthermore, the attempt to achieve a consolidated statement of financial policies has necessitated a compilation which contains both regulations and interpretative rules, some of which might have been left out without disadvantage. This also in part explains the reference at some points to the Controller of the United Nations rather than to the Secretary-General.
- 5. The Advisory Committee has examined the draft regulations in detail in consultation with the Managing Director and representatives of the Secretary-General. In doing so, the Committee has sought to be of maximum assistance to the Governing Council by paying particular attention to such distinctive features of the Special Fund as the earmarking of funds, project budgets, availability of resources, the role of executing agencies and the administrative budget. As a result of these discussions, certain modifications have been agreed to by the representatives of the Secretary-General and the Managing Director, and incorporated in the text that is being submitted to the Governing Council.

6. There are, however, some further points on which the Advisory Committee desires to offer comment, without suggesting any immediate modification of the regulations concerned. These comments might be taken into account at the time of the further review suggested in paragraph 3 above.

Article 6.2

7. Article 6.2 reads, in part:

"Contributions shall be made in currency readily usable by the Special Fund consistent with the need for efficiency and economy of the Fund's operations...".

The wording of this article follows the language of paragraph 47 of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII), part B, and is somewhat different from the corresponding provision in respect of the Special Account of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance. Contributions to the latter Account may be made in such forms and subject to such conditions as may be agreed between the Secretary-General, after consultation with the Technical Assistance Board (TAB), and the contributing Governments.

8. While the Advisory Committee has no financial or administrative question to raise concerning the language of article 6.2, the Committee is informed that the Managing Director will interpret this article as not precluding altogether the acceptance, translated into the appropriate money equivalent, of contributions in such goods and services as are consistent with the needs, efficiency and economy of the Fund's operations.

Article 7.1

9. Paragraph 45 of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII), part B, provides, inter alia, that the Fund is also authorized to receive donations from non-governmental sources. Article 7.1 of the draft financial regulations would leave the acceptance of such donations to the judgement of the Managing Director and, further, would permit a donor to specify the purposes of his donation. This latter provision is in contrast with the provision for governmental contributions which, according to paragraph 49 of the resolution, "shall be made without limitation as to use by a specific agency or in a specific recipient country or for a specific project."

Article 12

10. In connexion with article 12, which deals with project budgets, the Advisory Committee would underline the importance, first, of defining projects completely and accurately in practical terms, and, secondly, of ensuring that the initial cost estimates, on which Special Fund assistance would be based, are as realistic and accurate as possible.

Article 21

11. Article 21 deals with the financing and execution of projects by executing agencies; more specifically, article 21.3 outlines the nature of the provisions to be included in each agreement with an executing agency. Although the article is not specific as regards the accounting and audit requirements relating to funds allocated to executing agencies, the Advisory Committee agrees that it is unnecessary at this stage to force

United Nations standards and procedures in this regard on other agencies. In any event, where the executing agency is an organization in the United Nations system, the normal accounting and audit provisions of that organization would apply also to its Special Fund projects. In the case of other executing agencies, the Advisory Committee trusts that appropriate provisions, consistent with the requirements of the United Nations Financial Regulations, will be worked out in consultation with the Controller of the United Nations and included in each project agreement.

12. In reviewing the draft regulations, the Advisory Committee has again been struck by the need to clarify and emphasize the role of the Secretary-General in the financial operations of the Organization, and, in particular, as regards the custody, investment and accounting of trust, special and other accounts. The Committee has previously suggested that "the Secretary-General may wish to consider, in consultataion with the Board of Auditors, how far there is need to strengthen the [United Nations Financial] Regulations so as to ensure that the Secretary-General's responsibilities in the matter of trust funds, special and other funds are clearly defined and can be freely exercised".1/ The Committee believes that this question merits further study with a view to appropriate amendment of the United Nations Financial Regulations.

ADMINISTRATIVE BUDGET FOR 1959

General comments

- 13. The estimates in respect of the administrative budget for 1959 (SF/L.11), prepared by the Managing Director with the assistance of the Secretary-General, amount to $400,000 net. The current administrative expenses of the Fund are being met out of the amount of $130,000 authorized by the Governing Council in respect of the six-month period ending 30 June 1959. The amount of $400,000 for the whole year is inclusive of the interim authorization of $130,000.
- 14. In reviewing the estimates with the Managing Director and representatives of the Secretary-General, the Advisory Committee has taken into account the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII) under which the Special Fund was set up, and, in particular, the directives in paragraphs 28 and 29 of part B of that resolution, by which the Managing Director "shall be assisted by a small group of officials" and, for other services, he "shall rely as far as possible on the existing facilities of the United Nations, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency, and the Technical Assistance Board."
- against these considerations, the estimates under review are somewhat liberally conceived, especially as regards the numbers and levels of staff and the provision for contingencies, in this first year of operation. Nevertheless, in the light of the assurance given by the Managing Director that he would endeavour to administer the Fund's operations as economically as possible, and subject to the detailed comments that follow, the Committee would not suggest a formal reduction in the estimates. At the same time, the Committee trusts that the Managing Director will make every effort to keep actual administrative expenditures in 1959 within a total of $350,000.

16. The Advisory Committee hopes further that the provision of $20,000 for contingencies will be regarded as a reserve. It should not, in normal circumstances, prove necessary to fall back on that reserve. This is particularly true in view of the authority which the Managing Director would have to transfer funds freely within the total authorization.

Comments on specific points

- 17. The Managing Director has proposed a total of thirty-eight established posts (in addition to the post of Managing Director) comprising eighteen in the Director and Professional category and twenty in the General Service category. All the Professional posts, with one exception, are proposed to be in the First Officer (P-4) and higher levels.
- 18. Both in terms of the directive in paragraph 28 of part B of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII) and of the practical possibilities of recruiting qualified personnel, the numbers and levels of staff proposed for 1959 appear somewhat on the high side. The Advisory Committee has had previous experience, most recently in respect of the Economic Commission for Africa, with the difficulty of utilizing liberally envisaged credits for staff in the first months or year of operation. Furthermore, the staffing pattern in the Fund's secretariat, with its tendency towards concentration at the more senior levels, should be very carefully related to the general staffing and grading pattern of the United Nations Secretariat.
- 19. The Advisory Committee notes that on 1 April 1959, apart from the Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director and not taking into account the administrative services provided by the TAB secretariat, there were nine officers actually on the job in the Fund's secretariat, eight of whom had been seconded or detailed to that secretariat from the - United Nations, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the specialized agencies and the TAB secretariat.

- 20. As regards the monetary provision for established posts, while the deduction in respect of turnover of staff takes account of anticipated delays in recruitment, actual savings from this factor are likely to be greater than the $107,415 that is estimated, as a large number of the posts will only be filled late in the second half of the year. It may also be noted that the estimates are given on a net basis, that is, after deduction of the anticipated income from staff assessment. This is explained by the fact that in the case of programmes financed from voluntary contributions, income from staff assessment is directly credited to the special fund of the programme in question instead of being passed through the Tax Equalization Fund.
- 21. The Advisory Committee notes that the Managing Director has been able to rely heavily on the existing facilities of the United Nations and its associated agencies, and, in particular, on the services of the TAB secretariat and its resident representatives in the field. Special attention should be invited in this regard to the fact that administrative services for the Special Fund have so far been provided by the Administration Division of the TAB secretariat, and that these arrangements are expected to be continued. While this situation would probably increase the work-load of the TAB secretariat, the Advisory Committee believes that every effort should be made to provide these services without additional staff in the Professional category.
- 22. The Advisory Committee has reviewed in detail, and item by item, the proposed estimates for other costs. While generally these estimates appear to be generous by United Nations standards, the Advisory Committee has no specific comment to offer with regard to them.

DOCUMENT A/4217/ADD.1 $^{2/}$ Administrative budget of the Special Fund for 1959

[1 October 1959]

Note by the Secretary-General: Paragraph 54 of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII), part B, requires that the administrative budget of the Special Fund, as approved by the Governing Council, shall be submitted to the General Assembly together with any comments which the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions may have made on these budget estimates. In conformity with this provision, the Special Fund's administrative budget estimates for the year 1959, which were submitted by the Managing Director of the Fund to the Governing Council at its second session, are transmitted to the General Assembly. As stated in paragraph 37 of its report (E/3270), the Governing Council approved these estimates unanimously. The related comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, which the Governing Council took into account when approving the estimates, were submitted to the General Assembly in document A/4099.

Foreword by the Managing Director of the Special Fund

1. On 27 January 1959, the Governing Council, in response to the request of the Managing Director, authorized expenses up to $130,000 in respect of administrative costs of the Special Fund for the sixmonth period ending 30 June 1959. The present estimates, covering the full year 1959, were prepared six weeks after this interim action and are founded on a clearer understanding of the administrative requirements of the Fund. It should however be noted that the Special Fund has not completed a full cycle in its operations; actual project activities are not expected to commence until the second half of the year. It will therefore be recognized that these estimates must necessarily contain a certain element of conjecture.

- 2. In this its first year of operation, the Special Fund secretariat must organize itself, face and resolve many questions of policy and principle-which, it is to be hoped, will constitute sound precedents for future operations-and, most importantly, begin to provide assistance to Governments on soundly conceived, high priority projects which will have a significant impact on the economic development of the recipient countries. Over 130 requests for assistance have been received and are now under study. The Managing Director hopes that in the course of the year two programmes of projects will be submitted to the Governing Council, and that by the end of 1959 we shall be able to see at least thirty projects in actual operation and an equal number in the blue-print stage for consideration in the spring of 1960.
- 3. The estimates presented herewith total $400,000 net for the year 1959, and are based on the Managing Director's best present conception of the requirements for a Headquarters staff and common departmental services, an estimate of the requirements for the services of such outside consultants as are not related to specific approved projects, and of official travel requirements for Headquarters staff.
- 4. The estimates assume full use of existing resources of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies, as required by paragraph 29, part B, of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII). So far as facilities and services for the Managing Director at Headquarters are concerned, provision is not made in these estimates for official records, language and documents services, office space, utilities, local telephone service, standard office equipment and miscellaneous housekeeping services, inasmuch as these are to be provided for in the regular United Nations budget. As to other requirements, only those charges which represent directly related additional costs to the United Nations or the specialized agencies, and which are not chargeable to specific approved projects, would be carried against the administrative budget of the Special Fund, in pursuance of the General Assembly resolution. In this connexion, the Managing Director would wish to record his appreciation for the generous way in which existing facilities and staff have been made available to him in the first months of the Special Fund's existence. In particular, full use has been made of the advisory services and operational machinery of the United Nations Office of the Controller and Office of Personnel; resident representatives of the Technical Assistance Board (TAB) have been a main point of contact between the Special Fund and requesting Governments, and the TAB headquarters administrative services have been available for support to the Special Fund secretariat. Personnel have been borrowed to meet immediate short-term requirements from the United Nations, the Food and Agriculture Organization and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development as well as the Rockefeller Foundation, at no or nominal cost in many cases. The availability of qualified personnel has been especially valuable in getting the Special Fund under way, before the processes of regular recruitment could bear fruit.

- 5. Special attention is invited to the provision for contingencies ($20,000 net). The Managing Director would feel that a contingency provision is especially important in the first years of operation of the Special Fund to cover requirements which are entirely unforeseen at the time the budget estimates are prepared.
- 6. Attention is also invited to the provision for consultants ($15,000). The intention is to provide mainly for short-term advisory services which will be required by the Managing Director in connexion with the evaluation of requests for assistance. The Managing Director wishes to be in a position to make every reasonable check on the soundness of requests for assistance from the Special Fund before endorsing projects for approval by the Governing Council. In the case of charges incurred in connexion with requests which ultimately emerge as project proposals submitted for approval by the Governing Council, the charges would be included in the project budget estimate. If the project is approved in the same year in which the costs are incurred, the costs would be transferred to the project budget. A sum is provided in this estimate which should be adequate to cover all consultants costs which are not transferable to approved project estimates. In estimates for subsequent years it should be possible to refine the estimate for consultants on the basis of experience which is not now available.
- 7. In view of the element of conjecture which exists in the estimates, the Managing Director would wish to record his intention to administer the budget with the strictest economy compatible with efficient operations.
- 8. In administering the budget, the Managing Director would wish to have the authority to transfer funds between objects of expenditure within the total of the approved budget, on the understanding that any adjustments made through transfers would be reported to the Governing Council at the time of the next annual budget review.
- 9. The form of the estimates is generally in accord with United Nations budgetary practice. The estimates have been given technical review by the United Nations Office of the Controller.

A total of thirty-nine posts is proposed for the Special Fund secretariat for 1959, as listed in the manning table on page 5.

Organization

The functions of the Managing Director of the Special Fund have been determined by the General Assembly in resolution 1240 (XIII).

It is proposed that the secretariat of the Special Fund be comprised of three units: the Office of the Managing Director, Operations, and Administrative Services.

The secretarial staff of Operations and Administrative Services are utilized as a secretarial and typing pool.

b/The estimates totalling $368,565 represent the requirement for a full year. The deduction for turnover of staff takes into account anticipated delays in filling certain posts occasioned by deferred recruitment.

Office of the Managing Director

The Office comprises nine posts: the Managing Director, the Deputy Managing Director (D-2), Information and Liaison Officer (P-5), Secretary of the Consultative Board and Governing Council (P-4), and five secretarial and clerical posts (one Principal, two Senior and two Intermediate).

The Office of the Managing Director provides overall supervision of the Special Fund and policy liaison with associated United Nations organizations, the departments of the United Nations Secretariat and the Governments participating in the programme. It has primary responsibility for preparing and servicing meetings of the Consultative Board and the Governing Council.

Operations

The Operations unit is responsible for execution of the Headquarters secretariat's responsibilities with respect to the planning and development of requests for assistance, evaluation of such requests, preparation of proposals and all related documentation to the Consultative Board and the Governing Council with respect to such requests, selection of executing agencies for the implementation of approved projects, and follow-up and inspection of projects in operation. The unit is responsible for the development and negotiation of agreements with executing agencies and recipient Governments concerning the execution of projects and for liaison with appropriate departments of the United Nations, TAB, the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency on all matters related to the Special Fund programmes. It is also responsible for the provision of day-to-day advice and guidance to resident representatives and other field officers involved in the planning and execution of Special Fund projects. The Operations unit is comprised of twenty-five posts: one Director (D-2), three Senior Officers (P-5), nine First Officers (P-4), one Second Officer (P-3), and eleven secretarial and clerical staff (two Senior and nine Intermediate).

Joint administrative services

Administrative services for the Special Fund have been provided in the first two months of the Fund's operation by the Administration Division of TAB, and charges to the Special Fund are limited to those additional costs incurred which are directly related to the work of the Special Fund. It is proposed to continue these arrangements, though the possibility of reorienting the position of the Administration Division in the over-all organization of the TAB and the Special Fund as a "joint administrative service" is not excluded. For 1959 it is estimated that the Special Fund posts required will be one First Officer (P-4) and four secretarial and clerical staff—Intermediate (two clerkstenographers and two registry clerks).

The administrative services thus provided include personnel and budget administration, supply, transport, registry and documentation services. In consultation with the United Nations Office of the Controller and the Office of Personnel, the unit will advise the Managing Director on the development and implementation of administrative policy for the operation of the Special Fund, including the development and implementation of financial regulations and the financial management of the programme.

(b) Temporary assistance..... $ 5,000 net

Temporary assistance is provided for peak loads and replacement of staff on extended leave.

(c) Consultants $15,000 net

Provision is made for all required consultant services not properly chargeable to project budgets. The principal requirement arises in connexion with the short-term advisory services which will be required for the evaluation of requests for assistance, when costs incurred for this purpose cannot be transferred to approved project budgets. Costs incurred for advisory services related to requests which are approved as projects in the current year will be transferred to the project budgets.

(d) Overtime..... $2,500 net

Provision is made for overtime by secretarial and clerical staff required during meetings and other peak periods.

Special Fund: administrative budget for 1960

Report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text: English] [11 November 1959]

1. In accordance with paragraph 54 of the regulatory provisions set forth in part B of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII) of 14 October 1958, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has reviewed the estimates of the administrative budget of the Special Fund for 1960 (SF/L.24 and Corr.1).

GENERAL COMMENTS

- 2. The Advisory Committee notes that in May 1959 the Governing Council approved the first thirteen Special Fund projects, costing $7.5 million, and that in December the Managing Director expects to ask for the approval of thirty-one additional projects costing some $22 million. Further, the organizational and administrative arrangements in respect of the Special Fund secretariat appear to have made corresponding progress during this first year of operation.
- 3. The experience of the secretariat to date has been mainly concerned with preparatory work in respect of the formulation and approval of projects. This experience shows, as the Advisory Committee is informed, that it is difficult for many countries to assess their needs and to formulate projects of a type which the Special Fund is equipped to assist. As an approach to this problem, the Managing Director is proposing to the Governing Council (SF/L.25) a special preparatory allocation of $250,000, outside the administrative budget, to be used to assist Governments, at their request, in the analysis of their requirements and in the formulation of requests for Special Fund assistance.

- 4. The Managing Director has also underlined a second factor in the evolution of the future work of the secretariat, namely, the need to give increasing attention to the execution phase of the operations of the Fund. Some strengthening of the staff and other resources of the secretariat would be necessary to meet this need; the budget estimates for 1960 accordingly reflect this consideration.
- 5. The Advisory Committee has noted with satisfaction the progress that has been made in regard to co-ordinated arrangements between the Special Fund and the Technical Assistance Board (TAB) secretariats, both in the use of the TAB field offices and in the provision at Headquarters of administrative services for both programmes by the Joint Administrative Services Division.
- 6. With the growing operations of the Fund, and especially with an increase in the volume of projects which are to be administered by one and the same executing agency, the question of the overhead costs of the executing agencies will assume increasing importance. The Advisory Committee is informed in this regard that such overhead costs are expected to be brought down from about 8.6 per cent of projects costs for the programme which was approved in May 1959 to some 6.6 per cent for the programme to be approved in December. The Committee will have occasion, when it examines annually the budgets of the specialized agencies, to review, in the light of actual project operations, the details of the arrangements in this regard in each of the agencies concerned.

BUDGETARY SITUATION IN 1959

- 7. The administrative budget for 1959 was approved by the Governing Council at $400,000 (net). The Advisory Committee, without suggesting a formal budgetary reduction, had indicated (A/4099, para. 15) that actual expenditure in 1959 might nevertheless be held within a total of $350,000.
- 8. The Advisory Committee notes that prudent use has been made of the credits voted for 1959 and that recruitment to authorized posts has been limited to immediate and proven needs. Thus of the eighteen approved posts in the Professional and higher categories (apart from the Managing Director), twelve are filled at the present time; in the General Service category fourteen out of twenty posts are occupied. Significant savings are also anticipated under other expenditure headings. Obligations incurred up to 31 October total some $206,700, with a further amount of some $60,000 expected in respect of the last two months of the year. This latter figure reflects a rate of expenditure, in annual terms, of the order of $360,000, although actual expenditure in 1959 would be closer to $260,000.

ESTIMATES FOR 1960

- 9. The estimates for 1960 (SF/L.24 and Corr.1) amount to $696,100 (net of staff assessment), comprising $546,100 for the costs of the Special Fund secretariat and $150,000 for a subvention to TAB in respect of services to be rendered to the Special Fund by TAB field offices.
- 10. The proposed manning table for 1960 reflects an addition of three posts at the Principal Officer (D-1) level and five posts in the General Service category. Increased provision is requested for 1960 in respect also of travel on official business and various items of common staff costs. The increases generally reflect the further evolution of the work of the secretariat and, in particular, the need for greater attention to the execution phase of operations.
- 11. In this connexion, the Advisory Committee has inquired especially into the justification for the three new posts at the Principal Officer (D-1) level. The Committee understands that these posts are intended to provide for senior specialists to head the three functional sections: Research and Agricultural Operations, Engineering Operations and Training Operations. The Committee understands further that, in the view of the Managing Director, the posts are necessary for at least two reasons. First, even though the specialized agencies may provide advice to the Managing Director on individual projects of interest to them, he would still need independent technical support for project recommendations and for appropriate supervision, in terms of his responsibilities, of the execution phase of operations. Secondly, with a number of project officers dealing with different types of projects, there would be need, from an administrative standpoint and in order to ensure manageable lines of reporting, to group the officers concerned, under appropriate leadership, by functional areas.

12. While the provision for contingencies has been reduced from $20,000 in 1959 to $10,000 in 1960, the estimates as a whole would seem somewhat liberal. and economical administration of the Fund's operations, the Advisory Committee would not suggest a formal reduction in the estimates. At the same time, the Committee trusts that the Managing Director will make every effort to keep actual expenditure under part I of the 1960 budget within a total of $500,000.

SUBVENTION TO TAB

- 14. As regards the proposed subvention of $150,000 to the TAB budget, the Advisory Committee understands that, on the basis of a recent survey of the proportion of time and effort devoted by TAB field offices to Special Fund work, the proposed amount would represent a minimum contribution in 1960. The impact of Special Fund activities on the work-load of the field offices may be expected to increase for some time, although it is difficult to forecast now the degree of participation of the field offices, on behalf of the Managing Director, in the supervision and evaluation of projects during their actual execution.
- 15. The Advisory Committee notes that, under paragraph 29 of the provisions set forth in part B of General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII), existing facilities of the United Nations, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and TAB should be made available to the Special Fund without charge except when clearly identifiable additional expenses are involved. As long as the Managing Director of the Special Fund and the Executive Chairman of TAB are satisfied that such additional expenses in respect of the services provided to the Special Fund by TAB field offices exceed beyond question the proposed amount of subvention, the Advisory Committee would agree that it is not essential at this stage to undertake what would be a costly and time-consuming determination of the exact amount of the costs in question.

PREPARATORY ALLOCATION FOR ASSISTANCE TO GOVERNMENTS IN THE PREPARATION OF PROJECTS

16. The Advisory Committee recognizes that the preparatory allocation of $250,000 proposed by the Managing Director (SF/L.25) in terms of his responsibilities under paragraph 32 of the provisions set forth in part B of resolution 1240 (XIII) may not fall within the term "administrative budget", especially since the costs of assistance in respect of the preparation of a project which is subsequently approved by the Governing Council are to be debited to that project. However, there will be some expenditure arising from the provision of assistance for the preparation of project requests that may not receive approval. Such expenditure may have to be treated as a special central overhead cost, very similar to administrative costs. Moreover, well prepared projects would lighten, at least in some measure, the task of the Managing Director and his staff in their review of the related requests and thus might contribute to savings under the administrative budget.

17. The Advisory Committee has accordingly noted with special interest the Managing Director's proposal concerning a preparatory allocation. Special attention might be drawn in this regard to the rules proposed by the Managing Director (SF/L.25, para. 5) for the use of the allocation and, in particular, to the rule that provision of assistance from the allocation would not create any presumption that the Fund would agree to contribute financially to a project which was prepared with such help. The Committee would also venture to suggest, first, that the programme of assistance might be regarded as an experimental measure for 1960 and, secondly, that the actual utilization of the allocation might be reviewed before the extension of the programme beyond 1960 is considered.

[Original Text: English] [23 October 1959]

- 1. The General Assembly, at its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, allocated to the Second Committee item 29 of its agenda, entitled "Progress and operations of the Special Fund".
- 2. The Committee considered this item during nine meetings (583rd to 591st meetings) held between 5 and 13 October 1959. The first five meetings were devoted to a general debate, in which fifty-one delegations took part. The Managing Director of the Special Fund made the opening statement (583rd meeting).
- 3. The Committee had before it the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143, chapter III, section XIII), the first report of the Governing Council of the Special Fund $(E/3270)^{3/2}$ and the administrative budget of the Special Fund for 1959 (A/4217/Add.1).
- 4. At the 587th meeting, Brazil, Canada, Ceylon, Denmark, Ghana, India, Indonesia, Japan, Libya, Netherlands, Pakistan, Turkey, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America and Yugoslavia submitted a draft resolution (A/C.2/L.408 and Add.1), 4/2 reading as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,
 - "Recalling its resolutions 1219 (XII) and 1240 (XIII),
 - "Considering that the Special Fund has an important role to play in the economic and social development of the less developed countries,
 - "Believing that the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and the Special Fund will operate more effectively when they can rely on the level of resources envisaged in General Assembly resolution 1219 II (XII),
 - "Bearing in mind that the resources of the Special Fund are not sufficient to support all soundly conceived projects already submitted by the less developed countries,
 - "1. Takes note with satisfaction of the first report of the Governing Council of the Special Fund transmitted to the Assembly by the Economic and Social Council;
- 3/Transmitted to the members of the General Assembly by a note of the Secretary-General (A/4217).
- 4/By document A/C.2/L.408/Add.1, Libya and Turkey were added to the list of sponsors of the draft resolution.

- "2. Commends the Managing Director on the successful beginning of the operations of the Special Fund;
- "3. Notes the increase in the total of contributions announced at the Pledging Conference on 8 October 1959:
- "4. Expresses the hope that States members of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies will so contribute to the Special Fund that it rapidly attains resources sufficient to enable it to undertake and execute on a sustained basis the tasks laid upon it in its founding resolutions 1219 (XII) and 1240 (XIII)."
- 5. At the 588th meeting, Bulgaria and the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic submitted the following amendments (A/C.2/L.409) to the draft resolution:
 - (i) To insert, in operative paragraph 2, the words "the Governing Council and" after the word "Commends";
- (ii) To insert a new paragraph between operative paragraphs 3 and 4 reading as follows:
 - "Instructs the Managing Director, from the outset of the operations of the Fund, to take the necessary steps for the full and rational use of all resources made available to the Special Fund";
- (iii) In operative paragraph 4 (renumbered 5 under these amendments), to replace the words "States members of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies" by the words "all States wishing to participate in the Special Fund".
- 6. During the discussion at the 588th meeting, various oral proposals and suggestions were made, among which were the proposals by the representative of Haiti that the phrase "less developed countries" in the second and fourth preambular paragraphs should be replaced by the words "under-developed and less developed countries"; and that the words "soundly conceived" in the fourth preambular paragraph be replaced by the word "useful". In additon, the representative of Portugal proposed that the draft resolution should indicate explicitly that contributions to the Special Fund were voluntary.
- 7. The sponsors of the draft resolution accepted some of the proposals and suggestions made during the discussion and, at the 589th meeting, indicated that they had agreed to the following amendments:

- (i) To replace the words "less developed" in the second and fourth preambular paragraphs by "under-developed";
- (ii) To delete, in the fourth preambular paragraph, the words "soundly conceived" and the last phrase reading "by the under-developed countries";
- (iii) To add the following phrase at the end of operative paragraph 1: "and commends the Council on its first year of word";
- (iv) To reword the opening phrase of operative paragraph 4 as follows:
 - "Expresses the hope that States Members of the United Nations or members of any of the specialized agencies or of the International Atomic Energy Agency will so contribute...".
- 8. The representatives of Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR agreed to the replacement of their first amendment by the third amendment of the sponsors; they maintained their third amendment; and with regard to their second amendment, they proposed that the text of the new paragraph be revised to read as follows:
 - "Expresses its confidence that the Managing Director, from the outset of the operations of the Fund, will take the necessary steps for the fullest possible use of all resources made available to the Special Fund".
- 9. At the same meeting, the following oral amendments submitted by Greece were accepted by the sponsors:
 - (i) In the second preambular paragraph, to insert the words "and urgent" between the words "important" and "role";
- (ii) In the fourth preambular paragraph, to insert the word "present" after the words "Bearing in mind that the";
- (iii) To revise the first part of operative paragraph 4 to read as follows:
 - "Calls upon States Members of the United Nations or members of any of the specialized agencies or of the International Atomic Energy Agency so to contribute to the Special Fund...".
- 10. A revised text of the draft resolution incorporating all the amendments accepted thus far by the sponsors was distributed as document A/C.2/L.408/Rev.1.

It read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolutions 1219 (XIII) and 1240 (XIII),

"Considering that the Special Fund has an important and urgent role to play in the economic and social development of the under-developed countries,

"Belleving that the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and the Special Fund will operate more effectively when they can rely on the level of resources envisaged in General Assembly resolution 1219 II (XII),

"Bearing in mind that the present resources of the Special Fund are not sufficient to support all projects already submitted,

- "1. Takes note with satisfaction of the first report of the Governing Council of the Special Fund transmitted to the Assembly by the Economic and Social Council and commends them on the first year of their work;
- "2. Commends the Managing Director on the successful beginning of the operations of the Special Fund:
- "3. Notes the increase in the total of contributions announced at the Pledging Conference on 8 October 1959:
- "4. Calls upon States Members of the United Nations or members of any of the specialized agencies or of the International Atomic Energy Agency so to contribute to the Special Fund that it rapidly attains resources sufficient to enable it to undertake and execute on a sustained basis the tasks laid upon it in its founding resolutions 1219 (XII) and 1240 (XIII)."
- 11. At the 590th meeting, the representatives of Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR further revised their second amendment (see para. 8 above) so that the text of the new paragraph would read as follows:
 - "Expresses its confidence that the Managing Director, from the outset of the operations of the Fund, in conformity with resolution 1240 (XIII), will take the necessary steps for the full use of all resources made available to the Special Fund".
- 12. With regard to this text of the suggested new paragraph, the representative of India suggested, and the sponsors agreed, that the words "take the necessary steps for the full use of all resources made available" be replaced by the words "endeavour to make the fullest possible use of all resources available".
- 13. At the 591st meeting, the representative of Afghanistan proposed that the words "all the provisions related to voluntary contributions and to the use of resources embodied in" be inserted after the words "in conformity with" in the suggested new paragraph, as revised. Since the sponsors of the amendment as well as the sponsors of the draft resolution accepted this proposal, the following text was incorporated in the draft resolution as operative paragraph 4:
 - "4. Expresses its confidence that the Managing Director, from the outset of the operations of the Fund, in conformity with all the provisions related to voluntary contributions and to the use of resources embodied in resolution 1240 (XIII), will endeavour to make the fullest possible use of all resources available to the Special Fund".
- 14. The Committee then voted on the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.408/Rev.1), including the new paragraph mentioned above, and on the third amendment submitted by Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR (see para. 5 above) to the revised text of operative paragraph 4, which had become operative paragraph 5 of the draft.

The amendment was rejected by 35 votes to 12, with 27 abstentions;

Operative paragraph 5, which was voted upon separately at the request of the representative of the Byelorussian SSR, was adopted by 58 votes to none, with 12 abstentions;

The revised draft resolution as a whole, as amended, was adopted unanimously.

Recommendation of the Second Committee

15. The Second Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

PROGRESS AND OPERATIONS OF THE SPECIAL FUND

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 841st plenary meeting, on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Second Committee (A/4245, para. 15). For the final text, see resolution 1382 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1382 (XIV). PROGRESS AND OPERATIONS OF THE SPECIAL FUND

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1219 (XII) of 14 December 1957 and 1240 (XIII) of 14 October 1958,

Considering that the Special Fund has an important and urgent role to play in the economic and social development of the under-developed countries,

Believing that the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and the Special Fund will operate more effectively when they can rely on the level of resources envisaged in section II of General Assembly resolution 1219 (XII).

Bearing in mind that the present resources of the Special Fund are not sufficient to support all projects already submitted,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the first report of the Governing Council of the Special Fund (E/3270) transmitted to the General Assembly by the Economic and Social Council, and commends the Governing Council on the first year of its work;

- 2. Commends the Managing Director of the special Fund on the successful beginning of the operations of the Fund;
- 3. Notes the increase in the total of contributions announced on 8 October 1959 at the United Nations Pledging Conference on the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and the Special Fund;
- 4. Expresses its confidence that the Managing Director, from the outset of the operations of the Special Fund, in conformity with all the provisions related to voluntary contributions and to the use of resources embodied in General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII), will endeavour to make the fullest possible use of all resources available to the Fund;
- 5. Calls upon States Members of the United Nations or members of any of the specialized agencies or of the International Atomic Energy Agency so to contribute to the Special Fund that it rapidly attains resources sufficient to enable it to undertake and execute on a sustained basis the tasks laid upon it in the founding resolutions 1219 (XII) and 1240 (XIII).

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

INTRODUCTION

This report sets forth the information transmitted by Governments in response to General Assembly resolution 1316 (XIII) of 12 December 1958, which called upon Member States "to undertake a review of accomplishments to date and, in the light of this review, to chart their future courses of co-operative

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Second Committee, 605th, 609th and 612th to 643rd meetings; ibid., Fifth Committee, 758th meeting; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 846th meeting.

^{1/}The Second Committee decided, at its 582nd meeting, to hold a single discussion on world economic development (agenda item 30) and chapters II, III, IV and V of the report of the Economic and Social Council (agenda item 12). For the documents relating to chapter I and chapters VI to X of the report of the Economic and Social Council, see the annex fascicle on agenda item 12.

action relating to both the public and private sectors for the purpose of giving further impetus to the economic development of the less developed countries". The resolution also invited Member States "to explore further the possibility of enlisting the aid of their universities and scientific institutions for the purpose of accelerating, in co-operation with similar institutions in other Member States, the solution of scientific and technological problems of particular concern to the less developed countries". Member States "in a position to assist the economic development of under-developed countries" were invited to inform the General Assembly "of measures which they have taken or may contemplate taking" in the field of international assistance, while the less developed countries were invited to report on "any measures which they may decide to take in order to advance their economic and social progress".

Up to 10 September 1959 replies had been received by the Secretary-General from eighteen countries. 3/ The original replies or—in a few cases—Secretariat summaries of the information submitted are reproduced as part II of the present document; replies received subsequently will be reproduced as addenda to this report.

In part, I of the present report an attempt has been made to highlight, under a series of functional headings, the most recent actions and events described in the replies from Governments, with a view to bringing out what seem to be the essential features of the policies and measures shaping the "future course of co-operative action" in the field of economic development of under-developed countries.

A. INTERNATIONAL TRADE: THE IMPORTANCE OF STABILITY AND EXPANSION

1. Almost all the replies from Governments recognize, explicitly or implicitly, the importance for the less developed countries of the maintenance of national and international conditions that are conducive to economic growth. Among such conditions, special significance attaches to the demand on world markets for the primary products that are the major exports of most under-developed countries. Though few replies deal specifically with trade policies, some countries-Italy and the United States, for examplerefer to their intention to take the measures necessary to maintain a high and rising level of activity in the domestic economy, upon which the demand for primary products rests. These countries are also among those emphasizing the desirability of freeing and expanding international trade. Australia and Canada point to their export credit insurance schemes as evidence of their efforts to increase such trade, while Denmark stresses its support of arrangements designed to stabilize export earnings derived from raw materials and other primary commodities.

2. For their part, the less developed countries also recognize the limiting factor of foreign exchange earnings. Ceylon reports its plan to diversify its export sector; Mexico reports its efforts to increase tourism as a source of foreign currency; Pakistan describes recent revisions in its trade policy, including, in particular, arrangements to encourage exports and expand the output of import substitutes, especially among the food-stuffs.

B. DEVELOPMENT PLANNING: INTERNATIONAL ASPECTS

- 3. All the less developed countries that responded to General Assembly resolution 1316 (XIII)—Ceylon, Ghana, India, Mexico, Pakistan and Thailand—give details of their own efforts to accelerate the pace of economic growth. The common element in these efforts is an investment plan or programme setting out objectives and priorities and in most cases the intended public expenditure. Though these development programmes differ from one another in the period for which they have been framed, in the machinery of implementation and in the relative importance of public capital formation, all recognize balance-of-payments limitations or a foreign exchange gap in financing the programme and all make provision for a certain amount of foreign investment.
- 4. Ceylon expresses its desire to attract foreign capital into selected spheres by offering sufficient inducement and security to the investor while at the same time safeguarding the interests of the country. Besides seeking to provide prospective investors with adequate facilities for industrial development, Ghana has established an Investment Promotion Board to review inducements and assist investors. After reporting that adjustments had to be made in its second development plan (1956-1961) because of balance-of-payments difficulties, India is formulating the scale and pattern of investment in the third plan with a view to enabling the country not only "progressively to raise living standards" but also "to increase exports and to reduce its dependence on imports of capital goods and equipment". Observing that the implementation of the second plan is estimated to require total external assistance of the order of Rs.1,500 crores (or about one-third of the total planned budgetary outlays) despite the large draft on foreign exchange reserves, India concludes that "for development to continue at a satisfactory rate there will be need for a substantial flow of international capital for a long period to come".
- 5. Mexico points out that apart from private foreign investment, 16 per cent of public investment during the period 1952-1958 was financed from external credits. Pakistan indicates that improvement of external balance was a major objective in recent revisions of development policy. One aspect of this is new encouragement to foreign investment: it is now "possible for a foreign entrepreneur to start any industry in the country, with or without the participation of local capital. The scope of concessions in the field of taxation has been enlarged. The mining industry has been granted special tax relief while agreements have been signed with some more countries for the avoidance of double taxation on a reciprocal basis. Investment bureaux are being set up both in the provinces and at the centre for furnishing information to foreign and local investors on all aspects of Government's financial and industrial policies". Thailand, realizing that future external balance requires not only an "expanding export potential but also the maintenance of a sound economic and financial situation which will be conducive to attracting external capital", is currently revising the Industrial Promotion Act of 1954 in order to increase its effectiveness in encouraging domestic and foreign investment.

6. Among the countries that have received a large amount of private foreign investment in the post-war period, both Australia and Canada stress the importance of the free movement of capital. Australia also points to the virtual equality in its tax treatment of foreign and domestic incomes and refers to the agreements to avoid double taxation that have been concluded with its major trading partners.

C. THE FINANCING OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT: INTERNATIONAL ASPECTS

- 7. Among the countries responding to resolution 1316 (XIII), all those that have provided financial aid to under-developed countries in previous years-Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Hungary, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States of Americareaffirm their intention of continuing to do so. There is virtually unanimous support for the activities of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund in facilitating the international movement of capital and helping, directly or indirectly, to finance development, and most of the replies indicate approval of the recent increase in the subscriptions of Member States to these agencies. There is also a considerable measure of support for the Special Fund: for 1959, Canada reports its intention to contribute $2 million; Denmark, the equivalent of $335,000; Hungary, 500,000 forints; and Italy, the equivalent of $600,000; while New Zealand also pledges a "substantial contribution". Over and above their provision of public moneys on loan or grant, many of these countries restate their policy of facilitating the outflow of private capital.
- 8. While continuing to extend financial aid through United Nations and other international channels, some of these countries point to their special responsibilities to particular areas—dependent territories, Trust Territories, members of the Commonwealth, members of the Colombo Plan, and so on. The United States refers to its own special institutions through which loans are made: the Export-Import Bank, the Development Loan Fund and the various local currency credits arising from its agricultural surplus programmes and made available to Governments for development purposes. Japan refers to its newly-established South East Asia Development Co-operation Fund and to the possibilities of using reparations payments for development purposes.
- 9. In declaring its intention to increase its contribution to the Colombo Plan for a period of three years, Canada suggests "that it is useful for donor countries, wherever possible, to provide advance indications of the probable level and form of their contributions to economic assistance programmes so as to enable the less developed countries to make full use of this information for the purpose of their own economic planning".

- 10. In a statement of its "general lines of policy" the Netherlands not only declares its support of increased lending operations by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, of the Special Fund and of the flow of private capital to the less developed countries, but also advocates "the speedy establishment, under the auspices of the United Nations, of a fund to assist in the financing of projects in the economic and social infra-structure of less developed countries". The setting up of such a "capital development fund" would also meet with a "positive attitude" from Denmark.
- 11. The need for some source of "long-term development loans on flexible repayment terms" is also recognized by the United States. To this end the United States reports the establishment in 1957 of the Development Loan Fund which "finances both public and private projects basic for growth that cannot qualify for loans from established banking institutions". It also refers to cases in which the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development "has had to disapprove applications for loans, not because the development projects involved were without merit, but because repayment of the loans entirely in hard currency would have placed undue strain on the borrowing countries" and concludes that if "financing for such projects could come from a new institution affiliated with the Bank which could make loans repayable in softer currencies, projects such as these might well become feasible". The United States believes that it would be "essential to the success of such an institution that it receive broad financial support from the industrialized countries which are members of the International Bank". With that inview "the United States is actively studying ways in which an International Development Association might operate and has had informal conversations with other members on this subject". Encouragement from this preliminary exploration would lead to more formal steps.
- 12. The United States also reports that it "is prepared to consider how it might co-operate with regional development programmes in areas where the Governments concerned clearly desire such regional programmes and are willing to join in their financial support, and where such programmes appear to offer real advantages over bilateral programmes". An Inter-American banking institution is in the process of formation. Under suitable circumstances an "Arab development institution" might also be feasible.

D. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

13. The replies received from Governments indicate unanimous support for technical assistance operations as a means of accelerating the process of economic growth in the less developed countries. Contributions to existing programmes, both multilateral and bilateral, seem likely—on the basis of the replies of major donor countries—to be at least maintained in the immediate future. There are indications, indeed, that some increase in this type of assistance may be expected as a result of new schemes and organizational arrangements recently contemplated or completed.

14. Belgium reports that a permanent technical cooperation committee will be set up in Brussels in the near future. Its main function will be "to co-ordinate the various forms of action undertaken by the public and private sectors in the field of the economic development of the new countries". Similar action has been taken in Italy, where "in order to facilitate the utilization and the assignment of Italian experts for technical assistance to less developed countries an Italian National Committee for International Technical Assistance has been recently set up... The task of this Committee is the promotion of the co-operation among governmental administrations and Italian industrial firms having special experience in this field".

15. Canada is embarking on a five-year programme of aid to the West Indies as well as technical assistance for Commonwealth countries in Africa and elsewhere that are not receiving such assistance through other Canadian programmes. In the course of 1959, Japan intends to establish a number of training centres to help improve technical skills in various fields in the Asian region: industry in India and Iran, agriculture in Pakistan, telecommunications in Thailand, fishery in Ceylon, handicrafts in Malaya. The dispatch of medical service wagons to selected countries is also contemplated. India has been a provider as well as a recipient of technical assistance, and after reviewing the training facilities it has made available to other South-East Asian countries under the Colombo Plan, it states that it hopes to continue further international co-operation for economic and technical progress to the mutual advantage of the participants.

16. Hungary reports that it is now in a position to offer technical assistance in a number of special fields, including agriculture, sanitation, telecommunications, geophysics and oil prospecting as well as the food, pharmaceutical and railway equipment industries. The Netherlands states its policy in a more general fashion: "To assist in making Netherlands experts available for advisory and, if desired, other services in the less developed countries, and in providing nationals of those countries with training facilities."

17. Confirming its continued support of United Nations operations in the less developed countries, Norway states that it will endeavour to increase gradually the annual contributions to these programmes, taking into consideration other commitments in the field of technical and economic assistance, such as the United Nations-Indian-Norwegian economic co-operation project for fishery improvement in Kerala and the Scandinavian hospital project in Korea. New Zealand also reaffirms its continuing support of technical assistance operations, organized through the Colombo Plan as well as the United Nations, and indicates its willingness to consider any request for assistance from less developed countries within the framework of these programmes, especially in the fields of education, health and agriculture. Education and agriculture-along with engineering and navigation-are also among the fields in which Denmark intends to continue to make local facilities available for the training of personnel from less developed countries.

18. The United Kingdom points to the directions in which it is expanding the amount of technical assistance being made available to the less developed countries. There will be an increase in the funds contributed to the Colombo Plan for the seven years ending in 1963, to the Central Treaty Organization [Baghdad Pact] region for the five years ending in 1961 and to the Foundation for Mutual Assistance in Africa South of the Sahara. There will be active participation in a new Commonwealth scheme for the interchange of university scholars and fellows, of whom 1,000 are to be in classes at any one time, half of them in the United Kingdom. Special arrangements have been made to help international organizations and Governments requesting help in recruiting a steadily increasing number of technicians, experts and teachers for service in under-developed countries.

19. Over and above its continuing support of United Nations technical assistance operations to the extent of 40 per cent of total contributions, the United States reports that it "will continue to press its own programme of technical assistance, through the International Cooperation Administration, even more vigorously than in the past". Further support is also promised for "effective regional programmes of technical co-operation", notably through the Organization of American States and the Colombo Plan of whose Council for Technical Co-operation the United States has recently become a full member.

E. SCIENTIFIC CO-OPERATION

20. Closely associated with technical assistance, scientific co-operation receives a similarly wide measure of approval in the replies of Governments responding to General Assembly resolution 1316 (XIII). This approval seems to be based in part on a recognition of the role played by research in the technological development of the industrial countries themselves and in part on a realization that many of the problems which underlie requests for technical assistance call in the first instance for basic research and laboratory experimentation for their solution.

21. Australia repeats the view 4/ that led to its sponsorship of a draft resolution, on which General Assembly resolution 1260 (XIII) was based, on the subject of co-ordinating the results of scientific research-namely, "that the stage has now been reached when the Economic and Social Council should examine the role of the United Nations and the specialized agencies in relation to the advancement of science and consider methods of stimulating research in the most needed directions, and also methods of achieving a wider application, dissemination and understanding of the new discoveries, taking account of the great inequalities that exist in the scientific resources of various countries". Belgium reports that, through various cultural agreements, collaboration between Belgian universities and scientific institutions and those in less developed countries is becoming closer. with a consequential increase in the number of exchanges of professors and scientists.

22. In Canada—"itself a developing country"—the National Research Council and universities "and scientific institutions generally are actively pursuing research into the scientific and technological aspects of economic development". The results are communicated not only through international publications and conferences, but also through an expanding number of technical assistance programmes in which these institutions participate. Italy points out that in its programme of assistance through training and education, "particular attention has been given to the granting of scholarships in the scientific and technical fields". At present under study is a research centre in Naples "for the training of foreign experts particularly interested in agriculture and economic development fields". Japan also indicates its intention to continue and expand its programme of scientific and technical co-operation, one of the chief aspects of which is the training provided for students from South-East Asia and the Middle East in such fields as medicine and agriculture as well as science and technology.

23. The United Kingdom lists the official bodies that continue to conduct research in fields that are of particular concern to many of the less developed countries, especially within the Commonwealth, which may apply for advice and assistance in the solution of specific problems. To co-ordinate this assistance and increase its usefulness a new body called the Overseas Research Council has recently been established: "It will advise Ministers on questions of cooperation in scientific research overseas and will also provide a central point to which Commonwealth Governments and research institutions can refer for advice and information." Along with this new Council, a special Panel on Research in Africa has been created "to advise generally on the possibilities of the greater utilization of existing scientific resources in attacking the problems of under-developed territories, particularly in tropical Africa" and in particular to collaborate with its counterpart in the United States.

- 24. The United States emphasizes the important place that institutions of higher learning continue to play in its technical assistance operations in less developed countries. Much of this work involves an interchange of staff between one or more universities in the United States and a university in the underdeveloped country, often for an extended period. In 1958, some 184 United States universities were engaged in international programmes of various types and in 1959 the American Council on Education began to explore means of extending this participation. The National Academy of Sciences is also due to report on the possibilities of further co-operation in scientific and technological development in Africa south of the Sahara, especially in the fields of education, agriculture and sanitation and public health. In these latter fields the United States is participating in wider international programmes, one to eliminate malaria and another-still in its preliminary stage-to attack diarrhoeal diseases by the provision of pure drinking water.
- 25. The proliferation of research bodies and the expansion which is taking place in the use of university facilities and staff in undertaking technical investigations on an international basis point up the need referred to by Norway in suggesting the compilation of a "central register of institutions" prepared to participate in co-operative programmes to solve "scientific and technological problems of particular concern to the less developed countries".

- 1. The draft resolution in document A/C.2/L.432 would request the Secretary-General to convene during 1960 a group of experts to study the question of the development of the petroleum industry in the under-developed countries, and to work out a survey on the possibilities of international co-operation in the field of the development of the petroleum industry in the under-developed countries for submission to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.
- 2. On the assumption that the group, consisting of not more than seven experts, would meet for about ten days in New York, and that the normal rate of $25 a day would be payable to each expert, it is estimated that the convening of such a group would involve an expenditure of about $10,100, of which some $8,000 would be needed for travel and $2,100 for subsistence payments to the experts. This estimate is exclusive of expenses for language and documentation services.

Note by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [24 November 1959]

1. The draft resolution in document A/C.2/L.435 would request the Secretary-General, in consultation with Member States, the regional economic commissions, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the other specialized agencies concerned, to report to the Economic and Social Council in 1962 on the measures taken by the United Nations to assist Member States in carrying out their land reform programmes. The draft resolution would further request the Secretary-General to examine the results of the land reform programmes in the under-developed countries in the light of the reports submitted by Members, and the effects which the programmes have had on the economic development of those countries, and to report to the General Assembly at its seventeenth session.

2. The Secretary-General will be able to carry out the necessary consultations and to report to the Economic and Social Council in accordance with the first request contained in the draft resolution, but the evaluation of the results and effects of land reform programmes will need the services of a high-level consultant for a period of about six months to coordinate the work of the Secretariat so that a report may be made to the General Assembly at its seventeenth session. It would also be desirable for the consultant to visit certain countries. The cost of his services together with the cost of travel would probably amount to $10,000 (remuneration: $6,000; travel on recruitment and in the field: $4,000). This estimate is exclusive of expenses for language and documentation services.

Financial implications of the draft resolution contained in document A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1 Note by the Secretary-General

[21 November 1959]

- 1. The draft resolution in document A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1 would request the Secretary-General to appoint a group of not more than seven experts to examine the feasibility of establishing machinery, within the framework of the United Nations, designed to assist in offsetting the effects of large fluctuations in commodity prices on balances of payments and to submit its report and recommendations to the Commission on International Commodity Trade at its eighth session, and would request the Economic and Social Council to comment on and transmit the report to the General Assembly.
- 2. On the assumption that the group of seven experts would meet in New York in 1960 for a total period of from three to four weeks, and that the normal rate of $25 a day would be payable, it is estimated that the convening of such a group of experts would involve an expenditure of some $13,000 of which about $8,000 would be needed for travel and $5,000 for subsistence payments to the experts appointed.

[Original text: English] [17 November 1959]

- 1. The draft resolution in document A/C.2/L.439, while noting that in terms of Economic and Social Council resolution 741 (XXVIII) the Secretary-General was to report on the techniques of long-term projections, would request the Secretary-General to arrange for a preliminary investigation into the methods and techniques to be employed in carrying out a comprehensive, co-ordinated and continuing study of problems of resources, requirements and production methods and to report to the Council at its thirtieth session.
- 2. The Economic and Social Council, by resolution 741 (XXVIII), instituted a new programme for the evaluation of long-term economic projections. The present proposal would carry this evaluation further
- as there would be, in addition to a summary of work done on projections to date, an evaluation of the work done, proposals for improving the programme at the national level, and proposals for carrying out the programme in a global framework.
- 3. Whereas it was initially envisaged that an expenditure of $18,000 was involved (A/C.5/777, para. 25), it is now believed that the fuller study contemplated would result in an expenditure of some $25,000, of which $20,000 would relate to the employment of four consultants working together for a period not exceeding four months. The balance of the requirement ($5,000) continues to relate to essential staff travel.

DOCUMENT A/C.5/812

Financial implications of draft resolution VII submitted by the Second Committee in document A/4321 Note by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [2 December 1959]

Further to the information contained in document A/C.2/L.435/Add.2 concerning the financial implications of the draft resolution on agrarian reform, which was adopted in an amended form by the Second Committee at its 635th meeting (A/4321, para. 114, draft resolution VII), the Secretary-General wishes to report that, under the programme of work contemplated, the services of an outside expert would be required in the latter half of 1960. Hence, the additional expense of $10,000 (remuneration: $6,000; travel on recruitment and in the field: $4,000) would increase the requirements to be met from the 1960 appropriations for temporary assistance. Requirements for 1961 would become known only as the project proceeds. Appropriate provision as necessary would be made in the initial budget estimates for that year.

Report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[2 December 1959]

1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered the financial implications of draft resolution IV on international measures to assist in offsetting fluctuations in commodity prices, draft resolution VII on agrarian reform and draft resolution IX on world economic development, recommended by the Second Committee in its report (A/4321).

INTERNATIONAL MEASURES TO OFFSET FLUCTU-ATIONS IN COMMODITY PRICES

2. The Secretary-General, in his statement of financial implications (A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1/Add.1), estimates an expenditure of $13,000 in 1960 in respect of the group of experts of not more than seven members to be appointed under the draft resolution. The Advisory Committee concurs in this estimate.

AGRARIAN REFORM

- 3. The statement of financial implications submitted by the Secretary-General in respect of the draft resolution on agrarian reform is contained in document A/C.2/L.435/Add.2, supplemented by document A/C.5/812. Expenditure in 1960 is estimated at $10,000; requirements for 1961, it is stated, would become known only as the project proceeds and would be taken into account in the initial budget estimates for that year.
- 4. The estimate of $10,000 for 1960 relates to the services of an outside expert and comprises $6,000 for remuneration and $4,000 for travel on recruitment and in the field. The Advisory Committee concurs in the estimate.

WORLD ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

5. In his statement of financial implications (A/C.2/L.439/Add.3), the Secretary-General states that the draft resolution before the Second Committee would carry further the programme to be instituted under Economic and Social Council resolution 741 (XXVIII) of 31 July 1959 in respect of which an amount of $18,000 was included in the Secretary-General's revised estimates resulting from the decisions of the Council (A/C.5/777). In the light of the draft resolution, the Secretary-General estimates the total cost of the expanded project at $25,000, which would include the $18,000 envisaged earlier.

6. In considering the earlier estimate, the Advisory Committee had expressed some reservations $\frac{5}{2}$ about the composition of the estimate and had suggested that this might be one of the areas in which the reductions recommended at that time $\frac{6}{2}$ could be applied. On the basis of the more precise information now available regarding the manner in which the expanded work programme will be undertaken, the Advisory Committee is prepared to concur in the new estimate, subject to paragraph 8 below.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE

7. The Advisory Committee recommends that the Fifth Committee might inform the General Assembly that the adoption of the three draft resolutions cited above would entail expenditures in 1960 not exceeding the amounts noted below:

1960 estimate

(United States dollars)

8. The Advisory Committee further recommends that, subject to the adoption of the three draft resolutions by the General Assembly, additional provision should be included in the 1960 budget, as follows:

^{5/} See annex fascicle relating to agenda item 44, document A/4223, paras. 13 and 15.

^{6/} Idem, para. 19.

At the same time, the Committee trusts that every effort will be made, within the level of the increased appropriations, to keep expenditures as low as possible.

DOCUMENT A /4321

Report of the Second Committee

[Original text: English]
[4 December 1959]

1. The General Assembly, at its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, allocated the following items of its agenda to the Second Committee:

Item 30:

"Economic development of under-developed countries:

- (a) Report by the Secretary-General on measures taken by the Governments of Member States to further the economic development of underdeveloped countries in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1316 (XIII);
- (b) Progress in the field of financing the economic development of under-developed countries."

Item 12:

"Report of the Economic and Social Council (chapters II, III, IV and V)".

- 2. The Second Committee dealt with part B of chapter III of the report of the Economic and Social Council under agenda items 29 (Progress and operations of the Special Fund) and 31 (Programmes of technical assistance), and its reports (A/4245 and A/4287)\(^2\)/ were considered by the General Assembly at its 841st plenary meeting on 20 November 1959.
- 3. The Committee had agreed at its 582nd meeting to have a single general debate on items 30 and 12 which would be followed by the discussion of the various draft resolutions submitted. The present report, therefore, deals with item 30 (Economic development of under-developed countries) and with item 12 (Report of the Economic and Social Council (chapters II, III, part A; IV and V)).
- 4. The Committee considered these items during thirty-four meetings, held on 28 October and 2 November and from 5 November to 4 December 1959 (605th, 609th and 612th to 643rd meetings). The first eighteen meetings were devoted to the general debate, in which sixty-seven delegations took part, following an introductory statement by the Under-Secretary for Economic and Social Affairs (A/C.2/L.422).
- 5. The Committee had before it the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143); an analytical summary of various suggested means of accelerating economic growth in less developed countries through international action, which had been submitted by the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council (E/3259) and transmitted to the General Assembly under cover of document A/4211; and a report by the Secretary-General on measures taken by the Governments of Member States to further the economic development of under-developed countries in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1316 (XIII) (A/4220 and Corr.1 and addenda).

- 6. The following proposals were received by the Committee:
- (a) Draft resolution submitted by Denmark, Greece, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, the Philippines, the Sudan and Sweden (A/C.2/L.440 and Add.1) entitled "International Development Association";

Amendments to the above draft resolution submitted by Uruguay (A/C.2/L.444, A/C.2/L.444/Rev.1, A/C. 2/L.444/Rev.2).

[See paras, 7-15 below,]

(b) Draft resolution submitted by Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Poland (A/C.2/L.429, A/C.2/L.429/Rev. 1, A/C.2/L.429/Rev.2) entitled "The strengthening and development of the world market and the improvement of the trade conditions of the economically less developed countries";

Amendments to the above draft resolution or to the revised draft resolution, submitted by Liberia (A/C. 2/L.445), by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (A/C.2/L.447, A/C.2/L.447/Rev.1) and by India (A/C.2/L.448, A/C.2/L.448/Rev.1), and an oral amendment submitted by New Zealand at the 634th meeting.

(c) Draft resolution submitted by Argentina, Chile, France and Greece (A/C.2/L.436, A/C.2/L.436/Rev.1, A/C.2/L.436/Rev.2) entitled "Development of international trade and international commodity problems":

Amendments to the second revised text of the above draft resolution submitted by the Netherlands (A/C.2/L.449) and by Ecuador (A/C.2/L.450).

[See paras, 32-42 below.]

(d) Draft resolution submitted by Brazil, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Ghana, Indonesia, Pakistan, the United Arab Republic and Yugoslavia (A/C. 2/L.437 and Add.1-2, A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1 and Corr.1, A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1/Add.1) entitled "International measures to assist in offsetting fluctuations in commodity prices";

Amendment to the above draft resolution submitted by Uruguay (A/C.2/L.451).

[See paras, 43-52 below.]

(e) Draft resolution submitted by Afghanistan, Bolivia, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, the Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, the Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan,

^{7/} See the annex fascicles relating to agenda item 29 and agenda item 31, respectively.

Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.431 and Add.1) entitled "United Nations capital development fund";

[See paras. 53-56 below.]

(f) Draft resolution submitted by Albania, Czechoslovakia and Romania (A/C.2/L.432 and Add.1) and revised texts sponsored also by Uruguay (A/C.2/L.432/Rev.1, A/C.2/L.432/Rev.2) entitled "Possibilities of international co-operation in the field of the development of the petroleum industry in the under-developed countries".

Amendments to the original text of the above draft resolution submitted by Uruguay (A/C.2/L.443).

ISee paras, 57-67 below,1

(g) Draft resolution submitted by Bolivia, Cuba, Mexico and Venezuela (A/C.2/L.435 and Add.1-2, A/C.2/L.435/Rev.1) entitled "Agrarian reform".

(h) Draft resolution submitted by Ceylon, the Federation of Malaya, Haiti, Iran, Liberia, Mexico, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey and the United States of America (A/C.2/L.438) entitled "Industrial development banks and corporations".

[See paras. 74-79 below.]

(i) Draft resolution submitted by Austria, Bolivia, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Norway, the Netherlands, Panama, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.439 and Add.1-4) entitled "World economic development".

(j) Draft resolution submitted by Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia (A/C.2/L.441, A/C.2/L.441/Rev.1) entitled "Development of scientific and technical cooperation and exchange of experience".

Amendment to the above draft resolution submitted by Australia (A/C.2/L.452) and oral amendment submitted by the representative of the United Kingdom at the 639th meeting.

[See paras. 86-94 below.]

(k) Draft resolution submitted by Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela (A/C.2/L.442 and Corr.1) entitled "Latin American common market".

[See paras. 95-99 below.]

(1) Draft resolution submitted by Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Ceylon, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, El Salvador, the Federation of Malaya, France, Ghana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Italy, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, the Netherlands, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Panama, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan, Tunisia, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.434, A/C.2/L.434/Rev.1) entitled "Commission for industrial development".

Amendments to the above draft resolution submitted by Afghanistan, Argentina, Chile, Guatemala, Liberia and Spain (A/C.2/L.446), by Canada (A/C.2/L.454) and by Ireland (A/C.2/L.456).

[See paras. 100-113 below.]

- (a) International Development Association
- 7. The draft resolution submitted by Denmark, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, the Philippines, the Sudan and Sweden (A/C.2/L.440), joined by Japan (A/C.2/L.440/Add.1), which was received by the Committee at its 624th meeting, read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

- "Mindful of the determination of the United Nations, as expressed in its Charter, to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom and, for these ends, to employ international machinery for the promotion of economic and social advancement of all peoples,
- "Recalling the General Assembly's interest in new forms of international financing for the purpose of accelerating the economic development of underdeveloped countries,
- "1. Welcomes the decision in principle taken at the recent annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development to establish an International Development Association as an affiliate of the Bank.
- "2. Believes that the new affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development will provide under-developed countries with types of financing not hitherto available from a multilateral agency and which, while stimulating economic development, would tend to ease their balance of payments position,
- "3. Expresses the hope that adequate provisions will be made and appropriate procedures adopted for a close working relationship and effective coordination and consultation between the International Development Association and the United Nations.
- "4. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the President of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, for communication to the Executive Directors of the Bank, the records of the debates of the General Assembly on this subject at its present session."
- 8. The Committee considered this draft resolution at its 627th and 628th meetings.
- 9. Uruguay submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.444) by which the following words would be added at the end of operative paragraph 3: "and the appropriate specialized agencies".
- 10. At the 628th meeting the representative of Uruguay submitted a revised amendment (A/C.2/L.444/Rev.1) which would leave operative paragraph 3 unchanged and insert a new operative paragraph immediately after it, reading as follows:
 - "Also calls attention to the desirability of establishing appropriate relations between the International Development Association and the existing specialized agencies, as suitable".

- 11. The representative of Argentina suggested that the word "Believes" in operative paragraph 2 should be replaced by "Expresses the hope"; and the representative of Belgium that the words "a multilateral agency" be replaced by "multilateral agencies".
- 12. The sponsors accepted the amendment by Uruguay and the suggestions by Argentina and Belgium, the amendment by Uruguay having been slightly modified (A/C.2/L.444/Rev.2) to read as follows:
 - "Calls attention to the desirability of appropriate relations between the International Development Association and the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, as suitable".
- 13. The sponsors also accepted a proposal by Argentina that operative paragraph 1 should become the final preambular paragraph, the word "Welcomes" being changed to "Welcoming".
- 14. The Committee then adopted the draft resolution (A/C.2/L.440 and Add.1), as amended, by 57 votes to none, with 11 abstentions.
- 15. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution I (see paragraph 114 below).
- (b) Strengthening and development of the world market and improvement of the trade conditions of the economically less developed countries
- 16. The draft resolution submitted by Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Poland (A/C.2/L.429) was received by the Committee at the 613th meeting.
 - 17. The draft resolution read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,
 - "Guided by the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and basing itself in particular upon the tasks of extending international economic co-operation and of bringing about the full employment of the population and conditions for economic and social progress and development;
 - "Considering that world trade is the natural and reliable basis for the development of peaceful communion between States;
 - "Desiring to promote the development and extension of the single world market, the easing of conditions for the exchange of goods and the creation of the stability and welfare essential for the peaceful and friendly relations between nations;

11 A

- "1. Recommends that all countries Members of the United Nations should, individually or jointly, make efforts towards the development and extension of the world market by means of promotion and expansion of trade among all countries, regardless of their social or political systems;
- "2. Expresses itself in favour of the creation within the United Nations of a single universal international trade organization, open to all interested countries, as also of the establishment of regional trade organizations which would include all the countries in the different regions of the world, since that would constitute a contribution towards the extension of international trade and the consolidation of the world market;

- "3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on possible measures for the strengthening and development of the world market, taking into account the exchange of views at the present session and also any observations on this matter which Governments may wish to submit;
- "4. Decides to include the question of the strengthening and development of a world market in the agenda of its fifteenth session.

"B

- within the United Nations, measures to promote the stabilization of the commodity markets and the development of trade between the highly developed and less developed countries on a mutually beneficial basis, in particular through the extension of the practice of concluding long-term trade and payments agreements and also international commodity agreements;
- "2. Recommends that the industrially developed and the economically less developed countries should encourage by means of reciprocal agreements the export of machinery and industrial equipment to the less developed countries on the basis of medium-term or long-term credits at low interest rates, which the recipient countries could repay with counterpart deliveries of raw materials, the products of their industries or other kinds of reimbursement which they have at their disposal.
- 18. Liberia submitted amendments (A/C.2/L.445) by which paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of operative part A of the draft resolution would be replaced by the following paragraphs:
 - "2. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the possibility of the creation within the United Nations of a single universal trade organization, open to all interested countries;
 - "3. Invites the Secretary-General to submit this report to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 19. Amendments were also submitted by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (A/C. 2/L.447) as follows:
- (a) In the first preambular paragraph, the words "and basing itself in particular upon the tasks of extending" would be replaced by "and wishing to extend"; and the words "of bringing about full employment of the population and conditions for" would be replaced by "to bring about full employment and to foster";
- (b) In the second preambular paragraph, the words "the natural and reliable basis for" would be replaced by "a natural and reliable factor in";
- (c) In the third preambular paragraph, the words "of the single world market, the easing of conditions for the exchange of goods and the creation of" would be replaced by "of trade, to ease the exchange of goods and to create", and the words "for the peaceful" by "for peaceful".
- (d) All the operative paragraphs would be deleted and replaced by the following text:

- "1. Recommends that all States Members of the United Nations should individually and jointly continue their efforts to promote and extend trade between all States regardless of their economic systems;
- "2. Reaffirms its belief that international organizations concerned with the regulation and development of international trade have consistently contributed to the extension of multilateral world commerce and have facilitated in an indispensable manner the freeing of channels of trade between all types of economy;
- "3. Requests the Secretary-General to take the views of Member Governments on this subject expressed at the present session fully into consideration when preparing the World Economic Survey, 1959, for consideration at the thirtieth session of ECOSOC and the fifteenth session of the General Assembly.

"B

- "1. Considers that the United Nations and the specialized agencies concerned are doing useful work in promoting the stabilization of the commodity markets and the development of reciprocally beneficial multilateral trade;
- "2. Recommends that the industrially developed and the economically less developed countries should encourage by means of freely negotiated credit arrangements the export of machinery and industrial equipment to the less developed countries on mutually acceptable terms."
- 20. India also submitted amendments (A/C.2/L.448) by which:
- (a) The word "single" would be deleted from the third preambular paragraph;
- (b) Paragraph 2 of part A would be revised to read as follows:
 - "Considers that it would be desirable for the United Nations to work out measures to promote the participation in a universal international trade organization by all interested countries, since this would constitute a contribution towards the extension of international trade and the development of the world market":
- (c) In paragraph 1 of part B, the words "and non-discriminatory" would be inserted after the words "mutually beneficial", and the words "and payments" would be deleted;
- (d) In paragraph 2 of part B, the words "reciprocal agreements" would be replaced by "mutually beneficial and non-discriminatory arrangements"; the words "counterpart deliveries" would be replaced by "exports"; and the phrase "and which do not restrict their freedom to buy and sell in the best market" would be added at the end of the paragraph.
- 21. At the 630th meeting the sponsors submitted a revised text of the draft resolution (A/C.2/L.429/Rev.1) in which the amendments submitted by Liberia (A/C.2/L.445) and certain of the amendments submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.2/L.447) and India (A/C.2/L.448) had been incorporated. In the revised text, the words "the single world market" in the third preambular paragraph were replaced by the word "trade", so that the paragraph read as follows:

"Desiring to promote the development and extension of trade, to ease the exchange of goods and to create the stability and welfare essential for peaceful and friendly relations between nations;"

and the operative parts of the draft resolution read as follows:

- "1. Recommends that all States Members of the United Nations should, individually and jointly, make efforts to promote and extend trade between all countries, regardless of their economic systems;
- "2. Reaffirms its belief that international organizations concerned with the regulation and development of international trade should consistently contribute to the extension of multilateral world commerce, and should take every possible step to expand trade between countries having different economic systems;
- "3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the possibility of establishing, within the framework of the United Nations, a single world trade organization, open to all interested countries;
- "4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit this report to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

"B

- "1. Considers that the United Nations and the specialized agencies concerned should expand the useful work which they are doing in promoting the stabilization of the commodity markets and the development of reciprocally beneficial multilateral trade:
- "2. Considers that it would be desirable to work out, within the United Nations, measures to promote the stabilization of the commodity markets and the development of trade between the highly-developed and the less developed countries on a reciprocally beneficial and non-discriminatory basis, in particular through the extension of the practice of concluding long-term trade and international commodity agreements:
- "3. Recommends that the industrially developed and the economically less developed countries should encourage, by means of freely negotiated credit arrangements on a reciprocally beneficial and non-discriminatory basis, the export of machinery and industrial equipment to the less-developed countries, consideration being given in that connexion to the granting to under-developed countries of medium-term or long-term credits at low interest rates, which the recipient countries could repay with exports of raw materials, the products of their industries, or other kinds of reimbursement which they have at their disposal."
- 22. The United Kingdom then submitted revised amendments (A/C.2/L.447/Rev.1) by which:
- (a) The title would be amended to read "The extension and expansion of reciprocally beneficial world trade among all types of economies";

- (b) Paragraph 1 of part A would be reworded to read:
 - "1. Recommends that all States Members of the United Nations should, individually and jointly, continue their efforts to promote and extend mutually beneficial trade between all States, regardless of their economic systems";
- (c) In paragraph 2 of part A, the word "consistently" would be replaced by "continue to"; the words "take every possible step to expand" by "facilitate the expansion of", and the words "between countries having different economic systems" by "among all types of economies";
- (d) Paragraphs 3 and 4 of part A would be replaced by the following single paragraph:
 - "3. Requests the Secretary-General to take the views of Member Governments on this subject expressed at the present session fully into consideration when preparing the World Economic Survey, 1959, for consideration at the thirtieth session of the Economic and Social Council and the fifteenth session of the General Assembly";
- (e) In part B, paragraph 2, the words "in particular through the extension of the practice of concluding long-term trade and international commodity agreements" would be deleted;
- (f) In part B, paragraph 3, the words "continue to" would be inserted between the words "should" and "encourage"; the words "by means of freely negotiated credit arrangements on a reciprocally beneficial and non-discriminatory basis" would be deleted; and the following words would be inserted after the words "to the less developed countries": "including where appropriate by the provision of credit on mutually acceptable terms both in its grant and in its reimbursement"; the remainder of the paragraph would be deleted.
- 23. India also submitted revised amendments (A/C. 2/L.448/Rev.1) by which:
- (a) Paragraph 3 of part A would be replaced by the following text:
 - "Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the possibility of extending arrangements for international trade co-operation so as to encourage wider participation by Member States, irrespective of their economic systems or stages of development"; and
- (b) Paragraph 3 of part B would be replaced by the following text:
 - "Recommends that the industrially developed and the economically less developed countries should continue to encourage, by means of freely negotiated credit arrangements, the export of machinery and industrial equipment to the less developed countries, without any restriction on the freedom of these countries to buy and sell in the best market."
- 24. When the Committee resumed discussion of the three-Power draft resolution at its 634th meeting, the sponsors indicated that they had accepted the following changes in operative part A of the draft:
 - (a) Paragraph 1 was revised to read:
 - "Recommends that all States Members of the United Nations should, individually and jointly, con-

- tinue their efforts to promote and extend mutually beneficial trade between all States regardless of their economic systems";
- (b) In paragraph 2, the word "consistently" was replaced by "continue to"; the words "take every possible step to expand" by "facilitate the expansion of"; and the words "between countries with different economic systems" by "between States regardless of their economic systems";
- (c) In paragraph 3, the final clause beginning with the words "establishing, within the framework" was replaced by the following: "extending arrangements for international trade co-operation so as to encourage wider participation by Member States, irrespective of their economic systems or stages of development, taking fully into consideration all the views expressed and proposals submitted at the present session on this subject".
- 25. The representative of the United Kingdom then withdrew his delegation's amendments (A/C.2/L.447/Rev.1) except the amendment which would delete the words "in particular through the extension of the practice of concluding long-term trade and international commodity agreements" in paragraph 2 of part B.
- 26. The representative of Iraq proposed that the first part of paragraph 3 of part A should be modified as follows: "Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the ways and means of promoting the expansion of international trade co-operation so as to encourage...".
- 27. The representative of New Zealand proposed that paragraph 2 of part B should be amended as follows:
- (a) By the insertion of the words "and other appropriate forums" after the words "within the United Nations";
- (b) By the replacement of the last phrase beginning with "in particular through" by the following: "where appropriate through the practice of concluding long-term agreements, international commodity agreements and study groups".
- 28. At the 635th meeting, a second revised text of the three-Power draft resolution (A/C.2/L.429/Rev.2) was circulated. It incorporated certain amendments proposed by the United Kingdom to paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of part A (A/C.2/L.447/Rev.1), by Iraq to paragraph 3 of part A, by India to paragraph 3 of part A and paragraph 3 of part B (A/C.2/L.448/Rev.1) and by New Zealand to paragraph 2 of part B.
- 29. Part A, paragraph 3, would therefore read as follows:
 - "3. Requests the Secretary-General, taking fully into consideration all the views expressed and proposals submitted on this subject at the present session of the General Assembly, to prepare a report on the ways and means of promoting wider trade co-operation among States, irrespective of their economic systems and stages of development, including, inter alia, consideration of all the arrangements for such co-operation".
- Part B, paragraph 2, had been further modified to read:

- "2. Considers that it would be desirable to work out, within the United Nations and other appropriate forums, measures to promote the stabilization of the commodity markets and the development of trade between the highly developed and the less developed countries on a reciprocally beneficial and non-discriminatory basis, including, where appropriate, short-, medium- or long-term trade agreements, international commodity agreements and the establishment of international study groups".
- 30. At the same meeting the Committee voted on the revised three-Power draft resolution (A/C.2/L.429/Rev.2) as follows:

Paragraph 2 of part B, which was voted upon separately at the request of the representative of the United States of America, was adopted by 70 votes to none, with 3 abstentions.

The draft resolution as a whole was adopted by 72 votes to none, with 1 abstention.

- 31. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution II (see paragraph 114 below).
- (c) Development of international trade and international commodity problems
- 32. The draft resolution submitted by Argentina, Chile, France and Greece (A/C.2/L.436) was received by the Committee at its 624th meeting. The text of the draft resolution read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolution 1324 (XIII) of 12 December 1958 and noting Economic and Social Council resolution 726 (XXVIII) of 27 July 1959,

"Convinced that economic and social progress throughout the world, especially in the under-developed areas, depends largely on a steady increase in international trade,

"Bearing in mind that exports of a small number of products constitute the main source of revenue for many countries, particularly in the underdeveloped areas,

"Considering that excessive fluctuations in commodity prices affect the volume of export receipts and the budgetary resources of many countries, and in the case of the under-developed countries are likely to hamper the sound and stable development of the economy.

"Convinced that a policy of economic assistance to the under-developed countries will not be fully effective unless the excessive instability of commodity prices is remedied, and that to seek a solution to this problem should be one of the main concerns of all Member States,

"Noting the approval by the Economic and Social Council of the programme of work of the Commission on International Commodity Trade, and in particular the detailed study of national and international measures to deal with fluctuations in primary commodity markets,

"Noting further that the Contracting Parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade have undertaken a study of the problem of long-term expansion of trade and in particular of the exports of countries producing primary commodities,

- "Considering however that the procedures of multilateral financial assistance do not always enable countries that have suffered from a sharp and sudden drop in the prices of the raw materials they export to overcome the deficit in their balance of payments rapidly without thereby hampering the execution of their development programmes,
- "1. Appeals anew to the Governments of Member States to continue their efforts to solve the problems relating to commodity production and trade, in particular by the negotiation of agreements between the principal producers and the principal consumers of the same product and by participation in international study groups;
- "2. Takes note with appreciation of Economic and Social Council resolution 726 (XXVIII) approving the report and programme of work submitted by the Commission on International Commodity Trade;
- "3. Invites the Governments of Member States to extend the greatest possible assistance to the Commission on International Commodity Trade so that it may carry out its programme of work quickly and effectively:
- "4. Further invites the Governments of Member States:
- "(a) To contribute to the greatest possible extent, either unilaterally or in the competent international organizations, to the progressive abolition of discrimination, quantitative limitations and other restrictive practices likely to hamper the development of international trade, particularly with respect to commodities;
- "(b) To take account in formulating their economic and financial policy of the effect that it may have on the exports of the primary producing countries;
- "5. Requests the Commission on International Commodity Trade to give particular attention, in carrying out its programme of work, to the study of the most suitable means of giving temporary assistance to countries encountering serious payment difficulties as a result of a sharp and sudden drop in the prices of their raw material exports, with a view to enabling them to take the necessary measures without thereby interrupting or delaying the execution of their economic development programmes."
- 33. The Committee considered the four-Power draft resolution at its 627th, 630th, 631st and 632nd meetings:
- 34. At its 631st meeting the Committee received a revised text (A/C.2/L.436/Rev.1) of the draft resolution which differed from the original text as follows:
- (\underline{a}) The third preambular paragraph was revised to read as follows:
 - "Bearing in mind that exports of a relatively small number of primary commodities constitute the main source of revenue for many countries, particularly in the under-developed areas";
- (b) In the fifth preambular paragraph, the words "a solution" were replaced by the word "solution", so that the paragraph read as follows:

- "Convinced that a policy of economic assistance to the under-developed countries will not be fully effective unless the excessive instability of commodity prices is remedied, and that to seek solutions to this problem should be one of the main concerns of all Member States";
- (c) The last phrase of the eighth preambular paragraph reading "without thereby hampering the execution of their development programmes" was revised to read "and at the same time to carry out their development programmes";
- (d) The last part of operative paragraph 1, beginning with the words "in particular by", was replaced by the phrase "including where appropriate the negotiation of agreements between the principal producers and the principal consumers of the same product or the participation in international study groups";
- (e) The following clause was added at the end of operative paragraph 2: "and expresses the hope that the Commission in the course of its studies will give careful attention to the types of comprehensive commodities schemes referred to in part I, chapter 3, of the World Economic Survey, 1958";
- (f) A new operative paragraph 4, reading as follows, was inserted:
 - "Recommends that the regional economic commissions, the specialized agencies concerned, especially the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Contracting Parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the study groups dealing specifically with commodity problems give particular attention to the problems of countries dependent to a high degree on the export of a small number of primary commodities";
- (g) Operative paragraph 4 was renumbered 5, and revised to read as follows:

"Urges the Governments of Member States:

- "(a) To contribute to the greatest possible extent, either unilaterally or in the competent international organizations, to the progressive abolition of discrimination, quantitative limitations and other restrictive practices which are no longer justified by balance of payments difficulties and are likely to hamper the sound development of international commodity trade;
- "(b) To take account in formulating their economic and financial policy of the effect that it may have on the export possibilities of the primary producing countries";
- (h) Operative paragraph 5, now renumbered 6, was revised to read as follows:
 - "Requests the Commission on International Commodity Trade to give particular attention, in carrying out its programme of work, to the study of the most suitable means for giving temporary assistance to countries encountering serious payment difficulties as a result of a sharp and sudden drop in the prices of their raw material exports, with a view to enabling them to take the necessary measures and at the same time continue to carry out their economic development programmes."
- 35. Various oral suggestions having been made at the 631st meeting, the sponsors accepted the following changes:

- (a) In the third preambular paragraph, the words "revenue for" were replaced by the words "foreign exchange earnings of";
- (b) In the fifth preambular paragraph, the words "will not be fully effective unless the excessive instability of commodity prices is remedied" were replaced by the words "will be more effective if the excessive instability of commodity markets is remedied";
- (c) In the sixth preambular paragraph, the words "and in particular" were replaced by the word "including";
- (d) In operative paragraph 1, the words "in their mutual interest" were inserted after the words "the principal producers and the principal consumers of the same product";
- (e) In operative paragraph 3, the words "so that it may" were replaced by the words "in order to help it".
- (f) In operative paragraph 5 (a), the word "such" was inserted before "discrimination"; the words "which are no longer" were replaced by the words "as are no longer"; and the words "are likely to hamper" by "which hinder";
- (g) In operative paragraph 5 (b), the words "and financial" were deleted, and the word "possibilities" was replaced by "opportunities".
- 36. The operative part of the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.436/Rev.2) therefore read as follows:
 - "1. Appeals anew to the Governments of Member States to continue their efforts to solve the problems relating to commodity production and trade, including where appropriate the negotiation of agreements between the principal producers and the principal consumers of the same product in their mutual interest, or participation in international study groups;
 - "2. Takes note with appreciation of Economic and Social Council resolution 726 (XXVIII) approving the report and programme of work submitted by the Commission on International Commodity Trade, and expresses the hope that the Commission in the course of its studies will give careful attention to the types of comprehensive commodities schemes referred to in part I, chapter 3, of the World Economic Survey, 1958;
- "3. Invites the Governments of Member States to extend the greatest possible assistance to the Commission on International Commodity Trade in order to help it carry out its programme of work quickly and effectively;
- "4. Recommends that the regional economic commissions, the specialized agencies concerned, especially the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Contracting Parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the study groups dealing specifically with commodity problems give particular attention to the problems of countries dependent to a high degree on the export of a small number of primary commodities;
 - "5. Urges the Governments of Member States:
- "(a) To contribute to the greatest possible extent, either unilaterally or in the competent international organizations, to the progressive abolition of such discrimination, quantitative limitations and other restrictive practices as are no longer justified by balance of payments difficulties and which hinder the sound development of international commodity trade;

- "(b) To take into account, in formulating their economic policy, the effect that it may have on the export opportunities of the primary producing countries;
- "6. Requests the Commission on International Commodity Trade to give particular attention, in carrying out its programme of work, to the study of means for giving temporary assistance to countries encountering serious payment difficulties as a result of a sharp and sudden drop in the prices of their raw material exports, with a view to enabling them to take the necessary measures and at the same time continue to carry out their economic development programmes."
- 37. At the 632nd meeting, the sponsors accepted an amendment submitted by the Netherlands (A/C.2/L.449) whereby the words "participation in existing international commodity agreements or" would be inserted in operative paragraph 1 after the word "appropriate".
- 38. The representative of Italy suggested, and the sponsors accepted, the deletion of the words "by balance of payments difficulties" in operative paragraph 5 (a).
- 39. The representative of Australia then proposed that the words "by balance of payments difficulties" be restored to the text of operative paragraph 5 (a).
- 40. Ecuador submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.450) to operative paragraph 5 (a) which would replace the last phrase, beginning with the words "such discrimination", by the following clause: "all such discrimination, quantitative limitations and other restrictive practices as are prejudicial to the sound development of international commodity trade".
- 41. The Committee then voted on the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.436/Rev.2), as amended, and on the amendments to it as follows:

The amendment submitted by Ecuador (A/C.2/L.450) was adopted by 37 votes to 14, with 21 abstentions;

The Ecuadorian amendment having been adopted, no vote was taken on the amendment submitted by Australia (see paragraph 39 above);

The seventh preambular paragraph, on which a separate vote had been requested by Romania, was adopted by 55 votes to none, with 15 abstentions;

The eighth preambular paragraph, on which a separate vote had been requested by the United States, was adopted by 56 votes to none, with 13 abstentions;

Operative paragraph 1, on which a separate vote had been requested by the United States, was adopted by 70 votes to none, with 2 abstentions;

Operative paragraph 5 (a), as amended, was adopted by 53 votes to none, with 17 abstentions;

The revised draft resolution as a whole, as amended, was adopted by 72 votes to none, with 1 abstention.

- 42. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution III (see paragraph 114 below).
- (d) International measures to assist in offsetting fluctuations in commodity prices
- 43. The draft resolution submitted by Brazil, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Indonesia, Pakistan and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.437) was received by the Committee at its 624th meeting. Burma, Cambodia and the United Arab Republic later joined the sponsors (A/C.2/L.437/Add.1 and 2).
 - 44. The draft resolution read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,
 - "Recalling its resolution 1324 (XIII) and Economic and Social Council resolution 726 (XXVIII),

"Bearing in mind the responsibilities laid upon Member States by the Preamble, Article 1, paragraph 3, Article 13, paragraph 1, and Article 55 of the Charter of the United Nations to promote international co-operation in the economic field, higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress,

"Taking into account the harmful potentialities of the widening gap between the levels of per caput income in developed and under-developed countries,

"Having examined the report of the Economic and Social Council on international commodity problems and the report of the Commission on International Commodity Trade on its seventh session, particularly paragraph 62 thereof relating to compensatory financing,

"Commending the work programme drawn up by the Commission on International Commodity Trade at its seventh session and approved by the Economic and Social Council,

"Considering the necessity of devising means to combat large fluctuations in commodity prices viewed in the context of a general fall in the price levels of primary commodities, the rising price levels of manufactured goods, and the resulting decline in the terms of trade against the underdeveloped countries,

"Considering that such fluctuations hamper world trade,

"Considering further the repercussions of adverse trade balances on the capacity of the underdeveloped countries to contribute to their own development,

"Recognizing the imperative necessity of urgent and effective measures to enable the under-developed countries to initiate and sustain their development programmes at adequate levels,

"1. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint a group of (not more than seven) experts to examine, in order to assist the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on International Commodity Trade in their consideration of commodity problems, the feasibility of establishing machinery within the United Nations designed to assist in offsetting the effects of large fluctuations in commodity prices on balances of payments, with especial reference to compensatory financing, and to submit its report

- and recommendations to the Commission on International Commodity Trade at its eighth session and the Economic and Social Council for comment and transmission to the General Assembly;
- "2. Further requests the Secretary-General to invite the International Monetary Fund and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to participate in the work of the group of experts in a consultative capacity."
- 45. The Committee considered this draft resolution at its 627th, 631st and 634th meetings.
- 46. At the 631st meeting, Pakistan, on behalf of the sponsors, revised operative paragraph 1 to read as follows:
 - "1. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint a group of (not more than seven) experts to assist the Commission on International Commodity Trade in its consideration of commodity problems by examining the feasibility of establishing machinery, within the framework of the United Nations, designed to assist in offsetting the effects of large fluctuations in commodity prices on balances of payments, with especial reference to compensatory financing, and to submit its report and recommendations to the Commission on International Commodity Trade at its eighth session, and requests the Economic and Social Council to comment on and transmit this report to the General Assembly".
- 47. Ghana joined the sponsors of the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1). A statement prepared by the Secretary-General (A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1/Add.1) on the financial implications of the draft resolution was before the Committee.
- 48. At the 634th meeting, Uruguay introduced an amendment (A/C.2/L.451) to the revised draft resolution which would replace operative paragraphs 1 and 2 by the following text:
 - "1. Declares that it considers it urgently necessary to study the possibility of establishing some system or machinery within the United Nations designed to assist in offsetting the effects of large fluctuations in commodity prices and their consequences on balances of payments, with especial reference to compensatory financing;
 - "2. Declares further that it considers it desirable to this end:
- "(a) That the Commission on International Commodity Trade should seek the advice of internationally qualified 'experts'—not more than one for each commodity—and shall inform the Secretary-General of their appointment so that he may take any necessary action;
- "(b) That that Commission should submit the reports and recommendations of the experts, together with its own report, to the Economic and Social Council for transmission by the latter, with its conclusions, to the General Assembly;
- "(c) That the Secretary-General should invite the International Monetary Fund and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to participate in the work of the group of experts in a consultative capacity."
- 49. Following clarifications by several of the sponsors, Uruguay withdrew the foregoing amendment.

- 50. Pakistan, on behalf of the sponsors, accepted the following further changes (A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1/Corr.1) to the text of the revised draft resolution:
- (a) In the sixth preambular paragraph, the words "viewed in the context of" were replaced by "when accompanied by";
- (b) In operative paragraph 1, the words "at its eighth session" were replaced by "by its ninth session"; and the word "especial" by "special".
- 51. The Committee then adopted the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1), as amended, by 60 votes to none, with 11 abstentions.
- 52. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution IV (see paragraph 114 below).
 - (e) United Nations capital development fund
- 53. At its 619th meeting the Committee received a draft resolution submitted by Afghanistan, Bolivia, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, the Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, the Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/ L.431) and by Guinea (A/C.2/L.431/Add.1). By it, the General Assembly would, in the preamble, (1) bear in mind the determination expressed in the Preamble of the Charter of the United Nations to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom and to employ international machinery for the promotion of economic and social advancement of all peoples, (2) consider the economic development of the under-developed countries as an essential condition for promoting world peace, stability and prosperity, (3) be mindful that the general problem of the economic development of the under-developed countries concerned, and was of paramount importance to, both developed and under-developed countries, (4) consider the importance of using United Nations machinery for financially assisting the acceleration of the economic development of the under-developed countries. especially in the field of their economic and social infrastructure, which was basic to the substantial expansion of production and to the growth of their economies, (5) recognize that the flow of international capital and assistance had not been commensurate with the magnitude, diversity and urgency of the needs of the under-developed countries; (6) believe that improved economic conditions of highly developed countries would make it possible for them to provide an additional contribution towards accelerating the economic development of under-developed countries; (7) bear in mind the previous resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council on the establishment of a United Nations capital development fund for financing the economic development of the under-developed countries.
- 54. In the operative part, the Assembly would: (1) call upon Member States to give further consideration to General Assembly resolutions 1317 (XIII) and 1219 (XII), section III, and Economic and Social Council resolution 740 (XXVIII), and to reappraise their respective positions as regards extending material support for the early establishment of a United Nations capital development fund; (2) request the Secretary-General to examine in consultation with Member States, ways and means of making further progress towards the early establishment of a United Nations capital development fund; (3) invite the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

- 55. After a short discussion, the Committee adopted the draft resolution (A/C.2/L.431 and Add.1) by 63 votes to none, with 12 abstentions.
- 56. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution V (see paragraph 114 below).
- (f) Possibilities of international co-operation in the field of the development of the petroleum industry in the under-developed countries
- 57. The draft resolution submitted by Albania, Czechoslovakia and Romania (A/C.2/L.432) was received by the Committee at its 619th meeting.
 - 58. The draft resolution read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Considering that in order to accelerate the economic development of the under-developed countries the most effective means have to be utilized and the efforts have to be focused on the factors capable of giving a substantial stimulus to this development,

"Taking into account that petroleum plays today and will further play an important role in the world economy,

"Noting that the discussions which have taken place during the symposium on the development of petroleum resources held in New Delhi under the auspices of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, as well as those at the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth sessions of the Economic and Social Council, showed the particular interest of numerous under-developed countries for the development of their petroleum industry, as well as for the obtaining and manufacturing of the equipment necessary to attain this aim,

"Noting also that many countries are interested in the organization of a broad exchange of technical and economic information and in the training of scientific and technical personnel,

"Recalling General Assembly resolution 1319 (XIII) and Economic and Social Council resolutions 711 B (XXVII) and 740 B (XXVIII),

"Requests the Secretary-General:

- "(a) To include the question of the development of the petroleum industry in the United Nations programmes for the development of under-developed countries (industrialization and power resources);
- "(b) To prepare for the twenty-ninth session of the Economic and Social Council the information mentioned in paragraph 1 of Economic and Social Council resolution 740 B (XXVIII);
- "(c) To convene during 1960, shortly after the twenty-ninth session of the Council, an ad hoc group of experts from the countries concerned, in order to study on the basis of the relevant documents, such as the debates and the reports of the thirteenth and fourteenth sessions of the General Assembly and of the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth sessions of the Council, the question of the development of the petroleum industry of the underdeveloped countries and the ways and means aiming at the fulfilment of this goal through a broader international co-operation, in particular:

- "(i) The possibility of organizing a broad international co-operation for the training of personnel and the exchange of information and experience in the field of the extraction and processing of petroleum;
- "(ii) The possibility of obtaining and manufacturing petroleum equipment by under-developed countries possessing petroleum resources;
- (d) To work out, on the basis of the documents and recommendations issued by the above-mentioned ad hoc group of experts, a survey on the 'Possibilities of international co-operation in the field of the development of the petroleum industry in the under-developed countries' and to submit it to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 59. Uruguay submitted amendments (A/C.2/L.443) by which:
- (a) The following paragraph would be added after the third paragraph of the preamble:
 - "Recalling General Assembly resolution 626 (VII) of 21 December 1952, which stated 'the need for encouraging the under-developed countries in the proper use and exploitation of their natural wealth and resources',";
- (b) After sub-paragraph (c) (ii) of the operative paragraph, the following would be added:
 - "(iii) The possibility that under-developed countries may obtain assistance from international public capital—through existing agencies or through some new and special agency—in order to discover their possible petroleum wealth or deposits and commence their exploitation".
- 60. A statement prepared by the Secretary-General (A/C.2/L.432/Add.1) on the financial implications of the draft resolution was before the Committee.
- 61. The Committee considered the draft resolution at its 621st, 633rd and 636th meetings.
- 62. At the 633rd meeting, the sponsors, joined by Uruguay, submitted a revised text (A/C.2/L.432/Rev.1), embodying the amendments submitted by Uruguay (A/C.2/L.443). In the preamble, the fifth paragraph became the first; the paragraph proposed in the first Uruguayan amendment became the second paragraph of the preamble; and the word "particular" was deleted from the third paragraph, which had become the fifth. In the operative part, sub-paragraphs (b), (c) and (d) were revised.
- 63. The revised draft resolution therefore read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling General Assembly resolution 1319 (XIII) and Economic and Social Council resolutions 711 B (XXVII) and 740 B (XXVIII).

"Recalling further General Assembly resolution 626 (VII) of 21 December 1952 which stated "the need for encouraging the under-developed countries in the proper use and exploitation of their natural wealth and resources",

"Considering that in order to accelerate the economic development of the under-developed countries the most effective means have to be utilized and the efforts have to be focused on the factors capable of giving a substantial stimulus to this development,

"Taking into account that petroleum plays today and will further play an important role in the world economy,

"Noting that the discussions which have taken place during the symposium on the development of petroleum resources held in New Delhi under the auspices of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, as well as those at the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth sessions of the Economic and Social Council, showed the interest of numerous under-developed countries for the development of their petroleum industry, as well as for the obtaining and manufacturing of the equipment necessary to attain this aim,

"Noting also that many countries are interested in the organization of a broad exchange of technical and economic information and in the training of scientific and technical personnel,

"Requests the Secretary-General:

- "(a) To include the question of the development of the petroleum industry in the United Nations programmes for the development of under-developed countries (industrialization and power resources);
- "(b) To study further, on the basis of the information to be prepared under Economic and Social Council resolution 740 B (XXVIII) and other relevant United Nations documents and debates in the United Nations organs, the question of the development of the petroleum industry of the less developed countries and the possibilities of international co-operation and assistance through the United Nations in this field;
- "(c) To consult Member Governments on their interest and possibilities of such co-operation, including:
- "(i) The possibility of organizing a broad international co-operation for the training of personnel and the exchange of information and experience in the field of the extraction and processing of petroleum:
- "(ii) The possibility of obtaining and manufacturing petroleum equipment by under-developed countries possessing petroleum resources;
- "(iii) The possibility that under-developed countries may obtain assistance from international public capital—through existing agencies or through some new and special agency—in order to discover their possible petroleum wealth or deposits and commence their exploitation.
- "(d) To prepare, on the basis of the above-mentioned study and consultation with Member Governments a preliminary survey on the 'Possibilities of

- international co-operation in the field of the development of the petroleum industry in the underdeveloped countries' and to submit it to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 64. At the 636th meeting, the sponsors submitted a further revision of this draft resolution (A/C.2/L.432/Rev.2), in which the third, fourth, fifth and sixth preambular paragraphs were changed to read as follows:

"Considering the importance to many underdeveloped countries of the effective development of their petroleum resources,

"Recognizing that the discussions which took place during the symposium on the development of petroleum resources held in New Delhi under the auspices of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, as well as those at the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth sessions of the Economic and Social Council, showed the interest of numerous under-developed countries in the development of their petroleum industry.

"Noting the action taken by the Economic and Social Council, at its twenty-eighth session, in inviting the Secretary-General to make available particulars of the specific ways in which programmes under the auspices of the United Nations can assist in developing petroleum supplies,

"Recalling that the Secretary-General is authorized to include the question of the development of the petroleum industry in the United Nations programmes for the development of under-developed countries with regard to industrialization and energy resources".

- 65. The operative part of the draft resolution was changed to read as follows:
- "1. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Economic and Social Council, for its consideration, the various views expressed on this subject, including those relating to financial aspects, during the fourteenth session of the General Assembly;
- "2. Expresses the hope that the information to be supplied to the Council by the Secretary-General will enable the Council, as provided by its resolution 740 B (XXVIII), to determine what additional assistance to Governments is called for within the framework of the existing technical assistance and development activities of the United Nations and its specialized agencies."
- 66. The Committee adopted the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.432/Rev.2) by 54 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.
- 67. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution VI (see paragraph 114 below).

(g) Agrarian reform

68. At the 624th meeting a draft resolution submitted by Bolivia, Cuba and Mexico (A/C.2/L.435), later joined by Venezuela (A/C.2/L.435/Add.1), was before the Committee. A statement of the financial implications of the draft resolution was submitted by the Secretary-General (A/C.2/L.435/Add.2). At its 635th meeting the Committee began consideration of the draft resolution in a revised form (A/C.2/L.435/Rev.1), which read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

- "Recalling its resolutions 401 (V) of 20 November 1950, 524 (VI) of 12 January 1952, 625 A (VII) of 21 December 1952, and 826 (IX) of 11 December 1954, and Economic and Social Council resolutions 370 (XIII) of 7 September 1951, 512 C (XVII) of 30 April 1954, 649 B (XXIII) of 2 May 1957 and 712 (XXVII) of 17 April 1959 on agrarian reform,
- "Recognizing the importance to certain underdeveloped countries of the transformation of their agrarian structure, in order:
- " (\underline{a}) To improve the combination of the factors of production, the mobility of labour and the technical skills of the rural population, thus raising the level of agricultural productivity,
- "(b) To secure a more satisfactory distribution of agricultural income and to raise levels of consumption and saving among rural inhabitants,
- "(c) To create and extend the domestic market for various industrial and agricultural products,
- "(d) To achieve the conditions necessary for industrial development, the diversification of agriculture and the balanced integration of industry with agriculture,
- "Noting that certain countries are at present carrying out different programmes of agrarian reform tending towards achievement of the abovementioned objectives,
- "Recalling also paragraph 3 of Economic and Social Council resolution 712 (XXVII), which requests the Secretary-General to prepare the report on the progress of land reform for the Council in 1962 along the lines of the prospectus contained in paragraph 57 of the report submitted at the twenty-seventh session, taking into consideration the sources of information listed in paragraphs 59 and 60 of the report and the views which Members may express in the Council and the General Assembly,
- "1. Declares that it will continue to support Member States which are carrying out their agrarian reform in conformity with the resolutions of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council;
- *2. Requests the Secretary-General, the regional economic commissions, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and the other organs and agencies of the United Nations, in consultation with Member States:
- "(a) To consider the best ways in which the United Nations can continue to give increasingly effective support to the land reform programmes put into operation by its Members;
- "(b) To report to the Economic and Social Council at its session in 1962 on the measures taken by the United Nations to assist Member States in carrying out their land reform programmes, and requests the Council in turn to report to the General Assembly at its seventeenth session;
- "3. Recommends that the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development give renewed atten-

- tion to these programmes and, in conformity with paragraph 4 of resolution 826 (IX), 'give sympathetic consideration to loan applications from underdeveloped countries for development projects which are designed to implement their programmes of agrarian reform, including projects designed to bring new lands under agricultural cultivation, and invites the Bank, consistent with its maintenance as a self-supporting entity, to consider making any such loans on terms of interest and amortization designed to place the smallest feasible burden on the borrowing countries';
- "4. Reiterates the hope that, in accordance with paragraph 5 of resolution 826 (IX), 'high priority will be given' by the Technical Assistance Board and the other organs and agencies concerned 'to requests for United Nations technical assistance for the purpose of studying or carrying out land reform programmes';
- "5. Expresses the hope that the Special Fund, together with any new organs which may be set up by the United Nations or any of its agencies, will, in the spirit of the present resolution and of earlier resolutions on the same subject, offer the greatest financial support possible, on the most favourable terms compatible with their resources, to projects connected with the execution of agrarian reform programmes by countries members of such organizations;
- "6. Further requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with Member States and the abovementioned organizations, to examine the results of the land reform programmes in the under-developed countries in the light of the reports submitted by Member States, and the effects which the programmes have had on the economic development of those countries, and to report to the General Assembly at its seventeenth session, making appropriate recommendations, and to the Economic and Social Council in 1962."
- 69. The sponsors made the following changes in the text of the draft resolution before discussion in the Committee began:
- (\underline{a}) Operative paragraph 1 was revised to read as follows:
 - "Declares that it will continue to support the programmes of agrarian reform which Member States are carrying out in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and the resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council";
- (b) In operative paragraph 2 (b), after the words "land reform programmes" the following words were inserted: "and to improve such assistance, including the relevant comments and analyses,";
- (c) In operative paragraph 5, the words "financial support possible" were replaced by "possible assistance".
- 70. In the light of the discussion, during which various suggestions were made, the sponsors agreed to the following additional modifications:
- (a) In sub-paragraph (a) of the second preambular paragraph, the words "land distribution," were added after the words "To improve";

- (b) In the introductory clause of operative paragraph 2, the words "in consultation with" were inserted before the words "the regional economic commissions"; and the words "in consultation with Member States" were changed to read "as well as with the Governments of Member States";
- (\underline{c}) Operative paragraph 2 (\underline{b}) was revised to read as follows:

"To report to the Economic and Social Council in 1962 on possible improvements in such support, including the relevant comments and analyses, and requests the Council in turn to report to the General Assembly at its seventeenth session";

(d) In operative paragraph 3, the quotation at the end of the paragraph was deleted and the paragraph was revised to read as follows:

"Recommends that the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development give renewed attention to these programmes, in conformity with paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 826 (IX)";

- (e) In operative paragraph 4, the words "Draws the attention of Member States to the possibility of requesting technical assistance in carrying out their agrarian reform programmes and" were inserted at the beginning, and the words "by the Technical Assistance Board and other organs and agencies concerned" were deleted;
- (f) In operative paragraph 5, the words "offer the greatest possible assistance" were changed to "give as much assistance as possible";
- (g) In operative paragraph 6, the phrase "making appropriate recommendations, and to the Economic and Social Council in 1962" was replaced by the following: "along the lines of the prospectus referred to in Economic and Social Council resolution 712 (XXVII), by formulating the appropriate recommendations and observations, and to the Economic and Social Council in 1962."
- 71. The representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics proposed the deletion of the words "along the lines of the prospectus referred to in Economic and Social Council resolution 712 (XXVII)" in operative paragraph 6.
- 72. The Committee then voted on the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.435/Rev.1), as amended by the sponsors, and on the USSR amendment, as follows:

The USSR amendment was rejected by 30 votes to 9, with 34 abstentions.

The revised draft resolution, as amended by the sponsors, was adopted by 72 votes to none, with 1 abstention.

- 73. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution VII (see paragraph 114 below).
 - (h) Industrial development banks and corporations
- 74. The draft resolution submitted by Ceylon, the Federation of Malaya, Haiti, Iran, Liberia, Mexico, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey and the United States of America (A/C.2/L.438) was received by the Committee at its 624th meeting.

- 75. The draft resolution read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolution 1318 (XIII),

"Taking into account the need for mobilizing additional capital for the economic development of the under-developed countries,

"Noting that the thirteenth annual report of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development reveals the useful role which development banks and corporations in the under-developed countries can play in mobilizing domestic savings as well as in encouraging the flow of foreign capital, public and private, for industrial, mining and agricultural development,

"Noting further the encouraging progress that has been made in a substantial number of underdeveloped countries by establishing and utilizing industrial development banks and corporations with the valuable help of the International Bank and a number of Governments of Member States in providing technical and financial assistance to many such industrial development banks and corporations,

- "1. Invites the Governments of Member States to consider the advantages of using and encouraging industrial development banks and development corporations in accelerating their economic development;
- "2. Calls upon Member Governments in countries with highly developed economies to co-operate with under-developed countries, as appropriate, in order to encourage the formation and sound growth of industrial development banks and corporations;
- "3. Requests the Secretary-General, in preparing his report for the Economic and Social Council at its twenty-ninth session, requested by General Assembly resolution 1318 (XIII), to take account of the role of industrial development banks and corporations."
- 76. The Committee considered the draft resolution at its 627th and 636th meetings.
- 77. At the 636th meeting, the representative of the Federation of Malaya stated, on behalf of the sponsors, that the following changes which had been suggested were acceptable:
- (a) The phrase "industrial development banks and corporations" was replaced by "industrial development banks and development corporations" in the title, the fourth preambular paragraph and operative paragraphs 2 and 3;
- (b) In operative paragraph 2 the words "Governments in" were deleted, and the word "encourage" was replaced by "assist".
- 78. The Committee adopted the draft resolution (A/C.2/L.438), as amended, by 61 votes to none, with 9 abstentions.
- 79. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution VIII (see paragraph 114 below).

(i) World economic development

80. The draft resolution submitted by Austria, Bolivia, Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Nepal, the Netherlands, Norway, Panama, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.439), later joined by Morocco (A/C.2/L.439/Add.1), Yemen (A/C.2/L.439/Add.2) and Denmark (A/C.2/L.439/Add.4) was received by the Committee at its 624th meeting.

81. The draft resolution read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Considering that the long-term progress of the world presents problems of resources, requirements and production methods, affecting nations in all stages of development and calling for international co-operation and action on the widest possible basis,

"Having regard to the increasing needs of a rapidly growing world population, and the rising social and economic expectations of all peoples.

"Recognizing the urgent necessity of correcting economic and social imbalances existing in the world,

"Noting that the growing pace of industrialization and the rapid advance of science and technology necessitate a fresh approach to the question of the demand for, and the supply of, raw materials and other means of production,

"Believing that the social and economic needs of under-developed countries require a comprehensive approach to the economic problems of the entire world.

"Noting with appreciation the various multilateral and bilateral efforts which have been made towards meeting some of the urgent needs of the underdeveloped countries,

"Noting further that, under Economic and Social Council resolution 741 (XXVIII), the Secretary-General is to report on the techniques of long-term projections,

- "1. Believes that a comprehensive, co-ordinated and continuing study of the above problems is necessary in order that suggestions for possible international action may be considered;
- "2. Requests the Secretary-General to arrange for a preliminary investigation into the methods and techniques to be employed in carrying out such a study;
- "3. Further requests the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and requests the Council to transmit the report, with its comments, to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 82. A statement on the financial implications of the draft resolution was submitted by the Secretary-General (A/C.2/L.439/Add.3).
- 83. At the 637th meeting India, on behalf of the sponsors, made the following changes:
- (a) In the first preambular paragraph, the words "on the widest possible basis" were deleted and the words "the widest" inserted after "calling for";

- (b) In the second preambular paragraph, the words "of all peoples" were deleted, and the words "the rising" replaced by "its rising";
- (c) In the fifth preambular paragraph, the word "entire" was deleted.
- 84. The Committee adopted the draft resolution (A/C.2/L.439 and Add.1,2 and 4), as amended, unanimously.
- 85. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution IX (see paragraph 114 below).
- (j) Development of scientific and technical co-operation and exchange of experience
- 86. The draft resolution submitted by Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia (A/C.2/L.441) was received by the Committee at its 626th meeting.
 - 87. The draft resolution read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolution 1301 (XIII) on measures aimed at the implementation and promotion of peaceful and neighbourly relations among States and its resolution 1260 (XIII) on the co-ordination of the results of scientific research, as well as Economic and Social Council resolution 727 A (XXVIII) on United Nations measures for promoting international exchange of scientific and technical experience,

"Being aware of the importance of international economic co-operation in the strengthening of peaceful relations among nations,

"Recognizing the particular importance of further promotion of mutual exchange of scientific and technical experience for economic development, constant rise of productivity and standards of living of the population in the entire world and particularly in the less developed countries which are in great need of such assistance,

"Appreciating the efforts made and results thus far achieved in different forms of such exchange in the organs of the United Nations, especially the regional economic commissions, and in the specialized agencies,

"Bearing in mind the role and activities of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the field of scientific co-operation,

"Bearing in mind also the desirability of further intensified development of such co-operation, particularly in the field of applied science and industrial technology,

- "1. Recommends the Member States to increase the exchange of scientific and technical experience among themselves by way of bilateral and multilateral agreements or action and calls especially upon the economically and technologically most advanced countries to render their help and support by all possible means to the less developed countries in acquiring scientific and technical knowledge that would make possible an accelerated development and an increase in living standards;
- "2. Calls upon the Governments of Member States to take part, as far as their possibilities permit, in multilateral action undertaken to this end and to take initiatives in embarking upon exchange of scientific and technical experience also on a bilateral basis;

- "3. Requests the Secretary-General to clarify, in consultation with the Director-General of UNESCO, the possibilities of further useful and desirable expansion of international contacts as well as exchange of knowledge and experience in the field of applied science and technology through the United Nations and the specialized agencies, including the development, within the United Nations framework, of appropriate machinery for technical co-operation and dissemination of industrial know-how;
- "4. Requests the Secretary-General to report on this subject to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 88. The Committee considered the draft resolution at its 638th and 639th meetings. Czechoslovakia, on behalf of the sponsors, reported the following changes:
- (a) A reference to Economic and Social Council resolution 740 C (XXVIII) on the economic development of the under-developed countries was inserted at the end of the first preambular paragraph;
- (b) The last part of operative paragraph 3, beginning with the words "through the United Nations...", was modified to read: "through the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, including the adequacy, within the United Nations framework, of machinery for technical co-operation and dissemination of industrial know-how".
- 89. Australia submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.452) by which operative paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 would be replaced by the following text:
 - "1. Emphasizes the value of an increase in the international exchange of scientific and technical experience, where appropriate by way of bilateral and multilateral agreements, and calls especially upon the economically and technically most advanced countries to render their help and support by all possible means to the less developed countries in acquiring scientific and technical knowledge that would make possible an accelerated development and an increase in living standards;
 - "2. Recommends that the Governments of Member States encourage the further exchange of scientific and technical experience and support, as far as possible, international action undertaken to this end;
 - "3. Requests the Secretary-General to consider, in consultation with the Director-General of UNESCO, and in the light of the survey being prepared under resolution 1260 (XIII), the adequacy within the United Nations framework of existing machinery for technical co-operation and for the dissemination of scientific, technical and industrial know-how."
 - 90. At the 639th meeting, the Committee received a revised text (A/C.2/L.441/Rev.1) of the draft resolution which embodied the amendments submitted by Australia and the following further modifications:

- (a) In the third preambular paragraph, the words "and of the importance of a" were inserted after "for economic development";
- (b) In operative paragraph 1, as amended by Australia, the following words were deleted: "where appropriate by way of bilateral and multilateral agreements"; "render their"; and "by all possible means to";
- (c) In operative paragraph 2, as amended by Australia, the words "among countries" were added after "technical experience";
- (d) In operative paragraph 3, as amended by Australia: the words "the Director-General of" were deleted; the words "other appropriate specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency" were inserted after "UNESCO"; and, after the words "resolution 1260 (XIII)", the following was inserted: "the possibilities of further useful and desirable expansion of international contacts as well as exchange of knowledge and experience in the field of applied science and technology and".
- 91. The representative of the United Kingdom proposed that in operative paragraph 4 the word "thirtieth" should be replaced by "thirty-first" and the word "fifteenth" by "sixteenth".
- 92. The Committee adopted the United Kingdom amendment by 20 votes to 17, with 25 abstentions.
- 93. The Committee then adopted the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.441/Rev.1), as amended, unanimously.
- 94. The Committee therefore recommends the adoption of draft resolution X (see paragraph 114 below).
 - (k) Latin American common market
- 95. The draft resolution submitted by Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela (A/C.2/L.442 and Corr.1) was received by the Committee at its 627th meeting.
 - 96. The draft resolution read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,

"Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 679 C (XXVI) in which the Council considers it desirable gradually and progressively to establish a Latin American regional market on multilateral and competitive bases,

"Taking note of resolution 6 (II) of the Trade Committee of the Economic Commission for Latin America, whose report was adopted by the Commission at its eighth session in resolution 168 (VIII), in which the Committee decided 'to intensify efforts conducing to the increase of economic co-operation among the countries of the region, with a view to constituting a Latin American common market', 8

"Considering that the Economic and Social Council at its twenty-eighth session examined the report of the Economic Commission for Latin America and expressed its appreciation of the part the Commission had played in preparing plans for the establishment of a common market in the region, ^{8/} See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, Twenty-eighth Session, Supplement No. 4, annex III.

- "1. Expresses its hope that the common market will be organized in such a way as to help to expand and diversify trade among the Latin American countries and between them and other regions of the world, and to accelerate their national and regional economic development, with a consequent rise in the level of living of their peoples;
- "2. Expresses its appreciation of the work to this end being carried out by the Economic Commission for Latin America;
- "3. Recommends that the Commission continue to assign high priority to work being done in this field."
- 97. At the 638th meeting, Argentina, on behalf of the sponsors, stated that in the third preambular paragraph the word "when" should be inserted after the opening words "Considering that", and the words "and expressed its appreciation" should be replaced by "appreciation was expressed".
- 98. At the 639th meeting, the Committee adopted the draft resolution (A/C.2/L.442 and Corr.1), as orally revised by the sponsors, by 61 votes to none, with 7 abstentions.
- 99. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution XI (see paragraph 114 below).
 - (1) Commission for industrial development
- 100. The draft resolution submitted by Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Ceylon, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, El Salvador, the Federation of Malaya, France, Ghana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Italy, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, the Netherlands, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Panama, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan, Tunisia, the United Arab Republic, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.434) was received by the Committee at its 621st meeting.
 - 101. The draft resolution read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolutions 521 (VI) and 522 (VI) of 12 January 1952 and 1033 (XI) of 26 February 1957, and Economic and Social Council resolutions 461 (XV) of 23 April 1953, 560 (XIX) of 7 April 1955, 597 A (XXI) of 4 May 1956, 618 (XXII) of 6 August 1956, 649 A (XXIII) of 2 May 1957, 674 A (XXV) of 1 May 1958, 709 (XXVII) of 17 April 1959,

"Mindful of the aim expressed in the Preamble of the Charter 'to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples', and of Articles 55 and 56 of the Charter,

"Convinced that:

- "(a) The high rate of growth of population in a certain number of under-developed countries has created a serious disequilibrium between the present level of production of those countries and the needs of their populations,
- "(b) It is urgent to foster the industrial development of under-developed countries so that the rate of growth of their production may attain a permanently higher level which would overtake the rate of increase of their populations,

- "(c) Industrialization will enable the diversification of the economies of under-developed countries and assure a more balanced economic and social structure, and a high rate of economic development.
- "(d) It is important to attain the self-sustaining stage of economic development which involves the maximum reinvestment of the increases of income,

"Recognizing that instability in the foreign exchange earnings of the under-developed countries, due to fluctuations in world commodity prices and in general economic activity in the more advanced countries, makes it particularly important to encourage industrialization as an essential part of development programmes or plans,

"Confident that the acceleration of the industrial development of under-developed countries by diversifying the economic structure of these countries will contribute to the achievement of an expanding world economy,

"Considering that the process of industrial development calls for a wider dissemination of advanced technological knowledge which is not available at present to the needed extent in the under-developed countries,

"Convinced of the need to expand the means of providing advice and assistance by the United Nations to under-developed countries in the planning and execution of their industrial development, to accelerate the process of industrialization and to keep the General Assembly informed of the pace of their industrial growth,

"Recommends that, in accordance with Article 68 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Economic and Social Council, at its twenty-ninth session, give consideration to the prompt establishment of a commission for industrial development."

- 102. The Committee considered this draft resolution at its 640th, 641st and 642nd meetings.
- 103. Afghanistan, Argentina, Chile, Guatemala, Liberia and Spain submitted amendments (A/C.2/L.446) by which:
- (a) The following paragraph would be added between the sixth and seventh paragraphs of the preamble:
 - "Noting with appreciation the activities of the United Nations regional economic commissions in the field of economic growth and industrialization in their respective regions";
- (b) The words "without prejudicing the activities of the regional economic commissions in this connexion" would be added at the end of the operative paragraph.
- 104. At the 640th meeting, the representative of New Zealand proposed orally that the words "a commission for industrial development" in the operative paragraph should be replaced by the words "appropriate institutional machinery".
- 105. Canada submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.454) by which the words "and taking into account the views expressed during the discussion on this question at the present session of the General Assembly" would be added at the end of the operative paragraph following the second six-Power amendment (A/C.2/L.446).

- 106. The representative of Portugal proposed orally that:
- (a) Sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) of the third preambular paragraph should be combined and revised to read as follows:

"The high rate of growth of population in a certain number of under-developed countries requires an acceleration of the industrial development of underdeveloped countries so that the rate of growth of their production may attain a permanently higher level which would overtake the rate of increase of their populations";

- (b) The words "advice and assistance" in the last preambular paragraph should be replaced by the words "advice, information and assistance".
- 107. At the 641st meeting, the representative of Ireland proposed that:
- (a) The word "enable" in sub-paragraph (\underline{c}) of the third preambular paragraph should be replaced by the word "promote";
- (b) The words "appropriate institutional machinery such as" should be inserted in the operative paragraph after the words "the prompt establishment of"; this proposal was submitted as a formal amendment (A/C.2/L.456).
- 108. The representative of Yugoslavia proposed orally that the words "permanently higher level" in sub-paragraph (b) of the third preambular paragraph should be replaced by the words "steadily increasing level".
- 109. Brazil, on behalf of the sponsors, accepted the amendments and other proposals submitted by the six Powers (A/C.2/L.446), Canada (A/C.2/L.454), Portugal and Yugoslavia, as well as the first oral proposal by Ireland.
- 110. Since Ireland had submitted its second proposal as an amendment (A/C.2/L.456), New Zealand did not press its oral proposal.
- 111. The representative of Ceylon, on behalf of the sponsors, stated that the original text of the operative paragraph, as drafted, taken together with the amendment by Canada (A/C.2/L.454)—accepted by the sponsors—reserved to the Economic and Social Council adequate freedom in its consideration of new machinery in the field of industrialization. On the suggestion of the representative of the Netherlands, the representative of Ireland, accepting this interpretation, withdrew his amendment on the understanding that his reasons for so doing would be indicated in the Committee's report on items 30 and 12.
- 112. At the 642nd meeting the Committee adopted the revised draft resolution (A/C.2/L.434/Rev.1) unanimously.
- 113. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution XII (see paragraph 114 below).

Financial implications of draft resolutions IV, VII and IX submitted by the Second Committee in document A/4321

Report of the Fifth Committee

[Original text: English] [3 December 1959]

1. At its 758th meeting, held on 3 December 1959, the Fifth Committee considered the financial implications of draft resolution IV on international measures to assist in offsetting fluctuations in commodity prices, draft resolution VII on agrarian reform and draft resolution IX on world economic development, recommended by the Second Committee in its report (A/4321, paragraph 114). For this purpose, the Fifth Committee had before it the pertinent statements of financial implications (A/C.2/L.435/Add.2, A/C.2/L.437/Rev.1/Add.1, A/C.2/L.439/Add.3) which had been before the Second Committee when that Committee considered the several draft resolutions, a subsequent note by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/812) and a report by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (A/4318).

2. The Fifth Committee decided, without objection, to inform the General Assembly that the adoption of the three draft resolutions cited above would entail expenditures in 1960 not exceeding the amounts noted below:

1960 estimate

Draft resolution IV. International mea-	d States dollars sures to assist in offsetting fluctuations
in commodity prices	13,000
Draft resolution VII. Agrarian reform	10,000
Draft resolution IX. World economic development	25,000

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 846th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted draft resolutions I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, X, XI and XII submitted by the Second Committee (A/4321, para. 114). For the final texts, see resolutions 1420 (XIV), 1421 (XIV), 1422 (XIV), 1423 (XIV), 1424 (XIV), 1425 (XIV), 1426 (XIV), 1427 (XIV), 1428 (XIV), 1429 (XIV), 1430 (XIV) and 1431 (XIV), respectively, below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1420 (XIV). INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the determination of the United Nations, as expressed in its Charter, to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom and, for these ends, to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

Recalling the General Assembly's interest in new forms of international financing for the purpose of accelerating the economic development of underdeveloped countries,

Welcoming the decision in principle taken at the recent annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development to establish an International Development Association as an affiliate of the Bank.

1. Expresses the belief that the new affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development will provide under-developed countries with types of financing which have not hitherto been available from multilateral agencies and which, while stimulating economic development, would tend to ease their balance of payments position;

- 2. Expresses the hope that adequate provisions will be made and appropriate procedures adopted for a close working relationship and effective co-ordination and consultation between the International Development Association and the United Nations;
- 3. Calls attention to the desirability of appropriate relations between the International Development Association and the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, as suitable;
- 4. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the President of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, for communication to the Executive Directors of the Bank, the records of the debates of the General Assembly on this subject at its present session.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1421 (XIV). STRENGTHENING AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE WORLD MARKET AND IMPROVEMENT OF THE TRADE CONDITIONS OF THE ECO-NOMICALLY LESS DEVELOPED COUNTRIES

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and wishing to extend international economic co-operation, to bring about full employment and to foster economic and social progress and development,

Considering that world trade is a natural and reliable factor in the development of peaceful relations between States,

Desiring to promote the development and extension of trade, to ease the exchange of goods and to create the stability and welfare essential for peaceful and friendly relations between nations,

I

- 1. Recommends that all Member States should, individually and jointly, continue their efforts to promote and extend mutually beneficial trade between all States, regardless of their economic systems;
- 2. Reaffirms its belief that international organizations concerned with the regulation and development of international trade should continue to contribute to the extension of multilateral world commerce and should facilitate the expansion of trade between States regardless of their economic systems;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General, taking fully into consideration all the views expressed and proposals submitted on this subject at the present session of the General Assembly, to prepare a report on the ways and means of promoting wider trade cooperation among States, irrespective of their economic systems and stages of development, including, inter alia, the consideration of all the arrangements for such co-operation;
- 4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit this report to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session;

П

- 1. Considers that the United Nations and the specialized agencies concerned should expand the useful work which they are doing in promoting the stabilization of the commodity markets and the development of reciprocally beneficial multilateral trade;
- 2. Considers that it would be desirable to work out, within the United Nations and other appropriate forums, measures to promote the stabilization of the commodity markets and the development of trade between the highly developed and the less developed countries on a reciprocally beneficial and non-discriminatory basis, including, where appropriate, short-, medium- or long-term trade agreements, international commodity agreements and the establishment of international study groups;
- 3. Recommends that the industrially developed and the economically less developed countries should continue to encourage, by means of freely negotiated credit arrangements, the export of machinery and industrial equipment to the less developed countries, without any restriction on the freedom of these countries to buy and sell in the best market.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1422 (XIV). DEVELOPMENT OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INTERNATIONAL COMMODITY PROBLEMS

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1324 (XIII) of 12 December 1958 and noting Economic and Social Council resolution 726 (XXVIII) of 24 July 1959,

Convinced that economic and social progress throughout the world, especially in the under-developed areas, depends largely on a steady increase in international trade,

Bearing in mind that exports of a relatively small number of primary commodities constitute the main source of foreign exchange earnings of many countries, particularly in the under-developed areas,

Considering that excessive fluctuations in commodity prices affect the volume of export receipts and the budgetary resources of many countries, and in the case of the under-developed countries are likely to hamper the sound and stable development of the economy,

Convinced that a policy of economic assistance to the under-developed countries will be more effective if the excessive instability of commodity markets is remedied, and that to seek solutions to this problem should be one of the main concerns of all Member States.

Noting the approval given by the Economic and Social Council to the programme of work of the Commission on International Commodity Trade, including the detailed study of national and international measures to deal with fluctuations in primary commodity markets,

Noting further that the Contracting Parties to the General Assembly on Tariffs and Trade have undertaken a study of the problem of the long-term expansion of trade, and in particular of the exports of countries producing primary commodities,

Considering however that the procedures of multilateral financial assistance do not always enable countries that have suffered from a sharp and sudden drop in the prices of the raw materials they export to overcome rapidly the deficit in their balance of payments and at the same time to carry out their development programmes,

- 1. Appeals anew to the Governments of Member States to continue their efforts to solve the problems relating to commodity production and trade, including, where appropriate, participation in existing international commodity agreements or the negotiation of agreements between the principal producers and the principal consumers of the same product, in their mutual interest, or participation in international study groups;
- 2. Takes note with appreciation of Economic and Social Council resolution 726 (XXVIII) approving the report and programme of work submitted by the Commission on International Commodity Trade (E/3225), and expresses the hope that the Commission in the course of its studies will give careful attention to the types of comprehensive commodity schemes referred to in part I, chapter 3, of the World Economic Survey, 1958 (E/3244);
- 3. Invites the Governments of Member States to extend the greatest possible assistance to the Commission on International Commodity Trade in order to help it carry out its programme of work quickly and effectively;
- 4. Recommends that the regional economic commissions, the specialized agencies concerned, especially the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Contracting Parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the international study groups dealing with commodity problems give particular attention to the problems of countries dependent to a high degree on the export of a small number of primary commodities;
 - 5. Urges the Governments of Member States:
- (a) To contribute to the greatest possible extent, either unilaterally or in the competent international organizations, to the progressive abolition of all such discrimination, quantitative limitations and other restrictive practices as are prejudicial to the sound development of international commodity trade;
- (b) To take into account, in formulating their economic policy, the effect that it may have on the export opportunities of the primary producing countries;
- 6. Requests the Commission on International Commodity Trade to give particular attention, in carrying out its programme of work, to the study of means for giving temporary assistance to countries encountering serious payment difficulties as a result of a sharp and sudden drop in the prices of their raw material exports, with a view to enabling them to take the necessary measures and at the same time continue to carry out their economic development programmes.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959,

1423 (XIV). INTERNATIONAL MEASURES TO ASSIST IN OFFSETTING FLUCTUATIONS IN COMMODITY PRICES

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1324 (XIII) of 12 December 1958 and Economic and Social Council resolution 726 (XXVIII) of 24 July 1959,

Bearing in mind the responsibilities laid upon Member States by the Preamble, by Article 1, paragraph 3, by Article 13, paragraph 1, and by Article 55 of the Charter of the United Nations to promote international co-operation in the economic field, higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress,

Taking into account the harmful potentialities of the widening gap between the levels of per caput income in developed and under-developed countries,

m \underline{Having}}$ examined the report of the Economic and Social Council on international commodity problems (A/4143, chap. II, sect. II) and the report of the Commission on International Commodity Trade on its seventh session (E/3225), particularly paragraph 62 thereof relating to compensatory financing,

Commending the work programme drawn up by the Commission on International Commodity Trade at its seventh session and approved by the Economic and Social Council,

Considering the necessity of devising means to combat large fluctuations in commodity prices when accompanied by a general fall in the price levels of primary commodities and the rising price levels of manufactured goods, and the resulting decline in the terms of trade against the under-developed countries.

Considering that such fluctuations hamper world trade.

Considering further the repercussions of adverse trade balances on the capacity of the under-developed countries to contribute to their own development,

Recognizing the imperative necessity of urgent and effective measures to enable the under-developed countries to initiate and sustain their development programmes at adequate levels,

- 1. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint a group of not more than seven experts to assist the Commission on International Commodity Trade in its consideration of commodity problems by examining the feasibility of establishing machinery, within the framework of the United Nations, designed to assist in offsetting the effects of large fluctuations in commodity prices on balances of payments, with special reference to compensatory financing, and to submit its report and recommendations to the Commission on International Commodity Trade by its ninth session, and requests the Economic and Social Council to comment on and transmit this report to the General Assembly;
- 2. Further requests the Secretary-General to invite the International Monetary Fund and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to participate in the work of the group of experts in a consultative capacity.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1424 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS CAPITAL DEVELOP-MENT FUND

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the determination expressed in the Preamble of the Charter of the United Nations to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

Considering the economic development of the underdeveloped countries as an essential condition for promoting world peace, stability and prosperity,

Mindful that the general problem of the economic development of the under-developed countries concerns, and is of paramount importance to, both developed and under-developed countries.

Considering the importance of using United Nations machinery for financially assisting the acceleration of the economic development of the under-developed countries, especially in the field of their economic and social infrastructure, which is basic to the substantial expansion of production and to the growth of their economies,

Recognizing that the flow of international capital and assistance has not been commensurate with the magnitude, diversity and urgency of the needs of the under-developed countries,

Believing that improved economic conditions of highly developed countries will make it possible for them to provide an additional contribution towards accelerating the economic development of underdeveloped countries,

Bearing in mind the previous resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council on the establishment of a United Nations capital development fund for financing the economic development of the under-developed countries.

- 1. Calls upon Member States to give further consideration to General Assembly resolutions 1317 (XIII) of 12 December 1958 and 1219 (XII), section III, of 14 December 1957 and Economic and Social Council resolution 740 (XXVIII) of 31 July 1959, and to reappraise their positions as regards extending material support for the early establishment of a United Nations capital development fund;
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General to examine, in consultation with the Governments of Member States, ways and means of making further progress towards the early establishment of a United Nations capital development fund;
- 3. Invites the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1425 (XIV). POSSIBILITIES OF INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION IN THE FIELD OF THE DEVELOP-MENT OF THE PETROLEUM INDUSTRY IN THE UNDER-DEVELOPED COUNTRIES

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1319 (XIII) of 12 December 1958 and Economic and Social Council resolutions

711 B (XXVII) of 17 April 1959 and 740 B (XXVIII) of 31 July 1959,

Recalling further General Assembly resolution 626 (VII) of 21 December 1952, which recognized the need for encouraging the under-developed countries in the proper use and exploitation of their natural wealth and resources,

Considering the importance to many under-developed countries of the effective development of their petroleum resources.

Recognizing that the discussions which took place during the symposium on the development of petroleum resources held in New Delhi under the auspices of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, as well as those at the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth sessions of the Economic and Social Council, showed the interest of numerous underdeveloped countries in the development of their petroleum industries.

Noting the action taken by the Economic and Social Council, at its twenty-eighth session, in inviting the Secretary-General to make available particulars of the specific ways in which programmes under the auspices of the United Nations can assist in developing petroleum supplies,

Recalling that the Secretary-General is authorized to include the question of the development of the petroleum industry in the United Nations programmes for the development of under-developed countries with regard to industrialization and energy resources,

- 1. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Economic and Social Council, for its consideration, the various views expressed on this subject, including those relating to financial aspects, during the present session of the General Assembly;
- 2. Expresses the hope that the information to be supplied to the Economic and Social Council by the Secretary-General will enable the Council, as provided by its resolution 740 B (XXVIII), to determine what additional assistance to Governments is called for within the framework of the existing technical assistance and development activities of the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1426 (XIV). AGRARIAN REFORM

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 401 (V) of 20 November 1950, 524 (VI) of 12 January 1952, 625 A (VII) of 21 December 1952 and 826 (IX) of 11 December 1954, and Economic and Social Council resolutions 370 (XIII) of 7 September 1951, 512 C (XVII) of 30 April 1954, 649 B (XXIII) of 2 May 1957 and 712 (XXVII) of 17 April 1959 on agrarian reform,

Recognizing the importance to certain under-developed countries of the transformation of their agrarian structure, in order:

(a) To improve land distribution, the combination of the factors of production, the mobility of labour and the technical skills of the rural population, thus raising the level of agricultural productivity,

- (b) To secure a more satisfactory distribution of agricultural income and to raise levels of consumption and saving among rural inhabitants,
- (c) To create and extend the domestic market for various industrial and agricultural products,
- (\underline{d}) To achieve the conditions necessary for industrial development, the diversification of agriculture and the balanced integration of industry with agriculture,

Noting that certain countries are at present carrying out different programmes of agrarian reform tending towards the achievement of the above-mentioned objectives,

Recalling also paragraph 3 of Economic and Social Council resolution 712 (XXVII), which requests the Secretary-General to prepare the report on the progress of land reform for the Council in 1962 along the lines of the prospectus contained in paragraph 57 of the report submitted at the twenty-seventh session, 9/ taking into consideration the sources of information listed in paragraphs 59 and 60 of the report and the views which Members may express in the Council and the General Assembly,

- 1. Declares that it will continue to support the programmes of agrarian reform which Member States are carrying out in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and the resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council;
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the regional economic commissions, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and the other organs and agencies of the United Nations, as well as with the Governments of Member States:
- (a) To consider the best ways in which the United Nations can continue to give increasingly effective support to the land reform programmes put into operation by its Members;
- (b) To report to the Economic and Social Council in 1962 on possible improvements in such support, including relevant comments and analyses, and requests the Council in turn to report to the General Assembly at its seventeenth session;
- 3. Recommends that the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development give renewed attention to these programmes, in conformity with paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 826 (IX);
- 4. Draws the attention of Member States to the possibility of requesting technical assistance in carrying out their agrarian reform programmes and reiterates the hope that, in accordance with paragraph 5 of resolution 826 (IX), high priority will be given to requests for United Nations technical assistance for the purpose of studying or carrying out land reform programmes;
- 5. Expresses the hope that the Special Fund, together with any new organs which may be set up by the United Nations or any of its agencies, will, in the spirit of the present resolution and of earlier resolutions on the same subject, give as much assistance as possible, on the most favourable terms compatible with their resources, to projects connected with the execution of agrarian reform programmes by countries members of such organizations;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Governments of Member States and the above-mentioned organizations, to examine the results of the land reform programmes in the under-developed countries in the light of the reports submitted by Member States, and the effects which the programmes have had on the economic development of those countries, and to report to the Economic and Social Council in 1962 and to the General Assembly at its seventeenth session, along the lines of the prospectus referred to in Council resolution 712 (XXVII), formulating appropriate recommendations and observations.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1427 (XIV). INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BANKS AND DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONS

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1318 (XIII) of 12 December 1958,

Taking into account the need for mobilizing additional capital for the economic development of the under-developed countries,

Noting that the thirteenth annual report of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (E/3198 and Add.1) reveals the useful role which industrial development banks and development corporations in the under-developed countries can play in mobilizing domestic savings as well as in encouraging the flow of foreign capital—public and private—for industrial, mining and agricultural development,

Noting further the encouraging progress that has been made in a substantial number of under-developed countries by establishing and utilizing industrial development banks and development corporations with the valuable help of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and a number of the Governments of Member States in providing technical and financial assistance to many such banks and corporations,

- 1. Invites the Governments of Member States to consider the advantages of using and encouraging industrial development banks and development corporations in accelerating their economic development;
- 2. Calls upon Member States with highly developed economies to co-operate with under-developed countries, as appropriate, in order to assist the formation and sound growth of industrial development banks and development corporations;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General, in preparing his report for the Economic and Social Council, at its twenty-ninth session, requested by General Assembly resolution 1318 (XIII), to take account of the role of industrial development banks and development corporations.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1428 (XIV). WORLD ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

The General Assembly,

Considering that the long-term progress of the world presents problems of resources, requirements and production methods, affecting nations in all stages of development and calling for the widest international co-operation and action,

Having regard to the increasing needs of a rapidly growing world population, and its rising social and economic expectations,

Recognizing the urgent necessity of correcting economic and social imbalances existing in the world,

Noting that the growing pace of industrialization and the rapid advance of science and technology necessitate a fresh approach to the question of the demand for, and the supply of, raw materials and other means of production,

Believing that the social and economic needs of under-developed countries require a comprehensive approach to the economic problems of the world,

Noting with appreciation the various multilateral and bilateral efforts which have been made towards meeting some of the urgent needs of the underdeveloped countries,

Noting further that, under Economic and Social Council resolution 741 (XXVIII) of 31 July 1959, the Secretary-General is to report on the techniques of long-term economic projections,

- 1. Believes that a comprehensive, co-ordinated and continuing study of the above-mentioned problems is necessary in order that suggestions for possible international action may be considered;
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General to arrange for a preliminary investigation into the methods and techniques to be employed in carrying out such a study;
- 3. Further requests the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and requests the Council to transmit the report, with its comments, to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1429 (XIV). DEVELOPMENT OF SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION AND EXCHANGE OF EXPERIENCE

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1301 (XIII) of 10 December 1958 on measures aimed at the implementation and promotion of peaceful and neighbourly relations among States and its resolution 1260 (XIII) of 14 November 1958 on the co-ordination of the results of scientific research, as well as Economic and Social Council resolutions 727 A (XXVIII) of 27 July 1959 and 740 C (XXVIII) of 31 July 1959 on United Nations measures for promoting the international exchange of scientific and technical experience and on the economic development of under-developed countries, respectively,

Being aware of the importance of international economic co-operation in the strengthening of peaceful relations among nations,

Recognizing the particular importance of further promotion of the mutual exchange of scientific and technical experience for economic development, and the importance of a constant rise of productivity and standards of living of the population in the entire world and particularly in the less developed countries which are in great need of such assistance,

Appreciating the efforts made and the results thus far achieved in different forms of such exchange in the organs of the United Nations, especially the regional economic commissions, and in specialized agencies,

Bearing in mind the role and activities of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the field of scientific co-operation,

Bearing in mind also the desirability of further intensified development of such co-operation, particularly in the field of applied science and industrial technology,

- 1. Emphasizes the value of an increase in the international exchange of scientific and technical experience, and calls especially upon the economically and technically most advanced countries to help and support the less developed countries in acquiring scientific and technical knowledge that would make possible an accelerated development and an increase in living standards;
- 2. Recommends that the Governments of Member States should encourage the further exchange of scientific and technical experience among countries and support, as far as possible, international action undertaken to this end;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General to consider, in consultation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, other appropriate specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, and in the light of the survey being prepared under General Assembly resolution 1260 (XIII), the possibilities of a further useful and desirable expansion of international contacts as well as an exchange of knowledge and experience in the field of applied science and technology, and the adequacy within the United Nations framework of existing machinery for technical co-operation and for the dissemination of scientific, technical and industrial know-how;
- 4. Requests the Secretary-General to report on this subject to the Economic and Social Council at its thirty-first session and to the General Assembly at its sixteenth session.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1430 (XIV). LATIN AMERICAN COMMON MARKET

The General Assembly,

Recalling section I of Economic and Social Council resolution 679 C (XXVI) of 10 July 1958, in which the Council considers it desirable gradually and progressively to establish a Latin American regional market on multilateral and competitive bases,

Taking note of resolution 6 (II) of 19 May 1959 of the Trade Committee of the Economic Commission for Latin America, contained in the Committee's report approved by the Commission in its resolution 168 (VIII) of 22 May 1959, in which the Committee decided to intensify efforts conducive to the increase of economic co-operation among the countries of the region, with a view to constituting a Latin American common market,

Considering that, when the Economic and Social Council, at its twenty-eighth session, examined the report of the Economic Commission for Latin America (E/3246/Rev.2), appreciation was expressed of the part the Commission had played in preparing plans for the establishment of a common market in the region,

- 1. Expresses the hope that the common market will be organized in such a way as to help to expand and diversify trade among the Latin American countries and between them and other regions of the world, and to accelerate their national and regional economic development, with a consequent rise in the level of living of their peoples;
- 2. Expresses its appreciation of the work to this end being carried out by the Economic Commission for Latin America;
- 3. Recommends that the Economic Commission for Latin America should continue to assign high priority to the work being done in this field.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

1431 (XIV). COMMISSION FOR INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 521 (VI) and 522 (VI) of 12 January 1952 and 1033 (XI) of 26 February 1957, and Economic and Social Council resolutions 461 (XV) of 23 April 1953, 560 (XIX) of 7 April 1955, 597 A (XXI) of 4 May 1956, 618 (XXII) of 6 August 1956, 649 A (XXIII) of 2 May 1957, 674 A (XXV) of 1 May 1958 and 709 (XXVII) of 17 April 1959,

Mindful of the aim expressed in the Preamble of the Charter of the United Nations to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples, and of Articles 55 and 56 of the Charter,

Convinced that:

(a) The high rate of growth of population in a certain number of under-developed countries requires an acceleration of the industrial development of under-developed countries so that the rate of growth of their production may attain a steadily increasing level which would overtake the rate of increase in their populations,

- (b) Industrialization will promote the diversification of the economies of under-developed countries and assure a more balanced economic and social structure and a high rate of economic development,
- (c) It is important to attain the self-sustaining stage of economic development which involves the maximum reinvestment of the increases of income,

Recognizing that instability in the foreign exchange earnings of the under-developed countries, due to fluctuations in world commodity prices and in general economic activity in the more advanced countries, makes it particularly important to encourage industrialization as an essential part of development programmes or plans,

Confident that the acceleration of the industrial development of under-developed countries by diversifying the economic structure of these countries will contribute to the achievement of an expanding world economy,

Considering that the process of industrial development calls for a wider dissemination of advanced technological knowledge which is not at present sufficiently available in the under-developed countries,

Noting with appreciation the activities of the United Nations regional economic commissions in the field of economic growth and industrialization in their respective regions,

Convinced of the need to expand the means of providing advice, information and assistance by the United Nations to under-developed countries in the planning and execution of their industrial development, to accelerate the process of industrialization and to keep the General Assembly informed of the pace of their industrial growth,

Recommends that, in accordance with Article 68 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Economic and Social Council, at its twenty-ninth session, give consideration to the prompt establishment of a commission for industrial development, without prejudicing the activities of the regional economic commissions in this connexion, and taking into account the views expressed during the discussion on this question at the present session of the General Assembly.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

Technical assistance in public administration

Provision of operational, executive and administrative personnel: report of the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [14 September 1959]

1. By resolution 1256 (XIII) of 14 November 1958 the General Assembly approved the launching of an experimental programme to provide a new type of technical assistance. The Secretary-General was auhorized to make available to Governments, at their request, the services of internationally recruited experts to perform duties of operational, executive or administrative character as temporary members of the public services of the countries concerned. He was also authorized to subsidize, to the extent necessary, the costs involved in the employment of such experts. The programme was to be conducted on a modest scale, without increase in administrative costs and in full co-operation with the specialized agencies. This interim report on the progress of the experiment is submitted in compliance with the above-mentioned resolution.

Π

- 2. It will be useful at the outset to recall, briefly, the origin of the programme and the consultations and discussions which preceded its acceptance by the General Assembly.
- 3. As initially organized, the United Nations technical assistance in the field of public administration took the form of the provision of fellowships, the establishment of training centres and the appointment of experts to assist Governments in an advisory capacity. Before long, however, it became apparent that these forms of assistance did not fully meet the requirements of many of the under-developed countries, especially those which had recently acquired independence and were faced with a grave shortage of the trained personnel necessary to run their administrative machinery. For such countries advisers alone were not enough. They needed officers actually to perform the necessary operational and executive functions until local personnel could be trained sufficiently to take over. It was to meet these special needs that the Secretary-General presented to the Economic and Social Council, at its twenty-fourth session in July 1957, his proposals for the establishment of an "international administrative service".1/ As desired by the Council, the proposals were transmitted to Member Governments and to the specialized agencies for their comments. At the twenty-sixth session of the Council in 1958, the Secretary-General presented a report analysing the comments received from fifty-seven Governments and seven specialized agencies. 2/ These comments showed that there was overwhelming support for the basic principle that technical assistance should be made available for the performance of operational and executive functions to the countries which needed assistance in this form. The Secretary-General's proposals, clarified and modified in the light of the many valuable and constructive suggestions contained in the comments received from Member Governments, were again fully discussed in the Technical Assistance Committee (TAC) and the Council, which adopted a resolution recommending the introduction of this new type of technical assistance "on a limited and experimental basis" (resolution 681 (XXVI)). The proposals were subsequently reviewed in all their aspects by the Second and Fifth Committees of the General Assembly, whose final approval was recorded in the form of resolution 1256 (XIII) already mentioned.

4. The discussions at all these stages showed that a small number of Member States thought it constitutionally improper that executive or administrative functions should be performed in any country by persons who were not nationals of that country and that a few others felt that aid in the performance of such functions might be given within the framework of the existing programmes. It was clear, however, that a great majority of the Member States were wholly in favour of separate and supplemental arrangements for giving this type of assistance.

III

- 5. Within the Secretariat, the responsibility for the experimental programme for the provision of operational, executive and administrative personnel (conveniently referred to as OPEX) was vested at first in the Technical Assistance Administration. With the Secretariat reorganization which became effective on 1 February 1959, the responsibility for the over-all policy and co-ordination was transferred to the newly created Office for Public Administration, the necessary operational and administrative support being given by the Bureau of Technical Assistance Operations in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs. In view of the importance of the programme, however, it has throughout been conducted under the direct, continuous and personal supervision of the Secretary-General.
- 6. Steps were taken immediately after the passage of General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII) to draw the attention of the Governments participating in the technical assistance programmes to the possibility which was now open of securing qualified personnel for the discharge of operational and executive functions. The immediate response showed that there was keen and wide interest in taking advantage of the new programme and that the number of requests would far exceed the number of appointments permissible with the resources made available.
- 7. In the case of many Governments, however, the process of clarifying the full implications of the re- lationships between the United Nations, the requesting Governments and the officer whose services were to be supplied under the OPEX programme took a longer time than had been hoped. Personal discussions and exchange of letters were found necessary in a few cases to remove all possible doubts in the minds of the requesting Governments in regard to the interpretation of the provisions relating to the minimun privileges and immunities which were considered necessary to attract well qualified persons to accept service under the OPEX programme. Though these matters did not at any stage present any real difficulty, they did cause a certain amount of delay in the formulation and presentation of requests.

- 8. Some time-consuming correspondence also became necessary in a few cases for clarification of the requests received, for ensuring that the functions to be performed would be truly operational and executive, and for ascertaining precisely the contribution the requesting Governments were prepared to make in the form of salaries, allowances and other privileges and facilities.
- 9. Knowing that the limited scale of the OPEX programme would enable the United Nations to meet only a part of their needs for operational and executive personnel, several Governments found it necessary to review their requirements in order to select from a wide range of possibilities the requests which they should press with special emphasis. This also added to the delay in the presentation of requests.
- 10. It would, of course, have been possible to accelerate the implementation of the programme by accepting and acting upon the requests from Governments in the order in which they were received. For obvious reasons, however, the adoption of such a course would have been unfair to Governments who had had to delay the presentation of their requests for the reasons already mentioned. Indeed the Secretary-General felt bound to move slowly at first and to have a wider range of selection both among countries and among posts so as to ensure that, even at the experimental stage, the benefit of this new programme would be distributed with due regard to equity and priority of needs. The Secretary-General is confident that, even at the cost of some delay and failure to utilize in full the resources available in the current year, the care exercised by the Governments concerned in the formulation and presentation of their requests and the policy of deliberation adopted by the United Nations Secretariat will ensure that the experimental programme will have the fairest possible trial and the best possible results.

IV

11. It was apparent from the very beginning that the demand for OPEX assistance would far exceed the supply permissible at the experimental stage of the programme. This expectation was more than amply confirmed as the weeks went on and the number of requests mounted. By 10 September 1959 a total of 106 requests had been received from as many as thirty countries. It has been confirmed in several instances that many more requests would have been received but for the fact that Governments were aware that the programme had been expressly sanctioned as an experiment "on a modest scale". Some Governments, knowing that they were rather late in presenting their requests during 1959, have expressed the hope that the requests would be met in 1960.

- 12. Somewhat more detailed information relating to the number and nature of requests received is set out in annex III. Although it was considered unnecessary and perhaps also inappropriate to mention all the countries which had asked for OPEX assistance and to specify the requests they had made, the variety and range covered by the requests cited furnish ample evidence that the need for operational and executive personnel is wide-spread, though the particular sectors in which it is most acutely felt may vary from country to country. Owing to linguistic difficulties, it is difficult sometimes to translate accurately the title and description of the post as used in the requesting country. It should be noted, however, that care has been taken in each case to ensure that the duties to be performed by the officers asked for are truly operational and description of the posts as used in the requesting taken to ensure, as contemplated by General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII), that such duties should include the training of nationals to assume as early as possible the responsibilities temporarily assigned to the OPEX
- 13. The policy adopted in the selection of the requests to be taken up for action has already been explained in the preceding section. In effect the Secretary-General had to select from among the large number of requests received a small group of "possibles" and, out of these, a still smaller group of "probables". It was realized that some delays, difficulties or "casualties" are inevitable in the field of technical assistance recruitment. Even the OPEX programme has its share of these. For example, one OPEX officer unfortunately died soon after he had taken up his duties. In another instance the appointment did not materialize because of budgetary difficulties experienced by the Government concerned. In a third case, the officer nominated by the United Nations and accepted by the requesting Government had to decline the offer because he had, in the meantime, accepted a long-term contract under another employer. To allow for such unforeseen contingencies it was thought desirable to continue recruitment action in respect of a number of posts slightly in excess of twenty-five, but the number of appointments actually made in 1959 will not exceed that figure.
- 14. The present stage reached in the process of recruitment, nomination, acceptance and appointment in each of the cases taken up is set out in annex IV. The Secretary-General is confident that before the end of the current year the full quota of twenty-five OPEX officers will have taken up their duties in the field.
- 15. Two cognate points relating to the OPEX operations might be mentioned here. First, in approving the scheme, the General Assembly had expressly stipulated that the experimental programme should be conducted without any increase in administrative costs. The Secretary-General is happy to confirm that the operation has been conducted solely with the aid of the existing machinery and that there has been no increase in administrative costs, except in such minor matters as postage and cables. Secondly, resolution 1256 (XIII) also provided that whenever any request for OPEX assistance fell within the competence of a specialized agency, no action should be taken without prior consultation and agreement with that agency.

This provision has been strictly adhered to, and the Secretary-General would like to take this opportunity to express his warm appreciation of the co-operation and assistance extended by the specialized agencies in this respect.

- 16. A complete evaluation of the OPEX experiment could hardly have been possible on only a few months' experience, even if implementation of the programme had not been retarded to some extent owing to the circumstances explained earlier. Indeed even General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII) called only for a report "on the progress" of the experiment rather than for a complete evaluation of the results. Nevertheless, some conclusions of importance have already emerged.
- 17. The fact that there is a significant need in the under-developed countries for operational and executive personnel is clearly established by the number and character of the requests received. That assistance from the United Nations to meet this need would be warmly welcomed by many Governments has also been proved. Indeed the Secretary-General regards it as unfortunate that the possibilities of meeting the expressed needs were so severely restricted.
- 18. It is also clear that the recruitment of well qualified and acceptable experts to meet requests for operational and executive assistance has not presented any serious difficulty. As regards emoluments, working conditions, privileges and immunities, the model agreement devised gives quite adequate protection to the interests of the Governments as well as the OPEX officers. Fears had been expressed in some quarters that highly qualified and competent persons might hesitate to accept assignments where they would have to work under the orders of foreign Governments and as temporary members of their public services. Experience has shown that these fears were unfounded; indeed there is some reason to believe that, to many persons, the opportunity to execute and administer the very measures which they themselves recommend would make an OPEX assignment more attractive than a purely advisory role.
- 19. The only questions which cannot as yet be answered with the full backing of experience are whether the new relationship between the internationally recruited experts and the Governments under whose orders they serve will work smoothly and effectively, and whether, apart from the fact that individual cases of maladjustments due to temperamental and other factors are likely to arise in any system, there is anything in this new relationship that may cause unforeseen difficulties. Nothing has occurred so far to give any cause for apprehension on this score. It is obvious, however, that no firm conclusion can be reached until a sufficient number of OPEX officers have worked in the field for a sufficiently long period.
- 20. In the light of these considerations the Secretary-General made the following specific suggestions at a meeting of TAC during the twenty-eighth session of the Economic and Social Council:
- (a) That the OPEX officers appointed in 1959 on contracts for one year in the first instance may, in all cases where the employing Government so desires, be retained through another year;

- (b) That some increase in the number of appointments be authorized to meet urgent requirements of Governments during 1960;
- (c) That a definitive report, with recommendations as to the future of this service, be presented by the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council at its summer session in 1960.
- 21. The text of the Secretary-General's statement containing these suggestions was circulated to the members of TAC and the Economic and Social Council. 3/
- 22. In the discussions in TAC, the expression of views on behalf of the members participating followed the same pattern as during the discussions, referred to in section II of this report, which preceded the approval of the experimental programme in 1958. Those who were opposed to the OPEX programme on "constitutional" grounds continued to maintain the same attitude. Those who recognized the need for operational and executive assistance but considered it unnecessary to have a separate special programme for the purpose also expressed similar views and deprecated any increase in the scope of the programme before a complete evaluation of the results of the experiment could be made. The majority of members, however, clearly approved the programme and the manner in which it was being implemented and were in favour of allowing adequate time and scope for the experiment to prove itself. A draft resolution in these terms was recommended by TAC and adopted by the Council on 30 July 1959 as resolution 739 (XXVIII).

VΙ

23. Reference may conveniently be made at this stage to the financial implications of the programme. During the discussions preceding the General Assembly's approval in 1958, it had been stated on more than one occasion on behalf of the Secretary-General that it was intended to make about twenty to twentyfive appointments during the experimental stage. Since a part of the emoluments of the OPEX officers is payable by the employing Governments, it was expected that the average financial burden on the United Nations would be of the order of $10,000 per officer per year, and an appropriation of $250,000 was accordingly asked for. During the discussions in the Second Committee, the Advidory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Fifth Committee it was pointed out by some members that the implementation of the new scheme would necessarily involve some delays in recruitment. The sum actually appropriated was therefore reduced to $200,000. In fact, the implementation of the Programme has indeed been much slower than was expected, though to a large extent for reasons different from those which had been anticipated. Since recruitment for a number of posts is still in progress and the precise dates on which the officers recruited will take up their duties cannot be forecast, it is difficult to calculate the total sum which will be spent on the payment of salaries during 1959. Moreover, the expenditure on the provision of an OPEX officer includes in the first year the cost of travel for the officer and his dependents, which varies according to the place of origin and the place of destination. For these reasons the Secretary-General is regretfully unable at this stage to present any firm estimate as regards the sum which will remain unspent out of the allocation of $200,000 for the first year. It may be assumed, however, that the amount will be substantial, as more than half of the appointments will have commenced in the second half of the year and most of them in the last quarter. This fact may perhaps have created an impression in some quarters that with an appropriation of $200,000 for the year 1960 it would be possible for the Secretary-General to make the further appointments which he considers necessary to meet urgent requirements of Governments.

24. Fortunately, it is easier to make reliable estimates of the cost of continuing, throughout the year 1960. all the OPEX officers appointed in 1959 since such employment will be for the full twelve months in each case and no variable elements of travel costs are involved. Annex V sets out a calculation in respect of the eleven cases for which reasonably firm figures are already available. The wide differences in the costs in individual cases are due to the fact that the share of the emoluments of the OPEX officers which is paid by the employing Government varies from country to country. Though this factor introduces some uncertainty in calculations based on averages, these eleven cases, among them, represent a fair sample and justify the conclusion that the United Nations cost of maintaining, through the whole of 1960, all the twentyfive OPEX experts expected to be appinted in 1959 will be significantly higher than $200,000. Some provision will also have to be made for unforeseen demands such as medical treatment, emergency leave travel, etc. It is clear therefore that even a small increase in the size of the experiment, as asked for by the Secretary-General for meeting urgent requirements of Governments, would need a substantially increased appropriation in 1960. The Secretary-General accordingly proposes to present at the appropriate time a request for increased budgetary allocation for this purpose.

Addendum

- 1. In his report to the General Assembly (A/4212)on the provision of operational, executive and administrative personnel to requesting Governments under General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII) of 14 November 1958, the Secretary-General has referred to the recommendations presented by him to the Economic and Social Council at its twenty-eighth session that the experimental OPEX programme be continued for another year and that some increase in the number of appointments be authorized to meet urgent requirements of Governments during 1960. These recommendations were endorsed by the majority of the members of the Economic and Social Council. The object of the present document is to present a more precise picture of the budgetary requirements in 1960.
- 2. As stated in the report (A/4212, paragraph 14), recruitment operations already in hand are designed to provide the full quota of twenty-five OPEX officers before the end of 1959. Efforts are being made to reach this target, and recruitment actions now in process will result in at least twenty OPEX appointments before the end of December 1959 and five more appointments by the end of January 1960.
- 3. Under the terms of the standard agreements with recipient Member Governments for OPEX personnel, the subsidy from programme funds is intended to make up the difference between the (international) salary of the OPEX appointee and the salary paid by the recipient Government to its own officials of corresponding rank. On the basis of experience during 1959, the average annual United Nations subsidy towards salary costs per individual is of the order of $9,000. The travel costs of the OPEX expert and his dependents to and from the duty station and social security costs can be estimated to be of the order of $2,000 in each case.

4. On the basis of these figures, the cost of merely continuing the twenty-five officers in the field up to the end of 1960 would amount to $231,250 as shown below:

(a) Salary (subsidy) costs in respect of 2 officers for a full twelve months (20 × travel costs of these appointments w been met in 1959)	$9,000; rill have	180,000
(b) Salary (subsidy) costs for eleven mor travel costs in respect of the 5 OPEX who would take up duty in January 19	officers
1 0	$
Salaries $(5 \times $8,250) \dots \dots$	41,250
Travel etc. (5 \times $2,000)	10,250
Travel etc. (5 \times $2,000)	10,000
TOTAL	51,250	51,250
	TOTAL	231,250

- 5. The Secretary-General has included a provision of $200,000 for the OPEX programme in his initial estimates for 1960. It will be seen from the foregoing paragraphs that this amount will not be sufficient to cover during 1960 even the twenty-five appointments already made or being processed and that it will not leave the possibility of a small increase in the scope of the experiment as recommended by the Economic and Social Council.
- 6. The Secretary-General would accordingly propose that the amount to be appropriated in 1960 for the OPEX programme should be increased to $300,000. Taking into account possible delays in recruitment, this additional amount would enable the Secretary-General to make some ten more OPEX appointments during 1960. But, having regard to the views expressed by Member Governments in the Economic and Social Council, the Secretary-General would further suggest that the scope of the programme be determined by the actual amounts made available by the General Assembly, without a limit as to the number of appointments.
- 7. In so far as 1959 is concerned, the Secretary-General has explained that, owing in part to the policy of deliberation which it was found desirable to adopt and in part to normal recruitment delays, substantial savings in the amounts appropriated for 1959 are anticipated (A/4212, paragraph 23). By mid-October eleven OPEX officers should be in the field and on the most conservative estimate at least nine more will have taken up their posts by 31 December 1959. The actual requirements in 1959 will amount to about half of the $200,000 appropriated.

Budget estimates of the Technical Assistance Board secretariat for 1960: report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text: English] [12 November 1959]

INTRODUCTION

1. Following the practice of recent years, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered the 1960 budget estimates of the Technical Assistance Board (TAB) secretariat, which have been submitted by the Executive Chairman of TAB in document E/TAC/91. The Advisory Committee welcomes this opportunity of examining these estimates in relation to its review of the administrative budget of the Special Fund and the regular budgets of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), all of which have a close bearing on the administrative and financial arrangements and procedures in respect of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and, therefore, of the TAB secretariat.

GENERAL COMMENTS

- 2. Over the past few years, there have been important developments in the evolution of the TAB secretariat, with particular reference to its field offices. While the basic function of TAB, under the authority of the Economic and Social Council, the Technical Assistance Committee (TAC) and the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC), is the development of a unified technical assistance programme and its co-ordination among the United Nations and the other organizations participating in the programme, there has been a gradual evolution of the practical purposes to which the TAB system of field offices and resident representatives has been applied, particularly in the past year. Thus, in addition to their basic responsibilities related to the development and integration of country programmes of technical assistance, the field offices of TAB have also been used in connexion with the regular programmes of some of the organizations, the Aid to Member States (Participation) programme of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the field activities of IAEA and, occasionally, for the provision of good offices on ad hoc problems in the field. During the past several months, the services of these field offices have also been employed in behalf of the activities of the Special
- 3. The developments described above raise the important question of the further evolution of the field organization of the United Nations family, particularly in respect of economic and social matters. While the existing TAB system has been utilized for various purposes, not limited to those initially envisaged for that system, the future need might be for a field organization where Expanded Programme functions would constitute only one no doubt a significant one of
- 4/ For the Advisory Committee's report on the 1960 budget estimates of the United Nations, see A/4170. The Committee's report on the 1960 budgets of the specialized agencies and the IAEA (A/4257) appears in the annex fascicle relating to agenda item 49. The Committee will report separately on the 1960 administrative budget of the Special Fund.

- several responsibilities. The Advisory Committee has previously drawn attention in this regard to the fact that questions of field organization and arrangements would be a major preoccupation of the United Nations and the agencies in the next few years and to the inadvisability of seeking to meet the field needs of different organizations and programmes through a multiplicity of networks of field offices. 5/In addition to being uneconomical, such a multiplicity of field structures would tend to present a confusing picture of the United Nations system which is, and should be, a united effort towards common and interrelated objectives.
- 4. The Advisory Committee is happy to learn, therefore, that these questions are already engaging the attention of the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the executive heads of the other organizations in the system, and that, as a first step, TAB is undertaking for ACC a factual study of the structure and present responsibilities of the TAB field offices. The Advisory Committee will follow this study with interest; the Committee hopes too that ACC will arrange for similar studies of other existing field structures with a view to the gradual development of more integrated arrangements and organization reflecting the over-all needs of all field programmes.
- 5. Attention might be invited in this context to a subsidiary problem, namely, that of making the most appropriate and economical physical arrangements for the housing and servicing of field offices. The Advisory Committee has touched on this matter in its report on the 1960 budget estimates of the United Nations (see A/4170, paragraphs 71 74).

BUDGETARY SITUATION IN 1959

6. The Advisory Committee is informed that the increase in the responsibilities and work-load of the TAB field offices has resulted in a strain on the existing resources and facilities of those offices and in a tight budgetary situation in the current year. The Committee understands further that certain special steps, such as a more restrictive use of funds provided for travel, supplies and equipment, have been taken in an attempt to meet other essential requirements within the present budget authorization. Nevertheless, as at 30 September 1959, obligations under part I (Headquarters secretariat) and part II (Other joint administrative costs) amounted to $515,472 against an approved budget of $531,000 for the whole year; at the same date, obligations under part III (Field offices) totalled 1,026,903,6 against an approved budget of 1,461,300for the whole year.

ESTIMATES FOR 1960

- 7. The total of the estimates proposed for 1960 amounts to $2,221,100 (net of staff assessment), an increase of $228,800 over the amount approved for 1959, of which $150,000 is to be met by a subvention from the Special Fund. Of the total increase, $200,500 relates to field offices; similarly, the whole of the Special Fund subvention arises in connexion with field offices. The Advisory Committee understands that the major part of the increase in the estimates is a reflection partly of the additional work-load of existing field offices and partly of the need for new field offices.
- 5/See annex fascicle relating to agenda item 49, document A/4172, para. 44.
- $\underline{6}$ /Because of the lag in processing field accounts, this figure may be less than the true amount of obligations at 30 September 1959.

8. The comments below are given under the three parts which make up the total estimates.

Part I. Headquarters secretariat

- 9. The estimates under part I for the Headquarters secretariat amount to a total of $523,000 on a net basis, representing an increase of some $25,000 $19,000 under established posts and $6,000 under common staff costs over the 1959 provision. While the number of established posts remains the same as in 1959 (20 in the Professional and higher categories and 28 in the General Service category), the increase of $19,000 in the monetary provision under that account is due in the main to a decrease in the deduction for turnover of staff, 7/ within-grade increments and the increase in the post adjustment 8/ for Professional and higher-level staff in New York.
- 10. The estimates do not take account of the further adjustment in the salaries of General Service staff in New York. 9/The Advisory Committee trusts, however, that the relatively small additional requirement for this purpose in the TAB secretariat will be met from the provision included in these estimates.

Part II. Other joint administrative costs

11. The Advisory Committee does not desire to offer comment on the estimate of $36,300 (net) under part II in respect of other joint administrative costs.

Part III. Field offices

- 12. The 1960 estimates under part III for field offices amount to $1,661,800 (net of staff assessment), or an increase of $200,500 over the 1959 provision. Of this increase, an amount of $150,000 is to be financed by a subvention from the administrative budget of the Special Fund.
- 13. The manning table proposed for 1960 is compared, by categories of staff, with that approved for 1959 in the following table at right.
- 14. The Advisory Committee understands that the substantial increase in the number of local staff reflects in large part the tendency of host Governments, encouraged by the secretariat, to provide lump-sum grants towards the costs of field offices, in lieu of furnishing local staff in kind. In these circumstances, the increase in the number of such staff shown on the TAB manning table results essentially from the manner

	1960	1959

Director (D-2)	13	9
Principal Officer (D-1)	14	14
Professional (P-5 to P-1)	33	26

GRAND TOTAL	433	240

of presentation and does not give rise to a proportionate increase in the net cost to TAB after account is taken of the additional cash contributions from the host Governments.

- 15. Among the other factors contributing to the increase reflected in the above table is the proposed opening of six new offices 10/ which account for nine international and seventeen local staff members.
- 16. As to the four additional posts at the Director (D-2) level, the Advisory Committee is informed that two of those posts relate to new offices while the other two result from reclassifications, three upward and one downward. The Committee is not entirely satisfied that there have been developments relating to the programme in the past year which would justify increasing the number of posts at the highest level in the field service of TAB from nine to thirteen, especially at a time when the whole field apparatus is under study.
- 17. The increase of some $156,000 in the net money provision for established posts, as between 1959 and 1960, would appear to be accounted for mainly by the additional posts for the new offices and the other adjustments mentioned above, within-grade increments and the fact that the adjustment for turnover of staff is set at slightly more than 3 per cent in the 1960 estimates, as compared with some 4.5 per cent in the 1959 budget.
- 18. As to the monetary provision for other items of costs under part III, the Advisory Committee, while recognizing that the estimates reflect the increased work-load in the field offices (see paragraph 2 above), and without suggesting a formal reduction in the provision requested, believes that some savings would prove possible under such headings as supplies and materials, property and equipment, and contractual and other services.
- 19. The Advisory Committee notes with interest that, according to present forecasts, contributions from host Governments, in cash and by way of local staff and other facilities, 11/2 towards the cost of TAB field offices are estimated at a total amount of $650,950 in 1960 as compared with $558,750 in 1959. The Committee hopes that such contributions will increase further so that the maximum possible resources of the programme may be devoted to direct assistance.

- 20. The arrangement under which host Governments make cash contributions towards the local costs of TAB field offices presents special administrative problems to those officers in connexion with the receipt, disbursement and accounting of the related funds. Somewhat similar problems also arise in respect of the "trust funds" arrangements for the provision of technical assistance against payment. The Advisory Committee has inquired into this matter and finds that, while present procedures and controls are generally satisfactory, they require continuing attention and improvement. The Committee would recall here an earlier comment $\frac{12}{}$ in regard to the unadvisability of incurring obligations against such trust funds before sufficient contributions have been received.
- 21. As regards the proposed subvention of $150,000 from the Special Fund budget, the Advisory Committee understands that, on the basis of a recent survey of the proportion of time and effort devoted by TAB field offices to Special Fund work, the proposed amount would represent a minimum contribution in 1960. The impact of Special Fund activities on the work-load of TAB field offices may be expected to increase for some time, although it is difficult now to forecast the degree of participation of TAB field offices in the supervision and evaluation of projects during their actual execution. The Advisory Committee would agree that it is not essential at this stage to undertake what would be a costly and time-consuming determination of the precise amount of work performed by TAB field offices for the Special Fund.

22. In the light of the foregoing observations, the Advisory Committee would suggest that TAC might wish to approve the 1960 estimates of the TAB secretariat as submitted. In this connexion, the special attention of the Executive Chairman of TAB might be drawn to the comments in paragraphs 10, 16, 18 and 20 above, should TAC concur in those comments.

OTHER MATTERS

23. The Advisory Committee has inquired into the probable effect on the sork-load of the TAB secretariat, both at Headquarters and in the field, of the procedure for two-year programming, which has been adopted by the Economic and Social Council on an experimental basis (resolution 735 (XXVIII)). The Committee understands that while there would be a significant increase in the work-load in the programming year (1960) as a result of the need to cover the two succeeding years, the first year of the programme period (1961) might reflect a slackening of work. On the other hand, under two-year programming, more changes and modifications might become necessary in the programme after its approval. giving rise to additional work on that account. The experience of the next two years would need to be watched and studied closely before any firm conclusions could be drawn as to the administrative and budgetary consequences of the new procedures. It should be emphasized however that, regardless of this considerations, there is adequate need for longerterm programming such as the two-year arrangement.

Report of the Second Committee

[Original text: English] [18 November 1959]

- 1. The General Assembly, at its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, allocated to the Second Committee item 31 of its agenda, entitled:
 - "Programmes of technical assistance:
 - "(a) Report of the Economic and Social Council;
 - "(b) United Nations assistance in public administration: report of the Secretary-General;
 - "(c) Confirmation of the allocation of funds under the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance".
- 2. The present report is concerned with agenda item 31 (\underline{a}) and (\underline{b}) .
- 3. The Committee had before it the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143), chapter III, sections X to XII, and a report by the Secretary-General (A/4212 and Add.1) on technical assistance in public administration. It also received the following draft resolution and amendments:

Under item 31 (a)

(1) Draft resolution submitted by Afghanistan, Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Ceylon, France, Ghana, Haiti, Italy, Liberia, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Philippines, Tunisia, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United States of America and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.413, A/C.2/L.413/Rev.1);

Amendments to the above draft resolution or revised draft resolution submitted by Bulgaria and the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic (A/C.2/L.416); by Burma, Cuba, Libya, Mexico, Morocco and Venezuela (A/C.2/L.418, A/C.2/L.418/Rev.1); by Greece (A/C.2/L.419); and by Cuba (A/C.2/L.424); and a sub-amendment by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (A/C.2/L.421) to the amendment submitted by Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR (A/C.2/L.416).

(2) Draft resolution submitted by Australia, Burma, Ethiopia, the Federation of Malaya, Mexico, Norway and Pakistan (A/C.2/L.415):

Amendments submitted by France (A/C.2/L.420, A/C.2/L.420/Rev.1) to the above draft resolution.

Under item 31 (b)

(3) Draft resolution submitted by Afghanistan, Nepal, Panama and the Sudan (A/C.2/L.414, A/C.2/L.414/Rev.1);

Amendments to the above draft resolution or revised draft resolution submitted by the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic (A/C.2/L.417); by Japan (A/C.2/L.423/; by Argentina, Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Spain, the United Arab Republic and Uruguay (A/C.2/L.425); by Brazil and France (A/C.2/L.426); by Argentina (A/C.2/L.427); and by the United Arab Republic (A/C.2/L.428).

- 4. The Committee devoted eighteen meetings (592nd to 604th, 606th to 608th, 610th and 611th meetings) to the examination of item 31 (a) and (b). The first ten meetings were devoted to the general debate, in which sixty-seven delegations took part. At the 592nd meeting, the Executive Chairman of the Technical Assistance Board and the Commissioner for Technical Assistance made statements (distributed as documents A/C.2/L.410 and A/C.2/L.411); the Director of the Office for Public Administration made a statement at the 593rd meeting.
- I. EXPANDED PROGRAMME OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE
- 5. The draft resolution submitted by Afghanistan, Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Ceylon, France, Ghana, Haiti, Liberia, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Philippines, Tunisia, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United States of America and Yugoslavia (A/C.2/L.413) was received by the Committee at its 601st meeting; Italy joined the sponsors at the 604th meeting.
 - 6. The draft resolution read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,
 - "Taking note of chapter III, section XII, of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143),
 - "Recalling General Assembly resolution 1255 A (XIII) and Economic and Social Council resolutions 222 (IX), 542 B (XVIII), 734 (XXVIII), 735 (XXVIII), 736 (XXVIII) and 737 (XXVIII),
 - "Bearing in mind that the year 1959 marks the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance,
 - "Believing that the Expanded Programme has an important and urgent role to play in the United Nations efforts for the economic and social development of under-developed countries,
 - "Noting with satisfaction the results achieved by the Expanded Programme during its first ten years,
 - "Noting with appreciation that at the Pledging Conference on 8 October 1959 a number of countries expressed their intention of increasing their contributions for 1960,
 - "Regretting, however, that the resources at present envisaged for 1960 are not sufficient even to maintain the present level of operations,
 - "1. Commends the Executive Chairman and the members of the Technical Assistance Board for the effective manner in which the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance is being executed;
 - "2. Takes note of the appraisal made by the Economic and Social Council and its Technical Assistance Committee, together with the Technical Assistance Board and the participating organizations, of administrative arrangements which have the purpose of achieving increased efficiency in the operations of the Expanded Programme;

- "3. Notes also the decision taken by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 735 (XXVIII) to provide greater flexibility and longer range planning in country programming procedures;
- "4. Affirms the desirability of continuing to endeavour to make the fullest possible use of all available contributions consistent with the existing principles and procedures of the Expanded Programme;
- "5. Expresses the hope that Governments will continue to support the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and will so contribute to the Programme that increasing resources will be available:
- (a) To undertake and execute on a sustained basis the tasks laid upon it;
- (b) To devote urgent attention to the compelling needs of newly independent countries and countries in a similar economic and social condition without prejudice to the possibility of further assistance to other under-developed countries."
- 7. The Committee discussed this draft resolution at its 602nd, 603rd, 604th and 606th meetings.
- 8. At the 602nd meeting, Bulgaria and the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.416) by which, in operative paragraph 5, the words "Governments will continue to support the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance" would be replaced by the words "all States desiring to participate in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance will support it". This amendment was discussed at that meeting and at succeeding meetings (see paragraphs 13-18, below).
- 9. At the 603rd meeting, Burma, Cuba, Libya, Mexico, Morocco and Venezuela submitted amendments (A/C.2/L.418) by which:
- (a) After the fifth preambular paragraph, the following two paragraphs would be inserted:
 - "Noting that, in order to ensure more ample and effective results in the future, it would be desirable to obtain larger contributions from participating countries, particularly from those which are highly industrialized,
 - "Believing also that industrial projects and those designed to change the agricultural pattern have an important role to play in the economic development of the under-developed countries";
- (b) In operative paragraph 5, the words "especially the Governments of the highly industrialized countries" would be inserted before the words "will so contribute";
- (c) After sub-paragraph (a) of operative paragraph 5 a new sub-paragraph (b) would be inserted, reading as follows:
 - "To devote the largest possible proportion of the available funds to projects designed to develop and change the pattern of industry and agriculture".
- 10. Also at the 603rd meeting, Greece submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.419) according to which the draft resolution in document A/C.2/L.413 would become part A and the following new text would be added as part B:
 - "The General Assembly,

- "Noting that the technical assistance programmes of the United Nations after ten years of operation have become, thanks to the constantly increasing number of countries actively participating in their execution, programmes of international technical co-operation,
- "1. Considers that, in the present circumstances, the term 'technical co-operation' would more accurately describe the nature of the assistance provided by the United Nations and the specialized agencies under the technical assistance programmes;
- "2. Expresses the wish that the term 'technical assistance' may be replaced by the term 'technical co-operation' to designate both the regular programme of technical assistance and the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, and requests the Economic and Social Council to consider the possibility of such a change and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 11. At the 604th meeting, the sponsors of the six-Power amendments agreed to revise their amendments as follows (A/C.2/L.418/Rev.1):
- (a) After the fifth preambular paragraph, the following two paragraphs would be added:

"Noting that, in order to ensure more ample and effective results in the future, it would be desirable to obtain larger contributions from the participating countries.

- "Believing that industrialization and agricultural development are among the most important aims of the under-developed countries, and that countries in this process of development need increasing technical assistance";
- (b) The introductory clause of operative paragraph 5 would be revised to read as follows:
 - "Expresses the hope that Governments will, in accordance with their financial possibilities, continue to support the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and so contribute to the Programme that increasing resources will be available".
- 12. The sponsors of the eighteen-Power draft resolution accepted the revised six-Power amendments (A/C.2/L.418/Rev.1) and the amendment submitted by Greece (A/C.2/L.419). The revised text of the draft resolution was circulated as document A/C.2/L.413/Rev.1.
- 13. With regard to the amendment submitted by Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR (A/C.2/L.416), the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland submitted a sub-amendment (A/C.2/L.421) which would insert the word "eligible" so that the proposed amendment would read: "all eligible States desiring to participate in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance will support it".
- 14. The representative of Cuba proposed orally that the amendment might be modified to read as follows:
 - "all States which, in accordance with the principles enunciated in the Preamble and Chapter IX of the Charter, in particular Article 55, are able to participate in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, will support it".

- The representative of Cuba later withdrew his oral amendment in response to a statement by the representative of Yugoslavia that the ideas expressed in the amendment submitted by Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR and in the United Kingdom sub-amendment were implied in the original text of the eighteen-Power draft resolution.
- 15. At the 606th meeting, the representative of the United Kingdom withdrew his delegation's sub-amendment (A/C.2/L.421). Cuba submitted a new amendment (A/C.2/L.424), which would reword the introductory clause of operative paragraph 5 as follows:
 - "Expresses the hope that all States which, in a manner compatible with the principles and procedures governing the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, are able to participate in the Programme will support it, and that likewise all participating countries will support the Programme in accordance with their financial possibilities and will so contribute to the Programme that increasing resources will be available".
- 16. The representative of Iraq proposed the following alternative text for the introductory clause of operative paragraph 5 of the eighteen-Power draft resolution:
 - "Expresses the hope that financial support for the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance will continue to be forthcoming so as to make increasing resources available:".
- 17. Although the sponsors of the draft resolution would have accepted either of the alternative amendments by Cuba and Iraq, they preferred to retain their own text (A/C.2/L.413/Rev.1) since Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR were maintaining their amendment (A/C.2/L.416). The amendments by Cuba and Iraq were then withdrawn.
- 18. The Committee voted at its 606th meeting on the amendment submitted by Bulgaria and the Byelorussian SSR (A/C.2/L.416) and on the revised eighteen-Power draft resolution (A/C.2/L.413/Rev.1), as follows:

The amendment was rejected by 34 votes to 10, with 30 abstentions.

Operative paragraph 5 of the draft resolution, which was voted upon separately at the request of Poland, was adopted by 61 votes to none, with 11 abstentions.

The Committee then unanimously adopted parts A and B of the draft resolution.

- 19. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution I (see paragraph 40 below).
- II. UNITED NATIONS REGULAR PROGRAMME OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE
- 20. The draft resolution submitted by Australia, Burma, Ethiopia, the Federation of Malaya, Mexico, Norway and Pakistan (A/C.2/L.415) was received by the Committee at its 601st meeting. It provided that the General Assembly, having considered chapter III, section X, of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143), would note with appreciation the activities of the Secretary-General under the United Nations regular programme of technical assistance.

- 21. At the 603rd meeting, France submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.420) which would add to the draft resolution a second operative paragraph, reading as follows:
 - "Approves the measures taken by the Secretary-General and announced on his behalf by the Commissioner for Technical Assistance with a view to facilitating consideration of the United Nations regular programme by the Technical Assistance Committee."
- 22. At the 606th meeting, France submitted revised amendments (A/C.2/L.420/Rev.1), which would:
 - (a) Add the following paragraph to the preamble: "Recalling its resolution 200 (III),"
 - (b) Add the following paragraph to the operative part:
 - "Notes also the measures taken by the Secretary-General and announced on his behalf by the Commissioner for Technical Assistance with a view to facilitating the consideration of the regular programme by the Economic and Social Council and its Technical Assistance Committee".
- 23. At the 607th meeting, the Committee adopted the French amendments (A/C.2/L.420/Rev.1), by 66 votes to none, with 9 abstentions.
- 24. The Committee then voted as follows on the seven-Power draft resolution (A/C.2/L.415), as amended:

Operative paragraph 1, on which a separate vote was taken at the request of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, was adopted by 68 votes to none, with 7 abstentions.

The draft resolution as a whole, as amended, was adopted unanimously.

25. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution II (see paragraph 40 below).

III. UNITED NATIONS ASSISTANCE IN PUBLIC AD-MINISTRATION

- 26. The draft resolution submitted by Afghanistan, Nepal, Panama and the Sudan (A/C.2/L.414) was received by the Committee at its 601st meeting. It read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,
 - "Recalling its resolution 1256 (XIII),
 - "Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 739 (XXVIII),
 - "Recognizing that the time that has elapsed since the establishment of the experimental programme for the provision of operational, executive and administrative personnel to Governments requesting assistance in this form has been too brief, and the range of the experimental has been too narrow to draw final conclusions,
 - "1, Resolves that the experimental programme started in 1959 should be continued on the basis of General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII) and that the Secretary-General should be allowed adequate scope in the carrying out of the experiment within

- the limits of the resources to be made available for 1960;
- "2. Requests the Secretary-General to present to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session a report analysing in detail the progress and results of the experiment together with recommendations based thereon."
- 27. The Committee discussed this draft resolution at its 602nd, 607th, 608th, 610th and 611th meetings.
- 28. At the 602nd meeting the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.417) whereby the following words in operative paragraph 1: "and that the Secretary-General should be allowed adequate scope in the carrying out of the experiment within the limits of the resources to be made available for 1960", would be replaced by the words: "within the limits of the resources made available for this purpose for 1959".
- 29. At the 606th meeting, additional amendments to this draft resolution were submitted:
- (a) An amendment by Japan (A/C.2/L.423) which would insert the words "and including whatever comments the recipient Governments may wish to make," after the word "experiment" in operative paragraph 2;
- (b) Amendments by Argentina, Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Spain, the United Arab Republic and Uruguay (A/C.2/L.425), which would:
- (i) Insert the following paragraph after the last paragraph of the preamble:
 - "Recalling that several Member States have centres and institutes for training in public administration, created or expanded with the technical assistance of the United Nations";
- (ii) Insert the following new paragraph as operative paragraph 2:
 - "Recommends that, in the recruitment of officials under this programme, the Secretary-General make use, as much as possible, of the services rendered by the above-mentioned centres and institutes for training in public administration".
- 30. Further amendments to this draft resolution were submitted at the 607th meeting:
- (a) Amendments by Brazil and France (A/C.2/L.426), which would:
- (i) Replace the third preambular paragraph by the following text:
 - "Recognizing that only a very small number of qualified persons are at present in service pursuant to resolution 1256 (XIII), that none of them has as yet completed his mission and that, for these reasons, the range of the experiment has thus far been too narrow to justify drawing final conclusions";
- (ii) Add, in operative paragraph 1, the words "in 1960" after the words "should be continued", and delete the last part of the paragraph beginning with the words "and that the Secretary-General should be allowed...";
- (iii) Delete, in operative paragraph 2, the words "progress and".

- (b) Amendments by Argentina (A/C.2/L.427), which would:
- (i) Add the following paragraph at the end of the preamble:

"Noting that the resources made available for the United Nations regular programme of technical assistance and the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance are insufficient to meet the needs reflected in the requests submitted";

(ii) Replace operative paragraph 1 by the following. text:

"Decides that the experimental programme established by resolution 1256 (XIII) shall be continued for a further year, on a payment basis, the cost of the assistance being borne by the requesting States".

- 31. The United Arab Republic submitted an amendment (A/C.2/L.428) at the 608th meeting which would insert, in operative paragraph 2, after the word "experiment" the following phrase: "and in particular the degree of success achieved in the training of nationals to assume as early as possible the responsibilities temporarily assigned to the internationally recruited staff".
- 32. At the 610th meeting, the sponsors of the draft resolution accepted the amendments submitted by Japan (A/C.2/L.423) and by the United Arab Republic (A/C.2/L.428); they also accepted, with the following modifications, the amendments submitted by Argentina, Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Spain, the United Arab Republic and Uruguay (A/C.2/L.425) which would add a final preambular paragraph and a new operative paragraph as paragraph 2:
- (a) In the final preambular paragraph, the words "some of which have been" were inserted after the words "for training in public administration,";
- (b) The new operative paragraph 2 was revised to read as follows:
 - "2. Recommends that, in suggesting to recipient Governments the appointments of qualified officials under the programme, the Secretary-General should make use of all available resources and, as much as possible, of the experts who have been trained in the above-mentioned centres and institutes for public administration".
- 33. The revised four-Power draft resolution (A/C.2/L.414/Rev.1) read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,
 - "Recalling its resolution 1256 (XIII),
 - "Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 739 (XXVIII),

"Recognizing that the time that has elapsed since the establishment of the experimental programme for the provision of operational, executive and administrative personnel to Governments requesting assistance in this form has been too brief, and the range of the experiment has been too narrow to draw final conclusions,

"Recalling that several Member States have centres and institutes for training in public administration, some of which have been created or

- expanded with the technical assistance of the United Nations,
- "1. Resolves that the experimental programme started in 1959 should be continued on the basis of General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII) and that the Secretary-General should be allowed adequate scope in the carrying out of the experiment within the limits of the resources to be made available for 1960;
- "2. Recommends that, in suggesting to recipient Governments the appointments of qualified officials under the programme, the Secretary-General should make use of all available resources and, as much as possible, of the experts who have been trained in the above-mentioned centres and institutes for public administration;
- "3. Requests the Secretary-General to present to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session a report analysing in detail the progress and results of the experiment, including whatever comments the recipient Governments may wish to make, and in particular the degree of success achieved in the training of nationals to assume as early as possible the responsibilities temporarily assigned to the internationally recruited staff, together with recommendations based on this report."
- 34. The representative of Argentina stated that, in the light of the discussion, he wished to withdraw his delegation's amendment (A/C.2/L.427).
- 35. At the 611th meeting, the representative of the Ukrainian SSR withdrew his delegation's amendment (A/C.2/L.417), stating that he would abstain in the voting on the draft resolution.
- 36. At the same meeting, the representatives of Brazil and France modified their amendments (A/C.2/L.426), of which the following were accepted by the sponsors:
- (a) In the third preambular paragraph, replace the words "experimental programme" by the word "experiment", and the words "draw final conclusions" by the words "justify drawing final conclusions";
- (b) Add the words "in 1960" after the words "be continued" in operative paragraph 1.
- 37. In view of the acceptance by the sponsors of the draft resolution of the addition of the words "in 1960" in operative paragraph 1, the representatives of Brazil and France withdrew their amendment to operative paragraph 3, formerly operative paragraph 2 (see paragraph 30 above). They maintained, however, two other amendments as follows:
- (a) A revised amendment to the third preambular paragraph which would insert the words "that, for this reason," after the words "has been too brief, and";
- (b) Their amendment (see paragraph 30) whereby the last part of operative paragraph 1, beginning with the words "and that the Secretary-General should be allowed...", would be deleted.
- 38. The Committee voted at its 611th meeting on the two remaining amendments submitted by Brazil and France and on the revised four-Power draft resolution (A/C.2/L.414/Rev.1), as amended, as follows:

The Committee adopted the first amendment by 25 votes to 24, with 28 abstentions.

The Committee rejected the second amendment by 43 votes to 27, with 9 abstentions.

The Committee adopted the draft resolution, as amended, by 61 votes to none, with 18 abstentions.

39. The Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution III (see paragraph 40 below).

Recommendation of the Second Committee

40. The Second Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolutions:

Letter dated 19 November 1959 from the Chairman of the Fifth Committee to the President of the General Assembly

[Original text: English] [19 November 1959]

- 1. At its 745th and 746th meetings, held on 17 and 18 November 1959, the Fifth Committee considered, in connexion with the first reading of the budget estimates for 1960, 13/the provision to be made under chapter II of section 19 (Public administration) for operational, executive and administrative personnel under General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII) of 14 November 1958. When it considered this question, the Committee was also apprised of the relevant draft resolution (A/4287, draft resolution III) adopted by the Second Committee at its 611th meeting under agenda item 31 (b).
- 2. The Committee decided, by 26 votes to 19, with 20 abstentions, to include under chapter II of section 19 for 1960, subject to the adoption of the draft resolution submitted by the Second Committee, a provision
- 13/Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Supplement No. 5.

- of $300,000. By 36 votes to none, with 28 abstentions, the Committee also approved in first reading, and subject to the adoption of the draft resolution submitted by the Second Committee, a total provision under section 19 for 1960 in the amount of $600,000, comprising $300,000 under chapter I and $300,000 under chapter II.
- 3. It was understood that I would notify you of this action so that the General Assembly could be informed thereof in connexion with its consideration of the draft resolution submitted by the Second Committee. The report of the Fifth Committee on the budget estimates for $1960\frac{14}{}$ will reflect the discussion in the Fifth Committee on this matter.

Report of the Second Committee

[Original text: English] [3 December 1959]

- 1. The General Assembly, at its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, allocated to the Second Committee item 31 of its agenda, entitled:
 - "Programmes of technical assistance:
 - "(a) Report of the Economic and Social Council;
 - "(b) United Nations assistance in public administration: report of the Secretary-General;
- "(c) Confirmation of allocation of funds under the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance".
- 2. As regards item 31 (c), 15/according to General Assembly resolution 831 (IX), section B, 16/the allocation of funds authorized by the Technical Assistance Committee (TAC) to the organizations participating in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance is subject to confirmation by the General Assembly. In the light of this requirement, the Second Committee took the following action at its 640th meeting on 2 December 1959.

- 3. The Committee had before it a memorandum by the Secretary-General (A/C.2/204) containing the text of the draft resolution which TAC, at its 205th meeting on 27 November 1959, had requested should be transmitted to the General Assembly.
- 4. On the Chairman's suggestion, the Second Committee decided to approve without voting the following draft resolution recommended by TAC and transmit it to the General Assembly for final adoption.

Recommendation of the Second Committee

5. The Second Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

CONFIRMATION OF THE ALLOCATION OF FUNDS FOR THE EXPANDED PROGRAMME OF TECH-NICAL ASSISTANCE IN 1960

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 841st plenary meeting, on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted draft resolutions I, II and III submitted by the Second Committee on agenda item 31 (a) and (b) (A/4287, para. 40). For the final text, see resolution 1383 (XIV), 1384 (XIV) and 1385 (XIV) below.

At its 846th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Second Committee on agenda item 31 (\underline{c}) (A/4322, para. 5). For the final text, see resolution 1432 (XIV) below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1383 (XIV). EXPANDED PROGRAMME OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

A

The General Assembly,

Taking note of chapter III, section XII, of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143),

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1255 A (XIII) of 14 November 1958 and Economic and Social Council resolutions 222 (IX) of 14 and 15 August 1949, 542 B II (XVIII) of 29 July 1954, 734 (XXVIII), 735 (XXVIII), 736 (XXVIII) and 737 (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959,

Bearing in mind that the year 1959 marks the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance,

Believing that the Expanded Programme has an important and urgent role to play in the United Nations efforts for the economic and social development of under-developed countries,

Noting with satisfaction the results achieved by the Expanded Programme during its first ten years,

Noting that, in order to ensure more ample and effective results in the future, it would be desirable to obtain larger contributions from the participating countries.

Believing that industrialization and agricultural development are among the most important aims of the under-developed countries, and that countries in this process of development need increasing technical assistance,

Noting with appreciation that, at the United Nations Pledging Conference on the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and the Special Fund on 8 October 1959, a number of countries expressed their intention of increasing their contributions for 1960,

Regretting however that the resources at present envisaged for 1960 are not sufficient even to maintain the present level of operations,

- 1. Commends the Executive Chairman and the members of the Technical Assistance Board for the effective manner in which the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance is being executed;
- 2. Takes note of the appraisal made by the Economic and Social Council and its Technical Assistance Committee, together with the Technical Assistance Board and the participating organizations, of administrative arrangements which have the purpose of achieving increased efficiency in the operations of the Expanded Programme;
- 3. Notes also the decision taken by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 735 (XXVIII) to provide greater flexibility and longer range planning in country programming procedures;
- 4. Affirms the desirability of continuing to endeavour to make the fullest possible use of all available contributions consistent with the existing principles and procedures of the Expanded Programme;
- 5. Expresses the hope that Governments will, in accordance with their financial possibilities, continue to support the Expanded Programme and so contribute to the Programme that increasing resources will be available:
- (a) For undertaking and executing on a sustained basis the tasks laid upon the Programme;
- (b) For devoting urgent attention to the compelling needs of newly independent countries and countries in a similar economic and social condition without prejudice to the possibility of further assistance to other under-developed countries.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

В

The General Assembly,

Noting that the technical assistance programmes of the United Nations after ten years of operation have become, thanks to the constantly increasing number of countries actively participating in their execution, programmes of international technical co-operation,

- 1. Considers that, in the present circumstances, the term "technical co-operation" would more accurately describe the nature of the assistance provided by the United Nations and the specialized agencies under the technical assistance programmes;
- 2. Expresses the wish that the term "technical assistance" may be replaced by the term "technical cooperation" to designate both the United Nations regular programme of technical assistance and the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, and requests the Economic and Social Council to consider the possibility of such a change and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1384 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS REGULAR PROGRAM-ME OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter III, section X, of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143),

Recalling its resolution 200 (III) of 4 December 1948,

- 1. Notes with appreciation the activities of the Secretary-General under the United Nations regular programme of technical assistance;
- 2. Notes also the measures taken by the Secretary-General and announced on his behalf by the Commissioner for Technical Assistance with a view to facilitating the consideration of the regular programme by the Economic and Social Council and its Technical Assistance Committee.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1385 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS ASSISTANCE IN PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1256 (XIII) of 14 November 1958,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 739 (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959.

Recognizing that the time that has elapsed since the establishment of the experiment for the provision of operational, executive and administrative personnel to Governments requesting assistance in this form has been too brief, and that, for this reason, the range of the experiment has been too narrow to justify drawing final conclusions,

Recalling that several Member States have centres and institutes for training in public administration, some of which have been created or expanded with the technical assistance of the United Nations,

- 1. Resolves that the experimental programme started in 1959 should be continued in 1960 on the basis of General Assembly resolution 1256 (XIII), and that the Secretary-General should be allowed adequate scope in the carrying out of the experiment within the limits of the resources to be made available for 1960;
- 2. Recommends that, in suggesting to recipient Governments the appointments of qualified officials under the programme, the Secretary-General should make use of all available resources and, as much as possible, of the experts who have been trained in the above-mentioned centres and institutes for public administration;
- 3. Requests the Secretary-General to present to the Economic and Social Council at its thirtieth session and to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session a report analysing in detail the progress and results of the experiment, including whatever comments the recipient Governments may wish to make, and in particular the degree of success achieved in the training of nationals to assume as early as possible the responsibilities temporarily assigned to the internationally recruited staff, together with recommendations based on this report.

1432 (XIV). CONFIRMATION OF THE ALLOCATION OF FUNDS FOR THE EXPANDED PROGRAMME OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE IN 1960

The General Assembly,

Noting that the Technical Assistance Committee has reviewed and approved the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance for the year 1960,

1. Confirms the allocation of funds authorized by the Technical Assistance Committee to each of the organizations participating in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance from contributions, general resources and local costs assessments, as follows:

Participating organization	Allocation (Equivalent of US Dollars)
United Nations	7,160,753
International Labour Organisation	3,393,374
Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations	8,526,339
United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization	4,860,645
International Civil Aviation Organization	1,370,544
World Health Organization	5,494,936
International Telecommunication Union	384,082
World Meteorological Organization	411,646
International Atomic Energy Agency	638,760
TOTAL	32,241,079

2. Concurs in the Committee's authorization to the Technical Assistance Board to allocate to the participating organizations an undistributed amount of $162,162, not included in the amount shown above, and to make changes in these allocations as may be necessary to provide as far as possible for the full utilization of contributions to the Expanded Programme, provided that such changes shall not in the aggregate exceed 3 per cent of the total amount allocated to the organizations participating in the Expanded Programme.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

Letter of transmittal

Seoul, Korea 1 October 1959

I have the honour to refer to resolution 1304 (XIII) adopted by the General Assembly at its thirteenth session and specifically to operative paragraph 5, which reaffirmed the action taken by the General Assembly at its twelfth session in resolution 1159 (XII) regarding the arrangements and procedures for the completion of the residual responsibilities of the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency and the liquidation of its accounts.

In accordance with these resolutions a report on the progress of the completion activities of the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency is submitted herewith covering the period 1 October 1958 to 30 September 1959. Simultaneous transmittal is being made to the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea.

It is respectfully requested that this report be transmitted to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session.

(Signed) H. E. EASTWOOD

Administrator

The Secretary-General of the United Nations, New York.

Introduction

- 1. At its fifth session the General Assembly, by resolution 410 (V) of 1 December 1950, created the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency (UNKRA) for the purpose of carrying out an ad hoc United Nations programme of economic assistance to the Republic of Korea, which had just suffered grievous damage and destruction as the result of invasion and war.
- 2. From the establishment of UNKRA up to the closing date of the present report at 30 September 1959, resources to the value of $149,274,389 were made available to the Agency for application to its programme in Korea. These resources derived from contributions in cash and in kind received from thirty-four Member States and five non-member States, 1/2 and from miscellaneous income. The major portion of the funds, amounting to $138,909,146, was received in the form of cash contributions, while certain contributions, which were valued at $2.5 million, were received in kind. These latter were made available by UNKRA to the Unified Command for donation to the Korean civilian population in connexion with the relief activities which were carried out under the United Nations Emergency Relief Programme for Korea. A sum in cash amounting to $7,862,764 was derived by UNKRA directly from miscellaneous income sources, and applied toward the projects and the accomplishment of the Agency's assigned mission in Korea.

- 3. Aid activities by UNKRA commenced in Korea in 1951, but the continuation of the military action there during 1951 and 1952 precluded any major Agency reconstruction and rehabilitation effort during that period. Also, related in large part to the continuing military situation, the major portion of the total contributions was received only from late 1952 to 1955. As a result, the implementation of the first major UNKRA programme only became possible during the financial year 1952-1953. This was then followed by other large programmes for the succeeding two financial years 1953-1954 and 1954-1955.
- 4. By 30 June 1957 a large majority of the projects included in the three major programmes had been completed, and almost all of the Agency's available funds had been committed. Further contributions were anticipated only from three Member States and those contributions were already earmarked. Those facts were reported to the General Assembly at its twelfth session.2/ At the same time it was recommended to the Assembly that the Agency's major operational phase should cease at 30 June 1958.3/ In this latter connexion, it was recommended further that an Administrator be appointed after that date to conclude the Agency's residual affairs and carry out the final liquidation of its accounts, which was to be effected by 31 December 1959. At its twelfth session the Assembly accepted the recommendations made by the Agency, and directed by resolution 1159 (XII) of 26 November 1957 that they be carried out. This action was subsequently reaffirmed at the thirteenth session in resolution 1304 (XIII) of 10 December 1958. Following the adoption of resolution 1159 (XII), however, it was found necessary and advisable to extend the operational period for a somewhat longer time, until 15 September 1958, and the Administrator was appointed by the Secretary-General of the United Nations to assume his duties on 16 September 1958.

^{1/} Annex I to the present report presents a statement of Government pledges and contributions to UNKRA as at 30 September 1959.

^{2/} Official Records of the General Assembly, Twelfth Session, Supplement No. 17.

^{3/} Ibid., Twelfth Session, Annexes, agenda item 27, document A/C.2/L.350.

- 5. The Administrator submitted to the General Assembly at its thirteenth session an initial report covering the three months from 1 July to 30 September 1958. That report included details of the closing stage of the Agency's major operational period, subsequent to the concluding date of the final report of the Agent General which had carried the account of UNKRA operations to 30 June 1958. It touched, thus, only briefly upon the commencement of the tasks of the residual activities period.
- 6. The present report, submitted to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session, covers the activities of the Administrator and his staff during the twelve months from 1 October 1958 to 30 September 1959. $^{5/}$ Progress during this period toward the conclusion of the outstanding projects and the solution of the various problems to be resolved prior to the closure of the Agency was not always smooth, nor was it in some cases easily achieved. Exceptional efforts were required almost continuously during the year of all members of the staff, to whom the Administrator takes this opportunity to express his sincere appreciation for their co-operation and devotion to duty. Nevertheless, the Administrator believes that the work of successfully and satisfactorily closing out the residual affairs of the UNKRA programme had progressed sufficiently by 30 September 1959-although some actions are still required beyond that date-for the present report to be presented as a basic, comprehensive, final report on the assigned task of completing the Agency's residual operations. 6/
- 7. As an essential step in preparing for the closure of the UNKRA programme and operations in Korea, a final agreement has been negotiated between the Agency and the Government of the Republic of Korea, which provides for the orderly transfer of the residual hwan funds and accounts of UNKRA to the Government, the acceptance by the latter of the UNKRA projects, the transfer of title by UNKRA to the Government, and the release of UNKRA by the Government from future claims. Certain future responsibilities which the Government agrees to accept are likewise stated. This agreement was signed on 25 September 1958, just prior to the start of this reporting period. I

4/ Ibid., Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 27, document A/3953.

6/ The various actions noted in the present report which still must be taken before 31 December 1959 do not represent—with one exception—major problems in respect of the anticipated closure date of UNKRA.

I/Agreement between UNKRA and the Republic of Korea regarding disposition of residual funds, projects, materials and responsibilities of UNKRA.

- 8. The salient features of the agreement are:
- (a) The establishment of an UNKRA Residual Account into which will be deposited the large hwan funds generated by the UNKRA programme in the form of payment for investment type projects by private endusers. This income to the Republic of Korea Government, which eventually will reach the estimated total of over 22,000 million hwan, will, under the provisions of the agreement, be fully utilizable by the Government for the rehabilitation of the Korean economy consonant with the principles and stipulations of General Assembly resolution 410 (V);
- (b) Arrangements for the continuation of the operations of the UNKRA Small Business Loan Fund. Under this arrangement a revolving fund totalling 1,500 million hwan has been made available for use indefinitely by the Government for loans to small manufacturing businesses;
- (c) Acknowledgement by the Government that UNKRA has fulfilled all its obligations for the completed projects according to the terms of the over-all agreement between UNKRA and the Republic of Korea of 31 May 1954, which defined the general policies and procedures under which the Agency has provided economic assistance to the Republic of Korea, and of the project agreements, firm requests or amendments or revisions thereof relating to those projects. The Government further agreed to undertake the responsibility for any specified projects on which activity might be required at the time of final handover and to carry out prescribed actions with respect thereto. It acknowledged that responsibility for certain UNKRA-initiated projects had been transferred by UNKRA to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and that all Agency obligations with respect thereto were likewise fulfilled:
- (d) Confirmation by UNKRA of the transfer to the Government of full title to all plant, equipment, materials and supplies for Agency-initiated projects, where such title was not vested otherwise in accordance with project agreements, firm requests or amendments or revisions thereof;
- (e) Agreement by the Government that UNKRA had made full and final settlement of all claims in Korea with respect to occupation by UNKRA of lands and buildings, and all services provided by the Government. At the same time, the Government released UNKRA from any future claims with respect thereto;
- (f) Agreement by the Government to ensure that the contribution in materials, equipment and funds made by the United Nations through UNKRA would be utilized only for the purposes and objectives set forth in the agreement between UNKRA and the Republic of Korea of 31 May 1954 or the various project agreements and firm requests of the UNKRA programme;
- (g) Agreement by the Government to furnish the Secretary-General of the United Nations with any reports, information or other data which he may at any time request with respect to any of the UNKRA projects, and likewise to permit a United Nations official designated by him to visit and observe any of the projects.
- 9. Certain annexes which form an integral part of the final agreement, and which relate to the hwan funding of the UNKRA programme and the final status of the projects, were agreed to in principle at the time the agreement was signed. Owing to the continually changing character of the data to be provided in these annexes, they cannot be finalized until shortly before the anticipated closure of the Agency.

^{5/} Details of the UNKRA projects and programmes, other than those directly related to the residual activities of the Administrator during the period covered by the present report, are not given herein. For a full account of UNKRA's operational period and achievements, reference should be made to the annual reports of the Agent General submitted to the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth sessions of the General Assembly (see Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixth Session, Annexes, agenda items 17 and 27, documents A/1935 and Add.1; ibid., Seventh Session, Supplement Nos. 19, 19A and 19B; ibid., Eighth Session, Supplement Nos. 14; ibid., Ninth Session, Supplement No. 16; ibid., Tenth Session, Supplement No. 18; ibid., Eleventh Session, Supplement No. 16; ibid., Twelfth Session, Supplement No. 17; and ibid., Thirteenth Session, Supplement No. 16.

10. The Agency has received excellent co-operation throughout the reporting period from the Government of the Republic of Korea in its efforts to bring the programme to a successful conclusion. That co-operation made the task of completing the outstanding projects and the work related to the closure of the accounts in Korea a good deal easier. It has been fully appreciated by the Administrator and his staff who express their sincere thanks to all those Government officials, project end-users and private persons whose co-operation and active assistance have contributed to the successful closing of the UNKRA operations.

Chapter I

Project activities

INVESTMENT AND GOVERNMENT PROJECTS

11. At the time of the assumption of duties by the Administrator on 16 September 1958, major activity was still required for the completion of seven of the UNKRA projects: fish canneries, kraft paper plant, Pusan auto repair shop, crystalline graphite mill, development of private coal mines, Changhang smelter modernization, and National Medical Centre. In addition, a total of ten other projects in various fields of activity also remained outstanding, but on these only comparatively minor points had to be settled, or technical assistance only was still to be concluded.

12. By 30 September 1959, the closing date of the present report, work had been finished on the fish canneries and the development of private coal mines, and at the National Medical Centre and the crystalline graphite mill except for accessory installations, and was sufficiently well advanced on the kraft paper plant, the Pusan auto repair shop and the Changhang smelter modernization for these three projects to be completed prior to 31 December 1959. All ten projects on which minor activity only was required, except one where technical assistance is still continuing are now considered completed in so far as the Agency's responsibility is concerned. Details of the work done in the completion stage of these various projects and their present status are given below.

Fisheries

13. During the course of the UNKRA $3.6 million fisheries rehabilitation programme, a total of $2 million worth of fisheries operational equipment and supplies, boat-building materials, and ice-plant and fish-market rehabilitation materials, inter alia, were provided through the regular UNKRA fisheries projects. Approximately $216,500 worth of these items, consisting mainly of fifty-six marine diesel engines and accessories, imported for boat-building purposes, remained unsold at the start of the reporting period.

14. Disposal of final items had been slow for a considerable period of time, even before the start of the residual activities period, owing largely to a shortage of funds on the part of the fishermen who could use them. The Government on various occasions had requested UNKRA to permit sale by open auction. However, there still exists a very definite shortage of fishing craft in the Republic of Korea, as well as a need on the part of fishermen for the other operational materials. The Agency, therefore, did not accept this proposal, but remained determined that the equipment should be delivered only to the originally intended users. Finally, in May 1959, after prolonged negotiations an agreement was reached with the Government of the Republic of Korea and the United States Operations Mission to Korea under which disposal of $178,500 worth of the UNKRA equipment would be made to qualified end-users selected through the joint fisheries development project of the Government of the Republic of Korea and the United States Operations Mission, with end-user payments to be deposited in the UNKRA Aid Goods Collections Account. (Two large diesel engines valued at $33,500 were sold prior to the agreement. The remaining material, a small lot of oakum valued at $4,500, was not accepted for use in the joint project and the Agency has given authorization to the Republic of Korea Office of Supply, in this one case, for disposal through open sale, the proceeds to be credited to the UNKRA Aid Goods Collections Account.)

15. Since the establishment of the joint agreement, allocations have proceeded rapidly and by 30 September 1959 end-users had been designated for almost all items. While at that date a few items had still not been disposed of, regular procedures are now in operation for getting them into the hands of the appropriate endusers. The Administrator, therefore, feels that this part of the Agency's programme can be considered to all intents and purposes as satisfactorily concluded.

16. The fish canneries project, on which major activity remained outstanding at the start of the reporting period, had actually reached virtual completion in the spring of 1958, by which time both of the new canneries established under the project, one each at Narodo and Pohang, were ready to operate. Subsequently, however, at the request of the end-users. the Agency decided to provide additional canning machinery which would further improve the export pack operations of these two UNKRA-built plants. The installation of this added canning equipment was completed in October 1958. A delay was later experienced in the delivery of an outstanding stand-by generator to the Pohang plant. However, with the installation of this latter unit in August 1959 the project was completed.

Mining

Coal mining

17. One of the major problems faced at the start of the reporting period was how to accomplish satisfactorily the development of the privately-owned Taebaek coal mine, where inaction on the part of the mine management had seriously delayed work on the project. This mine has an excellent potential and for a considerable length of time, extending from well

[&]amp;/ A grand total of 4,944 projects sites—different mines, schools, factories, housing developments, orphanages and the like—were encompassed by the UNKRA programme. Aid activities had been completed at 4,932 of these as at 30 September 1959. Annex III to the present report shows the location of the UNKRA project sites by Republic of Korea Provinces, and by major project category, together with the completion status as at 30 September 1959.

before the beginning of the residual activities period, continuous and persistent pressure on the end-user to improve performance had been maintained both by the Agency and by the Government of the Republic of Korea. But it was not until January 1959 that results were finally obtained, first, in the appointment of a competent new field director. This was followed by greatly improved operations at the mine, to the extent that by the end of April 1959 development activities were considered advanced sufficiently for the Agency to regard the project as satisfactorily completed. All Agency-imported equipment for the mine, some of which was being held pending the accomplishment of satisfactory development steps, has been released to the end-user. A recent report from the Republic of Korea Mining Bureau, following an inspection of this mine, indicates that a very satisfactory operational situation now exists there.

18. The installation, at the privately-owned Oktong coal mine, of a railcar conveyor loading system for use at the discharge point of the three-and-one-halfmile aerial tramway-which had been installed previously by the Agency, in the spring of 1958—was completed in December 1958, concluding the only other outstanding activity related to the Agency's private coal-mine development projects. Large quantities of coal from this mine are stockpiled at the tramway terminus during the summer months, and rapid loading for movement to consuming areas is necessary during the winter period. The new conveyor, which has a capacity of 225 tons per hour, likewise allows full advantage to be taken of rail coalcars, which are in short supply, whenever they can be made available.

19. Two smaller activities concerned with aid to the Government-owned Dai Han Coal Corporation (DHCC) have also been completed. First, the one remaining technician from the large international coal-mine specialist team which had been provided by the Agency for a period of almost four years to assist DHCC, concluded his assignment in December 1958. This specialist had been continued at DHCC's request beyond the spring of 1958, the concluding date for the team's activities, for the principal purpose of supervising the establishment of a safety organization throughout the end-user's mines following an accident in May 1958 that resulted in the death of thirteen miners. Secondly, equipment deliveries for DHCC were completed-also in December 1958-with the arrival of a coal-preparation plant for the corporation's Eunsong Mine. The installation date of this plant, however-installation is the responsibility of the enduser-is being delayed pending a decision on the cutting of a new adit to the mine, which if carried out will require a change in the location of the plant from the original site selected.

Metal and mineral mining

20. During 1958 difficulties were experienced with the Taechon-ni gold-placer dredge, which had started operations in July 1957, as the result of defects that developed in its power plant. A new power unit was provided—it was installed in October 1958—and was used until repairs were completed in December 1958 on the dredge's old power plant. Some additional machinery failures have occurred since then and the Agency has further assisted the end-user through repairs and necessary replacements. The dredge, however, is in satisfactory operating condition and the Agency now considers the project completed. The technical assistance given by the dredge-master provided by UNKRA, which had been scheduled to end in November 1958, was extended at the request of the end-user until 15 May 1959.

21. Regular operation of the new crystalline (flake) graphite mill established by the Agency at Sihung, Kyonggi Province, began in October 1958 under the guidance of a mining engineer provided by UNKRA as technical adviser. During the ensuing three months processes were improved steadily, and by the end of January 1959 the mill was turning out high-grade flake graphite capable of competing in the world market. Unfortunately, the crystalline graphite which had been produced in Korea prior to the Korean War had not had a good reputation owing to the lack of quality control in production at that time, and had therefore not enjoyed a good market. Largely owing to that fact the development of export sales for the new mill's products has required a much longer time than was originally anticipated. The end-user therefore requested an extension of the services of the technical adviser to assist along this line and to develop additional processes for screening, sizing, classifying, and so forth, which will also enable the end-user to compete in a wider market. This request was considered sound and the technical adviser is being continued through December 1959.

22. One major item for this project, a 350-kilowatt stand-by generator, has not yet been delivered. Upon inspection of the generator ordered, it was found that the manufacturer had failed to meet the specifications, and delivery was therefore delayed. This matter has now been satisfactorily resolved and the generator is "en route" to Korea. Installation will be completed in October 1959 under the guidance of the technical adviser.

23. Work during the past twelve months on one of the Agency's larger undertakings—the modernization of the Republic of Korea's only non-ferrous metal smelter and refinery located at Changhang, Chungchong Namdo—saw the start of operations of the new copper anode furnace, the newly equipped tank house (where copper is electrolytically refined) and of the gold and silver parting plant. In addition, a railcar weighbridge was installed and a new two-mile-long, standard-gauge railroad extension to the smelter from the Korean National Railways line at the town of Changhang was completed. Formerly, all are coming by rail to the smelter had to be unloaded at Changhang and reloaded and transported from there to the smelter by narrow gauge line.

24. Despite these accomplishments, work on the project proceeded at a slower pace than was expected. The smelter, which is located about 150 miles from Seoul, is operated by a quasi-Government corporation that must refer back all matters of importance for decision or authorization to the interested Government ministry under which it operates. This has, in general, considerably lengthened the time required to complete the project. The situation now is that two major components will be completed after 30 September 1959—the ore-dressing mill, which will be ready in October, and the blast furnace charging scheme, which will be finished in early November 1959. It has been found advisable, in consequence, to continue technical assistance by the project officer, the metallurgist, who has been on this project since its start, until the end of December 1959 in order that he may supervise the installation and initial operation of this final equipment provided by UNKRA for the modernization, and provide a minimum of training to the smelter staff on these last units.

- 25. The completed smelter and refinery will have sufficient capacity to process all ores containing gold, silver and copper now produced in South Korea and any conceivable increase in ore output that may be accomplished by mining interests. This expanded capacity will permit some reduction in smelting and refining costs and provide a greater profit to miners, a factor of major importance to Korea's economy, since it will both encourage increased production by mines operating at present and stimulate renewed operation by many smaller mines which are now idle because the margin between operating costs and profits is too small.
- 26. As a matter of interest the Administrator invites the attention of the General Assembly to recent informal discussions which have been held between the Agency and the United States Operations Mission to Korea relative to possible additional development work on this important project by the latter organization following the conclusion of the Agency's activities there. This would include the installation of lead-smelting facilities, which had been earlier considered by the Agency but not included in the project principally because of the time factor. A survey to determine requirements is now under way by USOM-K.

Industry

- 27. In the industries field, two major problems were outstanding at the start of the reporting period: completion of the auto repair shop at Pusan, and development of the kraft paper plant project.
- 28. The Agency included in its programme for the financial year 1954 the construction and equipping of two auto repair shops, one each at Seoul and Pusan, to provide motor rebuilding and auto repair facilities to care for heavier type maintenance of civilian motor vehicles in South Korea. The shop at Seoul was completed in July 1957, but only after the expenditure of considerable extra effort occasioned by difficulties and delays in its completion caused by the lack of managerial capabilities and financing on the part of the end-user.
- 29. Originally the same end-user had been designated by the Government for the shop to be constructed at Pusan, but at the request of the Agency a new enduser for this latter shop was nominated in the spring 1958. Subsequently, unanticipated difficulties were experienced by the new end-user in preparing the site for the shop owing to occupancy of the area by squatters. This problem was settled to the mutual satisfaction of the interested parties, but work did not get under way until September 1958. Owing in part to the late start, foundation work was not completed prior to the coming of winter, and a further delay ensued. Progress since then has also not been as rapid as desired due to a lack of engineering experience on the part of the end-user. Present indications are, however, that construction of the shop can be sufficiently advanced for the installation of equipment to begin in October 1959. Installation will require about six weeks and could be finished before the end of November 1959.

- UNKRA has under contract at present an automotive workshop supervisor who will assist in the work of installing the equipment and, as time permits until mid-December 1959, will provide training instruction to the technicians who are assigned by the end-user to operate the equipment.
- 30. The UNKRA project to expand the existing privately-owned Shinheung paper manufacturing plant to furnish the Republic of Korea with kraft paper production facilities, one of the larger undertakings which remained uncompleted at the start of the reporting period, has continued to encounter difficulties. There have been two major reasons for delay. First, the machinery delivered by the vendor did not meet specifications; as a result, it was necessary both to reorder and to undertake on-the-site corrective work and local fabrication of some items. Secondly, the designated end-user, over a considerable period of time, consistently failed to meet his financial and technical obligations despite continuous urging and pressure by the Agency.
- 31. In the first instance, the corrective action taken understandably resulted in time lost. In that connexion, the agency has, under the contract, made a claim against the vendor, and negotiations are now under way with a view to reaching a settlement. Concerning the second problem, numerous requests were made of the Government by UNKRA for positive action to improve the directorial and managerial staffs of the end-user's company and to add new financial backing. A response to these requests, satisfactory to the Agency, was not received and on 27 August 1958 UNKRA notified the Government that, although reluctantly, it was forced to withdraw from the project and that it would treat and dispose of the undelivered equipment as a salable commodity, unless as the result of any subsequent negotiations a more acceptable method for development of the project could be found.
- 32. Discussions that ensured thereafter led to a plan, which was agreed to by the end-user, whereby the Government, through the agency of the Korean Reconstruction Bank, would temporarily assume operational control of the existing paper-plant facilities, and jointly with UNKRA complete the development of the kraft paper manufacturing project. The Bank would be responsible for the direction and management of the finance and the financial affairs of the end-user. At the same time the Agency, through the medium of the UNKRA paper-plant engineer working on the job, would assume responsibility for the direction and management on the site and within the plant of the development of the project, together with direction of the current production operations of the plant's existing paper-making machinery, until the kraft paper manufacturing facility was completed. An agreement to this effect was signed on 30 April 1959. Preliminary planning required an additional two weeks, but by mid-May 1959 work was under way.
- 33. There have been various difficulties encountered since then which have forced further changes in plans and personnel, but present estimates are that the project can be completed by the end of December 1959. Very considerable effort has been required, and expended, in the implementation of the kraft paper plant project, but the Administrator is convinced this effort will be well rewarded. There is a constantly increasing demand in the Republic of Korea by manufacturers of cement, powdered talc, flake graphite and sugar—and shortly there will be a demand by manufacturers of fertilizer—for high-quality, heavy-duty kraft paper bags. The facility to manufacture kraft paper under development by UNKRA is the only one in South Korea. The estimated annual saving in foreign exchange—which may reach $750,000 a year—alone dictated a maximum effort to make this a successful project, not to mention other beneficial effects to the Korean economy, which will result from increased employment, etc.

34. At the Sam Duk paper plant where, as has been reported previously, initial test operation of UNKRAprovided bond-paper-making machines started in July 1958, work on machinery adjustment and accessory installations carried into December 1958. This was effected under the guidance of the UNKRA paperplant engineer, and by the latter month operation and production had satisfactorily attained established goals. Meanwhile the end-user requested the Agency to provide further assistance to obtain additional spare parts, a number of machines to improve plant performance and, in connexion with the latter, also to furnish technical assistance. The last of this equipment arrived in April 1959 and the major part of the additional installation was completed in June 1959. In August 1959 some further help was given through the purchase of a small quantity of control equipment, which will arrive in October 1959 and will be installed by the end-user.

35. The Sam Duk paper plant has now been operating at capacity on bond paper production since December 1958. There is a ready domestic market for all the paper manufactured and the Agency's objective in originally establishing the project, which was to reduce the need for finished paper imports and concurrently foreign exchange expenditure, is being realized, with the resultant annual saving in foreign exchange estimated at over $250,000.

36. The final agreement between the Government of the Republic of Korea and UNKRA signed on 25 September 19589/ provided that the UNKRA-established revolving Small Business Loan Fund, which had been in operation since August 1953, would continue in operation in the future until the Government of the Republic of Korea decided that it was no longer required, or until it was discontinued for other reasons by the Government in agreement with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. Provision was also made to amalgamate the assets of the UNKRA Mine Loan Fund and the Fisheries Loan Fund with those of the Small Business Loan Fund into one combined fund, which would be operated and administered in accordance with procedures mutually agreed upon between the Government and UNKRA.

37. Consolidation was effected by a separate agreement signed by the Government and UNKRA on 13 March 1959, resulting in a combined fund amounting to 1,262,817,564 hwan. On 24 July 1959, through an amendment to the March 1959 agreement, UNKRA added a further 300 million hwan to the Small Business Loan Fund, with the stipulation that the additional sum be used specifically to finance operational loans to end-users of the Agency's private sector projects. Of the added amount, 150 million hwan was made

- 38. The final loans under the old procedures for the operation of the Small Business Loan Fund were approved in October 1958. The new procedures for the guidance and control of the operation of the consolidation fund were negotiated following the signing of the March 1959 agreement. Applications for loans were received starting in August 1959, and the initial loans from the fund were approved in September 1959.
- 39. The Government of the Republic of Korea has given every indication that it wishes to continue operation of the UNKRA Small Business Loan Fund for an indefinite period in the future. The very substantial help which the Agency was able to provide through this means for the operation, improvement and expansion of Korea's small manufacturing industries during the five years from August 1953 to October 1958 while the Fund operated under the direction of the joint Republic of Korea-UNKRA Small Business Loan Fund Board-during that period a total of 1,779 loans, of which 1,403 were in local currency amounting to 2,274,849,000 hwan and 376 in foreign exchange amounting to $2,116,500 were made to 1,427 separate small businesses-thus can continue to be provided long after the Agency has ceased to exist.
- 40. An action of considerable interest related to the Agency's programme in the industrial field occurred during the reporting period with the signing on 30 April 1959 of final contracts whereby the Government of the Republic of Korea sold the UNKRA-built Mungyong cement plant and Inchon flat glass plant to the privately-owned Korea Cement Manufacturing Company and Hankuk Glass Industry Company, respectively. The sale price for the cement plant was 7,018,827,259 hwan and for the flat glass plant 2,347,146,817 hwan. The Agency's total foreign exchange investments in the two projects, consisting of the costs of the imported materials and technical assistance, amounted to $8,992,030.09 and $3,205,870.86 respectively.
- 41. With respect to the operations of these two plants, it is also interesting to note that during the reporting period the Agency provided additional production machinery and equipment to each which will result in the near future, or has already resulted, in an important increase in plant output.
- 42. At the Mungyong cement plant the main addition consisted of a new cement mill to increase clinkergrinding capacity, provided at a cost of $150,000. Related to the seasonal nature of most construction work in Korea, occasioned by weather conditions, the demand for cement is likewise characterized by regular seasonal fluctuations. The plant has a silo storage capacity of 10,000 metric tons of cement; however, part of the clinker production has to be stockpiled during the period of low demand, while grinding operations must be considerably increased during peak order periods. The plant was originally equipped with two grinding mills that together produced slightly over 20,000 metric tons of finished cement a month. Against this capacity, total orders during peak months approximate 24,000 to 26,000 metric tons. The new mill, which available by the Agency from funds in its current hwan account and which had been advanced from counterpart funds in 1954 but which had not been expended by the Agency. The other 150 million hwan were furnished directly from UNKRA counterpart funds.

was installed in August 1959, has increased clinker-grinding capacity by close to 20,000 metric tons per month, and will allow the plant to meet all orders for cement as received. The end-user has under consideration, also, an increase in the plant's clinker production by the addition of a third kiln with a capacity of 100,000 metric tons, using his own funds. The plant was originally designed and constructed by UNKRA to permit this addition to be made, if found desirable. If the end-user's plan is carried out, the three cement mills which the plant now possesses will have a sufficient combined capacity to handle all clinker which the expanded plant can produce.

43. The Agency has reported previously that the Inchon flat glass plant was designed and constructed with a furnace capacity sufficient to operate three Fourcault glass drawing machines, but that initially only two machines, capable of producing 12 million square feet (6,000 tons) of flat glass annually, were purchased and installed, the provision of the third being dependent upon materialization of a demand for the glass producible. The current Korean demand for sheet glass has now reached that point, and the full output of three machines, which is estimated at a minimum of 18 million square feet annually, or 9,000 metric tons, will be required by the domestic economy. Accordingly, the third machine was purchased by UNKRA during the reporting period, at a cost of $80,000 including accessories. Initial shipments have been delivered to the plant and the remainder will arrive in October 1959. The end-user plans to carry out the installation toward the end of 1959 or in early 1960 during the plant's "cold repair" shut-down.

44. At the instance of the Government of the Republic of Korea, the additions described above were made to both plants through the medium of the Agency's salable commodities programme rather than under the regular development projects. The new equipment was provided, therefore, on a local currency cash basis to the end-users and the value is not included in the total prices for the plants named in the sales contracts executed between the Government and the end-users in April 1959. 10/

Health and welfare

45. Formal dedication ceremonies were held on 2 October 1958 for the new National Medical Centre, established in Seoul, under a joint project of the Government of the Republic of Korea, the Governments of Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and UNKRA. Work on readying the Centre for operation continued during October and November and the first patients were accepted in December 1958. Thereafter there was a steady increase in the number of patients accepted and treated, and for some time now the Centre has been handling an average of approximately 300 in-patients and 200 out-patients daily, which is about the capacity of the hospital's present staff. In the period from December 1958 to August 1959 inclusive, a total of 37,499 patients were handled, of whom 2,620 were admitted as in-patients and 34,879 were out-patients.

46. During the final inspection by UNKRA technicians of the construction work on the Centre, however, certain grave deficiencies in the work done became apparent, which demanded positive corrective action. These deficiencies were of such a character and extent that the Agency considered it necessary to remobilize the forces of the international contractor and to engage the services of a highly reputable engineering firm to direct and supervise the planning and execution of the work of correction. This included the re-arrangement of the power lines throughout almost the entire installation, replacing of the asphalt tile flooring and electrical safety protection in all operating rooms, correction of lead insulation throughout the X-ray facilities, installation of essential ventilating systems in three main buildings, the installation of additional kitchen equipment, construction of adequate refrigeration facilities and other associated construction.

47. By 30 September 1959 this work had been completed, except for the installation of the ventilating systems and the kitchen equipment. The international contractor's force and the supervising engineers have been withdrawn, and installation of the ventilating systems will be done through local contract under the direct supervision of UNKRA project officers. It is expected that this work will be completed by November 1959. Installation of some of the additional titchen equipment will be made in November and December 1959 also under UNKRA supervision, while some which cannot arrive by then will be installed by the Centre's maintenance staff when it is received.

48. The job of correcting these deficiencies has been a troublesome and time-consuming effort, but in the Administrator's opinion an essential requirement for the satisfactory discharge of the Agency's obligations, assumed in the establishment of the project, to deliver to the Government of the Republic of Korea a complete hospital plant, well constructed according to plan, equipped with modern equipment and containing all possible safety protection.

49. During the course of the above correction work the Government requested further assistance toward the construction at the Centre of a separate new Patients' Reception Building, which actual operation of the Centre showed would be a most useful addition to existing facilities. Some imported materials were provided by the Agency, but costs for local materials and the construction of the building were borne by the Government with the construction work being done by local contractors. This building was completed and opened on 12 August 1959.

50. First-phase construction on the Government's project to relocate the National Vaccine Laboratory, on which work began in December 1957 and for which the Agency provided the building materials and supplies, was completed in October 1958. Considerable delay had been experienced in getting this project under way as a result of the failure by the Government to designate the new site for the laboratory. Under a long-range plan the Government intends eventually to remove the existing laboratory's facilities from their present location in a congested section of Seoul to this new site on the outskirts of the city, which will allow future expansion and development. During the reporting period, the Agency at the Government's request made some additional funds available to provide the imported materials required for the construction of a power line into the new site, other electrical equipment, and deep-well pumps to guarantee a satisfactory water supply there. In addition, limited transport equipment was also furnished for use between the new and the existing laboratories, since the latter will continue in use for some considerable time before transfer of all functions can be made.

^{10/} Other materials and technical assistance for plant operation and some equipment for more minor expansion, the costs of which are also not included in the project sale prices, have been provided to the two plants through UNKRA salable commodities projects. For a description of those projects implemented during the reporting period, see paras. 58-60 below.

51. Delay on this project also was experienced with respect to the power-line construction, when technical review by UNKRA of the specifications showed a difference of opinion regarding requirements, between the laboratory and the electric power company on the one hand and UNKRA on the other. These were adjusted, but the last materials for the power line were received in Korea only in July 1959. However, work on the line, which is being done by the power company, will be finished in October 1959, while work on the water supply system, which is being carried out under a local contract by the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs, is also now scheduled for completion by the end of October 1959. Periodic checks have been made, and will continue as feasible, but owing to the long delays in developing both the earlier and the latter features of this project, the Agency considers that with firstphase construction work satisfactorily completed, and the materials for the power and water systems received and handed over, its direct obligations have been fulfilled. The project has, therefore, been designated as completed.

52. Technical assistance to the National Rehabilitation Centre for the Physically Handicapped was continued throughout the period, through the services of a vocational training specialist and a remedial gymnast. Agency plans were to conclude technical aid to the Centre on 30 June 1959; however, the Government strongly requested an extension, and special arrangements have been made to furnish technical help until August 1960 by the transfer of the project, and the UNKRA funds needed for its continuance to that date, to the United Nations Bureau of Technical Assistance Operations, which will provide administration and direction until completion.

Education and housing

- 53. The twenty-one remaining school classrooms which were reported as uncompleted as at 30 June 1958 11/2 were finished during the year. Six of them (at one school) comprise part of a much larger school building still undergoing construction; however, work is sufficiently well advanced on this building for the UNKRA part of the undertaking to be now regarded as satisfactorily accomplished.
- 54. The conclusion of the Agency's classroom construction projects, under which a total of 4,776 classrooms were built by UNKRA throughout South Korea, completed in full the Agency's education programme. Aid vaued at close to $10 million was provided through this programme to assist the Government and private institutions to rebuild and improve educational facilities
- 55. All remaining materials to complete the UNKRA housing construction programme were turned over by the Agency during 1958, through the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs, either to the Korean National Housing Administration or to the Pusan Housing Authority. From time to time during the past year checks were made on the progress of the final units by those authorities, but the Agency's reduced staff did not permit any direct participation in this work, such as had been carried on during the active operational period. As of 30 June 1958, 9,591 units of the 10,073 total included in the programme had been completed, 392 others were under construction and 90 units had not yet been started. By 30 September 1959 the completed total had risen to 9,951 units, and according to estimates given to the Agency by the housing authorities, total finished units will rise to 10,000 by 31 December 1959. Full responsibility for completion of the few outstanding units now rests entirely on the Ministry and the housing authorities referred to above.

SALABLE PROJECTS

- 56. With the close of the Agency's major operational phase and the start of residual activities in 1958, the development of any new UNKRA facility projects was precluded. However, at that time and during the reporting period since, limited sums of uncommitted general funds beyond the amounts estimated as required to conclude the outstanding projects, for administration and the Agency's work in general, have become available for allocation to the aid programme in furtherance of UNKRA's assigned mission. In this connexion, authorization had been previously given by the Advisory Committee of the Agency to use, discriminately, such surplus funds through the mechanism of salable projects.
- 57. Since the assumption of duties by the Administrator certain salable projects, which in the opinion of the Administrator and his staff would add further to the benefits already accruing to the Korean economy from the UNKRA programme, have been implemented in agreement with the Government of the Republic of Korea. These projects, which numbered seventeen by 30 September 1959, with an over-all allocation of close to $820,000, were established to meet the specific requirements of UNKRA investment project end-users: for technical assistance, for items or commodities critical to the continued operation of the end-user's plant or, in the cases of the Mungyong cement plant and the Inchon flat glass plant, to provide additional equipment for the expansion of existing facilities dictated by increased demands for their products. It is emphasized that each of these seventeen projects provided only for the importation of specific commodities or services required by the UNKRA enduser designated in each project to receive the materials.
- 58. Specifically, two of these salable projects provided for continuation of technical assistance at the Mungyong cement plant and the Inchon flat glass plant, at which the technical assistance previously furnished through the regular development projects came to an end on 31 August and 30 September 1958, respectively. Thus, five technicians were furnished to the cement plant until 28 February 1959 and four to the flat glass plant until 31 March 1959, to continue guidance in plant operations and the training of Korean technicians. Through subsequent salable projects, technical assistance by four specialists was extended at the cement plant to 31 August 1959, while at the flat glass plant the services of two technicians have been extended until 31 March 1960, with further provision for one of them to remain until 30 September 1960.

- 59. The Mungyong cement plant has also been provided, as salable items, with grinding bodies for the cement mills, kraft paper for manufacture of cement bags, and an additional cement-grinding mill. The latter substantially increased clinker-grinding capacity and will materially aid the plant in filling orders for cement during peak demand periods. 12/
- 60. The Inchon flat glass plant was supplied with additional refractories as salables, primarily for use in the scheduled regular "cold repair" of the furnace (glass-melting tank), which will be done at the end of 1959 or early in 1960. Some of these refractories were used in July 1959 to build a second day tank in the separate figured and wire-reinforced glass manufacturing unit, doubling the production of that unit from five to ten metric tons a day. A third Fourcault machine to increase the plant's production of sheet glass, together with some additional glass polishing and grinding machinery, have similarly been provided. 13/ The company plans to install this machine during the "cold repair" period, utilizing the services of the Agency-provided glass technicians noted above to supervise this highly technical operation.
- 61. Spare parts, some accessory equipment and materials have likewise been furnished to the Dai Han Coal Corporation as salables. They consist principally of items for use on or in conjunction with machinery previously supplied to the Corporation's mines through the UNKRA coal-mine rehabilitation projects. Similarly, certain materials have been furnished to the privately-operated Kangwon and Oktong coal mines.
- 62. A salable project implemented during the reporting period supplied the kraft paper required to manufacture in Korea heavy-duty bags meeting export specifications, which were needed to package tale produced at the tale grinding plant established by UNKRA near Chungju. This plant had a firm export order for 6,000 metric tons of refined tale, for which suitable containers were not otherwise available. Furthermore, kraft paper and operational materials not procurable in Korea were furnished to the Sihung crystalline graphite mill, and a small quantity of chemicals and felts plus a fork-lift truck were procured for the Sam Duk Paper Manufacturing Company, all as salable items.
- 63. In addition to the obvious benefits resulting from supplying the above equipment, materials and technical services, another important benefit has resulted in that proceeds derived from their sale were immediately deposited in the UNKRA Aid Goods Collections Account, thus constituting a counteracting, stabilizing factor against releases made from the UNKRA Counterpart Fund for completion work on other investment projects. The attention of the Assembly is further invited, in this respect, to the specific agreement reached between the Government of the Republic of Korea and the Agency that no releases will be made from the UNKRA Counterpart Fund to finance any purchase made by an end-user of any item provided under these Agency salable projects.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

- 64. The provision of technical and specialist assistance has constituted an important part of the UNKRA programme since the start of Agency activities in Korea. In line therewith, technical and specialist aid was provided during the reporting period, at the request of certain of the investment project endusers and the Government of the Republic of Korea, to continue the training of Korean technical staff and to improve the operation of facilities at completed UNKRA projects. Additionally, it was required as an essential element in connexion with the final development and completion work on various of the Agency's residual projects.
- 65. Included was the technical assistance providedand still under way-to the Changhang smelter and refinery by the project officer, who is a metallurgist, and to the Sihung crystalline graphite mill by a mining engineer adviser. Technical help was furnished by the UNKRA paper-plant consultant to the Sam Duk paper plant, and by a dredge-master to the Taechon-ni gold placer dredge, both of whom completed their assignments during the reporting period. Technical assistance was supplied as well to complete the development of the Pohang fish cannery, to help conclude the outstanding coal-mine projects, both private and government, and in connexion with the National Vaccine Laboratory and the National Medical Centre, Agencyfurnished technical assistance is playing a major role in the development of the Shinheung kraft paper plant project, which is now under way.
- 66. At the specific request of the project end-users, specialist assistance was continued to the Inchon flat glass plant and the Mungyong cement plant ¹⁴/and, at the Government's request, to the National Rehabilitation Centre for the Physically Handicapped at Tongnae. Also, at the Government's direct request, the provision of the services of three technical advisers on special assignment to government offices of the Republic of Korea was continued.
- 67. The technical assistance which is now being furnished by UNKRA to the Inchon flat glass plant and the National Rehabilitation Centre is scheduled to extend beyond the anticipated closure of the Agency on 31 December 1959. In this connexion, arrangements have been made with the United Nations Bureau of Technical Assistance Operations to assume administrative responsibility for the two experts at the flat glass plant and of one specialist at the National Rehabilitation Centre, who will continue after that date until their assignments are completed. Funds have been transferred to the Bureau by the Agency to cover the cost of the services of those specialists until they are concluded.
- 68. The Administrator now has under consideration, as well, an extension beyond 31 December 1959, under the same arrangement, of the technical services of one additional specialist at the National Rehabilitation Centre for the Physically Handicapped. Likewise, the Government of the Republic of Korea has requested the extension into 1960 of the special assistance by the three advisers now being provided to government offices. This has been agreed to by the Agency and arrangements are being made for their administration and payment after the closure of UNKRA.

^{14/} See paras. 42-44 above.

69. The Agency has plans, further, to arrange for four Korean technicians-three from UNKRA private end-user investment projects and one who will be employed by another end-user project upon completion of his studies-to be sent abroad by the Bureau of Technical Assistance Operations. Study at specialized educational facilities will be provided for three of them, while for the fourth a period of observation of industrial facilities and manufacturing processes will be provided. 15/ The four candidates have already been selected by the end-users and endorsed by the Government. Since the period abroad will be subsequent to the closure of UNKRA, negotiations are now going on under which the Bureau will make the necessary arrangements and assume administrative responsibility for completion of all four tours, utilizing funds transferred from UNKRA to defray all costs.

DISPOSAL OF SURPLUS EQUIPMENT, VEHICLES AND MATERIALS

70. In August 1958, preparatory to the start of residual activities and the liquidation of the Agency's accounts, UNKRA established, in agreement with the Government of the Republic of Korea, a special project through which orderly disposal could be made of equipment, vehicles and materials, whether project or administrative, as they became surplus to the UNKRA programme.

71. Under this arrangement, surplus items are transferred to the special project at a fairly assessed value, while the regular project or administrative unit to which they have become surplus is credited with an equivalent value. Such items are then either sold by the Republic of Korea Office of Supply—being treated as part of the UNKRA salable commodities import programme, with the hwan proceeds credited to the UNKRA Aid Goods Collections Account—or transferred at the assessed value to other UNKRA projects requiring them; certain items may be provided, as agreed between the Agency and the Government, to designated departments of the Government at assessed value, or with the counterpart requirement waived.

72. The arrangement has proved to be most valuable in expediting closure processing. As at 30 September 1959 the total value of the items thus transferred amounted to $254,160, of which $88,200 represented the value of items used previously for administrative purposes. With respect to the latter, the Administrator points out that the transferred administrative items now constitute a real addition to the total of aid goods introduced into the Korean economy by the UNKRA programme, while at the same time the over-all costs of administration of the programme have been reduced by an equal amount.

Chapter II

Administration and external relations

UNITED NATIONS COMMISSION FOR THE UNIFICATION AND REHABILITATION OF KOREA

73. Bearing in mind the mutual relationship established between the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea (UNCURK) and the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency (UNKRA) by General Assembly resolution 410 (V) of 1 December 1950, the Administrator during the reporting period discussed with UNCURK various matters of common interest concerned with the completion of UNKRA's assigned mission in Korea.

74. The Administrator wishes to express his appreciation for the constructive comments and suggestions which UNCURK has offered concerning the closure activities of the UNKRA programme. At the same time he desires to call attention to the continuing cordiality which characterized throughout the reporting period the relations existing between the Agency and the Commission, both in official capacities, and among the members of UNCURK and the UNKRA staff individually.

75. The Administrator noted with satisfaction the comments by UNCURK on the contributions of the UNKRA programme towards the economic recovery of the Republic of Korea, which were reported to the General Assembly at its thirteenth session. 16/16/16 He expresses satisfaction similarly with respect to the comments on UNKRA contained in the UNCURK report to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session. 17/1

ADVISORY COMMITTEE OF THE AGENCY

76. Under the terms of the memorandum of the Agent General of UNKRA regarding the arrangements for the termination of the operational activities of UNKRA and for the liquidation of the Agency, 18/2 which was approved by the General Assembly at its twelfth session in resolution 1159 (XII) of 26 November 1957 and reaffirmed at its thirteenth session in resolution 1304 (XIII) of 10 December 1958, the Advisory Committee continues to guide the Administrator in his work. 19/

77. In this respect, matters of interest to the Committee relating to the start of the residual activities period, and the initial progress report of the Administrator, covering the period from 1 July to 30 September 1958, which was submitted to the General Assembly at its thirteenth session, were discussed with the Committee on 27 October 1958. At meetings held on 4 and 16 February 1959, a further report was presented to the Committee on the progress of the Agency's completion activities and the current status of the outstanding projects, as well as tentative plans for the utilization of residual resources, and a report on the status of various negotiations with the Government of the Republic of Korea. At the meeting on 16 February 1959 the Committee approved a revised Administrative Plan of Expenditure for the Agency for the financial year 1 July 1958 to 30 June 1959. Again, on 9 June 1959, the Administrator transmitted to the Committee a comprehensive report on the Agency's activities for the period from February to 31 May 1959. This report was discussed with the Committee by the

The Committee is composed of representatives of Canada, India, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United States of America and Uruguay.

UNKRA Comptroller, representing the Administrator, on 24 July 1959.

78. The Administrator takes this opportunity to thank the Committee for its sound and helpful guidance, as well as for the valuable time that its members have spent in considering the several reports and proposals submitted. The direction provided by the Committee has been of great assistance in carrying out the task of concluding the UNKRA programme in a manner to bring the greatest possible benefit to the Korean people and economy.

ADMINISTRATION

- 79. At the start of the reporting period on 1 October 1958, the Agency's remaining regular staff totalled nineteen, of whom twelve were stationed at UNKRA headquarters in Korea and seven were at the Agency's American Regional Office, located at United Nations Headquarters, New York. This number was reduced during the year by four staff members, who were terminated with the completion of certain phases of the residual operations, leaving at 30 September 1959 eight regular staff members in Korea, including the Administrator, who continued to maintain his office there throughout the reporting period, and seven in New York.
- 80. The staff at UNKRA headquarters in Korea are engaged on project finalization activities, preparation of counterpart and commodity records, surplus property disposal etc., and other work which must be completed within Korea if the Agency is to discharge fully its responsibilities.
- 81. Staff members at the American Regional Office are engaged principally in closing the Agency's financial records, in view of the anticipated closure of UNKRA on 31 December 1959. However, this Office was also called upon during the reporting period to handle a relatively substantial amount of procurement of materials and replacement parts required for the completion of the residual projects in Korea, to conduct negotiations for the extension of certain UNKRA-provided technical assistance in Korea following the closure of the Agency, to assist the Advisory Committee, and to carry on essential liaison with representatives of Member States and with the United Nations Secretariat.
- 82. In addition to the staff comprising the UNKRA regular personnel establishment there were in Korea at 1 October 1958 eleven technical experts and specialists employed by the Agency in the capacity of project officers, either to assist the regular staff in completing the outstanding projects, or to provide full-time technical assistance to specific projects. Two of these remain, two have been terminated, and seven have been transferred to contract status as from 30 September 1959.
- 83. Termination of the last regular international staff member at the Agency's Tokyo liaison and procurement office was effected at 31 August 1958. However, this office was continued in operation throughout the reporting period, manned by two local employees, as a ready and rapid means of procurement—mostly of emergency type to complete the investment projects, but also including the purchase of certain salable items etc. These two employees work under the supervision of a former UNKRA staff member, now associated with other United Nations activities in Japan, who acts on a limited, part-time contract basis for the Agency.

SUPPLY AND PROCUREMENT

- 84. Following the conclusion of major operations, and the start of the residual activities period in September 1958, the Agency's supply and procurement operations during the reporting period showed a substantial decline. Nevertheless, purchase requisitions issued in the twelve months from 1 October 1958 to 30 September 1959 by UNKRA headquarters in Korea reached a total of over $500,000, covering equipment and materials to complete projects, project replacement parts, and salable commodities (the latter all designated for specific UNKRA project end-users). Other materials and equipment to the value of more than $300,000 were also directly procured for the Mungyong Cement Plant and the National Medical Centre, under Agency procurement procedures, by the international contractors employed by UNKRA on those projects. $^{20}\!\!/$
- 85. Arrivals of UNKRA aid goods during the reporting period totalled some 3,300 metric tons only. However, because of the nature of the Agency's finishing-up activities a large number of separate items were included in this total, for which the normal shipping and distribution documentation established for UNKRA supply and procurement operations had to be processed. The Agency's very limited supply staff was called upon further to handle the documentation required in the disposal of surplus property and materials, amounting during the year to over $250,000.
- 86. Supplies and equipment received, despite the smaller volume compared with annual arrivals during the Agency's major operational period, still came from a wide geographical area, originating from Australia, Denmark, the Federal Republic of Germany, France, Hong Kong, Japan, the Union of South Africa, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States.

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE AGENCY

- 87. By resolution 1268 (XIII) of 14 November 1958, the General Assembly accepted the financial report and accounts of the Agency for the financial year ended 30 June 1958 and the certificates of the Board of Auditors. 21/
- 88. With the closure of UNKRA anticipated for 31 December 1959, the Administrator during the ^{20/} Additional direct procurement was also made for the National Medical Centre by the Scandinavian Medical Board. However, documentation for this procurement had not yet been received by the Agency as at 30 September 1959. See paras. 130-132 below.

reporting period, through the Advisory Committee of the Agency, requested and received the concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, for the next submission to the General Assembly of the financial report and accounts of the Agency to cover the eighteen-month period from 1 July 1958 to 31 December 1959. According to this arrangement, the UNKRA accounts will be closed at the latter date and one final audit only will then be made. It will be noted in respect to this closure date that the financial year of the United Nations ends on 31 December of each year, and that the accounts for the year are submitted to the General Assembly at the regular session in the autumn of the following year. Thus the final UNKRA financial report will, in conformity with this procedure, be transmitted to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session in the autumn of 1960.

EMERGENCY RELIEF PROGRAMME

89. From 3 March 1952 the Agent General was assigned responsibility by the Secretary-General of the United Nations for transmitting offers of and requests for emergency relief assistance under the United Nations Emergency Relief Programme for Korea. This Programme had been established immediately following the outbreak of the Korean War in 1950 to provide relief assistance to the Korean civilian population, based on Security Council resolutions of 27 June 1950 (S/1511) and 7 July 1950 (S/1588), and Economic and Social Council resolution 323 (XI) of 14 August 1950.

90. During the twelve-month period which succeeded the close of the financial year ended 30 June 1956 there were neither further offers of nor requests made for such assistance. The Agent General, therefore, declared the Emergency Relief Programme concluded as from 30 June 1957.22/ During the period under review no further matters relating to this Programme were brought to the attention of the Administrator.

RELATIONS WITH OTHER UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATIONS

91. Agency relations with other United Nations organizations during the reporting period were of a limited nature only and were concerned basically with the work of concluding the UNKRA programme. In this connexion, discussions relating to the continuation of certain of the technical assistance being provided in Korea by UNKRA, following the anticipated closure of the Agency on 31 December 1959, were held on several occasions with the regional representative of the United Nations Technical Assistance Board for the Far East, in the course of official visits to Korea by the regional representative. Negotiations were also conducted at United Nations Headquarters in New York with the Bureau of Technical Assistance Operations concerning the necessary arrangements for assumption of administrative responsibility by the Bureau for this assistance.

92. Liaison was maintained throughout the reporting period, likewise, with UNESCO for the continuing operation of the UNKRA-established Foreign Language Institute in Seoul and the Fundamental Education Centre at Suwon, both of which projects had been transferred to the administrative and operational control of UNESCO in September 1957.

Chapter III

Utilization of residual funds

93. Throughout the major UNKRA operational period careful consideration was at all times given by the Agency to the expressed desires of the Government of the Republic of Korea regarding the application of UNKRA funds and the development and implementation of all projects, consonant with the terms of General Assembly resolution 410 (V). This policy contributed greatly to the successes—which have been described to the General Assembly previously in the Agency's regular annual reports—that were achieved in carrying out the Agency's assigned mission. It undoubtedly also played a major part in the maintenance of the amicable relations that have existed continuously between UNKRA and that Government.

94. The Administrator has been in full accord with this operational concept and throughout the reporting period has consulted regularly with the Government as to the development and conduct of the Agency's residual activities and projects. In connexion with the final disposition of the Agency's residual hwan and foreign exchange funds, the application of this policy has received, if possible, even greater emphasis. The procedures and proposals hereinunder described relating to those funds have in all cases been adopted on the basis of full and frank discussions with the appropriate authorities of the Republic of Korea.

RESIDUAL HWAN FUND UTILIZATION

95. The future utilization of the large amount of hwan funds generated by the UNKRA programme, which will be residual (surplus) to all operational and administrative requirements of UNKRA, has been a matter of genuine interest to the Agency inview of the statement of general policy on relief and rehabilitation in Korea contained in General Assembly resolution 410 A (V), which, inter alia, states that local currency proceeds accruing to UNKRA are to be used for appropriate additional relief and rehabilitation activities within Korea, or for measures to combat inflation there. In this connexion, negotiations were entered into by UNKRA with the Government of the Republic of Korea, in early 1958, for the purpose of developing a formal agreement stipulating, among other things, procedures and objectives for the use of the Agency's residual hwan funds. These negotiations culminated in the signing on 25 September 1958 of the final agreement between UNKRA and the Republic of Korea regarding the disposition of residual funds, projects, materials and responsibilities of UNKRA.

96. This agreement, after establishing the dictum that UNKRA hwan funds would be employed, firstly, to liquidate the Government's outstanding "UNKRA Counterpart Fund" overdraft at the Bank of Korea—the device through which the Government had established all hwan funds credited to the UNKRA Counterpart Fund—then provided that any credit balance remaining in the Fund (after all counterpart releases had been made for projects), together with subsequent ^{22/} For a complete account of the assistance given under the Emergency Relief Programme, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Ninth Session, Supplement No. 20, annex I, B; ibid., Tenth Session, Supplement No. 18, annex I, B and C; ibid., Eleventh Session, Supplement No. 16, annex I, B and C; and ibid., Twelfth Session, Supplement No. 17, annex I, B and C.

receipts of repayments of UNKRA counterpart loans, deferred payments from private project end-users, and any additional cash collections from the sale of UNKRA-imported commodities, would be deposited in a new government account to be known as the "UNKRA Residual Account".

97. Manifestly the United Nations will have a continuing interest in the successful future operation of the UNKRA projects, so long as they benefit the Korean people. In this regard, it is the Agency's belief that four of the UNKRA Government projects: the National Medical Centre, the National Rehabilitation Centre for the Physically Handicapped, the Fundamental Education Centre, and the Foreign Language Institute, will require further assistance to improve their physical plants, increase their scope of service and, also, toward meeting local operating costs for a period of several years, if they are to provide maximum service to Korea. Accordingly, provision was made in the agreement for first priority to be given in the utilization of funds from the UNKRA Residual Account, subject to the approval of the Republic of Korea National Assembly, for assistance to those four projects in the amounts and during the time periods shown hereinunder:

	Amount per annum (Hwan)	Date of expiry	Number of years	Total amount (Hwan)
National Medical Centre	200,000,000	1963	Five	1,000,000,000
National Rehabilitation Centre	150,000,000	1963	Five	750,000,000
Fundamental Education Centre	24,000,000	1961	Three	72,000,000
Foreign Language Institute	1,500,000	1961	Three	4,500,000

The Government has agreed to furnish a report annually to the United Nations Secretary-General regarding the inclusion of these sums in the Republic of Korea national budget for the respective financial years, and the actual allocations made to each project.

98. Subject to the above established priorities and to the provision in the agreement for the continued utilization of somewhat over 1,500 million hwan for operation of the UNKRA Small Business Loan Fund, 23/all other receipts credited to the UNKRA Residual Account will, under the terms of the agreement, be allocated and expended exclusively for the rehabilitation of the Korean economy, consonant with the objectives of the UNKRA programme and consistent with the terms of the United Nations General Assembly resolution 410 (V) of 1 December 1950; under no circumstances will they be used for defense expenditures.

99. Cumulative deposits by the Government of the Republic of Korea to the UNKRA Counterpart Fund from the inception of the UNKRA programme in Korea, estimated up to 31 December 1959, the anticipated date of closure of the Agency, will amount to slightly over 38,300 million hwan. This amount represents the total value in hwan, at mutually agreed exchange rates, of the United States dollar landed cost value of all goods and services imported for the UNKRA projects, except for certain special projects for which the Government's counterpart obligation was waived. As from the same date, the estimated total of releases by the Agency of UNKRA counterpart funds-to meet, principally, the acquisition costs of the imported materials and technical services for both the investment and government projects and the costs for local labour and materials for the development and construction of those projects-will amount to a little more than 39,700 million hwan.

100. The estimated total of releases is thus approximately 1,400 million hwan greater than the estimated total amount of the UNKRA Counterpart Fund deposits by the Government. In this respect, however, it is pointed out that the estimated total of UNKRA hwan collections—which derive from receipts for the imported materials and technical services provided by the Agency to its investment and government projects, certain direct payments for imported materials made by investment project end-users, end-user down payments on investment projects, collections from the disposal of Agency-imported salable commodities, the assets of the consolidated Small Business Loan Fund (which, under the agreement of 25 September 1958 between UNKRA and the Republic of Korea, are credited to the UNKRA Overdraft Account), and some miscellaneous receipts—will amount to just over 40,500 million hwan, resulting in the establishment of a moderate surplus of total collections over total releases. 24/

101. More importantly, however, the Administrator invites the attention of the General Assembly to the estimated surplus of more than 21,000 million hwan that will accrue to the Government of the Republic of Korea from repayments of loans financed by the UNKRA Counterpart Fund which were made during the course of the programme to investment project end-users through the agency of the Korean Reconstruction Bank. These repayments, which will be received in instalments during the next several years, are in excess of any Agency hwan funds employed for the retirement of the Government's UNKRA Counterpart Fund overdraft at the Bank of Korea, and will be credited fully, as received, to the UNKRA Residual Account. In this same connexion, the small surplus in the total of Agency hwan collections over the total of UNKRA counterpart releases noted above, together with repayments of outstanding commodity tax equivalents by some investment project end-users, which are also being made in instalments, and certain other small miscellaneous receipts, altogether amounting to about 1,000 million hwan, will be credited similarly to the UNKRA Residual Account. 25/

102. It will thus be seen that, eventually, the UNKRA Residual Account will be credited with over 22,000 million hwan (an amount which will be still further augmented by the deposit to this Account of any interest—which is not included in these estimates but which may be conservatively stated as an additional 1,500 million hwan—collectable on loans financed by the UNKRA Counterpart Fund. This large, completely unencumbered fund will be freely available for utilization by the Government of the Republic of Korea, under the terms of the final agreement between UNKRA and the Government, for further assistance in rehabilitation and development of the Korean economy.

^{24/} Annex to this report presents summary and detailed statements of the hwan funding of the UNKRA programme.
25/ See annex II, B, below.

103. With further respect to the UNKRA Residual Account, the Government has agreed that, following the closure of the UNKRA Counterpart Fund under the terms of the final agreement and the establishment of the Residual Account, it will make annual reports up to and including 1963 to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, giving the details of all receipts paid into and all disbursements made from the Account.

UTILIZATION OF RESIDUAL FOREIGN EXCHANGE

104. It is now anticipated that approximately $500,000 in Agency foreign exchange funds will remain uncommitted after all provisions have been made to complete projects and technical assistance and to meet administrative costs to the close of the Agency and completion of liquidation activities.

105. The use of this foreign exchange residual to all calculated Agency requirements was discussed with the Minister of Finance of the Republic of Korea in May 1959. The Minister expressed the opinion that his Government would like a major portion of UNKRA's residual foreign exchange funds applied, in so far as practicable, toward a further single undertaking, and advanced a proposal that UNKRA consider the provision of vocational training equipment to the Inha Institute of Technology in Inchon. Regarding this suggestion by the Minister, the Administrator had likewise earlier been requested by the President of the Republic of Korea to inspect the physical establishment of the Institute with a view to determining the advisability of furnishing it with vocational training equipment.

106. The Inha Institute of Technology conducts courses on three levels. One, a three-year course for high-school vocational students, is intended to graduate journeymen craftsmen. The second course, which is open to graduates from vocational high schools, is on the junior college level and concentrates on training individuals to qualify as instructors at vocational training centres (seven such centres were among the educational establishments set up by UNKRA during the course of its major operational period) and at technical high schools throughout Korea, or to seek employment as technicians. In this regard, there exists today a great need in South Korea for a facility that can provide within the country suitable training for instructors for the vocational education system. Additionally, the Institute conducts a regular four-year engineering course on the college level. Graduates from the two-year junior college course are also qualified to enter directly into the third year of that course.

107. An on-the-site inspection by the Agency has shown the Inha Institute to have a well-built physical plant consisting of eight academic and shop buildings and one dormitory building, all of recent construction. The Institute further has a comprehensive plan for extensive over-all development, to be carried out in annual phases, which is designed to keep pace with increasing demand for facilities. This includes nine additional academic and shop buildings, three dormitories, a student union building and a gymnasium. The funding for this expansion is based on utilization of demonstrated and forecast income, plus the use of Foundation funds.

108. The Administrator, therefore, regards it as proper and desirable that a very considerable portion of the Agency's residual foreign-exchange funds be employed to assist the Institute to acquire the equipment it needs and to provide, with the co-operation of UNESCO, the type of technical assistance which will result in further improvement of the Institute's teaching standards. A report on the further development of this project and additional details on its proposed implementation, which will be accomplished subsequent to the closure of UNKRA, will be presented to the General Assembly at a later date.

109. While the major portion of the Agency's residual foreign-exchange funds may be applied to the Inha Institute of Technology project, UNKRA has also discussed with the Government of the Republic of Korea the use of a smaller portion of those funds to send abroad for training a number of technicians from certain of the Agency's investment projects. This group includes one person from the Sihung crystalline graphite mill, who would observe flake graphite processing methods during a three-month period; one from the Sam Duk Paper Manufacturing Company, who would visit a number of paper plants in the United States and then attend a nine-month course at an institute of paper chemistry; a technician from the Pusan auto repair shop, who would attend a commercial automotive school, also in the United States, which conducts instruction in general and specialized automotive repair; and a specialist who will join the staff of the Inchon flat glass plant following completion of a course of study abroad in business management and cost accounting. In this connexion, early in September 1959 the Government formally requested the development of these four technical assistance projects. Arrangements have been tentatively discussed whereby the Bureau of Technical Assistance Operations would assume the responsibility for the administration and completion of the projects, utilizing UNKRA residual funds which would be transferred to the Bureau for that purpose.

110. Over and above the approximately $500,000 in Agency residual foreign-exchange funds immediately available for utilization, there is a good possibility that at some not too remote date a further substantial amount, expected to be forthcoming from the settlement of claims and related procedures pertinent to certain of the Agency's projects, will likewise become available for use under the provisions of General Assembly resolution 410 (V).

111. In this connexion, the Agency is now in litigation with the initial prime contractor and the designer of the Inchon flat glass plant with respect to their performance under the contracts. An adequate contingency fund has been earmarked to meet the possibility of an adverse decision by the court. Should this decision be in favour of the Agency, as the Administrator anticipates, only a relatively small amount of this contingency fund would need to be held to cover possible legal expenses in the case of an appeal by the defendants, while the major portion could be released immediately and become a part of the Agency's residual foreign-exchange resources. Furthermore, in the event of the award by the court of damages to UNKRA, the amount of the award or whatever lesser sum can be recovered from the defendants will, upon completion of any further court action—which may be lengthy—become available for inclusion in the Agency's residual foreign-exchange resources.

- 112. As a result of the difficulties experienced in the development of the National Medical Centre project, which were related to both the design and construction of the Centre, UNKRA has instituted claims under the contracts against the architect-engineer and the prime construction contractor. The full amount of these claims had not been exactly determined at 30 September 1959, largely because of the time required for the remedial action necessary to correct the substandard construction work of the prime contractor and the results of the inadequate design work by the architect-engineer.
- 113. The Administrator anticipates recovery of funds under these claims lodged by the Agency against the two contractors. At the same time he is confident that the Agency will be successful in rebutting counterclaims which may be made by them against UNKRA. But again it may be some considerable time before the claims can be negotiated and such recoveries effected. The Agency has also established in connexion with this project a contingency fund to meet the costs of carrying out the corrective work and other requirements. Upon final completion the uncommitted portion of this contingency fund can be released to the residual foreign-exchange resources.
- 114. UNKRA likewise has claims outstanding against the vendor of the paper-making machinery for the Sam Duk paper plant and Shinheung paper plant projects. 26 These claims have been under negotiation with the vendor for some little time and a partial recovery of funds has already been made. However, additional recovery is anticipated under these claims, which will further increase the total of the Agency's residual foreign exchange resources.
- 115. There now exists a reasonable probability that the grand total of the Agency's foreign-exchange resources, which will be residual to all Agency requirements to complete its activities and applicable to projects in Korea following the closure of UNKRA, may, with the conclusion of these claims, considerably augment the balance of residual funds presently estimated.
- 116. With respect to the future utilization of these resources, including the amount allocated for the procurement of vocational training equipment for the Inha Institute of Technology, it is the Administrator's recommendation that these funds be transferred to the Secretary-General to be used for technical assistance or optionally for Special Fund projects. The Administrator further recommends that the use of all UNKRA residual foreign-exchange funds be determined in discussion with the Government of the Republic of Korea as the availability of such funds becomes certain and that they be authorized only for such projects and purposes as may be mutually agreed upon with the Government.

Chapter IV

Closure of the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency

- 117. A major economic aid operation of the size and complexity of the reconstruction and rehabilitation programme executed in the Republic of Korea by UNKRA, in its final implementation stage, cannot but be faced by a number of residual difficulties and tasks related to such matters as late arrivals of project materials, local construction and financing problems and other difficulties which cannot be fully anticipated in advance.
- 118. Prior to the start of the residual period, UNKRA had already achieved success in carrying out its mission. Presumably, it could have accepted that fact and closed its activities, ignoring the few problems which still existed. To have done so, however, would have deprived the Republic of Korea of the full measure of economic aid which the Member States of the United Nations and non-member States made possible by their contributions.
- 119. In this light the Administrator was directed by the General Assembly to carry to a successful conclusion the residual projects and other matters relating to the full completion of the programme which remained outstanding at the close of active operations. This assigned task was pursued with all determination throughout the reporting period, and a review of the details provided in chapters I and III of this report will show that substantial progress was achieved in resolving these various tasks and difficulties, although a number of tasks still remain to be completed after 30 September 1959.
- 120. As a result, an important quantity of UNKRA-imported fisheries operational supplies is now getting into the hands of the intended end-users, where it will do the economy the most good, while additional canning machinery, on order before the close of the Agency's major operations for the two UNKRA-built fish canneries, has been installed in those plants.
- 121. The development of the Taebaek coal mine was completed, resulting in further quantities of muchneeded coal becoming available for both private home and industrial use. A crystalline flake graphite processing mill was also finished during the year, adding new possibilities for foreign-exchange earnings. Further work finished at the Republic of Korea's only non-ferrous metal smelter and refinery allows cheaper, and at the same time increased, production of copper, gold and silver, while an UNKRA-assisted paper plant completed in December 1958 is turning out bond paper, providing both a domestic source of this type of paper and a substantial saving in foreign exchange which would otherwise have to be used for imports.
- 122. The new National Medical Centre started operations during the reporting period, providing the largest modern facilities for treatment, as well as for graduate medical, nursing and technician training, in the Republic of Korea. Already thousands of persons have been helped by it. Work completed at the new National Vaccine Laboratory increased the country's ability to produce vital vaccines and antitoxins.
- 123. The careful application of still available, although limited, Agency funds also added further to the benefits accruing to the Korean economy from the UNKRA programme. Cement output was increased by the provision of a new cement mill to the Mungyong cement plant. Kraft paper was supplied for packaging a large quantity of powdered talc for export, as well as for flake graphite and cement. Additionally, a newly procured flat glass drawing machine will shortly raise annual sheet glass production by 6 million square feet, while other materials supplied to the same plant during the year have already increased the output of figured and wire-reinforced glass. At the same time, it was possible to furnish technical assistance throughout the reporting period which aided in industrial plant and mining operations and production.

124. The closure of UNKRA is anticipated for 31 December 1959, a brief three months following the concluding date of this report. These final three months from 1 October to 31 December 1959 constitute a still important period during which positive action will continue for the conclusion of the last few outstanding problems and difficulties to the best advantage of the Korean people and economy. In this connexion, it is the intention of the Administrator to submit to the General Assembly report covering the Agency's activities for the three-month period.

125. However, this supplementary report will not be considered by the General Assembly before the fifteenth session in the autumn of 1960, long after UNKRA as an organization has ceased to exist. In this respect. while every effort possible will be made by the limited staff remaining available to the Agency to resolve all outstanding problems prior to the closure date, there are a number of difficulties which in the Administrator's opinion may well carry beyond that date, and which he believes should be reported to the General Assembly at this time as a matter of information and record. These relate: (a) to various actions and claims which UNKRA has initiated with respect to certain of its projects; and (b) to a special situation which has arisen with respect to the final completion by the Agency of its responsibilities for the National Medical Centre project.

126. Litigation is now under way with the initial prime contractor and the designer of the Inchon flat glass plant with respect to their performance under the contracts. The initial court hearing is scheduled for the first week in December 1959. A considerable period of time may elapse before the funds which may be involved in an award to UNKRA by the court will be received. No particular problems are envisaged, but the case may well remain open beyond the closure of UNKRA, and arrangements for responsibility for follow-up action are now under consideration.

127. With respect to the National Medical Centre, 27/the Agency has a well documented and briefed case for its claim against the architect-engineer. Negotiation has been started and the Administrator is hopeful that a mutual agreement and settlement may be reached during November or December 1959.

128. The claim against the prime construction contractor of the National Medical Centre, however, is involved and will probably amount to some hundreds of thousands of dollars. A commercial auditor has been employed by the Agency and an audit of the contractor's accounts is under way. Because of the length of time which has been required for corrective work at the 27/ See paras. 45-49 above.

129. The claims relating to paper-making machinery furnished for two of the UNKRA projects 28/are relatively small. Certain recoveries have already been made, and others can be considered as almost certain. The claims still outstanding have been pressed steadily and this action is being continued with a reasonable expectancy that further funds will be recovered. In this case, it is anticipated that all claims can be satisfactorily adjusted and closed within the time still available prior to the closure of the Agency.

130. The most serious difficulty, however, which now faces the Administrator with respect to completing the Agency's responsibilities by the anticipated closure date of the Agency is a problem relating to the National Medical Centre project sponsored jointly by UNKRA, the Scandinavian Governments and the Government of the Republic of Korea.

131. The documentation which UNKRA requires in order to post properly its accounts and close its financial records has not yet been received.

132. Negotiations are now in progress, and it is hoped that this difficulty will be satisfactorily resolved.

133. In conclusion, the Administrator wishes, as a matter of direct interest, to invite the attention of the General Assembly to some of the important and valuable effects, apparent in the Republic of Korea during the past year, that stemmed either entirely or in large measure from the economic assistance which the United Nations has provided to the Republic through the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency.

134. Most obvious was the increase in the production of cement, coal, paper, talc and canned fish, as well as the new availability of domestically manufactured flat glass; completed UNKRA projects played the major part in those achievements. At the same time, other machinery and equipment furnished under the UNKRA programme was employed to process substantial quantities of raw cotton and wool tops, weave cotton and linen cloth, spin worsted and woolen yarns, manufacture electric wire and fishnets and other items. Similarly provided operational equipment and supplies helped to maintain a high level of output of marine products, while the irrigation works which were accomplished during the period of the Agency's active operations played a role in the year's bumper rice crop.

135. The results of the Agency's assistance were also manifested in the number of skilled workers graduated from the vocational training centres established by UNKRA and graduates, including engineers, doctors and nurses, of the universities and colleges which were furnished with laboratory and other instructional equipment. Millions of required textbooks for Korea's

National Medical Centre, the work which must be done in order to properly document and brief this large claim is still going on, and it is not likely that negotiations can be initiated until November or early December 1959. It may be possible to reach an agreement and settlement with the contractor in a matter of days. On the other hand, should it not be possible to reach a quick agreement and settlement, a determination as to the disposition of the claim must be made. In this event, positive measures to protect the interests of the United Nations will be proposed at the time this determination is made.

elementary schools were published at the textbook printing plant built and equipped with United Nations assistance, while thousands of school children used classroom facilities provided by UNKRA. Still other beneficial effects could be cited in, for instance, the fields of housing, health and welfare, power, and communications and transportation.

136. The source and the value of this economic aid furnished by the United Nations is known to and well appreciated by the people of the Republic of Korea and their Government—from the farmer, who has direct knowledge that his fields were irrigated through a United Nations project, the purchaser of cement who identifies the name stamped on the container with a new United Nations-constructed plant, to the country's economists and planners who calculate the product and requirements of the economy.

137. The United Nations economic aid which was provided to the Republic of Korea through UNKRA, supported by the contributions of thirty-four Member States and five non-member States, represented a bold, new action to bring assistance of a new dimension to a nation which found itself in economic ruin as the result of aggression. The last stage of the planned programme which was carried out by UNKRA in the furtherance of that aim is almost concluded, and the Agency's accomplishments and success are even now largely a matter of history. This fact, however, does not diminish its value; the United Nations can derive full satisfaction from the knowledge that what was accomplished has played a positive and active part in the task of restoration and rehabilitation.

138. United Nations economic assistance made, and is continuing to make today, an important and most beneficial contribution to the Republic of Korea and its people. The approaching closure of UNKRA does not end that contribution, for through the completed UNKRA projects, and the large residual fund which UNKRA leaves for the Government of the Republic of Korea for use on still more projects, it will continue steadily into the future, providing further help in the efforts of this young nation to build a viable and stable economy.

a/ These contributions in kind have been made available to the Unified Command for use in the Emergency Relief Programme for the civilian population of Korea.

b/ Previous contribution statements have shown pledges of $4,001,726 for Australia, $28,000,000 for the United Kingdom and $162,500,000 for the United States. At the time these pledges were made the Governments concerned stipulated that payment of the full amounts was conditional upon certain matching contributions being received from other Governments, and in the case of Australia and the United States upon certain percentage limitations. In this statement these amounts have been adjusted to reflect the maximum contributions of these Governments in accordance with the terms of their pledges, on the basis of total contributions made by other Governments to the programme.

d/The contribution from the Government of Guatemala represents the proceeds of sale by the Government of 15,000 lb. of coffee.

2/ To be settled under an agreement of 13 March 1956 for the establishment and operation of a National Medical Centre in Korea.

Report of the Second Committee

[Original text: English] [4 December 1959]

- 1. The General Assembly, at its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, allocated to the Second Committee item 32 of its agenda, entitled "United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency: progress report of the Administrator for Residual Affairs of the Agency".
- 2. The Committee considered this item at its 642nd meeting, on 3 December 1959. Nine delegations, as well as the Administrator for Residual Affairs of the Agency, took part in the debate.
- 3. The Committee had before it the progress report of the Administrator for Residual Affairs of the Agency (A/4263).
- 4. The Committee received one draft resolution under this item, submitted by Canada, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United States of America and Uruguay (A/C.2/L.453).
- 5. The Committee voted separately on the third preambular paragraph, at the request of the representative of the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, and approved it by 51 votes to none, with 16 abstentions
- 6. The Committee then adopted the draft resolution as a whole (A/C.2/L.453) by 49 votes to 9, with 11 abstentions.

b/ The amount set up in the UNKRA Small Business Loan Fund is to be credited to the UNKRA Collections Account and transferred as a collectable credit to the Overdraft Account. When sufficient funds are available in the Repayments Sub-Account (or UNKRA Residual Account) a transfer could be made equivalent to this credit to permit the closure of the Overdraft Account and the continuance of the Loan Fund as long as desired by the Korean Government.

Recommendation of the Second Committee

7. The Second Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution: PROGRESS REPORT OF THE ADMINISTRATOR FOR RESIDUAL AFFAIRS OF THE UNITED NATIONS KOREAN RECONSTRUCTION AGENCY

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 846th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Second Committee (A/4332, para. 7). For the final text, see resolution 1433 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1433 (XIV). PROGRESS REPORT OF THE ADMINISTRATOR FOR RESIDUAL AFFAIRS OF THE UNITED NATIONS KOREAN RECONSTRUCTION AGENCY

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 410 (V) of 1 December 1950, 701 (VII) of 11 March 1953, 725 (VIII) of 7 December 1953, 828 (IX) of 14 December 1954, 920 (X) of 25 October 1955, 1020 (XI) of 7 December 1956, 1159 (XII) of 26 November 1957 and 1304 (XIII) of 10 December 1958,

Taking note of the progress report of the Administrator for Residual Affairs of the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency covering the period from 1 October 1958 to 30 September 1959 (A/4263), in which is contained a review of the activities of the Agency during its nine years of existence,

Taking note also that the termination of the Agency is scheduled for 31 December 1959,

1. Expresses its thanks to the former Agents General of the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency, the Administrator for Residual Affairs of the Agency and the members, both past and present, of the staff

- of the Agency for the devoted and efficient service which they have rendered during the years of the Agency's existence;
- 2. Expresses its conviction that the work of the Agency has made an important and enduring contribution to the development of the Korean economy and to the well-being of the Korean people;
- 3. Expresses its appreciation for the valuable assistance given to the Agency by the specialized agencies of the United Nations and by voluntary non-governmental organizations;
- 4. Reaffirms its decision that any funds remaining in residual accounts when the Administrator for Residual Affairs of the Agency has completed his task should be used in conformity with General Assembly resolution 410 (V) entitled "Relief and rehabilitation of Korea";
- 5. Further reaffirms the action taken at its twelfth session regarding the arrangements and procedures for the completion of the residual responsibilities of the Agency and the liquidation of its accounts.

846th plenary meeting, 5 December 1959.

Report of the Third Committee

[Original text: English and Spanish]
[16 November 1959]

INTRODUCTION

- 1. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly allocated to the Third Committee item 33 of the agenda of its fourteenth session (Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees).
- 2. The Committee considered this item at its 943rd to 948th meetings, held between 2 and 6 November 1959.
- 3. The Committee had before it the report of the High Commissioner (A/4104/Rev.1 and A/4104/Rev.1/Add.1) and chapter VI, section IV, of the report of the Economic and Social Council (A/4143).

STATEMENT BY THE HIGH COMMISSIONER

- 4. At the invitation of the Committee, the High Commissioner made an introductory statement (943rd meeting). He stated that the activities of his Office during the year under review were characterized by three main facts: first, the concentration of efforts and means on clearly defined refugee problems gave new hope for final solution of these problems; secondly, on the other hand, some of the problems could not be finally settled by the Office, for its action could be only of a strictly social and humanitarian character; and thirdly, the World Refugee Year had already had a useful effect.
- 5. The High Commissioner recalled that a year previously there had been 160,000 non-settled refugees in Europe within the mandate of his Office, including 40,000 persons in camps. Recently, there had been about 110,000 non-settled refugees in Europe, of whom 22,000 were living in camps in Austria, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece and Italy. The progress
- * For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Third Committee, 943rd to 948th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 841st meeting.

- achieved was a tribute to a combination of efforts on the part of Governments, inter-governmental organizations and voluntary agencies.
- 6. While, apart from its financial aspect, the problem of the Hungarian refugees in Yugoslavia had been solved by the beginning of 1958, there still remained 10,000 Hungarian refugees in Austria. The High Commissioner stressed that no obstacles were laid in the wasy of those refugees who wished to be repatriated. However, 1,500 Hungarian refugees in Austria still wished to emigrate and he hoped that, on the occasion of the World Refugee Year, Governments would make every effort towards the settlement of the Hungarian refugee problem.
- 7. The relief programme of care and maintenance of the 180,000 refugees from Algeria in Morocco and Tunisia was carried out by the League of Red Cross Societies in close co-operation with the Moroccan and Tunisian Red Crescent Societies. The Office of the High Commissioner was responsible for the co-ordination of activities. Up to 27 October 1959, approximately $7.8 million had been contributed from international sources to a special fund for relief operations. The estimated total covering a twelve-month programme for these refugees amounted to approximately $6 million. The refugees were mostly in need of food, blankets and clothing.
- 8. An important development during the year under review had been the dissolution of the United Nations Refugee Fund. In implementation of General Assembly resolution 1166 (XII) of 26 November 1957, it had been decided that, as from 1 January 1959, international assistance to refugees would be granted under separate programmes established on an annual basis. For 1960, the Executive Committee had set, on the occasion of the World Refugee Year, a global target of $12 million. The main activities for 1959 and 1960 were the Far Eastern programme, the camp clearance programme and the programme for non-settled refugees living outside camps.

- 9. The High Commissioner then referred to the Far Eastern programme, which was a joint operation between his Office and the Inter-Governmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM) involving the resettlement of a further 8,500 refugees. It was hoped that, on the occasion of the World Refugee Year, the visas and additional funds required for the High Commissioner's Office and for the ICEM would be forthcoming so that this programme could be successfully solved.
- 10. The High Commissioner noted that progress had been achieved in the camp clearance programme. The number of refugees within his mandate living in 114 official camps at mid-1959 was 23,700. The number of refugees qualifying for the camp clearance programme was 15,800, compared with 21,000 one year earlier. The emphasis of the programme was, as before, on housing. Increased attention was being paid to specially difficult cases. The programme had exercised a stimulating effect on schemes for refugees not within the High Commissioner's mandate. An amount of $3,150,000 was still needed before the end of 1960.
- 11. There remained more than 90,000 non-settled refugees living outside camps in various European countries, as well as a few thousand in the Near and Middle East. In view of the general limitation of funds, it had not been possible so far to place emphasis on assistance to that group. That might become possible after the completion of the camp clearance programme and of the Far Eastern programme, particularly if sufficient contributions were made available as a result of the World Refugee Year.
- 12. The High Commissioner referred to the protection activities of his Office and to the increase of those activities in pursuance of General Assembly resolution 1284 (XIII) of 5 December 1958. He stressed the importance of the determination of refugee status, and further expressed the hope that more countries would ratify or accede to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees. 1/
- 13. The High Commissioner stated that every refugee problem contained an important element of voluntary repatriation and he described the role of his Office in that respect. He referred to resettlement and gave an account of the various resettlement schemes already in operation ar envisaged on the occasion of the World Refugee Year. He expressed the hope that duripg the World Refugee Year countries would reserve for refugees an especially high proportion of their immigration programmes.
- 14. Concerning the contributions to the Office of the High Commissioner, he was hopeful that the target of $4.7 million set by the Executive Committee of the High Commissioner's Programme for the current 1959 programmes would be reached, provided that his Office obtained an additional $350,000 before the end of the year.
- 15. The High Commissioner gave an account of contributions made available for assistance to Chinese refugees in Hong Kong, either through his Office under General Assembly resolution 1167 (XII) of 26 November 1957, or under bilateral arrangements.

GENERAL DEBATE

- 16. The Secretary-General reported to the Third Committee at its 946th meeting on the steps he had taken to promote the World Refugee Year. At that time, sixty-five countries and territories which had participated in the World Refugee Year had indicated that they would make a special effort on behalf of refugees. Seventy international non-governmental organizations were also participating in the Year through a special committee set up at Geneva. The targets for additional financial contributions announced by Governments, national committees and non-governmental organizations, if met, would make it possible to solve problems that had remained unsolved too long owing to lack of funds, and improve the lot of many other refugees. However, the additional contributions actually paid thus far amounted to only a little more than the equivalent of $3 million and the greatest part of the effort had yet to be made. At a date still to be scheduled, an ad hoc committee of the whole Assembly would be convened, at which contributions would be announced for the programmes of the High Commissioner for Refugees and of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA). It had been suggested that on that occasion Governments would describe the best way for solving the refugee problem, including, for example, information programmes, plans for ratification of the 1951 Convention, action with regard to immigration legislation or regulations, and targets set by national committees. In conclusion, the Secretary-General recalled the statement by the President of the General Assembly (824th plenary meeting) that, in lauching the World Refugee Year, the Assembly and given new hope to millions of refugees, and that it was the Assembly's task to fulfil that promise.
- 17. During the discussion, many delegations expressed appreciation of the work of the High Commissioner's Office in the past year, and paid a tribute to the efforts undertaken in launching the World Refugee Year.
- 18. Some delegations informed the Committee of their contributions in connexion with the World Refugee Year and others reported on practical steps they had taken or intended to take in order to receive refugees in their countries.
- 19. Other delegations stressed the importance of voluntary repatriation and pointed out that larger resources would have to be allocated for the promotion of the programme. An appeal was made for the solution of the most difficult social problem of the sick and handicapped refugees.
- 20. Several delegations referred to the problem of the refugees from Algeria in Morocco and Tunisia. an appeal was for assistance to those refugees until they were able to return home.
- 21. Some delegations urged that help be given, for humanitarian reasons, to the Chinese refugees in Hong Kong.
- 22. Several delegations felt the need for a final solution of the Hungarian refugee problem. In this connexion, a tribute was paid to the Government of

^{1/} United Nations Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Status of Refugees and Stateless Persons, Final Act and Convention relating to the Status of Refugees (United Nations publication, Sales No.: 1951, IV.4), p. 11.

Austria, which had dealt with it in a truly humanitarian spirit.

DRAFT RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER

- 23. At the 946th meeting, Austria, Colombia, Greece, Iran, the Netherlands and Sweden submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.780), the operative paragraphs of which read as follows:
 - "1. Invites States Members of the United Nations and members of specialized agencies to devote, on the occasion of the World Refugee Year, special attention to the problems of refugees coming within the competence of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and in particular to consider the possibility of:
 - "(a) Improving the legal status of refugees living on, or to be admitted to, their territory, inter alia, by acceding to the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees;
 - "(b) Increasing the facilities for permanent refugee solutions through voluntary repatriation and assimilation within new national communities, and, for resettlement of refugees, providing further opportunities through liberalization of immigration laws and regulations and through inclusion of refugees in resettlement schemes;
 - "(c) Enabling the High Commissioner, through additional voluntary financial contributions, to implement the programmes of international assistance to refugees approved by the Executive Committee of the High Commissioner's Programme for 1959 and 1960:
 - "2. Authorizes the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, in respect of refugees who do not come within the competence of the United Nations, to use his good offices in the transmission of contributions designed to provide assistance to these refugees."
- 24. The sponsors of the draft resolution stressed that there should be an opportunity for funds collected in all the countries of the world, particularly on the occasion of the World Refugee Year, to be distributed on a universal basis, and for all refugees to benefit from them in accordance with their needs and the wish of the donor. The sponsors pointed out that the High Commissioner and his staff possessed the skill and experience required to assure such distribution if they were requested by donors to do so.
- 25. Some delegations felt, however, that the text should be completed by a provision stressing the importance of the principle of voluntary repatriation.
- 26. To that end, Afghanistan submitted an amendment (A/C.3/L.783) to the six-Power draft resolution, whereby the General Assembly would express the hope that additional efforts would be made for the repatriation of refugees who wished to return to their country of origin. In its revised form (A/C.3/L.783/Rev.1), the amendment provided for the addition of the following paragraph at the end of the preamble:
 - "Expressing the hope that no additional efforts will be spared for the repatriation of refugees who wish to return to their country of origin".
- 27. Italy submitted an amendment (A/C.3/L.787) to the six-Power draft resolution to the effect that para-

- graph 1 (b) should be put before paragraph 1 (a) and amended to read as follows:
- "(a) Making additional efforts to increase the facilities for permanent solutions for refugees who wish to return to their country of origin and encouraging their assimilation within new national communities, and, with respect to the resettlement of refugees, providing further opportunities through liberalization of immigration laws and regulations and through inclusion of refugees in resettlement schemes."

Sub-paragraph (a) in document A/C.3/L.780 would become sub-paragraph (b).

- 28. The sponsor felt that his amendment might bring about agreement among the various views expressed. After discussion, the amendment was withdrawn.
- 29. The United Kingdom submitted an amendment (A/C.3/L.788) to the six-Power draft resolution. It provided for the addition of the following paragraph at the end of the preamble:
 - "Expressing the hope that every effort will be made for the resettlement or integration of refugees".
- 30. At its 948th meeting, the Committee voted on the six-Power draft resolution (A/C.3/L.780) and on the amendments thereto as follows:
- (a) The revised amendment submitted by Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.783/Rev.1) was adopted by a roll-call vote of 31 to 19, with 24 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Ceylon, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Federation of Malaya, Hungary, Indonesia, Iraq, Ireland, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Panama, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Thailand, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Denmark, France, Haiti, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Portugal, Sweden, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

Abstaining: Argentina, Austria, Brazil, Burma, Cambodia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Iran, Japan, Liberia, Mexico, Norway, Peru, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela.

(b) The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.788), with the addition of the word "also" after "expressing the hope", was adopted by a roll-call vote of 36 to 23, with 16 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Greece, Haiti, Iran, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay.

Against: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovaquia, Hungary, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Pakistan, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Burma, Cambodia, Cuba, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Ireland, Liberia, Mexico, Nepal, Venezuela.

(c) The draft resolution as a whole (A/C.3/L.780), as amended, was adopted by a vote of 55 to none, with 20 abstentions (see paragraph 38, draft resolution I, below).

DRAFT RESOLUTION ON REFUGEES FROM ALGERIA IN MOROCCO AND TUNISIA

- 31. At the 946th meeting, Libya, Morocco and Tunisia submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.781) on refugees from Algeria, which they subsequently revised (A/C.3/L.781/Rev.1).
- 32. The sponsors felt that those refugees constituted a separate category. It was hoped that the plight of those refugees was a temporary one. The precariousness of the situation of the children was stressed.
- 33. At its 948th meeting, the Committee adopted the revised three-Power draft resolution (A/C.3/L.781/Rev.1) by 66 votes to none, with 5 abstentions (see paragraph 38, draft resolution II, below).
- 34. The representative of France stated after the vote that world-wide charity was not called for in this case, and that the French Government was ready and able to provide all the aid those refugees needed. If the refugees expressed, before an impartial international body, the desire to return to their homes, the French Government would pay all repatriation costs. It had already placed an initial sum of 125 million francs at the disposal of the High Commissioner.

DRAFT RESOLUTION ON THE WORLD REFUGEE YEAR

- 35. At the 946th meeting, Argentina, Australia, Canada, France, Iran, Italy, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.782) on the World Refugee Year.
- 36. The sponsors felt that the General Assembly should urge Member States to make further efforts for the success of the World Refugee Year. The authors had taken care to leave each country free to decide what form its participation would take.
- 37. At the 948th meeting, the nine-Power draft resolution (A/C.3/L.782) was adopted by 51 votes to 9, with 10 abstentions (see paragraph 38, draft resolution III, below).

Recommendations of the Third Committee

38. The Third Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolutions:

WORLD REFUGEE YEAR

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 841st plenary meeting, on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted draft resolutions I, II and III submitted by the Third Committee (A/4278, para. 38). For the final texts, see resolutions 1388 (XIV), 1389 (XIV) and 1390 (XIV), respectively, below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1388 (XIV). REPORT OF THE UNITED NATIONS HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR REFUGEES

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (A/4104/Rev.1 and A/4104/Rev.1/Add.1),

Noting with appreciation the progress made in the implementation of the programmes of international assistance carried out by the Office of the High Commissioner,

Noting in particular the progress made, within the framework of the World Refugee Year, as regards the admission of additional numbers of refugees, including handicapped cases, to countries of resettlement, as well as the contribution to the Office of the High Commissioner of additional funds for international assistance to refugees,

Expressing the hope that no additional efforts will be spared for the repatriation of refugees who wish to return to their country of origin,

Expressing the hope also that every effort will be made for the resettlement or integration of refugees,

1. Invites States Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies to devote, on the occasion of the World Refugee Year, special attention to the problems of refugees coming within the competence of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and in particular to consider the possibility of:

- (a) Improving the legal status of refugees living on, or to be admitted to, their territory by, inter alia, acceding to the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees; 2/
- (b) Increasing the facilities for permanent refugee solutions through voluntary repatriation and assimilation within new national communities, and, for resettlement of refugees, providing further opportunities through the liberalization of immigration laws and regulations and through the inclusion of refugees in resettlement schemes;
- (c) Enabling the High Commissioner, through additional voluntary financial contributions, to implement the programmes of international assistance to refugees approved by the Executive Committee of the High Commissioner's Programme for 1959 and 1960;
- 2. Authorizes the High Commissioner, in respect of refugees who do not come within the competence of the United Nations, to use his good offices in the transmission of contributions designed to provide assistance to these refugees.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1389 (XIV). REFUGEES FROM ALGERIA IN MOROC-CO AND TUNISIA

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (A/4104/Rev.1 and A/4104/Rev.1/Add.1),

Considering the efforts made by the High Commissioner and the results achieved during the World Refugee Year,

Noting with appreciation the action of the High Commissioner on behalf of refugees from Algeria in Morocco and Tunisia,

Recognizing however that the situation of these refugees, and especially of the young children who constitute the majority of them, remains precarious,

2/ Ibid.

Recommends that the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees should continue his efforts on behalf of these refugees pending their return to their homes.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1390 (XIV). WORLD REFUGEE YEAR

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1285 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 on the World Refugee Year,

Noting with appreciation the support that has already been given to the World Refugee Year by Governments, non-governmental organizations and the general public, as well as the efforts of the Secretary-General in this endeavour,

Believing that the success of the World Refugee Year will be largely dependent on concrete responses yet to be made in many countries,

- 1. Urges States Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies, in accordance with the national wishes and needs of each country and in the humanitarian spirit of the World Refugee Year:
- (a) To continue to focus interest on the refugee problem;
- (b) To endeavour to make additional financial contributions for international assistance to refugees and to encourage in their territory increasing contributions from non-governmental organizations and the general public;
- (c) To encourage additional opportunities for permanent refugee solutions through voluntary repatriation, resettlement of integration, on a purely humanitarian basis and in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the refugees themselves;
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to assist in the promotion of the World Refugee Year.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

DOCUMENT A/C.3/L.833

Text of articles 12, 13 and 14 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights incorporating drafting suggestions by the Rapporteur 3/

[Original text: English, French, Russian and Spanish] [1 December 1959]

Article 12

- 1. Everyone lawfully in the territory of a State shall, within that territory, have the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose his residence.
- 2. Everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own.
- 3. The above-mentioned rights shall not be subject to any restrictions except those which are provided by law, are necessary to protect national security, public order ("ordre public"), public health or morals or the rights and freedoms of others, and are consistent with the other rights recognized in this Covenant.
- 4. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of the right to enter his own country.

Article 13

An alien lawfully in the territory of a State Party to the Covenant may be expelled therefrom only in pursuance of a decision reached in accordance with law and shall, except where compelling reasons of national security otherwise require, be allowed to submit the reasons against his expulsion and to have his case reviewed by, and be represented for the purpose before, the competent authority or a person or persons especially designated by the competent authority.

Article 14

1. All persons shall be equal before the courts and tribunals. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, or of his rights and obligations in a suit at law, everyone shall be entitled to a fair and public hearing by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal established by law. The Press and the public may be excluded from all or part of a trial for reasons of morals, public order ("ordre public") or national security in a democratic society, or when the interest of the private lives of the parties so requires, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice; but any judgement rendered in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be made public except where the interest of juveniles otherwise requires or the proceedings concern matrimonial disputes or the guardianship of children.

3/The suggestions of the Rapporteur are underlined.

- 2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall have the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
- 3. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, everyone shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality:
- (a) To be informed promptly and in detail 4/ in a language which he understands of the nature and cause of the charge against him;
- (b) To have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence, and to communicate with counsel of his own choosing:
 - (c) To be tried without undue delay;
- (d) To be tried in his presence, and to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing; to be informed, if he does not have legal assistance, of this right; and to have legal assistance assigned to him, in any case where the interests of justice so require, and without payment by him in any such case if he does not have sufficient means to pay for it;
- (e) To examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
- (f) To have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court;
- (g) Not to be compelled to testify against himself, or to confess guilt.
- 4. In the case of juveniles, the procedure shall be such as will take account of their age and the desirability of promoting their rehabilitation.
- 5. Everyone convicted of a crime shall be entitled to have his conviction and sentence reviewed by a higher tribunal according to law.

^{4/}The Rapporteur suggests that the words "and in detail" should precede, instead of follow, the clause: "in a language which he understands".

6. When a person has by a final decision been convicted of a criminal offence and when subsequently his conviction has been reversed or he has been pardoned on the ground that a new or newly discovered fact shows conclusively that there has been a miscarriage of justice, the person who has suffered punishment as a result of such conviction shall be compensated according to law, unless it is proved that the non-disclosure of the unknown fact in time is wholly or partly attributable to him.

7. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again for an offence for which he has already been finally $\frac{5}{2}$ convicted or acquitted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of each country.

5/The Rapporteur suggests that the word "finally" should precede "convicted or acquitted" rather than "been".

Report of the Third Committee

[Original text: English and French]
[3 December 1959]

INTRODUCTION

- 1. At its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly allocated to the Third Committee item 34 of the agenda of its fourteenth session (Draft International Covenants on Human Rights).
- 2. Having adopted at previous sessions ⁶/the preamble and article 1, respectively, of the draft Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, all the substantive articles of the draft Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and articles 6 to 11 of the substantive provisions of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Third Committee at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly discussed and adopted the texts of articles 12, 13 and 14 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights at its 954th to 969th meetings. At its 975th meeting, the Committee adopted drafting changes in articles 12, 13 and 14 suggested by the Rapporteur (A/C.3/L.833). The proceedings of the Committee are briefly reported below.

ARTICLE 12 OF THE DRAFT COVENANT ON CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS

- 3. Article 12 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as submitted by the Commission on Human Rights (E/2573, annex I B), read as follows:
 - "1. Subject to any general law of the State concerned which provides for such reasonable restrictions as may be necessary to protect national security, public safety, health or morals or the rights and freedoms of others, consistent with the other rights recognized in this Covenant:
- *Incorporating A/4299/Corr.1.
- 6/See Official Records of the General Assembly, Tenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 28, document A/3077; ibid., Eleventh Session, Annexes, agenda item 31, document A/3525; ibid., Twelfth Session, Annexes, agenda item 33, document A/3764 and Add.1; ibid., Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 32, document A/4045.

- "(a) Everyone legally within the territory of a State shall, within that territory, have the right to (i) liberty of movement and (ii) freedom to choose his residence;
- "(b) Everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own.
 - "2. (a) No one shall be subjected to arbitrary exile:
- "(b) Subject to the preceding sub-paragraph, anyone shall be free to enter his own country."
- 4. The Committee discussed this article at its 954th to 959th meetings.

Amendments submitted

- 5. Amendments were submitted by Denmark (A/C.3/L.784), Israel (A/C.3/L.789), the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.796), Canada (A/C.3/L.802), Argentina (A/C.3/L.804) and Argentina, Belgium, Iran, Italy and the Philippines (A/C.3/L.812 and A/C.3/L.812/Rev.1-2). A subamendment to the revised five-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.812/Rev.2) was submitted by Ireland (A/C.3/L.813).
- 6. The amendment of Denmark (A/C.3/L.784) called for the replacement of the clause "Subject to any general law of the State concerned which provides for such reasonable restrictions..." by the following: "Subject to such lawful and reasonable restrictions of the State concerned...". At the 955th meeting, the representative of Denmark withdrew the amendment.
- 7. The amendments of Israel (A/C.3/L.789) were as follows:
 - "(a) Replace paragraph 1 (b) by the following:
 - "'Everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country.'
 - "(b) Delete paragraph 2 (a), and insert a new article 13 reading as follows:
 - "'No one shall be compulsorily exiled from his own country.'

"(c) Delete paragraph 2 (b)."

The Chairman announced at the 954th meeting that the amendments had been withdrawn by the representative of Israel.

- 8. The amendment of the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.796) consisted in replacing the text of paragraph 1 by the following:
 - "1. Subject to any general law of the State concerned which provides for such reasonable restrictions as may be necessary to protect national security, public safety, health or morals or the rights and freedoms of others, consistent with the other rights recognized in this Covenant, everyone legally within the territory of a State shall, within that territory, have the right to: (a) liberty of movement and (b) freedom to choose his residence;
 - "2. Everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own, subject to the restrictions mentioned in the preceding paragraph and to any outstanding obligations with regard to national service, tax liabilities or voluntarily contracted obligations binding the individual to the Government."

Paragraph 2 would be renumbered as paragraph 3. At the 958th meeting, the representative of the Netherlands withdrew the amendment.

9. The amendment of Canada (A/C.3/L.802) consisted in replacing the text of paragraph 2 (b) by the following:

"Unless lawfully exiled, anyone shall be free to enter the country of which he is a citizen."

The amendment was withdrawn at the 957th meeting.

10. The amendment of Argentina (A/C.3/L.804) consisted in replacing paragraph 1 by the following:

"Subject to the laws of the State concerned which provide for restrictions, consistent with the other rights recognized in this Covenant, to protect national security, public safety, morals and health:".

It would also delete the number 2 and designate the relevant sub-paragraphs as (c) and (d), instead of (a) and (b). At the 955th meeting, the second paragraph of the amendment was withdrawn by the representative of Argentina. At the 956th meeting, he announced that the Argentine amendment was to be considered as replaced by the five-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.812).

- 11. The amendment of Argentina, Belgium, Iran, Italy and the Philippines, in its revised form (A/C.3/L.812/Rev.2), would replace the text of article 12 by the following:
 - "1. Everyone legally within the territory of a State shall, within that territory, have the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose his residence.
 - "2. Everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own.
 - "3. The above-mentioned rights shall not be subject to any restrictions except those which are provided by law, are necessary to protect national security, public order ('ordre public'), public health or morals or the rights and freedoms of others, and are consistent with the other rights recognized in this Covenant.
 - "4. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of the right to enter his own country."

12. The sub-amendment of Ireland (A/C.3/L.813) to the five-Power revised amendments would replace paragraph 4 by the following:

"Everyone shall be free to enter his own country, unless lawfully exiled."

At the 959th meeting the representative of Ireland, after a procedural discussion, agreed not to press the sub-amendment to the vote.

Issues discussed

- 13. While in agreement with the substance of the article as proposed by the Commission on Human Rights, some members felt that its drafting could be improved. It was suggested that the article should begin with a statement of the rights to be enunciated, rather than with a list of permissible restrictions. This idea found general support and was reflected in the amendment proposed by Argentina, Belgium, Iran, Italy and the Philippines (A/C.3/L.812 and A/C.3/L.812/Rev.1-2).
- 14. The words "any general law" and "reasonable restrictions", which appeared in the Commission's draft, gave rise to some discussion. Various members raised doubts regarding the meaning of the expression "any general law". The deletion of the word "general" was suggested, since laws were necessarily of a general nature. Objections were also raised to the use of the expression "reasonable" to qualify the word "restrictions", since restrictions prescribed by law must be presumed to be reasonable. With regard to the limitations clause—as redrafted in the joint amendment (A/C.3/L.812/Rev.2)—some members pointed out that the term "law" was too broad: enough to cover not only constitutional and statutory provisions, but also measures taken by the executive branch pursuant to powers conferred upon it by the constitution or laws of the country.
- 15. There was considerable discussion on the inclusion of the expression "ordre public" in the limitations clause. The difficulty of including the concept in the English text was manifold. The English expression "public order" was not thought to be equivalent to the French expression "ordre public" or the Spanish words "orden público". The expression "ordre public", as used in some civil law countries, denoted a legal concept used as a basis for negating or restricting private agreements, for exercising police power or for voiding the application of foreign law. The Spanish term "orden público" referred (as some members explained) to the whole body of political, economic and moral principles considered essential to the maintenance of a given social structure. In common law countries, the term "public order" was ordinarily understood as indicating the absence of disorder. As far as common law was concerned, the counterpart of "ordre public" was "public policy", although some members disputed this fact. It was finally agreed to use the expression "public order ('ordre public')" in the English text.
- 16. Some members of the Committee objected to the inclusion of the concept of "public order ('ordre public')" among the grounds justifying a State in imposing restrictions on freedom of movement and residence. Far-reaching restrictions could be justified under such a vague expression. Some members preferred the term "public safety", which had been used in the text prepared by the Commission on Human Rights; this term would make it clear that the right could be limited only if its exercise involved danger to the safety of persons. A majority of the members, however, favoured the use of the expression "public order ('ordre public')", believing that this expression was broad and included the idea of "public safety".

17. The clause relating to the right of the individual to enter his own country was also extensively debated. Some members were of the view that this right should not be subjected to any restrictions whatsoever. The general consensus was, however, that, while the right was not absolute, it should not be made subject to the same kind of restrictions as the other rights defined in paragraphs 1 and 2 of the same article. It was thought inconceivable, for example, that a State should prohibit one of its nationals from entering its territory for reasons of health or morality. It was pointed out that in the draft prepared by the Commission on Human Rights exile was the only permissible restriction recognized. Several members, however, were opposed to mentioning "exile" in the Covenant, as the laws of their countries either prohibited or did not recognize exile. Some question was raised regarding the meaning of the phrase "his own country". The view was expressed that "his own country" should be taken to mean the country of which the individual concerned was a national or a citizen; the necessity of being able to submit ample proof of the fact was also emphasized.

Voting on article 12

- 18. At the 959th meeting, the Committee voted as follows:
- (a) By 57 votes to 1, with 12 abstentions, the Committee decided to vote first on the revised five-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.812/Rev.2).
- (b) Paragraph 1 was adopted by 71 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.
- (c) Paragraph 2 was adopted by 70 votes to none, with 3 abstentions.
- (d) At the request of the representative of Iraq, a separate vote was taken on the words "public order ('ordre public')" in paragraph 3. These words were adopted by 58 votes to none, with 15 abstentions.
- (e) Paragraph 3 as a whole was adopted by 67 votes to 1, with 3 abstentions.
- (f) At the request of the representatives of Guatemala, Iraq and Panama, the word "arbitrarily" in paragraph 4 was voted on separately. It was adopted by 29 votes to 20, with 20 abstentions.
- (g) Paragraph 4 as a whole was adopted by 44 votes to $\overline{6}$, with 22 abstentions.
- (h) Article 12 as a whole was adopted by 58 votes to 1, with 11 abstentions.

Text as adopted

- 19. Article 12, as adopted by the Committee and incorporating the drafting changes suggested by the Rapporteur, reads as follows:
 - "1. Everyone lawfully within the territory of a State shall, within that territory, have the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose his residence.
 - "2. Everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own.

- "3. The above-mentioned rights shall not be subject to any restrictions except those which are provided by law, are necessary to protect national security, public order ('ordre public'), public health or morals or the rights and freedoms of others, and are consistent with the other rights recognized in this Covenant.
- "4. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of the right to enter his own country."

ARTICLE 13 OF THE DRAFT COVENANT ON CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS

20. Article 13 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as submitted by the Commission on Human Rights (E/2573, annex I B), read as follows:

"An alien lawfully in the territory of a State Party to the Covenant may be expelled therefrom only in pursuance of a decision reached in accordance with law and shall, except where compelling reasons of national security otherwise require, be allowed to submit the reasons against his expulsion and to have his case reviewed by, and be represented for the purpose before, the competent authority or a person or persons especially designated by the competent authority."

21. The Committee discussed the article at its 959th and 960th meetings.

Amendments submitted

- 22. Amendments were submitted by Belgium (A/C.3/L.786) and Israel (A/C.3/L.790).
- 23. The amendment of Belgium (A/C.3/L.786) called for the insertion of the word "established" after the word "lawfully".
- 24 The amendments of Israel (A/C.3/L.790) consisted in (a) replacing the words "in pursuance of a decision reached in accordance with law" by the words "on such grounds and in accordance with such procedure as are established by law" and (b) deleting the last clause, beginning with the words "or a person or persons". The first part of the amendment was withdrawn by the representative of Israel at the 959th meeting. The second part was withdrawn at the 960th meeting.

Issues discussed

- 25. The representative of Belgium, in introducing his amendment (A/C.3/L.786), stated that, in the opinion of his Government, article 13 was designed to protect only lawfully established aliens against arbitrary expulsion. The purpose of the amendment was to make that quite clear. Several members of the Committee, however, opposed the idea of narrowing the scope of the article to a limited group of aliens. Moreover, it was pointed out that the word "established" did not have a precise meaning and was open to various interpretations.
- 26. Some discussion regarding the necessity of retaining the phrase "or a person or persons especially designated by the competent authority" took place. It was contended that the phrase was superfluous since it merely elaborated on the words "competent authority". It dealt, moreover, with the question of delegation of powers, which was a matter for domestic legislation. Several members explained that in some countries the expulsion of an alien was a matter for the judicial authorities, while in others it was left to the executive branch. If, under domestic law, an administrative authority had competence in the matter of expulsion, such administrative authority should have the possibility of delegating its powers.

27. Some members stated that the article, as drafted by the Commission on Human Rights, had a serious shortcoming: there was no reference to the right of asylum or to extradition. It was suggested, however, that a provision on the right of asylum might be included as a separate article.

Voting on article 13

- 28. At the 960th meeting, the Committee voted as follows:
- (a) The amendment submitted by Belgium (A/C.3/L.786) was rejected by 52 votes to 6, with 12 abstentions.
- (b) At the request of the representative of Iran, a separate vote was taken on the words "and to have his case reviewed by" in the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights. These words were adopted by 66 votes to 1, with 3 abstentions.
- (c) At the request of the representative of Italy, the words "or by a person or persons especially designated by the competent authority" were put to a separate vote. These words were adopted by 52 votes to 9, with 10 abstentions.
- (d) Afticle 13 as a whole was adopted by 69 votes to none, with 3 abstentions.

Text as adopted

29. Article 13, as adopted by the Committee, reads as follows:

"An alien lawfully in the territory of a State Party to the Covenant may be expelled therefrom only in pursuance of a decision reached in accordance with law and shall, except where compelling reasons of national security otherwise require, be allowed to submit the reasons against his expulsion and to have his case reviewed by, and be represented for the purpose before, the competent authority or a person or persons especially designated by the competent authority."

ARTICLE 14 OF THE DRAFT COVENANT ON CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS

- 30. Article 14 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as submitted by the Commission on Human Rights (E/2573, annex I B), was worded as follows:
 - "1. All persons shall be equal before the courts and tribunals. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, or of his rights and obligations in a suit at law, everyone shall be entitled to a fair and public hearing by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal established by law. The Press and public may be excluded from all or part of a trial for reasons of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, or when the interest of the private lives of the parties so requires, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the Court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interest of justice; but any judgement rendered in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be pronounced publicly except where the interest of juveniles otherwise requires or the proceedings concern matrimonial disputes or the guardianship of children.

- "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall have the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, everyone shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality:
- "(a) To be informed promptly in a language which he understands and in detail of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;
- "(b) To have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
- "(c) To defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing; to be informed, if he does not have legal assistance, of this right; and to have legal assistance assigned to him, in any case where the interests of justice so require, and without payment by him in any such case where he does not have sufficient means to pay for it;
- "(d) To examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
- "(e) To have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court:
- "(f) Not to be compelled to testify against himself, or to confess guilt.
- "3. In the case of juveniles, the procedure shall be such as will take account of their age and the desirability of promoting their rehabilitation.
- "4. In any case where by a final decision a person has been convicted of a criminal offence and where subsequently his conviction has been reversed or he has been pardoned on the ground that a new or newly-discovered fact shows conclusively that there has been a miscarriage of justice, the person who has suffered punishment as a result of such conviction shall be compensated unless it is proved that the non-disclosure of the unknown fact in time is wholly or partly attributable to him."
- 31. The Committee discussed this article at its 961st to 969th meetings.

Amendments submitted

32. Amendments were submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.792), Israel (A/C.3/L.795 and A/C.3/L.795/Rev.1-3, A/C.3/L.822), the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.797), Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.801), Argentina (A/C.3/L.805 and A/C.3/L.805/Rev.1-3), Italy (A/C.3/L.815 and A/C.3/L.815/Rev.1) and by Canada, Ceylon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.821 and A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1). The last-mentioned amendment replaced the amendment of Italy and Japan (A/C.3/L.803 and A/C.3/L.803/Rev.1), as well as the subamendments to it submitted by Ceylon (A/C.3/L.817) and by Canada, Ceylon and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.817/Rev.1).

33. One of the amendments of Israel, calling for the addition of a new paragraph following paragraph 3 (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3), incorporated a sub-amendment submitted by Ceylon (A/C.3/L.818). Another amendment of Israel, replacing the third sentence of paragraph 1 by a new text (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3), was the subject of a sub-amendment submitted by Italy (A/C.3/L.820). The representative of Ecuador submitted a verbal sub-amendment (969th meeting) to the amendment of Canada, Ceylon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1) proposing the addition of a new paragraph following paragraph 4 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights.

Paragraph 1 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

- 34. Proposals for the deletion of the first sentence of paragraph 1 were submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.792) and Argentina (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.2). These amendments were withdrawn at the 966th meeting.
- 35. An amendment of Argentina (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3) was to the effect that the words "en audiencia pública", in the second sentence of paragraph 1, should be replaced by the word "públicamente" in the Spanish text only.
- 36. An amendment of Israel (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) called for the insertion of the word "legally" before the word "competent" and the deletion of the words "established by law", in the second sentence of paragraph 1.
- 37. The amendment of Israel to the third sentence in paragraph 1 (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) consisted in replacing this sentence by the following:

"The public and Press may be excluded from a trial or any part thereof for reasons of national security, public order ('ordre public'), morals, or the interest of juveniles, or in matrimonial disputes, or to the extent necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice."

Italy submitted a sub-amendment (A/C.3/L.820) to the effect that the amendment of Israel be drafted as follows:

"The public and Press may be excluded from a trial, or any part thereof, only when the court considers it necessary for reasons of national security, or public morals and health, or for the protection of the interest of juveniles."

The amendment of Israel was withdrawn at the 967th meeting and the sub-amendment of Italy was therefore not put to the vote.

- 38. Argentina submitted the following amendments (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3) to the third sentence in paragraph 1:
- (a) Replace, in the Spanish text only, the words "de la totalidad o parte de las audiencias" by the words "de la totalidad o parte de los juicios".
- (b) Replace the words "any judgement rendered in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be pronounced publicly" by the words "any judgement in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be public"; the words "and accompanied by a statement of reasons" which - appeared in the earlier text of the amendment of Argentina (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.2) were withdrawn.

- (c) Replace, in the Spanish text only, the words "custodia de menores" by the words "tutela de menores".

Paragraph 2 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

- 39. The amendments of Israel (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) to paragraph 2 were worded as follows:
- (a) At the end of sub-paragraph (b) add the words "and to communicate with counsel of his own choosing";
- (b) After sub-paragraph (b) add a new sub-paragraph reading as follows: "To be tried without undue delay;"
- (c) At the beginning of sub-paragraph (c) insert the words "To be tried in his presence, and ...".
- 40. The United Kingdom proposed (A/C.3/L.792) that paragraph 2 of article 14 should consist of the first sentence only, and that the remainder of draft paragraph 2 should form a new paragraph, to be numbered 3.

Paragraph 3 of the text submittee by the Commission on Human Rights

- 41. The representative of Italy, in accordance with rule 123 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, resubmitted an amendment to paragraph 3 originally submitted by Israel (A/C.3/L.795) and then withdrawn by the latter country. The amendment of Italy (A/C.3/L.815/Rev.1) proposed that paragraph 3 be replaced by the following text:
 - "A juvenile charged with a criminal offence shall be tried according to legal provisions designed to promote the treatment and the rehabilitation of juvenile offenders."

Insertion of a new paragraph after paragraph 3 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

42. Israel proposed (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) the addition of the following new paragraph after paragraph 3:

"Everyone convicted of a crime shall have the right to his conviction and sentence being reviewed by a higher tribunal according to law."

The words "according to law" had been proposed in a sub-amendment of Ceylon (A/C.3/L.818) accepted by the representative of Israel.

Paragraph 4 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

- 43. Amendments submitted by Argentina (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3), the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.797) and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.792) to paragraph 4 called for the deletion of the paragraph.
- 44. The amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.801) proposed the addition, after the words "shall be compensated", of the words "in accordance with the law".
- 45. Israel had proposed (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) that paragraph 4 be replaced by the following:
 - "A person proved innocent of a crime of which he had previously been convicted in a final judgement shall have the right to compensation for any damage or punishment which he suffered through no fault of his own."

The representative of Israel afterwards revised this amendment to take account of the suggestions of the representative of France (A/C.3/L.819). The revised amendment of Israel, as it was put to the vote (A/C.3/L.822), therefore read as follows:

"The judicial recognition of the innocence of a convicted person shall confer on him the right to request the award of compensation in respect of any damage caused him by the conviction."

Insertion of a new paragraph after paragraph 4 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

46. Italy and Japan had proposed (A/C.3/L.803/Rev.1) the addition of a new paragraph, after paragraph 4, worded as follows:

"No one shall be tried twice for the same offence."

47. An amendment of Ceylon (A/C.3/L.817) to the proposal of Italy and Japan (A/C.3/L.803/Rev.1) consisted in replacing the words "tried twice for the same offence" by the words "liable to be punished twice for the same offence". This amendment was then replaced by an amendment of Canada, Ceylon and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.817/Rev.1) suggesting the following wording for the proposed new paragraph:

"No one shall be liable to be tried and punished again for the same offence for which he has finally been convicted or acquitted."

48. The proposals contained in documents A/C.3/L.803/Rev.1 and A/C.3/L.817/Rev.1 were replaced by an amendment of Canada, Ceylon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.821) proposing the addition of the following new paragraph:

"No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again for the same offence for which he has finally been convicted or acquitted."

49. The seven-Power amendment was revised (A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1) by the addition of a second sentence reading as follows:

"In this context 'finally convicted or acquitted' signifies that all ordinary methods of judicial review and appeal have been exhausted and that all waiting periods have expired."

The representative of Ecuador verbally submitted (969th meeting) a sub-amendment consisting in the deletion of the second sentence and the addition of the words "in accordance with the law and procedure of each country" after the words "finally been convicted or acquitted".

Issues discussed

- 50. Several representatives said they were infavour of the text proposed by the Commission on Human Rights; the draft article gave the most important guarantees to the individual in the sphere of penal and civil procedure, while taking into account the legitimate interests of society.
- 51. Some representatives considered that equality before the courts should not imply that all litigants had the same status; it was the equality of the parties with regard to the conduct of the proceedings which must be guaranteed. Most representatives considered that the greatest possible emphasis should be placed on the importance of that principle, even at the risk of repetition. It was essential to protect the parties in a trial against any discriminatory practice, by prohibiting, inter alia, the establishment of special courts and summary procedures.

- 52. Some representatives considered that the terms "independent" and "impartial" as applied to tribunals were without precise legal meaning. Nevertheless, most of the Committee considered it necessary to retain those terms, which were generally used in constitutions and domestic laws. It was pointed out that the term "competent" could refer to the professional qualifications of judges, whereas the authors had in mind the legal notions of competence ratione materiae, ratione personae, and ratione loci.
- 53. Certain representatives pointed out that some sentences of the article proposed by the Commission on Human Rights seemed to require—particularly in the Spanish text—the holding of proceedings and the pronouncing of the judgement in public. They stressed that in many countries a large number of trials took place on the basis of written documents; the parties nevertheless enjoyed sufficient guarantees, because the contents of those documents could be made public. Some representatives attached importance to the principle of publicity of judgement and considered that that principle should be expressed in the most comprehensive terms.
- 54. Various criticisms were expressed with regard to the text proposed by the Commission on Human Rights concerning the exceptions made to the principle of holding proceedings in public. Some representatives considered as unfounded the distinction made in the text between the reasons which might justify the exclusion of the Press and public during a trial and those, less numerous, which might justify the exclusion of the public when the judgement was rendered. In spite of those criticisms, the list of the grounds for excluding the Press and public drawn up by the Commission on Human Rights, and the distinction drawn by the original text between the situation existing during the trial and at the time of the judgement, received the support of most of the Committee.
- 55. Some representatives were convinced of the usefulness of the formula "in a democratic society", already contained in article 29 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in article 8, paragraph 1, of the draft Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. 1/2 They felt that those words, which qualified the notions of "public order" and "national security", afforded a precious guarantee against the risks of arbitrary treatment. For the sake of clarity, it was decided that it would be useful, in accordance with a previous decision on the drafting of article 12 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, to insert at the appropriate point in the English and Russian texts the French words "ordre public", in parentheses.
- 56. The principle of the presumption of innocence was considered so important that it was thought advisable to express it in a separate paragraph. It was thought desirable by most of the Committee to insert the following supplementary guarantees in paragraph 2: the right "to be tried without undue delay", the right "to communicate with counsel of his own choosing", and the right "to be tried in his presence".

^{7/}See Official Records of the General Assembly, Eleventh Session, Annexes, agenda item 31, document A/3525, para. 75.

57. Some members of the Committee thought that the text proposed by the Commission on Human Rights did not express sufficiently clearly the obligation to try juveniles charged with a criminal offence "according to legal provisions designed to promote the treatment and the rehabilitation of juvenile offenders". It was suggested that it should be laid down that a juvenile should be tried "according to legal provisions attributing competence to a jurisdiction or court appropriate for dealing with juvenile offenders". One representative was not able to accept the idea of the criminal responsibility of juveniles and the expression "juvenile offenders". Another, refusing to recognize the "right" of juvenile offenders to be rehabilitated, thought it better to leave the task of solving such problems to the various countries.

58. The right of everyone convicted of a crime to have his conviction and sentence reviewed by a higher tribunal, which was dealt with in a new paragraph, was considered by most representatives as an important guarantee. It was pointed out that it expressed a principle which should be applied by States according to the methods they considered appropriate.

59. Several speakers found difficulty in accepting the idea of the award of compensation in the many cases of miscarriage of justice in which the authorities had not been at fault. They considered that it was contrary to the interests of society to allow compensation to persons who were clearly guilty but whose conviction had been annulled for reasons of form or procedure. It was better to leave the task of evaluating each specific case to the competent authority in each country. However, other representatives felt that controversies concerning the basis of responsibilitywhich could indeed be solved by invoking the notion of social risk-should not prevent the victim of a miscarriage of justice from obtaining compensation; an essential guarantee was involved, completing that afforded to victims of unlawful arrest by article 9 of the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Since the cases covered by paragraph 4 were rare, the financial implications of that provision would be very small. Some representatives, while sharing those fundamental ideas, thought that it would perhaps be excessive to make the payment of compensation obligatory in every case of a miscarriage of justice. Most of the Committee agreed that only adequate legislation could solve the technical difficulties involved in the problem of compensation for a miscarriage of justice.

60. Proposals for the insertion of a new paragraph concerning the question of res judicata (rule of non bis in idem; principle of the "prohibition of double jeopardy") gave rise to lengthy discussion. The amendment of Canada, Ceylon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.821), replacing the previous amendments of Italy and Japan (A/C.3/L.803/Rev.1), and of Canada, Ceylon and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.817/Rev.1), provided that "No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again for the same offence for which he has been finally convicted or acquitted". Several representatives argued, in favour of this text, that it was necessary to protect the individual, not only against the imposition of further punishments, but also against the dangers and distress of further prosecution for the same offence. It was pointed out that a State would be free to try, in accordance with its laws, persons already sentenced for the same offence by the courts of another country. Some representatives would have preferred the adoption of a wider formula prohibiting successive trials, not only for the same "offence", but also for the same "actions".

61. Other representatives thought it necessary to take into account on the other hand the laws of some countries which allowed a person to be tried for the same actions, but on "charges" different from those for which he had been previously acquitted. The expression "charge" in the original amendment proposed by Italy and Japan (A/C.3/L:803) seemed to them more appropriate than "offence" or "actions". Stronger and more definite fears were expressed by other representatives, who felt that the seven-Power amendment, and in particular the word "finally", might hinder the ends of justice by preventing the retrial of criminals acquitted in error. Trials of that nature, under certain conditions and within certain time limits, were provided for by the laws of various countries. In order to take into account this last objection, an effort was made to qualify or define the word "finally". The seven-Power amendment was revised (A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1) and the following sentence added: "In this context 'finally convicted or acquitted' signifies that all ordinary methods of judicial review and appeal have been exhausted and that all waiting periods have expired." This text reproduced, apart from the word "judicial", a passage from the annotations on the text of the draft Covenants (A/2929, chap. VI, foot-note 33) summarizing certain discussions which took place in the Commission on Human Rights.

62. Some representatives expressed the opinion that the definition should also apply to article 14, paragraph 4, concerning the right to compensation in the case of a miscarriage of justice. Others felt that the revised amendment (A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1) was not any clearer, and that, in any case, it was not generally advisable to insert such explanatory passages in the articles of the draft Covenant. The Committee preferred to adopt the text of the seven Powers, as amended by a verbal sub-amendment proposed by Ecuador, consisting in the deletion of the second, explanatory, sentence of the text proposed in document A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1, and the insertion of the words "in accordance with the law and procedure of each country" to qualify the words "finally been convicted or acquitted". The author of the verbal sub-amendment explained that the words he had proposed were not intended to apply to the whole text of the seven Powers, but only to the expression "finally convicted or acquitted".

Voting on article 14

63. At the 967th meeting, the Committee, on the proposal of the USSR, decided, by 53 votes to none, with 12 abstentions, to vote on the text of the draft article and on the related amendments, with the exception of the amendment submitted by Canada, Ceylon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.821) calling for the addition of a paragraph at the end of the article. The amendments were voted on in the order suggested by the Chairman (A/C.3/L.816/Rev.3).

Paragraph 1 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

(a) The amendment of Argentina (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3) calling for the replacement of the words "en audiencia pública" by the word "públicamente" in the Spanish text was adopted by 15 votes to none, with 49 abstentions.

^{8/}Ibid. Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 32, document A/4045, para. 67.

- (b) The amendment of Israel (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) calling for the insertion of the word "legally" before the word "competent" and in the second sentence the deletion of the words "established by law" was rejected by 32 votes to 22, with 17 abstentions.
- (c) The amendments of Argentina relating to the third sentence were adopted as follows: 9/

The amendment (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3) consisting in the replacement of the words "de la totalidad o parte de las audiencias" by the words "de la totalidad o parte de los juicios" in the Spanish text was adopted by 18 votes to none, with 48 abstentions;

The amendment (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3) calling for the replacement of the words "any judgement rendered in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be pronounced publicly" by the words "any judgement in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be public" was adopted by 28 votes to 6, with 33 abstentions.

- (d) At the request of the representative of Israel, a separate vote was taken on paragraph 1 beginning with the words "but any judgement rendered". The Committee decided to retain that clause by 56 votes to 1, with 12 abstentions.
- (e) The text of paragraph 1, as amended, was adopted by 70 votes to none, with 3 abstentions.

Paragraph 2 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

- (f) An amendment of Israel (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) consisting in the additon, after paragraph 2 (b), of a new sub-paragraph reading "to be tried without undue delay;" was adopted by 50 votes to 6, with 12 abstentions.
- (g) An amendment of Israel (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) calling for the addition of the words "and to communicate with counsel of his own choosing" at the end of sub-paragraph (b) was adopted by 44 votes to 3, with 21 abstentions.
- (h) A third amendment of Israel (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) consisting in the insertion of the words "to be tried in his presence, and" at the beginning of sub-paragraph (c) was adopted by 43 votes to 11, with 15 abstentions.
- (i) The amendment of the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.792) to the effect that the first sentence of paragraph 2 should be a separate paragraph and that the remainder of the existing paragraph 2 should form a new paragraph 3, was adopted by 69 votes to none, with 3 abstentions.
- (j) The text of paragraph 2, as amended, was adopted by 71 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.

Paragraph 3 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

(k) By 33 votes to 12, with 26 abstentions, the Committee rejected the new wording of paragraph 3 proposed by Italy (A/C.3/L.815/Rev.1), namely:

2/The amendment of Argentina (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3) calling for the replacement of the words "custodia de menores" by the words "tutela de menores" in the Spanish text was not put to the vote, since the Committee considered it a purely linguistic problem which should be settled by the Rapporteur in consultation with the representatives concerned.

- "A juvenile charged with a criminal offence shall be tried according to legal provisions designed to promote the treatment and the rehabilitation of juvenile offenders."
- (1) The original text of paragraph 3 was adopted by 70 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.

Paragraph 4 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights

- (\underline{m}) At the request of the representative of the United Arab Republic, a vote was taken by roll-call on the amendments of Argentina (A/C.3/L.805/Rev.3), the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.797) and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.792) calling for the deletion of paragraph 4. Those amendments were rejected by 25 votes to 19, with 29 abstentions. The voting was as follows:
- In favour: Argentina, Australia, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Federation of Malaya, India, Ireland, Liberia, Libya, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Turkey, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Venezuela.

Against: Belgium, Brazil, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Ecuador, France, Greece, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, Norway, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Tunisia, United States of America, Yugoslavia.

Abstentions: Afghanistan, Albania, Austria, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ethiopia, Finland, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinea, Hungary, Italy, Mexico, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Sweden, Thailand, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Uruguay, Yemen.

(n) In accordance with the Chairman's suggestions (A/C.3/L.816/Rev.3), the Committee decided to vote next on the amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.801) proposing the insertion of the words "in accordance with the law" after the words "shall be compensated", it being understood that, if adopted, that amendment would apply either to the revised amendment of Israel (A/C.3/L.822) or to the text of the Commission on Human Rights. At the request of the representative of the USSR, a vote was taken by roll-call on the amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.801). It was adopted by 32 votes to none, with 41 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Ceylon, Chile, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Finland, Greece, Guinea, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Italy, Japan, Nepal, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Yugoslavia.

Against: None.

Abstentions: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Cambodia, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Federation of Malaya, France, Ghana, Guatemala, Haiti, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Union of South Africa, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen.

(0) At the request of the representative of Argentina, a vote was taken by roll-call on the revised amendment of Israel (A/C.3/L.822), as modified by the amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.801), calling for the replacement of paragraph 4 by the following text:

"The judicial recognition of the innocence of a convicted person shall confer on him the right to request the award of compensation in accordance with the law in respect of any damage caused him by the conviction."

That amendment was rejected by 22 votes to 11, with 40 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Ceylon, Costa Rica, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Greece, Haiti, Honduras, Israel, Norway, Peru.

Against: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Ecuador, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Morocco, New Zealand, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Abstentions: Afghanistan, Albania, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinea, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Nepal, Netherlands, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Uruguay, Venezuela.

(p) The text of paragraph 4, as modified by the amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.801), was adopted by 40 votes to 13, with 16 abstentions.

Insertion of a new paragraph proposed by the representative of Israel

(q) By 36 votes to 4, with 30 abstentions, the Committee adopted an amendment submitted by Israel (A/C.3/L.795/Rev.3) proposing the insertion, after paragraph 3 of the text submitted by the Commission on Human Rights (that is, after paragraph 4 of the article as revised by the Third Committee), of the following new paragraph:

"Everyone convicted of a crime shall have the right to his conviction and sentence being reviewed by a higher tribunal according to law."

Insertion of a new paragraph proposed by Canada, Ceylon, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan and Pakistan

- (r) The text proposed in the seven-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.821) provided that "No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again for the same offence for which he has finally been convicted or acquitted."
- (s) At the 968th meeting, Mexico and Saudi Arabia proposed that the Third Committee should vote on those paragraphs of article 14 which had been adopted at the previous meeting and submit to the General Assembly the following draft resolution (A/C.3/L.823):

"The General Assembly

"Invites the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to study the question of repeated trial and punishment for the same offence, dealt with in documents A/C.3/L.803,

- A/C.3/L.803/Rev.1, A/C.3/L.817, A/C.3/L.817/Rev.1 and A/C.3/L.821, and to report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session on the results of the study, with its recommendations on the possible inclusion of a separate article on this subject in the draft Covenant on Civil and Political Rights."
- (t) That draft resolution was withdrawn at the 969th meeting, after the sponsors of the seven-Power amendment, in agreement with several representatives, had revised their proposal (A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1) by the addition of the following second sentence:

"In this context 'finally convicted or acquitted' signifies that all ordinary methods of judicial review and appeal have been exhausted and that all waiting periods have expired."

- (u) At the 969th meeting, the representative of Ecuador verbally submitted a sub-amendment to the revised seven-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1) consisting in the deletion of the second sentence and the addition of the words "in accordance with the law and procedure of each country". That sub-amendment was adopted by 27 votes to 25, with 16 abstentions.
- (v) The revised seven-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.821/Rev.1), as modified by the sub-amendment of Ecuador, was adopted by 54 votes to none, with 16 abstentions.

Article 14 as a whole, as amended

(w) The text of the article as a whole, as amended, was adopted by 63 votes to none, with 8 abstentions.

Adopted text

- 64. The text of article 14 adopted by the Third Committee, and incorporating the drafting changes suggested by the Rapporteur, reads as follows:
 - "1. All persons shall be equal before the courts and tribunals. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, or of his rights and obligations in a suit at law, everyone shall be entitled to a fair and public hearing by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal established by law. The Press and the public may be excluded from all or part of a trial for reasons of morals, public order ('ordre public') or national security in a democratic society, or when the interest of the private lives of the parties so requires, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice; but any judgement rendered in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be made public except where the interest of juveniles otherwise requires or the proceedings concern matrimonial disputes or the guardianship of children.
 - "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall have the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
 - "3. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, everyone shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality:
 - "(a) To be informed promptly and in detail in a language which he understands of the nature and cause of the charge against him;
 - "(b) To have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence and to communicate with counsel of his own choosing;

- "(c) To be tried without undue delay;
- "(d) To be tried in his presence, and to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing; to be informed, if he does not have legal assistance, of this right; and to have legal assistance assigned to him, in any case where the interests of justice so require, and without payment by him in any such case if he does not have sufficient means to pay for it:
- "(e) To examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
- "(f) To have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court:
- " (\underline{g}) Not to be compelled to testify against himself, orto confess guilt.
- "4. In the case of juveniles, the procedure shall be such as will take account of their age and the desirability of promoting their rehabilitation.
- "5. Everyone convicted of a crime shall have the right to his conviction and sentence being reviewed by a higher tribunal according to law.
- "6. When a person has by a final decision been convicted of a criminal offence and when subsequently his conviction has been reversed or he has been pardoned on the ground that a new or newly discovered fact shows conclusively that there has been a miscarriage of justice, the person who has suffered punishment as a result of such conviction shall be compensated according to law, unless it is proved that the non-disclosure of the unknown fact in time is wholly or partly attributable to him.

"7. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again for an offence for which he has already been finally convicted or acquitted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of each country."

DRAFT RESOLUTION

65. At its 970th meeting the Third Committee adopted, by 57 votes to none, with 7 abstentions, a draft resolution submitted by Austria and Greece (A/C.3/L.825/Rev.2) concerning future consideration of the draft Covenants.

Recommendation of the Third Committee

66. Accordingly, the Third Committee recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 852nd plenary meeting, on 10 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Third Committee (A/4299, para. 66). For the final text, see resolution 1458 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1458 (XIV). DRAFT INTERNATIONAL COVENANTS ON HUMAN RIGHTS The General Assembly,

Not having been able to conclude at its fourteenth session the consideration of the draft International Covenants on Human Rights,

Decides to give priority to this item at its fifteenth session and to request the Third Committee at that session to devote as many meetings as possible to the consideration of the draft International Covenants on Human Rights.

852nd plenary meeting, 10 December 1959.

INTRODUCTION

- 1. At its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly allocated to the Third Committee item 35 of the agenda of its fourteenth session (Draft Convention on Freedom of Information: text of the draft Convention formulated by the Committee on the Draft Convention on Freedom of Information and report of the Secretary-General on the comments of Governments thereon). The item had been placed on the agenda of the General Assembly pursuant to resolution 1313 C (XIII) of 12 December 1958, whereby the Assembly decided to proceed, at its fourteenth session, to the discussion of the text of the draft Convention.
- 2. The Committee discussed the item at its 970th to 979th meetings, inclusive.
- 3. The Committee had before it: a report by the Secretary-General (A/4173 and Corr.1 and Add.1-3) on comments forwarded by Governments pursuant to General Assembly resolution 1313 C (XIII); and the text of the draft Convention as formulated by the Committee established by the General Assembly by resolution 426 (V) of 14 December 1950 (A/AC.42/7 and Corr.1 annex). The Committee also had before it a compilation by the Secretariat (A/C.3/L.826) of the comments of Governments on the preamble and article 1 of the draft Convention. This document took into account comments which Governments had forwarded to the Secretary-General pursuant to General Assembly resolution 1189 A (XII) of 11 December 1957 (A/3868 and Add.1-8).

GENERAL DISCUSSION

- 4. Most members of the Committee participated in a general discussion, which lasted from the 970th to the 977th meetings and touched upon many fundamental problems of freedom of information. Most of the members welcomed the opportunity of proceeding, after many years of delay, to the final drafting of what was described as the most important instrument in the field of freedom of information. Some reiterated the basic objection of their Governments to a draft Convention which, in its existing form, they argued, emphasized restrictions on, rather than freedom of, information. Some other representatives, while expressing misgivings concerning the project, stated their willingness to participate constructively in the work on the draft Convention.
- 5. As in past debates on this matter in the General Assembly, certain problems had priority - such as the general problem of the difficulty of striking a balance between freedom (which was always in danger of degenerating into licence) and responsibility (the enforcement of which could lead to undesirable restrictions). More specifically, in commenting on the rights and responsibilities of the media of information, in an age of increasing literacy and of rapid technological progress in the means of disseminating information, a number of members referred to the responsibility of those media in regard to reports affecting relations between peoples, and the need to protect the "consumer" of news and information from inaccuracy. falsehood and distortion. All such aspects, it was maintained, should be reflected in the Convention. Other members, on the other hand, considered that the main emphasis in the Convention should be on ways and means of ensuring the freest access to the facts, and the fullest possible flow of news and information concerning these facts. If that end was to be achieved, and the peoples of the world were to be fully and adequately informed, it was necessary for the media to be free from governmental restrictions, and, among other things, for them to be left to set and enforce standards for themselves. It was generally agreed that the major task, in working out a final text of the Convention, was to find a satisfactory way of reconciling differences in the enumeration of those restrictions on freedom of information which it could be agreed were permissible and even necessary.

6. The Committee agreed to discuss the preamble and article 1 of the draft Convention at the current session

PREAMBLE

7. The preamble of the draft Convention, in the text before the Committee (A/AC.42/7 and Corr.1, annex), read as follows:

"The States Parties to this Convention,

"Bearing in mind the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

"Considering that freedom of expression and the free interchange of information and opinions, both in the national and in the international spheres, are fundamental human rights and essential in the cause of democracy and peace and for the achievement of political, social, cultural and economic progress;

"Desiring to co-operate fully with one another to guarantee these freedoms and thereby to promote democratic institutions, friendly relations between States and peoples and the peace and welfare of mankind, and

"Recognizing that in order to achieve these aims the media of information should be free from pressure or dictation, and that these media, by virtue of their power for influencing public opinion, bear a great responsibility to the peoples of the world;

"Have accepted the following provisions:"

Amendments submitted to the preamble

- 8. The following amendments and sub-amendments to the preamble were submitted:
- (a) A proposal by Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.827) to divide paragraph 2 of the preamble into two paragraphs as follows:

"Considering that freedom of expression, information and opinions are fundamental rights,

"Considering that the free interchange of information and opinions both in the national and in the international spheres is essential to the cause of democracy and peace and for the achievement of political, social and economic progress,".

The following sub-amendments to this amendment were submitted:

(i) A proposal by India, Liberia, Mexico, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Republic and Venezuela (A/C.3/L.840 and Corr.1) to insert, in the second paragraph, the words "accurate, objective and comprehensive" before the word "information" and the word "of" before the word "opinions".

- (ii) A proposal by Belgium, Guatemala, Iceland and Italy (A/C.3/L.837) (1) to insert the words "from any source whatever" after the word "opinions" and (2) to insert the word "cultural" after the word "social".
- (b) A proposal by Liberia (A/C.3/L.828) to revise the fifth paragraph of the preamble to read as follows:

"Recognizing that in order to achieve these aims the media of information should be free from pressure or dictation, but that these media, by virtue of their power for influencing public opinion, bear to the peoples of the world a great responsibility which can best be met by publishing not only freely but truthfully and justly, and by subordinating both the urge for private gain and the promotion of nationalistic aims to the advancement of human information,".

The following sub-amendments to this amendment were submitted:

- (i) A proposal by Poland (A/C.3/L.838) (1) to insert the words "and have the duty to respect the truth and to promote understanding among nations" after the words "bear to the peoples of the world a great responsibility" and (2) to delete the last part of the Liberian text, from the words "which can best be met ...".
- (ii) A proposal by Cambodia (A/C.3/L.836) (1) to insert, after the words "bear to the peoples of the world a great responsibility", the words "since it is their duty to respect the truth" and (2) to delete the last part of the Liberian text, from the words "which can best be met ...".
- (c) A proposal by Romania (A/C.3/L.829/Rev.1) to insert the words "accurate and undistorted" before the word "information", and the word "of" before the word "opinions" in the second paragraph of the preamble, so that the paragraph would read:
- "Considering that freedom of expression and the free interchange of accurate and undistorted information and of opinions, both in the national and international spheres, are fundamental human rights and essential in the cause of democracy and peace and for the achievement of political, social, cultural and economic progress,".
- (d) A proposal by France (A/C.3/L.830/Rev.1) to insert after the second paragraph of the preamble a paragraph reading as follows:
 - "Considering that freedom of information implies respect for the right of everyone to form an opinion through the fullest possible knowledge of the facts,".
- 9. At the Committee's 976th meeting, the representative of Afghanistan, having explained that the word "cultural" after the word "social" in the second paragraph of his text (A/C.3/L.827) had been omitted only by mistake, the representatives of Belgium, Guatemala, Iceland and Italy withdrew their second subamendment (A/C.3/L.837).
- 10. At the Committee's 977th meeting, the representative of Romania withdrew his amendment (A/C.3/L.829/Rev.1).
- 11. At the Committee's 977th meeting, the representative of Liberia accepted the two sub-amendments by Cambodia (A/C.3/L.836) and Poland (A/C.3/L.838).

Voting on the preamble

- 12. The voting on the preamble, as formulated by the Committee on the Draft Convention on Freedom of Information, and on the amendments and remaining sub-amendments then proceeded, at the Committee's 977th meeting, as follows:
- (a) The first paragraph of the preamble was adopted by 63 votes to none, with 6 abstentions.
- (b) The sub-amendment by India, Liberia, Mexico, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Republic and Venezuela (A/C.3/L.840 and Corr.1) to the amendment by Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.827) was adopted by 43 votes to 9, with 18 abstentions.
- (c) The first sub-amendment by Belgium, Guatemala, Iceland and Italy (A/C.3/L.837) to the amendment by Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.827) was rejected by 25 votes to 24, with 21 abstentions.
- (\underline{d}) The amendment by Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.827), as thus amended, was adopted by 54 votes to 7, with 9 abstentions.
- (e) The amendment by France (A/C.3/L.830/Rev.1), calling for the addition of a new preambular paragraph, was adopted by 51 votes to none, with 20 abstentions.
- (f) At the request of the representative of Ireland, a separate vote was taken on the word "thereby" in the third paragraph of the preamble as formulated by the Committee on the Draft Convention on Freedom of Information (which had become the fifth paragraph). The word was rejected, 21 votes being cast in favour of it and 21 against, with 24 abstentions.
- (g) The former third paragraph of the preamble (which had become the fifth paragraph), as thus amended, was adopted by 59 votes to none, with 9 abstentions.
- (h) The representative of the Philippines requested a separate vote on the amendment submitted by Liberia (A/C.3/L.828) as modified (see paragraph 11 above), on the words up to and including "bear to the peoples of the world a great responsibility, and have the duty to respect the truth". The passage in question was adopted by 46 votes to 1, with 24 abstentions.
- (\underline{i}) At the request of the representative of Romania, a roll-call vote was taken on the remaining words in the text proposed in the amendment submitted by Liberia (A/C.3/L.828) as modified, that is, "and to promote understanding among nations". The words were adopted by 33 votes to 17, with 21 abstentions. The voting was as follows:
- In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Guinea, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Irak, Jordan, Liberia, Libya, Morocco, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Chile, China, Greece, Ireland, Netherlands, New Zealand, Philippines, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

Abstaining: Argentina, Denmark, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Italy, Japan, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Mexico, Norway. Pakistan, Peru, Portugal, Turkey, Uruguay.

- (j) The words "Have accepted the following provisions", which appeared in the last paragraph of the text proposed by the Committee on the Draft Convention (A/AC.42/7 and Corr.1, annex), were adopted by 51 votes to none, with 16 abstentions.
- (k) The text of the preamble as a whole, as thus amended, was adopted by 42 votes to 5, with 24 abstentions.
- 13. The text of the preamble as thus adopted is given in the annex to the present report.

ARTICLE 1

14. Article 1 of the draft Convention in the text before the Committee (A/AC.42/7 and Corr.1, annex), read as follows:

"Subject to the provisions of this Convention,

- "(a) Each Contracting State shall secure to its own nationals, and to such of the nationals of every other Contracting State as are lawfully within its territory, freedom to seek, receive and impart without governmental interference and regardless of frontiers information and opinions orally, in writing or in print, in the form of art or by duly licensed visual or auditory devices;
- "(b) No Contracting State shall regulate or control the use or availability of any of the means of communication referred to in the preceding paragraph in any manner discriminating against any of its own nationals or of such of the nationals of any other Contracting State as are lawfully within its territory on political grounds or on the basis of their race, sex, language or religion."

Amendments submitted to article 1

- 15. The following amendments to article 1 were submitted:
- (a) A proposal by France (A/C.3/L.830/Rev.1) (1) to insert the following new sub-paragraph as sub-paragraph (a), the existing sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) becoming (b) and (c):
 - "Each Contracting State undertakes to respect and protect the right of every person to choose between several different sources of information";
- (2) to replace the words "and impart without governmental interference and regardless of frontiers information and opinions orally", in the present paragraph (a), by the words "and impart information without governmental interference and regardless of frontiers, whether orally".
- (b) A proposal by Ethiopia, India, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela (A/C.3/L.831) to replace the word "seek" in sub-paragraph (a) by the word "gather".
- (c) A proposal by Peru (A/C.3/L.834) to insert, in sub-paragraph (a), the following phrase: "save as provided in article 2", so that this part of the paragraph would read "without governmental interference, save as provided in article 2, and regardless of ...".

- 16. At the Committee's 979th meeting, the representative of France orally revised his first amendment to article 1 (A/C.3/L.830/Rev.1) to read as follows:
- "(a) Each Contracting State undertakes to respect and protect the right of every person to have at his disposal diverse sources of information;".

The representative of France also withdrew his second amendment to article 1 (A/C.3/L.830/Rev.1).

17. At the suggestion of the representative of Lebanon, it was agreed that in the amendment by Ethiopia, India, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela (A/C.3/L.831), the word "gather" should be rendered in French by "rassembler".

Voting on article 1

- 18. The Committee then proceeded, at its 979th meeting, to vote on article 1, as formulated by the Committee on the Draft Convention on Freedom of Information. and on the amendments thereto, as follows:
- (a) The words "Subject to the provisions of this Convention" were adopted by 51 votes to none, with 11 abstentions.
- (b) At the request of the representative of the United Arab Republic, a separate vote was taken on the words "and protect" in the French amendment as orally revised by the representative of France (see paragraph 16 above). The words "and protect" were adopted by 36 votes to 14, with 13 abstentions.
- (c) At the request of the representative of Italy, a roll-call vote was taken on the French amendment to article 1 as orally revised (see paragraph 16 above). The amendment was adopted by 51 votes to 1, with 14 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium. Brazil, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Italy, Japan, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Mexico, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Against: Hungary.

Abstaining: Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Israel, Pakistan, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Spain Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Yemen.

- (\underline{d}) The amendment by Ethiopia, India, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela (A/C.3/L.831) was adopted by 30 votes to 29, with 7 abstentions.
- (e) The amendment by Peru (A/C.3/L.834) was adopted by 33 votes to 15, with 18 abstentions.
- (f) Paragraph (a) of article 1, as thus amended (now sub-paragraph (b)), was adopted by 39 votes to 4, with 20 abstentions.
- (g) Sub-paragraph (b) of article 1, as formulated by the Committee on the Draft Convention of Freedom of Information (now paragraph (c)), was adopted by 49 votes to none, with 12 abstentions.

(h) At the request of the representative of Lebanon, a roll-call vote was taken on the text of article 1 as amended, as a whole. The article was adopted by 41 votes to 4, with 21 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Brazil, Bulgaría, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Canada, Ceylon, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, France, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Japan. Lebanon, Mexico, Morocco, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Thailand, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Sweden.

Abstaining: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Cambodia, Chile, China, Colombia, Finland, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Spain, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

19. The text of article 1 as thus adopted is given in the annex to the present report.

OTHER AMENDMENTS

20. Cuba submitted amendments (A/C.3/L.832) to articles 2 and 4 of the draft Convention, and Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela an amendment (A/C.3/L.843) proposing the insertion of a new article 6. The Committee did not consider these amendments at the General Assembly's fourteenth session.

DRAFT RESOLUTION

21. Afghanistan, Colombia, Cuba, Guatemala, Honduras, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco and the Philippines submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.839 and Add.1) concerning the future consideration of the draft Convention on Freedom of Information. The draft resolution was adopted by 43 votes to 2, with 17 abstentions (see paragraph 22 below).

Recommendation of the Third Committee

22. The Third Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ANNEX

TEXT OF THE PREAMBLE AND ARTICLE 1 OF THE DRAFT CONVENTION ON FREEDOM OF INFORMATION

The following is the text of the preamble and article 1 of the draft Convention on Freedom of Information as adopted by the Third Committee at its 977th meeting on 4 December 1959 and its 979th meeting on 7 December 1959, respectively:

Preamble

The States Parties to this Convention.

Bearing in mind the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human rights,

Considering that freedom of expression, information and opinions are fundamental human rights,

Considering that the free interchange of accurate, objective and comprehensive information and of opinions, both in the national and in the international spheres, is essential to the causes of democracy and peace and for the achievement of political, social, cultural and economic progress,

Considering that freedom of information implies respect for the right of everyone to form an opinion through the fullest possible knowledge of the facts,

Desiring to co-operate fully with one another to guarantee these freedoms and to promote democratic institutions, friendly relations between States and peoples and the peace and welfare of mankind, and

Recognizing that in order to achieve these aims the media of information should be free from pressure or dictation, but that these media, by virtue of their power for influencing public opinion, bear to the peoples of the world a great responsibility, and have the duty to respect the truth and to promote understanding among nations,

Have accepted the following provisions:

Article 1

Subject to the provisions of this Convention,

- (a) Each Contracting State undertakes to respect and protect the right of every person to have at his disposal diverse sources of information;
- (b) Each Contracting State shall secure to its own nationals, and to such of the nationals of every other Contracting State as are lawfully within its territory, freedom to gather, receive and impart without governmental interference, save as provided in article 2, and regardless of frontiers, information and opinions orally, in writing or in print, in the form of art or by duly licensed visual or auditory devices;
- (c) No Contracting State shall regulate or control the use or availability of any of the means of communication referred to in the preceding paragraph in any manner discriminating against any of its own nationals or of such of the nationals of any other Contracting State as are lawfully within its territory on political grounds or on the basis of their race, sex, language or religion.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 852nd plenary meeting on 10 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Third Committee (A/4341, para. 22). For the final text, see resolution 1459 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1459 (XIV). DRAFT CONVENTION ON FREEDOM OF INFORMATION

The General Assembly,

Not having been able to conclude at its fourteenth session the consideration of the draft Convention on Freedom of Information,

Decides to give priority to this item at its fifteenth session and to request the Third Committee at that session to devote as many meetings as possible to the consideration of the remaining articles of the draft Convention on Freedom of Information.

852nd plenary meeting, 10 December 1959.

Document A/4096

[Original text: English/French] [8 April 1959]

Introduction

- 1. By note of 27 March 1959 addressed to the Secretary-General, the Permanent Representative of France to the United Nations transmitted the following documentation:
 - I. A letter from the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs dated 23 March 1959, No. 010, addressed to the Secretary-General;
- II. The text of the "Réformes outre-mer";1
- III. The text of the "Constitution de la Communauté".2
- 2. In conformity with General Assembly resolutions 222 (III) of 3 November 1948 and 1051 (XI) of 20 February 1957, the Secretary-General brings to the attention of Members the text of the letter from the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs under section I, below. Regarding the text of the "Réformes outre-mer", the present note provides, under section II, a preliminary reference to those parts of the text which are relevant to the status of the Territories which are referred to in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the letter from the French Foreign Office. Under section III, attention is drawn to the "Constitution de la Communauté" with particular reference to some of the Titles. Because of their length, the relevant excerpts from these texts will be reproduced at a later stage.

Ι

- 3. The text of the letter reads as follows:
- "1. The French Government, in conformity with the declaration contained in Chapter XI of the Charter, furnished regularly each year from 1946 to 1957, the information provided for in Article 73. On each such occasion, it pointed out that it was for the administering State alone to determine which were the Territories whose peoples had not yet attained a full measure of self-government under the terms of the Charter.
- "2. The French Government, as it duly notified the Secretariat, therefore ceased to transmit information on the following Territories as they reached the requisite stage of development: in 1947, on Guadeloupe, Martinique, French Guiana, Réunion, New Caledonia, the French Establishments in Oceania, and St. Pierre and Miquelon; in 1948, on the Associated States of Indo-China and the French Establishments in India; in 1956, on Tunisia and Morocco.
- "3. Information continued to be furnished on French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, Madagascar, the Comoro Archipelago, French Somaliland and New Hebrides.

- "4. Except with regard to New Hebrides, where the existence of the condominium created a special situation, the French Government decided to stop transmitting this information as from 1957. Under the "loicadre" of 23 June 1956 and the decrees issued in application thereof, a series of reforms were instituted which had the effect of granting these Territories internal autonomy. This autonomy and the liberal trend of the evolutionary process marked by the enactment of the "loi-cadre" were strengthened in 1958 by the establishment of the Community.
- "5. Attached are documents relating to the status of the various Territories on which information is no longer being transmitted."

A. RÉFORMES OUTRE-MER

I. LOI-CADRE

Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956 authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible

After consultation with the Assembly of the French Union, The National Assembly and the Council of the Republic have deliberated,

The National Assembly has adopted,

The President of the Republic promulgates the following Act:

TITLE I

Provisions concerning the reform of institutions, administrative structures, and economic and social organization

Article 1. Without prejudice to the expected reform of Title VIII of the Constitution, in order to give the overseas peoples a more direct share in the management of their own interests, measures of administrative decentralization and devolution shall be introduced within the Territories, Groups of Territories and central services for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible.

To this end, decrees made in the manner prescribed by article 6 of Act No. 48-1268 of 17 August 1948, on the report of the Minister for Overseas France and, as appropriate of the Ministers concerned, may:

- 1. Modify the role and powers of administration and management of the general governments with a view to transforming them into co-ordinating bodies, and modify the composition and functions of the Grand Councils and of the Representative Assembly of Madagascar;
- 2. Institute Government Councils in all the Territories and in addition, in Madagascar, Provincial Councils responsible, in particular, for administering the territorial services;
- 3. Grant broadened deliberative powers, in particular for the organization and administration of the territorial services, to the Assemblies of the Territories as well as to the Representative Assembly and Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar; regarding the exercise of their functions, which will be defined in the decrees to be issued, the Assemblies may, when the decrees made under this article authorize them to do so, abrogate or modify any regulation governing matters falling within the said functions;

4. Determine the conditions for the establishment and operation, as well as the functions, of the councils in the administrative "circonscriptions" and rural communities, and the procedure for the grant of legal status to these "circonscriptions," without prejudice to the establishment of new municipalities.

The decrees made in pursuance of this article may modify, abrogate or reproduce in the form of regulations existing legislative provisions.

They shall be simultaneously filed with the secretariat of the National Assembly and submitted to the Assembly of the French Union, which shall have fifteen days in which to express its opinion.

(Act. No. 57-702 of 19 June 1957). "The National Assembly shall decide on their adoption, rejection or modification within a period of two months and transmit them to the Council of the Republic. The latter shall have forty-five days from the date of transmission in which to state its decision.

"The consideration of the decrees must be completed by Parliament within a period of one hundred and thirty-five days from the date on which they are filed with the secretariat of the National Assembly."

The Government text shall be adopted or reconsidered should either Assembly fail to reach a decision.

On the expiry of this time limit, the decrees, if they have not been modified or rejected by Parliament, shall come into force in the form in which Parliament shall have adopted them.

Article 2. The Assemblies of the Territories or Groups of Territories, the Representative Assemblies and, where appropriate, the Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar may decide that breaches of the regulations resulting from their deliberations, if not already punishable with greater penalties under the law in force, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or with a fine not exceeding 300,000 French francs or both these penalties, according to a scale determined, for each category of offences, by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories, the Chief Administrator of the Territory or the Chief Provincial Administrator, upon the proposal of the Assembly.

Article 3. The Government may, by decree made in the Council of Ministers on the report of the Minister for Overseas France and, where appropriate, of the Ministers concerned, and after consultation with the Council of State, introduce a reform of the public services in the Overseas Territories aimed at defining, on the one hand, the State services responsible for administering the interests of the State and, on the other hand, the territorial services responsible for administering the interests of the Territories, as well as for assigning their respective functions to those services. The purpose of this reform shall be:

On the one hand, to facilitate the access of native-born civil servants to all ranks in the administration;

On the other hand, to establish independent regulations pertaining to the civil service overseas, applicable to the territorial services. For this purpose, the Government shall determine the conditions for the constitution of territorial establishments and the definition of the regulations applicable to them and their methods of remuneration, especially as regards basic pay while ensuring that established officials and employees of the government railways who are currently employed will retain their acquired rights, in particular with respect to salaries, social benefits, pensions and regular professional advancement.

In pursuance of the above paragraphs and without prejudice to their provisions, the general regulations applicable to the employees of the territorial services shall be defined by an order made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council, after deliberation by the Territorial Assembly.

The regulations applicable to the individual categories of employees of these services, the methods and rates of their remuneration, the rules governing vacations and social benefits shall be determined by an order made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council after consultation with the Territorial Assembly, without prejudice to the rights of any officials permanently transferred to the services.

Article 4. The Government may, in the manner prescribed in article 3 above and without prejudice to Act No. 46-860 of 30 April 1946 and the legislative provisions relating thereto, take all measures to raise the standard of living in the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, to promote economic development and social advancement and to facilitate economic and financial co-operation between Metropolitan France and those territories, especially:

By the general dissemination and the standardizing of education:

By organizing and supporting the production of goods necessary for the economic equilibrium of the Territories and the needs of the franc area;

By introducing modern methods of rural development and establishing a land-registration plan whereby the customary rights of the indigenous inhabitants will be respected;

By establishing and enforcing the registration of births, marriages and deaths;

By establishing suitable credit and savings facilities;

By amending financial laws and regulations in any way likely to promote private investment overseas, without prejudice to the prerogatives of the Territorial Assemblies;

By taking all measures to ensure social advancement.

The Government shall make all necessary arrangements to ensure on a permanent basis and at the level of the Office of the President of the Council the co-ordination of economic and financial measures affecting Metropolitan France and the Overseas Territories alike.

Article 5. The decrees referred to in articles 3 and 4 may modify or abrogate legislative provisions, with the exception of those concerning the organization and protection of labour, or extend to the Territories all or part of the legislative provisions in force in Metropolitan France. These decrees shall come into force on publication in the Journal official of the French Republic, but they shall become definitive only after the procedures and time limits provided for in article 1 have been observed.

Article 6. Decrees made under Title I of this Act may prescribe either the penalties specified by earlier laws on the same subjects, provided that the classification of offences and the nature and amount of the penalties applicable may not be changed, or the penalties prescribed under article 471, paragraph 15, of the Penal Code, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or a fine not exceeding 300,000 French francs or both these penalties.

Article 7. The powers conferred on the Government under articles 1, 3, 4 and 5 of this Act shall expire on 1 March 1957.

TITLE II

Provisions concerning the Trust Territories of Togoland and the Cameroons

Article 8. The Government is hereby authorized to establish, by decree in the Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly and the Council of State, a statute for Togoland. This statute must accord with the purposes defined in the Trusteeship Agreement and with the principles laid down in the Preamble to the French Constitution. It shall specify the division of competence and financial costs between the State and the Territory, the powers of the local assembly and of the local executive and its members, and the rights and freedoms guaranteed to Togolanders.

A referendum to be held on the basis of universal suffrage and by secret ballot, the date of and procedure for which shall duly be determined by decree in the Council of Ministers with the agreement of the Territorial Assembly, shall enable the populations to choose between the statute referred to in the foregoing paragraph and the maintenance of trusteeship as provided for in the Agreement of 13 December 1946.

The statute shall enter into force provisionally immediately upon its publication in the Journal officiel of Togoland. Subject to the signing of the international instrument terminating trusteeship, the statute shall become definitive if the results of the referendum provided for in the preceding paragraph are fayourable to it.

As long as the statute remains provisional in character, such trusteeship as seems advisable, to be defined by the transitional provisions of the statute, shall be exercised over the powers of the local authorities.

Article 9. Taking into account the Trusteeship Agreements, the Government, by decrees made after consultation with the Territorial Assembly and the Assembly of the French Union, may, with respect to the Cameroons, introduce institutional reforms and establish provinces, provincial assemblies and provincial councils.

These decrees shall come into force at the end of a period of four months after they are submitted to Parliament.

TITLE III

Provisions concerning the institution of universal suffrage and of the single electoral college

Article 10. In the territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, elections to the National Assembly, to the Territorial Assemblies, to the Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar, to the "conseils de circonscription" and to the Municipal Assemblies shall be held on the basis of universal suffrage of citizens of both sexes, irrespective of their personal status, who are over the age of twenty-one, are duly registered in the roll of electors and are not disqualified for any reason specified by law.

The penalties which entail disqualification from registration in the rolls of electors shall be those established by the laws in force in Metropolitan France.

Article 11. The methods of balloting for the elections referred to in article 10 may not be modified except by law, with the exception of elections to the "conseils de circonscription" and to the Municipal Assemblies organized under article 53 of Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955.

Article 12. The election of members of the National Assembly, of the Council of the Republic, of the Territorial Assemblies, of the Representative Assembly and the Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar, of the "conseils de circonscription," and of the Municipal Assemblies of the "communes de plein exercice," the "communes de moyen exercice" and the mixed communes shall be by a single electoral college.

TITLE IV

Miscellaneous provisions and temporary provisions concerning the institution of universal suffrage and of the single electoral college

Article 13. In the territory of French Somaliland, where the renewal of the Representative Council in March 1957 is not prescribed by the laws and regulations now in force, elections to the said Council shall be held not later than 1 May 1957.

Article 14. As a transitional measure, pending the next renewal of the National Assembly, the Territorial Assemblies and the Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar, as well as of the Municipal Assemblies referred to in article 12, in cases where the electors were formerly grouped into two colleges, any vacancy occurring through death, resignation or any other cause shall be filled on the basis of universal suffrage by the electoral college to which the seat concerned was formerly assigned.

As a transitional measure, pending the next renewal of the Territorial and Provincial Assemblies in the territories in which the members of the Council of the Republic are elected by a dual electoral college, any vacancy occurring through death, resignation or any other cause shall be filled by the electoral college to which the seat concerned was formerly assigned.

Article 15. An administrative regulation shall provide, if necessary, for a special revision of the rolls of electors for which it shall set the time limits.

Article 16. All provisions contrary to Titles III and IV of this Act, in particular article 3, as amended, of Act No. 51-586 of 23 May 1951 concerning the election of deputies to the National Assembly in the territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, are hereby abrogated.

The present Act shall be enforced as a law of the State.

^{*} Investment Fund for Economic and Social Development.

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. This Decree shall determine the general organization of the civil public services in the Overseas Territories and of the establishments of civil officials who are responsible for their administration.

TITLE I

State services and civil service establishments

Article 2. The functions vested in and general organization of the State services, as defined in article 2 of Decree No. 56-1227 of 3 December 1956, shall be determined by decrees made in Council of Ministers on the proposal of the Minister for Overseas France and of the Ministers concerned, after consultation with the "Conseil d'Etat."

The procedures for applying these decrees in each Territory or Group of Territories shall be determined by orders to be made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory or by the High Commissioner.

Article 3. The State services shall be administered:

- 1. By officials of the French civil service establishment serving overseas; the staff for this establishment shall be recruited, on a preferential basis, from among officials of the existing general establishments of Overseas France having corresponding functions;
- 2. In so far as the "gendarmerie," the police and the customs service are concerned, by auxiliary establishments organized locally by the Chief Administrator in the case of a Territory or by the High Commissioner in the case of a Group of Territories; their regulations and conditions of remuneration shall be similar to those of the territorial establishments on the same recruitment level; these auxiliary establishments shall be instituted by an order to be made jointly by the Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs;
- 3. By officials of territorial establishments placed at the disposal of the said services in conditions to be determined by administrative regulations;
 - 4. By officials and employees of metropolitan establishments;
 - 5. If necessary, by temporary staff.

Article 4. (Decree No. 57-480 of 4 April 1957). "Within one year from the publication of this Decree in the Journal official of the French Republic, provisions shall be inserted in the special regulations governing the officials of the French civil service establishment serving overseas, excluding those referred to in article $5\ (c)$ of Decree No. 56-1227 of 3 December 1956 defining the State services in the Overseas Territories and enumerating State personnel, to reserve not less than $66\ \text{per}$ cent of the available posts to:

- "(a) Graduates born in the Overseas Territories, who, if they satisfy the general requirements for entrance to the civil service by the regular competitive examinations, shall be admitted to a special recruitment examination;
- "(b) Officials of the territorial establishment and the auxiliary State service establishment, who were born in the Overseas Territories or who have resided there continuously for ten years, and who, being selected on the basis of their qualifications, on the recommendation of a commission established for the purpose by the Minister for Overseas France, are admitted to advanced training courses which are to be organized to prepare them for the various posts on the French civil service establishment;
- "(c) Officials of the territorial establishment and the auxiliary State service establishment who were born in the Overseas Territories or who have resided there continuously for ten years, and who satisfy the requirements for admission to professional examinations; these examinations shall be organized in accordance with rules similar to those which, in metropolitan France, govern admission to similar civil service establishments.

"The foregoing provisions shall apply to candidates for posts and positions that are filled by examination or any other method of recruitment, excluding appointments made by special decree of the Council of Ministers. "In the cases provided for in paragraphs (b) and (c) above, a special quota of posts shall be reserved to each Territory or Group of Territories for recruitment in the State services operating in the Territory or Group of Territories.

"If for a time the requirements enumerated in paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) above should make it impossible to fill all the posts so reserved, the remaining posts shall be filled by the regular recruitment of French civil service staff.

"The age limits for the various competitive and other examinations for entrance to the French civil service establishment shall be extended by five years in favour of candidates who were born in the Overseas Territories or who have resided there continuously for ten years.

"Within a period of one year similar provisions shall be made in favour of officials who are candidates for professional examinations and who were born in the Overseas Territories or have resided there continuously for ten years."

Article 5. Officials of the French civil service establishment serving overseas shall be governed by the provisions of the Act of 19 October 1946 in the same manner as officials of the same category.

Officers of the judiciary shall continue to be governed by their special regulations.

The afore-mentioned officials and judicial officers shall receive, for equivalent ranks, the same base salaries as officials and judicial officers of the metropolitan establishment.

Unless they opt to the contrary, in conditions to be determined by decree, they shall contribute to the general State pension scheme.

The regulations governing accessory salaries, allowances and leave of officials and judicial officers of the State establishment shall be determined by decree enacted in Council of Ministers on the report of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs and the Secretary of State in the Office of the President of the Council responsible for the public service.

Pending the enactment of the decree referred to in the foregoing paragraph, the regulations applicable shall continue to be those established by the legal provisions in force, in particular the provisions of Act No. 50-772 of 30 June 1950.

TITLE II

Territorial services and establishments. Inter-territorial services.

Article 6. The territorial services shall comprise the public services having responsibility for local interests, in all territories, whether or not forming a part of a Group, and in Groups of Territories.

Article 7. (Decree No. 57-480 of 4 April 1957). "The general organization of the territorial public services and of the provincial public services shall be determined by an order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council or by an order of the Chief Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council.

"In the Groups of Territories, the general organization of the services established at the Group level in accordance with article 13 of the Decree of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa, shall be determined by an order of the High Commissioner of the Republic, after consultation with the Grand Council.

"The cost of the territorial public services shall be borne by the territorial budget.

"The cost of the public services of common interest shall be borne by the budget of the Group of Territories.

"In the territorial public services, officials of a special State establishment to be set up by decree made after consultation with the "Conseil d'Etat" may be used for technical assistance missions."

Article 8. (Decree No. 57-480 of 4 April 1957). "The territorial public services shall be administered by officials belonging to territorial or provincial establishments who shall have access to all ranks in the administration.

"The general regulations governing employees of the territorial services of each Territory shall be determined by the Territorial Assembly in the same manner as the fixing of duties and taxes levied under the territorial budget. These general regulations shall include the establishment of a civil service advisory committee with its headquarters in the chief town of the Territory.

"The special regulations applicable to the various establishments of employees of these services, the methods and rates of their remuneration, their pension and social security schemes, including the conditions of leave, shall be determined by an order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory in council after consultation with the Territorial Assembly and with the civil service advisory committee established under the general regulations.

"The general regulations for employees of the territorial services of Madagascar shall be determined by the Representative Assembly.

"The general regulations for employees of the provincial services of Madagascar and the special regulations for the various establishments of employees of these services shall be determined and established in accordance with the second and third paragraphs of this article, the Provincial Assembly, the Provincial Council and the Chief Provincial Administrator being substituted for the Territorial Assembly, the Government Council and the Chief Administrator of the Territory."

Article 9. Officials belonging to existing senior and local establishments shall be permanently transferred ex officio, at a level equivalent to that of their present posts, in the territorial establishments having corresponding functions.

The application of this provision may not have the effect of reducing the remuneration or social welfare benefits of the staff members concerned or of impeding their regular professional advancement, as determined by the laws at present in force.

Article 10. In order to ensure the administration of the territorial services, until such time as all posts on the territorial establishments are filled, recourse shall also be had, under the conditions prescribed in Title III hereunder, to the services of officials belonging to the establishments enumerated in tables I and II annexed to Decree No. 51-510 of 5 May 1951 and of officers of the Overseas France judiciary.

If the number of officials of the establishments referred to in article 8 and the first paragraph of article 9, and in the first paragraph of this article should prove to be insufficient, recourse may be had to the services of officials and employees of the various metropolitan administrations of the State or other public offices and institutions. Such officials and employees shall be seconded to the territorial establishments in the manner prescribed by the Act of 19 October 1946.

TITLE III

Temporary provisions

Article 11. The officials of the establishments enumerated in tables I and II annexed to Decree No. 51-510 of 5 May 1951, at present in service or receiving training in schools, other than the officials referred to in Title I, shall have the benefit of the safeguards provided in article 3 of Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956; they shall, in all cases, continue to be governed by the provisions of the Act of 19 October 1946 and by the special regulations of their particular establishment.

Article 12. The officials referred to in article 11 above may serve in the Overseas Territories and departments on secondment to the territorial establishments in accordance with the terms of the afore-mentioned Act of 19 October 1946.

They may not be reassigned to the staff of the Minister for Overseas France except on six months' notice.

On the expiry of their period of secondment, if this is not renewed, they shall automatically be restored to their original establishment and department.

Article 13. They may be assigned to the central department of the Ministry for Overseas France and its branches.

Article 14. (Decree No. 57-480 of 4 April 1957). "The regulations governing salaries and accessory salaries, allowances and leave of officials of the State establishment as determined in article 5 of this Decree, shall apply to the officials referred to in article 11.

"The Overseas Territories or departments shall bear the costs incurred in applying the regulations for the establishments or posts to which the officials referred to in article 11 are seconded.

"If it should prove impossible to make available to the Territories officials of grades corresponding to the duties to be performed, any additional costs that this may cause shall be borne by the State budget."

Article 15. Where the officials referred to in article 11 are not assigned to one of the posts specified in the first paragraph of article 12 and in article 13 above, they shall be seconded as a matter of form to the central department of the Ministry for Overseas France. The cost of their salaries and allowances shall be borne by the State budget.

Article 16. In order to synchronize the gradual organization and expansion of the staff of the territorial establishments, until they are able to meet the needs of the Territories, with the gradual reduction in the corresponding establishments referred to in article 11 above, suitable territorial staff recruitment plans shall be established by agreement between the Minister for Overseas France and the Government Councils concerned.

Article 17. Officials of the metropolitan establishments at present serving on secondment to the general establishments enumerated in tables I and II annexed to Decree No. 51-510 of 5 May 1951 shall continue to be listed on those establishments and, as such, may be placed at the disposal of the Overseas Territories in the manner prescribed by this Title.

Article 18. (Decree No. 57-480 of 4 April 1957). "The officials referred to in article 11 above may, at their request, be permanently transferred to the territorial service establishments."

TITLE IV

Miscellaneous provisions

Article 19. (Decree No. 57-480 of 4 April 1957). "Officials belonging on the date of publication of this Decree in the Journal official of the French Republic to the establishments enumerated in tables I and II annexed to Decree No. 51-510 of 5 May 1951, and officers of the Overseas France judiciary governed by the Decree of 22 August 1928 shall retain their acquired rights, in particular with respect to salaries, social benefits, pensions, and regular professional advancement.

"If any posts are abolished in a Territory, the Government shall reassign the officials and judicial officers concerned within six months. They shall be transferred as a matter of priority to metropolitan departments which perform certain functions in the Overseas Territories. As many officials shall be transferred in this way as there are posts allocated in those departments for the performance of those functions."

Article 20. As a transitional measure, officials of the senior and local establishments serving at the time of publication of this Decree shall, if they so request, continue in the pension scheme in which they previously participated.

Their option, which shall be final, shall be made within one year from the date of publication in the Journal officiel of the Territory or Group of Territories in which they are serving of the order establishing the special regulations of the establishment to which they are transferred in conformity with article 9 above.

The same option shall be available to any officials of the general establishments who, under article 18, are permanently transferred to the territorial establishments. The option shall be exercised within one year from the date of transfer.

Article 21. Officials of the general establishments regulated by decree and officials of the senior and local establishments in service on the date of publication of this Decree who, on attaining the age limit under the pension scheme applicable to them, do not qualify for a superannuation pension, shall be granted the necessary extension of the age limit to permit them to qualify therefor, provided however that they may not continue in service beyond the age of sixty.

Article 22. Established staff of the government railways and government authorities shall have the benefit of the same safeguards as those listed in Titles II, III and IV (articles 19, 20 and 21) which are applicable to all officials, judicial officers and employees of Overseas France.

Article 22 bis (1). (Decree No. 57-480 of 4 April 1957). "The establishments provided for in Titles I and II of this Decree shall be open to candidates of both sexes."

Article 23. The procedures for the application of this Decree shall be determined as necessary by administrative regulations.

Article 24. The Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of State, Keeper of the Seals, Head of the Ministry of Justice, the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs, the Minister of State for Education, Youth Matters and Sport, the Secretary of State for the Budget, the Secretary of State for Public Works, Transport and Tourism, the Secretary of State for Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones, the Secretary of State in the Office of the President of the Council responsible for information and the Secretary of State in the Office of the President of the public service, shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal official of the French Republic and inserted in the Bulletin official of the Ministry for Overseas France.

After consultation with the Assembly of the French Union;

After a decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree providing for the reorganization of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956,

Decrees as follows:

TITLE I

Organization of the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa

Article 1. The Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Guinea, Upper Volta, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal and the French Sudan, the Gabon, the Middle Congo, Ubangi-Shari and Chad are Overseas Territories having civil personality and financial autonomy.

These Territories shall possess a domain divided into public and private, administered and managed by the territorial institutions and public services. Vacant and ownerless land shall form part of the private domain in the Territories.

Article 2. The Territorial institutions of the Overseas Territories, referred to in article 1, shall comprise:

A Chief Administrator of the Territory;

A Government Council;

A Territorial Assembly, with the functions and powers determined by Decree No. 57-460 of 4 April 1957 defining the powers of the Chief Administrators, Government Councils and Territorial Assemblies of the territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa.

Article 3. The "Conseils privés" shall be abolished in each of the Territories mentioned in article 1, as from the date of the establishment of the Government Councils.

Article 4. With a view to the co-ordination of their economic, financial, social and cultural activities and the development and administration of their joint interests and domain: (1) the Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Guinea, Upper Volta, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal and the French Sudan shall constitute the French West African Group; (2) the Gabon, the Middle Congo, Ubangi-Shari and Chad shall constitute the French Equatorial African Group. These groups of territories shall have civil personality and financial autonomy. The institutions of each of these groups shall comprise:

A Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories;

An assembly, known as the Grand Council.

Each of the groups of Territories mentioned in the first paragraph of this article shall have a domain which it shall administer and manage in the manner prescribed in Titles III and IV hereunder.

TITLE II

The High Commissioner of the Republic

Article 5. A High Commissioner of the Republic shall be appointed to each of the Groups of Territories mentioned in the preceding article. The seat of the High Commissioner's Office shall be determined by decree, subject to the provisions of the seventh paragraph of article 8 hereunder.

Article 6. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall be appointed by decree of the President of the Republic made in Council of Ministers. He shall perform the functions of High Commissioner and of Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories.

Within the jurisdiction of the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa, he shall be the representative of the Government. He shall be responsible directly to the Minister for Overseas France.

The Chief Administrator of a Territory, appointed by decree in Council of Ministers shall be, by permanent delegation of the High Commissioner, the depositary within that Territory of the powers of the Republic.

Article 7. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall be assisted by a General Secretary of the High Commissioner's Office, appointed by decree, who shall replace him in the event of absence or impediment in his dual capacity as High Commissioner and Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories and to whom the High Commissioner may delegate certain of his functions.

Article 8. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall be the depositary of the powers of the Republic for all the territories under the jurisdiction of his Office.

He shall ensure the promulgation, publication and execution of acts and decrees and the application of decisions and instructions of the Minister for Overseas France.

He shall have the power to issue regulations.

He shall ensure and co-ordinate the defence of the Territories under his jurisdiction and their participation in the joint defence effort

He shall ensure the maintenance of public order and the safety of persons and property; he shall see that justice is properly administered.

He shall proclaim martial law ("état de siège").

In case of necessity he may transfer the seat of the High Commissioner's Office, subject to a report being made to the Minister for Overseas France.

The High Commissioner shall communicate with the representatives of the Republic overseas, the authorities of foreign countries in Africa and the representatives of the Republic in those countries, and the duly accredited consular representatives of foreign governments whose jurisdiction extends to the territories of the group.

He shall negotiate with the said authorities and representatives all agreements, in particular those referring to trade, which apply in all or part of the Territories under his jurisdiction, after consultation with the Government Councils concerned and within the scope defined by government instructions. He shall conclude these agreements subject to their approval by the Government of the Republic.

Article 9. The High Commissioner of the Republic, subject to the laws and regulations, and in particular those governing the public services of the State, shall:

- (a) Organize the State services at the Group of Territories level and direct their activities;
- (b) Supervise the use of all appropriations under the State budget;
- (c) Be the secondary certifying officer for the budget of State civil expenditures for the territories under the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner's Office and, in that capacity, he may assign to the Chief Administrators of Territories under his authority all or part of the appropriations assigned to him;
- (d) Represent the State in all judicial matters and in all civil acts and proceedings subject to such delegations of authority as may be prescribed by the laws in force;
- (e) Ensure general co-ordination of the activities of the State services and the joint and territorial services;
- (f) Establish, after consultation with the Grand Council, the general regulations applicable to the authorities responsible for representing economic interests.

Article 10. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall report on the State officials serving in the Group of Territories; he shall exercise disciplinary authority over them as prescribed in article 80 of the Act of 19 October 1946 enacting general regulations for State officials.

He shall make appointments to all civil posts in the State services within the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner's Office, except the posts of Chief Administrator of the Territory. General Secretary to the territorial government or to the High Commissioner's Office, Inspector General of Administrative Affairs, judicial officers, Inspector General of Labour and Social Welfare, and Comptroller. The employees of the State Comptroller's Office, university professors and lecturers, Treasury accountants and officials on the general establishment of the Overseas treasuries shall continue to be governed by their own statutory regulations.

TITLE III

The Group of Territories

Chapter I. The Chief Administrator of a Group of Territories

Article 11. The Chief Administrator of a Group of Territories shall represent the Group in all judicial matters and in all civil acts and proceedings. In the event of litigation between the State and the Group, the Group shall be represented by the President of the Grand Council.

He shall administer the property of the Group and dispose of it in conformity with the decisions of the Grand Council.

He shall arrange for collection of the taxes, duties, charges and fees which are to accrue as reserve to the Group.

He shall have the power to issue regulations to ensure the application and execution of the decisions of the Grand Council and the operation of joint services, which shall be placed under his jurisdiction.

He shall organize the inter-territorial services referred to in article 13 hereunder after consultation with the Grand Council.

He shall make appointments to all posts in the joint services and exercise in regard to officials of those services the disciplinary powers for which their regulations provide.

He shall be the certifying officer for the budget and budget annexes of the Group of Territories and may delegate his functions in that capacity to one or more officials of his choice acting under his responsibility. He may also appoint secondary and deputy certifying officers.

Article 12. When exceptional circumstances so require, the Chief Administrator of a Group of Territories may make orders, which shall be immediately enforceable, with a view to suspending or temporarily reducing import and export duties on mining and petroleum products, and mining and petroleum royalties.

These orders shall be subject to ratification by the Grand Council. If the Grand Council is in session, the orders shall be submitted to it. If the Grand Council is not in session, the orders shall be submitted forthwith to the Standing Committee, which shall report thereon to the Assembly with a view to their ratification. When the decision of the Grand Council has become definitive, it shall have effect from the date on which it was taken.

Chapter II. Organization of the Group of Territories

Article 13. In order to ensure co-ordination of action by the Territories, the following services may be established, apart from the general administrative bodies required for their actual operation, at the level of the Group of Territories.

- 1. A general financial administration, responsible both for the administration of the common interests of the Group and the financial administration of its services;
- 2. An economic affairs co-ordination service, assisted by a statistical survey and co-ordination service;
- 3. A service for the co-ordination of capital equipment and planning problems common to two or more Territories;
 - 4. A geological and mineral prospecting service;
- 5. An academy to co-ordinate the educational, cultural and research services of the Territories;
 - 6. A service for the control of the important endemic diseases;
 - 7. A service for the control of epizootic diseases;
 - 8. A plant health service;
 - 9. A soil conservation service.

This list of services of common interest is restrictive. Nevertheless, this provision shall not limit the right of the Territorial Assemblies, by decision, to make the Group of Territories responsible for the establishment, organization and administration of inter-territorial services or for the establishment, organization and financial supervision of joint public institutions, the cost of which shall be borne by the territorial budgets in proportions to be determined by an agreement approved by the Territorial Assemblies concerned.

Adjacent Territories may, by decision of their respective Assemblies, establish joint services.

Article 14. With a view to the discussion of questions of common interest, the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories may convene an inter-territorial conference to be attended by the Chief Administrators of Territories or their representatives and by the Vice-Presidents of the Government Councils, assisted by competent members of the Government Councils of the Territories concerned.

The conference shall be convened automatically if it is requested by a majority of the Government Councils of the Territories which comprise the Group.

Chapter III. The Grand Council

Article 15. Titles III and IV of the Act of 29 August 1947 are hereby replaced by the provisions of this Chapter and of Chapter IV hereunder.

Article 16. The Grand Council shall be responsible for the administration of the common interests of the Group of Territories.

It shall take decisions on the matters placed within its jurisdiction by the laws and regulations, in particular by articles 17, 19, 20, 22, 23, 24 and 28 to 31 of this Decree. Its decisions may provide penalties, in the manner prescribed by article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

It shall give advisory opinions, in particular in the cases specified in articles 32 to 34 hereinafter.

Article 17. The Grand Council may make recommendations for the purpose of ensuring the co-ordination and possible unification of the regulations and fiscal systems of the Territories. Such recommendations shall be communicated by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories to the Chief Administrators of the Territories concerned, who shall refer them to the Government Councils or to the Territorial Assemblies, as the case may be.

The Grand Council may be called upon to take a decision in any matter within the jurisdiction of the Territorial Assemblies in respect of which the Assemblies or two or more Territories of the Group consider it desirable to have a set of regulations common to the Territories concerned.

If a decision taken by a Territorial Assembly in an economic or financial matter may be prejudicial to the interests of another Territory or other Territories of the Group, the Assemblies of the latter Territories may decide to refer the question to the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories through the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

The Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall convene, in the manner prescribed in article 14, an inter-territorial conference of the various Territories of the Group at which a recommendation shall be drawn up.

If the recommendation is not accepted by the Territorial Assembly concerned, the final decision shall be taken under a decree adopted in Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Assembly of the French Union and after the "Conseil d'Etat" has been heard.

Article 18. No taxes or duties of any kind may be imposed for the benefit of any treasury whatsoever on any products in movement from one Territory to another Territory in the same Group.

Article 19. The Grand Council shall decide on the opening date of its regular sessions, the duration of which shall not exceed two months. Such sessions shall, however, be governed by the rules laid down below.

The Grand Council shall hold two regular sessions each year, upon convocation by the High Commissioner. The first session shall begin during the first quarter of the year and the second before the end of October. The budget shall be considered at the second regular session. If a regular or special session adjourns and the Grand Council has not fixed the date for the opening of its next regular session, the date shall be fixed in due time by the Standing Committee.

The Grand Council shall also be convened in special session:

- (a) If at least two-thirds of its members submit a request in writing to that effect to the President, or
- (b) If the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories makes an order to that effect.

The duration of a special session may not exceed fifteen days.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article
28 of the Act of 29 August 1947.

Article 20. Subject to the provisions of article 21 of this Decree, the Grand Council shall take decisions on draft legislation submitted by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories concerning the domanial interests of the Group.

Article 21. However, the Chief Administrator of the Group may:

- 1. On his own initiative arrange settlements relating to the duties and charges of the Group of Territories in suits involving a sum of less than 5 million francs C.F.A.;
- 2. Accept on his own initiative and on an interim basis, gifts and bequests;
- 3. In cases of emergency and with the concurrence of the Standing Committee, institute any proceedings on behalf of the Group of Territories or defend its interests in such proceedings.

In cases of litigation between the State and the Group of Territories, the proceedings shall be instituted and conducted on behalf of the Group of Territories by the President of the Grand Council or by a member of the Standing Committee appointed especially for that purpose by the Grand Council;

4. Perform any acts for the purpose of conserving or interrupting prescription.

Article 22. The Grand Council may take a decision fixing the amount and conditions of payment of the compensation allotted to its members and also the rules applying to reimbursement of their travel expenses.

Such compensation, whatever its form, shall be fixed by reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Group of Territories.

No member may receive this compensation, during one and the same period, concurrently with either the compensation paid to members of the Territorial Assemblies or the salary of a member of the Government Council of a Territory of the Group.

Officials on active service or on secondment who are members of the Grand Council shall receive the difference between their salary, plus any travel expenses, and the compensation payable to members of the Grand Council, or their salary only, plus any travel expenses, if the total thereof is greater than the said compensation.

The Grand Council may also vote its President an annual lump-sum payment as a representation allowance.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article 27 of the Act of 29 August 1947.

Article 23. Subject to compliance with international conventions, to the provisions of article 32 of the Act of 30 December 1953 and to prior consultation with the "assemblées consulaires" (commercial arbitral assemblies) on matters within their jurisdiction, the Grand Council shall take decisions on the financial implications of any proposal made by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories or by one of its members relating to the following matters:

- 1. Method of assessment and rules for the collection of duties and taxes, including customs duties, collected upon entry into the Group of Territories, and schedules of such duties and taxes:
- 2. Method of assessment and rules for the collection of duties collected upon departure from the Group of Territories, including customs duties, and schedules of such duties, where these apply to mining and petroleum products and to mining and petroleum royalties;
- 3. Contracts to be concluded and specifications to be laid down by the Group of Territories.

No concession to operate a public service applied for by or on behalf of an alien may be granted unless there is agreement between the High Commissioner and the Grand Council. In case of disagreement, the matter shall be settled by decree;

- 4. Schedule of fees payable by concessionaries and of charges for supplies from and performance by the public services of the Group of Territories; fees payable for occupation of public lands of the Group and other related charges;
- 5. Determination of costs coming under the head of "court costs", preparation of schedules of such costs, methods of payment and collection, defining of conditions to be met by the recipients and, in general, regulation of all matters relating to court costs; schedules of fees for the issue of copies of or extracts from public instruments;
- 6. Fiscal tariff agreements relating to taxes levied by the Group of Territories, in the cases provided by law;
- 7. Loans, sureties, guarantees and shares of the Group of Territories in the capital of public and semi-public corporations and, in exceptional cases, of private companies participating in the economic development of the Group of Territories;
- 8. Acceptance of offers to contribute to the expenditures of the Group of Territories, the share of the Group of Territories under its budget in the expenditures of the State, of another Group of Territories or of a Territory which is not a member of a group, or of a public organization of the Group of Territories, in connexion with works which concern the Group of Territories;
- 9. At the request of the Assemblies of two or more Territories of the Group, the establishment or abolition of joint public institutions and inter-Territorial public services attached to the Group of Territories, as enumerated in the penultimate paragraph of article 13, and the agreements to be concluded for that purpose by the Group with the Territories concerned;

10. Subsidies and loans, contributions, refunds and royalties, borrowings, applications for loans or advances and the security to be required for them, investment of funds and alienation of property of the Group of Territories.

The Grand Council may fix a time limit within which the "assemblées consulaires" shall give their advisory opinion. If they fail to do so, the Grand Council shall proceed without their opinion. This time limit may not be less than fifteen days.

Article 24. The budget estimates of the Group of Territories and the budget annexes drawn up in local currency shall be prepared by the Chief Administrative Officer of the Group of Territories and filed by him with the Secretariat of the Grand Council at its second regular session each year. The budgets shall be considered and voted on, when balanced, by the Grand Council at that session.

The revenue and expenditure heads of the budget of the Group of Territories shall be divided into chapters and articles.

The right to amend the estimates of revenue and expenditure shall belong jointly to the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories and to the Grand Council. However, the estimation of future revenue shall be the responsibility of the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories. No proposal to increase expenditures or reduce revenue shall be admissible unless accompanied by a proposal for a corresponding increase in revenue or reduction in expenditure.

A separate decision shall be taken on each chapter of the budget. The budget as a whole shall then be voted upon by the Grand Council, which shall decide where appropriate on measures to be taken to ensure a true balance between revenue and expenditures, taking into account the funds required to cover the expenditures specified in the second paragraph of article 44 hereinafter.

No changes may be made in the budget during the financial year except by the Grand Council, in accordance with the procedure laid down for preparing the budget estimates and in such a manner as to ensure a continued balance between revenue and expenditures. Any transfer from one chapter to another shall be authorized by the Grand Council or, in urgent cases, by its Standing Committee, which shall report thereon to the Grand Council at its next session. No new post may be established unless it is provided for in the budget of the Group of Territories.

Article 25. Proposals for supplementary appropriations and withdrawals from the reserve fund shall be made and decided in the same manner.

In emergencies and when the Grand Council is not in session, supplementary appropriations and withdrawals from the reserve fund may be made by order of the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories with the concurrence of the Standing Committee. Such orders shall be submitted to the Grand Council at its first session thereafter for ratification.

The sole purpose of changes so decided upon shall be to correct errors of estimation or to meet shortages of funds which have become apparent in the light of events subsequent to the preparation of the budget estimates, or to cover expenditures necessitated by unforeseeable circumstances.

Article 26. No benefit may be conferred by the Grand Council on an official or employee or on a category of officials or employees otherwise than on the proposal of the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories.

Unless otherwise provided by law, no special service operating on extra-budgetary account may be established except by an order of the High Commissioner, made in agreement with the Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs.

The establishing order shall define the conditions on which the account is to operate and provide for the supervision of its revenue and expenditures by the Grand Council.

The jurisdiction of the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories and the Grand Council with respect to the drawing up of the schedules of charges and the budgets of bodies established by law to operate as self-governing public authorities ("régies") or as offices shall be defined by the texts laying down the statute of such bodies.

Article 27. If the Grand Council does not meet before the first day of the calendar year, or adjourns without having voted the budget or without having voted a balanced budget, the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall ex officio make an order establishing a provisional budget, taking as the basis the budget for the previous year and the schedule of taxes adopted by the Grand Council. Where necessary, however, this order may prescribe any reductions in expenditures or increases in fiscal or other revenue. The Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall within fifteen days convene the Grand Council in a special eight-day session. If the Grand Council fails to vote a truly balanced budget by the end of the said special session, the budget shall be established in final form by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories, in the manner prescribed hereinabove. If the Grand Council fails to approve all the obligatory expenditures, the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall ex officio enter all or part of the expenditures omitted and shall restore true balance to the budget either by deductions from uncommitted funds or the funds for miscellaneous and unforeseen expenditures or by a reduction in optional expenditures.

Article 28. The Grand Council shall take decisions enacting regulations applicable to all the Territories of the Group in the following matters of common interest:

- (a) The professions, ministerial and public offices;
- (b) Civil procedure, except as regards the system of judiciary;
 - (c) The activities of joint institutions and services;
- (d) The public lands of the Group of Territories. Nevertheless, State rights in respect of immovable property and easements enjoyed by the State may not be prejudiced in any way.

Should the State subsequently allocate certain premises for the operation of public services, such premises shall enjoy the easements for the public advantage inherent in the operation of the said services;

- (e) Control of the major endemic diseases;
- (f) Plant health control;
- (g) Epizootic disease control;
- (h) Internal transport, traffic, haulage;
- (i) Navigation on rivers and canals of interest to a number of Territories;
- (j) After consultation with the National Insurance Council through the Minister for Overseas France, regulations for the purpose of instituting compulsory insurance for individuals and corporate bodies whose civil liability may be involved under articles 1382 to 1386 of the Civil Code, provided that such regulations may not otherwise alter the insurance laws and regulations or be applied to coverage of risks connected with industrial accidents or occupational diseases;

- (k) Methods of applying the regulations governing mineral resources;
- (1) Organization of the savings banks in the Group of Territories;
- (m) Tourism for the purpose of hunting; regulation of hunting in areas set aside for hunting by tourists;
- (n) Forms and terms of invitations for tenders and of contracts to be concluded in the Group of Territories for works and supplies which concern the Group, subject to compliance with the general rules applicable in such matters. These rules shall be laid down by a decree made in the manner prescribed in article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

Article 29. Decisions on the matters referred to in the preceding article may be taken notwithstanding any provisions of law or regulations to the contrary enacted before the date of entry into force of this Decree, subject however to the provisions of international conventions, of the laws and regulations on the matters dealt with in the Commercial Code and the Maritime Code, of the Act of 15 December 1952, of the Act of 30 April 1946 and the decrees adopted in application thereof, of Decrees Nos. 55-625 and 55-634 of 20 May 1955 and of the ethical codes.

Article 30. The acts and decrees relating to the matters listed in article 28 of this Decree shall, however, remain in force, with the effect of regulations for the Group of Territories. These regulations may be cancelled or amended by decision of the Grand Council.

Article 31. The Grand Council shall take decisions regarding the common sections of programmes for implementing and executing the capital equipment and development plan provided for by the Act of 30 April 1946, in the manner prescribed by the decrees made in application of the said Act.

Article 32. The Grand Council shall be consulted in all cases with regard to draft regulatory orders of the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories relating to:

- (a) The general organization of joint services and the general regulations applicable to the employees of such services;
- (b) The application, in respect of the Group of Territories, of the provisions of Act No. 52-1322 of 15 December 1952 establishing a labour code in the Territories and Associated Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;
- (c) The fixing for each category of offences under the regulations issued on the basis of the decisions of the Grand Council, of the scale of penalties applicable in accordance with the conditions laid down in article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

Article 33. The Grand Council shall be consulted in all cases on the grant of mining exploration permits, types A and B, where such permits concern a number of Territories. In the event of disagreement between the Grand Council and the High Commissioner, the matter shall be decided pursuant to a decree made in Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Assembly of the French Union.

Article 34. The following shall in all cases be referred by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories to the Grand Council for its opinion:

- (a) Administrative accounts relating to the execution of the budget of the Group of Territories and the budget annexes, the public authorities ("régies") of the Group of Territories, and the public institutions of the Group of Territories;
- (b) The annual position of the funds of the Group of Territories.

The Grand Council may make any observations on the administrative accounts of the Group of Territories within the time limit prescribed in article 37. Such observations shall be communicated by the President of the Grand Council to the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories, who shall send a copy thereof to the Audit Office through the Minister for Overseas France.

Article 35. The Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall make a statement to the Grand Council at its budgetary session on conditions in the Group of Territories and the state of the joint services.

Article 36. The Grand Council may, through its President, request the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories and the Minister for Overseas France to furnish any information or observations on matters within its competence. It may also ask to hear any head of a joint service in connexion with a matter with which it is dealing.

The Grand Council may ask the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories for any information concerning action taken on its decisions and concerning the execution of the budget, and may present its observations on the subject to the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories.

The Grand Council may assign one or more of its members to gather in the Group of Territories the information it considers necessary in order to deal with a matter within its competence.

Article 37. All matters shall be referred to the Grand Council either by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories or by one of the members of the Council, except matters in respect of which the right of action is vested exclusively in the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories.

In the interval between sessions, bills submitted by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories for decision by the Grand Council and bills proposed by members of the Grand Council shall be filed with the Secretariat of the Standing Committee.

Bills proposed by members of the Grand Council shall be communicated, within ten days from the date of filing, to the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories, who may state his views on them. The Grand Council may not, if the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories so requests, refuse to defer consideration of the bill to its next session, but not later.

The Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall be kept informed of the agenda of the Grand Council and its committees. He may attend and address the meetings of the committees of the Grand Council or send a representative to attend them.

Bills and proposals submitted to the Grand Council for decision shall be considered by the Council at the session during which they were filed or, at the latest, at the following session, unless the Standing Committee is delegated to act on them in the interval between the two sessions.

In matters which must be referred to the Grand Council for its opinion, the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories may, if the Council fails to give its opinion within the time limits prescribed above, proceed without it, after notifying the President of the Grand Council to that effect.

Article 38. The acts of the Grand Council and its Standing Committee shall be delivered in duplicate, together with an extract from the records of meetings relating to the discussion and voting thereon, to the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories within a period of thirty clear days from the closing of the session. Upon receipt of the documents, the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall transmit one set of copies to the Minister for Overseas France.

Within thirty clear days from the date of their receipt, the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall put the decisions of the Grand Council or its Standing Committee into effect or shall either refer them back to the Grand Council for second reading, or refer them to the Minister for Overseas France for the purpose of annulment, in the manner prescribed by articles 39 and 40.

If the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories requests the Minister for Overseas France to annul a decision, he shall so advise the President of the Grand Council or, in the interval between the sessions of the Grand Council, the Chairman of the Standing Committee.

Article 39. The Minister for Overseas France may take action to annul decisions of the Grand Council and its Standing Committee on grounds of excess of power or of violation of the law, by means of a decree made in the form of an administrative regulation.

If, for any reason whatever, a decision of the Grand Council or its Standing Committee which has been submitted to the Minister for annulment has not been annulled within a period of ninety clear days from the date of its communication to the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories, the Chief Administrator shall put it into effect not later than eight clear days after the expiry of the above-mentioned period.

The decisions of the Grand Council or the Standing Committee in customs matters shall continue to be subject to the provisions of article 3 of the Decree of 14 October 1954.

Article 40. The Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories may, within the period of thirty clear days prescribed in article 38, invite the Grand Council to rule at second reading, on decisions taken by it or its Standing Committee, if he considers them to be inconsistent with the general interest or the orderly administration of the Group of Territories.

In that case, the periods prescribed by articles 38 and 39 shall run from the date on which the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories receives the new decision of the Grand Council.

Article 41. Pending the publication of the orders of the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories putting into effect the decisions of the Grand Council or its Standing Committee, all taxes, duties, charges and fees shall be levied on the former bases and in accordance with the previous schedules.

Decisions taken by the Grand Council or its Standing Committee, at a session which began before 1 January, in the matter of direct taxes or of duties or charges treated as such, shall have effect as from that date, even if they could not be made enforceable by then.

Similarly, if it has not been possible to put the budget into effect before 1 January, the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall be authorized to make provisional monthly appropriations on the basis of the appropriations in the budget for the preceding year. Further appropriations may be made each month until the budget is put into effect.

Article 42. A code of the regulations resulting from the decisions of the Grand Council and a code of administrative regulations made by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall be established under orders to be made by the Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories and published in the Journal officiel of the Group of Territories. The said codes shall be brought up to date annually.

Article 43. The Chief Administrator of the Group of Territories shall each month communicate to the Standing Committee of the Grand Council a detailed report, as at the end of the preceding month, of budgetary receipts, obligations, orders of assignment and payment issued against the budget, the budget annexes and the extra-budgetary accounts of the Group of Territories.

He shall also communicate to the Standing Committee a quarterly summary concerning the execution of the budget of the Group of Territories, as shown by the consolidated accounting report and the periodic reports submitted by the assistant certifying officers.

The Standing Committee may, in order to verify that deductions of expenditures under the budget are in order, request the production of particular payment orders.

The Standing Committee shall receive quarterly reports concerning the status of works being carried out under the budget of the Group of Territories and under the section relating to the Group of Territories in the Investment Fund for the Economic and Social Development of the Overseas Territories, instituted under the Act of 30 April 1946.

The Standing Committee may request the Grand Council to appoint one of the Council's members to ascertain on the spot the progress being made with particular works being carried out under the budget of the Group of Territories.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article 65 of the Act of 29 August 1947.

Chapter IV. Budget of the Group of Territories

Article 44. The budget of the Group of Territories shall cover:

(a) The debts of the Group of Territories;

- (b) Contributions and assessments payable by the Group of Territories under legislative or contractual provisions;
 - (c) Expenditure for supervision of common public services;
- (d) Operating costs of common public services and institutions, agencies and operations established at the territorial group level. A schedule of posts indicating the establishment of the services shall be annexed to the budget documents;
- (e) General capital expenditures not covered by the territorial budgets;
- (f) Any subsidies granted by the Grand Council in aid of the budgets of the Territories in the Group.

The budgetary appropriations shall cover expenditure relating to:

- (a) Settlement of due debts and covering of previous budget deficits:
- (b) Contributions, assessments and expenditures imposed under legislative provisions. A decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956 shall specify the manner in which this paragraph shall be applied.

Article 45. Revenue for financing the budget of the Group of Territories shall be derived from:

- (a) Revenue from duties and taxes levied on imports into the Group of Territories;
- (b) One-half of the mining and petroleum royalties and one-half of the duties levied on exports of mineral and petroleum products from the Territories of the Group;
 - (c) Income from the property of the Group;
 - (d) Revenue of the services of the Group;
- (e) Fees paid by concessionnaires, farmers and other operators of Group services;
- (f) Interest on loans and security deposits, sums realized from borrowings and from financial investments or participations resulting from agreements signed or contracts concluded on behalf of the Group;
- (g) Gifts and bequests to the Group and unforeseen and miscellaneous revenue;
- (h) Withdrawals from the reserve fund of the Group and any other revenue accruing to the Group.

Article 46. Any funds available under the budget of the Group of Territories at the end of the financial year, after the expenditures specified in article 44 have been met and payment has been made into the reserve fund of the Group of Territories of the amount necessary to maintain the statutory minimum level, shall be refunded to the treasuries of the Territories of the Group, by decision of the Grand Council, in proportion to the actual volume of production and consumption activities taxed in each of the Territories.

TITLE IV

Miscellaneous and temporary provisions

Article 47. This Decree shall enter into force in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956. Nevertheless, subject to the provisions of the second paragraph of this article, the provisions of paragraphs 24 and 25 and the last sub-paragraph of article 38 and of article 46 of the afore-mentioned Act of 29 August 1947 shall remain provisionally in force until 31 December 1957 at the latest.

The provisions of article 13, article 23, paragraphs 1 and 2, and articles 44 and 45 of this Decree shall take effect not later than 1 January 1958. They may enter into force before that date in accordance with procedures established by orders made by the High Commissioner of the Republic, which shall adjust, as necessary, the provisions of the Act of 29 August 1947, referred to in the preceding paragraph.

Article 48. All laws and regulations conflicting with this Decree, in particular, the Decree of 18 October 1904 providing for the reorganization of the Office of the Governor-General of French West Africa, the Decree of 4 December 1920 providing for the reorganization of the Government Council of French West Africa and its Standing Committee, articles 2 to 5 of the Decree of 4 December 1920 providing for the administrative reorganization of Senegal, articles 2 to 8 and 12 to 19 of the Decree of 16 October 1946 providing for the administrative reorganization of French Equatorial Africa, the Decree of 22 December 1946 providing for the establishment of "conseils privés" in the Territories of French West Africa, excluding Senegal, and subsequent amending texts, are hereby rescinded.

However, nothing in these provisions shall be an impediment in the areas with which the "Organisation commune des régions sahariennes" is concerned, to measures taken under Act No. 57-27 of 10 January 1957.

Article 49. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall make orders as necessary establishing procedures for the application of this Decree.

Article 50. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal official of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-459 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of Government Councils in the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Acting on the reports of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs and the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956 authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, particularly article 1 thereof;

Having regard to Decrees Nos. 46-2374 and 46-2375 of 25 October 1946 providing for the establishment of territorial assemblies in French Equatorial Africa and French West Africa;

Having regard to Act No. 52-130 of 6 February 1952 concerning the establishment of group assemblies and local assemblies in various territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Having regard to Decree No. 57-458 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having consulted the Assembly of the French Union;

After a decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of Government Councils in the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956.

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. This Decree lays down the conditions and procedures for the establishment and operation of the Government Councils established in the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa by Decree No. 57-458 of 4 April 1957 aforesaid.

Article 2. The Government Council shall be presided over by the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

The Territorial Assembly shall elect, in the manner prescribed by the following articles, not less than six nor more than twelve members of the Government Council, who shall have the title of Minister.

The Government Councillor obtaining the largest number of votes shall assume the title of Vice-President of the Government Council.

The Government Council shall have the right to resign if it considers that it no longer enjoys the confidence of the Territorial Assembly.

On matters within their competence, the members of the Government Council shall be required to answer any questions or requests for explanations from members of the Territorial Assembly.

Article 3. The Ministers shall be French citizens in possession of their civil and political rights and not less than twenty-five years of age. The Ministers shall be liable under criminal law for any crimes or offences committed in the performance of their functions.

Article 4. No one may be a member of more than one Government Council of territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible.

Article 5. The members of the Government Council shall be elected by the Territorial Assembly from within or outside its membership by triple ballot, without splitting of votes or preferential voting.

The electors may vote for a single list only, without deletion or addition of names or modification of the order in which the candidates are listed. Any ballot paper not satisfying these conditions shall be void.

Each member of the Assembly may cast one vote for one of the lists submitted.

If no list obtains a majority of the votes cast by the members of the Assembly on the first two ballots, the third ballot shall be decided by a relative majority.

Article 6. The lists of candidates shall be delivered to the President of the Assembly no later than the day before the day on which the first ballot is to be held.

New lists may be drawn up after each ballot. They shall be delivered to the President of the Assembly not later than three hours before the opening of the meeting scheduled to hold the second or third ballot.

The lists shall be read out before the commencement of each ballot.

Each list shall include as many names as there are members to be elected.

Candidates who are not members of the Territorial Assembly shall satisfy the conditions of eligibility laid down for the election of Territorial Councillors.

They shall be subject to the same conditions with regard to ineligibility and the offices incompatible with membership.

Article 7. The validity of the election may be challenged by the candidates or by the members of the Territorial Assembly. The other provisions of articles 20 to 23, inclusive, of the abovementioned Decrees of 25 October 1946 shall apply to disputes concerning elections to the Government Council.

Article 8. Ministers may not continue in office beyond the term of the Assembly which elected them; nevertheless, their term shall be extended to the date of installation of the new Government Council, which shall take place not later than fourteen days after the opening of the first session of the new Assembly.

Article 9. Ministers shall be required to maintain secrecy regarding the proceedings of the Council and the matters referred to it.

Article 10. A Minister may not at the same time exercise the functions of:

Member of the Government of the Republic;

President of the Territorial Assembly;

Chairman or member of the Standing Committee of the Territorial Assembly.

A Minister who finds that he holds one of the incompatible offices specified above shall opt within fifteen days. If, at the end of that period, he has not made known his choice, he shall be deemed to have relinquished the office of Minister.

Article 11. Ministers may submit their resignation to the President of the Government Council.

Article 12. A Minister may be removed from office by the Chief Administrator of the Territory on the proposal of the Vice-President of the Government Council.

Article 13. If a Minister's seat becomes vacant through death, resignation or any cause whatsoever, such vacancy shall be filled in the following manner: if there are several seats to be filled an election shall be held in the manner prescribed by articles 5 and 6; if a single seat is to be filled an election by uninominal ballot shall be held, the first two ballots being decided by an absolute majority and the third ballot by a relative majority.

Article 14. In addition to reimbursement of their transportation and travel expenses, the Vice-President and the Ministers shall receive an annual allowance, payable monthly, the amount of which shall be fixed uniformly by the Territorial Assembly with reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Territory.

Article 15. The expenditures necessary for the operation of the Government Council, in particular those relating to the compensation payable to Ministers, the installation and equipment of the Council and the travel of its members, shall be borne by the territorial budget.

Article 16. The Government Council shall sit in the chief town of the Territory, unless otherwise decided by an order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

The agenda shall be prepared by the President of the Government Council.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall provide a Secretariat for the Council and shall be responsible for the safekeeping of the Council's records. These records shall include those of the "Conseil privé".

The General Secretary of the Territory may attend the meetings of the Council.

Article 17. The Government Council may not be dissolved except by a decree made in Council of Ministers after consultation with the Territorial Assembly.

Article 18. The provisions of this Decree shall enter into force in respect of each of the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa no later than 1 July 1957.

Article 19. The procedures for the application of this Decree shall be determined, as necessary, by orders to be made by the Chief Administrators of the Territories.

Article 20. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal officiel of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-460 of 4 April 1957 defining the powers of the Chief Administrators, Government Councils and Territorial Assemblies of the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Acting on the reports of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs and the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956 authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, particularly articles 1 and 2 thereof;

Having regard to Decrees Nos. 46-2374 and 46-2375 of 25 October 1946 providing for the establishment of Territorial Assemblies in French Equatorial Africa and in French West Africa;

Having regard to Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 providing for municipal reorganization in Africa and in Madagascar;

Having regard to Act No. 46-860 of 30 April 1946 for the establishment, financing and execution of plans for the equipment and development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Having regard to Decree No. 57-458 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa;

Having regard to Decree No. 57-459 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of Government Councils in the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having regard to the opinion of the Assembly of the French Union:

Having regard to the decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree defining the powers of the Government Councils in the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa and broadening the powers of the Territorial Assemblies of the said Territories, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956,

Decrees as follows:

TITLE I

The Chief Administrator of the Territory

Article 1. The powers of the Republic shall be vested, within the Territory, by permanent delegation of the High Commissioner, in the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be appointed by decree made in Council of Ministers. He shall rank under the Minister for Overseas France and the High Commissioner of the Republic in the Group of Territories.

He shall be responsible to and receive instructions from the Government. He shall exercise authority over all the State services functioning in the Territory.

Within the Territory, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall represent the Republic and the Group of Territories in all judicial matters and in all civil acts and proceedings.

Under the authority of the High Commissioner, he shall be responsible for the maintenance of public order in the Territory. He shall have the right of requisition.

He shall communicate with the Chief Administrators of neighbouring Territories, with the Chief Administrators of the Territories of the Group, and with the High Commissioner of the Republic, having jurisdiction over the Territory.

Article 2. The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be the representative of the Territory.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall perform his functions in accordance with the laws and regulations in force.

He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Territory.

Article 3. The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be assisted by a General Secretary, appointed by decree, who shall replace him in the event of absence or impediment in his dual capacity as representative of the Government and Chief Administrator of the Territory, and to whom he may delegate his powers.

TITLE II

Functions of the Government Councils

Article 4. The Government Council, presided over by the Chief Administrator of the Territory and under his high authority, shall be responsible for administration of the territorial services.

Article 5. In the absence of the Chief Administrator of the Territory, the Vice-President shall preside over the Government Council.

Chapter I. Collective functions

Article 6. The Government Council shall act in matters within its competence as defined in this chapter. All its members shall be jointly responsible for such decisions as it takes under their collective functions.

All proposals relating to matters concerning the Territory, to be submitted to the Territorial Assembly and its Standing Committee for consideration, shall be drawn up in Government Council

Article 7. Regulatory decisions concerning the administration of territorial affairs, including orders on which the Territorial Assembly must first be consulted, shall be taken in the Government Council.

The Council shall delegate the Minister competent to give the Assembly any explanations which may be required concerning the application of the Assembly's decisions.

Article 8. Orders or decisions relating to the following subjects, in particular, shall be adopted in Government Council:

- (a) Financial regulation of internal trade and prices;
- (b) Organization of fairs and markets:
- (c) Measures for applying the regulations concerning assistance to production;
- (d) Establishment of institutions representing economic interests after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
- (e) Organization of chiefdoms, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly:
- (f) Establishment, elimination and modification of "circonscriptions administratives" in the Territory and modification of their boundaries, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly:
- (g) Establishment, constitution, organization and operation of rural communities and "conseils de circonscription," after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
- (h) Establishment of communes, other than "communes de plein exercice," after consultation with the Territorial Assembly:
 - (1) Establishment of registry offices;
 - (j) Expansion of fundamental education;
- (k) The special regulations applicable to the territorial civil service establishments, salary scales, leave provisions, social benefits and pensions, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
- (1) The regulations adopted to give effect to legislation concerning labour and working conditions.

Article 9. The directors of territorial public services placed under the direct control of the Ministers shall be appointed by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council, on the recommendation of the Minister having jurisdiction over the service in question.

Article 10. The Government Council shall decide all questions concerning the administration of domanial and financial interests and territorial public works.

However, in respect of the subjects listed in articles 28 and 31, it shall decide only on measures to give effect to the decisions of the Territorial Assembly.

Article 11. When exceptional circumstances so require, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may, by orders made in Government Council, take such immediately enforceable decisions as are necessary to suspend or temporarily reduce export duties, with the exception of those on mining and petroleum products, and indirect taxes on production, movement and consumption of goods.

Such decisions shall be subject to ratification by the Territorial Assembly. If the latter is in session, the decisions shall be submitted to it immediately. If the Territorial Assembly is not in session, the decisions shall be submitted to the Standing Committee at its first meeting thereafter; the latter shall report thereon to the Assembly at its next session, with a view to their ratification. When the decision of the Assembly has become definitive, it shall have effect from the date on which it was taken.

Article 12. If the Chief Administrator of the Territory considers that a decision of the Government Council exceeds the Council's powers or is likely to prejudice national defence, public order or the maintenance of security or public freedoms, he shall refer it through the High Commissioner, to the Minister for Overseas France. The latter may annul the decision by a decree made after consultation with the "Conseil d'Etat." Such decree shall be issued within the three months following the date of the decision. During this period the decision shall be suspended.

Article 13. Subject to the powers of the Administrative Disputes Council, appeal against decisions of the Government Council may be lodged with the "Conseil d'Etat" ruling as an administrative disputes court.

Article 14. Any decision taken by the Government Council in the absence from the Chair of the Chief Administrator of the Territory, his legal deputy or the Vice-President, shall be null and void.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall by means of an order accompanied by a statement of his reasons, declare the meeting illegal, pronounce any decisions taken null and void and take such steps as are required to ensure the immediate adjournment of the Council.

He shall report on the matter to the Minister for Overseas France through the High Commissioner.

Article 15. The Vice-President shall lay annually before the Government Council for its opinion the report which he is required to submit to the Assembly on the general activities of the Government Council and the functions of the territorial public services.

Chapter II. Individual functions

Article 16. Each Minister shall be made responsible, by delegation from the Chief Administrator of the Territory, after consultation with the Vice-President, for the administration of one or more territorial public services.

Article 17. The functions of the Ministers shall be defined by an order made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory, countersigned by the Vice-President and published in the Journal officiel.

Article 18. Each Minister shall be responsible to the Government Council for the functioning of the public services and the conduct of the affairs of the administrative branch within his jurisdiction and shall report regularly to the Government Council thereon.

Article 19. A Minister may be made responsible for an administrative branch having one or more divisions, the administration of which is entrusted to other Ministers but whose activities he co-ordinates.

Article 20. The Minister responsible for the operation of a branch or division of the territorial administration shall take all decisions concerning the conduct of affairs within the jurisdiction of the territorial public services with which his branch or division is concerned, except for matters within the jurisdiction of the Government Council or the Territorial Assembly.

He may set up a secretariat within the limits of the budgetary appropriations voted by the Assembly.

He shall direct the services of his branch or division with the assistance of heads of department ("chefs de service") to whom he shall delegate all necessary powers.

He shall be responsible for ensuring that his services carry out the decisions of the Government Council and of the Territorial Assembly.

Article 21. The Minister shall submit to the Government Council, after preparation by his services, such matters as require the making of an order or the taking of a decision in Government Council.

He shall also present to the Government Council such proposals and reports on matters falling within the jurisdiction of his branch or division as are required to be submitted to the Territorial Assembly. He shall be responsible for following the discussion of such matters and speaking in support of them in the Territorial Assembly, in accordance with the instructions of the Government Council. He may be assisted in this by officials of his services.

Article 22. In accordance with the staff regulations of the officials and employees concerned and on the recommendation of the Minister to whom they are responsible, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall:

Appoint and promote personnel of the territorial establishments:

Assign officials and employees to posts in the territorial public services and impose or recommend, as appropriate, any necessary disciplinary measures against such officials and employees.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory, acting in Government Council, may delegate the powers specified in the two preceding paragraphs to each of the Ministers concerned as part of their functions and in respect of certain categories of staff.

Reports on territorial public service employees shall be made successively by the officials responsible for making such reports under the general and special regulations applicable to the civil service establishments and by the Minister responsible for the service to which they are assigned.

Article 23. In addition to the general obligation specified in article 9 of Decree No. 57-459 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of Government Councils in the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa, each member of the Government Council shall be bound, in respect of his individual actions on behalf of the branch or division for which he is responsible, by the same rules of professional secrecy as apply to public service officials.

Article 24. Where necessary, detailed procedures for the application of this Title shall be issued in the form of orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory and countersigned by the Vice-President.

TITLE III

Functions of the Territorial Assemblies

Article 25. Title III of Decrees Nos. 46-2374 and 46-2375 of 25 October 1946 providing for the establishment of territorial representative assemblies in French Equatorial Africa and in French West Africa is hereby replaced by the following provisions.

Article 26. The Assembly shall vote the budget of the Territory.

It shall take decisions on the matters placed within its jurisdiction by the laws and regulations, in particular by articles 27 to 29, 31, 36, 39 and 40 of this Decree. Its decisions may provide penalties, in the manner prescribed by article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

It shall give advisory opinions, in particular in the cases specified in articles 41 to 43 hereunder.

Article 27. The Assembly may take a decision fixing the amount and conditions of payment of the monthly compensation allotted to its members and also the rules applying to reimbursement of their travel expenses.

Such compensation, whatever its form, shall be fixed by reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Territory.

No member may receive this compensation concurrently with the compensation paid to members of the Government Council or that paid to members of the Constitutional Assemblies.

Officials on active service or on secondment, who are members of the Assembly, shall receive the difference between their salary, plus any travel expenses, and the compensation payable to members of the Assembly, or their salary only, plus any travel expenses, if the total thereof is greater than the said compensation.

The Assembly may also vote its President an annual lump sum payment as a representation allowance.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of articles 18 of Decrees Nos. 46-2374 and 46-2375 of 25 October 1956.

Article 28. In matters relating to domanial interests and territorial public works, the Assembly shall take decisions on all proposals made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council, dealing with the following subjects:

- (a) Settlements relating to duties and charges of the Territory in suits involving a sum of more than 10 million francs C.F.A.;
- (b) Acceptance or refusal of gifts or bequests to the Territory, involving encumbered immovable property. By a decision taken in Government Council, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may accept all such gifts or bequests on an interim basis. The subsequent decision of the Assembly shall have effect as from the date of such provisional acceptance. In urgent cases, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may by himself take all necessary interim measures and accept gifts and bequests;
 - (c) Transfer of immovable property of the Territory;
- (d) Selection of the method of operating public works in the Territory;
- (e) Granting of agricultural and forestry concessions and temporary foresting permits for periods exceeding five years;
- (f) Classification and declassification of public land and, in particular, of territorial main roads, aerodromes operated under the territorial budget, canals and fords.

Article 29. After decision by the Territorial Assembly, the Government Council shall grant type B mining exploration permits.

Article 30. The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall represent the Territory in all judicial matters and in all civil acts and proceedings.

Article 31. Subject to international conventions, to the provisions of article 32 of the Act of 31 December 1953, to the functions of the Grand Council, and to prior consultation with the "assemblées consulaires" on matters within their jurisdiction, the Assembly shall take decisions on the financial implications of any proposal made by the Government Council or by one of its members relating to the following matters:

(a) Determination of taxes, charges, apportioned charges, duties and contributions of all kinds, including customs duties, which may be levied in aid of the territorial budget, establishment of their method of assessment, rules for their collection and schedules of such duties and taxes, and maximum amounts of additional centime tax which may be collected in aid of communities or public institutions in the Territory.

No taxes or duties of any kind may be imposed for the benefit of any treasury whatsoever on any products in movement from one Territory to another Territory in the same Group;

- (b) Contracts to be concluded and specifications to be laid down by the Territory. No concession applied for by or on behalf of an alien may be granted unless there is agreement between the Chief Administrator of the Territory and the Territorial Assembly. In case of disagreement, the High Commissioner shall make an order ruling on the application;
- (c) Schedules of fees payable by persons holding licences to operate public services in the Territory, and of charges for supplies from and performance by the territorial services;
- (d) Maximum rates of duties and taxes of all kinds to be collected in aid of secondary units and public agencies functioning within the Territory, with the exception of "communes" governed by the Act of 18 November 1955;
- (e) Fees payable for occupation of public lands of the Territory and other related charges;
- (f) Regulations governing charges for services and for the provision of materials, labour and work;
 - (g) Fiscal tariff agreements in the cases provided by law;
- (h) Loans, sureties, guarantees and shares of the Territory in the capital of public and semi-public corporations and, in exceptional cases, of private companies participating in the economic development of the Territory;
- (i) Establishment and abolition of territorial public services and territorial public institutions;
- (j) Determination of the number of scholarships and other school grants payable out of territorial funds in accordance with the regulations in force;
- (k) Conditions for the grant of settlers' installation loans out of territorial funds;
- (1) Grants, offers of assistance and loans from the territorial budget to the budgets of other public organizations or public institutions of the Territory, the Group of Territories or the State;
- (m) Contributions, refunds and fees payable to public institutions in the Territory, the Group of Territories or the State;
- (n) Borrowings or applications by the Territory for loans or advances from the State, the "Caisse centrale de la France d'outre-mer" or other public credit institutions, and resources of the Territory assigned as security for such loans or advances.

The Assembly may fix a time limit within which the "assemblées consulaires" shall give their opinion. If they fail to do so, the Assembly shall proceed without their opinion. This time limit may not be less than fifteen days from the date on which notice of the request for an opinion is given.

Article 32. The budget estimates of the Territory and the budget annexes, drawn up in local currency, shall be prepared by the Government Council and submitted to the Assembly at its second regular session each year by the Minister responsible. They shall be considered and voted, when truly balanced, by the Assembly at that session.

The revenue and expenditure heads of the territorial budget shall be divided into chapters and articles.

The revenue of the territorial budget shall consist of the following:

- (a) Revenue from taxes, duties, charges, apportioned charges, contributions and fees levied in aid of the territorial budget;
- (b) Revenue obtained from the furnishing of supplies and performance by the territorial public services;
- (c) Income from territorial public land and fees payable by concessionaires, farmers and other operators of territorial public services:
 - (d) Grants-in-aid, subsidies, advances and contributions;
 - (e) Sums realized from borrowings;
- (f) Gifts, bequests, unforeseen revenue and miscellaneous income;
- (g) Withdrawals from the reserve fund and any other revenue which may accrue to the territorial treasury.

The territorial budget shall cover the following items of expenditure:

- 1. The debts of the Territory;
- 2. Cost of the territorial public services and of the instituttions, agencies and operations under their jurisdiction. A schedule of posts indicating the number of personnel shall be annexed to the budget documents;
- 3. The cost of territorial public works, maintenance and equipment;
- 4. Contributions, loans, subsidies, refunds, participations and grants-in-aid approved in the interests of the Territory;
- 5. Contributions and assessments payable by the Territory under legislative or contractual provisions.

Article 33. The right to amend the estimates of revenue and expenditure shall belong jointly to the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council and to the Assembly. However, the estimation of future revenue shall be the responsibility of the Chief Administrator of the Territory acting in Government Council. No proposal to increase expenditures or reduce revenue shall be admissible unless accompanied by a proposal for a corresponding increase in revenue or reduction in expenditure.

A separate decision shall be taken on each chapter of the budget. The budget as a whole shall then be voted upon by the Assembly, which shall decide, where appropriate, on measures to be taken to ensure a true balance between revenue and expenditure, taking into account the funds required to cover the expenditures specified in article 49 hereinafter.

No changes may be made in the budget during the financial year except by the Assembly, in accordance with the procedure laid down for preparing the budget estimate and in such a manner as to ensure a continued balance between revenue and expenditure. Any transfer from one chapter to another and any supplementary appropriation or withdrawal from the reserve fund shall be authorized by the Assembly or, in urgent cases, by the Standing Committee, which shall report thereon to the Assembly at its next session. No new post may be established unless it is provided for in the territorial budget.

In emergencies and when the Assembly is not in session, supplementary appropriations and withdrawals from the reserve fund may be made by order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council, with the concurrence of the Standing Committee. Such orders shall be submitted for ratification to the Assembly at its first session thereafter. The sole purpose of changes so decided upon shall be to correct errors of estimation or to meet shortages of funds which become apparent in the light of events subsequent to the preparation of the budget estimates, or to cover expenditures necessitated by unforeseeable circumstances.

No direct or indirect benefit may be conferred by the Assembly on an official or employee or on a category of officials or employees, otherwise than on the proposal of the Chief Administrator of the Territory made in the Government Council.

Article 34. If the Assembly does not meet before the first day of the calendar year, or adjourns without having voted the budget or without having voted a truly balanced budget, the Chief Administrator shall ex officio make an order in Government Council establishing a provisional budget, taking as the basis the budget for the previous year and the schedule of taxes adopted by the Assembly. Where necessary, however, this order may prescribe any reductions in expenditures or increases in fiscal or other revenue. The Chief Administrator, acting in Government Council, shall within fifteen days convene the Assembly in a special eight-day session. If the Assembly fails to vote a truly balanced budget by the end of the said special session, the budget shall be established in final form by the Chief Administrator in Government Council, in the manner prescribed hereinabove. Any new revenue created in this way shall, if derived from direct taxes or from duties or charges treated as such, be payable as of 1 January.

If the Assembly fails to approve all the obligatory expenditures, the Chief Administrator shall ex officio enter the expenditures all or part of which have been omitted and shall restore true balance to the budget either by deductions from uncommitted funds or the funds for miscellaneous and unforeseen expenditures or by a reduction in optional expenditures.

Article 35. Unless otherwise provided by law, no special service operating on extra-budgetary account may be established except by an order made by the High Commissioner after consultation with the Comptroller. In the event of disagreement, the High Commissioner shall refer the matter for decision to the Minister for Overseas France and the special service may not be authorized without the agreement of the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs. The establishing order shall define the conditions on which the account is to operate and provide for the supervision of its revenue and expenditures by the Territorial Assembly.

The jurisdiction of the Chief Administrator and the Territorial Assembly with respect to the drawing up of the schedules of charges and the budgets of bodies established by law to operate as self-governing public authorities ("régies") or as public offices shall be defined by the texts laying down the statutes of such bodies.

Article 36. The Assembly shall take decisions enacting territorial regulations in the following matters:

- 1. The general regulations applicable to employees of the territorial establishments, pursuant to the decrees concerning the public service provided for in article 3 of the Act of 23 June 1956;
- 2. Customary law relating to civil status and regulation of civil status within the framework of the relevant legislation;
- 3. Verification, description and codification of traditional customs; adaptation of customs to social evolution; immovable property and immovable property rights regulated by custom and, in particular, definition of the customary rights to be treated as real rights capable of establishing credit; in general, all matters coming under local law;
- 4. The public lands of the Territory, including vacant and ownerless lands, which form part of the Territory's private domain. Nevertheless, rights in respect of immovable property and easements enjoyed by the State or the Group of Territories on the date of this Decree may not be prejudiced in any way;

Should the State or the Group of Territories subsequently allocate certain premises for the operation of public services, such premises shall enjoy the easements for the public advantage inherent in the operation of the said services;

- 5. Internal trade, handicrafts and all occupations relating to those activities, such as those of salesmen, pedlars and the like;
- 6. Agriculture, forests, regulation of inland water resources, soil conservation and the protection of nature and plant-life;
 - 7. Stock-raising, the movement, sale and slaughter of cattle;
- 8. River and coastal fishing, without prejudice to the provisions of the Act of 1 March 1888;
- 9. Tourism and hunting outside the areas set aside for hunting by tourists:
- 10. Traditional local beverages; manufacture and sale of beverages; conditions of hygiene and safety in retail liquor establishments;
 - 11. Preparation of products for export, not including the fixing of standards, which shall continue to be regulated by decree;

- 12. Inland waterways, not including inter-territorial waterways;
- 13. Mutual societies, subject to the provisions of Decree No. 56-1155 of 13 November 1956 concerning rural development mutual societies and of any general laws which may be enacted in this field:
 - 14. Producers' and consumers' associations, co-operatives;
- 15. Establishment of savings banks, not including postal savings banks and savings banks belonging to the Group of Territories;
- 16. Public hygiene, thermal springs, the protection of public health and the insane;
- 17. Societies working in health, education and training; care of delinquent and abandoned children;
- 18. Town planning; regulation of dangerous, unsuitable and insanitary premises; environmental conditions, low-cost housing, rents;
- 19. Primary and secondary education, vocational and technical education, not including study programmes, examination programmes and procedures, certificates and diplomas and teachers' qualifications;
- 20. Regulations concerning scholarships granted out of the Territory's budgetary funds;
 - 21. Public libraries, cultural centres;
 - 22. Sports and physical education;
 - 23. Welfare, assistance, relief and allowances, lotteries;
 - 24. Protection of monuments and historic sites;
 - 25. Prison system;
- 26. The conditions in which aliens are required to obtain administrative authorization before engaging in certain professions and commercial and industrial occupations;
- 27. Procedure and conditions for acceptance of tenders and award of contracts, subject to the general rules applicable in these matters. These rules shall be established by a decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

Article 37. Decisions on the matters referred to in the preceding article may be taken notwithstanding any provisions of law or regulations to the contrary enacted before the date of entry into force of this Decree, subject, however, to the provisions of international conventions, of the laws and regulations on the matters dealt with in the Commercial Code and the Maritime Code, of the Act of 15 December 1952, the Act of 30 April 1946 and Decrees Nos. 55-625 and 55-634 of 20 May 1955, and of the laws and regulations respecting the prevention of fraud and the inspection of weights and measures.

Article 38. The acts and decrees relating to the matters listed in article 36 above shall, however, remain in force, with the effect of territorial regulations in these matters.

These territorial regulations may be cancelled or amended by decision of the Assembly.

Article 39. The Assembly shall decide on the opening date and duration of its regular sessions. Such sessions shall, however, be governed by the following rules:

The Assembly shall hold two regular sessions each year. The first shall begin during the second quarter of each year and the second during the fourth quarter. The budget shall be considered at the second regular session. If a regular or special session adjourns and the Assembly has not fixed the date for the opening of its next regular session, the date shall be fixed in due time by the Standing Committee. The duration of a regular session may not exceed two months.

The Assembly may also be convened in special session:

- (a) If at least two-thirds of its members submit a request in writing to that effect to the President;
- (b) If the Chief Administrator of the Territory makes an order to that effect in Government Council.

The duration of a special session may not exceed one month. The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article 24 of each of the Decrees Nos. 46-2374 and 46-2375 of 25 October 1946.

Article 40. The Assembly shall take decisions regarding the territorial section of programmes for implementing and executing the capital equipment and development plan provided for by the Act of 30 April 1946, in the manner prescribed by the decrees made in application of the said Act.

Article 41. The Assembly shall be consulted in all cases with regard to draft regulatory orders made in Government Council and relating to:

- (a) The general organization of the territorial public services;
 - (b) The organization of chiefdoms;
- (c) The special regulations applicable to employees of the territorial public service establishments, method and scales of remuneration, leave provisions, social benefits and the pension scheme applicable to such employees;
- (d) Labour and social security provisions, in particular, the application in respect of the Territory of the provisions of Act No. 52-1322 of 15 October 1952 establishing a labour code in the Territories and Associated Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;
- (e) Officials of the French civil service establishments who are seconded to territorial public services;
- (f) The establishment, organization and operation of Mixed Communes;
- (g) The establishment of institutions representing economic interests;
 - (h) Measures to encourage production;
- (i) The fixing, for each category of offences under the regulations issued on the basis of the decisions of the Territorial Assembly, of the scale of penalties applicable in accordance with the conditions laid down in article 2 of Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956.

Article 42. The Assembly shall be consulted in all cases on the grant of type A mining exploration permits, where such permits concern the Territory alone. In the event of disagreement between the Assembly and the authority competent to issue the permits, the matter shall be decided pursuant to a decree made in Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Assembly of the French Union.

Article 43. The following shall in all cases be referred to the Assembly by the Government Council:

- (a) Administrative accounts relating to the execution of the territorial budget and the budget annexes, public authorities ("régies") of the Territory and the territorial public institutions;
 - (b) The annual position of the Territory's funds.

Any observations which the Assembly may decide to make on the accounts of the Territory within the time limit specified in article 46 shall be communicated by the President of the Assembly to the Chief Administrator of the Territory, who shall send a copy thereof to the Audit Office through the High Commissioner and the Minister.

Article 44. The Assembly may, through its President, request the Chief Administrator of the Territory and the Minister for Overseas France to furnish any information and observations on matters within its competence. It may ask to hear any Minister in connexion with a matter with which it is dealing.

It may ask the Government Council for any information concerning action taken on its decisions and concerning the execution of the budget, and may present its observations on the subject to the Government Council.

The Assembly may assign one or more of its members to gather in the Territory the information it considers necessary in order to deal with a matter within its competence.

Article 45. All matters shall be referred to the Assembly by the Government Council or by one of its members, except matters in respect of which the right of action is vested exclusively in the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

In the interval between sessions, bills submitted by the Government Council for decision by the Assembly and bills proposed by members of the Assembly itself shall be filed with the Secretariat of the Standing Committee.

Members' bills shall be communicated, within ten days from the date of filing, to the Government Council, which may give its opinion on them. The Territorial Assembly may not, if the Government Council so requests, refuse to defer consideration of the bill to its next session, but no later.

The Government Council shall be kept informed of the agendas of the Assembly and its committees. Its members may attend and address the meetings of the Assembly's committees or be represented at them.

Bills and proposals submitted to the Assembly for decision shall be considered by the Assembly at the session during which they were filed, or, at the latest, at the following session, unless the Standing Committee is delegated to act on them in the interval between the two sessions.

In matters which must be referred to the Assembly for its opinion, the Government Council may, if the Assembly fails to give its opinion within the time limit prescribed above, proceed without it, after notifying the President of the Assembly to that effect.

Article 46. The acts of the Assembly and its Standing Committee shall be delivered in triplicate, together with an extract from the records of meetings relating to the discussion and voting thereon, to the Chief Administrator of the Territory within a period of thirty clear days from the closing of the session. Upon receipt of the documents, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall transmit them to the Minister for Overseas France and to the High Commissioner.

Within thirty clear days from the date of their receipt, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall put the decisions of the Assembly or its Standing Committee into effect or shall refer them either to the Assembly for second reading or to the Minister for Overseas France through the High Commissioner for the purpose of annulment, in the manner prescribed by articles 47 and 48 hereinbelow.

If the Chief Administrator of the Territory requests the Minister for Overseas France to annul a decision of the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee, he shall so advise the President of the Assembly or, in the interval between the sessions of the Assembly, the Chairman of the Standing Committee.

Decisions of the Assembly or its Standing Committee concerning economic and financial matters shall be communicated through the Chief Administrators of the Territories to the Presidents of the Territorial Assemblies of the other Territories or to the Chairmen of their Standing Committees.

In the absence of a request for annulment, these decisions shall be put into effect on the expiry of a period of sixty days from the date of their communication by the Chief Administrator of the Territory to the Chief Administrators of the other Territories of the Group. Nevertheless, if during this period, a Territorial Assembly of the Group, or its Standing Committee, decides that a particular decision is prejudicial to the interests of the Territory, the procedure prescribed by articles 14 and 17 of the Decree providing for the reorganization of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa shall be applicable.

Article 47. The Minister for Overseas France may take action to annul decisions of the Assembly and its Standing Committee on grounds of excess of power or of violation of the law, by means of a decree made in the form of an administrative regulation.

If a decision of the Assembly or its Standing Committee which has been submitted to the Minister for Overseas France for annulment is not annulled within a period of ninety clear days from the date of its communication to the Chief Administrator of the Territory, the latter shall put it into effect not later than eight clear days after the expiry of the above-mentioned period.

The decisions of the Assembly or its Standing Committee in customs matters shall continue to be subject to the provisions of article 3 of the Decree of 14 October 1954.

Article 48. The Chief Administrator of the Territory may, within the period of thirty clear days prescribed in article 46, invite the Assembly to rule at second reading on decisions taken by it or by its Standing Committee, if he considers them to be inconsistent with the general interests or the orderly administration of the Territory.

In that case, the periods prescribed by articles 46 and 47 shall run from the date on which the Chief Administrator of the Territory receives the new decision of the Assembly.

Article 49. The territorial budgetary appropriations shall cover expenditure relating to:

- (a) Settlement of due debts and covering of previous budget deficits:
- (b) Contributions, assessments and expenditures imposed under legislative provisions. A decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956 shall specify the manner in which this paragraph shall be applied.

Article 50. Pending publication of the orders of the Chief Administrator of the Territory putting the decisions of the Assembly or its Standing Committee into effect, all taxes, duties, charges and fees shall be levied on the former tax bases and m accordance with the previous schedules.

Decisions taken by the Assembly or its Standing Committee, at a session which began before 1 January, in the matter of direct taxes or of duties or charges treated as such, shall have effect as from that date, even if they could not be made enforceable by then.

Similarly, if it has not been possible to put the budget into effect before 1 January, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be authorized to make provisional monthly appropriations on the basis of the budgetary appropriations for the previous year. Further appropriations may be made each month until the budget is put into effect.

Article 51. A code of the territorial regulations resulting from the decisions of the Assembly and a code of the administrative regulations made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be established under orders made by the Chief Administrator in Government Council and published in the Journal officiel of the Territory. The said codes shall be brought up to date annually.

TITLE IV

Miscellaneous and temporary provisions

Article 52. This Decree shall enter into force in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956. Nevertheless, subject to the provisions of the second paragraph of this article, the provisions of paragraphs 24 and 25 of article 39, and of article 46 of Act No. 47-1620 of 29 August 1947 defining the method of election, composition, functioning and competence of the Group Assemblies in French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa, shall remain provisionally in force until 1 July 1957 at the latest.

Orders shall be made by the High Commissioner before 1 July 1957 with a view to adapting the above-mentioned provisions of the Act of 29 August 1947 and to transferring to the territorial institutions the functions devolving upon them under this Decree, in particular in fiscal and budgetary matters and in the establishment and organization of the territorial public services and their establishments of employees, and the determination of the regulations applicable to them.

Article 53. All laws and regulations conflicting with this Decree are hereby rescinded, with respect to French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa.

However, nothing in the provisions of this Decree shall be an impediment, in the areas with which the "Organisation commune des régions sahariennes" is concerned, to measures taken under Act No. 57-27 of 10 January 1957.

Article 54. The Chief Administrators of Territories shall make orders, as necessary, determining the procedures for the application of this Decree.

Article 55. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal official of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-461 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of rural communities in French West Africa and French Equatorial

The President of the Council of Ministers, Acting on the report of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs and the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956 authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, in particular, article 1, paragraph 4, thereof,

Having regard to the Decree of 30 December 1912, as amended, concerning the financial administration of the Overseas Territories,

Having regard to the Act of 5 April 1884 concerning municipal organization, in particular, articles 169 to 179 thereof,

Having regard to Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 providing for municipal reorganization in Africa and Madagascar,

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers,

Having consulted the Assembly of the French Union,

After a decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of rural communities in French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956.

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. In the Territories of French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa the Chief Administrators may, by orders made in Government Council after consultation of the Territorial Assembly, establish rural communities possessing legal status, where such communities have sufficient resources to balance a budget.

These rural communities may be formed of "circonscriptions administratives," parts of "circonscriptions administratives" or groups of "circonscriptions administratives."

Article 2. The rural community shall be administered by a rural community council.

Article 3. The rural community may bring actions at law and shall be represented in court by the president of its council.

Article 4. The rural community shall have a budget, which shall be approved by its council and put into effect by the Chief Administrator of the Territory, who shall supervise its administration.

The council shall take decisions on all measures affecting the domain and the domanial interests of the community; it shall, in particular, decide on the programme of economic and social projects to be carried out with funds from the community budget and shall take all necessary decisions for its application.

Article 5. The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall determine, by an order, the manner in which administrative and financial supervision ("tutelle") over rural communities shall be exercised. Such supervision shall be defined by reference to the provisions of Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 providing for municipal reorganization in French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, Togoland, the Cameroons and Madagascar.

He shall exercise this supervision himself or he may delegate its exercise to the chief officers of the "circonscriptions administratives." However, the Chief Administrator may take the place of the person delegated by him whenever he considers it advisable to do so.

Article 6. With respect to their domain, finances and budget, rural communities shall be separate and distinct from other public communities.

Two or more rural community budgets may not be combined, nor may the budget of a rural community be combined with the budget of a "commune de plein exercice," a "commune de moyen exercice" or a mixed commune.

When a new commune or a new rural community is established, there shall be a redistribution of property between the communities affected thereby.

Any rural community may contribute to the budgetary expenditure of another public community where such expenditure relates to matters of common interest.

Article 7. The budget of a rural community shall be truly balanced when approved.

If the budget is not approved in time, the supervisory authority shall order the council of the community concerned to convene in special session and shall set the date therefor. The council shall then decide the matter within a period of eight days and the budget shall immediately be referred back to the supervisory authority.

If a truly balanced budget is not approved after a second deliberation or is not referred back to the supervisory authority within one month, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall make the necessary adjustments and balance the budget.

If the budget for the next financial year is not approved in true balance, the Chief Administrator of the Territory, in Government Council, shall establish it ex officio. In addition, the council of the rural community concerned may be dissolved by an order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory, made in Government Council; in such case the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall appoint a special delegation. A new rural community council shall then be established within three months.

If a rural community council fails to approve a truly balanced budget over a period of at least three successive years, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall, by an order made in Government Council, either declare the council concerned dissolved and appoint a special delegation pending the establishment of a new council as described above, or withdraw legal status from the rural community or combine the community with another rural community. If a rural community is dissolved or combined with another rural community, the future disposition of its domain shall be regulated by an order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

Article 8. The general rules and special procedures for the application of this Decree shall be laid down by the Chief Administrators of Territories in orders made in Government Council, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly.

These orders shall determine, in particular:

- (a) The composition of the rural community councils and the conditions in which they are to operate and perform their functions;
- (b) The items of the budget and, in particular, the nature of the regular and extraordinary funds available to the rural communities, as well as the authority of the latter to contract loans:
- (c) The procedures for the execution and audit of the said budgets;
- (d) The conditions in which a rural community may be required to share in, or may contribute to, expenditure incurred by another public community for a common purpose;
- (e) The rules applicable to any associations the establishment of which may be authorized between the public communities of a "circonscription," as defined with respect to communes in articles 169 to 179 of the Act of 5 April 1884 as amended.

Article 9. The conditions governing the appointment of accountants for rural communities and the accounting rules applicable to such communities shall be determined by an order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

Independently of the conditions governing the exercise of administrative and financial supervision prescribed in article 5 above, supervision of financial and accounting operations shall be exercised by the Comptroller's Office, in accordance with article 17 of Decree No. 52-1356 of 19 December 1952. It shall also be exercised either on a permanent basis by the chief officer of the "circonscription administrative" or on a contingent basis by the administrative affairs inspectors.

Article 10. All provisions which conflict with this Decree are hereby rescinded.

Article 11. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal officiel of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-462 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of Madagascar

The President of the Council of Ministers, Acting on the report of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs, the Minister for the Armed Forces and National Defence and the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956, authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, in particular articles 1 and 3;

Having regard to the Decree of 11 December 1895 relating to the powers of the Resident-General of Madagascar;

Having regard to the Decree of 30 July 1897 establishing the office of Governor-General of Madagascar;

Having regard to Decree No. 46-2509 of 9 November 1946 providing for the administrative reorganization of Madagascar;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having regard to the opinion of the Assembly of the French Union;

Having regard to the decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree providing for the reorganization of Madagascar, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956,

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. In order to ensure the co-ordination and administration of the interests of the island and its dependencies as a whole, Madagascar shall constitute a territorial unit which shall have its own institutions and shall comprise the Provinces of Fianarantsoa, Majunga, Tamatave, Tananarive, Tuléar and Diégo-Suarez.

These Provinces shall constitute public communities, having institutions responsible for the management and administration of matters of concern to the Province.

TITLE I

The High Commissioner of the Republic

Article 2. In Madagascar the administration of the affairs of the State shall be under the jurisdiction of a High Commissioner of the Republic.

The seat of the High Commissioner's Office shall be determined by decree, subject to the provisions of the seventh paragraph of article 5 hereunder.

Article 3. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall be appointed by decree of the President of the Republic made in Council of Ministers. He shall perform the functions of High Commissioner and of Chief Administrator of the Territory.

Within the jurisdiction of Madagascar he shall be the representative of the Government. He shall be directly responsible to the Minister for Overseas France.

Article 4. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall be assisted by a General Secretary of the High Commissioner's Office, appointed by decree, who shall replace him in the event of absence or impediment in his dual capacity as High Commissioner and Chief Administrator of the Territory and to whom the High Commissioner may delegate certain of his functions.

The Chief Provincial Administrators shall be the permanent representatives of the High Commissioner of the Republic in the Provinces of Madagascar; they shall be under his authority and shall receive his directions and carry out his instructions.

The Chief Provincial Administrators shall be appointed by decree of the Council of Ministers on the proposal of the Minister for Overseas France; their status shall be defined and their rank in the general civil service organizations established by an administrative regulation.

Article 5. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall be the depositary of the powers of the Republic in respect of all the Provinces of Madagascar.

He shall ensure the promulgation, publication and execution of acts and decrees and the application of decisions and instructions of the Minister for Overseas France.

He shall have the power to issue regulations.

He shall ensure and co-ordinate the defence of Madagascar and its participation in the joint defence effort. Units of the land, sea and air forces and the frontier security forces shall be under his jurisdiction.

He shall ensure the maintenance of public order and the safety of persons and property; he shall see that justice is properly administered.

He shall proclaim martial law.

In case of necessity, he may transfer the seat of the High Commissioner's Office, subject to a report being made to the Minister for Overseas France.

He may determine rectifications to be made in the boundaries between two Provinces, by orders made with the concurrence of the Provincial Assemblies concerned.

He shall communicate with the representatives of the Republic overseas, the authorities of foreign countries in Africa and Asia and the representatives of the Republic in those countries, and the duly accredited consular representatives of foreign governments whose jurisdiction extends to Madagascar.

The High Commissioner, after consultation with the Government Council, shall negotiate with the said authorities and representatives all agreements, in particular those referring to trade, which apply in all or part of the Territory under his jurisdiction, within the scope defined by government instructions, and shall conclude such agreements subject to their approval by the Government of the Republic.

Article 6. The High Commissioner of the Republic, subject to the laws and regulations, and in particular to those governing the public services of the State, shall:

- (a) Organize the State services and direct their activities;
- (b) Supervise the use of all appropriations under the State budget;
- (c) Be the secondary certifying officer for the budget of State civil expenditures for Madagascar and, in that capacity, he may delegate the right to sign his name; he may also assign to the Chief Provincial Administrators under his authority all or part of the appropriations assigned to him;
- (d) Represent the State in all judicial matters and in all civil acts and proceedings, subject to such delegations of authority as may be prescribed by the laws in force;
- (e) Ensure general co-ordination of the activities of the State services and the services of the public communities of Madagascar;
- (f) Establish after consultation with the Representative Assembly, the general regulations applicable to the authorities responsible for representing economic interests;
- (g) Grant type A mining exploration permits on the advice of the Representative Assembly, notwithstanding the provisions of article 9 of Decree No. 54-1110 of 13 November 1954.

Article 7. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall report on the State officials serving within the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner's Office. He shall exercise disciplinary authority over them as prescribed in article 80 of the Act of 19 October 1946 enacting general regulations for State officials.

He shall make appointments to all civil posts in the State services within the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner's Office, except the posts of General Secretary of the High Commissioner's Office, Chief Provincial Administrator, Inspector General of Administrative Affairs, judicial officers, Comptroller and Inspector General of Labour and Social Welfare. The employees of the State Comptroller's Office, university professors and lecturers, Treasury accountants and officials on the general establishment of the Overseas treasuries shall continue to be governed by their own statutory regulations.

He shall appoint in particular the deputies to the Chief Provincial Administrators from among the members of the administrative staff of Overseas France.

TITLE II

Organization of Madagascar

Article 8. The Territory of Madagascar shall have civil personality and administrative and financial autonomy.

It shall possess a domain, divided into public and private. Its interests shall be managed and administered by the following institutions:

- A Chief Administrator of the Territory;
- A Government Council;
- A Representative Assembly.

- Article 9. In order to ensure general co-ordination in administrative, economic, financial, social and cultural matters, the following territorial services shall be established, apart from the general administrative bodies required for their actual operation, at the level of the Territory of Madagascar.
- 1. A general financial administration, responsible both for the administration of the financial interest of the Territory and for the financial administration of its services;
- 2. An economic affairs co-ordination service, assisted by a statistical service;
- 3. A service responsible for joint capital-equipment and planning projects;
 - 4. A geological and mineral prospecting service;
 - 5. A personnel department;
- 6. An academy to co-ordinate educational, cultural and research services;
- 7. A public health co-ordination service for the control of the important endemic diseases;
- 8. A service for stock-breeding and the control of epizootic diseases:
 - 9. A plant health service:
 - 10. A soil conservation service.

This list of services is restrictive.

Nevertheless, it shall not limit the right of the Provincial Assemblies, by decision, to make the territorial unit of Madagascar responsible for the establishment, organization and administration of the joint public services and for the establishment, organization and financial supervision of joint public institutions, the cost of which shall be borne by the provincial budgets in proportions to be determined by an agreement approved by the Provincial Assemblies concerned.

Article 10. The Chief Administrator shall represent Madagascar in all judicial matters and in all civil acts and proceedings. In the event of litigation between the State and the territorial unit, the latter shall be represented by the President of the Representative Assembly.

He shall ensure the general co-ordination of economic, social, administrative and financial activities and the administration of territorial interests in Madagascar.

He shall administer the property of the Territory and dispose of it in conformity with the decisions of the Representative Assembly. He shall perform any acts for the purpose of conserving or interrupting forfeitures.

He shall arrange for collection of the taxes, duties, charges and fees which are to accrue as revenue under the budget of Madagascar.

He shall have the power to issue regulations, in particular to ensure the application and execution of the decisions of the Representative Assembly and the operation of the territorial unit services to be placed under his authority.

He shall organize these services.

He shall make appointments to all posts in these services and exercise in regard to officials of these services the disciplinary powers for which their regulations provide.

He shall be the certifying officer for the budget and budget annexes of Madagascar, and may delegate his right of signature in that capacity to one or more officials of his choice acting under his responsibility. He may also appoint secondary and deputy certifying officers.

Article 11. With a view to the discussion of questions of common interest, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may, for the purpose, convene under his chairmanship an interprovincial conference to be attended by the Chief Provincial Administrators, assisted by competent members of the Government Council and the Vice-Presidents of the Provincial Councils concerned.

TITLE III

The Provinces of Madagascar

Article 12. The Provinces comprising Madagascar shall be public communities, having civil personality and administrative and financial autonomy.

They shall possess a domain, divided into public and private.

Vacant and ownerless land shall belong to the private domain of the Provinces.

The interests of each Province shall be managed and administered by the following institutions:

The Chief Provincial Administrator;

A Provincial Council;

A Provincial Assembly.

Article 13. The Chief Provincial Administrator shall be both the representative of the High Commissioner and the representative of the Chief Administrator of the Territory. By permanent delegation from the High Commissioner, he shall be the depositary of the powers of the Republic in the Province.

The Chief Provincial Administrator shall be assisted by a deputy, appointed in the manner prescribed by article 7 above, who shall replace him in the event of absence or impediment and to whom he may delegate certain of his functions.

Article 14. The Chief Provincial Administrator, as the representative of the Province and the chief administrator of the public services of the Province, shall exercise the powers provided by the laws and regulations in force, including the power to issue regulations, without prejudice to the powers granted to the Provincial Councils and Provincial Assemblies under the decrees made pursuant to article 1 of the aforementioned Act of 23 June 1956. He shall be the certifying officer for the provincial budget and budget annexes, and may delegate this power, by a special order, to any officials of his choice. He shall communicate personally and directly with the High Commissioner in his capacity as representative of the State and Chief Administrator of the Territory of Madagascar.

In the event of litigation between the State or the Territory and the Province, the Province shall be represented by the President of the Provincial Assembly.

TITLE IV

Miscellancous provisions

Article 15. All laws and regulations conflicting with this Decree are hereby rescinded, and in particular:

Decree No. 45-923 of 4 May 1945 establishing the Government Council of Madagascar and its dependencies;

Articles 3 to 10, 14, 16 to 18, 21 and 24 to 26 of Decree No. 46-2509 of 9 November 1946 providing for the administrative reorganization of Madagascar.

The provisions of article 9 of the present Decree shall take effect not later than 1 January 1958. They may enter into force before that date in accordance with procedures to be determined by orders of the High Commissioner of the Republic, which will accordingly adjust the provisions of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946.

Article 16. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall make orders, as necessary, establishing procedures for the application of this Decree.

Article 17. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal officiel of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-463 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of the Madagascar Government Council, defining its powers, and broadening the powers of the Madagascar Representative Assembly

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Acting on the report of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs and the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956 authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, in particular articles 1 and 2;

Having regard to Decree No. 46-2509 of 9 November 1946 providing for the administrative reorganization of Madagascar;

Having regard to Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946 establishing a Representative Assembly and Provincial Assemblies in Madagascar;

Having regard to Decree No. 57-462 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of Madagascar;

Having regard to Act No. 46-860 of 30 April 1946 for the establishment, financing and execution of plans for the equipment and development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Having regard to Act No. 52-130 of 6 February 1952 concerning the establishment of group assemblies and local assemblies in various Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Having regard to Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 providing for municipal reorganization in Africa and Madagascar;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having regard to the opinion of the Assembly of the French Union;

Having regard to the decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of the Madagascar Government Council, defining its powers, and broadening the powers of the Madagascar Representative Assembly, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956,

Decrees as follows:

TITLE I

The Government Council

Chapter I. Establishment and operation

Article 1. The following articles determine the conditions and procedures for the establishment and operation of the Government Council instituted in Madagascar by Decree No. 57-462 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of Madagascar.

Article 2. The Government Council shall be presided over by the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

Eight members of the Government Council, who shall have the title of Minister, shall be elected by the Representative Assembly from within or outside its membership by a single uninominal ballot. Not less than one nor more than two members shall be elected from any Province.

The Government Council shall elect a Vice-President from among its own members.

The Vice-President shall preside over the Government Council in the absence of the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

The Government Council shall have the right to resign if it considers that it no longer enjoys the confidence of the Representative Assembly.

On matters within their competence the Ministers shall be required to answer any questions or requests for explanation from members of the Representative Assembly.

The Ministers shall be liable under the penal code for crimes and offences committed by them in the exercise of their functions.

Article 3. No one may be a member of more than one Government Council of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible.

Article 4. Declarations of candidacy shall be delivered to the President of the Assembly not later than the day before the scheduled election date. They shall be read out before the voting begins. No candidacy may be withdrawn after the declaration has been delivered.

Candidates who are not members of the Assembly shall satisfy the conditions of eligibility laid down for the election of Provincial Councillors.

They shall be subject to the same conditions with regard to ineligibility and the offices incompatible with membership.

Article 5. The validity of the elections may be challenged by the candidates or by the members of the Representative Assembly. The other provisions of articles 21 to 24 of the aforementioned Decree of 25 October 1946 shall apply to disputes concerning elections to the Government Council.

Article 6. Ministers may not continue in office beyond the term of the Assembly that elected them; nevertheless, their tenure shall be extended to the date of installation of the new Government Council which shall take place not later than fourteen days after the opening of the first session of the new Assembly.

Article 7. The Ministers shall be required to maintain secrecy regarding proceedings of the Council and the matters referred to it.

Article 8. A Minister may not at the same time exercise the functions of:

Member of the Government of the Republic;

President of the Representative Assembly;

Chairman or member of the Standing Committee of the Representative Assembly;

Member of a Provincial Council.

A Minister who finds that he holds one of the incompatible offices specified above shall opt within fifteen days. If at the end of that period he has not made known his choice, he shall be deemed to have relinquished the office of Minister.

Article 9. Ministers may submit their resignation to the President of the Government Council.

A Minister may be removed from office by the Chief Administrator of the Territory on the proposal of the Vice-President of the Government Council.

Article 10. If a Minister's post becomes vacant through death, resignation or any cause whatsoever, such vacancy shall be filled in the manner prescribed in articles 2, 4 and 5.

Article 11. In addition to reimbursement of their transportation and travel expenses, the Vice-President of the Government Council and the Ministers shall receive an annual allowance, payable monthly, the amount of which shall be fixed uniformly by the Representative Assembly with reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Territory.

Article 12. The expenditures necessary for the operation of the Government Council, in particular those relating to the compensation payable to Ministers, the installation and equipment of the Council, and the travel of its members, shall be borne by the budget of the territorial unit.

Article 13. The Government Council shall sit in the chief town of the Territory, unless otherwise decided by an order of the High Commissioner.

The agenda shall be prepared by the President.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall provide a secretariat for the Council and shall be responsible for the safekeeping of the Council's records. These records shall include those of the Government Council in Madagascar instituted under Decree No. 45-923 of 4 May 1945 and subsequent texts.

The General Secretary may attend the meetings of the Government Council.

Article 14. The Government Council may not be dissolved except by a decree made in Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Representative Assembly.

The decree shall prescribe a time limit within which a new Government Council shall be elected. This time limit may not exceed one month.

Chapter II. Functions of the Government Council

Article 15. The Government Council, under the high authority of the Chief Administrator of the Territory and presided over by him or by his legal deputy, shall be responsible for the administration of the whole Territory and, in particular, the co-ordination of economic, social, administrative and financial activities therein.

Section 1. Collective functions

Article 16. The Government Council shall act in matters within its competence as defined in this section. All its members shall be jointly responsible for such decisions as it takes under their collective functions.

All proposals relating to the interests of the Territory as a whole, to be submitted to the Representative Assembly and its Standing Committee for consideration, shall be drawn up in Government Council.

Article 17. Regulatory decisions concerning the administration of the affairs of the territorial unit, including orders on which the Representative Assembly must first be consulted, shall be taken in Government Council.

The Council shall delegate the Minister competent to give the Assembly any explanations which may be required concerning the application of the Assembly's decisions.

Article 18. Orders of decisions relating to the following subjects in particular shall be adopted in Government Council:

- (a) General regulation of economic affairs and prices;
- (b) General measures for applying the regulations concerning assistance to production;
- (c) The general rules and special procedures for applying Decree No. 57-465 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of rural communities in Madagascar, after consultation with the Representative Assembly;
- (d) The general programme for the expansion of fundamental education.

Article 19. The directors of the public services placed under the direct control of the Ministers, shall be appointed by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council on the recommendation of the Minister having jurisdiction over the service in question.

Article 20. The Government Council shall decide all questions concerning the administration of domanial and financial interests and public works which concern the territorial unit, including, inter alia:

- (a) Administration of the territorial unit's public land, in particular communication routes, including canals, lakes and ponds, and the land, railway, river, sea and air installations relating thereto, and more generally all real property deemed to be of an inter-provincial nature according to a classification made in pursuance of the decisions of the Representative Assembly;
- (b) Acquisition and exchange of the real property of the territorial unit within the limits of the appropriations voted by the Assembly;
- (c) Changes in purpose or use, leasing and renting, and methods of administration of the property of the territorial unit;
- (d) Leasing and renting of property and insurance of property within the scope of the budget appropriations;
- (e) Conditions for executing public works and approval of surveys and contracts for public works carried by the budget of the territorial unit;
- (f) Investment of funds in accordance with the regulations in force, transfer of securities, terms and conditions of borrowings by the territorial unit;
- (g) Acceptance or refusal of gifts or bequests without encumbrances or servitudes to the Territory, and the bringing or defence of suits on behalf of the Territory, except in urgent cases when the Chief Administrator of the Territory may accept gifts and bequests and take all necessary interim measures;
 - (h) Remission of accounting deficits in the territorial budget;
- (i) Settlements relating to duties and changes of which the schedule is determined by the Representative Assembly, in suits involving a sum of less than 10 million francs C.F.A.;
- (j) Institution of legal proceedings on behalf of the Territory and the defence of its interests in court.

Article 21. The Government Council shall grant type B mining exploration permits on the decision of the Representative Assembly.

Article 22. When exceptional circumstances so require, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may, by orders made in Government Council, take such immediately enforceable decisions as are necessary to suspend or temporarily reduce import and export duties and indirect taxes on the production, movement and consumption of goods.

Such decisions shall be subject to ratification by the Representative Assembly. If the latter is in session, the decisions shall be submitted to it immediately. If the Representative Assembly is not in session, the decisions shall be submitted to the Standing Committee at its first meeting thereafter; the latter shall report thereon to the Assembly at its next session, with a view to their ratification. When the decision of the Assembly has become definitive it shall have effect from the date on which it was taken.

Article 23. If the High Commissioner considers that a decision of the Government Council exceeds the Council's powers or is likely to prejudice national defence, public order, the maintenance of security, or public freedoms, he shall refer it to the Minister for Overseas France. The latter may annul the decision by a decree made after consultation with the "Conseil d'Etat." Such decree shall be made within the three months following the date of the decision. During this period the decision shall be suspended.

Article 24. Subject to the powers of the Administrative Disputes Council, appeal against decisions of the Government Council may be lodged with the "Conseil d'Etat" ruling as an administrative disputes court.

Article 25. Any decision taken by the Government Council in the absence from the Chair of the Chief Administrator of the Territory or his legal deputy shall be null and void.

The High Commissioner shall by means of an order accompanied by a statement of his reasons, declare the meeting illegal, pronounce the decisions taken null and void, and take such steps as are required to ensure the immediate adjournment of the Council.

He shall report on the matter to the Minister for Overseas France.

Article 26. The Vice-President of the Government Council shall lay annually before the Council for its opinion the report which he is required to submit to the Assembly on the general activities of the Government Council and the functioning of the public services of the territorial unit.

Section 2. Individual functions

Article 27. Each Minister shall be made responsible, by delegation from the Chief Administrator of the Territory after consultation with the Vice-President of the Government Council, for the administration of one or more public services of the territorial unit.

Article 28. The functions of the Ministers shall be defined by an order made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory and published in the Journal officiel of Madagascar.

Article 29. Each Minister shall be responsible to the Government Council for the functioning of the public services and the conduct of the administrative affairs branch within his jurisdiction, and shall report regularly to the Council thereon.

Article 30. The Government Council may make a Minister responsible for an administrative branch having one or more divisions, the administration of which is entrusted to other Ministers, and the Minister responsible for the branch as a whole shall co-ordinate the activities of these divisions.

Article 31. The Minister responsible for the administration of a branch or division shall take all decisions concerning the conduct of affairs within the jurisdiction of the territorial public services with which his branch or division is concerned, except for matters within the jurisdiction of the Government Council or the Representative Assembly.

He may set up a secretariat within the limits of the budgetary appropriations voted by the Assembly.

He shall direct the services of his branch or division with the assistance of the heads of department ("chefs de service") to whom he shall delegate all necessary powers.

He shall be responsible for ensuring that his services carry out the decisions of the Government Council and the Representative Assembly.

Article 32. The Minister shall submit to the Government Council, after preparation by his services, such matters as require the making of an order or the taking of a decision in Government Council.

He shall also present to the Government Council such proposals and reports on matters falling within the jurisdiction of his branch or division as are required to be submitted to the Representative Assembly. He shall be responsible for following the discussion of such matters and speaking in their support in the Representative Assembly, in accordance with the instructions of the Government Council. He may be assisted in this by officials of his services.

Article 33. In accordance with the staff regulations of the officials and employees concerned and on the recommendation of the Minister to whom they are responsible, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall:

Appoint and promote personnel of the territorial establishments belonging to the services of the territorial unit, on the basis of an equal distribution of the personnel of the said establishments between the services of the territorial unit and the provincial services, as determined by the Chief Administrator of the Territory;

Assign officials and employees to posts in the territorial services and impose or recommend, as appropriate, any necessary disciplinary measures against such officials and employees.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory, acting in Government Council, may delegate the powers specified in the two preceding paragraphs to each of the Ministers concerned as part of their functions and in respect of certain categories of staff.

Reports on public service employees of the territorial unit shall be made successively by the officials responsible for making such reports under the general and special regulations applicable to the civil service establishments and by the Minister responsible for the service to which they are assigned.

Article 34. In addition to the general obligation specified in article 8, each Minister shall be bound, in respect of his individual actions on behalf of the branch or division for which he is responsible, by the same rules of professional secrecy as apply to public service officials.

Section 3. Miscellaneous provisions

Article 35. The provisions of this Title shall enter into force not later than 1 July 1957.

Article 36. The procedures for the application of this Title shall be determined, as necessary, by orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory and countersigned by the Vice-President of the Government Council.

TITLE II

Functions of the Representative Assembly

Article 37. Titles III and IV of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946, in so far as they refer to the Representative Assembly, are hereby replaced by the provisions of this Title and of Title III hereunder.

Article 38. The Representative Assembly shall vote the budget of the territorial unit.

It shall take decisions in the matters placed within its jurisdiction by the laws and regulations, in particular by articles 39, 41 to 44 and 49 and 52 of this Decree. Its decisions may provide penalties in the manner prescribed by article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

It shall give opinions, in particular in the cases specified in articles 53 to 55 hereunder.

Article 39. The Representative Assembly may make recommendations for the purpose of ensuring the co-ordination and possible unification of the provincial regulations and fiscal systems. Such recommendations shall be communicated by the Chief Administrator of the Territory to the Chief Provincial Administrators concerned, who shall refer them to the Provincial Councils or the Provincial Assemblies, as the case may be.

The Representative Assembly may be called upon to take a decision in any matter within the jurisdiction of the Provincial Assemblies in respect of which the Assemblies of two or more Provinces consider it desirable to have a set of regulations common to the Provinces concerned.

If a decision taken by a Provincial Assembly in an economic or financial matter may be prejudicial to the interests of one or more other Provinces, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may refer the matter to the Representative Assembly, either on his own initiative or, if the matter has been submitted to him by a decision of a Provincial Assembly, on the recommendation of a conference convened in the manner prescribed by article 11 of Decree No. 57-462 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of Madagascar. The Representative Assembly shall take a decision which shall be binding on the Provincial Assemblies concerned.

Article 40. No taxes or duties of any kind may be imposed for the benefit of any treasury whatsoever on any products in movement from one Province of Madagascar to another.

Article 41. The Representative Assembly shall decide on the opening date of its regular sessions, the duration of which shall not exceed two months in length. Such sessions shall, however, be governed by the rules laid down below.

The Representative Assembly shall hold two regular sessions each year. The first session shall begin during the first quarter of the year and the second before the end of October. The budget shall be considered at the second regular session. If a regular or special session adjourns and the Representative Assembly has not fixed the date for the opening of its next regular session, the date shall be fixed in due time by the Standing Committee.

The Representative Assembly shall also be convened in special session:

- (a) If at least two-thirds of its members submit a request in writing to that effect to the President;
- (b) If the Chief Administrator of the Territory makes an order to that effect.

The duration of a special session may not exceed fifteen days.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article 27 of the Decree of 25 October 1946, in so far as the Representative Assembly is concerned.

Article 42. In matters relating to domanial interests and public works in connexion with capital equipment, the Representative Assembly shall take decisions on all proposals made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Council, dealing with the following subjects:

- (a) Settlements relating to duties and charges, the schedule of which is determined by the Assembly as provided by article 44 hereunder, in suits involving a sum of 10 million francs C.F.A. or more;
- (b) Acceptance or refusal of gifts or bequests burdened with encumbrances or servitudes, to the territorial unit. The Government Council may accept all such gifts and bequests on an interim basis. The subsequent decision of the Assembly shall have effect as from the date of such provisional acceptance. In urgent cases, the High Commissioner may by himself take all necessary interim measures and accept such gifts and bequests;
 - (c) Transfer of immovable property of the territorial unit;
- (d) Selection of the method of operating public works in the territorial unit;
- (e) Classification and declassification of the public land of the territorial units, in particular communication routes, including canals, lakes and ponds of an inter-provincial character, and the land, railway, river, sea and air installations relating thereto.

Article 43. The Assembly may take a decision fixing the amount and conditions of payment of the monthly compensation allotted to its members and also the rules applying to reimbursement of their travel expenses.

Such compensation, whatever its form, shall be fixed by reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Territory.

No member may receive this compensation concurrently with the compensation paid to members of the Provincial Assemblies, or that paid to members of the Government Council or of a Provincial Council, or that paid to members of the Constitutional Assemblies.

Officials on active service or on secondment who are members of the Assembly shall receive the difference between their salary, plus any travel expenses, and the compensation payable to members of the Assembly, or their salary only plus any travel expenses, if the total thereof is greater than the said compensation.

The Assembly may also vote its President an annual lumpsum payment as a representation allowance.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article 19 of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946, in so far as the Representative Assembly is concerned.

Article 44. Subject to international conventions, to the provisions of article 32 of the Act of 31 December 1953 and to prior consultation with the "assemblées consulaires" on matters within their jurisdiction, the Representative Assembly shall take decisions on the financial implications of any proposal made by the Government Council or by one of its members relating to the following matters:

- 1. Method of assessment, rules of collection and schedules of:
- (a) Taxes, duties, charges, apportioned charges and indirect taxes, and fees of all kinds levied in aid of the budget of the territorial unit and the Provincial budgets, including import and export duties and taxes on the production, manufacture or movement of goods, and taxes on exploration and processing;
- (b) The maximum supplements to these taxes which may be collected in aid of communities and public institutions;
 - (c) Stamp and registration duties;
- 2. Method of assessment and rules of collection of direct taxes based on income or turnover, to be collected in the Provinces in aid of the Provincial budget;
- 3. Contracts to be concluded and specifications to be laid down on behalf of the territorial unit.

No concession to operate a public service applied for by or on behalf of an alien may be granted unless there is agreement between the High Commissioner and the Representative Assembly. In case of disagreement, the matter shall be decided by decree;

- 4. Schedules of fees payable by concessionaires and of charges for supplies from and performance by the public services of the territorial unit; fees payable for occupation of public land of the territorial unit and other related charges;
- 5. Determination of costs coming under the head of "court costs", preparation of schedules of such costs, methods of payment and collection, defining of conditions to be met by the recipients and, in general, regulation of all matters relating to court costs; schedules of fees for the issue of copies of or extracts from public instruments;
- 6. Fiscal tariff agreements relating to taxes levied by the territorial unit in the cases provided by law;
- 7. Loans, sureties, guarantees, endorsements and shares of the territorial unit in the capital of public and semi-public corporations and, in exceptional cases, of private companies participating in the economic development of Madagascar;
- 8. Acceptance of offers to contribute to the expenditures of the territorial unit and the share of the territorial unit, under its budget, in the expenditures of the State, of a Province or of a public organization of Madagascar, in connexion with works which concern the territorial unit;
- 9. Within the limits and under the conditions specified in article 9 of the aforementioned Decree of 4 April 1957, the establishment and abolition of public services and public institutions and the possible conclusion of agreements with the Provinces for that purpose;
- 10. Conditions for the grant of settlers' installation loans to be covered by the budget of the territorial unit;
- 11. Subsidies and loans from the budget of the territorial unit to the budgets of other public organizations or public institutions of Madagascar and of the State;
- 12. Contributions, refunds and fees payable to the public institutions of Madagascar or of the State;
- 13. Borrowings or applications by the territorial unit for loans or advances from the State, the "Caisse centrale de la France d'outre-mer" or other public credit institutions, and resources of the territorial unit assigned as security for such loans or advances.

The Representative Assembly may fix a time limit within which the "assemblées consulaires" shall give their opinion. If they fail to do so, the Representative Assembly shall proceed without their opinion. This time limit may not be less than fifteen days from the date on which notice of the request for an opinion is given.

Article 45. The budget estimates of the territorial unit and the budget annexes, drawn up in local currency, shall be prepared by the Government Council and submitted to the Assembly at its second regular session each year by the Minister responsible. They shall be considered, and must be voted in balance by the Assembly at that session.

The revenue and expenditure heads of the territorial unit budget shall be divided into chapters and articles.

The right to amend the estimates of revenue and expenditure shall belong jointly to the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council and the Assembly. However, the estimation of future budgetary revenue shall be the responsibility of the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council. No proposal to increase expenditures or reduce revenue shall be admissible unless accompanied by a proposal for a corresponding increase in revenue or reduction in expenditure.

A separate decision shall be taken on each chapter of the budget. The budget as a whole shall then be voted upon by the Representative Assembly, which shall decide where appropriate on measures to be taken to ensure a balance between revenue and expenditure, taking into account the funds required to cover the expenditures specified in the second paragraph of article 64 hereunder.

No changes may be made in the budget during the financial year except by the Representative Assembly, in accordance with the procedure laid down for preparing the budget estimates and in such a manner as to ensure a continued balance between revenue and expenditure. Any transfer from one chapter to another shall be authorized by the Representative Assembly or, in urgent cases, by its Standing Committee which shall report thereon to the Representative Assembly at its next session. No new post may be established unless it is provided for in the budget.

Article 46. Supplementary appropriations and withdrawals from the reserve fund shall be proposed and approved in the same manner.

In emergencies and when the Representative Assembly is not in session, supplementary appropriations and withdrawals from the reserve fund may be made by order of the High Commissioner in Government Council with the concurrence of the Standing Committee. Such orders shall be submitted for ratification to the Representative Assembly at its next session.

The sole purpose of changes so decided upon shall be to correct errors of estimation or to meet shortages of funds which become apparent in the light of events subsequent to the preparation of the budget estimates, or to cover expenditures necessitated by unforeseeable circumstances.

Article 47. No benefit may be conferred by the Representative Assembly on an official or employee or on a category of officials or employees otherwise than on the proposal of the Chief Administrator of the Territory made in Government Council.

Unless otherwise provided by law, no special service operating on extra-budgetary account may be established except by an order made by the High Commissioner, with the concurrence of the Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs.

The establishing order shall define the conditions on which the account is to operate and provide for the supervision of its revenue and expenditures by the Representative Assembly.

The jurisdiction of the Government Council and the Representative Assembly with respect to the drawing up of the schedules of charges and of the budgets of bodies established by law to operate as self-governing public authorities ("régies") or as public offices shall be defined by the texts laying down the statutes of such bodies.

Article 48. If the Representative Assembly does not meet before the first day of the calendar year, or adjourns without having voted the budget or without having voted a balanced budget, the High Commissioner shall, ex officio, make an order in Government Council establishing a provisional budget, taking as the basis the budget for the previous year and the schedule of taxes adopted by the Representative Assembly. Where necessary, however, this order may prescribe any reductions in expenditures or increases in fiscal or other revenue.

The High Commissioner shall, within fifteen days, convene the Representative Assembly in a special eight-day session. If the Representative Assembly fails to vote a balanced budget by the end of the said special session, the budget shall be established in final form by the High Commissioner in Government Council in the manner prescribed in the first paragraph of this article.

If the Representative Assembly fails to approve all the obligatory expenditures, the High Commissioner, in Government Council, shall ex officio enter the expenditures all or part of which have been omitted and shall restore the balance of the budget, either by deductions from uncommitted funds or the funds for miscellaneous and unforeseen expenditures or by a reduction in optional expenditures.

Article 49. The Representative Assembly shall take decisions enacting regulations applicable throughout Madagascar in the following matters of general interest:

- 1. The general regulations applicable to employees of the territorial establishments recruited for the services of the territorial unit and the Provincial public services pursuant to the decrees concerning the public service provided for in article 3 of the Act of 23 June 1956;
 - 2. Civil procedure, except as regards the system of judiciary;
 - 3. The professions; ministerial and public offices;
- 4. Determination of the conditions governing the application of local customary law; progressive harmonization and unification of various local rules and practices, as between themselves and with French civil law;
- 5. The public lands of the territorial unit. Nevertheless, rights in immovable property and easements enjoyed by the State may not be prejudiced in any way.

Should the State subsequently assign certain premises for the operation of public services, such premises shall enjoy the easements for the public advantage inherent in the operation of the said service;

- 6. General regulations concerning agriculture and forests; soil conservation; protection of nature and plant-life; plant health control and locust control;
- 7. General regulations concerning stock-raising; epizootic disease control;
- 8. Preparation of products for export, excluding the fixing of standards, which shall continue to be regulated by decree;
- 9. Internal transport, traffic, haulage;
- 10. Navigation on rivers, canals and lagoons;
- 11. Policing of communication routes, excluding airways and waterways;
- 12. After consultation with the National Insurance Council through the Minister for Overseas France, regulations for the purpose of instituting compulsory insurance for individuals and corporate bodies whose civil liability may be involved under articles 1382 to 1386 of the Civil Code, provided that such regulations may not otherwise affect the substance of any insurance laws and regulations or be applied to coverage of risks connected with industrial accidents or occupational diseases:
- 13. Methods of applying the regulations governing mineral resources:
 - 14. Organization of the savings banks in the territorial unit;
- 15. Public hygiene, thermal springs; the protection of public health, excluding regulations governing food offences;
- 16. Care of delinquent and abandoned children; protection of the insane;
 - 17. Control of major endemic diseases;
 - 18. Tourism;
- 19. Town planning; regulation of dangerous, unsuitable and insanitary premises;
 - 20. Protection of monuments and historic sites;
 - 21. The prison system;
- 22. The conditions in which aliens were required to obtain administrative authorization before engaging in certain professions and commercial and industrial occupations;
- 23. Procedure and conditions for acceptance of tenders and awarding contracts in the Territory for work and supplies required for the territorial unit, subject to observance of the general rules applicable in such matters. These rules shall be established by a decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

Article 50. Decisions on the matters referred to in article 49 may be taken notwithstanding any provisions of law or regulations to the contrary enacted before the date of entry into force of this Decree, subject, however, to the provisions of international conventions, of laws and regulations on the matters dealt with in the Commercial Code and the Maritime Code, of the Act of 15 December 1952, the Act of 30 April 1946 and the decrees issued in application thereof, of Decrees Nos. 55-634 and 55-625 of 20 May 1955, and of the ethical codes.

Article 51. The acts and decrees relating to the matters listed in article 49 of this Decree shall, however, remain in force with the effect of regulations applicable to the Territory of Madagascar and dependencies. These regulations may be cancelled or amended by decision of the Representative Assembly.

Article 52. The Representative Assembly shall decide on programmes to implement and execute the capital equipment and development plan provided for by the Act of 30 April 1946, in the manner prescribed in the decrees made in application of the said Act, after consultation with the Provisional Assemblies on the aspects of the programme which concern the Provinces individually.

Article 53. The Representative Assembly shall be consulted in all cases with regard to draft regulatory orders to be made in Government Council, concerning:

- (a) The general organization of the public services in the territorial unit;
- (b) The special regulations applicable to employees of the territorial establishments mentioned in article 49, paragraph 1, the method and scales of remuneration, leave provisions, social benefits and the pension scheme applicable to such employees;
- (c) Labour and social security provisions, in particular, the application in respect of the Territory of the provisions of Act No. 52-1322 of 15 December 1952 establishing a labour code in the Territories and associated territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;
- (d) Officials of the State civil service who are seconded to services of the territorial unit;
 - (e) The organization and operation of mixed communes;
- (f) The fixing, for each category of offences under the regulations issued on the basis of the decisions of the Representative Assembly, of the scale of penalties applicable in accordance with the conditions laid down in article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956.

Article 54. The Representative Assembly shall be consulted in all cases on the grant of type A general mining exploration permits. In the event of disagreement between the Representative Assembly and the High Commissioner, the matter shall be decided pursuant to a decree made in Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Assembly of the French Union.

Article 55. The following shall in all cases be referred to the Representative Assembly for its opinion by the Government Council:

- (a) Administrative accounts relating to the execution of the budget and the budget annexes, the public authorities ("régies") and public institutions of the territorial unit;
- (b) The annual position of the funds of the territorial unit.

The Representative Assembly may make any observations on the administrative accounts of the territorial unit within the time limit specified in article 58. Such observations shall be communicated by the President of the Assembly to the Government Council, which shall send a copy thereof to the Audit Office through the Minister for Overseas France.

Article 56. The Vice-President of the Government Council shall report to the Representative Assembly at its budgetary session on the position of Madagascar and the state of the public services of the territorial unit.

Article 57. The Assembly may, through its President, request the Chief Administrator of the Territory and the Minister for Overseas France to furnish any information or observations on matters within its competence. It may ask to hear any Minister in connexion with any matter with which it is dealing.

It may ask the Government Council for any information concerning action taken on its decisions and concerning the execution of the budget, and may make observations thereon.

The Representative Assembly may assign one or more of its members to gather in the Territory the information it considers necessary in order to deal with a matter within its competence.

Article 58. Matters shall be referred to the Representative Assembly by the Government Council or by one of its members.

In the interval between sessions, bills submitted by the Government Council for decision by the Representative Assembly and bills proposed by members of the Representative Assembly shall be filed with the Secretariat of the Standing Committee.

Members' bills shall be communicated within ten days from the date of filing to the Government Council, which may give its opinion on them. The Representative Assembly may not, if the Government Council so requests, refuse to defer consideration of the bill to its next session, but no later.

The Government Council shall be kept informed of the agendas of the Representative Assembly and its committees. Its members may attend and address the meetings of the Assembly's committees or be represented at them.

Bills and proposals submitted to the Representative Assembly for decision shall be considered by the Assembly at the session during which they were filed, or at the latest at the following session, unless the Standing Committee is delegated to act on them in the interval between the two sessions.

In matters which must be referred to the Representative Assembly for its opinion, the Government Council may, if the Assembly fails to give its opinion within the time limit prescribed above, proceed without it, after notifying the President of the Assembly to that effect.

Article 59. The acts of the Representative Assembly and its Standing Committee shall be delivered in duplicate, together with an extract from the records of meetings relating to the discussion and voting thereon, to the High Commissioner within thirty clear days from the closing of the session. Upon receipt of the documents, the High Commissioner shall transmit one set thereof to the Minister for Overseas France.

Within thirty clear days from the date of their receipt, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall put the decisions of the Representative Assembly or of the Standing Committee into effect or shall refer them either to the Representative Assembly for second reading or to the Minister for Overseas France for the purpose of annulment, in the manner prescribed by articles 60 and 61. If the High Commissioner requests the Minister for Overseas France to annul a decision, he shall so advise the President of the Representative Assembly or, in the interval between the Assembly's sessions, the Chairman of the Standing Committee.

Article 60. The Minister for Overseas France may take action to annul decisions of the Representative Assembly and its Standing Committee on grounds of excess of power or of violation of the law by means of a decree made in the form of an administrative regulation.

If, for any reason, a decision of the Representative Assembly or of its Standing Committee, which has been submitted to the Minister for annulment, is not annulled within a period of ninety clear days from the date of its communication to the High Commissioner, the latter shall put it into effect not later than eight clear days after the expiry of the above-mentioned period.

The decisions of the Representative Assembly or of the Standing Committee in customs matters shall continue to be subject to the provisions of article 3 of the Decree of 14 October 1954.

Article 61. The High Commissioner may, within the period of thirty clear days prescribed in article 59, invite the Representative Assembly to rule at second reading on decisions taken by it or by its Standing Committee, if he considers them to be inconsistent with the general interests or the orderly administration of the territorial unit.

In that case, the periods prescribed by articles 59 and 60 shall run from the date on which the High Commissioner receives the new decision of the Representative Assembly.

Article 62. Pending publication of the orders of the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Council putting the decisions of the Representative Assembly or its Standing Committee into effect, all taxes, duties, charges and fees shall be levied on the former tax bases and in accordance with the previous schedules.

Decisions taken by the Representative Assembly or its Standing Committee at a session which began before 1 January in the matter of direct taxes or of duties or charges treated as such, shall have effect as from that date even if they could not be made enforceable by them.

Similarly, if it has not been possible to put the budget into effect before 1 January, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be authorized to make provisional monthly appropriations on the basis of the budgetary appropriations for the previous year. Further appropriations may be made each month until the budget is put into effect.

Article 63. A code of the regulations resulting from the decisions of the Representative Assembly and a code of the regulations adopted in Government Council shall be established under orders made in Government Council and published in the Journal officiel of Madagascar. The said codes shall be brought up to date annually.

TITLE III

Budget of Madagascar and Dependencies

Article 64. The budget of the territorial unit shall cover;

- (a) The debts of the Territory:
- (b) Contributions and assessments payable by the Territory under legislative or contractual provisions;
- (c) Operating costs of the public services of the territorial unit and of institutions, agencies and operations established at the level of the territorial unit, with the exception of those referred to in the last paragraph of article 9 of the aforementioned Decree of 4 April 1957. A schedule of posts indicating the establishment of the services of the territorial unit shall be annexed to the budget documents;
- (d) General capital expenditures not covered by the provincial budgets;
- (e) Contributions, loans, subsidies, refunds, participations and grants-in-aid approved in the interest of the territorial unit;
- (f) Any subsidies or refunds granted by the Representative Assembly in aid of the provincial budgets of Madagascar.

The budgetary appropriations shall cover expenditure relating to:

- (a) Settlement of due debts and covering of previous budget deficits;
- (b) Contributions, assessments and expenditure imposed under legislative provisions. A decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956 shall specify the manner in which this paragraph shall be applied.

Article 65. Revenue for financing the budget of the territorial unit shall be derived from:

- (a) Revenue from duties and taxes levied on imports into Madagascar and dependencies;
- (b) One half of the mining and petroleum royalties and one half of the duties levied on exports of mineral and petroleum products from Madagascar and dependencies;
 - (c) Taxes on exploration and processing;
 - (d) Income from the property of the territorial unit;
 - (e) Revenue of the services of the territorial unit;
- (f) Fees paid by concessionaires, farmers and other operators of services in the territorial unit;
 - (g) Issue taxes, if not otherwise allocated;
- (h) Interest on loans and security deposits, sums realized from borrowings and from financial investments or participations resulting from agreements signed or contracts concluded on behalf of the territorial unit;
- (i) Gifts and bequests to the territorial unit and unforeseen and miscellaneous revenue;
- (j) Withdrawals from the reserve fund of the territorial unit and any other revenue accruing to the territorial unit.

Article 66. Any funds available under the budget of the territorial unit at the end of the financial year, after the expenditures specified in article 64 have been met and payment has been made into the reserve fund of the territorial unit of the amount necessary to maintain the statutory minimum level, shall be refunded to the provincial treasuries by decision of the Representative Assembly, in proportion to the actual volume of production and consumption activities taxed in each of the Provinces and to the size of its population.

TITLE IV

Miscellaneous provisions

Article 67. This Decree shall enter into force in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956. Nevertheless, subject to the provisions of the second paragraph of this article, the provisions of paragraphs 24 and 25 and of the last sub-paragraph of article 37 and the provisions of article 46 of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946 providing for the establishment of a Representative Assembly and Provincial Assemblies in Madagascar shall remain provisionally in force until 31 December 1957.

The provisions of article 9 of Decree No. 57-462 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of Madagascar and the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 of article 44 and articles 64 and 65 of this Decree shall take effect not later than 1 January 1958. They may enter into force before that date in accordance with procedures to be established by orders made by the High Commissioner of the Republic, which shall adjust, as necessary, the provisions of the Decree of 25 October 1946, referred to in the preceding paragraph.

Article 68. All laws and regulations conflicting with this Decree, in particular, articles 11, 12, 13, 15, 19 and 20 of the afore-mentioned Decree of 9 November 1946, are hereby rescinded.

Article 69. The High Commissioner of the Republic shall make orders as necessary establishing procedures for the application of this Decree.

Article 70. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal official of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-464 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of the Madagascar Provincial Councils, defining their powers, and broadening the powers of the Madagascar Provincial Assemblies

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Acting on the reports of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs and the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956 authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, particularly articles 1 and 2 thereof;

Having regard to Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946 providing for the establishment of a Representative Assembly and Provincial Assemblies in Madagascar;

Having regard to Decree No. 46-2509 of 9 November 1946 providing for the administrative reorganization of Madagascar;

Having regard to Act No. 46-860 of 30 April 1946 for the establishment, financing and execution of plans for the equipment and development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Having regard to Act No. 52-130 of 6 February 1952 concerning the establishment of group assemblies and local assemblies in various Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Having regard to Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 providing for municipal reorganization in Africa and Madagascar:

Having regard to Decree No. 57-462 of 4 April 1957 providing for the reorganization of Madagascar and Decree No.

57-463 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of the Madagascar Government Council, defining its powers, and broadening the powers of the Madagascar Representative Assembly;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having regard to the opinion of the Assembly of the French Union;

Having regard to the decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of the Madagascar Provincial Councils, defining their powers, and broadening the powers of the Madagascar Provincial Assemblies, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956,

Decrees as follows:

TITLE I

The Provincial Council

Chapter I. Establishment and operation

Article 1. Each Provincial Council shall consist of six members, elected in the manner prescribed by the following articles, and shall be presided over by the Provincial Administrator or his lawful alternate.

The names of the members of the Provincial Council shall be published in the Journal officiel of Madagascar and dependencies Article 2. Members of the Provincial Council shall be liable under the penal code for any crimes or offences committed by them in the exercise of their functions.

Article 3. No one may be a member of more than one Provincial Council.

Article 4. The members of the Provincial Council shall be elected by the Provincial Assembly from within or outside its membership, by triple ballot, without splitting of votes or preferential voting.

The Provincial Council shall elect a Vice-Chairman.

The electors may vote for a single list only, without deletion or addition of names or modification of the order in which the candidates are listed. Any ballot paper not satisfying these conditions shall be void.

Each member of the Assembly may cast one vote for one of the lists submitted.

If no list obtains a majority of the votes cast by the members of the Assembly on the first two ballots, the third ballot shall be decided by a relative majority.

Article 5. Two clear days shall elapse between the announcement of the results of the first ballot and the opening of the second ballot.

If a third ballot is held, it shall take place not earlier than one clear day after the announcement of the results of the second ballot and not later than the seventh day following the first ballot.

Article 6. The lists of candidates shall be delivered to the President of the Assembly not later than the day before the day on which the first ballot is to be held.

New lists may be drawn up after each ballot. They shall be delivered to the President of the Assembly not later than three hours before the opening of the meeting scheduled to hold the second or third ballot.

The lists shall be read out before the commencement of each ballot.

Each list shall include as many names as there are members to be elected.

Candidates who are not members of the Provincial Assembly shall be subject to the conditions with regard to eligibility, ineligibility, and the offices incompatible with membership laid down in articles 7 to 10 of the afore-mentioned Act of 6 February 1952.

The submission of more than one list bearing the same title or connected with the same party or organization shall be prohibited.

Article 7. The validity of the election may be challenged by the candidates or by the members of the Provincial Assembly.

The other provisions of articles 21 to 24, inclusive, of the abovementioned Decrees of 25 October 1946 shall apply to disputes concerning elections to the Provincial Councils.

Article 8. The term of office of members of the Provincial Councils shall be the same as that of members of the Provincial Assembly. It may not extend beyond the latter term if the Provincial Assembly should be renewed or dissolved.

Nevertheless, the term of office of members of the Provincial Council shall not expire until the date of installation of the new Provincial Council, which shall take place not later than fourteen days after the opening of the first session held by the Assembly after the expiry of the term of office aforesaid.

Article 9. Members of the Provincial Council shall be required to maintain secrecy regarding the proceedings of the Council and the matters referred to it.

Article 10. A member of the Provincial Council may not at the same time exercise the functions of:

Member of the Government of the Republic;

President of the Representative Assembly and President of the Provincial Assembly;

Chairman or member of a Standing Committee;

Member of a Government Council.

A member of the Provincial Council who finds that he holds one of the incompatible offices specified above shall opt within fifteen days. If at the end of that period he has not made known his choice, he shall be deemed to have relinquished his membership in the Provincial Council.

Article 11. The Provincial Council may resign if it considers that it no longer enjoys the confidence of the Provincial Assembly.

On matters within their competence, members of the Provincial Council shall be required to answer any questions or requests for explanation which may be made by members of the Provincial Assembly.

Article 12. Members of the Provincial Council may submit their resignation to the chairman of the Provincial Council.

A Council member may be removed from office by the Chief Provincial Administrator on the proposal of the vice-chairman of the Provincial Council.

Article 13. If a seat on the Provincial Council becomes vacant through death, resignation or any cause whatsoever, it shall be filled in the manner prescribed by articles 4, 5 and 6.

Article 14. If there are several seats to be filled, an election shall be held in the manner prescribed in the foregoing article. If a single seat is to be filled, an election by uninominal ballot shall be held, the first two ballots being decided by an absolute majority, and the third ballot by a relative majority.

Article 15. In addition to reimbursement of their transportation and travel expenses, members of the Provincial Councils shall receive an annual compensation, payable monthly, the amount of which shall be fixed uniformly by the Provincial Assembly with reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Province.

Officials who are members of the Provincial Council shall be placed on secondment for the duration of their term of office.

They shall receive payment of an amount representing the difference between their salary and the compensation payable to a Provincial Councillor, or their salary only if it exceeds that compensation.

Article 16. The expenditures necessary for the operation of the Provincial Council, in particular those relating to the compensation payable to Council members, the installation and equipment of the Council and the travel of its members, shall be borne by the provincial budget.

Article 17. The Provincial Council shall sit in the chief town of the Province, unless otherwise decided by an order of the Chief Provincial Administrator.

The agenda shall be prepared by the Chairman.

The Chief Provincial Administrator shall provide a secretariat for the Council and shall be responsible for the safe-keeping of the Council's records.

The assistant to the Chief Provincial Administrator may attend the meetings of the Council.

Article 18. The Provincial Council may not be dissolved except by a decree made in the Council of Ministers after consultation with the Provincial Assembly.

Chapter II. Functions

Article 19. The Provincial Council, under the high authority of the Chief Provincial Administrator and presided over by him or by the Vice-Chairman, shall be responsible for the administration of the Province.

Section 1. Collective functions

Article 20. The Chief Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council shall direct the provincial public services.

The Council shall act in matters within its competence as defined in this section. All its members shall be jointly responsible for such decisions as it takes, under their collective functions. All proposals relating to matters concerning the Province, to be submitted to the Provincial Assembly or its Standing Committee for consideration, shall be drawn up in Provincial Council.

Article 21. Regulatory decisions falling within the powers granted to the Provincial Administrator for the administration of provincial affairs, including orders on which the Provincial Assembly must first be consulted, shall be taken in Provincial Council.

The Council shall delegate whichever of its members is competent to furnish the Assembly any explanations which may be required concerning the application of the Assembly's decisions.

Article 22. Orders or decisions relating to the following subjects in particular shall be adopted in Provincial Council:

- (a) Financial regulations of internal trade and prices and measures for applying the regulations concerning assistance to production, under the general regulations established by orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council;
 - (b) Organization of fairs and markets;
- (c) Establishment of institutions representing economic interests;
- (d) Operation of traditional units, after consultation with the Provincial Assembly;
- (e) Establishment, elimination and modification of "circonscriptions administratives" in the Province and modification of their boundaries, after consultation with the Provincial Assembly;
- (f) Establishment, constitution, organization and operation of rural communities and "conseils de circonscription" after consultation with the Provincial Assembly;
- (g) Establishment of "communes", other than "communes de plein exercice";
 - (h) Establishment of registry offices;
- (i) Measures for applying in the Province the general programme for the expansion of fundamental education;
 - (j) Establishment of the "cadastre".

Article 23. The directors of provincial public services placed under the direct control of the members of the Provincial Council shall be appointed by the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council, on the recommendation of the members of the Provincial Council having jurisdiction over the service in question.

Article 24. The Provincial Council shall decide on all questions concerning the administration of domanial, financial and economic interests and provincial public works.

However, in respect of the subjects listed in articles 42 and 44, it shall decide only on measures to give effect to the decisions of the Provincial Assembly.

Article 25. If the Provincial Administrator considers that a decision of the Provincial Council exceeds the Council's powers or is likely to prejudice national defence, public order, the maintenance of security or public freedoms, he shall refer it to the High Commissioner. The latter may submit the decision to the Minister for Overseas France who may annul it, by a decree made after consultation with the "Conseil d'Etat". Such decree shall be made within the three months following the date of the decision. During this period the decision shall be suspended.

Article 26. Subject to the powers of the Administrative Disputes Council, appeals against decisions of the Provincial Council may be lodged with the "Conseil d'Etat", ruling as an administrative disputes court.

Article 27. Any decision taken by the Provincial Council in the absence from the Chair of the Provincial Administrator, his lawful alternate or the Vice-Chairman, shall be null and yoid.

In the event of such a decision, the Provincial Administrator shall, by means of an order accompanied by a statement of his reasons, declare the meeting illegal, pronounce the decisions taken null and void and take such steps as are required to ensure the immediate adjournment of the Council.

He shall report on the matter to the Minister for Overseas France through the High Commissioner.

Article 28. The Provincial Administrator shall lay annually before the Provincial Council for its opinion the report on the situation in the Province and the functioning of the provincial public services. This report shall be presented to the Assembly by the Vice-Chairman.

Section 2. Individual functions

Article 29. Each member of the Provincial Council shall be made responsible, by delegation from the Provincial Administrator, after consultation with the Vice-Chairman, for the administration of one or more provincial public services.

Such delegation may be withdrawn or modified.

The public services referred to in the first paragraph of this article shall be grouped by the Provincial Administrator in administrative branches and divisions.

Article 30. The functions of the members of the Provincial Council shall be defined by an order made by the Provincial Administrator, countersigned by the Vice-Chairman and published in the Journal officiel of Madagascar and Dependencies.

Article 31. Each member of the Provincial Council shall be responsible to the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council for the functioning of the public services and the conduct of the administrative affairs branch within his jurisdiction and shall report regularly to the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council thereon.

Article 32. The Provincial Administrator may make a member of the Provincial Council responsible for an administrative branch having one or more divisions the administration of which is entrusted to other members of the Provincial Council, and the member responsible for the branch as a whole shall coordinate the activities of these divisions.

Article 33. The member of the Provincial Council responsible for the administration of a branch or division of the provincial administration shall take all decisions concerning the conduct of affairs within the jurisdiction of the provincial public services with which his branch or division is concerned, except for matters within the jurisdiction of the Provincial Administrator, the Provincial Council or the Provincial Assembly.

He may set up a secretariat within the limits of the budgetary appropriations voted by the Assembly.

He shall direct the services of his branch or division with the assistance of the heads of departments ("chefs de service"), to whom he may delegate all necessary powers.

He shall be responsible for ensuring that his services carry out the decisions of the Provincial Council and the Provincial Assembly.

Article 34. He shall submit to the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council, after preparation by his services, such matters as require the making of an order or the taking of a decision by the Provincial Administrator.

He sahll also present to the Provincial Council such proposals and reports on matters falling within the jurisdiction of his branch or division as are required to be submitted to the Provincial Assembly. He shall be responsible for following the discussion of such matters and speaking in their support in the Provincial Assembly, in accordance with the instructions of the Council. He may be assisted in this by officials of his services.

Article 35. In accordance with the staff regulations of the officials and employees concerned and on the recommendation of the member of the Provincial Council to whom they are responsible, the Provincial Administrator shall:

Appoint and promote personnel of the provincial and territorial establishments belonging to the public services of the Province, on the basis of an equal distribution of the personnel of the said establishments between the services of the various provinces and those of the territorial unit, as determined by the Chief Administrator of the Territory;

Assign officials and employees to posts in the provincial services and impose or recommend, as appropriate, any necessary disciplinary measures against such officials and employees.

Reports on public service employees of the Province shall be made successively by the officials responsible for making such reports under the general and special regulations applicable to the civil service establishments and by the member of the Provincial Council responsible for the service to which they are assigned.

Article 36. In addition to the general obligation specified in article 9 above, each member of the Provincial Council shall be bound, in respect of his individual actions on behalf of the branch or division for which he is responsible, by the same rules of professional secrecy as apply to public service officials.

Section 3. Miscellaneous provisions

Article 37. The provisions of this Title shall enter into force in respect of each province of Madagascar not later than 1 July 1957.

Article 38. The procedures for the application of this Title shall be determined, as necessary, by orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

TITLE II

Functions of the Provincial Assemblies

Article 39. Titles III and IV of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946 establishing a Representative Assembly and Provincial Assemblies in Madagascar, in so far as they refer to the Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar, are hereby replaced by the following provisions.

Article 40. The Provincial Assembly shall vote the budget of the Province. It shall take decisions in the matters placed within its jurisdiction by the laws and regulations, in particular by articles 41 to 44 and 49 of this Decree. Its decisions may provide penalties, in the manner prescribed by article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956. It shall give opinions, in particular in the cases specified in articles 52 to 55 hereinafter.

Article 41. The Provincial Assembly shall decide on the opening date and the length of its regular sessions. Such sessions shall, however, be governed by the rules laid down below:

The Assembly shall hold two regular sessions each year, upon convocation by the Provincial Administrator. The first session shall begin during the second quarter of the year and the second session during the fourth quarter. The budget shall be considered at the second regular session. If a regular or special session adjourns and the Assembly has not fixed the date for the opening of its next regular session, the date shall be fixed in due time by the Standing Committee. The length of each regular session may not exceed two months.

The Assembly shall also be convened in special session:

- (a) If at least two-thirds of its members submit a request in writing to that effect to the President; or
- (b) If the Provincial Administrator makes an order to that

The duration of a special session may not exceed fifteen days.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article 27 of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946, in so far as the Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar are concerned.

Article 42. In matters relating to domanial interests and provincial public works, the Assembly shall take decisions on all proposals made by the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council, dealing with the following subjects:

- (a) Settlements relating to provincial duties and charges in suits involving a sum exceeding 10 million francs C.F.A.;
- (b) Acceptance or refusal of gifts or bequests burdened with encumbrances or servitudes, to the Province. The Provincial Administrator may, by a decision taken in Provincial Council, accept all such gifts or bequests on an interim basis. The subsequent decision of the Assembly shall have effect as from the date of such provisional acceptance. In urgent cases, the Provincial Administrator may by himself take all necessary interim measures and accept gifts and bequests;
 - (c) Transfer of immovable property of the Province;
- (d) Selection of the method of operating public works in the Province;
- (e) Granting of agricultural concessions for areas exceeding 500 hectares, forestry concessions for areas exceeding 1,000 hectares and temporary logging permits for periods exceeding five years;
- (f) Classification and declassification of the public land of the Province, in particular communication routes, including canals, lakes and ponds of a provincial character, and the land, railway, river, sea and air installations relating thereto; classification and declassification of irrigation canals.

Article 43. The amount and conditions of payment of the compensation allotted to members of the Provincial Assemblies and also the rules applying to reimbursement of their travelling expenses shall be decided by the Provincial Assembly of which they are members.

Such compensation, whatever its form, shall be fixed by reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Province.

No member may receive this compensation concurrently with the salary paid to members of the Government Council or of a Provincial Council.

Officials on active service or secondment who are members of the Assembly shall receive the difference between their salary, plus any travelling expenses, and the compensation payable to members of the Assembly, or their salary only, plus any travelling expenses, if the total thereof is greater than the said compensation.

The Assembly may also vote its President an annual lumpsum payment as a representation allowance.

The provisions of this article shall supersede those of article 19 of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946, in so far as the Provincial Assemblies are concerned.

Article 44. Subject to international conventions, to the provisions of article 32 of the Act of 31 December 1953, to the functions of the Representative Assembly and to prior consultation with the "assemblées consulaires" on matters within their jurisdiction, the Assembly shall take decisions on the financial implications of any proposal made by the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council or by any member of the Council relating to the following matters:

- (a) Determination of the taxes, charges, apportioned charges and other taxes of all kinds to be levied in aid of the provincial budget; determination of the method by which they are to be assessed, rules of collection and schedules; maximum tax supplements which may be collected in aid of communities or public institutions of the Province. No taxes or duties of any kind may be imposed for the benefit of any treasury whatsoever on any products in movement from one province to another;
- (b) Contracts to be concluded and specifications to be laid down by the Province. No concession applied for by or on behalf of an alien may be granted unless there is agreement between the Provincial Administrator and the Provincial Assembly. In case of disagreement, the High Commissioner shall make an order ruling on the application;
- (c) Schedules of fees payable by persons holding licences to operate public services in the Province, and of charges for supplies from and performance by the provincial services;
- (d) Maximum rates of duties and taxes of all kinds to be collected in aid of secondary units and public agencies functioning within the Province, with the exception of communes governed by the Act of 18 November 1955;
- (e) Fees payable for occupation of public lands of the Province and other related charges, except those relating to public lands of territorial units and other public units or institutions of Madagascar;

- (f) Regulations governing charges for work and provision of equipment and materials;
 - (g) Fiscal tariff agreements, in the cases provided by law;
- (h) Loans, sureties, guarantees, offers of assistance and shares of the Province in the capital of public and semi-public corporations and, in exceptional cases, of private companies participating in the economic development of the Province;
- (i) Establishment and abolition of provincial public services and provincial public institutions;
- (j) Determination of the number of scholarships and other school grants payable out of provincial funds in accordance with the regulations in force;
- (k) Conditions for the grant of settlers' installation loans out of provincial funds;
- (1) Grants and loans from the provincial budget to the budgets of other public organizations or public institutions of the Province:
- (m) Contributions, refunds, and fees payable to public institutions of the Province;
- (n) Borrowings or applications by the Province for loans or advances from the State, the "Caisse centrale de la France d'outre-mer" or other public credit institutions, and the resources of the Province assigned as security for such loans or advances.

The Assembly may fix a time limit within which the "assemblées consulaires" shall give their opinion. If they fail to do so, the Assembly shall proceed without their opinion. This time limit may not be less than fifteen days from the date on which notice of the request for an opinion is given.

Article 45. The budget estimates of the Province and the budget annexes, drawn up in local currency, shall be prepared by the Provincial Administrator, drawn up in the Provincial Council and submitted to the Assembly at its second regular session each year by the Provincial Administrator. They shall be considered and voted when truly balanced, by the Assembly at that session. The revenue and expenditure heads of the provincial budget shall be divided into chapters and articles.

The revenue of the provincial budget shall consist of the following:

- (a) Revenue from taxes, duties, charges, apportioned charges, contributions and fees levied in aid of the provincial budget, including export duties in respect of the products exported from each province, subject to the provisions of article 65, paragraph (b), of Decree No. 57-463 of 4 April 1957, laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of the Madagascar Government Council, defining its powers, and broadening the powers of the Madagascar Representative Assembly;
- (b) Revenue obtained from the furnishing of supplies and performance by the provincial public services;
- (c) Income from provincial public land and fees payable by concessionaires, farmers and other operators of provincial public services;
- (d) Grants-in-aid, subsidies, advances, refunds and contributions;
 - (e) Sums realized from borrowings;
- (f) Gifts, bequests, unforeseen revenue and miscellaneous income;
- (g) Withdrawals from the reserve fund and any other revenue which may accrue to the provincial treasury.

The provincial budget shall cover the following items of expenditure:

- (1) The debts of the Province;
- (2) Cost of the provincial public services and of the institutions, agencies and operations under their jurisdiction. A schedule of posts indicating the number of personnel shall be annexed to the budget documents;
- (3) The cost of provincial public works, maintenance and equipment;
- (4) Contributions and assessments payable by the Province under legislative or contractual provisions.

Article 46. The right to amend the estimates of revenue and expenditure shall belong jointly to the Provincial Council and to the Assembly. However the estimation of future revenue yields shall be the responsibility of the Provincial Administrator acting in Provincial Council. No proposal to increase expenditures or reduce revenue shall be admissible unless accompanied by a proposal for a corresponding increase in revenue or reduction in expenditure.

A separate decision shall be taken on each chapter of the budget. The budget as a whole shall then be voted upon by the Assembly, which shall decide where appropriate on measures to be taken to ensure a true balance between revenue and expenditures, taking into account the funds required to cover the expenditures specified in article 61 hereinafter.

No changes may be made in the budget during the financial year except by the Assembly, in accordance with the procedure laid down for preparing the budget estimates and in such a manner as to ensure a continued balance between revenue and expenditure. Any transfer from one chapter to another shall be authorized by the Assembly or, in urgent cases, by its Standing Committee, which shall report thereon to the Assembly at its next session. No new post may be established unless it is provided for in the provincial budget.

Supplementary appropriations and withdrawals from the reserve fund shall be proposed and decided upon in the same manner.

In emergencies and when the Assembly is not in session, supplementary appropriations and withdrawals from the reserve fund may be made by order of the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council, with the concurrence of the Standing Committee. Such orders shall be submitted for ratification to the Assembly at its first session thereafter. The sole purpose of changes so decided upon shall be to correct errors of estimation or to meet shortages of funds which become apparent in the light of events subsequent to the preparation of the budget estimates, or to cover expenditures necessitated by unforeseeable circumstances.

No direct or indirect benefit may be conferred by the Assembly on an official or employee, or on a category of officials or employees, otherwise than on the proposal of the Provincial Administrator made in Provincial Council.

Article 47. If the Assembly does not meet before the first day of the calendar year or adjourns without having voted the budget or without having voted a truly balanced budget, the Provincial Administrator shall, ex officio, make an order in Provincial Council establishing a provisional budget, taking as the basis the budget for the previous year and the schedule of taxes adopted by the Assembly. Where necessary, however, this order may prescribe any reductions in expenditures or increases in fiscal or other revenue. The Provincial Administrator, acting in Provincial Council, shall within fifteen days convene the Assembly in a special eight-day session. If the Assembly fails to vote a truly balanced budget by the end of the said special session, the budget shall be drawn up in final form by the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council, in the manner prescribed hereinabove. Any new revenue created in this way shall, if derived from direct taxes, or from duties or charges treated as such, be payable as of 1 January.

If the Assembly fails to approve all the obligatory expenditures, the Provincial Administrator shall, ex officio, enter the expenditures all or part of which have been omitted and shall restore true balance to the budget either by deductions from uncommitted funds or the funds for miscellaneous and unforeseen expenditures or by a reduction in optional expenditures.

Article 48. Unless otherwise provided by law, no special service operating on extra-budgetary account may be established except by an order made by the High Commissioner, after consultation with the Comptroller. In the event of disagreement, the High Commissioner shall refer the matter for decision to the Minister for Overseas France and the special service may not be authorized without the agreement of the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs. The establishing order shall define the conditions on which the account is to operate and provide for the supervision of its revenue and expenditures by the Provincial Assembly.

The jurisdiction of the Provincial Council and the Provincial Assembly with respect to the drawing up of the schedules of charges and the budgets of bodies established by law to operate as self-governing public authorities ("régies") or as public offices shall be defined by the texts laying down the statutes of such bodies

Article 49. The Provincial Assembly shall take decisions enacting provincial regulations in the following matters:

- 1. The general regulations applicable to employees of the provincial establishments, pursuant to the decrees concerning the public service provided for in article 3 of the Act of 23 June 1956, but without prejudice to the interchangeability of officials as between one province and another;
- 2. Customary law relating to civil status and regulation of civil status within the framework of the relevant legislation;
- 3. Verification, description and codification of customs; adaptation of customs to social evolution; immovable property and immovable property rights governed by custom, including definition of the customary rights to be treated as real rights capable of establishing credit in connexion with real property, agriculture or handicrafts, as well as procedures for the verification of such rights and the establishment and execution of corresponding real property guarantees; in general, all matters coming under local law;
- 4. The public lands of the Province. Nevertheless, rights in respect of immovable property and easements enjoyed by the State or the Territory on the date of this Decree may not be prejudiced in any way, it being understood that the State shall retain ownership of military hospitals, operation of which has already been entrusted to the Provincial Assembly.

Should the State or the Territory subsequently allocate certain premises for the operation of public services, such premises shall enjoy the easements for the public advantage inherent in the operation of the said services;

- 5. Internal trade, handicrafts and all occupations relating to those activities, such as those of salesmen, pedlars and the like, excluding the conditions under which prior administrative authorization must be obtained before engaging in such occupations;
- 6. Agriculture, stock-raising, forestry, within the framework of the general regulations based on the decisions of the Representative Assembly;
 - 7. Regulation of inland water resources;
 - 8. The movement, sale and slaughter of cattle;
- 9. River and coastal fishing, without prejudice to the provisions of the Act of 1 March 1888;
 - 10. Hunting
- 11. Traditional local beverages; manufacture and sale of beverages; conditions of hygiene and safety in retail liquor establishments:
- 12. Mutual societies, subject to any general laws which may be enacted in this field and to the provisions of Decree No. 56-1135 of 13 November 1956 concerning mutual rural development societies in the Overseas Territories;
 - 13. Producers' and consumers' associations, co-operatives;
 - 14. Societies working in health, education and training;
 - 15. Environmental conditions, low-cost housing, rents;
- 16. Primary and secondary education, vocational and technical education, not including examination programmes and procedures, certificates and diplomas, and teachers' qualifications;
- 17. Regulations concerning scholarships granted out of the Province's budgetary funds;
 - 18. Public libraries, cultural centres;
 - 19. Sports and physical education;
 - 20. Welfare, assistance, relief and allowances, lotteries;
- 21. Procedures and conditions for acceptance of tenders and award of contracts, subject to the general rules applicable in these matters. These rules shall be laid down by a decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956;
- 22. Procedures for the application within the Province of regulations decided upon by the Representative Assembly in so far as the latter has given the Provincial Assemblies the responsibility of establishing such procedures.

Article 50. Decisions on the matters referred to in the preceding article may be taken notwithstanding any provisions of law or regulations to the contrary enacted before the date of entry into force of this Decree, subject however to the provisions of international conventions, of the laws and regulations relating to the matters dealt with in the Commercial Code and the Maritime Code, of the Act of 15 December 1952, the Act of 30 April 1946 and the decrees made in application thereof, Decrees Nos. 55-625 and 55-634 of 20 May 1955 and of the laws and regulations relating to the prevention of fraud and the inspection of weights and measures.

Article 51. The acts and decrees relating to the matters listed in article 49 hereinabove shall, however, remain in force, with the effect of provincial regulations in these matters.

These provincial regulations may be cancelled or amended by decision of the Assembly.

Article 52. The Provincial Assembly shall be consulted in all cases regarding the provincial section of programmes for implementing and executing the capital equipment and development plan provided for by the Act of 30 April 1946 and the decrees made in application thereof.

Article 53. The Provincial Assembly shall be consulted in all cases by the Provincial Administrator with regard to draft regulatory orders made in Provincial Council and relating to:

- (a) The general organization of the provincial public services;
 - (b) The operation of traditional units;
- (c) The special regulations applicable to employees of the provincial establishments, method and scales of remuneration, leave provisions, social benefits and the retirement scheme applicable to such employees;
- (d) Officials of the French civil service establishments and of the territorial establishments who are seconded to the provincial services:
- (e) The establishment of communes other than "communes de plein exercice";
- (f) The establishment of institutions representing economic interests:
 - (g) Measures to encourage production;
- (h) The fixing, for each category of offences under the regulations issued on the basis of the decisions of the Provincial Assembly, of the scale of penalties applicable in accordance with the conditions laid down in article 2 of Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956.

Article 54. The Assembly shall be consulted on all matters in respect of which such consultation is required by law or regulation and also on all matters which the Representative Assembly deems useful to submit to it.

Article 55. The following shall in all cases be referred to the Provincial Assembly by the Provincial Administrator:

- (a) Administrative accounts relating to the execution of the provincial budget and the budget annexes, the public authorities ("régies") of the Province and the provincial public institutions;
 - (b) The annual position of the Province's funds.

Any observations which the Assembly may decide to make on the accounts of the Province within the time limit specified in article 58 shall be communicated by the President of the Assembly to the Provincial Administrator, who shall send a copy thereof to the Audit Office through the High Commissioner and the Minister for Overseas France.

Article 56. The Assembly may, through its President, request the Provincial Administrator and the High Commissioner to furnish any information and observations on matters within its competence. It may ask to hear any member of the Provincial Council in connexion with a matter with which it is dealing.

It may ask the Provincial Administrator or the competent member of the Provincial Council for any information concerning action taken on its decisions and concerning the execution of the budget, and may present its observations on the subject to the Provincial Council.

The Assembly may assign one or more of its members to gather in the Province the information it considers necessary in order to deal with a matter within its competence.

Article 57. All matters shall be referred to the Provincial Assembly by the President of the Provincial Council or by one of the members of the Assembly, except matters in respect of which the right of action is vested exclusively in the Provincial Administrator.

In the interval between sessions, bills submitted by the Provincial Council for decision by the Assembly, and bills proposed by members of the Assembly itself, shall be filed with the Secretariat of the Standing Committee.

Members' bills shall be communicated, within ten days from the date of filing, to the Provincial Council, which may give its opinion on them. The Assembly may not, if the Provincial Council so requests, refuse to defer consideration of the bill to its next session, but no later.

The Provincial Administrator shall be kept informed of the agendas of the Assembly and its committees. He may attend and address the meetings of the Assembly's committees or be represented at them.

Bills and proposals submitted to the Assembly for decision shall be considered by the Assembly at the session during which they were filed, or at the latest at the following session, unless the Standing Committee is delegated to act on them in the interval between sessions.

In matters which must be referred to the Assembly for its opinion, the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council may, if the Assembly fails to give its opinion within the time limit prescribed above, proceed without it, after notifying the President of the Assembly to that effect.

Article 58. The acts of the Assembly and its Standing Committee shall be delivered in triplicate, together with an extract from the record of meetings relating to the discussion and voting thereon, to the Provincial Administrator within a period of thirty clear days from the closing of the session. Upon receipt of the documents, the Provincial Administrator shall transmit them to the Minister for Overseas France and to the High Commissioner.

Within thirty clear days from the date of their receipt, the Provincial Administrator shall put the decisions of the Assembly or its Standing Committee into effect or shall refer them either to the Assembly for second reading, or to the High Commissioner. The latter may request the Minister for Overseas France to annul the decision in question. Such annulment shall be effected in the manner prescribed by articles 59 and 60 hereinafter

If the High Commissioner requests the Minister for Overseas France to annul a decision of the Provincial Assembly or its Standing Committee, he shall, through the Provincial Administrator, so advise the President of the Assembly or, in the interval between the sessions of the Assembly, the Chairman of the Standing Committee.

Article 59. The Minister for Overseas France may take action to annul decisions of the Assembly and its Standing Committee, on grounds of excess of power or of violation of the law, by means of a decree made in the form of an administrative regulation.

If a decision of the Assembly or its Standing Committee which has been submitted to the Minister for annulment is not annulled within a period of ninety clear days from the date of its communication to the Provincial Administrator, the latter shall put it into effect not later than eight clear days after the expiry of the above-mentioned period.

Article 60. The Provincial Administrator may, within the period of thirty clear days prescribed in article 58, invite the Assembly to rule at second reading on decisions taken by it or its Standing Committee, if he considers them to be inconsistent with the general interests or the orderly administration of the Province.

In that case, the periods prescribed by articles 58 and 59 shall run from the date on which the Provincial Administrator receives the new decision of the Assembly.

Article 61. The provincial budgetary appropriations shall cover expenditure relating to:

(a) Settlement of due debts and covering of previous budgetary deficits;

(b) Contributions, assessments and expenditures imposed under legislative provisions. A decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956 shall specify the manner in which this paragraph shall be applied.

Article 62. Pending publication of the orders of the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council putting the decisions of the Assembly or its Standing Committee into effect, all taxes, duties, charges and fees shall be levied on the former tax bases and in accordance with the previous schedules.

Decisions taken by the Assembly or its Standing Committee, at a session which began before 1 January, in the matter of direct taxes or of duties or charges treated as such, shall have effect as from that date, even if they could not be made enforceable by then.

Similarly, if it has not been possible to put the budget into effect before 1 January, the Provincial Council shall be authorized to make provisional monthly appropriations on the basis of the budgetary appropriations for the previous year. Further appropriations may be made each month until the budget is put into effect.

Article 63. A code of the provincial regulations resulting from the decisions of the Assembly and a code of the administrative regulations made by the Provincial Administrator shall be established under orders made by the Provincial Administrator in Provincial Council and published in the Journal official of Madagascar. The said codes shall be brought up to date annually.

TITLE III

Temporary and miscellaneous provisions

Article 64. This Decree shall enter into force in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956. Nevertheless, subject to the provisions of the second paragraph of this article, the provisions of paragraphs 24 and 25 of article 37 and of article 46 of Decree No. 46-2373 of 25 October 1946 providing for the establishment of a Representative Assembly and Provincial Assemblies in Madagascar, shall remain provisionally in force until 31 December 1957 at the latest.

Orders shall be made by the High Commissioner before 31 December 1957, with a view to adopting the above-mentioned provisions of the Decree of 25 October 1946 and to transferring to the provincial institutions the functions devolving upon them under this Decree, in particular in fiscal and budgetary matters, and in the establishment and organization of the provincial public services and their establishments of employees and the determination of the regulations applicable to them.

Article 65. For purposes of application to Madagascar of Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 on municipal reorganization, the powers conferred upon the Chief Administrator of the Territory acting alone or after consultation with the Territorial Assembly, with the exception of the powers listed in articles 7, 27 (paragraph 12), 38, 39, 41, 43 and 44, shall be vested in the Provincial Administrators acting alone or after consultation with the Provincial Assemblies. In so far as article 34 is concerned, decisions concerning assignment of property to communes shall be taken at the provincial or territorial level, depending on the juridical entity having jurisdiction over the property.

Article 66. All provisions of laws and regulations conflicting with this Decree, in particular articles 22 and 23 of Decree No. 46-2509 of 9 November 1946, are hereby rescinded.

Article 67. The High Commissioner shall determine, as necessary, the procedures for the application of this Decree.

Article 68. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal officiel of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-816 of 22 July 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of autonomous "circonscriptions" in Madagascar

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Acting on the reports of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of State and the Minister of Finance, Economic Affairs and Planning,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956, as amended by Act No. 57-702 of 19 June 1957, authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry of Overseas France is responsible, in particular, article 1, paragraph 4, thereof;

Having regard to the Decree of 30 December 1912, as amended, concerning the financial administration of the Overseas Territories;

Having regard to the Decree of 9 November 1946 providing for the administrative reorganization of Madagascar, as amended by Act No. 56-1117 of 10 November 1956, and, in particular, article 1 of the aforesaid Decree, and all the decrees of 4 April 1957 relating to:

- 1. The reorganization of Madagascar;
- 2. The Government Council and the Representative Assembly of Madagascar:
- 3. The Provincial Councils and the Provincial Assemblies of Madagascar;
 - 4. The rural communities in Madagascar;

Having regard to Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 relating to municipal reorganization in French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, Togoland, the Cameroons and Madagascar;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having consulted the Assembly of the French Union;

Having regard to the decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of autonomous "circonscriptions" in Madagascar, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 28 February 1957,

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. The autonomous "circonscriptions" established in Madagascar pursuant to article 1 of the above-mentioned Decree of 9 November 1946 shall possess legal status and financial autonomy. They shall be established and their limitations shall be defined by orders made by the High Commissioner in Government Council after consultation of the Provincial Assembly concerned and the Representative Assembly.

The autonomous "circonscription" shall constitute an economic entity comprising several districts.

Article 2. The institutions of the "circonscription" shall consist of the following:

A head of the "circonscription" appointed by the Provincial Administrator;

A "conseil de circonscription."

Article 3. The "conseil de circonscription" shall be composed of the provincial councillors of the autonomous "circonscription," the presidents of the rural communities and one delegate from each "commune de plein exercice" or "commune de moyen exercice" of the "circonscription" who shall be elected by the municipal council.

Article 4. The autonomous "circonscriptions" shall have a budget which shall be drawn up by the head of the "circonscription" and approved by the "conseil de circonscription." The head of the "circonscription" shall be the certifying officer of the budget. He shall be responsible for drawing up the administrative accounts.

Article 5. The financial system of the autonomous "circonscriptions" shall be defined by orders made by the High Commissioner after consultation with the General Treasurer ("trésorier général"), by reference to the above-mentioned Act of 18 November 1955.

Article 6. The "conseil de circonscription" shall take decisions on all measures affecting the domanial interests of the autonomous "circonscription," in particular, on the programme of general projects to be carried out with funds from the budget of the "circonscription."

The High Commissioner shall determine by an order the manner in which administrative and financial supervision ("tutelle") over autonomous "circonscriptions" shall be exercised. Such supervision shall be defined by reference to the provisions of the above-mentioned Act of 18 November 1955.

The head of the "circonscription" shall be responsible for putting the decisions of the "conseil de circonscription" into effect.

Article 7. The "conseil de circonscription" shall be consulted concerning all public works to be carried out in the "circonscription," irrespective of the budget to which they are charged.

Article 8. The general rules and special procedures for the application of this Decree shall be laid down by the High Commissioner in orders made in Government Council after consultation with the Representative Assembly.

These orders shall determine, in particular:

- (a) The conditions in which the "conseils de circonscription" are to operate;
- (b) The specific functions of these councils as defined in this Decree, particularly with respect to economic and financial matters;
- (c) The items of the budget and, in particular, the nature of the regular and extraordinary funds available to the autonomous "circonscriptions," as well as the conditions under which they may contract loans;
 - (d) The procedure for the execution and audit of the budgets.

Article 9. Treasury officials or tax collectors shall exercise, de jure, the functions of accountant in the autonomous "circonscriptions." However, in "circonscriptions" in which no treasury official or tax collector resides, the functions of accountant may be temporarily vested in special employees.

The special employees vested with the functions of accountant of an autonomous "circonscription" shall be appointed and installed in office and shall perform their functions in the same manner as the special employees vested with the functions of municipal tax collector in communes governed by the abovementioned Act of 18 November 1955.

The accountants of autonomous "circonscriptions" shall submit their accounts to the chief auditor ("juge des comptes") in the manner prescribed for the accountants of communes.

The Treasury accountants shall be the depositaries of the funds of the autonomous "circonscriptions"; such funds shall be invested in accordance with the regulations in force.

Article 10. Such temporary measures as are necessary to give effect to this Decree in autonomous "circonscriptions" established prior to its entry into force shall be determined by an order of the High Commissioner.

Article 11. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Finance, Economic Affairs and Planning shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal officiel of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-465 of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of rural communities in Madagascar

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Acting on the reports of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister for Economic and Financial Affairs and the Minister delegated to the Office of the President of the Council,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956 authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, in particular article 1, paragraph 4, thereof;

. Having regard to the Decree of 30 December 1912, as amended, concerning the financial administration of the Overseas Territorics;

Having regard to the Act of 5 April 1884 concerning municipal organization, in particular, articles 169 to 179 thereof;

Having regard to the Decree of 9 November 1944 providing for the reorganization of rural communities in Madagascar;

Having regard to Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 relating to municipal reorganization in Africa and Madagascar;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having consulted the Assembly of the French Union;

Having regard to the decision by Parliament, approving, subject to amendment, the Decree laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of rural communities in Madagascar, filed with the secretariat of the National Assembly on 4 December 1956;

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. In Madagascar, the Provincial Administrators may, by orders made in Provincial Council after consultation of the Provincial Assembly, establish rural communities possessing legal status, where such communities have sufficient resources to balance a budget.

These rural communities may be formed of "circonscriptions administratives," parts of "circonscriptions administratives" or groups of "circonscriptions administratives."

Article 2. Each rural community shall be administered by an elected rural community council.

Article 3. The rural community may bring actions at law and shall be represented in court by the president of its council.

Article 4. The rural community shall have a budget, which shall be approved by its council and put into effect by the Provincial Administrator, who shall supervise its administration.

The council shall take decisions on all measures affecting the domain and the domanial interests of the community; it shall, in particular, decide on the programme of economic and social projects to be carried out with funds from the community budget and shall take all necessary decisions for its application.

Article 5. The High Commissioner shall determine, by an order, the manner in which administrative and financial supervision ("tutelle") over rural communities shall be exercised.

Such supervision shall be defined by reference to the provisions of Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 providing for municipal reorganization in French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, Togoland, the Cameroons and Madagascar.

Article 6. With respect to their domain, finances and budget, rural communities shall be separate and distinct from other public communities.

Two or more rural community budgets may not be combined, nor may the budget of a rural community be combined with the budget of a "commune de plein exercice," a "commune de moyen exercice" or a mixed commune.

When a new commune or another public community is established, there shall be a redistribution of property between the communities affected thereby.

Any rural community may contribute to the budgetary expenditure of another public community, where such expenditure relates to matters of common interest.

Article 7. The budget of a rural community shall be truly balanced when approved.

If the budget is not approved in true balance, the supervisory authority shall order the council of the community concerned to convene in special session and shall set the date therefor. The Council shall then decide the matter within a period of eight days and the budget shall immediately be referred back to the supervisory authority.

If a truly balanced budget is not approved after a second deliberation or is not referred back to the supervisory authority within one month, the Provincial Administrator shall make the necessary adjustments and balance the budget.

If the budget for the next financial year is not approved in true balance, the Provincial Administrator, in Provincial Council, shall establish it ex officio. In addition, the council of the rural community concerned may be dissolved by an order of the Provincial Administrator, made in Provincial Council; in succase the Provincial Administrator shall appoint a special delegation. A new rural community council shall then be established within three months.

If a rural community council fails to approve a truly balanced budget over a period of at least three successive years, the Provincial Administrator shall, by an order made in Provincial Council, either declare the council concerned dissolved and appoint a special delegation pending the establishment of a new council as described above, or withdraw legal status from the rural community or combine the community with another rural community. If a rural community is dissolved or combined with another rural community, the future disposition of its domain shall be regulated by an order of the Provincial Administrator.

Article 8. The general rules and special procedures for the application of this Decree shall be laid down by the High Commissioner in an order made in Government Council, after consultation with the representative assembly.

These orders shall determine, in particular:

- (a) The composition of the rural community councils and the conditions in which they are to operate and perform their functions:
- (b) The items of the budget and, in particular, the nature of the regular and extraordinary funds available to the rural communities as well as the authority of the latter to contract loans;
- (c) The procedures for the execution and audit of the said budget;
- (d) The conditions in which a rural community may be required to share in, or may contribute to, expenditure incurred by another public community for a common purpose;
- (e) The rules applicable to any associations, the establishment of which may be authorized between the public communities of a "circonscription," as defined with respect to communes in articles 169 to 179 of the Act of 5 April 1884 as amended.

Article 9. The conditions governing the appointment of accountants for rural communities and the accounting rules applicable to such communities shall be determined by an order of the High Commissioner.

Independently of the conditions governing the exercise of administrative and financial supervision prescribed in article 5 above, supervision of financial and accounting operations shall be exercised by the Comptroller's office, in accordance with article 17 of Decree No. 52-1356 of 19 December 1952. It shall also be exercised either on a permanent basis by the District Commisioner or on a contingent basis by the administrative affairs inspectors and the inspectors of provincial services.

Article 10. When a rural community is established under this Decree, the Provincial Administrators shall determine by orders which shall be submitted for approval to the High Commissioner, the relations between that community and those established by the Decree of 9 November 1944.

Article 11. All provisions which conflict with this Decree are hereby rescinded.

Article 12. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Economic and Financial Affairs shall be responsible, each within the limits of his own competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal officiel of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-813 of 22 July 1957 establishing a Government Council and broadening the powers of the Territorial Assembly in French Somaliland

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Acting on the reports of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of State and the Minister of Finance, Economic Affairs and Planning,

Having regard to Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956, as amended by Act No. 57-702 of 19 June 1957, authorizing the Government to institute reforms and take measures to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, in particular, articles 1 and 2 thereof;

Having regard to the Decree of 20 May 1896 providing for the organization of the possessions of French Somaliland and dependencies;

Having regard to the Decree of 28 August 1898 concerning the organization of French Somaliland;

Having regard to the Decree of 24 December 1914 concerning the regulatory powers of the Governor of French Somaliland;

Having regard to the Decree of 22 December 1945, as amended, providing for the establishment of the "Conseil privé" of French Somaliland:

Having regard to Act No. 50-1004 of 19 August 1950 establishing the method of election, composition and competence of a representative territorial assembly for French Somaliland;

Having regard to Act No. 46-860 of 30 April 1946 for the establishment, financing and execution of plans for the equipment and development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Having regard to the Act of 5 April 1884 concerning municipal organization, in particular, articles 169 to 179 thereof;

Having regard to Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 relating to municipal reorganization in French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, Togoland, the Cameroons and Madagascar:

Having regard to Decree No. 56-1135 of 13 November 1956, as amended, concerning mutual rural development societies in the Overseas Territories;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

After consultation with the Assembly of the French Union;

Having regard to the decision by Parliament approving, subject to amendment, the Decree establishing a Government Council and broadening the powers of the Territorial Assembly in French Somaliland, filed with the Secretariat of the National Assembly on 28 February 1957,

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. In French Somaliland, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be the representative of the Government of the Republic. He shall perform his functions in accordance with the legislation in force subject to the following provisions:

TITLE I

The Government Council

Article 2. A Government Council shall be established in French Somaliland.

Chapter I. Establishment and operation

Article 3. The Government Council shall be composed of six to eight members, each of whom shall have the title of Minister and shall be elected by the Territorial Assembly as prescribed by the following articles.

The Government Councillor obtaining the largest number of votes shall assume the title of Vice-President of the Government Council.

The Government Council shall be presided over by the Chief Administrator of the Territory or, in his absence, by the Vice-President of the Government Council.

The Government Council shall have the right to resign if it considers that it no longer enjoys the confidence of the Territorial Assembly.

On matters within their competence, the Ministers shall be required to answer any questions or requests for explanations from members of the Territorial Assembly.

Article 4. The Ministers shall be French citizens in possession of their civil and political rights and not less than twenty-five years of age. They shall be liable under criminal law for any crimes or offences committed in the performance of their functions.

Article 5. No person may be a member of more than one Government Council of territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible.

Article 6. The ministers shall be elected by the Territorial Assembly, from within or outside its membership, by triple ballot, without splitting of votes or preferential voting.

The electors may vote for a single list only, without deletion or addition of names or modification of the order in which the candidates are listed. Any ballot paper not satisfying these conditions shall be void.

Each member of the Assembly may cast one vote for one of the lists submitted. If no list obtains an absolute majority of the votes cast by the members of the Assembly on the first two ballots, the third ballot shall be decided by a relative majority.

Article 7. The lists of candidates shall be delivered to the President of the Assembly no later than the day before the day on which the first ballot is to be held.

New lists may be drawn up after each ballot. They shall be delivered to the President of the Assembly not later than three hours before the opening of the meeting scheduled to hold the second or third ballot.

The lists submitted shall be read out before the commencement of each ballot.

Each list shall include as many names as there are members to be elected.

Candidates who are not members of the Territorial Assembly shall satisfy the conditions of eligibility laid down for the elections of Territorial Councillors.

Article 8. The validity of the election may be challenged by the candidates or by the members of the Territorial Assembly. The other provisions of articles 3 to 8 of Decree No. 50-1184 of 27 September 1950 prescribing administrative regulations to govern the application of Title 1 of Act No. 50-1004 of 19 August 1950 establishing the method of election, composition and competence of a representative territorial assembly for French Somaliland shall apply to disputes concerning elections to the Government Council.

Article 9. Ministers may not continue in office beyond the term of the Assembly which elected them; nevertheless, their term shall be extended to the date of installation of the new Government Council, which shall take place not later than fourteen days after the opening of the first session of the new Assembly.

Article 10. Ministers shall be required to maintain secrecy regarding the proceedings of the Council and the matters referred to it.

Article 11. A Minister may not at the same time exercise the functions of:

Member of the Government of the Republic;

President of the Territorial Assembly;

Chairman or member of the Standing Committee of the Territorial Assembly.

A minister who finds that he holds one of the incompatible offices specified above shall opt within fifteen days. If, at the end of that period, he has not made known his choice, he shall be deemed to have relinquished the office of Minister.

Article 12. Ministers may submit their resignation to the President of the Government Council.

A Minister may be removed from office by the Chief Administrator of the Territory on the proposal of the Vice-President of the Government Council.

Article 13. If a Minister's seat becomes vacant through death, resignation or any cause whatsoever, such vacancy shall be filled in the following manner:

If there are several seats to be filled, an election shall be held in the manner prescribed by articles 6, 7 and 8;

If a single seat is to be filled, an election by uninominal ballot shall be held, the first two ballots being decided by an absolute majority and the third ballot by a relative majority.

Article 14. In addition to reimbursement of their transportation and travel expenses, the Vice-President and the Ministers shall receive an annual allowance, payable monthly, the amount of which shall be fixed uniformly by the Territorial Assembly with reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the territory.

Article 15. The expenditures necessary for the operation of the Government Council, in particular those relating to the compensation payable to Ministers, the installation and equipment of the Council and the travel of the Ministers, shall be borne by the territorial budget.

Article 16. The Government Council shall sit in the chief town of the Territory, unless otherwise decided by order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

The agenda shall be prepared by the President of the Government Council.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall provide a secretariat for the Council and shall be responsible for safe keeping of the Council's records.

These records shall include those of the "Conseil privé".

The Secretary-General, or the official legally deputizing for the Chief Administrator of the Territory, may attend the meetings of the Government Council.

Article 17. The Government Council may not be dissolved except by a decree made in Council of Ministers after consultation with the Territorial Assembly.

Such decree shall prescribe a time limit within which a new Government Council shall be elected. This time limit may not exceed one month.

Chapter II. Functions of the Government Council

Article 18. The Government Council, presided over by the Chief Administrator of the Territory or by the Vice-President of the Council and under the high authority of the Chief Administrator, shall be responsible for administration of the territorial interests.

Section 1. Collective functions

Article 19. The Government Council shall act in matters within its competence as defined in this section. The Ministers shall be jointly responsible for the decisions taken by the Government Council under their collective functions.

All proposals relating to matters concerning the Territory to be submitted to the Territorial Assembly and its Standing Committee for consideration shall be drawn up in Government Council.

Article 20. Regulatory decisions of the Chief Administrator of the Territory concerning the administration of territorial affairs, including orders on which the Territorial Assembly must first be consulted, shall be taken in the Government Council.

The Council shall delegate a qualified minister competent to give the Assembly any explanations which may be required concerning the application of the Assembly's decisions.

Article 21. Orders or other decisions of the Chief Administrator of the Territory relating to the following subjects, in particular, shall be adopted in Government Council:

- (a) Financial regulation of internal trade and prices;
- (b) Organization of fairs and markets;
- (c) Measures for applying the regulations concerning assistance to production;
- (d) Establishment of institutions representing economic interests in the Territory, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
- (e) Organization of chiefdoms, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
- (f) Establishment, elimination and modification of "circonscriptions administratives" in the Territory and modification of their boundaries after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
- (g) Establishment, constitution, organization and operation of rural communities and, where necessary, "conseils de circonscription", after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
 - (h) Establishment of registry offices;
 - (i) Expansion of fundamental education;
- (j) Special regulations applicable to the territorial civil service establishments, salary scales, leave provisions, social benefits and pensions, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
- (k) Regulations adopted to give effect to legislation concerning labour and working conditions.

Article 22. The directors of territorial public services placed under the direct control of the ministers shall be appointed by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council, on the recommendation of the Minister having jurisdiction over the service in question.

Article 23. The Government Council shall decide on all questions concerning the administration of domanial interests and territorial public works.

However, in respect of the subjects listed in article 45, it shall decide only on measures to give effect to the decisions of the Territorial Assembly.

Article 24. When exceptional circumstances so require, the Chief Administrator, in Government Council, may issue such immediately enforceable orders as are necessary to suspend or temporarily reduce any import or export duties and any indirect taxes on production, movement and consumption of goods.

Such orders shall be subject to ratification by the Territorial Assembly. If the latter is in session, the orders shall be submitted to it immediately. If it is not in session, the orders shall be submitted to the Standing Committee at its first meeting thereafter; the latter shall report thereon to the Territorial Assembly at its next session. When the decision of the Territorial Assembly has become definitive, it shall have effect from the date on which it was taken.

Article 25. If the Chief Administrator of the Territory considers that a decision of the Government Council exceeds the Council's powers or is likely to prejudice national defence, public order or the maintenance of security or public freedoms, he shall refer it to the Minister for Overseas France. The latter may cause the decision to be annulled by a decree made after consultation with the "Conseil d'Etat". Such decree shall be issued within the three months following the date of the decision. During this period the decision shall be suspended.

Article 26. Subject to the powers of the Administrative Disputes Council, appeal against decisions of the Government Council may be lodged with the "Conseil d'Etat", ruling as an administrative disputes court.

Article 27. Any decision taken by the Government Council in the absence from the Chair of the Chief Administrator of the Territory, his legal deputy or the Vice-President, or which is taken in violation of the provisions of article 16, shall be null and void.

In such case the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall, by means of an order accompanied by a statement of his reasons, declare the meeting illegal, pronounce any decisions taken null and void and take such steps as are required to ensure the immediate adjournment of the Council.

He shall report on the matter to the Minister for Overseas France.

Article 28. The Vice-President of the Government Council shall lay annually before the Government Council for its opinion the report which he is required to submit to the Territorial Assembly on the general activities of the Government Council and the functioning of the territorial public services.

Section II. Individual functions

Article 29. Each Minister shall be made responsible, by delegation from the Chief Administrator of the Territory after consultation with the Vice-President of the Government Council, for the administration of one or more territorial public services.

Article 30. The functions of the Ministers shall be defined by orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory, countersigned by the Vice-President of the Government Council and published in the Journal officiel.

Article 31. Each minister shall be responsible to the Council for the functioning of the public services and the conduct of the affairs of the administrative branch within his jurisdiction and shall report regularly to the Council thereon.

Article 32. A Minister may be made responsible for an administrative branch having one or more divisions, the administration of which is entrusted to other members of the Government Council but whose activities he co-ordinated.

Article 33. The Minister responsible for the operation of a branch or division of the territorial administration shall take all decisions concerning the conduct of affairs within the jurisdiction of the territorial public services with which his branch or division is concerned, except for matters within the jurisdiction of the Government Council or the Territorial Assembly.

He may set up a secretariat within the limits of the budgetary appropriations voted by the Assembly.

He shall direct the services of his branch or division with the assistance of heads of department ("chefs de service") to whom he shall delegate all necessary powers.

He shall be responsible for ensuring that his services carry out the decisions of the Government Council and the Territorial Assembly.

Article 34. Each Minister shall submit to the Government Council, after preparation by his services, such matters as require the making of an order or the taking of a decision in Government Council.

He shall also present to the Government Council such proposals and reports on matters falling within the jurisdiction of his branch or division as are required to be submitted to the Territorial Assembly. He shall be responsible for following the discussion of such matters and speaking in support of them in the Territorial Assembly, in accordance with the instructions of the Government Council. He may be assisted in this by officials of his services.

Article 35. In accordance with the staff regulations of the officials and employees concerned and on the recommendation of the Minister to whom they are responsible, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall:

Appoint and promote personnel of the territorial establishments;

Assign officials and employees to posts in the territorial public services and impose or recommend, as appropriate, any necessary disciplinary measures against such officials and employees.

Reports on territorial public service employees shall be made successively by the officials who are responsible for making such reports under the general and special regulations applicable to the civil service establishments and by the Minister responsible for the service to which they are assigned.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall, on the recommendation of the Minister concerned, recruit contract employees who are paid from the territorial budget, after standard contracts have been approved by the Territorial Assembly.

Article 36. In addition to the general obligation specified in article 10, each Minister shall be bound, in respect of his individual actions on behalf of the branch or division for which he is responsible, by the same rules of professional secrecy as apply to public service officials.

Article 37. Where necessary, detailed procedures for the application of this chapter shall be issued in the form of orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory and countersigned by the Vice-President of the Government Council.

TITLE II

Functions of the Territorial Assembly

Article 38. The representative council of French Somaliland shall be called the Territorial Assembly.

Articles 21, 23, 33, 34, 36, 37 and 52 of the above-mentioned Act of 19 August 1950 shall be replaced by the following provisions:

Article 39. The Territorial Assembly shall decide on the opening date and duration of its regular sessions. Such sessions shall, however, be governed by the following rules:

The Territorial Assembly shall hold two regular sessions each year, which shall be convened by the Chief Administrator of the Territory. The first shall begin between 15 February and 15 May; the second, or "budgetary" session at which the budget is considered, shall begin between 1 August and 31 October.

If the Assembly adjourns without having fixed the date for the opening of its next regular session, the date shall be fixed in due time by the Standing Committee. If, notwithstanding the preceding provisions, the Assembly fails to meet in regular session during one of the above-mentioned periods, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may, by an order made in Government Council, change the time of the session and convene the Assembly in regular session. The duration of a regular session may not exceed two months.

The Territorial Assembly may also be convened in special session, as follows:

- (a) If at least two-thirds of its members submit a request in writing to that effect to the President;
- (b) If the Chief Administrator of the Territory makes an order to that effect in Government Council.

The duration of a special session may not exceed one month. Sessions shall be opened and closed by orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council.

Article 40. The Assembly shall take decisions enacting territorial regulation of the following matters:

- 1. The general regulations applicable to employees of the territorial establishments pursuant to the decrees concerning the public service which were issued under article 3 of the Act of 23 June 1956;
 - 2. Civil procedure, except as regards the system of judiciary;
 - 3. The professions, ministerial and public offices;
- 4. Customary law relating to civil status and regulation of civil status within the framework of the relevant legislation;
- 5. Verification, description and codification of traditional customs; adaptation of customs to social evolution, immovable property and immovable property rights regulated by custom and, in particular, definition of the customary rights to be treated as real rights capable of establishing credit; in general, all matters coming under local law;
- 6. The public lands of the Territory, including vacant and ownerless lands which form part of the Territory's private domain.

Nevertheless, rights in respect of immovable property and easements enjoyed by the State on the date of this Decree may not be prejudiced in any way.

Should the State or the Territory subsequently allocate certain premises for the operation of public services, such premises shall enjoy the easements for the public advantage inherent in the operation of the said services;

- 7. Internal trade, handicrafts and all occupations relating to those activities, such as those of salesmen, pedlars and the like;
- 8. Mutual societies, subject to the provisions of Decree No. 56-1135 of 13 November 1956, as amended, concerning rural development mutual societies in the Overseas Territories;
- 9. Producers' and consumers' associations, co-operatives;
- 10. Agriculture, forests, regulation of inland water resources, soil conservation, protection of nature and plant-life, plant health control:
- 11. Stock-raising, the movement, sale and slaughter of cattle, control of epizootic diseases;
- 12. Coastal fishing, without prejudice to the provisions of the Act of 1 March 1888; river fishing;
- 13. Preparation of products for export, not including the fixing of standards, which shall continue to be regulated by decree:
 - 14. Internal transport, traffic, haulage;
 - 15. Navigation on rivers and canals;
- 16. Policing of communication routes, excluding airways and waterways;
- 17. After consultation with the National Insurance Council through the Minister for Overseas France, regulations for the purpose of instituting compulsory insurance for individuals and corporate bodies whose civil liability may be involved under articles 1382 to 1386 of the Civil Code, provided that such regulations may not affect the terms of insurance laws and regulations or coverage of risks connected with industrial accidents or occupational diseases;
- 18. Methods of applying the regulations governing mineral resources;
 - 19. Organization of the savings banks in the Territory;
- 20. Public hygiene, control of major endemic diseases, protection of public health and the insane; thermal springs;
- 21. Manufacture and sale of beverages of all kinds, conditions of hygiene and safety in retail liquor establishments;
- 22. Societies working in health, education and training; care of delinquent and abandoned children;
 - 23. Tourism and hunting:

- 24. Town planning, environmental conditions; regulation of dangerous, unsuitable and insanitary premises; low-cost housing, rents;
- 25. Primary and secondary education, vocational and technical education, not including study programmes, examination programmes and procedures, certificates and diplomas and teachers' qualifications;
- 26. Regulations concerning scholarships, subsidies, grants and educational allowances paid out of the Territory's budgetary funds;
 - 27. Public libraries, cultural centres;
 - 28. Sports and physical education;
 - 29. Welfare, assistance, relief and allowances; lotteries;
 - 30. Protection of monuments and historic sites;
 - 31. Prison system;
- 32. Determination of court costs, preparation of schedules of such costs, methods of payment and collection, defining of conditions to be met by the recipients, and, in general, regulation of all matters relating to court costs; rates for providing schedules of fees for the issue of copies of or extracts from official documents;
- 33. The conditions in which aliens are required to obtain administrative authorization before engaging in certain professions;
- 34. Procedure and conditions for acceptance of tenders and award of contracts in the Territory for works and supplies which concern the Territory, subject to compliance with the general rules applicable in such matters. These rules shall be established in a decree made in the manner prescribed by article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956.
- Article 41. Decisions on the matters referred to in article 40 may be taken notwithstanding any provision of law or regulations to the contrary enacted before the date of entry into force of this Decree, subject, however, to the provisions of international conventions, the laws and regulations on the matters dealt with in the Commercial Code and the Maritime Code, of the Act of 15 December 1952, the Act of 30 April 1946 and the decrees adopted in application thereof, of Decrees Nos. 55-625 and 55-634 of 20 May 1955, and of the laws and regulations respecting the prevention of fraud and the inspection of weights and measures, and the ethical codes.
- Article 42. The acts and decrees relating to the matters listed in article 40 of this decree shall, however, remain in force, with the effect of territorial regulations in these matters. These regulations may be cancelled or amended by decision of the Territorial Assembly.
- Article 43. The Territorial Assembly may, in accordance with the conditions laid down in article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956, include provision for penalties in the regulations resulting from its decisions.
- Article 44. The Territorial Assembly shall take decisions regarding the local section of programmes for implementing and executing the capital equipment and development plan provided for by the Act of 30 April 1946, in the manner prescribed by the decrees made in application of the said Act.
- Article 45. In matters relating to domanial interests and territorial public works, the Territorial Assembly shall take decisions on all proposals made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council dealing with the following subjects:
- (a) Institution and conduct of proceedings on behalf of the Territory, except in cases of emergency, when the decision shall be taken in Government Council; settlements relating to duties and charges of the Territory in suits involving a sum of more than 10 million Djibouti francs.

In cases of litigation between the State and the Territory, the latter shall be represented by a Minister empowered to that effect by the Government Council;

(b) Acceptance or refusal of gifts or bequests to the Territory involving encumbered immovable property.

By a decision taken in Government Council, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may accept all such gifts or bequests on an interim basis. The subsequent decision of the Territorial

- Assembly shall have effect as from the date of such provisional acceptance. In urgent cases, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may by himself take all necessary interim measures and accept gifts or bequests;
 - (c) Transfer of immovable property of the Territory;
- (d) Selection of the method of operating public works in the Territory; concessions for projects to be carried out on the Territory's behalf. In the latter case, however, no concession may be granted to or on behalf of an alien unless there is agreement between the Assembly and the Chief Administrator of the Territory; in case of disagreement, the matter shall be settled by decree;
- (e) Granting of agricultural and forestry concessions; granting of temporary forestry permits for periods exceeding five years:
- (f) Classification and declassification of territorial public land and, in particular, of territorial main roads, aerodromes operated under the territorial budget, harbours, rivers, canals, lakes, lagoons and ponds.
- Article 46. Subject to international conventions, to the provisions of article 32 of Act No. 53-1336 of 31 December 1953 and to prior consultation with the "assemblées consulaires" on matters within their jurisdiction, the Assembly shall take decisions on the financial implications of any proposal made by the Government Council or by one of its members relating to the following matters:
- (a) Determination of taxes, charges, apportioned charges, duties and contributions of all kinds which may be levied in aid of the territorial budget, establishment of their method of assessment, rules for their collection and schedules of such duties and taxes;
- (b) Contracts to be concluded with concessionaires, farmers and other operators in the Territory and specifications in connexion therewith, schedules of fees payable by concessionaires, farmers and operators;
- (c) Maximum rates of duties and taxes of all kinds and maximum additional tax to be collected in aid of communities, agencies and public establishments functioning within the Territory, with the exception of "communes de plein exercice";
- (d) Fees payable for occupation of public lands of the Territory and other related charges;
- (e) Regulations governing charges for services provided by territorial public agencies, and for the provision of goods, equipment and supplies;
- (f) Fiscal tariff agreements relating to taxes levied in aid of the territorial budget, in the cases provided by law;
- (g) Establishment and abolition of territorial public services and territorial public institutions;
- (h) Determination of the number of scholarships and other school grants payable out of territorial funds in accordance with the regulations in force; conditions for the grant, out of territorial funds, of installation loans to settlers in the Territory;
- (i) Grants and loans by the Territory to communes and public communities and public institutions in the Territory; acceptance or refusal of offers of collaboration or assistance made by the State, the communes, public communities or public institutions of the Territory or of the State in connexion with work carried out with territorial funds; offers by the Territory to contribute towards or assist in carrying out works in the general interest which are financed out of budgetary funds of communes, public communities or public institutions of the Territory or the State. Contributions of the Territory towards the cost of works affecting the Territory, which are to be carried out by the State;
- (j) Contributions, refunds and fees payable by the Territory to public institutions of the Territory or State;
- (k) Shares of the Territory in the capital of public and semipublic corporations and, in exceptional cases, in private companies participating in the economic development of the Territory;
- (1) Borrowings or applications by the Territory for loans or advances from the State, the "Caisse centrale de la France d'outre-mer" or other public credit institutions, and resources of the Territory assigned as security for such loans or advances;

- (m) Sureties and guarantees given by the Territory in respect of obligations assumed by communes, public communities and public institutions of the Territory;
- (n) Determination of conditions in which the Territory's budgetary funds may be used to encourage production.

The Assembly may fix a time limit within which the "assemblées consulaires" shall give their opinion. If they fail to do so, the Assembly shall proceed without their opinion. This time limit may not be less than fifteen days from the date on which notice of the request for an opinion is given.

Article 47. The Assembly shall decide on the granting of type B mining exploration permits.

Article 48. The Territorial Assembly may take a decision fixing the amount and conditions of payment of the monthly compensation allotted to its members and also the rules applying to reimbursement of their travel expenses.

Such compensation, whatever its form, shall be fixed by reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Territory.

No member may receive this compensation concurrently with the compensation paid to members of the Government Council or that paid to members of the Constitutional Assemblies.

Officials on active service or secondment who are members of the Territorial Assembly shall receive the difference between their salary, plus any travel expenses, and the compensation payable to members of the Territorial Assembly, or their salary only, plus any travel expenses, if the total thereof is greater than the said compensation.

The Territorial Assembly may also vote its President an annual lump-sum payment as a representation allowance.

Article 49. The Territorial Assembly shall be consulted in all cases on all matters in respect of which such consultation is required by law or regulations and, in particular, with regard to draft regulatory orders to be made in Government Council relating to:

- (a) The general organization of the territorial public services;
 - (b) The organization of chiefdoms;
- (c) The special regulations applicable to employees of the territorial public service establishments, method and scales of remuneration, leave provisions, social benefits and pension scheme applicable to such employees;
- (d) Labour and social security provisions, in particular, the application in respect of the Territory of the provisions of Act No. 52-1322 of 15 December 1952 establishing a labour code in the Territories and Associated Territories under the jurisdiction of the Minister for Overseas France;
- (e) Officials of the French civil service establishments who are seconded to territorial public services;
- (f) The establishment, abolition and modification of "circonscriptions administratives" in the Territory and modification of their boundaries:
- (g) The establishment, constitution, organization and operation of rural communities and "conseils de circonscription";
- (h) The establishment of institutions representing economic interests in the Territory;
 - (i) Measures to encourage production;
 - (j) Rules governing immigration;
- (k) The fixing, for each category of offences under the regulations issued on the basis of the decisions of the Territorial Assembly, of the scale of penalties applicable in accordance with the conditions laid down in article 2 of Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956.

The Assembly shall also be consulted in all cases on the following matters:

- 1. The rules governing representation of the economoc interests of the Territory;
- 2. The grant of type A mining exploration permits which, notwithstanding article 9 of Decree No. 54-1110 of 13 November 1954, shall be authorized by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in his capacity of representative of the State. In the event of disagreement between the Territorial Assembly and the Chief Administrator of the Territory, the matter shall be decided pursuant to a decree made in Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Assembly of the French Union;

- 3. Missions which are charged to the territorial budget;
- 4. The appointment, as necessary, of directors to represent the Territory on the board of the institute issuing the Territory's currency;
- 5. Approval, subject to the application of Decree No. 56-1229 of 3 December 1956, as amended, reorganizing and decentralizing the overseas postal and telecommunications services, of domestic postal, telephone and telegraph rates, and of all plans for the establishment, equipment, supplying and maintenance of the domestic telephone and telegraph networks and radio service.

Article 50. The following shall in all cases be referred to the Assembly by the Government Council:

- (a) Administrative accounts relating to the execution of the territorial and the budget annexes, the public authorities ("régies") and the territorial public institutions;
 - (b) The annual position of the Territory's funds;
- (c) Income received by the accounting officer of the central administrative bureau for overseas posts and telecommunications from the sale of stamps issued on the Territory's behalf, except in so far as the provisions relating to local offices of the Decree of 3 December 1956, as amended, reorganizing and decentralizing the overseas postal and telecommunication services shall be made applicable to the Territory by decree.

Any observations which the Assembly may decide to make on the accounts of the Territory shall be communicated by the President of the Assembly, within the time limit specified in article 52, to the Chief Administrator of the Territory, who shall send a copy thereof to the Audit Office through the Ministry for Overseas France.

Article 51. All matters shall be referred to the Territorial Assembly by the President of the Government Council or by a member of that body, except matters in respect of which the right of action is vested exclusively in the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

In the interval between sessions, bills submitted by the Government Council for decision by the Assembly and bills proposed by members of the Assembly itself shall be filed with the Secretariat of the Standing Committee.

Members' bills shall be communicated, within ten days from the date of filing, to the Government Council, which may give its opinion on them.

The Assembly may not, if the Government Council so requests, refuse to defer consideration of the bill to its next session at the latest.

The Government Council shall be kept informed of the agendas of the Assembly and its committees. It may delegate one of its members to attend and address the meetings of the Assembly's committees or be represented at them.

Bills and proposals submitted to the Assembly for decision shall be considered by the Assembly at the session during which they were filed, or at the latest, at the following session unless the Standing Committee is delegated to act on them in the interval between sessions.

In matters which must be referred to the Assembly for its opinion, the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council may, if the Assembly fails to give its opinion within the time limit prescribed above, proceed without it after notifying the President of the Assembly to that effect.

Article 52. The acts of the Territorial Assembly and its Standing Committee shall be delivered in duplicate, together with an extract from the records of meetings relating to the discussion and voting thereon, within a period of thirty clear days from the closing of the session. Upon receipt of the documents, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall transmit one copy thereof to the Minister for Overseas France.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall give effect to the decisions of the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee or shall refer them to the Territorial Assembly for second reading, or to the Minister for Overseas France for annulment in the manner prescribed by articles 53 and 54 below. Should the Chief Administrator of the Territory request the Minister for Overseas France to annul a decision, he shall so advise the President of the Territorial Assembly or, in the intervals between the latter's sessions, the Chairman of the Standing Committee.

Article 53. With regard to the matters listed in articles 39, 40 and 43 to 48, upon which the Territorial Assembly is competent to act, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may, within a period of thirty clear days from the date on which it was submitted to him, request the Territorial Assembly to reconsider in second reading any decision taken by the Assembly or by its Standing Committee which he considers not to be in the public interest or conducive to sound administration of the Territory.

In such case, the period specified in article 54 below shall run from the date of receipt by the Chief Administrator of the Territory of the new decision adopted by the Territorial Assembly.

Article 54. The Minister for Overseas France may take action to annul decisions of the Territorial Assembly and its Standing Committee on grounds of excess of power or of violation of the law, by means of a decree made in the form of an administrative regulation.

If a decision of the Assembly or its Standing Committee which has been submitted to the Minister for annulment is not annulled within a period of ninety clear days from the date of its communication to the Chief Administrator of the Territory, the latter shall put it into effect not later than eight clear days after the expiry of the above-mentioned period.

The decisions of the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee in customs matters shall continue to be subject to the provisions of article 3 of Decree No. 54-1020 of 14 October 1054

Article 55. Pending publication of the orders made by the Chief Administrator in Council putting the decisions of the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee into effect, all taxes, duties, charges and fees shall be levied on the former tax bases and in accordance with the previous schedules.

Decisions taken by the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee at a session which began before 1 January in the matter of direct taxes or of duties or charges treated as such shall have effect as from that date, even if they could not be made enforceable by then.

Similarly, if it has not been possible to put the budget into effect before 1 January, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be authorized to make provisional monthly appropriations on the basis of the budgetary appropriations for the previous year. Further appropriations may be made each month until the budget is put into effect.

Article 56. A code of regulations resulting from the decisions of the Territorial Assembly and a code of the administrative regulations made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be established under orders made by the Chief Administrator in Council and published in the Journal official of the Territory. The said codes shall be brought up to date annually.

TITLE III

Rural communities

Article 57. The Chief Administrator of the Territory of French Somaliland may, by orders made in Government Council after consultation of the Territorial Assembly, establish rural communities possessing legal status, provided that such communities have sufficient resources to balance a budget.

These rural communities may be formed of "circonscriptions administratives," parts of "circonscriptions administratives" or groups of "circonscriptions administratives."

The rural community shall be administered by a rural community council.

The provisions of articles 3 to 9 of the Decree of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of rural communities in French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa shall apply to the rural communities in French Somaliland.

TITLE IV

Miscellaneous provisions

Article 58. "Communes de plein exercice" may be established in French Somaliland by orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory upon receipt of an advisory opinion to that effect from the Territorial Assembly, reached by an absolute majority of its members.

Pending the enactment of legislation establishing the rules applicable to "communes de plein exercice" in the Territory, such communes shall provisionally be governed by the following provisions:

The Decree of 8 March 1879, as amended, concerning the municipal organization of "communes de plein exercise" in certain Overseas Territories;

Articles 169 to 179 of the Act of 5 April 1884 concerning municipal organization;

Articles 2, 31 to 33, 56 and 58 of Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 concerning municipal reorganization in French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, Togoland, the Cameroons and Madagascar.

Article 59. All legislative enactments and executive orders conflicting with this Decree and, in particular, the above-mentioned Decree of 22 December 1945, as amended, are hereby rescinded.

Article 60. The Chief Administrator of the Territory of French Somaliland shall determine by means of orders, as necessary, the procedures for the application of this Decree.

Article 61. The Minister for Overseas France and the Minister of Finance, Economic Affairs and Planning shall be responsible, each within the limits of his competence, for giving effect to this Decree, which shall be published in the Journal officiel of the French Republic.

Decree No. 57-814 of 22 July 1957 establishing a Government Council and broadening the powers of the Territorial Assembly in the Comoro Archipelago

The President of the Council of Ministers.

Acting on the report of the Minister for Overseas France, the Minister of State and the Minister of Finance, Economic Affairs and Planning,

Considering Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956, as amended by Act No. 57-702 of 19 June 1957, authorizing the Government to carry out the reforms and take the measures likely to ensure the development of the Territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible, and in particular articles 1 and 2 of the said Act;

Considering the Decree of 9 September 1889 providing for the organization of the Colony of Mayotte and the Comoro Archipelago protectorates;

Considering the Decree of 9 April 1908 attaching the colony of Mayotte and the islands and protectorates under the authority of the said Colony to the Government-General of Madagascar;

Considering the Act of 25 July 1912 to proclaim the Islands of Anjouan, Mohéli and Grande Comore to be French colonies and attach them to the Government-General of Madagascar, together with the Decree of 23 February 1914 to issue public administrative regulations for the application of the said Act;

Considering Act No. 46-973 of 9 May 1946 granting administrative and financial autonomy to the Comoro Archipelago;

Considering the Decree of 24 September 1946 providing for the administrative reorganization of the Comoro Archipelago, as amended by the Decree of 20 July 1949;

Considering Decree No. 46-2382 of 25 October 1946 providing for the establishment of a General Council in the Comoro Archipelago;

Considering Act No. 46-860 of 30 April 1946 for the preparation, financing and carrying out of plans for the equipment and development of territories for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible;

Considering the Municipal Organization Act of 5 April 1884 and, in particular, articles 169 to 179 thereof;

Considering Act No. 55-1489 of 18 November 1955 relating to municipal reorganization in French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, Togoland, the Cameroons and Madagascar;

Considering Decree No. 56-1135 of 13 November 1956, as amended, relating to rural mutual development societies in the Overseas Territories;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers;

Having consulted the Assembly of the French Union;

Considering the decision of Parliament to approve, subject to amendment, the decree to establish a Government Council and broaden the powers of the Territorial Assembly in the Comoro Archipelago, submitted to the National Assembly on 28 February 1957,

Decrees as follows:

Article 1. The principal executive officer in the Comoros shall be the Chief Administrator of the Territory. He shall perform his duties in accordance with the legislative provisions in force, subject to the following provisions.

TITLE I

The Government Council

Article 2. A Government Council shall be established in the Comoros.

Chapter I. Composition and operation

Article 3. The Government Council shall consist of not less than six nor more than eight members who shall be elected by the Territorial Assembly under the conditions laid down in the following articles and bear the title of Minister.

The member of the Government Council obtaining the largest number of votes shall assume the title of Vice-President of the Government Council.

The Government Council shall be presided over by the Chief Administrator of the Territory or, in his absence, by the Vice-President of the Government Council.

The Government Council shall have the right to resign if it considers that it no longer enjoys the confidence of the Territorial Assembly.

The Ministers shall be bound with respect to matters within their competence to answer any questions or requests for explanations, which may be made by members of the Territorial Assembly

Article 4. A Minister must be a French citizen in the enjoyment of his civil and political rights and not under the age of twenty-five years. He shall be liable under penal law for any crime or offence committed in the performance of his duties.

Article 5. No person shall be a member of the Government Council of more than one territory for which the Ministry for Overseas France is responsible.

Article 6. The Ministers shall be elected by the Territorial Assembly from within or outside its membership, by triple ballot, without splitting of votes or preferential voting.

The electors may vote only for a single full list without deleting or adding names and without modifying the order in which the candidates are submitted. Any ballot paper which does not fulfil these conditions shall be null and void.

Each member of the Assembly may cast one vote for one of the lists submitted.

If no list obtains an absolute majority of the votes cast by the members of the Assembly in the first two ballots, the third ballot shall be decided by a relative majority.

Article 7. The lists of candidates shall be submitted to the President of the Assembly no later than the day before the day on which the first ballot is to be held.

New lists may be drawn up after each ballot. They shall be submitted to the President of the Assembly no later than three hours before the opening of the meeting convened to hold the second or third ballots.

The lists submitted shall be read out in the presence of the persons concerned before the commencement of each ballot.

Each list shall include as many names as there are members to be elected.

Candidates who are not members of the Territorial Assembly shall fulfil the conditions for eligibility laid down for the election of territorial councillors. They shall be subject to the same ineligibility and incompatibility rules as the territorial councillors.

Article 8. A suit for the nullity of the election may be filed by a candidate or by a member of the Territorial Assembly. The other provisions of article 19 of the above-mentioned Decree of 25 October 1946 shall apply to disputes concerning elections of the Government Council.

Article 9. Ministers shall not hold office beyond the term of the Assembly which elected them; nevertheless, the term of office of a Minister shall be prolonged until the date on which the new Government Council takes office, which shall be no later than fourteen days after the opening of the first session of the new Assembly.

Article 10. The Ministers shall be bound to maintain secrecy regarding the debates of the Council and the matters submitted to it.

Article 11. The office of Minister is incompatible with the following offices:

Member of the Government of the Republic;

President of the Territorial Assembly;

President or member of the Standing Committee of the Territorial Assembly.

If a Minister finds that he holds incompatible offices under the conditions described above, he must opt within fifteen days. If, at the end of that period, he has not made known his choice, he shall be deemed to have relinquished the office of Minister.

Article 12. The Ministers may submit their resignation to the President of the Government Council.

A Minister may be dismissed from office by the Chief Administrator of the Territory on the recommendation of the Vice-President of the Government Council.

Article 13. If a Minister's seat becomes vacant through death, resignation or any cause whatsoever, the vacancy shall be filled in the following manner:

If there are several seats to be filled, an election shall be held under the conditions laid down in articles 6 to 8;

If a single seat is to be filled, a uninominal ballot shall be held, the first two ballots being decided by an absolute majority and the third by a relative majority.

Article 14. In addition to reimbursement of their transportation and travel expenses, the Vice-President and the Ministers shall receive an annual remuneration, payable monthly, the amount of which shall be established uniformly by a decision of the Territorial Assembly with reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Territory.

Article 15. Expenditures necessary for the operation of the Government Council, in particular those relating to the remuneration of its members, the installation and equipment of the Council and travel of its members, shall be charged to the territorial budget.

Article 16. The Government Council shall sit in the capital of the Territory unless otherwise provided in an order issued by the Chief Administrator of the Territory.

The agenda shall be prepared by the President of the Government Council.

Secretarial services for the Council shall be provided by the Chief Administrator of the Territory who shall also keep the records.

These records shall include those of the "Conseil privé."

The Assistant to the Chief Administrator of the Territory may attend the meetings of the Government Council.

Article 17. The dissolution of the Government Council shall not be proclaimed except by a decree issued by the Council of Ministers following consultation with the Territorial Assembly.

The decree shall specify the period which shall not exceed one month within which a new Government Council must be elected.

Chapter II. Powers of the Government Council

Article 18. The Government Council, acting under the high authority of the Chief Administrator of the Territory and under his presidency or that of the Vice-President, shall be responsible for the administration of the Territory.

Section I. Collective functions

Article 19. The Government Council shall act in matters within its competence as defined in this section. All its members shall be jointly responsible for the measures taken by it within the scope of their collective functions.

All proposals relating to matters concerning the Territory to be submitted to the Territorial Assembly and its Standing Committee for consideration shall be decided by the Government Council.

Article 20. All decisions entailing regulations taken by the Chief Administrator of the Territory concerning the administration of territorial affairs, including orders which must first be submitted to the Territorial Assembly for its opinion, shall be approved by the Government Council.

The Council shall delegate the Minister competent in the matter to give the Assembly any necessary explanation concerning the application of the decisions of the latter.

Article 21. Orders or decisions made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory relating to the following subjects in particular shall be adopted in Government Council:

- (a) Economic regulations affecting domestic trade and prices;
- (b) The organization of fairs and markets;
- (c) Measures for the application of regulations concerning the support of production;
- (d) The establishment, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly, of institutions which will ensure the representation of economic interests in the Territory;
- (e) The establishment, elimination and modification of administrative "circonscriptions" in the Territory and the revision of their boundaries, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly:
- (f) The establishment, constitution, organization and operation of rural communities and "conseils de circonscription," if any, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
 - (g) The establishment of registry offices;
- (h) Special regulations for the territorial civil service establishments, salary scales, leave provisions, social benefits and pension schemes, after consultation with the Territorial Assembly;
 - (i) Expansion of basic education;
- (j) Regulations adopted under legislation respecting working conditions and labour.

Article 22. The directors of territorial public services placed under the direct authority of Ministers shall be appointed by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council, on the recommendation of the Minister who is responsible for the service in question.

Article 23. The Government Council shall decide in all matters concerning the administration of domanial interests and territorial public works.

In respect of the subjects mentioned in article 45, however, it shall decide only on measures to give effect to the decisions of the Territorial Assembly.

Article 24. When exceptional circumstances so require, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may, by orders made in Government Council, take such immediately enforceable decisions as are necessary to suspend or reduce temporarily all import and export duties and all indirect taxes on production, movement and consumption of goods.

Such orders shall be subject to ratification by the Territorial Assembly. If the latter is in session, it must be seized of the matter immediately. If the Territorial Assembly is not in session, the matter shall be laid before the Standing Committee at its earliest meeting and the latter shall report thereon to the Territorial Assembly at its next session. When the decision of the Territorial Assembly becomes definitive, it shall take effect as from the date on which it was adopted.

Article 25. If the Chief Administrator of the Territory considers that the Government Council has exceeded its powers when making a decision or that the decision is such as to prejudice national defence, public policy or the maintenance of security or civil liberties, he shall refer the matter to the Minister for Overseas France. The latter may have the decision annulled by decree issued upon receipt of the opinion of the "Conseil d'Etat." The decree shall be issued within three months of the date of the decision. During this period the decision shall be suspended.

Article 26. Subject to the powers of the Administrative Disputes Council, an appeal against the decisions of the Government Council may lie with the "Conseil d'Etat," which shall rule in its capacity as an administrative disputes court.

Article 27. Any decision made by the Government Council in the absence of the Chief Administrator of the Territory, his lawful alternate or the Vice-President, or made in violation of the provisions of article 16, shall be null and void.

In the event of such a decision, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall by an order stating the reasons declare the meeting illegal, pronounce null and void any decisions taken and take all necessary measures to ensure the immediate adjournment of the Council.

He shall report on the matter to the Minister for Overseas France.

Article 28. The Vice-President of the Government Council shall lay annually before the Government Council for approval his report to the Territorial Assembly on the general activities of the Government Council and the work of the territorial public services.

Section II. Individual functions

Article 29. Each Minister shall be responsible, under power of delegation issued by the Chief Administrator of the Territory after consultation with the Vice-President of the Government Council, for the administration of one or more territorial public services.

Article 30. The functions of the Ministers shall be defined by an order made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory, countersigned by the Vice-President of the Government Council and published in the Journal officiel.

Article 31. Each Minister shall be responsible to the Council for the work of the public services and the conduct of the affairs of the administrative branch for which he is responsible and shall report regularly to the Government Council thereon.

Article 32. A Minister may be made responsible for an administrative branch having one or more divisions the management of which is entrusted to other Ministers but whose activities he co-ordinates.

Article 33. The Minister responsible for the conduct of a branch or division of the territorial administration shall take all necessary decisions concerning the management of affairs within the competence of the territorial public services with which his branch or division is concerned, with the exception of those for which the Government Council or the Territorial Assembly is responsible.

He may set up a secretarial service within the limits of the budgetary appropriations voted by the Assembly.

He shall direct the services of his branch or division with the assistance of the heads of services ("chefs de service") to whom he shall delegate all necessary powers.

He shall be responsible for ensuring that his services carry out the decisions of the Government Council and of the Territorial Assembly.

Article 34. Each Minister shall submit to the Council such matters as have been duly prepared by his services and require an order or decision of the Government Council.

He shall also submit to the Government Council all proposals and all reports of enquiries within the competence of his branch or division that must be laid before the Territorial Assembly. He shall be responsible for following the discussion of such matters and speaking in support of them in the Territorial Assembly, in accordance with the instructions of the Government Council. He may be assisted on such occasions by officers of his department.

Article 35. Subject to the conditions laid down in their respective staff regulations and on the recommendation of the Minister to whom they are responsible, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall:

Appoint and promote members of the personnel of the territorial establishments;

Assign officials and employees to posts in the territorial public service and impose or recommend, as appropriate, any necessary disciplinary measures against such officials or employees.

Reports on employees of the territorial public services shall be made successively by the officials responsible for making reports under the general and special regulations applicable to the civil service establishments, and by the Minister responsible for the service to which they are assigned.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall on the recommendation of the Minister concerned recruit temporary employees to be paid out of the territorial budget, subject to approval of the standard contracts by the Territorial Assembly.

Article 36. In addition to the general obligation imposed by article 10, each Minister shall be bound, in respect of his individual actions on behalf of the branch or division for which he is responsible, by the same rules of professional secrecy as apply to public service officials.

Article 37. When necessary, detailed regulations for the application of this chapter shall be issued in the form of orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory and countersigned by the Vice-President of the Government Council.

TITLE II

Powers of the Territorial Assembly

Article 38. Articles 17, 23 and 33 to 37 of the above-mentioned Decree of 25 October 1946 are replaced by the following provisions.

Article 39. The Territorial Assembly shall decide the opening date and duration of its regular sessions. The following rules shall, however, apply:

The Territorial Assembly shall hold two regular sessions each year, which shall be convened by the Chief Administrator of the Territory. The first session shall open during the second quarter; the second, or budgetary session during which the budget shall be examined, shall open between 1 August and 30 September.

If the Assembly adjourns without having fixed the opening date for its next regular session, that date shall be fixed, sufficiently in advance, by the Standing Committee. If, notwithstanding the foregoing, the Assembly has not met in regular session during one of the above-mentioned periods, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may by order made in Government Council, change the session period and convene the Assembly in regular session. The duration of each regular session may not exceed two months.

The Territorial Assembly shall also meet in special session when convened by the Chief Administrator of the Territory:

- (a) If not less than two-thirds of its members address a written request for such a session to the President, or
- (b) By order made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council.

The duration of special sessions may not exceed one month.

The session shall be opened and closed by order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council.

Article 40. The Assembly shall adopt resolutions to issue territorial regulations on the following matters:

- (1) General regulations applicable to employees of the territorial establishments, in application of the decrees concerning the civil service which were issued under article 3 of the Act of 23 June 1956;
 - (2) Civil procedure, excluding the organization of the courts;
 - (3) The liberal professions; ministerial and public offices;
- (4) Customary law relating to civil status and regulations respecting civil registry under the relevant laws;
- (5) Verification, compilation and codification of traditional customs; adaptation of customs to the social evolution; immovable property and immovable property rights which are governed by custom, in particular, definition of the customary rights which are to be treated as real rights capable of being used as a basis for credit; in general, all matters coming under local

(6) The public lands of the Territory, including vacant and ownerless land forming part of the private domain of the Territory.

Nevertheless, it shall not be lawful to impair in any way the immovable property rights and easements from which the State benefits on the date of this Decree.

If the State subsequently assigns certain immovable property for the work of a public service, such property shall benefit by the public utility easements inherent in the operation of the said service:

- (7) Domestic trade, handicrafts and all occupations connected with such activities: commercial travellers, pedlars, etc.;
- (8) Mutual societies, subject to the provisions of Decree No. 56-1135 of 13 November 1956 relating to rural development mutual societies in the Overseas Territories;
 - (9) Producers' or consumers' associations, co-operatives;
- (10) Agriculture, forests, regulation of inland waterways, soil conservation, protection of nature and plants, plant health control:
- (11) Raising, movement, sale and slaughter of cattle, campaign against epizootic diseases;
- (12) Coastal fisheries, excluding any measure contravening the provisions of the Act of 1 March 1888; river fisheries;
- (13) Processing for export, excluding the establishment of standards, which shall continue to be governed by decree;
 - (14) Inter-island transport;
 - (15) Internal transport, passenger traffic, road haulage;
 - (16) Navigation on canals and lagoons;
- (17) Policing of communications, excluding airways and waterways;
- (18) The issue, after consultation with the National Insurance Council through the Minister for Overseas France, of regulations for the purpose of instituting compulsory insurance with respect to individuals and corporate bodies whose civil liability may be involved under the provisions of articles 1382 to 1380 of the Civil Code; provided that such regulations shall not affect the substance of any laws or regulations on insurance nor apply to coverage of risks connected with industrial accidents or occupational diseases;
- (19) Conditions for application of legislation concerning minerals;
 - (20) Organization of savings banks in the Territory;
- (21) Public health, control of major endemic diseases; protection of public health and of the insane; thermal springs;
- (22) Manufacture and sale of all beverages, conditions of hygiene and safety in retail liquor establishments;
- (23) Philanthropic societies engaged in public health, education or training; juvenile delinquency and vagrancy;
 - (24) Touring and hunting;
- (25) Town-planning, housing; regulation of dangerous, inadequate and insanitary premises; low-income housing, rentals:
- (26) Primary and secondary education, vocational and technical training, excluding courses of study, examination programmes and procedures, certificates and diplomas and teaching qualifications;
- (27) Regulations respecting educational scholarships payable out of the territorial budget;
 - (28) Public libraries, cultural centres;
 - (29) Sports and physical education;
 - (30) Welfare, aid, assistance and grants; lotteries;
 - (31) Protection of monuments and sites;
 - (32) Penitentiary system;
- (33) Fixing of costs included under the heading "criminal justice costs", establishment of the scale of such costs, method

- of payment and collection, fixing of conditions to be fulfilled by the payees and, in general, regulation of all matters connected with costs in criminal cases; charges for the issue of copies of or extracts from public documents;
- (34) Conditions under which aliens are required to obtain administrative authorization before engaging in certain occupations:
- (35) Terms and conditions for acceptance of tenders and award of contracts in the Territory for work and supplies connected with the Territory, subject to observance of the general rules applicable in such matters. These rules shall be established by a decree issued in accordance with article 1 of the Act of 23 June 1956.
- Article 41. Decisions may be taken in the matters referred to in article 40 notwithstanding any laws or regulations to the contrary enacted before the date of entry into force of this Decree, subject, however, to international conventions, laws and regulations relating to matters dealt with in the Commercial Code and the Maritime Code, the provisions of the Act of 15 December 1952, the Act of 30 April 1946 and the decrees issued for the application thereof, Decrees Nos. 55-625 and 55-634 of 20 May 1955, laws and regulations for the prevention of fraudulent practices and the inspection of weights and measures, and the ethical codes.
- Article 42. The laws and decrees relating to the matters listed in article 40 of this Decree shall nevertheless remain in force and shall have the effect of territorial regulations. These regulations may be abrogated or amended by decision of the Territorial Assembly.
- Article 43. The Territorial Assembly may make provision in the regulations arising from its decisions for penalties under the conditions laid down in article 2 of the Act of 23 June 1956.
- Article 44. In local affairs, the Territorial Assembly shall decide on programmes to give practical effect to and carry out the equipment and development plan provided for by the Act of 30 April 1946, in accordance with the terms of the decrees issued for the application of the said Act.
- Article 45. As regards domanial interests, the Territorial Assembly shall decide on all proposals made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Government Council respecting the following matters:
- (a) Proceedings to be instituted or supported on behalf of the Territory, except in cases of emergency when the decision shall be taken by the Government Council;

In cases of dispute between the State and the Territory, the latter shall be represented by a Minister empowered to that effect by the Government Council;

- (b) Settlements relating to the rights of the Territory in suits involving sums exceeding 10 million francs C.F.A.;
- (c) Acceptance or refusal of gifts or bequests to the Territory of encumbered immovable property.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory may by a decision taken in Government Council always accept such gifts as a measure of conservation. Any subsequent decision of the Territorial Assembly shall have effect as from the time of such provisional acceptance. In urgent cases, the Chief Administrator of the Territory acting alone may proceed to take all necessary measures of conservation and accept gifts and bequests;

- (d) Transfer of immovable property of the Territory;
- (e) Choice of the method of executing public works projects in the Territory;
- (f) Granting of licences to carry out work on behalf of the Territory. A licence to carry out public works in the Territory, however, may not be granted to or on behalf of any alien unless there is agreement between the Assembly and the Chief Administrator of the Territory; in the event of disagreement, a decision shall be made by decree:
- (g) Granting of agricultural and forestry concessions; granting of temporary forestry permits for periods exceeding five years;
- (h) Classification and declassification of the public lands of the Territory and, in particular, of territorial main roads, aerodromes operated under the territorial budget, harbours, waterways, canals, lakes, lagoons and ponds.

- Article 46. Subject to compliance with international conventions and the provisions of article 32 of Act No. 53-1336 of 31 December 1953 and subject to previous consultation with the "assemblées consulaires" (commercial arbitral assemblies) on matters within their competence, the Assembly shall take decisions in financial matters in respect of any bills prepared by the Government Council and any member's bills on the following subjects:
- (a) Determination of taxes, charges, apportioned charges, duties and rates of all kinds which may be levied in aid of the territorial budget, method of assessment, rules for collection and tariffs;
- (b) Agreements to be concluded with concessionaires, licencees and other managing agents in the Territory and the relevant specifications: schedules of fees payable by concessionaires, licencees and managing agents;
- (c) Maximum rates of duties and taxes of all kinds and maximum rates of additional taxes ("centimes additionnels") which may be collected in aid of communities, organizations and public institutions functioning in the Territory, with the exception of "communes de plein exercice";
 - (d) Territorial land rents and other land duties;
- (e) Regulations governing charges for services provided by territorial public departments and for the provision of goods, equipment and supplies;
- (f) Fiscal tariff agreements relating to taxes levied in aid of the territorial budget, where provided by legislation;
- (g) Establishment and elimination of territorial public services and institutions:
- (h) Determination of the number of scholarships and other school grants to be paid for out of territorial funds, in accordance with the regulations in force; conditions for payment of settlers' loans out of territorial funds;
- (i) Grants and loans by the Territory to communes, public communities and public institutions in the Territory; acceptance or refusal of offers of aid or assistance made by the State, the communes, the public communities and public institutions of the Territory and of the State for carrying out work financed out of territorial funds; offers of territorial aid and assistance in carrying out public works financed out of the funds of the communes, public communities and public institutions of the Territory and the State; contribution of the Territory towards the cost of works of interest to the Territory which are to be carried out by the State;
- (j) Contributions, refunds and fees payable by the Territory to territorial public institutions or to the State;
- (k) Shares held by the Territory in public or semi-public corporations and, exceptionally, in private corporations whose activities tend to promote the economic development of the Territory;
- (1) Borrowings or requests by the Territory for loans or advances from the State, the "Caisse centrale de la France d'outre-mer" or other public credit institutions and use of the resources of the Territory as security therefor;
- (m) Securities and guarantees granted by the Territory to the undertakings of communes, public communities and public institutions;
- (n) Fixing conditions in which territorial budgetary funds may be allocated for measures to increase production.

The Assembly may fix a time limit by which the "assemblées consulaires" (commercial arbitral assemblies) must express an opinion and in default thereof it shall proceed to act. The time limit may not be less than fifteen days from the date on which the request for an opinion was made.

Article 47. The Assembly shall decide on the granting of type B mining exploration permits.

Article 48. The Territorial Assembly may take a decision fixing the amount and conditions of payment of the remuneration allotted and paid monthly to its members and also the rules which shall apply to a refund of their travelling expenses.

This remuneration, whatever its form, shall be fixed with reference to the salary of a category of officials serving in the Territory.

It may not be cumulated with the remuneration allotted to members of the Government Council nor with that allotted to members of the constitutional assemblies.

Officials, whether performing the duties of their service or seconded who are members of the Territorial Assembly shall receive the difference between their salary, plus any travelling expenses and the remuneration payable to a member of the Territorial Assembly, or only their salary, plus any travelling expenses, if the total thereof is greater than the said remuneration.

The Territorial Assembly may also vote its President an annual lump-sum payment as a representation allowance.

Article 49. The Territorial Assembly shall be consulted on all matters for which such consultation is provided by the laws and regulations and, in particular, on draft orders for the issue of regulations to be made by the Government Council, relating to:

- (a) The organization of the territorial public services as a whole;
- (b) Special regulations for employees of the territorial public service establishments, form and scales of remuneration, leave provisions, social benefits and pension schemes applicable to such employees;
- (c) Working conditions and the social security system and, in particular, application within the Territory of the provisions of Act No. 52-1322 of 15 December 1952 establishing a Labour Code in the territories and associated territories for which the Minister for Overseas France is responsible;
- (d) The complement of State officials placed at the disposal of the territorial public services;
- (e) The establishment, elimination and modification of administrative "circonscriptions" in the Territory and revision of their boundaries;
- (f) The establishment, constitution, organization and operation of rural communities and "conseils de circonscription", if any;
- (g) The establishment of institutions representing economic interests in the Territory;
 - (h) Measures to encourage production;
 - (i) Immigration regulations;
- (j) The fixing of the scale of penalties applicable in respect of each category of violations of the regulations issued as a result of the decisions of the Territorial Assembly, under the conditions laid down in article 2 of Act No. 56-619 of 23 June 1956.

The Assembly shall be consulted on the following matters:

- (1) The rules governing representation of the economic interests of the Territory;
- (2) The delivery of type A mining exploration permits which shall be granted by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in his capacity as representative of the State, notwithstanding article 9 of Decree No. 54-1110 of 13 November 1954. If the Territorial Assembly and the Chief Administrator of the Territory disagree, the matter shall be decided by decree adopted in Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Assembly of the French Union;
- (3) Missions, the cost of which is charged to the territorial budget;
- (4) The appointment, as necessary, of territorial representatives to the board of the bank of issue for the Territory;
- (5) The confirmation of domestic postal, telephone and telegraph rates, and all plans for the installation, adjustment, equipment and maintenance of the domestic telephone and telegraph network and radio service, subject to the application of Decree No. 56-1229 of 3 December 1956, as amended, to reorganize and decentralize the overseas postal and telecommunication services.

Article 50. The Government Council shall refer the following matters to the Assembly:

- (a) The administrative accounts connected with the execution of the budget of the Territory and the associated budgets, "régies" (monopolies) and public institutions of the Territory;
 - (b) The annual financial position of the Territory;

(c) The income received by the accounting officer of the central administrative office for overseas posts and telecommunications from the sale of stamps issued for the account of the Territory, except in so far as the provisions relating to local offices of the Decree of 3 December 1956, as amended, to reorganize and decentralize overseas postal and telecommunication services, shall be made applicable to the Territory by decree.

Any comments which the Assembly may decide to make with regard to the accounts of the Territory shall be submitted by the President of the Assembly, within the time specified in article 52, to the Chief Administrator of the Territory who shall forward a copy of such comments to the Audit Office ("cour des comptes") through the Ministry for Overseas France.

Article 51. All matters, except those which may be submitted only by the Chief Administrator of the Territory, shall be referred to the Territorial Assembly by the President of the Government Council or by a member of that body.

In the period between sessions, bills submitted by the Government Council to the Assembly for approval and members' bills shall be placed before the Standing Committee.

Members' bills shall be forwarded within ten days to the Government Council which may give its opinion thereon. The Assembly shall not refuse a request by the Government Council to postpone the examination of any bill until the next session of the Assembly, at the latest.

The Government Council must be kept informed of the matters on the agendas of the Assembly and its committees. It may designate one of its members to attend the meetings of the committees of the Assembly, address the meetings or cause himself to be represented thereat.

Bills and proposals submitted to the Assembly for approval shall be considered by the latter at the session during which they were submitted, or at the next session at the latest, unless authority is delegated to the Standing Committee to act on them between sessions.

In matters which must be submitted to the Assembly for its opinion, the Chief Administrator of the Territory acting in Government Council, may, after notifying the President of the Assembly, proceed to take action in the absence of an opinion of the Assembly, if the latter has failed to express its views within the periods specified above.

Article 52. Decisions of the Territorial Assembly and its Standing Committee shall be communicated to the Chief Administrator of the Territory, in duplicate, together with an extract of the record of the meeting at which they were discussed and voted upon, within thirty clear days reckoned from the closing of the session. Upon receipt of the documents, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall ensure that one set thereof is communicated to the Minister for Overseas France.

The Chief Administrator of the Territory shall give effect to the decisions of the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee or shall refer them to the Territorial Assembly for second reading or to the Minister for Overseas France for annulment, as provided in articles 53 and 54 hereunder. If the Chief Administrator of the Territory should request the Minister for Overseas France to annul a decision, he shall advise the President of the Territorial Assembly thereof, or, if that body is not in session, the Chairman of the Standing Committee.

Article 53. With regard to any matter enumerated in articles 39, 40 and 43 to 48, upon which the Territorial Assembly is competent to act, the Chief Administrator of the Territory may within a period of thirty clear days from the date on which it was submitted to him, request the Territorial Assembly to reconsider in second reading any decision taken by the Assembly or by its Standing Committee which he considers not to be in the public interest or conducive to the sound administration of the Territory.

The period specified in article 54 hereunder shall then run from the date of receipt by the Chief Administrator of the Territory of the new decision adopted by the Territorial Assembly.

Article 54. The Minister for Overseas France may annul any decision of the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee on the ground that it is an act in excess of power or a violation of the law, by decree issued in the form of public administrative regulations.

If a decision of the Assembly or its Standing Committee, which has been submitted to the Minister for annulment, is not annulled within a period of ninety clear days from the date on which it was communicated to the Chief Administrator of the Territory, the latter shall make it effective not later than eight clear days after the expiry of the above-mentioned period.

In matters relating to customs, decisions of the Territorial Assembly and of the Standing Committee shall be subject to the provisions of article 3 of Decree No. 54-1020 of 14 October 1954.

Article 55. The levying of taxes, duties, rates and charges of all kinds shall be effected on the former basis and in accordance with the earlier schedule, pending the publication of the orders of the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Council giving effect to the decisions of the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee.

Decisions concerning direct taxes or duties or rates assimilated thereto, taken by the Territorial Assembly or its Standing Committee at a session which opened before 1 January, shall have effect as from that date even if they could not be put into effect earlier.

Similarly, if it has not been possible to put the budget into effect before 1 January, the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be authorized to make provisional monthly appropriations on the basis of the appropriations in the previous budget. Further appropriations may be made each month until the budget has been put into effect.

Article 56. A code of regulations based on the decisions of the Territorial Assembly and on the regulations issued by the Chief Administrator of the Territory shall be established in accordance with Orders made by the Chief Administrator of the Territory in Council and published in the Journal official of the Territory. These codes shall be brought up to date annually.

TITLE III

Rural communities

Article 57. The Chief Administrator of the Territory of the Comoros may, by orders made in Government Council after consultation with the Territorial Assembly establish in that Territory rural communities which shall be bodies corporate, provided that such communities have the necessary resources to balance a budget.

Such rural communities may be constituted by districts, portions of districts or groups of districts.

Each rural community shall be administered by an elected rural community council.

The provisions of articles 3 to 9 of the Decree of 4 April 1957 laying down the conditions for the establishment and operation of rural communities in French West Africa and French Equatorial Africa shall apply to the rural communities in the Territory of the Comoros.

TITLE IV

Miscellaneous provisions

Article 58. "Communes de plein exercice" may be established in the Comoros by order of the Chief Administrator of the Territory made upon receipt of an advisory opinion of the Territorial Assembly adopted by an absolute majority of its members.

Pending the enactment of legislation to govern "communes de plein exercice" in the Territory, such "communes" shall provisionally be governed by:

The Decree of 8 March 1879, as amended, relating to the municipal organization of "communes de plein exercice" in certain Overseas Territories;

Articles 169 to 179 of the Act of 5 April 1884 on municipal organization;

B. CONSTITUTION AND ORDINANCES ENACTING ORGANIC LAWS RELATING TO THE COMMUNITY

Constitution*

The Government of the Republic, in accordance with the Constitutional Act of 3 June 1958, has proposed,

The French people has adopted,

The President of the Republic promulgates the following Constitutional Act:

PREAMBLE

The French people hereby solemnly proclaims its attachment to the Rights of Man and the principles of national sovereignty as defined by the Declaration of 1789, reaffirmed and complemented by the Preamble of the Constitution of 1946.

By virtue of these principles and that of the free determination of peoples, the Republic hereby offers to the Overseas Territories that express the desire to adhere to them, new institutions based on the common ideal of liberty, equality and fraternity and conceived with a view to their democratic evolution.

Article 1

The Republic and the people of the Overseas Territories who, by an act of free determination, adopt the present Constitution thereby institute a Community.

The Community shall be based on the equality and the solidarity of the peoples composing it.

TITLE I

On Sovereignty

Article 2

France is a Republic, indivisible, secular, democratic and social. It shall ensure the equality of all citizens before the law, without distinction of origin, race or religion. It shall respect all beliefs.

The national emblem is the tricolour flag, blue, white and red. The national anthem is the "Marseillaise".

The motto of the Republic is "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity". Its principle is government of the people, by the people and for the people.

Article 3

National sovereignty belongs to the people, which shall exercise this sovereignty through its representatives and by means of referendums.

No section of the people, nor any individual, may attribute to themselves or himself the exercise thereof.

Suffrage may be direct or indirect under the conditions stipulated by the Constitution. It shall always be universal, equal and secret.

All French citizens of both sexes who have reached their majority and who enjoy civil and political rights may vote under the conditions to be determined by law.

Article 4

Political parties and groups shall be instrumental in the expression of the suffrage. They shall be formed freely and shall carry on their activities freely. They must respect the principles of national sovereignty and democracy.

TITLE I

The President of the Republic Article 5

The President of the Republic shall see that the Constitution is respected. He shall ensure, by his arbitration, the regular functioning of the governmental authorities, as well as the continuance of the State.

He shall be the guarantor of national independence, of the integrity of the Territory, and of respect for Community agreements and treaties.

of Ministers.

Article 6

The President of the Republic shall be elected for seven years by an electoral college comprising the members of Parliament, of the General Councils and of the Assemblies of the Overseas Territories, as well as the elected representatives of the municipal councils.

These representatives shall be:

The mayor for communes of fewer than 1,000 inhabitants;

The mayor and the first deputy mayor for communes of from 1,000 to 2,000 inhabitants;

The mayor, first deputy mayor and a municipal councillor chosen according to the order in which he appears on the council list for communes of from 2,001 to 2,500 inhabitants;

The mayor and the first two deputy mayors for communes of from 2,501 to 3,000 inhabitants;

The mayor, the first two deputy mayors and three municipal councillors chosen according to the order in which they appear on the council list for communes of from 3,001 to 6,000 inhabitants;

The mayor, the first two deputy mayors and six municipal councillors chosen according to the order in which they appear on the council list for communes of from 6,001 to 9,000 inhabitants;

All the municipal councillors for communes of more than 9,000 inhabitants;

In addition, for communes of more than 30,000 inhabitants, delegates appointed by the municipal council in the ratio of one delegate for every 1,000 inhabitants above 30,000.

In the Overseas Territories of the Republic, the elected representatives of the councils of the administrative units shall also form part of the electoral college under the conditions to be determined by an organic law.

The participation of member States of the Community in the electoral college for the President of the Republic shall be determined by agreement between the Republic and the member States of the Community.

The procedures implementing the present article shall be determined by an organic law.

Article 7

The President of the Republic shall be elected by an absolute majority on the first ballot. If this is not obtained, the President of the Republic shall be elected on a second ballot by a relative majority.

The voting shall begin at the summons of the Government.

The election of the new President shall take place twenty days at the least and fifty days at the most before the expiration of the powers of the President in office.

In the event that the Presidency of the Republic has been vacated, for any cause whatsoever, or impeded in its functioning as officially noted by the Constitutional Council, to which the matter has been referred by the Government, and which shall rule by an absolute majority of its members, the functions of the President of the Republic, with the exception of those provided for by Articles 11 and 12 below, shall be temporarily exercised by the President of the Senate. In the case of a vacancy, or when the impediment is declared definitive by the Constitutional Council, the voting for the election of a new President shall take place, except in case of "force majeure" officially noted by the Constitutional Council, twenty days at the least and fifty days at the most after the beginning of the vacancy or the declaration of the definitive character of the impediment.

Article 8

The President of the Republic shall appoint the Premier. He shall terminate the functions of the Premier when the latter presents the resignation of the Government.

On the proposal of the Premier, he shall appoint the other members of the Government and shall terminate their functions.

Article 9

The President of the Republic shall preside over the Council

Article 10

The President of the Republic shall promulgate the laws within fifteen days following the transmission to the Government of the finally adopted law.

He may, before the expiration of this time limit, ask Parliament for a reconsideration of the law or of certain of its articles. This reconsideration may not be refused.

Article 11

The President of the Republic, on the proposal of the Government during [Parliamentary] sessions, or on joint motion of the two assemblies, published in the Journal official, may submit to a referendum any bill dealing with the organization of the governmental authorities, entailing approval of a Community agreement, or providing for authorization to ratify a treaty that, without being contrary to the Constitution, might affect the functioning of [existing] institutions.

When the referendum decides in favour of the bill, the President of the Republic shall promulgate it within the time limit stipulated in the preceding article.

Article 12

The President of the Republic may, after consultation with the Premier and the Presidents of the assemblies, declare the dissolution of the National Assembly.

General elections shall take place twenty days at the least and forty days at the most after the dissolution.

The National Assembly shall convene by right on the second Thursday following its election. If this meeting takes place between the periods provided for ordinary sessions, a session shall, by right, be held for a fifteen-day period.

There may be no further dissolution within a year following these elections.

Article 13

The President of the Republic shall sign the ordinances and decrees decided upon in the Council of Ministers.

He shall make appointments to the civil and military posts of the State.

Councillors of State, the Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honour, Ambassadors and envoys extraordinary, Master Councillors of the Audit Office, prefects, representatives of the Government in the Overseas Territories, general officers, rectors of academies [regional divisions of the public educational system] and directors of central administrations shall be appointed in meetings of the Council of Ministers.

An organic law shall determine the other posts to be filled in meetings of the Council of Ministers, as well as the conditions under which the power of the President of the Republic to make appointments to office may be delegated by him and exercised in his name.

Article 14

The President of the Republic shall accredit Ambassadors and envoys extraordinary to foreign powers; foreign Ambassadors and envoys extraordinary shall be accredited to him.

Article 15

The President of the Republic shall be commander of the armed forces. He shall preside over the higher councils and committees of national defence.

Article 16

When the institutions of the Republic, the independence of the nation, the integrity of its territory or the fulfilment of its international commitments are threatened in a grave and immediate manner and when the regular functioning of the constitutional governmental authorities is interrupted, the President of the Republic shall take the measures commanded by these circumstances, after official consultation with the Premier, the Presidents of the assemblies and the Constitutional Council.

He shall inform the nation of these measures in a message.

These measures must be prompted by the desire to ensure to the constitutional governmental authorities, in the shortest possible time, the means of fulfilling their assigned functions. The Constitutional Council shall be consulted with regard to such measures.

Parliament shall meet by right.

The National Assembly may not be dissolved during the exercise of emergency powers [by the President].

Article 17

The President of the Republic shall have the right of pardon.

Article 18

The President of the Republic shall communicate with the two assemblies of Parliament by means of messages, which he shall cause to be read, and which shall not be followed by any debate.

Between sessions, Parliament shall be convened especially for this purpose.

Article 19

The acts of the President of the Republic, other than those provided for under Articles 8 (first paragraph), 11, 12, 16, 18, 54, 56 and 61, shall be countersigned by the Premier and, should circumstances so require, by the appropriate ministers.

TITLE III

The Government

Article 20

The Government shall determine and direct the policy of the nation.

It shall have at its disposal the administration and the armed forces.

It shall be responsible to Parliament under the conditions and according to the procedures stipulated in Articles 49 and 50.

Article 21

The Premier shall direct the operation of the Government. He shall be responsible for national defence. He shall ensure the execution of the laws. Subject to the provisions of Article 13, he shall have regulatory powers and shall make appointments to civil and military posts.

He may delegate certain of his powers to the ministers.

He shall replace, should the occasion arise, the President of the Republic as chairman of the councils and committees provided for under Article 15.

He may, in exceptional instances, replace him as chairman of a meeting of the Council of Ministers by virtue of an explicit delegation and for a specific agenda.

Article 22

The acts of the Premier shall be countersigned, when circumstances so require, by the ministers responsible for their execution.

Article 23

The office of member of the Government shall be incompatible with the exercise of any Parliamentary mandate, with the holding of any office at the national level in business, professional or labour organizations, and with any public employment or professional activity.

An organic law shall determine the conditions under which the holders of such mandates, functions or employments shall be replaced.

The replacement of members of Parliament shall take place in accordance with the provisions of Article 25.

TITLE IV

The Parliament

Article 24

The Parliament shall comprise the National Assembly and the Senate.

The deputies to the National Assembly shall be elected by direct suffrage.

The Senate shall be elected by indirect suffrage. It shall ensure the representation of the territorial units of the Republic. Frenchmen living outside France shall be represented in the Senate.

Article 25

An organic law shall determine the term for which each assembly is elected, the number of its members, their emoluments, the conditions of eligibility and ineligibility and the offices incompatible with membership in the assemblies.

It shall likewise determine the conditions under which, in the case of a vacancy in either assembly, persons shall be elected to replace the deputy or senator whose seat has been vacated until the holding of new complete or partial elections to the assembly concerned.

Article 26

No member of Parliament may be prosecuted, sought, arrested, detained or tried as a result of the opinions or votes expressed by him in the exercise of his functions.

No member of Parliament may, during Parliamentary sessions, be prosecuted or arrested for criminal or minor offences without the authorization of the Assembly of which he is a member except in the case of flagrante delicto.

When Parliament is not in session, no member of Parliament may be arrested without the authorization of the Secretariat of the assembly of which he is a member, except in the case of flagrante delicto, of authorized prosecution or of final conviction.

The detention or prosecution of a member of Parliament shall be suspended if the assembly of which he is a member so demands.

Article 27

All binding instructions [upon members of Parliament] shall be null and void.

The right to vote of the members of Parliament shall be personal.

An organic law may, under exceptional circumstances, authorize the delegation of a vote. In this case, no member may be delegated more than one vote.

Article 28

Parliament shall convene, by right, in two ordinary sessions a year.

The first session shall begin on the first Tuesday of October and shall end on the third Friday of December.

The second session shall open on the last Tuesday of April; it may not last longer than three months.

Article 29

Parliament shall convene in extraordinary session at the request of the Premier, or of the majority of the members comprising the National Assembly, to consider a specific agenda.

When an extraordinary session is held at the request of the members of the National Assembly, the closure decree shall take effect as soon as the Parliament has exhausted the agenda for which it was called, and at the latest twelve days from the date of its meeting.

Only the Premier may ask for a new session before the end of the month following the closure decree.

Article 30

Apart from cases in which Parliament meets by right, extraordinary sessions shall be opened and closed by decree of the President of the Republic.

Article 31

The members of the Government shall have access to the two assemblies. They shall be heard when they so request.

They may call for the assistance of commissioners of the Government.

Article 32

The President of the National Assembly shall be elected for the duration of the legislature. The President of the Senate shall be elected after each partial re-election [of the Senate].

Article 33

The meetings of the two assemblies shall be public. An in extenso report of the debates shall be published in the Journal officiel.

Each assembly may sit in secret committee at the request of the Premier or of one tenth of its members.

TITLE V

On Relations between Parliament and the Government

Article 34

All laws shall be passed by Parliament.

Laws shall establish the regulations concerning:

Civil rights and the fundamental guarantees granted to the citizens for the exercise of their public liberties; the obligations imposed by the national defence upon the persons and property of citizens;

Nationality, status and legal capacity of persons, marriage contracts, inheritance and gifts;

Determination of crimes and misdemeanours as well as the penalties imposed therefor; criminal procedure; amnesty; the creation of new juridical systems and the status of magistrates;

The basis, the rate and the methods of collecting taxes of all types; the issuance of currency.

Laws shall likewise determine the regulations concerning:

The electoral system of the Parliamentary assemblies and the local assemblies;

The establishment of categories of public institutions;

The fundamental guarantees granted to civil and military personnel employed by the State;

The nationalization of enterprises and the transfer of the property of enterprises from the public to the private sector.

Laws shall determine the fundamental principles of:

The general organization of national defence;

The free administration of local communities, the extent of their jurisdiction and their resources;

Education:

Property rights, civil and commercial obligations;

Legislation pertaining to employment, unions and social security.

The financial laws shall determine the financial resources and obligations of the State under the conditions and with the reservations to be provided for by an organic law.

Laws pertaining to national planning shall determine the objectives of the economic and social action of the State.

The provisions of the present article may be developed in detail and amplified by an organic law.

Article 35

Parliament shall authorize the declaration of war.

Article 36

Martial law shall be decreed in a meeting of the Council of Ministers.

Its prorogation beyond twelve days may be authorized only by Parliament.

Article 37

Matters other than those that fall within the domain of law shall be of a regulatory character.

Legislative texts concerning these matters may be modified by decrees issued after consultation with the Council of State. Those legislative texts which may be passed after the present Constitution has become operative shall be modified by decree, only if the Constitutional Council has stated that they have a regulatory character as defined in the preceding paragraph.

Article 38

The Government may, in order to carry out its programme, ask Parliament to authorize it, for a limited period, to take through ordinances measures that are normally within the domain of law.

The ordinances shall be enacted in meetings of the Council of Ministers after consultation with the Council of State. They shall come into force upon their publication, but shall become null and void if the bill for their ratification is not submitted to Parliament before the date set by the enabling act.

At the expiration of the time limit referred to in the first paragraph of the present article, the ordinances may be modified only by law in those matters which are within the legislative domain.

Article 39

The Premier and the members of Parliament alike shall have the right to initiate legislation.

Government bills shall be discussed in the Council of Ministers after consultation with the Council of State and shall be filed with the Secretariat of one of the two assemblies. Finance bills shall be submitted first to the National Assembly.

Article 40

Bills and amendments introduced by members of Parliament shall not be considered when their adoption would have as a consequence either a diminution of public financial resources, or the creation or increase of public expenditures.

Article 41

If it appears in the course of the legislative procedure that a Parliamentary bill or an amendment is not within the domain of law or is contrary to a delegation [of authority] granted by virtue of Article 38, the Government may declare its inadmissibility.

In case of disagreement between the Government and the President of the assembly concerned, the Constitutional Council, upon the request of either party, shall rule within a time limit of eight days.

Article 42

The discussion of Government bills shall pertain, in the first assembly to which they have been referred, to the text presented by the Government.

An assembly, given a text passed by the other assembly, shall deliberate on the text that is transmitted to it.

Article 43

Government and Parliamentary bills shall, at the request of the Government or of the assembly concerned, be sent for study to committees especially designated for this purpose.

Government and Parliamentary bills for which such a request has not been made shall be sent to one of the permanent committees, the number of which shall be limited to six in each assembly.

Article 44

Members of Parliament and of the Government shall have the right of amendment.

After the opening of the debate, the Government may oppose the examination of any amendment which has not previously been submitted to committee.

If the Government so requests, the assembly concerned shall decide, by a single vote, on all or part of the text under discussion, retaining only the amendments proposed or accepted by the Government.

Article 45

Every Government or Parliamentary bill shall be examined successively in the two assemblies of Parliament with a view to the adoption of an identical text.

When, as a result of disagreement between the two assemblies, it has become impossible to adopt a Government or Parliamentary bill after two readings by each assembly, or, if the Government has declared the matter urgent, after a single reading by each of them, the Premier shall have the right to have a joint committee meet, composed of an equal number from both assemblies and instructed to offer for consideration a text on the matters still under discussion.

The text prepared by the joint committee may be submitted by the Government for approval of the two assemblies. No amendment shall be admissible except by agreement with the Government.

If the joint committee fails to approve a common text, or if this text is not adopted under the conditions set forth in the preceding paragraph, the Government may, after a new reading by the National Assembly and by the Senate, ask the National Assembly to rule definitively. In this case, the National Assembly may reconsider either the text prepared by the joint committee or the last text adopted [by the National Assembly], modified, when circumstances so require, by one or several of the amendments adopted by the Senate.

Article 46

The laws that the Constitution characterizes as organic shall be passed and amended under the following conditions:

A Government or Parliamentary bill shall be submitted to the deliberation and to the vote of the first assembly to which it is submitted only at the expiration of a period of fifteen days following its introduction.

The procedure of Article 45 shall be applicable. Nevertheless, lacking an agreement between the two assemblies, the text may be adopted by the National Assembly on final reading only by an absolute majority of its members.

The organic laws relative to the Senate must be passed in the same manner by the two assemblies.

Organic laws may be promulgated only after a declaration by the Constitutional Council on their constitutionality.

Article 47

Parliament shall pass finance bills under the conditions to be stipulated by an organic law.

Should the National Assembly fail to reach a decision on first reading within a time limit of forty days after a bill has been filed, the Government shall refer it to the Senate, which must rule within a time limit of fifteen days. The procedure set forth in Article 45 shall then be followed.

Should Parliament fail to reach a decision within a time limit of seventy days, the provisions of the bill may be enforced by ordinance.

Should the finance bill establishing the resources and expenditures of a fiscal year not be filed in time for it to be promulgated before the beginning of that fiscal year, the Government shall immediately request Parliament for the authorization to collect the taxes and shall make available by decree the funds needed to meet the Government commitments already voted.

The time limits stipulated in the present article shall be suspended when Parliament is not in session.

The Audit Office shall assist Parliament and the Government in supervising the implementation of the finance laws.

Article 48

The discussion of the bills filed or agreed upon by the Government shall have priority on the agenda of the assemblies in the order set by the Government.

One meeting a week shall be reserved, by priority, for questions asked by members of Parliament and for answers by the Government.

Article 49

The Premier, after deliberation by the Council of Ministers, may pledge the responsibility of the Government to the National Assembly with regard to the programme of the Government, or with regard to a declaration of general policy, as the case may be.

The National Assembly may question the responsibility of the Government by the vote of a motion of censure. Such a motion shall be admissible only if it is signed by at least one-tenth of the members of the National Assembly. The vote may only take place forty-eight hours after the motion has been filed; the only votes counted shall be those favourable to the motion of censure, which may be adopted only by a majority of the members comprising the Assembly. Should the motion of censure be rejected, its signatories may not introduce another motion in the course of the same session, except in the case provided for in the paragraph below.

The Premier may, after deliberation by the Council of Ministers, pledge the Government's responsibility to the National Assembly on the vote of a text. In this case, the text shall be considered as adopted, unless a motion of censure, filed in the succeeding twenty-four hours, is voted under the conditions laid down in the previous paragraph.

The Premier shall be entitled to ask the Senate for approval of a general policy declaration.

Article 50

When the National Assembly adopts a motion of censure, or when it disapproves the programme or a declaration of general policy of the Government, the Premier must submit the resignation of the Government to the President of the Republic.

Article 51

The closure of ordinary or extraordinary sessions shall by right be delayed, should the occasion arise, in order to permit the application of the provisions of Article 49.

TITLE VI

On Treaties and International Agreements

Article 52

The President of the Republic shall negotiate and ratify treaties.

He shall be informed of all negotiations leading to the conclusion of an international agreement not subject to ratification.

Article 53

Peace treaties, commercial treaties, treaties or agreements relative to international organization, those that imply a commitment for the finances of the State, those that modify provisions of a legislative nature, those relative to the status of persons, those that call for the cession, exchange or addition of territory may be ratified or approved only by a law.

They shall go into effect only after having been ratified or approved.

No cession, no exchange, no addition of territory shall be valid without the consent of the populations concerned.

Article 54

If the Constitutional Council, the matter having been referred to it by the President of the Republic, by the Premier, or by the President of one or the other assembly, shall declare that an international commitment contains a clause contrary to the Constitution, the authorization to ratify or approve this commitment may be given only after amendment of the Constitution.

Article 55

Treaties or agreements duly ratified or approved shall, upon their publication, have an authority superior to that of laws, subject, for each agreement or treaty, to its application by the other party.

TITLE VII

The Constitutional Council

Article 56

The Constitutional Council shall consist of nine members, whose term of office shall last nine years and shall not be renewable. One third of the membership of the Constitutional Council shall be renewed every three years. Three of its members shall be appointed by the President of the Republic, three by the President of the National Assembly, three by the President of the Senate.

In addition to the nine members provided for above, former Presidents of the Republic shall be members ex officio for life of the Constitutional Council.

The President shall be appointed by the President of the Republic. He shall have the deciding vote in case of a tie.

Article 57

The office of member of the Constitutional Council shall be incompatible with that of minister or member of Parliament. Other incompatibilities shall be determined by an organic law.

Article 58

The Constitutional Council shall ensure the regularity of the election of the President of the Republic.

It shall examine complaints and shall announce the results of the vote.

Article 59

The Constitutional Council shall rule, in the case of disagreement, on the regularity of the election of deputies and senators.

Article 60

The Constitutional Council shall ensure the regularity of referendum procedures and shall announce the results thereof.

Article 61

Organic laws, before their promulgation, and regulations of the Parliamentary assemblies, before they come into application, must be submitted to the Constitutional Council, which shall rule on their constitutionality.

To the same end, laws may be submitted to the Constitutional Council, before their promulgation, by the President of the Republic, the Premier or the President of one or the other assembly.

In the cases provided for by the two preceding paragraphs, the Constitutional Council must make its ruling within a time limit of one month. Nevertheless, at the request of the Government, in case of emergency, this period shall be reduced to eight days.

In these same cases, referral to the Constitutional Council shall suspend the time limit for promulgation.

Article 62

A provision declared unconstitutional may not be promulgated or implemented.

The decisions of the Constitutional Council may not be appealed to any jurisdiction whatsoever. They must be recognized by the governmental authorities and by all administrative and juridical authorities.

Article 63

An organic law shall determine the rules of organization and functioning of the Constitutional Council, the procedure to be followed before it, and in particular the periods of time allowed for laying disputes before it.

TITLE VIII

On Judicial Authority

Article 64

The President of the Republic shall be the guarantor of the independence of the judicial authority.

He shall be assisted by the High Council of the Judiciary. An organic law shall determine the status of magistrates. Magistrates may not be removed from office.

Article 65

The High Council of the Judiciary shall be presided over by the President of the Republic. The Minister of Justice shall be its Vice-President ex officio. He may preside in place of the President of the Republic.

The High Council shall, in addition, include nine members appointed by the President of the Republic in conformity with the conditions to be determined by an organic law.

The High Council of the Judiciary shall present nominations for judges of the Court of Cassation [Supreme Court of Appeal] and for First Presidents of Courts of Appeal. It shall give its opinion, under the conditions to be determined by an organic law, on proposals of the Minister of Justice relative to the nomination of the other judges. It shall be consulted on questions of pardon under conditions to be determined by an organic law

The High Council of the Judiciary shall act as a disciplinary council for judges. In such cases, it shall be presided over by the First President of the Court of Cassation.

Article 66

No one may be arbitrarily detained.

The judicial authority, guardian of individual liberty, shall ensure respect for this principle under the conditions stipulated by law.

TITLE IX

The High Court of Justice

A High Court of Justice shall be instituted.

It shall be composed of members [of Parliament] elected, in equal number, by the National Assembly and the Senate after each general or partial election to these assemblies. It shall elect its President from among its members.

An organic law shall determine the composition of the High Court, its rules, and also the procedure to be followed before it.

Article 68

The President of the Republic shall not be held accountable for actions performed in the exercise of his office except in the case of high treason. He may be indicted only by the two assemblies ruling by identical vote in open balloting and by an absolute majority of the members of said assemblies. He shall be tried by the High Court of Justice.

The members of the Government shall be criminally hable for actions performed in the exercise of their office and deemed to be crimes or misdemeanours at the time they were committed. The procedure defined above shall be applied to them, as well as to their accomplices, in case of a conspiracy against the security of the State. In the cases provided for by the present paragraph, the High Court shall be bound by the definition of crimes and misdemeanours, as well as by the determination of penalties, as they are established by the criminal laws in force when the acts are committed.

TITLE X

The Economic and Social Council

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council, whenever the Government calls upon it, shall give its opinion on the Government bills, ordinances and decrees, as well as on the Parliamentary bills submitted to it.

A member of the Economic and Social Council may be designated by the latter to present, before the Parliamentary assemblies, the opinion of the Council on the Government or Parliamentary bills that have been submitted to it.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may likewise be consulted by the Government on any problem of an economic or social character of interest to the Republic or to the Community. Any plan, or any bill dealing with a plan, of an economic or social character shall be submitted to it for its advice.

Article 71

The composition of the Economic and Social Council and its rules of procedure shall be determined by an organic law.

TITLE XI

On Territorial Units

Article 72

The territorial units of the Republic are the communes, the Departments, the Overseas Territories. Other territorial units may be created by law.

These units shall be free to govern themselves through elected councils and under the conditions stipulated by law.

In the departments and the territories, the Delegate of the Government shall be responsible for the national interests, for administrative supervision, and for seeing that the laws are respected.

Article 73

Measures of adjustment required by the particular situation of the Overseas Departments may be taken with regard to their legislative system and administrative organization.

Article 74

The Overseas Territories of the Republic shall have a special organization, which takes into account their own interests within the general interests of the Republic. This organization shall be defined and modified by law after consultation with the Territorial Assembly concerned.

Article 75

Citizens of the Republic who do not have ordinary civil status, the only status referred to in Article 34, may keep their personal status as long as they have not renounced it.

Article 76

The Overseas Territories may retain their status within the Republic.

If they express the desire to do so by a decision of their Territorial Assemblies taken within the time limit set in the first paragraph of Article 91, they shall become Overseas Departments of the Republic or member States of the Community, either in groups or as single units.

TITLE XII

On the Community

Article 77

In the Community instituted by the present Constitution, the States shall enjoy autonomy; they shall administer themselves and manage their own affairs democratically and freely.

There shall be only one citizenship in the Community.

All citizens shall be equal before the law, whatever their origin, their race and their religion. They shall have the same duties.

Article 78

The Community's jurisdiction shall extend over foreign policy, defence, currency, common economic and financial policy, as well as over policy on strategic raw materials.

It shall include, in addition, except in the case of specific agreements, the supervision of the tribunals, higher education, the general organization of external transportation and transportation within the Community, as well as of telecommunications.

Special agreements may create other common jurisdictions or regulate any transfer of jurisdiction from the Community to one of is members.

Article 79

The member States shall benefit from the provisions of Article 77 as soon as they have exercised the choice provided for in Article 76.

Until the measures required for implementation of the present title go into force, matters within the common jurisdiction shall be regulated by the Republic.

Article 80

The President of the Republic shall preside over and represent the Community.

The institutional organs of the Community shall be an Executive Council, a Senate and a Court of Arbitration.

Article 81

The member States of the Community shall participate in the election of the President according to the conditions stipulated in Article 6.

The President of the Republic, in his capacity as President of the Community, shall be represented in each State of the Community.

Article 82

The Executive Council of the Community shall be presided over by the President of the Community. It shall consist of the Premier of the Republic, the heads of Government of each of the member States of the Community, and the ministers responsible for the common affairs of the Community.

The Executive Council shall organize the co-operation of members of the Community at Government and administrative levels.

The organization and procedure of the Executive Council shall be determined by an organic law.

Article 83

The Senate of the Community shall be composed of delegates whom the Parliament of the Republic and the legislative assemblies of the other members of the Community shall choose from among their own membership. The number of delegates of each State shall be determined according to its population and the responsibilities it assumes in the Community.

The Senate of the Community shall hold two sessions a year, which shall be opened and closed by the President of the Community and may not last longer than one month each.

The Senate of the Community, when called upon by the President of the Community, shall deliberate on the common economic and financial policy before laws on these matters are voted upon by the Parliament of the Republic and, should circumstances so require, by the legislative assemblies of the other members of the Community.

The Senate of the Community shall examine the acts and treaties or international agreements, which are specified in Articles 35 and 53, and which commit the Community.

The Senate of the Community shall make executory decisions in the domains in which it has received delegation of power from the legislative assemblies of the members of the Community. These decisions shall be promulgated in the same form as the law in the territory of each of the States concerned.

An organic law shall determine the composition of the Senate and its rules of procedure.

Article 84

A Court of Arbitration of the Community shall rule on litigations occurring among members of the Community.

Its composition and its jurisdiction shall be determined by an organic law.

Article 85

By derogation from the procedure provided for in Article 89, the provisions of the present title that concern the functioning of the common institutions shall be amendable by identical laws passed by the Parliament of the Republic and by the Senate of the Community.

Article 86

A change of status of a member State of the Community may be requested, either by the Republic, or by a resolution of the legislative assembly of the State concerned confirmed by a local referendum, the organization and supervision of which shall be ensured by the institutions of the Community. The procedures governing this change shall be determined by an agreement approved by the Parliament of the Republic and the legislative assembly concerned.

Under the same conditions, a member State of the Community may become independent It shall thereby cease to belong to the Community.

Article 87

The special agreements made for the implementation of the present title shall be approved by the Parliament of the Republic and the legislative assembly concerned.

TITLE XIII

On Agreements of Association Article 88

The Republic or the Community may make agreements with States that wish to associate themselves with the Community in order to develop their own civilizations.

TITLE XIV

On Amendment

Article 89

The initiative for amending the Constitution shall belong both to the President of the Republic on the proposal of the Premier and to the members of Parliament.

A Government or Parliamentary bill for amendment must be passed by the two assemblies in identical terms. The amendment shall become definitive after approval by a referendum.

Nevertheless, the proposed amendment shall not be submitted to a referendum when the President of the Republic decides to submit it to Parliament convened in Congress; in this case, the proposed amendment shall be approved only if it is accepted by a three-fifths majority of the votes cast. The Secretariat of the Congress shall be that of the National Assembly.

No amendment procedure may be undertaken or followed when the integrity of the territory is in jeopardy.

The republican form of government shall not be subject to amendment.

TITLE XV

Temporary Provisions

Article 90

The ordinary session of Parliament is suspended. The mandate of the members of the present National Assembly shall expire on the day that the Assembly elected under the present Constitution convenes.

Until this meeting, the Government alone shall have the authority to convene Parliament.

The mandate of the members of the Assembly of the French Union shall expire at the same time as the mandate of the members of the present National Assembly.

Article 91

The institutions of the Republic, provided for by the present Constitution, shall be established within four months after its promulgation.

This time limit shall be extended to six months for the institutions of the Community.

The powers of the President of the Republic now in office shall expire only when the results of the election provided for in Articles 6 and 7 of the present Constitution are proclaimed.

The member States of the Community shall participate in this first election under the conditions derived from their status at the date of the promulgation of the Constitution.

The established authorities shall continue to exercise their functions in these States according to the laws and regulations applicable when the Constitution becomes operative, until the authorities provided for by their new régimes are set up.

Until it is definitively constituted, the Senate shall consist of the present members of the Council of the Republic. The organic laws that determine the definitive composition of the Senate must be passed before 31 July 1959.

The powers conferred on the Constitutional Council by Articles 58 and 59 of the Constitution shall be exercised, until this Council is set up, by a committee composed of the Vice President of the Council of State, as chairman, the First President of the Court of Cassation, and the First President of the Audit Office.

The peoples of the member States of the Community shall continue to be represented in Parliament until the measures necessary to the implementation of Title XII have been put into effect.

Article 92

The legislative measures necessary for the setting up of the institutions and, until they are set up, for the functioning of the governmental authorities, shall be taken in meetings of the Council of Ministers, after consultation with the Council of State, in the form of ordinances having the force of law.

During the time limit set in the first paragraph of Article 91, the Government shall be authorized to determine, by ordinances having the force of law and passed in the same way, the system of elections to the assemblies provided for by the Constitution.

During the same period and under the same conditions, the Government may also adopt measures, in all matters, which it may deem necessary to the life of the nation, the protection of citizens or the safeguarding of liberties.

This Act shall be applied as the Constitution of the Republic and of the Community.

Done at Paris, on 4 October 1958.

Ordinance No. 58-1254 of 19 December 1958 enacting the organic law on the Executive Council of the Community

The President of the Council of Ministers,

Considering the Constitution and, in particular, articles 82, 85 and 92 thereof;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers,

Orders as follows:

Article 1. The Executive Council of the Community shall have its seat in Paris. The President of the Community may decide to convene the Council at another city and, in particular, at the capital of another member State of the Community.

Article 2. The President of the Community shall preside over the Executive Council. He shall call it together when the Senate of the Community is in session and every time that the requirements of common policy make it necessary. The President shall establish the agenda of the meetings of the Executive Council.

Article 3. The Prime Minister of the French Republic, the heads of Government of the other member States of the Community and the Ministers made responsible by the President of the Community for common affairs, shall be ex officio members of the Executive Council.

The members of the Executive Council shall attend the meetings in their personal capacity. In exceptional cases, however, they may be replaced for a specified meeting, with the consent of the President of the Community, by a member of the Government to which they belong.

The President of the Community may summon ministers belonging to the Governments of member States of the Community to the Executive Council for the consideration of specified matters.

Article 4. The Executive Council shall be the supreme body for the co-operation of member States of the Community in matters of government and administration. It shall take cognizance of the general policy of the Community within the scope of its competence as laid down in article 78 of the Constitution.

It shall decide on the expenditures required for the establishment and operation of the institutions and services of the Community and on the allocation among the member States of these expenditures and of expenditures for common policies.

Article 5. The President of the Community shall ensure respect for the Constitution, the organic laws of the Community, the Community agreements provided for in articles 78 and 87 of the Constitution, the decisions of the Court of Arbitration of the Community and the treaties and international agreements binding on the Community.

He shall prepare and announce the measures needed for the administration of common affairs; he shall see to their enforcement.

Article 6. The President of the Community may delegate a part of his powers, except his duties as chairman of the Executive Council, to one or more members of the Executive Council.

Article 7. The Ministers responsible for common affairs and the competent Ministers of the member States of the Community may meet under the authority of the Executive Council and, if the occasion should arise, under the chairmanship of one of its members appointed for that purpose by the President of the Community, to prepare the work of the Executive Council and to consider matters submitted to them.

Article 8. The agenda and the proceedings of the meetings of the Executive Council and of the meetings as provided in article 7 above shall be secret.

Article 9. The President of the Community in Executive Council shall appoint a Secretary General. The Secretary General shall attend the meetings of the Executive Council and prepare a report of its discussions. He shall direct the services of the Community and co-ordinate the work of the meetings as provided in article 7 above.

The institutions and services of the Community shall be established and organized by the President of the Community in Executive Council. The President of the Community shall appoint the personnel of these institutions and services.

Article 10. For this purpose, the institutions and services necessary to common policy shall be under the high authority of the President of the Community.

Article 11. This Ordinance shall be published in the Journal official of the French Republic and of each of the other member States of the Community and shall be enforced as an organic law of the Community.

Done in Paris, 19 December 1958.

Ordinance No. 58-1255 of 19 December 1958 enacting the organic law on the Senate of the Community

The President of the Council,

Considering the Constitution and, in particular, articles 83, 85 and 92 thereof;

Having heard the "Conseil d'Etat";

Having heard the Council of Ministers,

Orders as follows:

TITLE I

Article 1. The Senate of the Community shall not exceed three hundred members.

Each of the States of the Community shall be represented in the Senate in accordance with the provisions of article 83, first paragraph, of the Constitution.

Article 2. Any disputes concerning the appointment of a delegate which may be submitted to the President of the Community shall be decided by the Court of Arbitration of the Community,

Article 3. Except in the event of resignation, the term of office of each member of the Senate of the Community shall terminate at the same time as his term of office in the assembly which appointed him.

His term of office shall not exceed five years. He may be reappointed.

Article 4. Each assembly shall, if the case should arise, complete its membership before the opening date of each of its sessions.

Article 5. All binding instructions upon members of the Senate shall be null and void. The members of the Senate of the Community shall not delegate their right to vote.

Article 6. Throughout the territory of the States of the Community, no member of the Senate of the Community shall be prosecuted, sought, arrested, detained or tried as a result of the opinions expressed or votes cast by him in the exercise of his functions, nor shall he be prosecuted or arrested, during sessions, for a crime or correctional offence without the authorization of the Senate of the Community except in the case of flagrante delicto.

When the Senate is not in session, no member of the Senate of the Community shall be arrested without the authorization of the Officers of the Senate, except in the case of flagrante delicto, of authorized prosecution or of final conviction.

The detention or prosecution of a member of the Senate of the Community shall be suspended during the sessions and for their entire duration, if the Assembly so demands.

In the States themselves, statements made in the Senate of the Community and reports and other articles printed by order of the Assembly shall not give rise to any action; a report of the public meetings made in good faith in the newspapers shall not give rise to any action.

Article 7. It shall not be lawful for any member of the Senate of the Community, on pain of automatic resignation, to place his name followed by an indication of his position or allow it so to be placed in any advertising matter relating to a financial, industrial or commercial undertaking.

TITLE II

Article 8. The Senate of the Community shall hold two regular sessions a year, each lasting no more than one month. The President of the Community shall convene the Senate. He shall open each session and declare its closure.

Article 9. The President of the Community may call the Senate together in special session. A special session shall not exceed ten days in length.

Except as provided in article 19 below, a special session shall be called after consultation with the Executive Council.

Article 10. The meetings of the Senate of the Community shall be public. Nevertheless, at the request of the President of the Community or of one-tenth of the members of the Senate, the Senate may meet in secret committee.

The report of the proceedings, except those of the secret committees, shall be published officially.

Article 11. The first meeting of each regular session shall be presided over by the oldest of the members present, assisted by the six youngest members present who shall act as secretaries. These officers, appointed in virtue of their age, shall continue to act until the definitive election of the officers.

The election of the President and of the officers shall then be held by secret ballot. The President shall be eligible for reelection on the conclusion of his term of office.

In the event of a special session, and in the case as provided in article 6, second paragraph, the President and officers of the preceding session shall act.

Article 12. The Senate of the Community shall establish its rules of procedure.

Priority listing on the agenda and debates on urgent matters shall be obligatory when they are requested by the President of the Community.

Article 13. The members of the Executive Council of the Community shall have access to the Senate of the Community; if they have been appointed by the Executive Council to speak during a debate, they shall be heard by the Senate of the Community when they so request. The Ministers responsible for the common affairs of the Community may call for the assistance of commissioners appointed on their recommendation by the President of the Community.

Article 14. The members of the Senate of the Community may ask questions, within the limits of the competence of the Senate of the Ministers responsible for the common affairs of the Community. The questions and the answers shall be in writing.
