a In the case of UPU, the working expenses of the International Bureau are advanced by the Swiss Government. Such advances must be repaid at the earliest possible date and any sums outstanding on 31 December of the year of account carry interest as from that date at 5 per cent per annum. A similar procedure applies also to ITU, where, however, the annual contributions for the ordinary budget are payable in advance and any sums outstanding on 1 January of the year of account carry interest as from that date at 3 per cent for the first six months and 6 per cent thereafter.

b The Third Congress of WMO decided that members should bring their advances to the Working Capital Fund during the third financial period (1960-1963) up to a level to be established by the Executive Committee, not exceeding 5 per cent of the maximum expenditure authorized for the four years of the same period ($2,694,484). The Executive Committee subsequently decided to levy the full amount in 1960. These advances are to be levied in the same proportion as for the new scale of assessments for 1960.

IX. PARTICIPATION IN SPECIAL FUND ACTIVITIES

23. The Advisory Committee has inquired into the internal arrangements that have been made in the specialized agencies with regard to their participation in the activities of the Special Fund. Experience to date is limited. Executing agencies have been selected for all projects approved to date by the Governing Council, and basic agreements have been signed by the Managing Director and the specialized agencies concerned in each case. The implementation of each individual project will be covered by a project plan of operations which, when signed, constitutes an agreement between the Managing Director, the Executing Agency and the Government concerned with that particular project. Project plans of operation are signed only after the recipient Government has signed a basic agreement with the Managing Director of the Special Fund. One project plan of operation has been signed to date. In general, none of the specialized agencies contemplates the setting up of any special unit or the establishment of separate arrangements in this regard; rather, the activity will be integrated with the other operations in each agency, with some strengthening of existing arrangements as and where necessary.

X. FIELD OFFICES

24. The Advisory Committee has, in its report on the 1960 budget estimates of the United Nations (A/4170, paras. 71 to 74), commented on the question of common premises for the field offices of the several organizations. Particular attention is invited, in this connexion, to the present situation in this respect as reflected in annexes 1 to 4 of that report.

XI. Detailed comments on 1960 budgets of agencies

25. The Advisory Committee offers below comments on specific points in the 1960 budgets or estimates of the several agencies.

- 26. The Advisory Committee had an opportunity to discuss the 1960 budget of the ILO and related matters with the Director-General of the International Labour Office.
- 27. The 1960 regular budget of the ILO incorporates the administrative and operational services costs of the organization's activities under the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, with an income credit from the Special Account of that programme in the amount of the anticipated lump-sum allocation from that account towards the costs in question. This procedure accords with the request of the Economic and Social Council in resolution 702 (XXVI) of 31 July 1958. The estimates in question for 1960 are $534,457 on the expenditure side and $500,300, as a lump-sum receipt, on the income side.
- 28. The expenditure budget for 1960 exceeds the corresponding 1959 appropriations by $457,407, or 5 per cent. This increase is the net result of the following:
- (a) An increase of $496,000 in the ordinary budget covering the normal expenses of the organization;
- (b) An increase of some $66,000 attributable to added costs of pension contributions, resulting in part from the 5 per cent notional increase of pensionable remuneration of participants in the Professional category;
- (c) An increase of about $22,000 attributable to the increased cost of facilities in additional languages; and
- (d) A decrease of some $127,000 in the provision for repayment of Working Capital Fund advances.
- 29. Of the increase of $496,000 under the ordinary budget, some $189,000 relates to operational activities connected with social and economic assistance and the workers' education programme, the provision for which is increased from $164,000 in 1959 to $353,100 in 1960. Salaries, wages and fees are estimated to cost some $122,000 more in 1960 than in 1959, including $55,000 for thirty-four new posts, eight in the Professional and twenty-six in the General Service category, $37,000 on account of the inclusion of full-year costs for new posts provided in the 1959 budget with a six-month retardation in recruitment, $24,000 resulting from normal statutory provisions, and certain other minor increases. Other increases in the ordinary budget include $49,000 for common staff costs, $46,000 for branch offices, $44,000 for conferences, resulting from provision being included in respect of the first African Regional Conference, $35,000 in respect of the factual survey relating to freedom of information, and $25,000 for a special publications programme covering a number of major studies and manuals.
- 30. The provision for the new posts to be established in 1960 is estimated on the basis of a six-month retardation in recruitment; at the same time, the increased level of the establishment is to be maintained, without fresh additions, for the two years 1960 and 1961. Thus, in effect, the 1959 International Labour Conference approved a two-year manning-table, reflecting a further step towards a somewhat greater measure of advance planning.
- 31. Attention was invited in the report on the 1959 budgets of the specialized agencies (A/4032, para. 34) to the initiation in the ILO of proposals relating to work in the field of management development, as part of the concerted effort in the United Nations and the agencies to strengthen the activities in respect of industrialization and manpower. The complexity of the subject and the need for adequate preparatory study and planning are reflected in the fact that only a token credit of $100 is included in the ILO budget for 1960, a year which is to be devoted largely to internal research and planning. The Governing Body of the ILO will shortly give further consideration to the nature, scope and development of this programme, and the Advisory Committee is assured that ILO work in this field will be effectively and continuously co-ordinated with the activities of the United Nations in regard to industrialization.

- 32. It is of interest to note that in addition to efforts to curtail the volume of documentation, the ILO has arranged for an expert review of the methods and procedures followed in the organization for the translation and reproduction of documents. These methods and procedures have an important bearing on costs, although the results of the survey should hold an interest both on that account and from the standpoint of the efficient and expeditious production of documents.
- 33. Another project with which the ILO will be associated is the proposed establishment of an international institute for labour studies. The preparatory work, including the drafting of a statute for the institute, is under way. The extent of the financial obligations of the ILO in this regard will be known only after final decisions concerning the provisions of the Statute are taken, possibly in the course of 1960.

 Including $1,278,400 representing the lump-sum allocation from the Special Account of the Expanded Programme towards administrative and operational services costs.

- 34. The Advisory Committee had an opportunity of discussing the budget proposals for 1960-1961, with particular reference to the 1960 part, with representatives of the Director-General of FAO.
- 35. It will be recalled that the FAO instituted, as from the financial period 1958-1959, a system of biennial budgeting under which a single set of appropriations would cover a two-year financial period, with appropriate provisions in the financial regulations to govern the Director-General's apportionment and management of appropriations as between the two years (A/4032, paras. 36 and 37). The budget estimates submitted by the Director-General in respect of 1960-1961 will be considered by the FAO General Conference which is to be held in October-November 1959. Meanwhile, the estimates have been reviewed by the Finance Committee, the Programme Committee and the Council of FAO, resulting in recommendations to reduce the estimates for the biennial period by $367,750.

36. The estimates for 1960-1961, which incorporate the administrative and operational services costs of technical assistance, represent an increase of some $2,123,000 over the corresponding approved budget for 1958-1959. This increase comprises the following main elements:

U	nited States dolla

(c) Increases resulting from recommendations regional conferences	161,000 the

- 37. Reference was made in the report on the 1959 budgets of the agencies (A/4032, paras. 39 and 40) to the proposed strengthening of the regional organization of FAO and a reorganization of the headquarters secretariat. The programme of strengthening the regional offices has been largely completed, although a number of additional posts of technicians allocated to those offices have yet to be filled. The Advisory Committee has taken special note of a request of the Programme Committee of the FAO Council to the Director-General for a report in 1960 on the revised responsibilities and functions of the regional offices. The FAO Council will doubtless find it of advantage to have information on the manner in which approved proposals for organizational changes and modifications are implemented in practical terms.
- 38. The reorganization of the headquarters secretariat is planned and executed in two stages. The first, or interim, plan provides in the main for the re-grouping of technical and economic activities into new divisional units under two major departments as well as for a strengthening of the Programme and Budgetary Service in the Office of the Director-General. In addition, various legal and public relations functions are drawn together in a third department. The ultimate plan includes raising the level of a number of organizational units within the new divisions and a consequential upgrading of several branch chiefs. The estimated extra cost in 1960-1961 of carrying forward the interim plan is about $208,000 while the ultimate plan will give rise to added costs of $75,500 in the same period.

39. In 1959 UNICEF made available to FAO a sum of $75,000 to cover the cost of certain headquarters technical personnel engaged in co-ordinating, advisory and supervisory functions in respect of joint FAO UNICEF projects. The FAO Council has now agreed, although with a slight reduction in the money provision, to recommend to the Conference in November 1959 that these costs be taken over in the organization's budget. However, the FAO Council has suggested that the UNICEF should provide, in addition to supplies, the costs of the field technical personnel furnished by FAO for such joint projects. Until recently FAO had found it possible to finance most of these field personnel from Expanded Programme funds, but the current pressures on that programme have, in the view of the FAO Council, rendered this procedure more difficult at the present time. The matter has now been considered by the FAO/ UNICEF Joint Policy Committee and the Executive Board of UNICEF, and the Executive Board in September 1959 allocated $238,000 to FAO for 1960 for international (field) project personnel and fellowships required to service projects jointly assisted by FAO and UNICEF in excess of the amounts that could be provided through Expanded Technical Assistance funds.

- 40. The Advisory Committee had an opportunity to discuss the 1959-1960 budget of UNESCO, with particular reference to 1960, with representatives of the Director-General of the organization.
- 41. The UNESCO General Conference, at its biennial session in November-December 1958, approved an appropriation of $27,185,124 for the two-year period 1959-1960, of which $25,970,463 represented the spending budget, and $1,214,661 the undistributed appropriation covering contributions that are unlikely to be received in respect of 1959-1960.
- 42. The spending budget of $25,970,463 for the biennial period 1959-1960 is some $3.3 million more than the corresponding budget for 1957-1958. While inclusion in the regular budget of the administrative and operational services costs of the technical assistance programme accounts for some $1 million of this increase, the major part of the increase, to the extent of about $2.3 million, is due to the extension of programme activities. Thus, a sum of $594,000 was added for the expansion of the three major projects,⁴⁷ while a new programme of vocational education in Tropical Africa has been instituted at an estimated cost of $150,000 in the two-year period. Further, a substantial increase has also been made for the projects on social implications of technological change and industrialization and the project on reading materials for new literates and the new reading public. Emphasis has also been placed on a closer co-ordination with other United Nations organizations in the fields of community development, human rights, the campaign against discrimination in education, peaceful utilization of atomic energy and new sources of energy, brain research and exploration of extra-terrestrial space.

- 43. The Advisory Committee notes with interest that, in accordance with the time-table established by the UNESCO General Conference, the first draft of the proposed programme and budget for 1961-1962, which brings together all UNESCO programmes, has already been prepared for preliminary consideration by the Executive Board and circulation to member States, the United Nations and specialized agencies, and international non-governmental organizations. UNESCO thus appears to have a large measure of advance planning of programmes.
- 44. Although at this stage of programme planning, no new major projects are proposed to be initiated in 1961-1962, some expansion of activities is foreseen, especially relating to educational projects in Africa, Asia and the Arab States. It is also expected that the efforts for increased use of non-governmental organizations, on which emphasis was placed during 1959-1960, will be further intensified in 1961-1962.
- 45. In order to meet the urgent and special needs of member States in the fields of education, science and culture, which cannot be fulfilled from other available United Nations sources, UNESCO has set up a Special Account to be financed by voluntary contributions from Governments and private donors. The utilization of the contributions to the Special Account would be determined from time to time by the Director-General in consultation with the Executive Board, on the basis of such decisions as might be taken by the General Conference. Contributions received so far total only a small amount, although a substantially more expensive programme of International Action to Safeguard Archaeological Monuments of Nubia in Egypt has been authorized from the Special Account. The Advisory Committee, in the section on WHO (see para. 67 below), comments on the problem of instituting, within the United Nations family, a multiplicity of appeals for voluntary contributions.
- 46. UNESCO was the only one among the organizations participating in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance formally to express willingness gradually to assume the administrative and operational services costs of technical assistance in its regular budget, as and when so requested by the Economic and Social Council. However, having regard to the views of all the organizations, the Council decided on certain other less far-reaching measures in regard to the allocation for such costs (see para. 12 above). Even the new target formula of 12 per cent of 1959 project allocations (including local costs apportionments) would result, in the case of UNESCO, in a figure in excess of the actual 1959 allocation to the organization for its administrative and operational services costs. It is understood that this resultant saving on the allocation for the costs mentioned would be made available to UNESCO projects, provided the requirements of the country programming procedures are met.

- 47. The General Conference and the Executive Board have decided to reduce the number and size of administrative documents related to their sessions. Illustrative examples of such reductions are:
- (a) The decision not to print the summary records of the subsidiary organs of the General Conference;
- (b) The discontinuation of the summary records of the subsidiary organs of the Executive Board;
- (c) The use of more condensed forms for certain specified documents; and
- (d) The issuance, in a single edition, of the final summary records of the Executive Board, each statement being summarized in the original language, but a statement in Russian or Spanish being followed by a translation into either English or French.
- 48. The Advisory Committee has also noted with interest that a number of internal management reviews have been undertaken in UNESCO. The areas reviewed so far include the Registry, the Department of Natural Sciences, the Department of Mass Communication and some aspects of the Department of Education.

- 49. The Advisory Committee had an opportunity to discuss the 1960 budget of ICAO with the Secretary-General of that organization.
- 50. The ICAO Assembly, at its twelfth session (San Diego, California, June-July 1959), approved budgets for the three years 1960, 1961 and 1962 in the following gross amounts in Canadian funds: $4,665,514 for 1960, $4,880,446 for 1961 and $4,924,813 for 1962. The Assembly also decided that the Council should convene a major session of the Assembly in 1962 and, if considered appropriate, another session either in 1960 or in 1961, the exact year to be determined by the Council. Should there be a session of the Assembly in 1960 or 1961, the budget for the years 1961 and 1962 in the first instance and 1962 only in the second instance would need to be reviewed.
- 51. In addition, the Assembly also authorized the Council to make, if required prior to the next session of the Assembly, supplementary appropriations to meet certain contingent expenditures, if and when necessary. Such contingent expenditures are estimated at the present time at $35,000 for 1960, $47,800 for 1961 and $60,900 for 1962.⁴⁸ If the next session of the ICAO Assembly - is held only in 1962, these and other possible supplementary appropriations would need to be accumulated for purposes of assessment in 1963.

- 52. The major part of the increase of $243,910 in the 1960 budget by comparison with 1959 arises in personnel costs, as follows:
 - (a) Nine additional posts: $65,000;
- (b) Normal salary increments and increases in common staff costs, including pension fund contributions: $123,000;
- (c) Revision of local salary scales for General Service staff: $17,000;
- (d) Employment of consultants to undertake certain special studies: $18,000.
- 53. In regard to Economic and Social Council resolution 702 (XXVI) relating to the administrative and operational services costs of technical assistance, the ICAO Council decided that it could not recommend either the progressive acceptance of full responsibility for those costs in the organization's regular budget, or the acceptance of a lump-sum payment with the understanding that any cost in excess would be borne on the regular budget. The ICAO Assembly noted the views of the ICAO Council without comment.
- 54. However, the budgets for 1959 and subsequent years reflect a partial consolidation of the costs in question in the regular budget. Thus, estimated expenditure ($153,700 for 1960) in respect of the technical assistance staff at headquarters is included in the regular budget, with offsetting income in an equal amount from the Expanded Programme Special Account being included in miscellaneous income. Other administrative and operational services costs, to an amount of $46,000 in 1960, covering such items as equipment, travel and other general services items, are to be directly financed from the allocation from Expanded Programme funds.
- 55. The ICAO Council may wish to consider the question of administrative and operational service costs, in the light of the implications to ICAO of the more recent decisions of the Economic and Social Council in resolution 737 (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959. Under this resolution, barring substantial changes in the size of the programme, the lump-sum allocations for 1962 towards administrative and operational services costs are to be in amounts equivalent to 12 per cent of 1959 project allocations including local costs apportionments, with certain transitional provisions for the years 1960 and 1961.

⁴⁸ The contingent expenditures in 1960, 1961 and 1962 relate to the possible need to place Montreal in class 6 for the purposes of post adjustment, and in 1961 and 1962 such expenditure will be necessary for the engagement of staff in the field of joint financing in regard to the development of air navigation facilities and services (ICAO Assembly resolution A12-5).

- 57. The XIVth Universal Postal Congress, which met at Ottawa in 1957, raised the ceiling for the Union's net ordinary expenditure from 1,300,000 to 1,750,000 gold francs, that is from 1,857,000 to 2,500,000 Swiss francs or, at the current rate of exchange, from $US 431,860 to $US 581,395.
- 58. The provisional budget estimates for 1960, which amount to 2,842,000 Swiss francs ($660,930), include a gross ordinary expenditure of 2,702,000 Swiss francs ($628,372) and a gross extraordinary expenditure of 140,000 Swiss francs ($32,558). After account is taken of normal revenue from the sale of publications, the proceeds of subscriptions to the periodical Union Postale, and other miscellaneous income, the net ordinary expenditure for 1960 is in the amount of the ceiling, namely, 2,500,000 Swiss francs.
- 59. No change is proposed for 1960 in regard to the number of staff (43) of the International Bureau of the Union. The increase of 165,000 Swiss francs ($38,372) for personal services is due mainly to normal salary increments. Minor increases also occur in respect of general expenses and special activities.
- 60. Although UPU does not participate in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, it has continued to contribute to the United Nations work in this direction by assisting in the recruitment and briefing of postal experts sent on missions to postal administrations requesting such technical assistance. The Union has also been co-operating with the United Nations in the programme for the provision of operational, executive and administrative staff (OPEX) whenever fields of interest to UPU are involved. In addition, there is a growing volume of direct technical assistance, in one form or another, being provided mutually by postal administrations. Thus, some 350 officials and agents from twentyfour countries went on training, information or study missions to twenty-five different countries; further three administrations employed the services of fifty-nine officials from three countries to carry out assistance missions in their countries outside the framework of United Nations technical assistance.

61. The Advisory Committee had an opportunity to discuss the 1960 budget of WHO and related matters with representatives of the Director-General.

62. The gross total in the above table for each year represents the "effective working budget", or the amount approved for actual expenditure; it is exclusive of an undistributed reserve ($1,078,060 for 1959, $1,195,060

- for 1960) equalling the assessments against "inactive" members⁴⁹ and China.
- 63. In accordance with the request of the Economic and Social Council in resolution 702 (XXVI), the 1960 budget of WHO incorporates the administrative and operational services costs of the Expanded Programme, with an income credit of $724,000 from the Special Account of that Programme.
- 64. The effective working budget for 1960 represents an increase, by comparison with 1959, of about $1,250,000 or 7.94 per cent. This is the net result of the following increases and decreases:
- (a) An increase of some $1,690,000 in respect of programme activities, comprising:
- (i) $500,000 for the newly established medical research programme; (ii) $480,000 for field and regional activities; (iii) $300,000 for an enlargement of programme activities at headquarters; and (iv) the balance relating to statutory costs in respect of programme staff and to increased expenditure for expert committees;
- (b) Increases totalling some $160,000 in respect of administrative services and organizational meetings;
- (c) A decrease of $100,000 in the provision for reimbursement of the Working Capital Fund; and
- (d) The absence of any provision in respect of the Headquarters Building Fund for which $500,000 was appropriated in the 1959 budget. This amount was however financed from casual income in 1959.
- 65. Apart from the regular budget, the participation of WHO in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance in 1960 is estimated at between $5 million and $6 million (including local costs apportionments and other income). Other international sources, primarily UNICEF but including the Pan American Health Organization, will provide in 1960 some $22 million for international health activities.
- 66. In addition, WHO maintains the following special programme accounts to finance various supplementary activities:
- (a) Malaria eradication special account. Total contributions made or pledged to this account, as at 31 July 1959, amounted to some $8.5 million. Expenditures to 31 December 1958 totaled about $3 million; 1959 expenditures are estimated at some $6 million; and the estimated cost of the proposed 1960 programme is over $7 million. The Twelfth Health Assembly (1959) expressed its concern at the inadequacy of the resources in the account and appealed for contributions.
- (b) Special account for research planning. A special contribution of $300,000, which was received in this account in 1958, will have been fully utilized by the end of 1959 on planning and preparatory work related to an intensification of the organization's programme to stimulate medical research.
- (c) Special account for medical research. For the purpose of intensifying the organization's activities in medical research, the Twelfth World Health Assembly approved an increase of $500,000 in the effective working budget for 1960. Simultaneously, a special account for medical research was established for the purpose of receiving voluntary contributions to be used to supplement the provision under the regular budget for the extension of the organization's assistance to medical research programmes. At the present time, it is expected that, for 1960, a contribution of $500,000 will be made to this special account.

- (d) Special account for eradication of smallpox. This account has so far been credited with two contributions in kind, one consisting of 25 million doses of smallpox vaccine, valued by the donor Government at $285,000, and the second consisting of 2 million doses (not yet valued by the donor Government). The World Health Assembly has also authorized the Director-General to include in his regular budget estimates for future years provision for a basic programme in this field.
- (e) Special account for community water supply programme. This account was established following decisions in this regard by the Twelfth World Health Assembly. At the present time, it is expected that a contribution of $300,000 will be made to this Special Account. Here again, the Health Assembly has requested the Director-General to make adequate provision in future programmes and budgets for certain basic activities in this field.
- 67. In each of the fields of work covered by the four special accounts mentioned above, there is in any case a basic programme financed from the regular budget of WHO; the special accounts are intended to enable the organization to supplement its basic programmes. It is naturally difficult to have a clear demarcation between the basic programmes, on the one hand, and the supplementary activities, on the other, although some valid criteria for such a distinction might emerge with the development of the programmes. It is a matter for consideration, moreover, whether there is advantage in maintaining a multiplicity of special accounts to which voluntary contributions are invited from Governments and other sources. Numerous appeals for such voluntary contributions, emanating from one or another of the international organizations, might well result in a dissipation, and even a decline, of the total voluntary effort. The Advisory Committee is informed, in this connexion, that recourse to fund-raising campaigns in WHO would be limited to the malaria account and that the other three special accounts would be treated as "convenience" accounts to facilitate acceptance of contributions.
- 68. While the major problem in regard to these accounts arises on the fund-raising side, minor administrative difficulties might also arise in connexion with the maintenance of a number of special accounts. This latter aspect is, however, under study in WHO with a view to a simplification of the related administrative procedures.
- 69. The Advisory Committee has inquired into the possibility of consolidating in one total programme and budget the several elements to be financed from separate sources, with appropriate income credits from voluntary funds in aid of the budget. While the organization is presenting in a single programme and budget document details of all proposed activities and related cost estimates, it has not yet been considered practicable to consolidate under the regular budget all such activities with appropriate income credits from voluntary funds.
- 70. In its consideration of General Assembly resolution 1283 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 on the International Health and Medical Research Year, the Twelfth World Health Assembly expressed its deep appreciation and satisfaction at learning of the interest displayed by the General Assembly in international health matters including medical research. The Health Assembly decided, however, that in view of the extensive programmes on which WHO had recently embarked, the holding of an International Health and Medical Research Year should be postponed for the present. The matter will be reconsidered in 1960 in the light of full reports to be submitted by the Executive Board of WHO and the Director-General.

- 71. After two years' study of the internal problem in WHO, and after consultation at all levels within and outside the organization, the WHO Executive Board decided to suspend, as from 1 February 1959, all minus post adjustments. The Executive Board, in taking this decision, requested "the Director-General to continue to consult together with his colleagues of ACC with a view to arriving at a definitive elimination of such minus adjustments". The action nevertheless constitutes a departure from the provisions of the common salary system, as endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 1095 (XI) of 27 February 1957, regardless of the considerations which prompted the WHO action.
- 72. The Twelfth World Health Assembly approved a proposal for the construction of a separate headquarters building for WHO in Geneva, and accepted the generous offers of assistance of the Governments of the Swiss Confederation and of the Republic and Canton of Geneva. These offers cover, in addition to a site for the building, an interest-free loan totalling 20 million Swiss francs from the Government of the Swiss Confederation, as well as a loan of 10 million Swiss francs from the Republic and Canton of Geneva, the interest on which would be borne in equal shares by the Canton and the organization. The Twelfth World Health Assembly, in approving the proposal, decided that plans and specifications, together with more precise cost estimates, within a maximum limit of 40 million Swiss francs ($9,302,326) should be placed before the Thirteenth World Health Assembly.
- 73. The Health Assembly has also raised the question of a suitable reimbursement to WHO by the United Nations for WHO's "investment in the Palais des Nations which includes a grant by the Swiss authorities intended to facilitate WHO's accommodation in Geneva" (resolution WHA 12.12). The Advisory Committee has given preliminary consideration to this question; however, consultations are under way between the Secretary-General and the Director-General of WHO. It is expected that the Secretary-General will submit to the General Assembly in due course a detailed report on this subject. Accordingly, the Advisory Committee would defer its comments and recommendations on this point.

over-all review of the administrative and budgetary aspects of the activities of that organization. The resultant report of the Committee (A/4148 and Corr.1) accordingly touches upon a variety of matters relating to programming procedures, secretariat structure, administration and finance.

- 75. The amounts shown above cover the "ordinary" expenses of ITU and the "extraordinary" expenditures which relate to meetings of various bodies of the organization. In addition to these appropriations, ITU has a supplementary publications budget, which for 1960 has been approved at $461,114.
- 76. The reduction of $724,290 in the 1960 appropriations, by comparison with the 1959 (revised) budget, is the net effect of: (a) an increase of $185,001 in the ordinary budget due mainly to normal increases in staff expenditure resulting from the application of administrative regulations, and (b) a decrease of $909,291 in extraordinary expenditure due principally to the much heavier schedule of conferences in 1959.⁵¹
- 77. The Plenipotentiary Conference, which is currently in session, is due to consider a number of administrative and financial matters including the budgets of ITU for the next few years, the question of a consolidated budget to cover all expenses of the organization, the assimiliation of ITU salary scales to the common United Nations System, and the status of ITU participation in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance. In fact, the 1960 budget estimates may need to be revised in the light of the decisions of the Conference.

- 78. The following observations are based on a study of official documentation supporting the 1960 budget of WMO.
- 79. The Third World Meteorological Congress, held at Geneva in April 1959, approved a maximum expenditure of $2,694,484 for the third financial period of the organization, 1 January 1960 to 31 December 1963, and authorized the Executive Committee to incur additional expenditure to meet increases in staff salaries and allowances subsequent to comparable changes in United Nations salaries and allowances, and also to incur further additional expenditure up to $100,000 on agreement by members of the organization.
- 80. The budget for 1960, the first year of the third financial period, was adopted by the Executive Committee in a total amount of $655,105, including some $60,000 in respect of removal to, installation in, and rental and maintenance of the new WMO headquarters building in Geneva. Other budgetary increases, by comparison with 1959, reflect:
- ⁵¹ The 1959 conference programme included in particular the ITU Plenipotentiary Conference ($245,174), the Administrative Radio Conference ($539,698) and the IXth Plenary Assembly (and Study Groups) of the International Radio Consultative Committee ($231,860).

- (a) The increase in established posts from sixty-eight to seventy-eight, the additional ten posts to be filled gradually during 1960;
- (b) An expansion of the operational activities of WMO, including the setting up of a Meteorological Film Loan Service; and
- (c) Provision for building up a Staff Compensation Reserve Fund and for certain related insurance costs. As to the last point, the small size of the WMO secretariat would seem to lend justification for establishing a reserve fund, even though in the United Nations compensation payments are met out of current budgets.
- 81. The budget for the four-year period 1960-1963 includes $180,000 for publications. However, the Congress has authorized the additional utilization of sale proceeds, assessed at some $100,000 for the total period, in order to finance a larger publications programe. The amount appropriated, together with sale proceeds and income from advertisements in the WMO Bulletin, will be credited to a separate publications fund to which related expenditure will be charged.

- 82. IMCO, the newest of the specialized agencies, operates on the basis of financial periods, each of two calendar years. However, the first financial period begins in 1959 and will end on 31 December 1961.
- 83. The IMCO Assembly, at its first session (London, January 1959) authorized a maximum expenditure of $726,000 for the first financial period (1959-1961). The budgets for 1959 and 1960 total $494,000, leaving a balance of $232,000 for appropriation in respect of 1961. In addition, however, the Secretary-General of IMCO is authorized for the first financial period, and with the prior concurrence of the IMCO Council, to carry forward un-committed balances of appropriations from one year to the next.

^{*} Income from sale of publications and from sale or rental of visual media will be credited to a Publications Revolving Fund until such income exceeds $50,000. The relatively small amounts of miscellaneous income in 1958 and 1959 were not used as an offsetting reduction in assessed contributions but retained in the operating funds of the Agency.

- 84. During its visit to the headquarters of IAEA in March 1959, the Advisory Committee undertook a broad over-all review of the administrative and budgetary aspects of the activities of the Agency. The resultant report of the Committee (A/4135) accordingly covers a variety of matters relating to the structure of the Agency and of its secretariat, its programming procedures, administration and finance.
- 85. The Committee has since had an opportunity of discussing with representatives of the Director-General the details of the 1960 budget of the Agency.
- 86. In addition to the regular budget⁵² of $5,843,000, the Agency has an "operational budget" which is estimated at some $2,390,000 in 1960. This programme will be financed from:
- (a) Voluntary contributions in a target amount of $1.5 million;
- (b) The Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance in an estimated amount of $600,000;
- (c) The balance of a special contribution of $600,000 which was made in 1959 for the construction and equipment of the Agency's functional laboratory in an amount of $200,000; and
- (d) $90,000 of the reserve being carried from 1959 to 1960. The operational programme covers fellowships and training ($1.1 million), technical and research assistance ($900,000), mobile radioisotope laboratories ($57,000) and functional laboratories ($333,000).
- 87. The major part of the increase of $618,000 in the 1960 regular budget, by comparison with 1959, results first, from need for full-year provision in respect of staff newly authorized in 1959; and, secondly from the proposed establishment of 47 additional posts, comprising
- 52 In accordance with a suggestion of the Advisory Committee (A/4016, para. 8), the term "regular budget" has been adopted by the Agency in the place of "administrative" budget, to indicate the budget (which is to be financed by assessment to Member States) reflecting "estimates of administrative expenses under article XIV.B.1 of the statute". The term "operational budget" is similarly used for the "estimates of expenses and costs under article XIV.B.2 of the statute". The term "consolidated budget" is used for the budget as a whole.

18 in the Professional category, 27 in the General Service category and 2 maintenance and operative posts. Of the 18 additional posts in the Professional category, 12 are proposed in the technical areas of the Secretariat, and 5 others have a bearing on the technical work of the Agency. The Advisory Committee understands in this connexion that the recruitment of qualified scientific and technical staff continues to be difficult and slow, even with the provision for payment of special allowance in exceptional cases.53 Illustrative of the difficulty is the fact that of the 115 scientific and technical posts authorized for 1959, only 88 are filled at the present time, although a further partial explanation of this situation lies in the policy of the Director-General to fill authorized posts only when the need has become clearly apparent. In these circumstances, it is difficult to assess the practical impact on actual expenditure of the proposed addition of further posts in 1960, even though this addition is considered necessary, by the Director-General and the Board of Governors, on the basis of the projected work programme for 1960. The General Conference of the Agency has, however, suggested that the budget should be considered as imposing a maximum limit to expenditure and that every effort should be made to accomplish the proposed work programme with available staff resources, through appropriate internal reassignment of staff. The Advisory Committee believes that, given the several practical factors affecting the staffing of the Agency including difficulties of recruitment, this approach has considerable merit.

- 88. Pledges made to date towards the target amount of $1.5 million of voluntary contributions total the equivalent of $927,000.
- 89. The 1960 regular budget includes the administrative and operational services costs of the Agency's activities under the Expanded Programme. These costs, towards which a lump-sum allocation will be available from the special account of the Expanded Programme, are estimated, on a rough basis, at some $84,000.
- ⁵³ The Director-General has authority to pay, in exceptional cases, a special annual allowance not exceeding $1,800. Recourse has been made to this provision only in seven cases so far, and even in these cases not up to the full amount of the allowance.

DOCUMENT A/C.5/795 Joint Panel of Auditors Report of the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [26 October 1959]

1. By resolution 347 (IV), of 24 November 1949, the General Assembly approved the principles, set out in annex B to that resolution, regarding a joint panel of auditors for the United Nations and the specialized agencies. Those principles provided, inter alia, that the panel should not exceed six in number, and that the members of the panel performing audits should meet together annually.

2. In the report on its fifth session, the panel observed (a) that, while fully convinced of the usefulness of having joint sessions of the several external auditors, it had not in the past considered that annual meetings were warranted, and (b) that, especially in view of the current establishment of new agencies, it was considered that the number of the members of the panel was unduly restricted. The panel felt that the terms of its establishment might usefully be amended on these lines.

- 3. This matter was brought to the attention of the Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination) at its session held in April 1959. In addition to the points raised by the panel, it was noted by the CCAQ that while the concept of having a Panel of External Auditors from which the auditors of the participating organizations would be chosen served a useful purpose in the years immediately following its creation, this particular concept had given way to the practice of the external auditors meeting together as a committee more in a consultative capacity, to exchange experience and information regarding the external audits of the several organizations.
- 4. The CCAQ noted that the Secretary-General intended to propose to the General Assembly, at its fourteenth session, amendments to resolution 347 (IV) which would bring it into line with the existing situation.

5. Thus, the Secretary-General submits the following draft resolution, revising annex B⁵⁵ of General Assembly resolution 347 (IV), for consideration by the General Assembly. The text of this draft resolution has been notified to the agencies involved (ILO, FAO, UNESCO ICAO, WHO and IAEA) and to the members of the Joint Panel of Auditors, and their observations have been incorporated in the text now presented. Similarly the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budge tary Questions has been consulted, and that Committee concurs in the text of the draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the Fifth Committee without change See A/4276, para. 37]

The principles to govern the audit procedures of the United Nations contained in annex A of resolution 347 (IV) were incorporated in the Financial Regulations of the United Nations approved by the General Assembly at its fifth session (resolution 456 (V)).

DOCUMENT A/4276 Joint Panel of Auditors Report of the Fifth Committee

- 1. At its 741st meeting, held on 10 November 1959, the Fifth Committee considered a report by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/795) relating to changes in the terms of reference of the Joint Panel of Auditors which had been set out in annex B of General Assembly resolution 347 (IV) of 24 November 1949.
- 2. In his report, the Secretary-General set out the reasons for a change in the terms of reference of the Panel. He submitted the text of a draft resolution revising the provisions of annex B of resolution 347 (IV), which had been notified to the specialized agencies and to the members of the Joint Panel of Auditors and which incorporated the observations they had made. Further, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions had been consulted and that Committee had concurred in the text of the draft resolution,

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

Administrative and budgetary co-ordination between the United Nations and the specialized agencies

Report of the Fifth Committee

[Original text: English]
[3 December 1959]

- 1. The fifth Committee considered, at its 744th to 746th meetings held from 16 to 18 November 1959, the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions concerning administrative and budgetary co-ordination between the United Nations and the International Atomic Energy Agency (A/4135), the United Nations and the International Telecommunication Union (A/4148); the United Nations and the specialized agencies, with particular reference to the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance (A/4172), and also the report on the administrative budgets of the specialized agencies for 1960 (A/4257). The Committee also had before it, in document A/C.5/786, a note by the Secretary-General submitting Information Annex III to the 1960 budget estimates.
- 2. Many delegations joined in praising the work of the Advisory Committee, and, in particular, the research which the Committee had done since 1954 in the matter of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance. The series of reports which the Advisory Committee had written on the subject constituted an invaluable body of opinion, and bore witness to a sustained and admirable effort for which the Committee deserved well of the United Nations. Its work would undoubtedly prove to be the cornerstone, in years to come, of an improved system of co-ordination in the spheres with which the reports dealt.
- 3. The Committee addressed itself principally to the question of determining what should be the focal point of authority in the appraisal of administrative and budgetary co-ordination (a) within the United Nations (with particular reference to the differing procedures applying respectively to the regular and to the special programmes) and (b) among the various organizations comprising the United Nations family. The Committee accordingly considered whether changes were called for in the existing arrangements for review on the part of Main Committees of the General Assembly, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the Technical Assistance Committee, and other organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

- 4. As regards the activities of the United Nations, it was generally recognized that the issue had been clearly defined by the Advisory Committee in its observations on the legislative direction of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and other special programmes (A/4172, paras. 14, 50-52). Acting on recommendations of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly exercised exclusive budgetary responsibility for all activities financed from the regular budget. Conversely, however, where the special programmes were concerned, responsibility was diluted among a number of organs or subsidiary organs. A dichotomy of that kind served to emphasize the need for administrative and budgetary co-ordination to embrace both regular activities and special programmes: that need could be met only by a single legislative body, representative of the entire membership of the United Nations, which would have final responsibility for stating policy in respect of the many interrelated problems that arose in connexion with the two categories of programmes. With that object in view, the Advisory Committee had suggested that the Fifth Committee should perhaps be associated more closely with the administrative and financial aspects of the special programmes. Such a development would be in harmony with the Charter, which gave to the General Assembly exclusive responsibility in matters of administration and budget, and would help to delineate responsibilities which over the years had become blurred.
- 5. Some representatives, though supporting the general proposition of the Advisory Committee, were dubious regarding certain possible consequences. There would, for example, be no advantage in transferring from the Technical Assistance Committee (a body of twenty-four members) to the Fifth Committee the responsibility for reviewing the detailed administrative and financial implications of the Expanded Programme. That was a function which the TAC had been performing with success for some ten years and which called for a detailed examination of closely interwoven aspectssubstantive as well as administrative—of an intricate programme. In general, it seemed advisable, in the matter of inter-agency programmes, to leave the task of coordination to the Economic and Social Council, assisted, where appropriate, by the Advisory Committee. The fact that those programmes depended in large measure on voluntary contributions was an element for considera-
- 6. On the wider issue of co-ordination among the United Nations and the specialized agencies, reference was made to the programme appraisals for the period from 1959 to 1964 which were being prepared for the Economic and Social Council. In the consolidated report of its Committee on Programme Appraisals, the Council at its thirtieth session would have before it a single document correlating the major activities of all the organizations. The Council's study of the Committee's findings would be of the highest importance for the planning of programmes, for the concentration of resources and for the assignment of priorities, and it was therefore to be hoped that the relevant chapter of the Council's 1960 report to the General Assembly would be remitted to the Fifth Committee or, alternatively, to a joint session of the three Main Committees primarily concerned.

- 7. The suggestion was made that, while it might be premature to place before the General Assembly the question of a consolidated general budget of the United Nations and the specialized agencies, there would be an advantage in requesting the ACC and the Advisory Committee to resume before long their consideration of the problem. Thought might likewise be given to a possible review of the agreements between the United Nations and the specialized agencies or of the method of their application. It was also pointed out in that connexion that the Advisory Committee itself had stated in 195556 that its annual review of the agency budgets hardly constituted an adequate implementation of Article 17, paragraph 3, of the Charter; the Committee had at that time suggested the possible substitution of a more thorough review to be made at regular but longer intervals. That was an issue of direct concern to the Fifth Committee, for while it was neither possible nor desirable for the latter Committee to attempt a detailed examination of the agency budgets, there was need-if sound conclusions were to be reached-for fuller information on the substantive background of the work programmes of the agencies.
- 8. Furthermore—in a wider context—it might be found necessary in the future to arrange for a comprehensive discussion in the General Assembly of all the programmes and other activities of the United Nations family as a whole. The structural alterations to which such a development would give rise might be of various forms: a change in the terms of reference of the Main Committees, a broadening of the powers of the Advisory Committee or the establishment of an advisory programming committee working closely with the present Advisory Committee. For the present, however, better cooperation between programming bodies on the one hand and administrative bodies on the other could be achieved by enlarging the terms of reference of the Advisory Committee so as to enable it to respond to direct requests for advice in the fields of its competence from organs and committees of the United Nations concerned with special programmes.
- 9. Strong support was given to the views and recommendations of the Advisory Committee regarding a closer integration of services extant in the field (A/4172, section VII). The whole network of services should be reviewed in order to determine whether existing staff and facilities were being used effectively and, in particular, to obviate the presence of two parallel organizational structures in the field. It was to be hoped that the Secretary-General would resubmit to the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination the broader issues of co-ordination in the field offices, since much remained to be done not only in the matter of common premises and common services, but also as regards common representation and a wider use of the services of the Resident Representatives.
- 10. At the 745th meeting the following draft resolution (A/C.5/L.585/Rev.1) was submitted jointly by Argentina, Japan, Netherlands, New Zealand, Pakistan and the United States of America:

⁵⁶ See Official Records of the General Assembly, Tenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 45, document A/3023, para. 25.

"The General Assembly,

"Having regard to reports presented in recent years by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the subject of administrative and budgetary co-ordination within the United Nations family of organizations and programmes, and to the desirability of having further attention given by the Advisory Committee to such matters,

Ι

- "1. Expresses its appreciation to the Advisory Committee for its reports, in particular the report on the administrative budgets of the specialized agencies for 1960 (A/4257) and the over-all report on the special studies made by the Committee at the headquarters of the agencies (A/4172);
- "2. Extends its appreciation to the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency for the co-operation and courtesies offered to the studies and visits of the Advisory Committee;
- "3. Invites the attention of the International Atomic Energy Agency and the International Telecommunication Union to the reports of the Advisory Committee on its special studies at those agencies (A/4135 and A/4148 and Corr.1);
- "4. Invites also the attention of all specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency to the over-all report of the Advisory Committee (A/4172) and the report on the 1960 budgets of the agencies (A/4257);
- "5. Requests the Advisory Committee to keep under review the growth and developments in respect of offices, operations, and conferences of the United Nations and the agencies at locations away from their headquarters, and to report on possibilities of further administrative and budgetary co-ordination.

Π

- "1. Authorizes the Advisory Committee to examine and report on co-ordination and on administrative and budgetary aspects of special programmes of the United Nations at the request of the various organs, committees, or commissions concerned;
- "2. Authorizes the Advisory Committee also, in fulfilment of its functions under rule 158 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, to meet as it deems necessary and appropriate, at the various offices of the United Nations and at the headquarters of the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency and, at the request of those agencies, to advise them on administrative and financial matters."
- 11. It was explained, on behalf of the sponsors, that the draft resolution was designed to transform into a continuing function of the Advisory Committee a duty assigned to it experimentally at the ninth session. Paragraph 5 of section I stressed the need, to which the Advisory Committee itself had drawn attention, for co-ordination in the field. Under paragraph 1 of section II, the Advisory Committee would have general authority to undertake activities of the type it had already performed in two cases (General Assembly resolution 1240 (XIII) part B, paragraph 54; Economic and Social Council resolution 702 (XXVI) section II, paragraph 1). Paragraph 2 of section II was intended to give the Advisory Committee greater scope in the performance of its ordinary functions and to dispel any possible doubt of its competence to advise organizations, at their request,

- on administrative and budgetary matters. In accordance with past practice, the Advisory Committee would, of course, inform the Fifth Committee of its work programme and make the necessary arrangements in consultation with the Secretary-General and the interested specialized agencies.
- 12. Some representatives felt that paragraph 1 of section II was unduly cautious. It should expressly state that the General Assembly would exercise administrative and budgetary supervision over the special programmes and at least implicitly indicate that both the Fifth Committee and the Advisory Committee would play a more active part in relation to those programmes. The Chairman of the Advisory Committee suggested that, in order to obviate a spate of requests from subordinate bodies, the words "as appropriate" might be inserted after the words "United Nations", the remainder of the paragraph being deleted.
- 13. At the 746th meeting, the sponsors proposed the following amendments to their draft resolution (A/C.5/L.585/Rev.1):
- (a) In paragraph 5 of section I: to insert the words "to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session" after the words "to report"; and
- (b) In paragraph 1 of section II: to replace the words "the various organs, committees or commissions concerned;" by the words "a principal organ or the body responsible for the special programme;"
- 14. The representative of the USSR proposed the following amendments to section II:
- (a) In paragraph 1: to replace the words "at the request . . . concerned;" by the words "if this should become necessary;" and
- (b) In paragraph 2: to delete the words "to meet as . . ." to the end of the paragraph and to substitute the following text:

"without detriment to its basic obligations in relation to the United Nations budget, to visit, at their request, the headquarters of the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency for consultations with them on administrative and budgetary questions with a view to reducing administrative expenditures through co-ordination of their activities."

DECISIONS OF THE COMMITTEE

15. The Committee voted, at its 746th meeting, on the joint draft resolution (A/C.5/L.585/Rev.1) and on the amendments proposed thereto. The result of the voting was as follows:

The USSR amendment to section II, paragraph 1 was rejected by 31 votes to 10 with 19 abstentions. The USSR amendment to section II, paragraph 2 was rejected by 23 votes to 12 with 28 abstentions. Section II, paragraph 1 was adopted by 53 votes to 10 with 1 abstention. The revised draft resolution as a whole was adopted by 55 votes to none with 9 abstentions.

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

16. The Fifth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

At the same meeting, the General Assembly also adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Fifth Committee in document A/4276, para. 3. For the final text, see resolution 1438 (XIV) below.

Report of the Secretary-General

[5 November 1959]

- 1. At its twelfth session the General Assembly, by resolution 1224 (XII) of 14 December 1957, requested the Secretary-General to accept with thanks a generous offer by the Government of Chile to transfer to the United Nations a plot of land in Santiago for the construction of a building to house United Nations and specialized agency offices located in Chile. In resolution 1273 (XIII) adopted on 14 November 1958 at its thirteenth session, the Assembly set forth arrangements for the financing of the project and authorized the Secretary-General to proceed with the planning and construction of the building.
- 2. To the extent possible, all preliminary steps have been taken and much interest has been shown by the organizations concerned in the endeavour to consolidate premises pursuant to the recommendations of the General Assembly, but it is now certain that the project cannot go forward within the financial limit authorized by the Assembly. Because of this, the Secretary-General believes that he should advise the General Assembly of the position as it now stands prior to actual construction, and report the developments which have occurred during 1959.
- 3. The Secretary-General has undertaken negotiations with the Government of Chile to effect the transfer of a parcel of land of approximately 4.5 hectares located in an area known as Vitacura Park. The title has been transferred from the municipality of Las Condes to the Government of Chile; the boundaries of the plot have been defined; action is being taken to define certain basic responsibilities of the Government of Chile

- for the preparation of the site, including the provision of access roads and the availability of utilities. Negotiations are also under way for the preparation of the formal instrument of transfer to the United Nations and to revise appropriately the Economic Commission for Latin America (ECLA) Headquarters Agreement with the Chilean Government.
- 4. The Government of Chile established in January 1959, under the chairmanship of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, a special national committee to co-ordinate the activities of various government agencies interested in this project. Consequently, in the course of 1959, engineering plans for the principal approach and connecting thoroughfares have been prepared; some necessary demolitions and the preliminary grading of the principal access road have been made and a temporary fence around the area to be transferred to the United Nations has been erected.
- 5. As regards plans for the construction of the building, an engineering survey of the site and a detailed appraisal of space requirements have been completed with the assistance of local consultants. An engineering report on the lands to be transferred to the United Nations and on the cost of local construction has also been obtained. These further surveys indicate that the financial arrangements contemplated for the project are not sufficient to permit the construction of a building of the size or character necessary for the needs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies.
- 6. When the project was first visualized in 1957, the Secretary-General reported to the Fifth Committee½ that, in the absence of architectural studies and detailed cost estimates, he was not in a position to determine with reasonable precision the cost of construction of an appropriate building. He indicated, however, that on the basis of very preliminary studies, at construction prices then current, it was reasonable to believe that the total construction costs might be of the order of $800,000 to $1 million. In 1958, in reporting to the General Assembly 2/after consultation with the Governments members of ECLA, the Secretary-General indicated that it would be possible to establish a figure of $850,000 as an estimate for the total cost involved and General Assembly resolution 1273 (XIII) incorporated this figure as the basis for financing the construction. However, during the period that this matter has been under consideration and particularly during the past few months, construction costs in Santiago have increased substantially. The possibility of some continuing increase in construction costs must also be borne in mind. On the basis of estimates received from an independent local expert as well as from the Chilean College of Architects, it now appears that the cost of constructing an appropriate building is likely to be of the order of $1,550,000. Although the increase in construction costs constitutes the major cause of the revised construction estimate, it has also been ascertained, after negotiations with the appropriate local authorities, that certain items, including landscaping, fencing, architectural competition and architectural fees, will be more costly than anticipated in 1957 and 1958.

- 7. The Secretary-General, with the assistance of engineering and architectural consultants, has conducted a complete re-appraisal of the space requirements and this study has confirmed that the original proposals for office and related space are still essentially valid. Certain adjustments have been made in the estimate for space required for general and common services, including corridors, machine rooms, conference areas and archives. Space estimated for dining, lounge and communications facilities, on the other hand, have been reduced. Particular attention has been given to the provision for facilities, which will be used to implement the policy of the General Assembly to establish common services in places where United Nations and specialized agency offices are jointly located in the same premises.
- 8. The current cost estimates make provision for office and other accommodations of the United Nations and other agencies in Santiago as follows:

Office space by agency (including proportionate share of corridors, stairways, washrooms, etc.)

	Square metres
Economic Commission for Latin America Food and Agriculture Organization of the United	3,201
Nations	697
Technical Assistance Board	505

mon service requirements	2,689
Sub-total	7,337
Provision for expansion	1,383
TOTAL space	8,620

9. A break-down of the cost of construction is estimated in dollars at the current rate of exchange, as follows:

lonows.	United States dollars
Basic construction	1,083,000
Extension of utilities from boundary of site	11,500
Landscaping
Access and service roads, parking and mainte-

gineering fees and related costs	125,000
Sub-total	1,350,000
Contingency	200,000
TOTAL	1,550,000

- 10. The present arrangements for the financing of the building at an estimated total cost of $850,000 provide—in accordance with resolution 1273 (XIII)—for an initial appropriation of $50,000 in 1959 and annual instalments of $200,000 for each of the ensuing four years. In the event that the General Assembly should concur with the increased construction costs amounting to $1,550,000 it may wish to consider adopting a revised schedule of payments providing for $20,000 in 1959, and annual instalments of $382,500 for each of the ensuing four years. The remaining provisions of resolution 1273 (XIII) could stay unchanged.
- 11. While plans for the selection of an architect are under active consideration with the help of the Chilean College of Architects, the Secretary-General has not proceeded further either with the organization of a competition for the selection of an architector for the preparation of building designs and plans, since he believes that the General Assembly would wish to be informed in the first instance of the developments noted above.

Report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text: English] [13 November 1959]

1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered a report of the Secretary-General (A/4239) in which he submitted revised cost estimates for the construction of the United Nations building in Santiago, Chile.

2. By resolution 1273 (XIII) of 14 November 1958, the General Assembly authorized the Secretary-General to proceed with the preparation of plans and with the construction of the United Nations building in Santiago, Chile, at a cost not to exceed $850,000. The

^{2/}Ibid., Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 52, document A/3952.

Secretary-General now reports that, owing to an increase in construction costs and taking account of certain requirements not provided for in the earlier estimate, the construction of the building cannot be planned within the authorized limit of $850,000. He has accordingly submitted revised cost estimates in a total amount of $1,550,000, including $200,000 for contingencies.

- 3. The Advisory Committee recognizes the difficulty of calculating with precision the costs of erecting a structure not yet designed on a site still to be surveyed. Nevertheless, the Committee has been struck by the fact that the revised estimate is almost twice as much as the initial figure which was discussed and approved as a maximum limit. The Committee has accordingly paid special attention to the factors and assumptions which have formed the basis of each of the two estimates. The Committee is informed, in this connexion, that the earlier estimate was not based on an adequate and detailed study of the various factors involved, but had, rather, the character of a rough and ready approximation. It appears to the Committee that this point was not brought out clearly in the submission of the original estimate or in the discussions at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly. Indeed, it was stated in the report of the Secretary-General at that time "that, bearing in mind the space required and structural standards in the locality, it would be possible to establish a maximum figure of $850,000 as an estimate for the total cost involved".3/
- 4. Representatives of the Secretary-General have now informed the Advisory Committee that the revised estimate is based on a complete reappraisal of space requirements, a better survey of building needs and costs and the best engineering and architectural advice that is possible and available at the present time. The major factors which contribute to the increase in the estimate are understood to be the following:
- (a) Following a relaxation of building restrictions in Santiago and a consequent boom in construction activity, prices of materials and building costs have increased substantially. This factor, together with a better estimate of construction cost per unit of space in the light of a more detailed technical study of the nature of the site, apparently accounts for an increase of some 30 per cent in the original estimate.
- (b) It had been United Nations practice, in respect of expenditures in Santiago, to assume that, in large measure, price changes and the accompanying fluctuations in the exchange rate of the Chilean peso would tend to balance each other out, when dollar funds are used to finance expenditure. However, with a fair degree of stability in the exchange rate over the past several months, the impact of the price increases has been real.
- (c) Space requirements, originally estimated at 6,800 square metres, have now been revised to 8,620 square metres, an increase of more than 25 per cent. The additional cost involved will also have to be calculated on the basis of the increased construction costs.
- (d) A more accurate estimate has been made of costs in respect of ancillary requirements, including land-scaping, fencing, architectural competition and architectural fees.

- (e) A specific provision, in the amount of $200,000 (approximately 14 per cent of estimated costs) has been included for contingencies.
- 5. The Advisory Committee is informed that if expenditure was to be limited to a maximum amount of $850,000, as already authorized, it would not, in the view of the Secretary-General, be practicable to erect a suitable building. Accordingly, the Committee has inquired into the possibility of a modest restriction in the scope and size of the building as now envisaged. It believes, however, that it might be more advisable and economical in the long run to construct an adequate, initial structure which would include some reasonable provision for future needs, since later extensions and modifications might prove costlier. At the same time, the Committee trusts that the size of individual office rooms and the amount of accommodation assigned per official will be governed by reasonable needs which will promote good working conditions, rather than by the initial availability of surplus space. Otherwise, the space set aside for expansion in the original plans may become unavailable, to the same extent, when additional needs actually arise in the future.
- 6. A further point to which attention should be drawn is the need for instituting a clear and specific arrangement in regard to the responsibility for the management and supervision of the construction project. It would be unwise to leave such responsibility divided among a number of officials, or between Headquarters and the secretariat of ECLA. Furthermore, the official entrusted with these functions should preferably have the full-time assistance of a senior engineer-architect, if necessary as a regular staff member on a temporary contract. Consideration might also be given to the usefulness of having an inter-governmental advisory committee, somewhat along the lines of the Headquarters Advisory Committee which assisted the Secretary-General in regard to the construction of the Headquarters building.
- 7. It might be noted, also, that the cost estimates now submitted do not include any provision for new furnishings. The Advisory Committee understands that the Secretary-General contemplates using, as far as possible, existing furniture and equipment, without fresh acquisition. It might also be possible that a number of Governments of States members of ECLA would wish to offer gifts which would facilitate the appropriate interior decoration of the building.
- 8. As regards arrangements for the financing of construction costs, the Advisory Committee has examined the desirability of extending the period over which the total budgetary provision is to be spread, beyond the four years already envisaged (apart from preparatory costs in 1959). The Committee notes in this respect that, apart from normal short-term advances from the Working Capital Fund to finance expenditures pending receipt of contributions, there has been, and may probably continue to be, a substantial call, on a longer-term basis, on the resources of that Fund, as a result of long and heavy arrears of contributions. Even the proposed four-year arrangement for the provision of budgetary credits in respect of the Santiago building would entail some recourse to drawings from the Working Capital Fund or interest-free loans from other sources, in order to meet construction costs as they arise. An extension of the period, with a consequent reduction in the amount of the annual instalment, might further increase the strain on the Working Capital Fund. Accordingly, the Advisory Committee would agree that the total funds needed for the building should be provided in four annual instalments of $382,500 each during the years 1960 to 1963 inclusive, and a preparatory allocation of $20,000 in 1959. In this connexion, the Committee understands that, should the General Assembly approve the revised proposals, sufficient progress would be made in 1960 in the construction of the building, to require the full use of the annual instalment of $382,500 proposed for that year.

9. The Advisory Committee recognizes that the increase in the estimated costs of the building in Santiago will further add to the already heavy financial burden on Member States. Nevertheless, having regard to the great interest shown in this question by the General Assembly at its twelfth and thirteenth sessions, the Committee would recommend approval of the revised proposals submitted by the Secretary-General (A/4239, paras. 9-10). The Committee would also suggest that it might be kept informed of the detailed plans and cost estimates that may be worked out and, generally, of related developments, and that a progress report should be submitted to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

- 1. At its 747th meeting held on 19 November 1959, the Fifth Committee considered the reports of the Secretary-General (A/4239) and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (A/4277) on the agenda item concerning the construction of the United Nations building in Santiago, Chile.
- 2. In resolution 1273 (XIII) of 14 November 1958 the General Assembly authorized the Secretary-General to prepare plans for, and proceed with the construction of, the United Nations building in Santiago within a cost limit of $850,000. The recent report of the Secretary-General contained a revised estimate of $1,550,000, the increase of $700,000 being attributed to the following main causes:
- (a) A rise in building costs (accounting for about 30 per cent of the total increase) together with a general rise in prices at a time of relative stability in the exchange rate (US dollars: Chilean pesos);
- (b) The inclusion in the revised estimate of a contingency item of $200,000;
 - (c) An increase in space requirements; and
- (d) An increase in the cost of certain ancillary items (landscaping, fencing, architects' fees and architectural competition, etc.).
- 3. It was the view of some delegations that the Secretary-General's revised proposals and the manner in which the initial cost figures had been presented in 1958 disclosed a somewhat disturbing weakness in the processes of planning and estimation. In the case under review, a part of the total increase had admittedly been due to a sharp rise in building costs and to other factors that were beyond the control of the Secretary-General. Yet the fact remained that in 1958 the Committee had acted on the basis of what it understood to be a reasonably firm estimate and a precise scheme of financing. While they would support the revised proposals, the delegations in question felt that recent experience had demonstrated the importance, where long-term projects of that type were concerned, of ensuring thorough preliminary planning before the General Assembly was required to take decisions involving long-term financial commitments.

- 4. Other representatives felt that the revised proposals were sufficiently justified. Rising costs were a world-wide phenomenon which it was not possible to escape without reducing the scope of a project or the quality of its execution. In the present case, there was the added factor that it was wisely proposed to make adequate provision for future needs, and to meet certain other requirements not originally foreseen.
- 5. A majority of the delegations agreed with the Advisory Committee's conclusion that in the light of altered circumstances the revised proposal merited approval.
- 6. The Secretary-General's representative assured the Committee that it was with reluctance that the Secretary-General had submitted revised costfigures showing a substantial increase. It had been decided, in view of that increase, not to start work on the project until the General Assembly had had an opportunity of examining the proposed revision. The cost estimate presented at the previous session had necessarily been of a tentative character because the arrangements for authoritative surveys had had to await the appropriation of funds. Since then, it had become clear that the planning should take fuller account of the Assembly's policy of promoting common services wherever the United Nations and specialized agencies are housed in the same premises. Much of the proposed additional space had accordingly been allotted for the construction of conference rooms, a library, archives, machine rooms and other common services, whereas the factor of staff numbers in relation to available space had not been modified. The provision for expansion would cover only modest increases in the establishments to be housed in the building; it would not serve to accommodate a new agency or new local office of any size. It was standard and necessary practice to include a contingency item equivalent to between 12 and 15 per cent of construction costs, and the Assembly had agreed to such a provision in connexion with the Headquarters building, the new Library, and the modernization of the Palais des Nations. Nothing was included for furnishings or equipment to replace the existing material, although provision would be made as required in annual estimates. While a strong case could certainly be made for the inclusion of a specific sum for such purposes—$30,000 had been suggested by one delegation—there was the possibility, on the evidence of past experience in the United Nations and the specialized agencies, that gifts of representative examples of national art or craftsmanship might be made for the embellishment of the premises.

- 7. During the discussion, the representative of Chile, replying to a question addressed to him, stated that all material required for the construction of the building would be exempt from taxes or import duties.
- 8. The Secretary-General's representative added that he had been directed formally to place on record the Secretary-General's warm appreciation of the cooperation which was being given by the Government of Chile, and other Chilean authorities, both in Santiago and through the representative of Chile in the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly, in the furtherance of this project.

DECISION OF THE COMMITTEE

9. The Committee decided, by 57 votes to none, with 6 abstentions, to approve the recommendations contained in paragraph 9 of the Advisory Committee's report (A/4277).

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

10. The Fifth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 845th plenary meeting, on 1 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Fifth Committee (A/4306, para. 10). For the final text, see resolution 1407 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1407 (XIV). CONSTRUCTION OF THE UNITED NATIONS BUILDING IN SANTIAGO, CHILE

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1224 (XII) of 14 December 1957 and 1273 (XIII) of 14 November 1958 concerning the construction of the United Nations building in Santiago, Chile,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General (A/4239), in which revised proposals for the construction of the building are presented, and the twenty-sixth report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Question to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session (A/4277),

1. Authorizes the Secretary-General to proceed with the preparation of plans for, and the construction of, the United Nations building in Santiago, Chile, at a cost not to exceed $1,550,000;

- 2. Decides to appropriate in the regular United Nations budget for 1959 the sum of $20,000 for initial preparatory and construction expenses for the building;
- 3. Decides that the balance of the building cost shall be included in the regular United Nations budget in annual instalments of $382,500 for each of the ensuing four years;
- 4. Decides that the remaining provisions of resolution 1273 (XIII) shall continue in force;
- 5. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions informed of developments relating to the present project, including the detailed plans and cost estimates, and to present a progress report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.

Report of the Secretary-General

[21 November 1959]

- 1. The report of the Board of Trustees of the United Nations International School covering the year 1958-1959 is annexed hereto.
- 2. It will be recalled that under resolution 1297 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to continue to use his good offices to assist the Board of Trustees of the International School in finding suitable permanent accommodation for the School in the vicinity of the United Nations Headquarters, in developing plans for a building and in pursuing efforts to raise funds from private sources for the construction of the building, including, if necessary, the acquisition of a site, and to make a further progress report to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session. By the same resolution, the General Assembly also approved a grant-in-aid of $32,700 to the International School towards meeting the expected deficit in respect of the school year 1958-1959.
- 3. It will be noted from the report of the Trustees that, at 30 June 1959, the School had an accumulated deficit of some $22,600 and that the deficit for the year ending 30 June 1960 is estimated at some $42,800. The figure of $22,600, however, is arrived at after taking account of the General Assembly's grant-in-aid of $32,700. Without the grant, the deficit would have been $55,300. The estimated deficit of $42,800 for 1959-1960 therefore represents a step towards economic viability and this has been achieved largely by a considerably expanded enrolment in the Manhattan school.
- 4. Consonant with the hope expressed by the General Assembly that the School be made available to the children of the greatest possible number of staff of delegations, United Nations staff members and others
- *For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Fifth Committee, 752nd, 755th to 757th and 759th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 846th meeting.

- associated with the United Nations, efforts are continuously being made to increase the facilities and enrolment in the School, and place it within reach of those who need this type of facility most. It is clear that, with a progressive increase in the enrolment, there will be a decrease in the size of the annual operating deficits of the School. But it cannot be expected that an institution such as the International School, designed to meet the special needs of an international community, could hope in the near future to pay its way fully at any reasonable level of fees. The School is still growing. Capital expenses, such as the equipping of laboratories, have to be incurred; an increase in enrolment will mean an expansion of teaching facilities; the salaries at present paid to the teaching staff are low and need to be reviewed. Nevertheless, it is a reasonable assumption that, as the School in Manhattan becomes firmly established and enrolment reaches the optimum figure, the annual operating deficits will be reduced.
- 5. The major obstacle in the way of increasing the enrolment from the delegations and the Secretariat is the level of the tuition fees. The move of the School to Manhattan has placed it physically within reach of delegations and others associated with the Organization but the fees, especially if there is more than one child of school age in the family, still place the School beyond the resources of large numbers of potential users, amongst whom must be numbered the junior and less well-paid members of the delegations and Secretariat. If some financial assistance in the form of scholarships could be given to these groups, there is little doubt that enrolment would rapidly increase.
- 6. In addition to these problems, the necessity of finding permanent premises for the School is becoming urgent. The temporary premises in Manhattan (the former New York City Public School 82) have been made available to the International School until the close of the academic year 1960-1961 and alternative accommodation requires to be found before then. While the Secretary-General is hopeful that sufficient support from foundations or other private donors can be enlisted for the construction of a permanent building for the School, it has become clear that a prerequisite to that end is evidence of the future continuance of the School as a self-supporting and economically viable undertaking.

- 7. After considering the various aspects of these problems, the Secretary-General has come to the conclusion that the only adequate solution is to establish, by some means, a continuing fund from which appropriate assistance could be given to the International School in New York City, and, if necessary, to the International School in Geneva also. The establishment of such a fund would obviate the necessity of the General Assembly having to consider annually a grant-in-aid. More important still, it would ensure that the School could plan for the future with assurance of solvency, thus qualifying it for capital assistance from voluntary sources for such purposes as the building and equipping of new premises.
- 8. As a possible source for the fund referred to above, it would seem appropriate to look to the net revenue arising from the operation of the United Nations Gift Centre. As will be recalled, the Gift Centre was started on a very modest scale in 1952 on the initiative of certain members of the Secretariat staff and others associated with the Organization, for the purpose of the retail sale to visitors to United Nations Headquarters of representative examples of handicraft work and other articles of an artistic or cultural value from Member States. The venture soon proved so successful and grew to such proportions that the Gift Centre has now been organized as a United Nations revenue-producing activity. It is operated by the United Nations Co-operative Inc., a voluntary organization of United Nations staff and of other persons connected with the United Nations, subject to policy guidance by a policy committee consisting of equal numbers of members appointed by the United Nations and by the Co-operative. The Cooperative is paid a management fee based on a percentage of the net profits from the Gift Centre.
- 9. The net revenue from the operation of the United Nations Gift Centre, in the absence of any specific alternative purpose to which such funds could in the past have been specifically and appropriately applied, is at the present time credited to the miscellaneous income of the Organization. The Secretary-General believes that Members might wish to consider the desirability of the revenue being placed in a special fund for the purpose of assisting the International School. It would seem altogether appropriate that the net proceeds of this particular United Nations activity, which, like the International School, owed its origin and progress to the initiative of staff members of the Secretariat, should be used for such a purpose, and it has been established that the Directors of the United Nations Co-operative would be happy to see the proceeds of this part of its activities applied in the manner suggested. The Secretary-General would contemplate that the fund would be applied in the broadest possible manner, including the provision of a generous scholarship scheme, but the primary purpose of this proposal is to ensure that the School in New York will be economically self-sufficient for a reasonable period of time.

- 10. If this recommendation is favourably received by the General Assembly, the Secretary-General would propose to work out, in consultation with the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Board of Trustees of the International School, detailed arrangements for the management of the fund and rules governing the making of payments and awarding scholarships. It would be the Secretary-General's recommendation that such arrangements should provide for both internal and external audit review of the fund's management, as well as for annual reports to the General Assembly on the School's future development and financial situation.
- 11. The Secretary-General would further propose that the above arrangements be reviewed after a period of three years in the light of developments in the acquisition or construction of permanent premises for the International School and the reserves built up in the fund.

ANNEX

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE UNITED NATIONS INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL

- 1. The Board of Trustees of the United Nations International School has the honour to present, through the Secretary-General, for the information of the General Assembly, the following report on School developments and progress over the past twelve months. It believes that, with a view to a better understanding of the stage of development which the School has now reached, as firm an indication as possible of anticipated future developments, including the financial prospects for the year 1959/1960, should also be attempted.
- 2. During the period under review, the main and continuing concern of the Trustees has been the problem of finding practicable and effective means of fulfilling the hope expressed by the General Assembly in resolution 1297 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 that the School be made available to the children of the greatest possible number of members of delegations, United Nations staff members and others associated with the United Nations. Substantial progress has been made in this direction (current enrolment is over 330, compared with 219 a year ago) despite certain temporary set-backs (among them the fact that the School was without a principal during the latter half of school year 1958-1959) which, in conjunction with other difficulties consequent on the move to Manhattan, have prevented full advantage being taken of the increased enrolment potential. There has thus been some delay in utilizing, to the extent anticipated, the opportunity afforded by the move to Manhattan of enlarging the enrolment in the School while simultaneously strengthening its financial structure. However, as indicated in appendix I to the present report, the initial enrolment for 1959-1960 is about half as high again as that for 1958-1959 and includes children from forty-five as against thirty-five countries. Despite the higher level of expenditures, the budgetary deficit has been slightly reduced.
- 3. The Board is formulating its plans for the School's future development in the confident expectation that further increases in enrolment can be achieved without a corresponding increase in costs and that, as a result of a thoroughgoing review and reappraisal of such matters affecting its operation and management as fee and scholarship arrangements, the School's financial situation can be further strengthened. There is likely, nevertheless, in the Board's best judgement, to be some continuing need, at least pending the acquisition of permanent premises and a modest endowment, for limited budgetary support, if the School is to serve, in a reasonably adequate manner, the purposes of the international community. The Board would, indeed, venture to suggest that the very fact of such support during the formative period of the School's establishment in Manhattan will be of very real help in carrying through the larger and increasingly urgent task of "finding suitable permanent accommodation for the School in the immediate vicinity of United Nations Headquarters, in developing plans for a building, and in pursuing its efforts to raise funds from private sources for the construction of the building and, if necessary, for the acquisition of a site therefor (resolution 1297 (XIII)).

Development

- 4. For the reasons indicated in last year's report ^{a/2} and in the present report, the long-sought move to Manhattan occurred in September 1958 under somewhat inauspicious circumstances, the school year commencing with a total enrolment (for both the Parkway Village and Manhattan branches) of 219 as against 299 in the previous year, in spite of the fact that a number of new pupils were admitted into the Manhattan primary department. By the end of the year, enrolment had risen to 235.
- 5. In 1958/1959 only a pilot primary school was maintained in Manhattan. The first grade was eliminated, the second and third grades were combined under one teacher, and the fourth and fifth grades under another. French was not offered as a first language in the Manhattan primary school. By such means and by the application of stringent economies to other parts of the budget, expenditure was kept within approved budgetary limits. However, a substantial deficit (though somewhat less than estimated) on the year's operations was unavoidable.
- 6. In preparing for 1959-1960, it was decided that lost ground would have to be recovered quickly by the adoption of policies and plans based on a realistic appraisal of existing potential, if the School was to survive as a viable institution. Arrangements were accordingly made for the recruitment of a Director who could undertake long-term planning as well as the management of the institution for the establishment of a full primary school in Manhattan and for the strengthening of the secondary department, including the addition in 1959 of an eleventh grade. To achieve this expansion without weakening the School's financial structure and to make its facilities available to the largest number of children of persons associated with the United Nations, an enrolment target of 340 pupils was set, involving a doubling of the Manhattan enrolment in one year. While the net increase aimed at was 105, the high level of rotation in the School as a consequence of mission assignments and transfers of international civil servants made it necessary to try to attract no less than 153 new entrants. Owing to the sustained efforts made by the School and its well-wishers and to the goodwill and reputation acquired over the years, this target has almost been reached. There is every reason to believe, moreover, that it can be progressively improved upon.
- 7. The primary branch of the School located in Parkway Village continues to cater to the needs of children from five to approximately ten years of age resident in that area. Though the size of this establishment is to be periodically reviewed in the light of the demand from the international community in the area, as well as the educational and financial aspects of its operation, it would seem necessary to proceed on the assumption that the present "feeder" school for small children will be needed in the foreseeable future in Parkway Village or its immediate vicinity. Meanwhile, it was found possible, despite earlier advice to the contrary, to renew the lease for another two years with the new owners of the development.

Finance

- 8. A breakdown of the School's finances during the last five years and the budget for 1959-1960 will be seen in appendix III to the present report. The basic tuition fee remains unchanged
- 2/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 54, document A/C.5/754.

- from last year's at $800 per child. This fee includes lunch, text-books and other materials. Transportation by bus is provided from Parkway Village to the Manhattan school and the cost (about $150 a year) is charged to parents. Other charges are kept to a minimum. Grants from the Bursary Fund are made to parents with more than one child enrolled in the School and in case of financial hardship.
- 9. By 30 June 1959, the School had accumulated a deficit of $22,600. Because of this deficit, financed largely by temporary loans, the School has frequently had a shortage of cash and has had to forgo or postpone desirable measures. The Board of Trustees is anxious to eliminate this accumulated deficit so that its attention may be fully devoted to its plans for the further development of the School.
- 10. The anticipated deficit of $42,800 for the current year (1959-1960), unlike last year's, is based on a full complement of staff and an expanded enrolment. The teaching staff has been increased from twenty to twenty-eight. The cost per child has, however, been measurably reduced despite a substantial rise in the total expenditure. The enrolment and income may be further increased next year without a corresponding increase of staff.
- 11. To maintain and develop this institution which has proved its importance to the Secretariat and to many delegations, as well as to the advancement of new concepts in education, the Board of Trustees hopes that the General Assembly will be able to make a special grant-in-aid for the coming year to strengthen the financial situation of the School. The Board has made, and indeed will continue to make, efforts to seek other sources of support, but a substantial grant from the United Nations would facilitate its approach to other sources for immediate assistance as well as for the permanent premises which are urgently needed.

Conclusion

- 12. The temporary accommodation acquired last year through the co-operation of the Mayor and other authorities of the city of New York, is available only until the summer of 1961. The upward growth of the School, which has developed since 1947 by adding one grade every year, will be completed in 1961. The acquisition of permanent premises has, therefore, become a matter of urgent concern.
- 13. In view of the more complex problems faced by the School at the present stage of its growth and development, the Association for the United Nations International School, which then consisted mostly of parents, revised its Constitution in June 1959 in order to widen its membership and provide for the inclusion of experienced educators, administrators and financial authorities on the Board of Trustees. The Association now includes a sizable number of permanent representatives to the United Nations and senior officials of the Secretariat. One-third of the membership of the new Board of Trustees is nominated by the Secretary-General and one-third co-opted. Among its members are three distinguished educators, five permanent representatives and several senior officials of the Secretariat.
- 14. The Board of Trustees is confident that its efforts, in co-operation with the Secretary-General, to build a viable School and to obtain adequate premises will be well received. It is gratified to note that the School has attracted wide attention as a significant experiment in education. The authorities of the city of New York have recognized it as a complement to the city's educational system and have given it valuable encouragement and support.
- 15. The Board of Trustees of the United Nations International School wishes to express its appreciation to the General Assembly for its continued support and to the Secretary-General for his good offices on its behalf.
- 16. Further details concerning the School's development, programme and finances are appended hereto.

2/Over the six-year period the School has grown from 180 pupils to 330 pupils enrolled at present. The transition from a primary school to an institution offering primary and secondary education has demanded additional premises, more teaching staff and an increasing amount of capital expenditures on specialist requirements. The Trustees have met part of the inescapable burden by raising tuition fees from $580 in 1954/1955 to the present fee of $800 per annum.

b/ The budget estimates for the school year 1 July 1959 to 30 June 1960 show the increase in the size of the School, from an average of 227 pupils for 1958/1959 to an expected enrolment of 340 for the current year.

C/ This item includes admission fees, association membership fees as well as tuition fees. It must be pointed out, however, that tuition fees are payable monthly and fluctuate from month to month where members of the Secretariat and delegations are concerned, since the School, in serving the needs of these parents, must stand the financial risk of losing pupils at any time during the year. Nor can it be assumed that a place vacated by a child leaving New York will automatically be filled the next day by a child of the same age and educational attainment, coming to New York. Every effort is made to balance enrolment losses with incoming pupils but experience shows that the "loss" due to this factor has been as high as $11,000 for a school year.

d/Under this item are included the sums derived from the Fund for the Advancement of Education, from individual donations and from special fund-raising events organized by parents.

e/ The grants received from the United Nations have been pro-rated to coincide with the financial year of the School rather than that of the United Nations.

f This item includes salaries of all personnel on the payroll: teachers, office staff, maintenance staff and, up to and including the year 1958/1959, also cooks. For part of 1958/1959 and the current year, amounts equalling 5 per cent of teachers' salaries are also included for contributions into a Provident Fund which is presently being organized (see also note j).

g/This item covers the rental for the temporary quarters in Manhattan as well as the apartments in Parkway Village. It was possible to give up one of the eight apartments in Parkway Village, but the resulting savings are partly offset by an increase in the rental for the remaining seven apartments.

h/This item includes the cost of maintaining the Manhattan building as well as the seven apartments in Parkway Village but does not include the salaries of the maintenance staff. Also included are the costs of utilities. These include the cost of coal, gas, water and electricity for Manhattan and electricity only for Parkway Village, where gas, water and heating are included in the rental.

if This item covers not only the additional specialist equipment and furniture for laboratories, but also all text-books, stationery, office supplies, art supplies and class-room and lunch-room furniture.

j/The figure for lunches is a net figure, after deduction of a New York State subsidy for an approved luncheon programme. For the current year 1959/1960, the operation of the luncheon programme has been handed over to a contractor on a cost-plus-management fee basis, as a result of which salaries for cooks, kitchen help, dietitian and supervision are now shown under this heading instead of under salaries. The cost per serving is expected to remain equal to last year's at about 50 cents.

k/ This item covers the costs of telephone, insurance, alterations to buildings, expenses of teacher recruitment, etc.

Report of the Fifth Committee

[4 December 1959]

- 1. At its 755th, 756th and 757th meetings, held 1, 2 and 3 December 1959 respectively, the Fifth Committee considered the report of the Secretary-General (A/4293) on the United Nations International School. In this report, submitted in pursuance of resolution 1297 (XIII), the Secretary-General suggested that Member States might wish to consider the desirability of placing the net revenue of the United Nations Gift Centre in a special fund for assisting the International School in order to obviate the necessity for considering annually a grant-in-aid for the School and, more important, to ensure that the School could plan for the future with assurance of solvency, thus qualifying it for capital assistance from voluntary sources for such purposes as the building and equipping of new premises.
- 2. The delegations of Ecuador, Ghana, India, Iran, Iraq, Peru, Poland and Uruguay submitted a draft resolution (A/C.5/L.593 and Add.1) establishing, as at 1 January 1960, an International School Fund to which would be credited the net revenues of the United Nations Gift Centre. The delegations of Argentina and the United States of America submitted a draft resolution (A/C.5/L.594) deciding, in principle, to contribute to the School for a period of five years such continuing financial assistance as the General Assembly might consider necessary, to make a grant of $75,000 to the School in 1960 and to consider further at the fifteenth session the suggestion of the Secretary-General for the establishment of a continuing fund financed from the revenue derived from the Gift Centre, as well as other means for financing grants to the School.
- 3. During the discussion, several representatives expressed appreciation for the important contribution made by the International School towards the education of the children of members of the Secretariat and of permanent missions. They noted with satisfaction the substantial increase in the enrolment in the School and expressed the hope that its services would be made more widely available to such children and that efforts to secure permanent premises and adequate equipment would be successful.
- 4. The sponsors of the eight-Power draft resolution felt that the International School Fund suggested by the Secretary-General should be established immediately in view of the urgent need to expand the services of the School and to acquire permanent premises by 1961. The sponsors of the two-Power draft resolution argued that, while the International School deserved support, the proposal concerning the allocation of the net proceeds of the Gift Centre deserved further study in terms of its implications on budgetary policy and in the light of the desire to preserve the autonomy of the International School.
- 5. At the 756th meeting, the sponsors of the two draft resolutions submitted a new joint draft resolution (A/C.5/L.598) inviting the Board of Trustees to establish an International School Fund, deciding to contribute to the Fund for a period of five years such financial assistance as the Assembly might consider necessary and to make a contribution of $100,000 in - 1960, and requesting the Secretary-General to present to the fifteenth session (a) a report on the International School Fund; (b) his recommendations, together with the comments of the Advisory Committee, on future contributions to the Fund, including the suggestion contained in the Secretary-General's report (A/4293, paras. 8 and 9); and (c) a report on the progress made in finding permanent accommodation for the School. They indicated that the new draft would make it clear that the proposed Fund would be established by the Board of Trustees of the School rather than by the United Nations, and would permit greater scrutiny of the suggestion for providing a continuous source of income from the proceeds of the Gift Centre. They expressed the hope that, with the establishment of the proposed Fund, it would be possible to obtain voluntary contributions and donations.

- 6. Several members of the Committee, while expressing appreciation of the services performed by the School and sympathy for the efforts made to establish the School on a sound financial basis, opposed the provisions of the joint draft resolution. While assistance might be given in special circumstances on an ad hoc basis, they could not accept a continuing financial commitment to the School, nor an obligation to cover the operating deficits of the School, particularly since the School served not only children of members of the Secretariat, but also children of members of permanent missions and of others not connected with the United Nations. The School, in their view, should seek to balance its budget by setting up a more economic level of tuition fees, bearing in mind the fees charged by national schools. It also seemed that the proposals advanced tended to favour one group. They suggested that the Secretary-General discuss this matter with the Board of Trustees and consult with the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the level of the education grant, so that the Assembly might review the education grant at its fifteenth session. In view of the considerable financial commitment proposed in the joint draft resolution, it was also suggested that the relationship between the United Nations and the International School should be defined. Several members expressed regret that the documentation was not available in time for detailed consideration.
- 7. A number of representatives argued, on the other hand, that the level of tuition fees was beyond the capacity of many members of the Secretariat and of the permanent missions, and that the International School might approach economic viability by increasing enrolment, lowering the fees or establishing a scholarship fund. They felt that higher fees would further inhibit the enrolment of children of persons associated with the United Nations and would not be justified so long as facilities in the temporary quarters were inadequate. Certain delegations felt that the scholarship fund should clearly be limited to children of families associated with the United Nations.
- 8. The representative of Lebanon, while supporting continuing assistance to the International School, felt that instruction in Arabic and other languages would enable the School to attract wider enrolment. He proposed an amendment to request the Secretary-General to take the necessary steps with the Board of Trustees to institute instruction in Arabic and other languages. Subsequently, he agreed to withdraw the amendment after a statement by the representative of the Secretary-General that the School was fully aware of the need for instruction in additional languages, that more could not be done in this respect because of financial stringency or lack of demand, and that the Secretary-General would bring the Lebanese proposal to the attention of the Board of Trustees.

DECISION OF THE COMMITTEE

9. Separate votes were taken on the last paragraph of the preamble and each of the operative paragraphs of the joint draft resolution (A/C.5/L.598). The last paragraph of the preamble was adopted by 32 votes to 7, with 20 abstentions; operative paragraph 1 was adopted by 52 votes to none, with 8 abstentions; operative paragraph 2 was adopted by 43 votes to none, with 17 abstentions; operative paragraph 3 was adopted by 32 votes to 22, with 6 abstentions; operative paragraph 4 was adopted by 40 votes to 6, with 12 abstentions; operative paragraph 5 was adopted by 50 votes to none, with 9 abstentions; operative paragraph 6 was adopted by 44 votes to none, with 16 abstentions. The joint draft resolution as a whole was adopted by 38 votes to 4, with 18 abstentions.

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

10. The Fifth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 846th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Fifth Committee (A/4331, para. 10). For the final text see resolution 1439 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1439 (XIV). UNITED NATIONS INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations International School (A/4293) as well as the report by the Board of Trustees of the School (ibid., annex),

Recalling its resolution 1297 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 requesting the Secretary-General to use his good offices to assist the School to find suitable permanent accommodation and approving a grant-in-aid in respect of the school year 1958-1959,

Recognizing the increasing urgency of providing permanent accommodation for the School,

Believing it necessary that the financial solvency of the School should be assured,

Noting the suggestion of the Secretary-General that a continuing fund should be established for assistance to the International School to be financed by the net proceeds from the operation of the United Nations Gift Centre,

- 1. Reaffirms its hope that steps will be taken to make the United Nations International School available to the children of the largest possible number of members of delegations, United Nations staff members, and others associated with the United Nations;
- 2. Invites the Board of Trustees of the School to establish an International School Fund;
- 3. Decides to contribute to the International School Fund for a period of five years such continuing financial assistance as the General Assembly may consider necessary;

- 4. Decides to make a contribution of $100,000 to the International School Fund in 1960 for the purpose of liquidating the operating deficit at the end of the 1959-1960 school year and for such other purposes of the School as the Board of Trustees deems fit;
- 5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to use his good offices to assist the Board of Trustees of the School in finding suitable permanent accommodation for the School in the immediate vicinity of United Nations Headquarters, in developing plans for a building, and in pursuing its efforts to raise funds from private sources for the construction of the building, and, if necessary, for the acquisition of a site therefor;
- 6. Requests the Secretary-General to present to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session:
- (a) A report by the Board of Trustees of the School on the establishment and operations of the International School Fund;
- (b) His recommendations, together with the comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, on future contributions to the Fund and on the means of financing such contributions, including the suggestion contained in paragraphs 8 and 9 of his report;
- (c) A report on the progress which has been made in finding permanent accommodation for the School.

I. Introduction

1. In resolution 1335 (XIII) of 13 December 1958, ie General Assembly requested the Secretary-eneral to give effect in 1959 in so far as practicable those recommendations made by the Committee of xperts on United Nations Public Information and to the objectives set out in the preamble to the resolution ith the maximum of effectiveness at the lowest posble cost. It further requested him to consult the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions concerning the financial implications involved and to report to the Assembly at its fourteenth session on the progress made in implementing the resolution.

2. The preamble to the resolution referred to the report of the Committee of Experts on United Nations Public Information¹ and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon; to the statements of the Secretary-General in the Fifth Committee (682nd and 689th meetings) during the consideration of these documents, in particular his statement that it is his intention to act upon the many excellent recommendations included in paragraph 227 of the report of the Committee of Experts in the light of basic principles as interpreted in his statement made at the 682nd meeting; and to General Assembly resolutions 13 (I) of 13 February 1946 and 595 (VI) of 4 February 1952 setting forth the basic policy and principles of the United Nations public information programme. It then recapitulated the objectives of this programme as follows:

to 732nd, 748th and 749th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 845th meeting.

"Considering that, pursuant to the above-mentioned resolutions, the Secretary-General should, within budgetary limitations imposed by the General Assembly, make available objective and factual information concerning the United Nations and its activities to all the peoples of the world through any appropriate media,

"Believing that, consistent with this policy, the Secretary-General should give priority to the use of all media of information which ensure the maximum of effectiveness at the lowest possible cost,

"Considering that the Secretary-General should place greater emphasis than heretofore upon enlisting the co-operation of Governments of Member States, privately-owned mass media of information, private institutions, non-governmental organizations and educators in the programme of informing the peoples of the world of the United Nations and its activities.

"Considering that greater emphasis should be placed upon the operations and effectiveness of information centres in relation to the Office of Public Information at Headquarters, without impairing the over-all central direction of the United Nations information programme or the present facilities for the representatives of media of mass communication."

- 3. With a view to the implementation of the resolution, the Secretary-General on 18 December 1958 appointed a Committee consisting of Mr. Andrew W. Cordier, Executive Assistant to the Secretary-General, Mr. Anatoly Dobrynin, Under-Secretary for Political and Security Council Affairs, and Mr. Philippe de Seynes, Under-Secretary for Economic and Social Affairs, with Mr. Alfred G. Katzin (whom he simultaneously temporarily designated Acting Head of the Office of Public Information) as Executive Secretary of the Committee. This Committee was instructed to report recommendations to the Secretary-General in implementation of the Assembly's resolution, taking into account, inter alia, the recommendations of the Office of Public Information made in the light of operational experience.
- 4. As a result of this study, the measures and proposals set forth in the present report are intended to implement the Assembly's resolution. Clearly many of the objectives sought by the Assembly are necessarily of a long-range nature. The measures reported herein are considered to be the most practicable steps at present feasible in the light of experience towards developing the programmes and services rendered by

- the Office of Public Information (OPI) in the directions sought in the resolution.
- 5. Increasing emphasis upon the co-operation c Member States and non-official agencies of information, as called for in the preamble to the resolutior must necessarily be a continuing concern. Greate emphasis in enlisting this co-operation in originatin information material in the local idiom, as advocate by the Committee of Experts, is also desirable, thoug in this regard certain considerations (see para. below), must also be borne in mind.
- 6. The Secretariat also has a responsibility, a reaffirmed in resolution 1335 (XIII), for makin available objective and factual information concernin the United Nations to all the peoples of the world In the discharge of this responsibility the General Assembly considered that field operations should be strengthened without, however, impairing the present facilities for the servicing of media of mass communications at Headquarters. Accordingly, due weight habeen given to this consideration and measures take will not reduce such facilities below their present leve
- 7. A primary requisite for strengthening field oper ations is adequate support and direction of suc operations from Headquarters. In the reorganization of OPI, a new External Relations Division has bee created at Headquarters and additional transfers of staff and resources have also been made from Heac quarters to the field. These, together with othe measures described later in the present report, reflec the views generally expressed by the Committee c Experts and in the General Assembly, and shared b the Secretary-General, that greater emphasis shoul be placed on the operations and effectiveness of info mation centres. It has been found after very searchin exploration that, in some cases, the workload, and i others, matters relating to the redisposition of staf do not lend themselves to certain of the organization; changes suggested by the Committee of Experts. I such instances alternative arrangements, as dictate by experience, have been made to meet the needs.
- 8. Steps have been taken to facilitate increasing adaptation of United Nations information materia to the national idioms of the various parts of th world, as recommended by the Committee of Expert However, the recognized advantages gained from decentralized production of such materials must t weighed in practice in each case against certain other important factors. Control over the objectivity (material bearing OPI originating imprint is a constar concern and must, by the nature of Secretariat responsibilities, remain the subject of much editori. and executive supervision quite apart from the techn cal staffing and consequent financial problems entailed Such difficulties were, of course, recognized by th General Assembly itself when it stated that the ove all central direction of the United Nations informatic programme should not be impaired. The problem and will continue to be one of a balance of judgemen in varying circumstances and of a constant search for mproved means to attain the objectives.
- 9. The organization and management of OPI programmes are being adjusted to give a greater emphasito regional needs in other respects also. Thus, in publications the emphasis will be on producing fewer ar shorter pamphlets primarily intended as working guides to the major responsibilities and programm of the United Nations. Funds made available by the reduction in the number of pamphlets will be devoted to the adaptation of materials in more language editions. Similar initiatives are being introduced in the programming of radio and visual services activities.

- 10. The Committee of Experts advocated the closest co-ordination between the information services of the United Nations and those of the specialized agencies, closer working relationships beween OPI and other departments of the United Nations Secretariat and collaboration and co-ordination, where possible, of OPI field activities with those of other United Nations overseas offices, such as the offices of Technical Assistance Board (TAB) epresentatives. In all of these areas, the Secretary-General agrees that room for improvement exists and that such co-ordination should be strengthened. The Consultative Committee on Public Information of the Jnited Nations and the Specialized Agencies, at its neetings from 16 to 19 March 1959, agreed on several proposals for closer co-ordination on a practical workng basis between the information departments of all ts members. Steps have also been initiated at Headjuarters towards closer working relationships between OPI and the other departments of the Secretariat, as vell as between OPI and TAB, especially in the use of common services and common staff in the field, vherever this proves to be expedient in the light of revailing circumstances.
- 11. In approaching the implementation of resolution 1335 (XIII), both in respect of the 1959 programme and looking forward to the next few years, primary consideration has been given to the directive that the action taken should be aimed at obtaining 'the maximum effectiveness at the lowest possible cost'.
- 12. It is generally recognized that the effectiveness of the programme depends upon its reaching the videst possible audience and this in turn depends to a arge extent on the provision of suitable arrangements—not only for the maintenance of an over-all central lirection of the United Nations information programme and adequate facilities for the representatives of media of mass communication, but also for the provision of information centres in Member States and their progressive establishment in new Member States.
- 13. It should be noted that, in the absence of a eady measurement for determining an appropriate evel of expenditure for public information activities, hese measures, taken in the context of the wide range of United Nations activities, might tend to imply an ncrease in the allocation of resources to public infornation activities over the current level. The level of expenditure, however, must be one that the Member states are prepared to support. In this respect, the hecretary-General has, of course, considered the mplications of the several proposals that have been nade in the past few years that OPI resources be kept within the limits of a fixed and predetermined alloation.
- 14. As a result of increases in the "uncontrollable" osts for project estimates for public information, xpenses have shown a steady increase over the past ew years without a corresponding increase in the evel of effective resources which have remained rirtually unchanged since 1955. The approved proessional establishment for 1959 is at the same level s that approved for 1955. The approved 1959 amount of funds for operational purposes (radio, motion - picture, photographic and television supplies and services), when adjusted for revenue from films and television, approximates closely the actual level of expenditures incurred in 1955. There has been no change since 1955 in the amount ($200,000) provided for the OPI for its printing budget. Apart from other demands for OPI services it should also be recalled that in 1955 the membership of the United Nations comprised sixty States, compared with eighty-two in 1959, and the number of information centres totalled twenty in 1955, compared with twenty-four in 1959, excluding the services provided at the Geneva office, of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE) and the Economic Commission for Latin America (ECLA).

- 15. Salary, wage and related staff costs comprise upwards of 70 per cent of OPI expenditure and a considerable proportion of the balance represents local operating costs of information centres. A strict adherence to a fixed expenditure target which carries with it the necessity to absorb costs over which OPI has no direct control, such as progressive salary increments, cost-of-living increases, increases in common staff costs or other rate increases, means that, with limited exceptions, the same amount of expenditure would provide for correspondingly less service. The process is hastened in a period of rapidly rising prices. When, as was the case in recent years, such a period saw at the same time the necessity to increase rather than decrease the range of activities, the Secretary-General did not find it possible to retain basic services and simultaneously absorb the rise in "uncontrollable" costs.
- 16. There must be a rational basis for planning a public information programme designed to give the maximum effectiveness at the minimum possible cost. In terms of cost, it will need to be restrictive—not restrictive to the degree that the possibility of a controlled development of the programme is rendered difficult, if not impossible, to achieve, but restrictive in the sense that it would reflect the concern of Member States that particular care be exercised in respect of public information expenditures and that in this area a policy of stabilization of expenditure should apply over a period.
- 17. The steps being taken in 1959 in the implementation of resolution 1335 (XIII) are being carried out within the approved 1959 provisions for staff and for other OPI expenses. Further, the Secretary-General will present the budget estimates for 1960 within this general policy of stabilization.
- 18. More specifically, this policy might be stated as follows:
- (a) Stabilization at the current level of professional staff employed in public information activities;
- (b) Outposting of additional professional staff within the above level for the execution of field production projects;
- (c) Utilization, to the maximum extent possible and wherever operationally feasible, of combined Secretariat staff resources, including TAB staff, to meet additional demands in the operation of information centres;
- (d) Stabilization of the amount of operational funds (radio, motion picture, photographic and television supplies and services and contractual printing) at the total of the amounts approved for 1959, except for such increases as might be offset by additional revenue;

- (e) Provision of local costs, including local staff of the information centres, at the level required for effective operation.
- 19. The Secretary-General believes that the line he has followed in the preparation of the 1960 estimates for public information activities presents a viable framework for the development of the programme and at the same time provides a restrictive and practical approach to the mandate of maximum effectiveness at the lowest possible cost. It would be the Secretary-General's intention to hold generally to the above line in future budget proposals, except when a marked change in conditions clearly justified a departure from it.
- 20. The present report has been prepared against the above background.

II. CHANGES IN ORGANIZATION AT HEADQUARTERS FOR DIRECTION AND SUPPORT OF FIELD OPERATIONS

- 21. The Office of Public Information has been reorganized into three Divisions-Press, Publications and Public Services; Radio and Visual Services; and External Relations. The new External Relations Division has been established by the transfer of posts from the Office of the Under-Secretary, Press and Publications Division and the former Public Liaison and Distribution Division. Professional and general service staff who serve in the information centres and offices are also directed by this new Division. Its purpose is to provide more effectively, in co-operation with the other divisions of the Office, for the special needs of the information centres while rendering essential services to non-governmental organizations and educationists and strengthening co-ordination with the specialized agencies. It will also, through consultations, seek to assist government agencies and departments of the various Member States to play an increased role in the dissemination of information about the United Nations.
- 22. The External Relations Division has two main units: Centre Services and Overseas Briefing and Liaison and Special Projects. The former will consist, as far as possible, of officers with experience of the principal regions so that each may serve a group of centres in the area of his experience. Its functions are to analyse and meet the needs of the centres, to keep them constantly informed and to provide them with material particularly useful on a regional basis. Liaison and Special Projects is charged with developing practical co-operation on joint projects with the information departments of the specialized agencies. It also serves educators and non-governmental organizations and ensures close co-ordination with the centres on joint programmes, such as those for United Nations Day and Human Rights Day. The manning table pattern for the two units will be exercised as flexibly as talent permits. By filling posts on a rotating basis, the maximum use of overseas experience will be made by moving OPI personnel both to and from the field, the need for which was emphasized by the Committee of Experts.
- 23. In order to strengthen field operations while maintaining existing services without an increase in manpower, closer working arrangements are being progressively developed on a day-to-day basis at Headquarters between OPI and other departments and within OPI itself. The importance of such coordination was stressed by the Committee of Experts Special reference and guidance material prepared with the help of specialists in substantive departments wil be provided to the centres to deal with United Nations documentation. A standing departmental committee with representatives from other departments and the specialized agencies at Headquarters, has been established and will review the publications programme or a continuing basis. The former Press Liaison and Central Editorial Services of the Press and Publications Services have been combined into one unit—Press Services—and greater interchangeability of writing and editing assignments between the staff of the Publications Service and of the Press Services will be continuously developed.

III. PROGRAMMING AT HEADQUARTERS TO STRENGTHEN FIELD OPERATIONS

- 24. A stronger accent will be placed on the needs in the field also for information material and programmer emanating from Headquarters. For example, in the the publications programme, as previously stated primary emphasis will be given to fewer and shorter pamphlets, essentially intended as working guides to the major responsibilities and programmes of the United Nations, which can be reproduced economically and easily adapted in many language editions and which will furnish the centres with factua material for answering inquiries.
- ✓ 25. The Office of Public Information will continue to supply basic material upon request to nationa radio organizations for use in their own programmes The transcription service of feature and documentary radio programmes is being continued where there is a clear demand by national radio organizations and where they are rebroadcast. At present these pro grammes are supplied to about ninety Member States non-member States and territories, some sixty o which rebroadcast on a regular basis and the others from time to time. Special attention is being paid to a thematic treatment of major subjects, when appropriate, in line with suggestions of the Committee o Experts. Wherever practicable, and to meet specific demands, centrally-written programmes will be pro duced and distributed locally after adaptation to the national or regional style of presentation.
- 26. The years 1959 and 1960 are being regarded attransitional years in United Nations visual services policies. During this period an organizational consolidation will be undertaken which will permit of a more rational and flexible use of manpower and othe resources which are at present spread over three unitedealing with television, film services and photographic services. In the context of this proposed reorganization, OPI will aim at achieving a blending of its film and television activities so that the operational need of both media may be met by a joint programming beneficial to both.
- 27. Apart from providing for an increase of suitable library material, which will be made available also to external producers of United Nations programmes, the main programming objective will be to produce television films and short films of attractive quality to meet the need demonstrated through information centres and through official and approved channel for important non-theatrical audiences throughout the world. The ramifications of these showings are significant to the United Nations, as the Committee of Experts recognized. Advantage will of course be taken of any opportunity for theatrical distribution of films produced within this more limited mandate. The 1959 programme carries through intentions planned in 1958 for the production of six short films both for the United Nations and some of the specialized agencies. The specialized agencies are contributing financially to several of these mutually agreed and supporting projects.

- 28. To secure the maximum use of the demand for photographic and exhibition material, the budget of the photographic services has been strengthened by $18,000 through a redeployment of finances. A replica photo library in Geneva has greatly increased the speed of delivery for European countries and it is intended to conduct similar experiments in Asia and Latin America.
- 29. Television programmes will continue to be provided when commissioned. The majority are paid for by commercial or government-controlled stations. Most important meetings of the United Nations are now being covered by television. While the United States and Canada still furnish the greatest demand and most of the revenue for television material, requests for programmes and inquiries about them have been received in 1959 from fifteen European countries. Programmes are also being carried regularly in seven Latin American countries and in Japan. This development is illustrative of the rapid increase in the number of television stations outside the North American continent—a 60 per cent increase since 1957. To assist in meeting the developing demand from overseas for television and other visual services, visual officers will be posted in the field and Headquarters staff will be deployed as necessary.
- 30. The suggestion of the Committee of Experts that the provision of a television studio and other facilities at Headquarters should be delayed (A/3928, para. 264) is proving unrealistic. The Committee's opinion was based on the principle that since the demand for television services was from North America, such facilities would not cater for the requirements of a majority of Member States. It must be pointed out, however, that it is mainly owing to the support from North America that the television services have been able to expand to meet the new demands upon them and that this continued support will help the United Nations to meet the increasing demands which are now arising and must continue to arise on a world-wide scale. For economical production, central facilities are necessary wherever the demand for programme material may originate. The revenue derived from these services rose from $45,000 in 1956 to $175,000 in 1958, with an additional increase anticipated in 1959. Present facilities for the current development needs of this programme are quite inadequate. Working space is cramped and technical equipment is compressed into small areas, which renders operating conditions difficult and in some cases unsafe. A relocation of these facilities and services through the development of the studio area already built under the original Headquarters plans is therefore considered a necessity. However, plans to amalgamate the Films and Television Services at present located at opposite ends of the Headquarters building cannot be properly implemented until this relocation is effected. Moreover, the cost of the relocation of these facilities will, over a period of time, be to a large extent offset by revenues accruing from the visual programmes produced.

IV. MAINTENANCE OF EFFECTIVE HEADQUARTERS SERVICES

- 31. In its resolution 1335 (XIII), the Assembly specifically provided that the strengthening of the operations of the information centres should not impair the present facilities for the representatives of the media of mass communications. These involve, primarily, liaison and coverage for press, radio, television, films and photographs. They are being maintained at their present levels, the importance of which is illustrated by the fact that at least 90 per cent of the news printed about the United Nations comes from accredited correspondents. It is anticipated that the number of accredited press and radio correspondents will increase in 1959 and 1960, with a corresponding increase in the demand for services and facilities. In the case of radio, this will also mean additional facilities for the transmission of news dispatches by radio correspondents to their countries.
- 32. Coverage of United Nations activities by United Nations press officers not only provides an essential service to the mass media but also forms the essential working basis of much of the information programme of OPI as a whole, both at Headquarters and in the field. Other essential Headquarters services will also be continued, for example, United Nations direct news broadcasts are being continued in thirty languages; at present arrangements are in effect for their relay by some fifty Member States.
- 33. The Headquarters publications programme will continue to take into full account the demand for sales items for revenue-producing purposes. Basic publications, including the United Nations Yearbook and Everyman's United Nations, are being continued. If funds permit, editions of the latter will also be produced in French and Spanish. As regards the three Reviews, since the balance of opinion in the Fifth Committee, as reported by the Rapporteur, inclined "in favour of the existing arrangements, at least as regards frequency of publication", it is proposed to continue monthly publication but to modify the contents to increase the usefulness of the magazines as "working tools" for those actively engaged in writing, speaking and teaching about international affairs.
- 34. Full service is also being maintained for non-governmental organizations (NGO) and educational contacts at Headquarters—NGO facilities at Headquarters, NGO briefings, the document service—and the present staff involved in these arrangements is being continued.
- 35. Other Headquarters services, the Visitors Service and the Sales and Circulation Service, are financed from revenue. It is not considered that the Visitors Service (which incorporates the Public Inquiries Unit) requires any change from its present line of organization and management. In the case of the Sales and Circulation Service, the policies and practices obtaining rest on a basis broader than purely OPI's responsibilities and interests. A review of this operation, in which the special interests of other substantive departments involved will be taken fully into account, is being conducted under the auspices of the Chairman of the Publications Board.

⁴ Official Records of the General Assembly, Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 55, A/4062, para. 23.

V. Organizational changes to strengthen field operations

- 36. To strengthen field operations further manpower and funds are being transferred from Headquarters to the information centres. During 1959 additional officers will be transferred or posted for varying periods to the centres in Geneva, Washington, Rangoon, Santiago, Mexico City, Teheran, Manila, and Beirut. Nine of these officers will be engaged in collaboration with local services in the radio and visual field. Also, $251,500 has been allocated from production funds to the field for local and regional production. Of this amount, $59,000 is for radio production, $110,000 for television, photographic and film production; $75,000 for publications and $7,500 for photographic and visual aids. (This compares with a total of $161,000 spent in 1958 for these purposes.)
- 37. Direct contact between the centres and Headquarters is being increased. In March 1959, the annual meeting of directors of information centres, which had previously been held on a limited geographical basis and, for budgetary reasons, mostly away from Headquarters, was held for the first time at Headquarters with all centre directors participating. In addition to consultations with senior officers of the Headquarters Secretariat, the directors were also able to attend the meetings of the Consultative Committee on Public Information. It is hoped to hold such directors' meetings at Headquarters every second year. In addition, each centre would be visited by a senior OPI officer from Headquarters at least once in two years. As recommended by the Committee of Experts, a policy for a more systematic rotation of senior centre personnel is being put into effect. It provides that, as a rule, directors of centres should not remain at a post longer than four years; all those who are already beyond that period of time come under the transfer plans for 1959 and 1960.
- 38. With a view to improving the operation of the centres, along lines suggested by the Committee of Experts, consideration is being given to providing reference library facilities at centres where these do not yet exist. With the aid of the Headquarters Library staff, a study is being undertaken of reference aids designed to meet the particular needs of information centres.
- 39. In considering measures to strengthen the centres it must be borne in mind that since 1953. while the number of Member States of the United Nations has grown from sixty to eighty-two, the number of information centres exclusive of the ones in Geneva, ECAFE and ECLA, have grown only from twenty to twenty-four. Existing centres have had to serve new Members in their vicinity, often without corresponding resources to meet the increased workload. Consideration will have to be given to further deployment of staff and money for strengthening centres and opening new ones. The pattern of development must provide for a balanced geographical distribution and must take into account those places where existing offices are still trying to service areas too large for their resources. Against that background must also be judged proposals for new centres which have been made by Member States to the Secretariat or to the General Assembly in debate. At present, proposals for centres have been made by Afghanistan, Austria, El Salvador, Libya, Morocco, Poland, Tunisia and Turkey. Approval has already been given by the - General Assembly for a centre in Burma which was opened in 1959.

- 40. Practical arrangements have also been initiated for a closer working relationship with the information departments of the specialized agencies. The Consultative Committee on Public Information of the United Nations and the Specialized Agencies, at its meetings from 16 to 19 March 1959, discussed this question in the light of General Assembly resolution 1335 (XIII). The Committee's recommendations provide a practical basis for a more effective pooling of facilities and services in giving greater publicity in all media to economic, social and human rights activities of the United Nations family. Other recommendations for closer co-ordination concerned co-operation in sales and distribution arrangements including the exchange of information on sales agents, the issuance of joint catalogues and the exchange of mailing lists
- 41. The Consultative Committee also approved proposals for a further integration of operations of the United Nations and the specialized agencies in the area of films, television, filmstrips and still photographs. They provided that the United Nations Visua Services Board, formerly the United Nations Film Board, would undertake a number of joint activities in the visual field. The Administrative Committee or Co-ordination at its meeting in May 1959 considered that the activities of the Board should be increased, in being understood that the necessary administrative and financial arrangements would be worked out or an ad hoc basis among the organizations taking part in those activities.
- 42. Consultations have been undertaken with the Technical Assistance Board (TAB) to plan the use of common services in the field to the greatest possible extent. This is in accord with the recommendation of the Committee of Experts. The new centre at Rangoor and the office which was reopened at Djakarta wil share premises and will have closer working relations with TAB in each capital. The centre at Athens is acting as a technical assistance office and the possibility of similar arrangements in Latin America and elsewhere is currently being investigated. However, these consultations and practical experience both show that the existence of a TAB, UNICEF or other United Nations office in a city does not mean that that office can carry out all or any public information functions beyond its own mandate. The possibilities vary according to different circumstances and are limited. They may depend on the individual suitability for information work of officers, the nature of whose qualifications must be dictated by their primary duties. In the circumstances, it may also be difficult for OPI to exercise the necessary direction over their assignments and movements.
- 43. Measures have also been taken to strengther co-operation with non-governmental organizations through the information centres in Geneva and Washington.

VI. STRENGTHENING OF FIELD PROGRAMMES

44. The organizational arrangements described will enable stronger initiatives to be taken in the field for local production of material suitable for dissemination in the various areas. Necessarily, it will take some time to put the programme into effect, but some measures are already being taken to increase local production.

- 45. The Geneva Office will be charged with new egional production initiatives among which will be he voicing of some language news services presently elayed from Headquarters. Amongst others aproached, the Italian Government has agreed in rinciple to grant Italian short-wave facilities for this surpose and discussions on the technical level are low in progress towards implementing this decision. Production from Paris will also be further developed. n Asia, All-India Radio has established within its wn organization a special unit which, in conjunction vith the United Nations regional radio officer, will produce United Nations Headquarters materials as vell as other United Nations programmes of local nitiative, adapted to the regional idiom. The possivilities of radio production in Latin America are being xplored along lines similar to those in India.
- 46. In addition, a series of regional projects is being indertaken in which combined teams of radio and risual reporters visit certain areas to cover regional activities, in co-operation with specialized agencies and national media organizations. These teams, under arrangements worked out with Governments, collect naterial and produce programmes designed primarily o be accepted in the areas concerned. This regional overage will also replenish the rather depleted reources of the radio and visual libraries at Head-quarters. The first of these teams left United Nations Headquarters for Africa on 1 April 1959; the second eam left for Central America on 15 May 1959. Plans are now in progress for a third team to cover South-East Asia early in 1960.
- 47. A greater proportion of the Headquarters publications budget is being made available to the centres or local production, adaptation and initiation of publications: $75,000 out of a total OPI budget of $200,000 in 1959, as compared with $50,000 in 1958. From $20,000 to $25,000 of this amount is intended o finance originally written or regionally adapted pamphlets in the field, including the payment of special service contract fees to outside writers working under the centre director's supervision.

VII. ORGANIZATION AND BUDGET

Manning table

- 48. The pattern of organization established for 1959 is reflected in annex I. This will be revised in the course of 1960 to provide for a further consolidation within the Radio and Visual Services Division. Three present subdivisions—Film Services, Television Services, and Photographic and Exhibition Services—will then be re-grouped into one section under a single over-all direction. The organizational pattern of the Division will thereafter consist of Radio Services; Visual Services, and Operations and Facilities Services.
- 49. The possibility is also foreseen that the adminstration of the Sales and Circulation Section might be transferred to the Chairman of the Publications Board. Such a transfer from OPI of responsibility for the sale of publications might require reconsideration of the organizational placement of several posts in the present distribution unit of the Sales and Circulation Section which performs combined distribution services or both the Sales Section and other OPI units. In so ar as these "marginal" posts are at present provided out of revenue-producing activities, a decision to attribute them for organizational purposes to the OPI establishment or other appropriate services, while - resulting in an increase in the establishment, would simultaneously reduce the expenses charged against the income of the sale of publications and would, therefore, not result in any net increase of staff costs.

- 50. The handling at Headquarters of administrative and financial matters relating to information centres has been transferred from the OPI Executive Office to Field Operations Service on an experimental basis. This realignment of administrative channels is to be combined with the introduction of simplified and improved procedures in the administrative and financial control of information centres and offices which should reduce considerably the administrative workload on directors of information centres in line with the recommendation of the Committee of Experts.
- 51. The manning table structure in effect in 1959 is shown in annex 2. It provides 168 Professional posts, of which 120 will operate out of the Headquarters establishment and forty-eight are assigned to information centre manning tables. Postings to the field on a temporary basis will be made from the Headquarters establishment as required. Posts established on other manning tables to provide the information services of the Geneva Office and of ECLA and ECAFE are also reflected in this annex.
- 52. By way of illustrating the trend in the flexible use of Professional staff over a period, there is attached as annex 3 a comparative table indicating the redeployment of staff among media at Headquarters. It will be observed that there has been a progressive diversion of Professional staff since 1953 from media services to information centres and other needs in the field. This trend has been further developed in 1959 to give effect to the proposals outlined in the present report in implementation of the General Assembly resolution. For the additional strengthening of services to the field, fifteen posts formerly part of External and Specialized Agencies Services, the Press and Publications Division and of the former Special Services Division have been incorporated in the newly established External Relations Division.
- 53. The Office of Public Information is required to provide staff for special information services of an ad hoc nature at short notice. In the recent past it has met this need on behalf of the United Nations Emergency Force, the Suez Canal Clearance Operation, the United Nations Observation Group in Lebanon, the Mission in Jordan, and the two United Nations International Scientific Conferences on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy. Most recently it has lent the services of three officers to assist with the work connected with the World Refugee Year and additional officers for the Foreign Ministers' Conference. It must be expected that similar demands will continue to arise in the future.
- 54. In order to be in a position to service the present demands, while at the same time retaining the flexibility necessary to the development of additional services in the field as outlined in the present report, resort will be made increasingly to the outposting of Headquarters staff for varying projects in support of country and regional programmes developed in cooperation with information centres. During 1959, a total of sixteen Professional officers will have been posted from the Headquarters establishment for varying periods of time.
- 55. Added to the demands now to be met by OPI will be the undoubted necessity in coming years of staffing more information centres, for which there is already a demand. In addition to the development of joint staffing projects with TAB and other offices in the field, the maximum flexibility in the use of existing staff strength will have to be applied if the stabilization policy proposed by the Secretary-General is to be achieved for a reasonable period. This factor has been taken into account in the course of the review just completed.

Budget

- 56. An examination has been made of the budgetary aspects of the OPI operation not only bearing in mind the General Assembly's concern that within existing resources larger amounts should be made available for improved field services, but also against the background of past proposals made in the General Assembly that the total resources allocated to public information activities should be kept within a fixed and predetermined limit.
- 57. Reference has been made in paragraph 14 of the present report to the factor of "uncontrollable" costs in the context of the above considerations. Over recent - years, despite some decrease in the number of stat assigned to OPI, actual expenditures for staff havincreased owing to the following factors: cumulative annual increments for staff, several cost of living in creases, progressive increases in common staff costs a Headquarters and at information centres. Similarly because of rising prices and increases in other costs of supplies and services, operational costs have risen, by a most conservative estimate, by 10 per cent. The admission of new Members since 1955 and, finally the incorporation into the budget of television expenses, not previously budgeted, have called for special allocations of operational funds.

- 58. The foregoing "uncontrollable" costs and othe special expenditures have increased the cost of main taining the same level of work programmes over the 1955-1959 period, on a conservative estimate, by $600,000. When viewed in the light of this position it is the Secretary-General's opinion that the policy of budget stabilization as now recommended by him rather than a fixed ceiling, would properly and realistically serve the mandate of the General Assembly for a controlled development of the information programme at the lowest possible cost.

DOCUMENT A/C.5/790

Statement by the Acting Head of the Office of Public Information at the 725th meeting of the Fifth Committee

[Original text: English]
[21 October 1959]

- 1. Perhaps the shortest way to proceed will be to answer first some of the direct questions put by certain representatives and to interpolate simultaneously some less direct but general questions raised by others.
- 2. The first question raised by the representative of Australia at the 723rd meeting was whether a policy of stabilization based on retaining the present staff level would be likely to result in increasing costs if costs, prices and wages continue to increase on the same basis as they have done in the last four years. Given his premises, the answer would be in the affirmative. There would continue to be, for example, such increases in costs as within-grade increments and cost-of-living allowances. But the stabilization policy proposed by the Secretary-General in paragraph 18 of his report [A/4122] would obviously result in a restrictive budgetary approach to the development of the public information programme under the mandate of maximum effectiveness at the lowest possible cost.
- 3. The second question referred to the proposal by the representative of the Soviet Union for a ceiling of 4.5 million [A/C.5/L.573] and the suggestion by the United Kingdom representative of a ceiling of $5 million for a two-year period. The latter had asked at the 722nd meeting if these ceilings could be implemented without a reduction in either Professional or General Service staff. The answer would be in the negative in the case of $4.5 million and a qualified negative in the case of a $5 million ceiling. There is a relation between operational funds and staff. Without operational funds staff cannot be economically retained to operate. Approximately 70 per cent of the whole OPI budget is related to staff costs and in these circumstances any such reductions would necessarily bring reductions in staff.
- 4. The representative of Australia has also requested some indication of what reductions might be made in the programmes and services of OPI, should either a $4.5 million or a $5 million ceiling be imposed. The imposition of a $4.5 million ceiling would require a reduction of over $600,000 in the budget for 1960 proposed by the Secretary-General. The imposition of a $5 million ceiling would require a reduction of $138,000 in the 1960 budget and, if applied for a twoyear period as suggested by the United Kingdom representative would call for an additional reduction in 1961 because of the "uncontrollable" costs to which the Secretary-General's report referred [A/4122, paras. 14, 57 and 58]. In either case substantial reductions in the present OPI professional staff and in existing programmes would have to be made.
- 5. The Secretary-General,—in his report to the Assembly, and in the budget estimates for 1960 [A/4110], has already indicated what he believes to be a rational and restricted approach in the development of the various media programmes and services in line with the wishes expressed by the General Assembly in resolution 1335 (XIII) concerning a programme of maximum effectiveness at the lowest possible cost. The - Secretary-General, in the introduction to his report before the Assembly, has further stated that the measures he has reported upon are considered to be the most practical steps at present feasible in the light of experience towards developing the programmes and services rendered by the OPI in the directions sought in the foregoing resolution. The Secretary-General, has further drawn attention, in the introduction to his report, to his own responsibility as reaffirmed in the resolution adopted last year for making available objective and factual information concerning the United Nations to all the peoples of the world.

- 6. In his approach to the whole of this subject, which has been of much concern to the General Assembly as it has also been and remains to the Secretary-General, the Secretary-General has adhered closely and vigorously to his expressed intention before the Fifth Committee to act upon many of the excellent recommendations in paragraph 227 of the report of the Committee of Experts on United Nations' Public Information [A/3928] in the light of the basic guiding principles of the OPI programmes as interpreted in the statement before this Committee at the thirteenth session [682nd meeting]. The Committee will recognize that in applying himself to this purpose not only the basic resolutions and the Expert Committee's report have been the yardstick under which this question has been the subject of full and careful examination and action, but also the views expressed in the course of the debate at the thirteenth session in the Fifth Committee. It has been rightly interpreted by some speakers in the debate that extension of the intentions expressed by the Secretary-General in his report will be progressively reflected in the patterns of organiza-tion and programmes of the OPI and that the report reflects the initial steps taken in the desired direction.
- 7. It might be helpful at this point to clarify many of the questions raised in the course of the present debate and to give some of the background to the first measures adopted in furtherance of the objectives sought both by the General Assembly and by the Secretary-General.
- 8. Several speakers have expressed their preference for some of the patterns of administrative organization recommended for consideration by the Expert Committee. In particular, the comments have referred to the proposal that there should be established a bureau of planning and co-ordination to bear the main responsibility for planning and implementing the policy of the OPI. The Secretary-General indicated to the Fifth Committee at the thirteenth session that the objectives mutually sought would not in his judgement be served more effectively by such a structure, but he believed that the highly important planning and co-ordinating activity should remain basically in the hands of the Under-Secretary of the Office using the appropriate staff resources available to him in making the complex and diversified judgements involved. In the course of the subsequent examination made, nothing, after the most careful consideration of all of the elements involved, has served in practical terms to suggest to the Secretary-General that the objectives sought would be better served by a change in the structure he has advocated. However, this does not imply that many of the suggestions of a different pattern made by the Expert Committee as well as by some members of the Fifth Committee are not in the Secretary-General's judgement valid or to be lightly passed over. For instance, in the present organization of the newly created External Relations Division, officers have been deployed on a functional rather than on a regional basis as a necessary first step. It is the intention to move gradually towards the establishment of regional desks. The assignment of responsibilities to these cannot in all its detail necessarily follow the exact proposals suggested by the Expert Committee. The deployment and training of staff for the operation and the shift of certain duties which over a period of years have created an expected form of service to clients in all parts of the world will be the more effective for gradual change related to studied needs. The concept itself calls both for the redeployment of staff members not only on the basis of their representative character as coming from the major geographical areas, but also necessarily as recommended by the Expert Committee itself to the availability of such staff members with basic field experience of Information Centre operations. Staff members have already been gradually reassigned from outside areas into this new Division in order to begin to form the pattern of the regional approach, and the experience and training of these area specialist staff as they take up their duties is used within the Division on the work as a whole. It remains only to move towards an arrangement by which the officers concerned will be able to work to an even fuller extent on the problems and services of centres with which they are most familiar as area specialists.

- 9. It must be stated, however, that in working in the direction sought the question of the number of staff involved both as regards the seniority of level, geographical representation, and substantive knowledge must be related as time proceeds to the load of work entailed and to the necessary periodic rotation of posts between Headquarters and the field, advocated by both the Expert Committee and by the Secretary-General and by considerations of sound administration, all of which factors it is essential to take into account if the various mandates of the General Assembly are not to be ignored.
- 10. Before passing to a further subject it will be opportune to reply at this point to the question on the movement of an officer of the External Relations Division to the Washington Information Centre. Members of the Committee will note from paragraph 230 of the Expert Committee's report that it recommended that responsibility for liaison with United States NGO's and such international NGO's as have their headquarters in the United States should be shared by the Headquarters operational unit with the Washington Information Centre. The single Information Officer at Professional level stationed in Washington has been unable to meet the increasing demands for services from non-governmental organizations and educators. It was deemed advisable, in line with the Expert Committee's own opinion, to meet the increasing demands for such services which could not be adequately dealt with by the single officer present.

- 11. An officer who normally dealt with educators at New York was transferred to the Washington Centre to work in this field. Almost his first task on the new assignment was to attend the International Conference of the World Confederation of Teaching Professions and to arrange for twenty visiting educators from Africa to detail their requirements for United Nations materials, and to come to United Nations Headquarters for discussions with other divisions and departments. The World Confederation of Teaching Professions is the international hub of school teachers in most parts of Africa, Asia and Europe and regular liaison with that organization provides more effective contact with teachers at a professional level than would be possible at any other single point. There are other organizations requiring services from the Washington Centre which nationally or internationally provide a greater audience as the result of one officer's work than would be the case if he were operating in the same field from United Nations Headquarters. The experiment seems already to have been justified after only a few months of operations.
- 12. Reference has also been made to the fact that the post of Director at the London and Geneva Information Centres had been vacant for one year and that the Director of the Paris Centre had frequently, been absent on mission during that time without replacement. The implication was that the Centres concerned can therefore operate always with one post less. The experience has been to the contrary. The additional load thrown on other staff members has not been in the best interests of the service. At two centres extra professional help has had to be employed. Although it is clear that for a short period of time a Centre may improvise and use the momentum of past direction, it is also clear that in the three cases cited it would not be possible for the Centres to continue to meet essential demands if they are not brought up to full strength.
- 13. It will be proper in the context of the reply to the question of the representative of Australia to refer also to another facet involving budgetary and programming considerations which has held the attention of this Committee during the course of the debate. This question is that of the establishment of additional information centres. It is of course a hope shared by the Secretary-General equally with the Fifth Committee that there be an increase both in the number and in the geographical distribution of such centres. The Secretary-General has referred to this matter in paragraphs 39 and 42 of his report. Apart from the requests made before this Committee in the current debate that additional centres should be set up in Cuba, El Salvador and Peru, such suggested needs are also pending before OPI from suggestions which have reached the OPI either now or in the recent past from Austria, Libya, Morocco, Poland, Tunisia and Turkey—a total of nine. It can be assumed that, further, such suggestions will develop from emerging States and others. It is hoped that to an increasing extent information centres may be shared and combined with the activities of other United Nations offices in the interests of economy. It is the belief of OPI that by some juxtapositions of this sort it will be possible to achieve this objective. As the Secretary-General has reported, progress has already been made in this direction and there are several other situations which appear to offer prospects of achieving the desired objective in other areas in the near future. But the Committee will appreciate that such opportunities are limited. TAB and other agencies cannot in all cases place additional workloads on their field staff and in some cases such staff is not suitable professionally or otherwise for information purposes. Where arrangements do prove feasible, there must also be some assurance of continuity as concerning the non-OPI personnel involved in the post and other such factors dealing with assignments and movements.

- 14. But the establishment of a new centre requires resources not only of professional manpower but of supporting services both at Headquarters and in the field. It is difficult under the most favourable circumstances to consider a cost of less than $20,000 to $25,000 per annum for such a centre's costs in the field proper, and support of the centre must necessarily involve spiralling costs at Headquarters even though its servicing is on the most modest basis consistent with efficiency and the purpose for which it is set up. The Fifth Committee would not itself conceive of a situation in which, with the establishment of each new information centre, Headquarters services pruned and geared to its new techniques should be divested of further resources for servicing minimal needs. Such an expanding process would in fact so jeopardize the centre's work as to threaten its raison d'être and effectiveness. By the means previously referred to it has been the expectation of OPI that an additional three centres spread geographically could be established and serviced within the budgetary estimates submitted to the Fifth Committee. It must be anticipated that resources for additional centres will have to be considered eventually in the context of budgetary realities.
- 15. In this regard, also, I might refer to the suggestion made at the 723rd meeting by the representative of Colombia for providing an itinerant liaison officer to work with NGO's in Latin American countries. Such a step has in fact been carefully considered in principle and as a matter of budgetary feasibility not only for the Latin American region but also for Asia, the Middle East and Africa. While recognizing the value that could accrue from such closer relationships, it is clear that even more essential services to NGO's would in a broad sense flow from stronger regional patterns developed within the External Relations Division at Headquarters so that more material in Spanish and Portuguese and material of particular interest to NGO's in the region may be provided. Furthermore, increased emphasis has been placed on the role of the information centres to maintain close contact with NGO's at the local level. The question therefore has been under study and will remain under still closer study following the suggestion now made before the Fifth Committee. At this stage of our consideration of the matter, in the context of the proposal made for its provision in Latin America, it seems that a post devoted to regional materials for South American countries from Headquarters would provide a fuller service, and consequently information centres in the region would be able to maintain more effective liaison with non-governmental organizations.
- 16. Finally, in the context not only of the programme of work but also of the staffing pattern long recognized by the Assembly and more recently by the Expert Committee as valid with respect to these particular and similar centres in more developed areas, it has been suggested that substantial curtailment both of staff and of work programmes would enable more to be done to establish centres and meet the needs of many less developed areas which are now inadequately served by information centres. The Secretary-General is of course closely concerned as is the Fifth Committee with the need for such additional centres. It is clear, however, that most careful consideration must be given in over-all United Nation interests to the degree to which the modest servicing of the needs of the public in developed countries should be met. Increasing awareness of the problems confronting the United Nations has been evidenced over the years especially with regard to technical assistance and social activities. The mass media in all of the main fields of Press, radio and television have become increasingly seized of this problem. The Economic and Social Council has consistently advocated that its work should be more widely publicized by United Nations information services. The OPI does not attempt to perform functions of the mass media in this field nor does it seek to exceed its terms of reference. Indeed, the history of its functioning is one of necessity constantly and on almost a daily basis to reject services requested of it because of its inability to meet demands. The provisions of basic material is frequently not sufficient. The assistance of OPI officers is sought in wider fields. But the bare minimum injection of assistance and stimulation, particularly where such assistance is accompanied by the accrual of revenue, is mandatory, and is not to be ignored despite the fact that the most careful control must be and is exercised to keep within the principles and practical possibilities recommended by the Fifth Committee. It need hardly be added that some concentration on this important field, which is productive in its results of a great deal of the main support for the funds necessary to carry out the technical assistance and practical social projects of the United Nations in the field, must be regarded as a highly important element of OPI functions.

- 17. The debate in the Committee has touched upon the question of the radio programmes with particular reference to the validity or usefulness of the shortwave broadcasts.
- 18. Roughly speaking, United Nations broadcasts are divided into two categories. The first concerns what the Secretary-General in his statement to the Fifth Committee on 13 November 1958 [682nd meeting! described as "the presentation of facts regarding problems facing the United Nations and regarding the treatment of those problems within the United Nations or through its actions". The second category deals with that area of information, aimed at spreading a better understanding of the purposes of the United Nations, in which, for maximum effectiveness Public Information activities need to adjust themselves to the national idioms of various "target" areas.
- 19. Some speakers have advocated the cessation of short-wave broadcasts where they are not relayed under specific arrangements by Member and non-Member States. The policy which has been followed and endorsed in the past by the Assembly has been that such broadcasts have been conducted in the five languages of the permanent members of the Security Council and on a provisional basis only in the language of other countries where matters relating to such State have been seized of by the General Assembly or one of its principal organs. The languages in which these unrelayed factual news broadcasts are at present conducted, other than the languages of the five permanent members, are Arabic and Hungarian. In interpreting the sense of the debate in the Fifth Committee at the thirteenth session on the subject of these short-wave broadcasts, it appeared and a study of the summary records confirmed, that the consensus of opinion was in favour of the past policies of the Assembly and of the Secretary-General being continued. Both the distinguished representatives of the United Kingdom and the Netherlands have expressed the belief that such programmes should be based upon listener research. The degree to which listener research can, or should, be related to United Nations Public Information activities in the field of radio, raises questions of not only a practical nature but also, in at least one important respect, of principle. Determining the extent to which listener research might be applicable to unrelayed broadcasts, it is necessary to bear in mind what the Secretary-General described at the 682nd meeting as the principle of the "universality of information", with the responsibility that this places upon United Nations Radio of making "an effort to reach all parts of the world on as equal a basis as possible" with information of "factual accuracy and objectivity". The cost of these broadcasts in all languages is approximately $95,000. About $25,000 of this sum covers the cost of the broadcasts in non-official languages.

- 20. The continuation of these broadcasts, therefore, is a matter of policy and principle. It is a question upon which differences of opinion have been expressed within both the Expert Committee and the Fifth Committee. Guidance to the Secretary-General in addition to his own interpretation of the responsibilities placed upon him for the widest possible dissemination of information within reasonable budgetary limitations might well be considered. The programmes have been included in both the 1959 and 1960 estimates. In view of the conflict of opinion, the Committee might wish to make its position more definite.
- 21. While on the subject of radio broadcasts reference should be made to the possible need, in face of any large reduction in budgetary proposals, to curtail the universal support painstakingly built up over the years for the presentation of United Nations information through this medium. These radio programmes are important also in the area of service on as wide as possible a basis to less developed areas. Apart from the 55 Member States who receive and rebroadcast daily and weekly news broadcasts in 25 languages, feature and documentary programmes of the United Nations are rebroadcast in 31 languages through arrangements made with 93 Member States, nonmember States and territories. Their acceptability to the Member States participating seems therefore to be demonstrated apart from regular information received from the OPI to this effect from a majority cross-section of the customer stations. The OPI has been fully conscious of some of the inherent weakness attaching to the centralized production of programmes of an interpretative or thematic nature notwithstanding that the Expert Committee considered them to be valuable and recommended their continuation. It is in the context of these suggestions of the Expert Committee that the OPI is concentrating strongly on attempting to assure to the United Nations equal coverage by the stimulation of local production also. In the execution of this programme, in particular, OPI has kept in mind the value and necessity of bringing economic, social, technical assistance and specialized agency activities constantly before listeners. The continuation of these programmes at their present level in the 1960 budget is planned in the hope that the im-

- pact of the relay of these broadcasts, which have proved acceptable to the listener stations, will not be lost while an assessment is made and acted upon of the extent to which similar programmes will be regularly produced by local stations. It is felt that as and when this is achieved, the investment built up in this highly important field of communication would have been justified and direct programmes can be reduced. To this end the various radio officers posted in the field are establishing contacts and work relations with all those engaged in the preparation and dissemination of radio materials in their areas to assure, on the one hand, that broadcasts can be tied to the fullest possible degree to listener taste of specific audiences, while on the other hand increasing the possibilities and stimulating the opportunities for the production by such stations of the broadcast programmes themselves.
- 22. I can assure the representative of Afghanistan that the creation of an Information Office in Kabul has not led to the discontinuance of United Nations broadcasts in Pushtu and Duri for Afghanistan. One of the main purposes of the creation of the regional office in question was to improve United Nations broadcasts for Afghanistan, both in terms of quality and quantity.
- 23. For several years now, United Nations Radio Services, operating from Headquarters, has been beaming, at the request of Afghanistan, a ten-minute news programme in Duri daily during General Assembly sessions and weekly in inter-Assembly periods. Radio Kabul has advised us that these programmes have been transcribed by the Bakhtar (official) News Agency, for dissemination among the Afghan newspapers and for incorporation into Radio Kabul's own news programmes.
- 24. The transfer of the Afghan staff member of United Nations Radio Services to assist in the establishment of an Information Centre jointly with TAB facilities has inter alia been designed to continue and strengthen these radio services.
- 25. By arrangement with Afghan authorities United Nations news continues to be fed to Kabul from New York daily, over the same transmitters which have been in use during the previous years. As in previous years, this news is monitored in Kabul for redissemination and is revoiced locally over Radio Kabul's transmitters, thus reaching Afghan radio listeners directly for the first time.
- 26. It may be added that similar transmission methods are now in use for the Burmese and Tagalog news programmes, both—like the Afghan programme—being prepared and voiced regionally on the basis of news material fed in English from Headquarters. In addition feature and thematic programmes are similarly locally prepared and voiced in New Delhi, the Federation of Malaya, Athens, Jakarta, Yugoslavia and Ceylon and also in the Philippines and Afghanistan.
- 27. In the field of features and documentaries also, the Afghan staff member was transferred to Kabul for the express purpose of making United Nations Radio output fit more closely with the needs and interests of Afghanistan. No reduction whatsoever is contemplated in the number of programmes in Pushtu and Duri. In past years, at Radio Kabul's own request, the United Nations Radio Services provided Afghanistan with one fifteen-minute transcribed feature a week, alternating equally between Duri and Pushtu. Last year, at the instance of the Afghan delegation, the output was creased to twenty-six fifteen-minute programmes in ruri and thirty-two in Pushtu.

- 28. The United Nations Information Officer in labul is under instructions to maintain this number transcribed programmes, with the added benefit they can achieve by being produced in closer contact ith Afghan authorities in the local idiom and with the larger supply of talent locally available.
- 29. There remain some questions upon which less pecific answers have been called for but some requests or enlightenment made and I would suggest that these e left over for a later intervention. I might add, howver, in reply to a question asked by the representative I India [723rd meeting] that as part of the recomnended decentralization of radio programmes, arrangements were made, during 1959, to have some broadcasts, which had hitherto been prepared in New York, originate from Geneva instead, in order to ensure better technical reception. One Service so decentralized was in the Arabic language. This Service now originates in Geneva and is fed by line to Rome where it is picked up for short-wave broadcast by the transmitters of the Italian State Radio. This arrangement necessitated splitting the staff of the Arabic Section of United Nations Radio, one staff member remaining at Headquarters for coverage of Headquarters activities (which he feeds to Geneva for its incorporation into its Arabic bulletin) and the other posted to Geneva for the coverage of activities at the European Headquarters of the United Nations and for writing and voicing the Arabic broadcasts.

Statement by the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions at the 726th meeting of the Fifth Committee

[Original: English] [22 October 1959]

- 1. I will try to reply to the two questions asked by he representative of Indonesia at the 724th meeting, which in fact are one question. I think that the representative will find that my reply will answer the two arts of the one question.
- 2. For several years, the Advisory Committee uggested that expenditure on public information hould be reduced and requested the Secretariat, rhich is also the body which formulates the public iformation programme, to develop a system of priorities according to which expenditures might be conrolled. As this approach did not prove successful—he Secretariat, in fact, did not come forward with a ystem of priorities and it has been very difficult for he Advisory Committee to see eye to eye with the office of Public Information in regard to priorities—he Advisory Committee recommended a new approach, that is, one of pure budgetary limitation. In 956, the Committee suggested a limit of $4.5 million is a target to be attained in 1959.
- 3. The representative of Indonesia stated at the 24th meeting that the idea of limitation had been in he minds of the Advisory Committee for a long time. The Fifth Committee also endorsed this general pproach.
- 4. In 1957, the Secretary-General said that, even rith no increase in the level of activity, it was not nly not possible to move towards the $4.5 million arget, but even difficult to hold to the current level. The Secretary-General did not, however, explore the cossibility of the curtailment of the activities. It is cossible that the Secretary-General did not do that recause he felt that the Member States themselves are not prepared to accept any curtailment. I qualify he words "Member States". You realize, Mr. Chairan and gentlemen, that among those of the eighty-wo delegations that have spoken, it is very rare that ne finds two statements which are really completely lentical. There are several views in this Committee, nd that is natural because the OPI is a department shose activities have repercussions not only on the

In these circumstances, the Advisory Committee recommended that the only way to achieve further progress on this question was to undertake a comprehensive survey of the entire information work of the Organization, to explore ways and means by which an effective information programme could be implemented at minimal cost. An expert committee had been set as the result of this recommendation [resolution 1177 (XII)].

5. The Expert Committee studied the question in technical side of communication, of mass information media and so forth, but also political implications.

- 5. The Expert Committee studied the question in detail and submitted its report to the thirteenth session [A/3928]. The Fifth Committee had an exhaustive discussion of this report at that session and, as a result, the General Assembly adopted the well-known resolution 1335 (XIII). By that resolution the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to take certain action, to which reference is made in the Advisory Committee's report [A/4170, para. 49].
- 6. It will be seen that the Advisory Committee was not asked to perform any specific tasks except, naturally, to comment on the financial implications of the measures taken by the Secretary-General—and I underline those words "measures taken by the Secretary-General". The Advisory Committee was not given a mandate or any authority to look into those steps, but only to comment on the financial implications of the measures taken by the Secretary-General, and this is exactly what the Advisory Committee has done in paragraphs 49 to 60 of its report.
- 7. In saying this, I am not implying any criticism of the Fifth Committee. I hope no one will misunderstand. I do not mean to say that the Fifth Committee should have asked the Advisory Committee to do the work which was done by the Expert Committee on Information. On the contrary, I think that the Fifth Committee was right because this is a very delicate subject. There is not only the mechanical side, the technical side of information; there are the political implications. Therefore, it was right that the Fifth Committee should have elected a committee from among its own members.

⁵ Ibid., Tenth Session, Supplement No. 7, para. 96.

8. The steps taken or proposed by the Secretary-General are essentially within the present financial structure of these activities. In other words, those steps do not contribute to a reduction of expenditure, nor do they result in an immediate substantial increase. The implications of the budgetary policy enunciated by the Secretary-General are analysed by the Advisory Committee in paragraphs 52 to 54 of its report. The Advisory Committee did not feel that under the terms of General Assembly resolution 1335 (XIII) it would have been appropriate for it to go further. In paragrap 50 of its report the Advisory Committee has explaine the scope of its action in this matter and then specific ally suggests that "the General Assembly will doubless consider in detail those aspects of the Secretary General's report which concern the programmati content of these activities", because on that we hav nothing to say.

9. I hope that my reply satisfies the two question put to me by the representative of Indonesia.

Statement by the Secretary-General at the 727th meeting of the Fifth Committee

- 1. I regret that other duties have made it impossible for me to attend personally the discussions of the Fifth Committee regarding OPI. However, I have studied the records, and thus have been able to follow the debate and take note of the views expressed.
- 2. I would wish to remind the Committee of the time-table. After the lengthy studies by the Committee of Experts and the long debate in this Committee, the decision was reached late in 1958—only ten months ago. As pointed out by the representative of Cuba among others, the decision taken left it largely in the hands of the Secretary-General, with the guidance provided by the General Assembly and the report of the Committee of Experts [A/3928] to work ahead in the direction indicated, as endorsed by him. This, obviously, meant that after the decision I had to go over the ground all over again in order to define such plans and arrangements as in the light of experience would be most conducive to further the established aims
- 3. In my report to the General Assembly [A/4122] the stages of this study and the methods used have been indicated. They led to results fairly late in spring 1959. The report before this Committee was written only a few months later. Therefore, it is obviously entirely premature to assess "results" at the present stage. I ask those representatives who have expressed disappointment with the positive steps taken so far to remember this.
- 4. The way in which the matter was left at the end of 1958 means that we are still at an extremely early stage of the implementation of the decision. I should also mention that the long period during which the problem of public information activities had been under examination had had an effect on the work of OPI which also had had to be overcome before the work of building and re-building could begin with full efficiency.
- 5. I wish in this context to pay a special tribute to the Acting Under-Secretary, Mr. Katzin, who was given the difficult and exacting task facing us in the first stages because of the extraordinary ability he had shown in other similar work. He was carefully chosen for this task, and during his temporary assignment he has in all respects lived up to my expectation, as based on previous experience.
- 6. Ever since the death of Mr. Bokhari less than a year ago I have been canvassing possibilities of finding a candidate for the post of Under-Secretary in charge

- of OPI. With the pattern of geographical distributio I wish to maintain, the post should in the first instanc be filled by a Latin American, combining rich adminis trative experience, a broad cultural outlook and solic experience in the specific professional fields covered by OPI. In spite of the kind assistance rendered by various Governments I have so far found it difficult to achieve what I have in mind, but I firmly hope that this will soon be possible. The Committee will excus me for pointing out that a man with the qualification just mentioned, commands what I might call such thigh market value that he is not likely to accept the post offered unless, for idealistic reasons, he is willing to accept the economic sacrifice which would follow with the salary level this Organization maintains.
- 7. As I touch on the question of geographical dis tribution, I may say a word also about the staffing a the senior level of the OPI. Let me draw your atten tion to three things. First, that a period of transition is also a period in which the best qualified men are needed in the key posts, irrespective of nationality Secondly, such men cannot and should not be pu aside for reasons of geographical distribution. The Charter itself states in Article 101 that the "para mount consideration" in the employment of staff shal be the necessity of securing the highest standards o efficiency and competence, while "due regard" shal be given to geographical distribution. Thirdly, as already pointed out by the Acting Under-Secretary the Organization neither could nor should disregard merits of service and, therefore, will necessarily always show a lag in the distribution of posts among caree civil servants, owing to recruitment policies pursued at a much earlier stage of development of the Secre
- 8. As a matter of course the policy should move in the direction of the widest possible representation of traditions and areas within the OPI, but I cannot push such a policy at the exclusion of other and, as the situation now is, essential values. The Secretariat, like any administration, is a body subject to an organic development of which one should not expect fruit at the time of buds, or another kind of tree than the one planted.
- 9. As to the practical issues which have been raised in the debate, I can, regarding the suggestion that ar advisory committee be established, refer to my state ments in the Fifth Committee at the thirteenth sessior of the General Assembly [682nd meeting]. The value of such an advisory arrangement would to a very large extent depend on the representatives which Governments would be willing to send. Even in the suggested consultant capacity the work they undertake will be very time-consuming, as this is not a field in which it is possible to arrive at helpful views without careful prior studies and a thorough acquaintance with current problems. Without such thorough knowledge it is impossible to apply here experiences gathered in other fields of public relations activities.

10. With regard to the idea of a ceiling on expenditure, I have on various occasions expressed my scepticism about the value of artificially imposed limitations. The line that seems most promising to me is the one I have presented in this year's report to the General Assembly; the ceiling formula is deceptive, unless based on an agreement also regarding what OPI activities should be reduced. I fear that the wide unanimity on the desirability of keeping down the costs for OPI has a counterpart in a divergency of views which would become apparent if the Fifth Committee were to try and establish by what sacrifices the reductions should be achieved. The alternative to the establishment of a ceiling is, of course, an addition to the restrictive rules, which I have proposed, of a direct reduction in next year's expenditure, for example, to the level indicated in the United Kingdom representative's proposal [722nd meeting], combined with a clear understanding regarding what activities would then be eliminated or reduced.

11. I wish to end this short intervention by an appeal to the Committee. Permit the very able men who are in charge of OPI to do their best for the purposes set by the General Assembly, and, to that end, grant them the time needed for serious and solid work, taking fully into account their wide first-hand knowledge of the facts.

[Original: English]
[25 November 1959]

- 1. At the 722nd to 732nd meetings, held from 16 to 29 October 1959, the Fifth Committee considered agenda item 52 on the public information activities of the United Nations. The basic documents before the Committee were a report of the Secretary-General (A/4122) setting forth the progress made in implementing General Assembly resolution 1335 (XIII) of 13 December 1958, and a report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions [A/4170, paras. 49 to 60] on the budgetary aspects of the action taken by the Secretary-General under that resolution.
- 2. An exhaustive review of the Committee's discussion is not attempted. What follows in paragraphs 3 to 69 below is intended as a synopsis of the main points to which the Committee addressed itself and of the main currents of opinion. The views of individual delegations are given in the records of the meetings.

Scope of the Secretary-General's report

3. It was generally recognized that the report of the Secretary-General should be read as an interim and provisional submission. The task of fulfilling the provisions of General Assembly resolution 1335 (XIII) and reorganizing the Office of Public Information (OPI) was not one to be completed even between two sessions of the Assembly, and still less—since the report had been written in June 1959—within a shorter period. Changes of policy and of organization were still in progress; their effectiveness had yet to be tested and appraised. Discussion in the Committee would none the less enable the Secretary-General to learn the views of Member States on what had already been done or was in prospect, so that future planning could be adapted to their desires.

Level of expenditure for information activities

4. As in past years, differing opinions were heard on the appropriate level of expenditure and, during the first phase of the discussion, they were reflected broadly in three main approaches to the problem.

- 5. The first approach was based largely on the proposition that the Secretary-General's budgetary policy, as outlined in the report (A/4122, paras, 18)and 56-58), far from stabilizing expenditure in the sense intended by the Committee of Experts on United Nations Public Information [A/3928, para. 278, would have a contrary effect. It would stabilize the practice of progressively enlarging the information budget. The recommendations of the Expert Committee had been endorsed in 1958 by the General Assembly, and, had the provisions of resolution 1335 (XIII) been observed, the Secretary-General would have been able to fulfil at much lower cost the purposes defined in its preamble. The resolution laid stress on "the maximum of effectiveness" and "the lowest possible cost", but the Secretary-General's report was silent on the former consideration and afforded little satisfaction on the latter. A level of $4.5 million6 for the total costs of public information had been endorsed by the Advisory Committee and the Fifth Committee in 1956. More recently, the Committee of Experts had termed that level a reasonable basis for planning. Instead, the Member States had witnessed the curve of expenditure steadily rising to the level of $5.14 million foreseen for 1960. In 1956, the Advisory Committee had spoken of attaining the target of $4.5 million by means of "gradual and progressive adjustments".7
- 6. The time had therefore come to apply to the information activities a limit of expenditure that would represent: (a) a reasonable proportion of the total budget in relation to the cost of other activities to which the Organization was committed under the Charter; and (b) a true stabilization expressed in financial terms and covering a stated term of years. To that end, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics submitted at the 723rd meeting the following draft resolution (A/C.5/L.573):

"The General Assembly,

- "Recalling its resolution 595 (VI) of 4 February 1952, indicating the need for greater participation by Governments of States Members of the United Nations and non-governmental agencies of information in the programme for informing the peoples of the world about the United Nations and its activities,
- "Referring to the recommendation approved by the Fifth Committee and included in its report to the General Assembly at its eleventh session (A/3550) concerning the stabilization of total expenditure on the public information activities of the United Nations,
- "Bearing in mind the recommendations contained in the report of the Committee of Experts of United Nations Public Information (A/3928) of 28 August 1958,

"Decides:

- "1. To limit total expenditure on the public information activities of the United Nations (excluding the Visitors Service and the Sales and Circulation Section) in the years 1960 and 1961 to a level not exceeding a maximum of $4.5 million a year;
- "2. To recommend that the Secretary-General take the necessary measures arising out of operative paragraph 1 of the present resolution."
- 7. The second approach, though based on a substantial measure of support for the Secretary-General's proposals looked to the possibility of a modest budgetary reduction for the two years 1960 and 1961, or, as alternatively suggested by some delegations, for 1960 alone. In adopting resolution 1335 (XIII) the General Assembly had requested the Secretary-General to give priority to the use of all media of information that would ensure maximum effectiveness at the lowest possible cost. For his part, the Secretary-General had laid emphasis in his report on three criteria: how much money to spend on information activities; how best to organize the information services; and how to ensure the effectiveness of the programme.
- 8. As regards the first of these criteria, the Secretary-General had rightly observed that the "level of expenditure... must be one that the Member States are prepared to support" (A/4122, para. 13). Concurrently, however, delegations would wish to apply the criterion of "lowest possible cost" and, since the salary bill accounted for some 70 per cent of expenditure, to inquire into the staffing increases that had occurred since 1958; they might thus determine whether or not such increases were at variance with the desire which the Committee had long expressed for a reduction in expenditure.
- 9. The Secretary-General had proposed (ibid., paras. 18, and 56-58) a policy of budgetary stabilization which, though set within somewhat narrow limits, might be accepted subject to two reservations:
- (a) The policy should be judged by reference to the views or recommendations of the Committee of Experts and the Advisory Committee. In 1958, the former body had considered the level of $4.5 million

- as a reasonable basis for planning (A/3928, para. 278). That figure might be deemed unrealistic, the Fifth Committee having, since the "base year" of 1956, concurred in successive budget increases. But in 1959 the Advisory Committee had inclined (A/4170, para. 53) to a level of expenditure lower than that proposed by the Secretary-General;
- (b) It would also be advisable to look closely at the area of "uncontrollable" costs. The Advisory Committee had indicated (ibid., para. 54) that, in order to compensate for extraneous factors of increase, a stricter policy might have been applied to such costs, and particularly to the local costs.
- 10. In view of those considerations, the Committee might wish to recommend a slight reduction in the authorized level of expenditure, though without looking beyond the year 1961, and possibly even 1960. So far, with the process of reorganization still under way, only a progress report had been submitted. The situation would undoubtedly be clearer by the Assembly's fifteenth session, when the Secretary-General would be in a position to present an integrated programme with well-defined targets and priorities.
- 11. At the 722nd meeting, the United Kingdom representative suggested, though without making a formal proposal, that for the years 1960 and 1961, efforts should be made to hold expenditure within a limit of $5 million, that figure being exclusive of distributed conference service costs (estimated for 1960 at $288,000) and net of income (estimated for 1960 at $210,000). The suggested figure was therefore comparable to the target figure of $4.5 million recommended in 1956.
- 12. The views of delegations which gave support to the policy of budget stabilization defined by the Secretary-General (A/4122, para. 18) represented the third approach to the problem. The Secretary-General had done his utmost to achieve the objectives set out in General Assembly resolution 1335 (XIII). He had been requested to give effect, not to all the recommendations of the Expert Committee, but only to those which, in his opinion, would further the objectives in question. That was a distinction which the Advisory Committee and some representatives appeared not to have remarked. The latter Committee had envisaged an effective information programme costing less than $5.14 million (A/4170, para. 53). But maximum effectiveness could not be achieved on those terms, for many services and activities which most Member States considered essential would have to be discontinued.
- 13. The choice lay between a system of ceilings as proposed in the USSR draft resolution and a policy of budget stabilization in the form outlined by the Secretary-General (A/4122, para. 18). The Committee should no longer defer a decision. Over the years, OPI had been subjected to administrative reviews and surveys of an intensity and frequency not experienced by any other branch of the Secretariat. Despite that fact, it was now proposed to revert to the ceiling system. Maximum effectiveness would not be achieved by such measures at a time when, on the one hand, the membership of the United Nations, the demands for information services, and staff and supply costs were increasing, and, on the other, the resources at the Secretary-Generals' disposal were equivalent, in view of the rise in costs, to those authorized in 1955. It was not clear how, in those circumstances, a preetermined ceiling or budget cuts additional to those ready recommended by the Advisory Committee 1/4170, para. 55) would conduce to an effective rogramme.

14. Delegations which endorsed the Secretary-Genal's policy of budget stabilization included those of olombia, Cuba, Peru and Venezuela, which subitted jointly, at the 724th meeting, the following aft resolution (A/C.5/L.576):

"The General Assembly,

- "Noting with appreciation the Secretary-General's report on public information activities of the United Nations (A/4122), dated 16 June 1959,
- "Recalling General Assembly resolutions 13 (I) of 13 February 1946 and 595 (VI) of 4 February 1952, setting forth the basic policy of the United Nations in its public information activities,
- "Recalling General Assembly resolution 1086 (XI) of 21 December 1956 relating to the establishment of information centres,
- "1. Requests the Secretary-General to give special attention to the importance of adequate regional representation in the policy-making and programme-planning levels of the Office of Public Information, in the structure and staffing of the External Relations Division, and in the distribution of information centres;
- "2. Requests the Secretary-General to establish new information centres by a further decentralization of Headquarters staff and services;
- "3. Requests Member States concerned to give all possible facilities for the establishment of the new centres mentioned and to co-operate fully and actively in efforts to promote wider public understanding of the aims and activities of the United Nations;
- "4. Expresses the hope that media of information and publicity, non-governmental organizations and educational institutions in all Member States will continue and expand their commendable activities on behalf of a greater understanding of the United Nations by fuller dissemination of accurate and objective information;
- "5. Recalls General Assembly resolution 13 (I) of 13 February 1946 which envisaged the need for an advisory body in the field of public information as well as paragraph 8 of the Secretary-General's statement (A/C.5/764) of 13 November 1958 which reiterates the above, and requests the Secretary-General to appoint an honorary United Nations Advisory Committee on Public Information composed of ten Member States from the main cultural and geographic areas to meet periodically at United Nations Headquarters with the Secretary-General to review and discuss information policies and programmes in order to ensure maximum effectiveness at minimum cost;
- "6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the above-mentioned Advisory Committee with necessary services and facilities including an officer of sufficient seniority and competence from the Office of Public Information to function as Secretary of the Committee;
- "7. Requests the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to co-operate closely with the above-mentioned Committee;

- "8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the above-mentioned recommendations, together with the comments of the Advisory Committee on Public Information, to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session."
- 15. Outlining his attitude towards a ceiling on expenditure (A/C.5/792; para. 10) the Secretary-General said that at previous sessions of the Committee he had expressed doubts regarding the value of artificially imposed limitations. It would be deceptive to set a ceiling on information expenditure unless there was at the same time agreement on what particular activities should in consequence be cut. As the possibility of such an agreement seemed remote, an alternative method of keeping down the cost of the programme would be to add to the restrictive policy he had himself defined (A/4122, para. 18) a direct reduction in 1960 expenditure to the level suggested by the United Kingdom representative (para. 11 above), combined with a clear understanding as to the activities which would then be eliminated or curtailed.
- 16. The representative of the Secretary-General, replying to questions put by delegations, pointed out (A/C.5/790, A/C.5/793) that, were either a $4.5 million or a $5 million ceiling to be imposed, substantial reductions in the professional establishment and in the programmes would have to be made. The United Kingdom suggestion would entail a reduction of $138,000 in 1960, but, in view of the impact of "uncontrollable" costs, that figure would be higher in 1961. Existing arrangements in respect of staff and activities would necessarily have to be reviewed, and, while it was not possible, in advance of such a review, to indicate the precise distribution of a hypothetical cut, reductions, under a $5 million ceiling, would probably be applied to section 6, chapter I: section 13 chapter IV; and section 14, chapter IV. Reductions would reflect such decisions as to discontinue the unrelayed broadcasts, to substitute a quarterly for the monthly United Nations Review, and to defer recruitment in certain cases. Alternatively, it was likely that any cut would be applied generally across items in sections 13, chapter IV, with the exception of the contractual engineering staff.
- 17. The Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions emphasized (A/C.5/791, para. 6) that the General Assembly had in 1958 assigned to that Committee a single, specific task: to comment on the financial implications of action to be taken by the Secretary-General in accordance with resolution 1335 (XIII). In its report on the 1960 budget estimates, the Advisory Committee had accordingly analysed (A/4170, paras. 52-54) the implications of the budgetary policy which the Secretary-General had formulated. That policy did not give rise either to a reduction in expenditure or to an immediate increase of any magnitude. But, inasmuch as the scope of the Advisory Committee's function had in that instance been strictly defined by the Assembly, the Committee had confined its examination to the financial aspects of the Secretary-General's approach including related administrative and organizational matters. In that context, the Advisory Committee had expressed the view, first, that a policy of stabilization, even such as the one proposed by the Secretary-General, could well have been related to a lower level of expenditure, and, secondly, that the Secretary-General's proposal in effect represented, at best, a possible slowing down of further increases of expenditure on public information activities. In any case, the substance of the information activities and the content of the programmes had come under review at the hands of an expert committee whose composition had been representative of Member States, and the findings of that committee had been fully discussed by the Fifth Committee in 1958. The latter would now doubtless consider in detail those aspects of the Secretary-General's report which concerned the programme content of the activities in question.

Priorities in the information programme

- 18. On the subject of priorities, to which there were numerous references throughout the discussion, the Chairman of the Advisory Committee traced the position taken by that Committee. For many years prior to 1956, the Advisory Committee had suggested that the cost of public information should be reduced and, to that end, had asked the Secretariat, as the organ responsible for designing the programme, to develop a system of priorities whereby the expenditure might be controlled. But as the Secretariat had not found it possible to work out such a system, the Advisory Committee had in 1956 recommended a new approach, in the form of a budget limit of $4.5 million to be attained in 1959. In the following year, however, the Secretary-General had pointed out that even without any increase in the volume of activities he was finding difficulty in keeping to the current level of expenditure and a fortiori in moving towards the lower target of $4.5 million. In view of that situation there had been no alternative before the Advisory Committee but to recommend in 1957 that there should be an exhaustive survey of the entire programme.
- 19. The representative of the Secretary-General assured the Committee that OPI was conscious of the imperative need to apply priorities. So heavy was the demand for services that the Office had in any event to enforce priorities on a continuous, day-today basis. It was, moreover, to be noted that in 1958 the Secretary-General had requested the guidance of the Committee of Experts on the possible introduction of a priority system as an instrument of economy (A/3928, annex I, para. 7). The Committee had formed the opinion that priorities should not be regarded purely in the context of economy or be interpreted as a preference of one medium, one subject or one area to another. The Committee had then concluded that it would be possible, through a more restrictive and selective treatment of subjects, to apply an expenditure ceiling of $4.5 million as previously suggested by the Advisory Committee. Although the Secretary-General still adhered to the opinion, which he had expressed at the previous session (682nd meeting), that he could not, on the basis of the Experts' over-simplified approach, adequately fulfil his responsibilities in the sphere of information, he did, of course, recognize that a system of priorities was of fundamental importance to the purposes stated in his latest report. The Fifth Committee had appeared to concur in 1958 in the Secretary-General's opinion since it had granted him discretion in giving effect to those of the recommendations of the Committee of Experts which would further the objectives set out in the preamble of General Assembly resolution 1335 (XIII)

The system of information centres

- 20. Of the many topics considered under the pr sent agenda item, none received closer attention that the system of information centres. Delegations offerenumerous suggestions or comments:
- (a) The network of centres was wholly inadequat as illustrated by the fact that since 1955 only for new centres had been opened, whereas the membe ship of the United Nations had increased in the san period from sixty to eighty-two States, with further additions impending. Nor was the geographical pa tern of the centres satisfactory. General Assembl resolution 1086 (XI) of 21 December 1956 had spoke of establishing centres on the basis of a regional an linguistic distribution and of providing for the need of new Member States. At present, however, thirtee of the twenty-seven centres were situated in techn cally developed countries and only twenty-six of fifty-seven Professional officers working in informatio centres were assigned to the less developed area There were only two centres in the entire continer of Africa and only four in Latin America, whi. Europe had ten centres. Furthermore, the territor covered by some centres was far too large in relatio to their budget or staffing resources; in other cases the areas served, though geographically adjacen were so disparate in language and culture that the could not effectively be served by a single centre, an particularly by one of small size.
- (b) As regards the manning of the centres, most delegations felt that a just balance should be sough between the extremes, which several speakers deplored of (i) staffing a centre exclusively with nationals of the country in which it was situated, and (ii) staffing it with officials not well versed in the language traditions and culture of the country to which the were assigned.
- (c) While it was generally agreed that it would be essential on budgetary, and desirable on administrative, grounds to draw largely on Headquarters for the manpower and funds with which to enlarge the net work of centres, care should be taken not to carriate process of decentralization to the point of impair in the vital Headquarters services, which would alway constitute the main source of information.
- (d) Some representatives saw insufficient justifica tion for maintaining centres in London, Paris and Washington, or for maintaining them on the presen scale. As regards the Paris Centre, information on th United Nations was being disseminated both by th United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultura Organization and by the Geneva Information Services while Washington was not only within easy distance c Headquarters, but also the capital of a country i which educational facilities were wide-spread and non governmental organizations extremely active. Although the demand for information had hitherto been greate in technically advanced countries where the media of information were highly developed, it was th function of OPI to take the initiative in stimulating through its network of centres, similar demand i other countries, including the Trust Territories.
- (e) Representatives welcomed the policy (A/4122 para. 37) already in force for a more systematic rota tion of senior centre personnel; it would undoubtedl result in a more dynamic approach to programming similar policy should also be applied as widely as ossible within Headquarters, through interchanges I staff between OPI and other departments or offices.

- 21. The representative of the Secretary-General aid that, as his report indicated, the Secretary-General as at one with the Fifth Committee in seeking ways nd means of increasing the number of information entres and improving their regional distribution. Sugestions had already been made for nine additional entres and further requests would doubtless be reeived. The estimates, as submitted by the Secretaryreneral, provided for the opening of three new centres 1 1960, but as the cost of maintaining a centre mounted to at least $20,000 to $25,000 a year, apart om the cost of supporting services at Headquarters, would be illusory to expect that more than three entres could be established without additional funds, r that Headquarters resources could be diverted at ill without impairing the central programmes and
- 22. It had also been suggested that more might be one for the less developed countries if staff and work rogrammes were scaled down in the larger centres erving the technically advanced areas. That proposion, though attractive at first glance, should be condered in a wider context. With specific objects in iew, the General Assembly had approved the staffing attern and work programmes of the larger centres, nd more recently the Committee of Experts had likerise endorsed them. It was a vital interest of the Inited Nations that an awareness of its activities nould spread among the general public, and to that nd the Economic and Social Council had constantly ressed for action that would make its work better nown. While OPI at Headquarters and the centres ever attempted to assume functions that belonged to ne mass media of information, it was required to timulate interest in the great economic and social rogrammes of the United Nations and to help in ecuring support for them. A considerable part of that esponsibility fell on the centres in large capital cities.

Organization of the Office of Public Information

- 23. Most delegations felt that the Secretary-Feneral's plan of organization, though departing at ome points from that recommended by the Committee of Experts, was calculated to improve the cordination of services at Headquarters and strengthen perations in the field. The Secretary-General had hade it clear in his report that the process of adjustment and change was still continuing, and it followed hat a final judgement on his reorganization of OPI ould not yet be attempted.
- 24. Much of the discussion had to do with the structure and functions of the External Relations Division f OPI. It was the opinion of some representatives at the Secretary-General's proposals failed to proide for a planning body of sufficient authority within ne Office, and that inadequate emphasis had been laced on the activities of the External Relations Division. In that respect, the Division differed radially from the Bureau of Planning and Co-ordination ecommended by the Expert Committee (A/3928, aras. 230-231). The Division had been organized on functional rather than a regional basis, and too little ttention had been paid to the needs of the undereveloped areas. It would be advisable to aim instead t a purely regional structure. The Division might

- comprise, for example, in addition to a Director and Deputy Director, four units covering the major regions of the world, with each unit manned by two Professional officers conversant with conditions and requirements in one of those regions. Such an organization would yield a saving of five Professional posts and, combined with similar arrangements in the service divisions, would strengthen the network of centres at no additional cost. It would also serve to accelerate the pace at which decentralization had so far proceeded.
- 25. The hope was also expressed that a broad interpretation would be given to the "further decentralization of Headquarters staff and services" mentioned in the four-Power draft resolution (A/C.5/L.576). A mere physical displacement of staff and services was not enough. The information centres should be enabled, by means of adequate resources and a reasonable degree of autonomy, to do really effective work, and be urged to seek out and exploit the available opportunities; in that way they would provide information of the type best suited to their area. That would represent the very antithesis of a routine function.
- 26. The representative of the Secretary-General explained that, although a functional rather than a regional pattern had been followed in the External Relations Division, the intention was to move gradually towards a system of regional desks. Too rapid a change would, however, disrupt the existing services since staff must not only be area specialists but have direct experience of information centre operations. The regional pattern had already been drawn, and as the reorganization proceeded, the selected officers would be in a position to give still closer attention to the needs of centres in the area of their competence.
- 27. It had rightly been assumed that the Secretary-General's proposals represented no more than initial steps in the direction set by the General Assembly, and while the Secretary-General adhered, as regards the possible establishment of a Bureau of Planning and Co-ordination, to the views he had expressed at the thirteenth session, he was still studying a number of other suggestions regarding organization made by the Committee of Experts and by representatives in the Fifth Committee.

Geographical distribution of the staff

28. Many speakers deplored the fact that an equitable geographical distribution of staff had not yet been achieved in OPI. None of the posts at the policymaking levels (Principal officer and above) was held by an Asian, African or Latin American staff member. Senior posts were filled preponderantly by staff belonging to a single language-group, which likewise accounted for the majority of the Professional category in OPI at Headquarters. It might perhaps be argued that what was important, in the matter of geographical distribution, was not isolated statistics pertaining to a single department or office but rather the situation in the Secretariat as a whole. However, given the fact that the information programme of the United Nations was addressed to all the peoples of the world and not to those of any particular region or culture, that programme, to be persuasive, ought surely to be the work of persons intimately acquainted with the traditions and culture of the different regions. In the case of OPI, technical rather than political reasons spoke in favour of a broader distribution of staff, at least in a regional sense.

29. At the 727th meeting the Secretary-General (A/C.5/792) said that while it was, of course, his policy to seek the widest possible representation of traditions and regions among the staff of OPI, he was not disposed to pursue such a policy at the expense of other values that were essential in present circumstances. Three points should be borne in mind. First, in a period of transition, key posts had to be filled by those best qualified, of whatever nationality. Secondly, it was not possible, and in any case it would not be appropriate in the terms of Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter, to put aside the most highly qualified members of the staff for reasons of geographical distribution. Thirdly, the Organization could not and should not disregard meritorious service. If, as a corollary, there was a lag in the geographical distribution of posts, that was due to the recruitment policy followed at a much earlier stage.

Press and publications

- 30. The Committee was unanimous in approving the Secretary-General's decision that the facilities at Headquarters for media representatives should be maintained at their present level. If, however, there was, as anticipated, an increase in the number of accredited correspondents, some addition to the facilities would have to be considered. Thought might also be given to the problem of improving the regional representation among the correspondents, most of whom represented publications or radio systems in highly developed areas.
- 31. On the subject of the OPI publications, the following were among the comments offered:
- (a) The proposed provision of $200,000 seemed low in relation to the total cost of information, and might perhaps be increased at the expense of less productive services. The distribution of the sum between Headquarters ($125,000) and the centres ($75,000) might also call for an adjustment in favour of the latter.
- (b) The distribution of publications in a multitude of languages, though undeniably useful, should not be pursued at the expense of direct contacts with working journalists.
- (c) It might be advantageous to substitute quarterly for monthly publication of the United Nations Review. The English edition, which so far had been little changed, was too high in price. It should be printed in a more economical format, and preferably on paper suited to air-mail transmission.
- (d) Annual editions of Everyman's United Nations should be issued and, funds permitting, Spanish versions both of that publication and of the United Nations Yearbook.
- 32. The representative of the Secretary-General explained that in the first nine months of 1959, 80 per cent of the total OPI printing budget (excluding the provision for the Review, the Yearbook and Everyman's United Nations) had been allotted for publications produced by, or on behalf of, the information centres. As regards the frequency of publication of the Review, on previous occasions the Secretary-General had himself suggested the possibility of quarterly issues. At its thirteenth session, however, the Fifth Committee had not concurred in such a change. Everyman's United Nations was a cumulative work published at intervals of two to three years. The sixth edition would I issued in English in November 1959, and in Frenc and Spanish early in 1960. It was hoped to produceditions in other languages, possibly with the collaboration of Member States.

Radio services

- 33. As regards the radio services, the Committee considered the problem of the unrelayed broadcast Support was given to the proposition that the Unitee Nations was entitled to count on the co-operation of all Member States in authorizing the relaying of it broadcasts. Some representatives suggested, howeve that listener research should be undertaken in order to determine the degree of effectiveness of the unrelayed broadcasts. If the findings were adverse, the broadcasts should be discontinued and the relate funds diverted to more productive uses.
- 34. It was argued, on the other hand, that a continuation of such broadcasts, which were expensive and reached relatively few listeners, could not in an event be justified. The Committee of Experts had expressed doubts regarding their effectiveness and had recommended that OPI should ascertain the desires of the Member States and their radio organizations is the matter (A/3928, paras. 85 and 260). The unrelayed broadcasts should therefore be replaced by appropriate arrangements for the use of the national or regions systems of Member States. The broadcasts would the better attuned to local needs and local condition
- 35. More generally, the suggestion was made that due weight should be given to the medium of broad casting in countries where the level of illiteracy is high OPI should therefore concentrate on providing assistance to national broadcasting systems. Several representatives also requested that the programmes no being broadcast or recorded for broadcasting in the countries should be increased in number.
- 36. The representative of the Secretary-General made the following, among other, points. The shor wave unrelayed broadcasts consisted of a factua presentation of problems facing the United Nation In the past, the General Assembly had approved the policy of making such broadcasts in the five language of the permanent members of the Security Counc and additionally (on a purely ad hoc basis) in th languages of other countries that were parties t questions before a main organ. The record of th discussion at the thirteenth session showed that th majority of the Committee had been in favour of continuing that policy, and provision for the programme had accordingly been maintained in the 196 estimates. It had been suggested that the criterion c listener research should be applied to the unrelaye broadcasts, but apart from practical difficulties, th suggestion raised certain questions of principle. Th "universality of information", to which the Secretary General adhered strictly, placed upon the Unite Nations the responsibility of ensuring that peoples i all parts of the world received, as far as possible on basis of absolute parity, information that was objective and factually accurate. But, in view of the diverger opinions expressed in the Committee of Experts an in the Fifth Committee, the latter might wish to tak a clearly defined position on the matter, for th guidance of the Secretary-General.
- 37. Other broadcasting activities would likewis be continued at the present level. It was hoped tha the volume of Headquarters production could eventually be reduced and, with that object in view, radio officers in the field were seeking to promote local production of programmes of an interpretative character adapted to national or regional idioms. Meanwhile, it would be unwise to discontinue the centralized production of programmes for, without careful preparatory work, the transition to locally produced material might be too abrupt and cause a loss of listener support. Evidence of that support was available: fifty-five Member States received and rebroadcast daily and weekly news broadcasts in twentyfive languages, while feature and documentary programmes were rebroadcast in thirty-one languages by arrangement with Member States, non-member States and territories.

Television services

- 38. Several delegations expressed satisfaction that the expanding demand for television material and other visual services was not confined to the North American continent; they took note in particular of the Secretary-General's statement (A/4122, para. 29) that fifteen countries in Europe had contributed to the demand, and that television programmes were carried regularly in seven Latin American countries and in Japan.
- 39. Opinions were, however, divided on the related question of the construction of a television studio. Representatives who concurred in the Secretary-General's view (ibid., para. 30) were satisfied that the project was a wise and necessary investment. Not only were adequate control facilities indispensable for the production of programmes, regardless of where they would be transmitted, but the revenue from the programmes would, in turn, largely offset the construction costs. The need was reflected in the number of countries requesting material, and there seemed to be little justification for disallowing or deferring an expenditure that would yield an ample return.
- 40. Other delegations, however, while agreeing that better facilities would have to be provided at some future time, considered that other more urgent projects qualified for prior financing. Television was still a medium of restricted scope, and the geographical area which it could serve was still disproportionately small in relation to the cost of the project. Furthermore, countries which, having television networks, would benefit were precisely those in which the media of mass communication were most highly developed. It was also argued that commercial concerns could be counted on to cover United Nations proceedings that were of public interest, and, further, that the commercial networks would eventually arrange for complete coverage at no cost to the Organization. On all those grounds it would be wise to defer construction of the studio.
- 41. The representative of the Secretary-General submitted that the arguments advanced against the expenditure were not convincing when weighed against the resulting benefits. The potential audience for the United Nations television programmes was increasing yearly, and it was merely a matter of time before television services were established on a world-wide basis. Moreover, the cost of the programmes, financed in large part out of revenue, would not be entirely lost but would yield some savings on the film programmes when OPI's activities in the two media were consolidated. Television was a fertile field for inter-agency collaboration in promoting knowledge of the economic and social work of the United Nations family and of the needs of the under-developed countries. Such countries would not, as some delegations had suggested, be excluded from the benefits; on the contrary, support would be stimulated for the programmes of technical assistance by a medium which had an exceptional impact on mass audiences.

Film services

- 42. Some delegations, while suggesting that the benefits derived from the film programme were not commensurate with its cost, felt that there was too little evidence on which to form an authoritative opinion. The Secretary-General's report did not indicate to what extent he had been able to give effect to the recommendations of the Committee of Experts.
- 43. Other speakers offered critical comment on the policy of OPI regarding the operation of film services. The Office was apparently aspiring to engage in large-scale film production in the "Hollywood" manner. In spite of the explicit recommendations of the Committee of Experts (A/3928, paras. 272-274) the film unit had produced during the year a ninety-minute documentary film entitled "Power among Men" at an outlay (exclusive of staff costs) of $150,000, which would most probably not be recouped. It seemed unwise to devote so large a proportion of funds to a single experiment that made a dubious appeal to the public at large, and entailed an unwarranted concentration of expenditure. It was, moreover, questionable whether a production of that type, however excellent, came within the Office's province.
- 44. One delegation considered that the whole film programme had been misconceived. Assurances should be given that production funds would be used exclusively for short documentary films on United Nations activities and for educational film scripts; and further that there would be close co-operation with the specialized agencies as well as with Governments, non-governmental organizations and private industry in producing information films.
- 45. The representative of the Secretary-General observed that it was presumably not necessary for him to assure the Committee that OPI did not aspire to emulate Hollywood. A glance at the budget would dispose of that idea. Other points of criticism were, however, more serious as they carried the suggestion that officers responsible for planning the policy of film production or for its technical execution showed no regard for the aims and requirements of the programme. That suggestion had no foundation in fact.
- 46. Paragraph 27 of the Secretary-General's report contained an explicit definition of the policy governing the work of the Film Services. The production of large-scale films did not come within the compass of that policy. "Power among Men", which had been internationally acclaimed and was a continuing source of revenue, had been started in 1958 before the Committee of Experts had issued its report. As an example, it was not a valid criterion for the appraisal of the present policy. That policy was reflected in the 1959-1960 work programme, the main items of which could be summarized as follows:
- (a) A series of short documentary films had been or would be produced, most of them in collaboration, substantive and financial, with interested specialized agencies. The series included four documentary films

- on the activities of the United Nations family of organizations in Asia, in connexion with which local production facilities would be utilized, if and as they were available.
- (b) For 1960 a sum of $90,000 had been earmarked for the production of films, comprising $35,000 for Headquarters and $55,000 for other areas.
- (c) It was intended to build up a film library adequate to the needs of the non-governmental organizations and other institutions; the library would also provide material for preparing television programmes.
- (d) It was further intended to continue the systematic planning of film production through the Visual Information Board, composed of representatives of the Secretariats of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies.
- 47. In film production, as in other fields, OPI had been urged, in the interest of economy, to rely on the co-operation of governmental and non-governmental organizations. It was therefore to be noted that, where films were concerned, OPI's production costs were in some cases lower than those incurred by external agencies. That was a consideration to which neither the Committee nor OPI could remain indifferent, and the matter was therefore being closely studied.

Establishment of an advisory body

- 48. The sponsors of the four-Power draft resolution (A/C.5/L.576) suggested that the establishment of an advisory body on public information, as proposed in paragraph 5 of their draft text, would: (a) ensure a better understanding of the Secretary-General's task; (b) provide a useful opportunity for discussion; and (c) lead to a greater effectiveness in the work of the Secretariat. In the sponsors' opinion, the proposal did no more than give effect to a recommendation already endorsed by the Secretary-General.9
- 49. There was considerable support for the principle of setting up consultative machinery in a form to be determined by the Fifth Committee. The work of an advisory body would relieve the Committee of the time-consuming task of attempting an annual examination of OPI activities. The proposal accorded moreover with a principle which the General Assembly had laid down in 1946 (resolution 13 (I) of 13 February 1946). Had that principle been applied, the Committee might have been spared the long series of debates that had taken place since that time.
- 50. It was suggested that the advisory body should initially be set up for a trial period of two years. Its terms of reference should be so defined as to obviate any possible overlapping of functions with those of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and they should include the limiting stipulation that advice would be tendered only at the request of the Secretary-General. The views of the advisory body would, of course, not be binding upon him.
- 51. A revision of the four-Power draft resolution (A/C.5/L.576/Rev.1), which was introduced at the 726th meeting of the Committee, contained the following amended text concerning the establishment of an advisory body:
 - "5. Recalls General Assembly resolution 13 (I) of 13 February 1946 which envisaged the need for
 - ⁹ Ibid., document A/3945, para. 17.

- an advisory body in the field of public information, and paragraph 17 of the report (A/3945) dated 16 October 1958, in which the Secretary-General refers to such a body, and invites the Secretary-General to appoint a United Nations Advisory Committee on Public Information composed of ten Member States from the main cultural and geographic areas to meet periodically at United Nations Head-quarters with the Secretary-General to review and discuss information policies and programmes in order to ensure maximum effectiveness at minimum cost."
- 52. At the 727th meeting, the Secretary-General defined his position on the four-Power proposal by referring to the statements be had made at the thirteenth session (682nd and 689th meetings). The value of the proposed arrangement would depend on the quality of the representative members whom Governments were prepared to send. The members would be serving in the consultative capacity of advisers to the Secretary-General. The work would make heavy demands on their time for, without a conscientious study of the documents and of the questions at issue, they would not be in a position to tender useful advice. It was a highly specialized field and the members could not rely solely on the practical experience, however, large, which they had gained in other parallel activities.
- 53. When the Committee came, at the 728th meeting, to a detailed consideration of the draft resolutions (see para. 70 below), the sponsors of the four-Power draft resolution (A/C.5/L.576/Rev.1) accepted an amendment proposed by the representative of India for the replacement in paragraph 5 of the word "Committee" by the word "Board" or other appropriate variant.
- 54. The second revision of that draft resolution (A/C.5/L.576/Rev.2) accordingly contained a paragraph concerning an advisory body which read as follows:
 - "6. Recalls General Assembly resolution 13 (I) of 13 February 1946 which envisaged the need for an advisory body in the field of public information, and paragraph 17 of the report (A/3945) dated 16 October 1958, in which the Secretary-General refers to such a body, and invites the Secretary-General to appoint a United Nations Advisory Board on Public Information composed of ten Member States representing the main cultural and geographic areas to meet periodically at United Nations Headquarters with the Secretary-General to discuss and consider information policies and programmes in order to ensure maximum effectiveness at minimum cost."
- 55. The United States representative entered several reservations to the revised proposal. The setting up of a board would tend to diminish the Secretary-General's responsibility. To whom would Member States address their criticism in the future? As constituted under the proposal, the board would inevitably have a political complexion. His delegation considered it preferable for the General Assembly to invite the Secretary-General to appoint a panel of qualified persons representative of the various geographical regions, which he would consult from time to time. Such consultations would not necessarily be held in New York, and might even be conducted by correspondence. The United States of America accord-igly submitted the following amendment (A/C.5/...578) to paragraph 6 of the revised draft resolution:

- "6. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint a panel of qualified persons representative of the various geographic areas and cultures of the world and to consult with members of that panel from time to time on United Nations information policies and programmes in order to ensure maximum effectiveness at minimum cost."
- 56. At the 730th and 731st meetings the following ral amendments were proposed to paragraph 6 of he four-Power draft resolution and the United States mendment thereto:
- (a) Four-Power draft resolution (A/C.5/L.576/lev.2)¹⁰
- (i) Ethiopia: to transpose the words "geographic" nd "cultural".
- (ii) Ethiopia: to delete the word "periodically" nd, in place thereof, to introduce the idea, suitably hrased, that meetings with the Secretary-General rould be held as and when the latter deemed them ecessary and useful.
- (iii) Japan: to replace the words "to meet periodially at United Nations Headquarters with the ecretary-General to discuss and consider" by the rords "and to consult with it whenever deemed ecessary on major".
- (iv) Japan: to delete the introductory clause, Recalls... refers to such a body, and"; the pararaph to open with the words "Invites the Secretary-General...".
- (v) Japan: to insert after the words "to appoint" he words "for a period of two years starting in 1960".
- (vi) Canada: to insert after the word "composed" he words "of suitably qualified representatives".
- (vii) Ukrainian SSR: to insert in the paragraph a tatement to the effect that the establishment of the Advisory Board would not entail any additional xpenditure.
- (viii) Ethiopia: to insert at the end of the paragraph he phrase: "The Board is authorized to formulate ts own rules, consistent with the policy defined in the resent resolution".
- (ix) Ethiopia: to provide for an uneven number of nembers of the Board, either nine or eleven.
- (b) United States amendment (A/C.5/L.578)
- (i) United Arab Republic: to insert after the word appoint" the words ", in consultation with Governments of Member States,".
- (ii) United Arab Republic: to insert the word main" before "cultures".

The United States representative accepted both submendments.

- 57. The form of the consultative machinery was urther considered during the second stage of the Comnittee's discussion, at the 729th to 731st meetings.
- 58. It was argued in support of the four-Power raft resolution that it afforded the Secretary-General practical method of enlisting the co-operation of

- Member States in the work of public information. States could doubtless be counted on to appoint to the Board representatives with the necessary qualifications. The Board members, familiar with the work of the United Nations and representing the main geographical areas of the world, could render assistance to the Secretary-General, especially in advising him on the needs of the areas they represented and on the programmes best fitted, in the light of available facilities, to those needs. In addition, the Board would be able to assist in appraising the information work being done by OPI throughout the world. An advisory body of the type envisaged by the four sponsors accorded with the recommendation of the Committee of Experts (A/3928, para. 280) in which the Secretary-General had concurred in 1958 (A/3945, para. 17).
- 59. Representatives favouring the United States amendment (A/C.5/L.578/Rev.1) based their support on the following reasoning. The panel of experts would be closer in nature and functions to the body proposed by the Secretary-General in 1958. It would be of a less formal character than the Advisory Board, and would not detract, as the latter might do, from the administrative responsibility of the Secretary-General. The United States amendment also offered the advantage of greater flexibility: it left to the Secretary-General the detailed arrangements concerning the number of panel members and the form and frequency of meetings.
- 60. According to a third view, adverse to both draft texts, it was difficult to trace a similarity between the proposed Advisory Board and the standing advisory group which the Committee of Experts and the Secretary-General had contemplated in 1958. The Board would be empowered to "discuss and consider" but not to submit recommendations or reports. It would be free to address itself to a seemingly unlimited number of topics that now came within the purview of the Fifth Committee and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions. The United States amendment, on the other hand, left to the Secretary-General the initiative for seeking advice, and though it was to be preferred on that ground, it failed, as did the four-Power text, to give a precise definition of the advisory function for which it provided.
- 61. Several speakers deplored the fact that cost estimates of the respective proposals had not been submitted, with the result that it had been claimed for each, on a conjectural basis, that it would be the less expensive of the two, or alternatively that it would cost nothing. Was it consistent for the Fifth Committee to dwell so long on the financial aspects of public information and so little on those of its own proposals?
- 62. When the vote was taken at the 731st meeting, the Committee had before it the text proposed by the delegations of Colombia, Cuba, Peru and Venezuela for operative paragraph 6 (A/C.5/L.576/Rev.3) and the United States amendment (A/C.5/L.578/Rev.1) to operative paragraph 6 of the four-Power draft resolution.¹¹ The United States amendment read as follows:
 - "Requests the Secretary-General to appoint in consultation with Governments of Member States

¹¹ At the 730th meeting Peru, one of the sponsors, accepted the United States amendment.

a panel of qualified persons representative of the various geographic areas and main cultures of the world and to consult with members of that panel from time to time on United Nations information policies and programmes in order to ensure maximum effectiveness at minimum cost."

63. As indicated in paragraph 78 below, the Committee decided in favour of the United States amendment.

Interne and fellowship programmes

- 64. As regards the operation of the two interne programmes and the fellowship (senior study) programme, reference was made to the importance of adhering to the recommendations of the Committee of Experts (A/3928, paras. 167-169) concerning: (a) an order of priority among the three programmes, and (b) criteria for the selection of candidates, preferably from the under-developed countries.
- 65. Some representatives were of the opinion that a term of eight weeks for the students' interne programme was inadequate; not even one Secretariat department could be thoroughly studied in that time. If budgetary reasons precluded an extension of the programme, it would be preferable to merge the three projects and provide, within the sum of $83,000, for interneships of nine months' duration, to be held by a smaller number of persons.
- 66. A suggestion was also put forward that, as regards the two interne programmes (students and civil servants), travel expenses should be borne by the United Nations so that persons of modest means would not be debarred.
- 67. The representative of the Secretary-General assured the Committee that, in selecting candidates and assigning priorities to the three programmes, OPI had followed closely the recommendations of the Committee of Experts. The fellowship programme had accordingly been enlarged, with increases both in the duration of the programme (increased from four to six weeks) and in the number of participants (increased from seven in 1958 to thirty-one in 1959).
- 68. Nominations for fellowships were made by a committee which, in addition to consulting the interested Governments, received recommendations from information centres of the United Nations and Resident Representatives of the Technical Assistance Board. A lower priority had of necessity to be given to the remaining programmes, both of which had been reduced in length (from six to four weeks) and in the number of participants. Preference was given in the three programmes to the under-developed countries.

Annual report on public information

69. Some speakers voiced their disappointment that the Secretary-General had not submitted, in accordance with a recommendation of the Committee of Experts (A/3928, para. 280) a "brief statement embodying an assessment of the previous year's work together with a plan of work for the following year". It was to be hoped that future reports would be more detailed and provide concrete information on the practical measures that might be taken and the savings, if any, to be anticipated. The suggestion was also made that the reports should include a detailed analysis of expenditure under various heads, such as radio, television, films and publications, the analysis to show all staff costs, local costs, and direct expenditure on services and supplies. For comparison, the analyses of preceding years should also be given. Other representatives, however, pointed out that the Secretary-General had in 1958 entered an express reservation (A/394: para. 17) to the proposal of the Committee of Experta Care should therefore be taken, when specifying the desired form of report, not to encroach upon his acministrative authority. The Secretary-General has tated his willingness to explain at any time the choice which for budgetary reasons he would inevitably have to make. But he had also rightly appealed to the Fift Committee to permit those in charge of OPI to detheir best for the purposes established by the General Assembly.

Action on the draft resolutions

- (ii) Oral amendment to insert in paragraph 3 the words "to the extent he finds possible" after the words "Headquarters staff and services."

The sponsors of the four-Power draft resolution accepted the amendments proposed by Pakistan.

- 75. The Committee considered at the 731st meeting the third revision of the four-Power draft resolution (A/C.5/L.576/Rev.3), the wording of which was identical with the second revised version (see para. 72 above), with the exception of operative paragraphs 2 and 3 which, as the result of the amendments submitted by the delegation of Pakistan, were redrafted as follows:
 - "2. Requests the Secretary-General to give continuing and special consideration to the importance of adequate regional representation in the Office of Public Information and in the distribution of information centres;

- (d) Afghanistan: in operative paragraph 3 to delete the clause "preferably... to the extent he finds possible" and to substitute the following words: "and to continue at the same time the Headquarters services required by the under-developed countries".

(e) United Arab Republic: to insert after operative paragraph 5 a new paragraph to read as follows:

"Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report on OPI to the General Assembly in every session outlines of the policy and programmes planned to be executed by OPI during the coming year with comments thereon;".

Report of the Fifth Committee

[Original text: English] [24 November 1959]

- 1. At its 747th meeting, held on 19 November 1959, the Fifth Committee considered, under agenda item 53:
- (a) The annual report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (A/4158);
- (b) The report on the fifth actuarial valuation of the Fund (A/4266).
- 2. The Committee noted that no action was called for by the two reports. Further, the Committee was informed that copies of the actuarial report had been forwarded to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in accordance with article XXXI of the regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, but that, since there were no proposals arising from the report and as it was primarily intended to be of assistance to the Expert Group on the Comprehensive Review of the Pension
- Fund, $\frac{1}{2}$ the Advisory Committee had no observations to make at this stage.
- 3. In the Fifth Committee, comments were made on the amount of the contributions of the organizations to the Fund in respect of associate participants, on the general investment policy, and on the eventual possibility of introducing such schemes as the variable annuity into the Pension Fund. It was assumed that the Expert Group, in its comprehensive review, would have regard to these points of the Fund's operation.

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

4. The Fifth Committee decided, without objection, to recommend to the General Assembly that it take note of the reports; and accordingly recommends the adoption of the following draft resolution:

(a) Geographical distribution of the staff: report of the Secretary-General

DOCUMENT A/C.5/784

Report of the Secretary-General

- 1. The Secretary-General presents the following formation concerning the geographical distribution the staff of the United Nations Secretariat in accordace with resolution 1294 (XIII) and the discussions the Fifth Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly.
- 2. The current geographical distribution of the staff shown in annex I (in tables 1 to 7) on the same basis in previous reports. The composition of the staff is town in relation to a "desirable range" of posts for ch Member State. Information is provided on pointments and other changes which took place in the period 1 September 1958 to 31 August 1959.
- 3. It will be recalled that Article 101, paragraph 3 the Charter of the United Nations provides that "The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible."

The Secretary-General's recruitment programme continues to be dedicated to seeking available individuals, citizens of Member States, who meet the qualifications of the Charter, and who have the particular training and experience required for the various functions assigned to the Secretariat.

4. The present report shows a continuing extension and balancing of geographical distribution, which the Secretary-General hopes may be carried even further in the future. Considered in relation to the recruitment possibilities which the budget affords, the geographical distribution which has been achieved constitutes, in the Secretary-General's opinion, substantial implementation of the intent of the Charter. In subsequent paragraphs, the geographical distribution of the staff is analysed in various ways in comparison with the "desirable ranges", in the hope that such comparisons will help the General Assembly in appraising the present situation. The Secretary-General offers these analyses as possibly useful tools for this purpose, but he recognizes that the questions involved cannot be dealt with solely in mathematical terms, nor wit mathematical precision.

5. The progressive development of geographical distribution in recent years may be seen in the followin table, which shows the position of Member States i relation to the desirable ranges in 1955 (just prior to the admission of a large number of new Members and in 1958 and 1959:

	Number of Me	mber States as at	31 August 1959
Above the desirable range	24*	26	25
Within the desirable range		37	38
With staff members, but below the desirable range	2	7	8
Total with staff members	53	70	71
With no staff members	6	11	11
Total, Member States	59*	81	82

^{*} Including Egypt and Syria as one.

- 6. During the last year, the number of Member State nationalities included in the staff increased from 70 to 71. Staff were recruited for the first time from two Members, the Federation of Malaya and the Ukrainian SSR. On the other hand, El Salvador, which previously had one staff member, fell into the group with none, which, with the addition of Guinea, again included 11 countries. Offers of employment have been made to the nationals of two countries in this group, Bulgaria and Romania, but replies had not been received by 31 August 1959.
- 7. The number of countries with some staff members, but below the desirable range, increased from 7 to 8. Spain, which had been in this group, was moved up to its desirable range, and two countries were raised from the "no-staff" group. Of the other 6 countries, staff members were increased for 3 (Italy, Japan, USSR), but not enough to bring them within the "desirable range". The other 3 (Hungary, Indonesia, Venezuela) were unchanged.
- 8. Countries within the "desirable range" increased from 37 to 38. Spain was added, but El Salvador dropped from this group. Belgium, Ireland and the United Kingdom, which had been above their desirable ranges, were brought within these limits, but Haiti and New Zealand moved above the top of their ranges.
- 9. The number of countries above the desirable ranges decreased from 26 to 25.
- 10. Over the four-year period, 1955 to 1959, during which 23 Members were admitted to the United Nations, the broadening of geographical distribution can be seen more clearly. In this period, the number of Member States with nationals on the staff increased by 18. The number of Members with staff members within or above the desirable ranges increased from 51 to 63.
- 11. In the recruitment of staff, the Secretary-General has continued to give the utmost attention to the improvement of geographic distribution, at all levels. In addition to frequent conferences with officials of the Governments which have disproportionately few or no nationals on the staff, several specific measures have been taken. In August 1958 and again in the spring of 1959, a list of current vacan-

- cies was distributed to the Governments concerned with a request for their co-operation in the propose of candidates who were suited to these particula posts. It is intended that this practice will be cor tinued at regular intervals. As a further step, it wa arranged that a senior member of the Office of Persor nel should visit several of the new Member States i the Far East, to discuss recruitment needs an methods of locating candidates in these countries Secretariat officials also visited capitals in Easter Europe with the purpose of furthering the recruitmen programme in this area. It is hoped that next year similar visits can be made to other parts of the world It should be noted that the recruitment efforts of th Office of Personnel are augmented substantially b the Executive Secretaries of the Regional Economi Commissions and their staffs, and by other officials c the Secretariat in the course of their travel on officia business and home leave.
- 12. The Secretary-General understands that, de spite the very co-operative attitude of Member State and their genuine interest in having their nationa participate in the work of the Secretariat, it is no always possible for a Member State, especially one c the newly independent countries, to make availabl trained and experienced personnel who are often i short supply in the country itself. This is undoubtedl a major factor in the small response to the Secretary General's requests for the nomination of candidates In certain cases, Governments have stated specificall that for the time being they are unable to spare peopl of the type and calibre required. While it is to b hoped and expected that this situation will change it is not the Secretary-General's intention to press for actions which would be considered detrimental b the countries concerned.
- 13. The Secretary-General believes that the statistics as they have been presented in the past, and a they are presented in annex I of the present pape may not portray the real situation as clearly an accurately as would be desirable. Because of thobvious need for considerable flexibility when relating geographic considerations to the staffing requirement of the Secretariat, specific "targets" or "quotas" for Member States have been avoided, and ranges have been used instead. Attention may, however, have becased on the maximum of each range, and thus give he impression that there are greater possibilities of ecruiting staff than the budget and manning table ctually permit. (To bring all Members to the maxinum, even if Members now above were reduced to hat figure, would require 300 additional posts.)

- 14. Moreover, in calculating desirable ranges, a umber of posts have been included which are not in act available for international recruitment of staff om Member States. The most important group umerically comprises the 138 posts at Headquarters t the principal level (G-5) of the General Service ategory, which is staffed almost entirely by persons romoted from lower levels of this locally recruited ategory, or occasionally by local recruitment in Iew York. It should be noted that all General Service taff at all other locations have always been omitted om the statistics, and the Headquarters staff in this ategory should logically be excluded also.
- 15. In order to present the actual situation with pmewhat greater precision, annex II indicates the umber of staff in relation to a range of posts comuted on the same basis as heretofore, but including nly posts at level P-1 and above. Countries are rouped, in this annex, by major geographical region. The groupings follow the classification used in the expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, except hat the countries of Europe are presented in two roups—Eastern and Western.

Region	Median of desirable ranges	Number of staff (P-1 and above)	Ratio of staff to median percentage
frica	27	36	133
sia and Far East	177	204	115
urope, Eastern	216	68	31
urope, Western	299	364	122
atin America	77	101	131
Iiddle East	24	41	171
forth America	388	295	76
Тотац	1,208	1,109	92

- 17. Staff members from each of these regions exceed he mid-point or median of the desirable ranges, xcept in the case of Eastern Europe and North merica, the deficiency being particularly notable in he case of Eastern Europe.
- 18. In view of the special interest in posts at higher evels the number of staff at the level of principal fficer (D-1) and above, and at the senior officer level P-5) is shown below for the same geographic regions:

Region D-	Staff at 1 and above	Staff at P-5 level
Africa	4	2
Asia and Far East	16	23
Europe, Eastern	10	11
Europe, Western	40	52
Latin America	4	10
Middle East	1	1
North America	30	40
Total	105	139

19. The number of staff from the more recent United Nations Members (16 Members admitted in 1955, 4 in 1956, 2 in 1957 and 1 in 1958) has been increasing steadily, as follows:

1956	1955
1957	1956	٠.
	1958

- By 31 August 1959, the number of staff from the new Members had reached 91, compared with a cumulative desirable range for these countries of 84 to 155. Recruitment in process should increase the number of staff from this group significantly before the end of the year.
- 20. Countries below the minimum of their desirable range of staff in the Professional category and above (annex II), as at 31 August 1959 were:

Deficiency of one post: Albania, Cambodia, El Salvador, Federation of Malaya, Guinea, Honduras, Hungary, Indonesia, Laos, Libya, Tunisia.

Deficiency of two to four posts: Bulgaria (2), Italy (3), Romania (3), Venezuela (3), Byelorussian SSR (4). Deficiency of more than five posts: Ukrainian SSR (16), USSR (92), USA (37).

Apart from the two largest contributors, the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and the Byelorussian SSR and the Ukrainian SSR, the aggregate deficiency for the other 15 countries below the minimum of their desirable range amounts to 22 posts. Although each case is important to the country concerned, and is so regarded by the Secretary-General, this part of the problem is well within manageable proportions and it should be possible to expect satisfactory results to be achieved in most instances in the reasonably near future.

21. In the case of the USSR, the Byelorussian SSR and the Ukrainian SSR, the Secretariat has been striving for a considerable period to recruit additional staff. Although sustained efforts have been made, with the assistance of the Governments and their delegations, the results have so far been rather limited. It appears that earlier joint efforts are now beginning to produce results, and it is hoped and expected that the steady progress will continue to gain momentum, and that the rate of recruitment of qualified nationals of these countries will accelerate substantially over the coming months.

- 3. In submitting the following information, the Secretary-General points out that it relates to staff in the Professional category and above, excluding staff in posts with special language requirements.

Definitions of dependency: report of the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [23 September 1959]

- 1. At its twelfth session the Fifth Committee condered a pattern of definitions of dependency for etermining entitlement to dependency allowances hich the Secretary-General had submitted as the sult of consultations at the administrative level mong the interested international secretariats.2
- ^{*}2. The development of new definitions of dependncy stemmed from a recommendation of the Salary eview Committee that a more restrictive definition f dependency, where cases of both husband and wife re in receipt of earned income, should come into force ot later than the date of introduction of the scheme f post adjustments and revised dependency allownces.3
- 3. It proved not to be practicable to apply the new efinitions of dependency by the date envisaged by ne Salary Review Committee and the Fifth Comnittee accordingly invited the Secretary-General after onsultation with the executive heads of the specialred agencies and taking full account of the proposals f the Salary Review Committee and of the views xpressed in the Fifth Committee, to formulate the efinitions of dependency and apply them to the staff, eporting the results through the Advisory Committee n Administrative and Budgetary Questions to the Feneral Assembly at its twelfth session.4
- 4. At the twelfth session the Fifth Committee ecorded its conclusions as follows:
- 'Subject to review in the light of a full year's working experience, the Fifth Committee approves the tentative definitions of dependency as set out in the report of the Secretary-General (A/3656), and requests the Secretary-General to introduce these definitions at an early date."
- 5. Under resolution 1095 (XI), in which the General Assembly recorded its conclusions on many aspects of he report of the Salary Review Committee, the Secretary-General was authorized "to pay, as a transitional measure, personal allowances to present staff members who would otherwise suffer a reduction in emoluments through the initial application of new rates of dependency allowances, such personal allowances to be decreased and eventually eliminated according to a procedure to be prescribed by the Secretary-General."

- 6. The new definitions of dependency were applied to the staff of the Secretariat in all offices with effect from 1 October 1958 and have been in operation since that time. Transitional personal allowances were applied as of 1 October 1958 to staff who would otherwise have suffered a reduction in emoluments because of the effect of the new definitions.
- 7. The first reduction (25 per cent) of the transitional personal allowance was made, in the case of staff in the professional and higher salary levels, coincidentally with the reclassification of the Headquarters area as class 6 in the post-adjustment system. A first reduction amounting to 20 per cent of the transitional personal allowance was made in the case of staff in the General Service and Manual Workers category as of 1 July 1959.
- 8. The Secretary-General, with the administrative heads of the specialized agencies that have applied these definitions (ILO, FAO, WHO and UNESCO) has found that the new definitions of dependency are satisfactory and can be readily administered. Administrative difficulties have proved to be less onerous than might have been expected and indeed the Secretary-General is of the opinion that the new definitions are both more equitable and somewhat easier to administer than the arrangements that were previously in force. In this connexion it will be recalled that the General Assembly, at its thirteenth session, approved the deletion from staff regulation 3.4 of a reference to benefits which might be derived under the dependency provisions of national income tax laws (resolution 1295 (XIII)).
- 9. The Secretary-General accordingly recommends that the present definitions of dependency be continued, subject to whatever minor adjustments experience may show to be warranted.

Report of the Fifth Committee

[Original text: English] [3 December 1959]

- 1. The Fifth Committee considered agenda item 54, Personnel questions", at its 738th to 743rd meetings ield from 5 to 12 November 1959.
 - (a) Geographical distribution of the staff of the Secretariat
 - (b) Proportion of fixed-term staff
 - 2. The progress that had been made during the past year (1 September 1958–31 August 1959) towards achieving a numerical balance of Secretariat posts among nationalities formed the central topic of discussion but, as at previous sessions, attention was also given to the related question of geographical distri-bution by level of posts. These two questions, together with the proportion of fixed-term appointments, were viewed as parts of a single problem.

- 3. In measuring what had been accomplished in the year under review, some delegations acknowledged the many difficulties with which the Secretary-General had to contend. Article 101, paragraph 3 of the Charter imposed specific obligations and, while it had rightly been argued in the past that no single Member State or group of States had a monopoly of talent, it was not the fact that talent was, by that token, made available to the United Nations on request. The Secretary-General could do nothing if Member States, including a number whose nationals formed a disproportionately small part of the Secretariat, found it impossible to spare qualified nationals for service in the Secretariat. In some cases, Governments were unable to nominate any candidates. It was also to be noted that, apart from the historical reasons that had led in the early days of the Organization to a serious imbalance among nationalities in the Secretariat, the increase between 1955 and 1959 in the number of authorized posts had not kept pace with the enlarged membership of the United Nations, and, further, that the Professional establishment had been stabilized for the past two years. However desirable on other grounds, those were retarding factors as regards improvement in geographical distribution. The balance could have been redressed only if the services of qualified staff members had been terminated for reasons of geographical distribution, a measure which the Secretary-General had very properly declined to adopt. In the light of all those considerations, the Secretary-General could reasonably claim that, with a Secretariat comprising, in November 1959, seventythree different nationalities, he had substantially implemented the intent of the Charter.
- 4. Other delegations considered that little improvement had been recorded in the past year since there still remained nineteen Member States which had no nationals in the Secretariat or were below the mini-mum of the "desirable range". There was no justification for regarding efficiency and geographical distribution as conflicting requirements. Article 101, paragraph 3 of the Charter provided, in their view, a harmonious combination of two elements and, if strictly observed, would remove the present undue emphasis on competence and efficiency and afford to all Member States an opportunity of nominating candidates of the requisite quality. Only if all peoples, cultures and systems of government were "represented" could the work of the Secretariat become truly objective and reflect, not sectional interests but the interests of all Member States. To that end, the General Assembly had recommended in 1957 (resolutions 1097 (XI) of 27 February 1957 and 1226 (XII) of 14 December 1957) that, in future appointments at all levels, appropriate preference should be given to nationalities which formed a disproportionately small part of the Secretariat. The latest statistics (A/C.5/784) showed that too little had been done to comply with that directive. In the past year, only 20 out of 84 appointments had gone to nationalities coming within that definition, whereas the nationals of 14 countries which had already exceeded the "desirable range" of posts had received nineteen appointments, including three to posts at high levels. Yet the General Assembly at the previous session had specifically requested the Secretary-General, in striving towards a better geographical distribution of the Secretariat, to give "particular regard to posts at the top level" (resolution 1294 (XIII)). Remedial action was clearly necessary; it should be so designed as to - promote without delay an equilibrium between the various regions and nationalities. In particular, i would be advisable: (a) to limit recruitment to the nationals of Member States which had not yet reached the "desirable range of posts", and (b) to suspend the existing system of career appointments and gran only fixed-term appointments. Apart from restoring the geographical balance, such measures would enable Member States, under a system of rotation, to send some of their nationals to the Secretariat in order to acquire, during a limited period of service, the necessary experience and knowledge of the work of the United Nations.

- 5. Some representatives, while opposing the cours outlined in the previous paragraph, were in favour of a moderate increase in the proportion of fixed-term to career appointments (now standing at 16.6 per cent). It was, however, pointed out that some staff should continue to be recruited on a career basis in order to maintain a satisfactory ratio between the two cate gories of staff. There might also be a case for instituting a stricter review of career appointments, no limited to a single review upon completion of five years' service but continuing at intervals throughou the career.
- 6. Special attention was drawn by some delegations to what they regarded as an unsatisfactory situation that prevailed at the higher policy-making levels of the Secretariat, and to which the Committee has already referred, in a narrower context, in the report on the public information activities of the United Nations (A/4301, paras. 28 and 29). The posts in question were distributed as follows:

N	Nationals of orth America ind Western Europe	All othe regions
Principal officer and higher levels	. 70	35
Senior officer level		47

- 7. The point was also made that, while there was an evident need to improve the distribution for certair regions, the problem should not be viewed solely from the regional standpoint. For the continent of Africa for example, two countries had exceeded the "desirable range" while four countries had no nationals in the Secretariat. In that case the imbalance was both regional and national. In other cases, national in equalities might persist in a region that reflected an adequate over-all distribution.
- 8. Some speakers suggested that, in establishing the "desirable range" of posts, account should be taken of additional factors beyond the purely mathematical. It would also make for a more valid comparison between Member States if the difference between the minimum and maximum limits were reduced. In addition, a separate range applying to posts at the Senior Officer and higher levels might be introduced or alternatively a points system, similar to the one in force in UNESCO, for determining the relative importance of posts.
- 9. Some delegations were of the opinion that the principle of geographical distribution should be applied not only at the stage of recruitment but also in regard to promotion, as a means of achieving a better balance at the higher levels. Other representatives, however, while agreeing with the purpose in view, felt that it would be inequitable to admit the element of nationality into the promotion system. That was an extraneous factor which should not be considered when the work of a staff member and the uality of his performance came under review. It ould be unjust to the individual and harmful to the reganization if a well merited promotion was withheld ecause of the nationality of the person concerned.

10. At the 742nd meeting, the Committee condered the following draft resolution (A/C.5/L.584), thich was submitted jointly by Japan, Saudi Arabia nd the United Arab Republic:

"The General Assembly,

"Having considered the report of the Secretary-General regarding the geographical distribution of the staff of the Secretariat of the United Nations (A/C.5/784),

"Noting with appreciation that, during the year 1959, some progress has been made towards the implementation of its resolutions 1097 (XI) of 27 February 1957, 1226 (XII) of 14 December 1957 and 1294 (XIII) of 5 December 1958,

"Noting further that the Secretary-General's efforts are going to continue to accelerate the achievement of an equitable geographical distribution of the staff of the United Nations Secretariat,

"Recognizing that without an adequate regional and cultural representation at the policy-making level of the Secretariat of the United Nations, the purposes of the Charter could not be duly served,

"1. Recommends that:

- "(a) In the recruitment of the staff of the Secretariat, priority should be given to candidates from Member States which either do not have nationals on the staff or which have a disproportionately small number of their nationals on the staff;
- "(b) Vacancies in posts at higher levels of the United Nations Secretariat should be filled, as far as possible, by qualified candidates representative of geographical areas and main cultures which are not represented, or not adequately represented, in these key posts;
- "(c) More interchange of personnel between Headquarters and the field offices of the United Nations should be carried out whenever possible;
- "(d) The Secretary-General's endeavours to increase the number of the Secretariat staff appointed on a fixed-term contract should be continued and encouraged;
- "2. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session on the progress made in this regard."
- 11. The representative of the United Arab Republic explained that, in the hope of achieving unanimous acceptance of the proposed text, the sponsors of the oint draft resolution had refrained from including a paragraph concerning the factor of geographical disribution in relation to promotion, although several lelegations had referred to that question. The representative of Japan stated that his sponsorship had been conditional on the omission of any such reference in the draft test.
- 12. The Netherlands representative proposed the ollowing amendments: (a) To insert, at the end of the third preambular paragraph, the words "within the provisions of Article 101 of the Charter"; and (b) To insert the word "qualified" before the word "candidates" in operative paragraph 1 (a). The sponsors accepted the latter amendment; as regards the former, they agreed to embody the tenor of it in an opening paragraph reading: "Recalling the provisions of Article 101 of the Charter".

- 13. The Ethiopian representative proposed the insertion after operative paragraph 1 (b) of a new subparagraph reading: "(c) Constructive action should be taken in the application of the principle of adequate geographical representation to the appointment as well as to the promotion of the staff of the Secretariat".
- 14. The representative of the Secretary-General reminded the Committee that at the twelfth session the Committee had been in general agreement that the principle of geographical distribution could not in equity be invoked as a barrier to promotion and that merit alone should be the decisive factor in the advancement of the staff member. Matters relating to the promotion of staff were within the prerogative of the Secretary-General. The system in force was based exclusively on merit and seniority, and if other considerations were admitted, they would not only cause injustice by thwarting merited promotions but make the promotion system virtually unworkable.
- 15. In withdrawing his amendment the representative of Ethiopia said that he did so in deference to the declared wish of the Secretary-General's representative. His insistence on the importance of geographical distribution implied no disregard of the paramount consideration set forth in Article 101, paragraph 3 of the Charter. He reiterated his delegation's sincere appreciation of the present efforts of the Secretary-General to remedy the disparity in the geographical distribution of the staff at all levels.
- 16. The result of the voting on the draft resolution (A/C.5/L.584), as amended, was as follows: operative paragraph 1 (a) was adopted by 53 votes to none, with 5 abstentions; operative paragraph 1 (b) was adopted by 57 votes to none, with 3 abstentions; operative paragraph 1 (c) was adopted by 46 votes to none, with 14 abstentions. The draft resolution as a whole, as amended by the sponsors, was adopted by 59 votes to none, with 2 abstentions (see paragraph 19).
- 18. At its 743rd meeting, the Committee took note of the report of the Secretary-General (A/C.5/785) on the proportion of fixed-term staff.

(c) Other personnel questions

19. At its 743rd meeting, the Committee took note of the report on definitions of dependency (A/C.5/780), in which the Secretary-General recommended that the existing definitions should be continued, subject to whatever minor adjustments experience might show to be warranted.

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

20. The Fifth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF THE STAFF OF THE SECRETARIAT OF THE UNITED NATIONS

⁶ Ibid., para. 36.

Noting further that the Secretary-General will continue his efforts to accelerate the achievement of an equitable geographical distribution of the staff of the Secretariat,

- (a) In the recruitment of the staff of the Secretariat of the United Nations, priority should be given to qualified candidates from Member States which either have no nationals on the staff or which have a disproportionately small number of their nationals on the staff:

- 2. The Committee considered the item from its 601st to 614th meetings held between 24 September and 19 October 1959.
- 3. At the 601st meeting, the Chairman welcomed, on behalf of the Sixth Committee, Sir Gerald Fitzmaurice, Chairman of the International Law Commission, and invited him to introduce the Commission's report (A/4169). Sir Gerald Fitzmaurice made a statement in the course of the debate and replied to questions put to him by representatives.
- 4. The report of the Commission was divided into four chapters devoted respectively to the organization of the session, the law of treaties, consular intercourse and immunities, and other decisions of the Commission.
- 5. In addition, the Sixth Committee considered a request made by the representative of El Salvador that the International Law Commission, as soon as it considers it advisable, undertake the codification of the principles and rules of international law relating to the right of asylum.
- → 6. The Committee also considered a request made by the representative of Bolivia that the International Law Commission include in its programme of work the codification of current laws on the utilization and exploitation of international rivers and that the Secretariat, in collaboration with the Commission, undertake the task of compiling, classifying and analysing the available information on the question.

I. REPORT OF THE INTERNATIONAL LAW COMMISSION

Proposal

7. A draft resolution (A/C.6/L.444 and Add.1 and 2) was submitted by Afghanistan, Bolivia, Ceylon, Cuba, Hungary, Iraq, Japan, Mexico, Pakistan, Panama and Poland whereby the General Assembly would take note of the report of the International Law Commission and express its appreciation of the work done by the Commission.

Debate

- 8. As the International Law Commission had been unable to complete at its eleventh session the draft on consular intercourse and immunities and that on the law of treaties, its report was this year in the nature of a progress report.
- 9. Therefore, the representatives who took part in the debate were of the opinion that it would be sufficient to take note of the report without discussing in detail the substantive questions.
- 10. There were, however, some comments concerning the law of treaties. Some representatives agreed with paragraph 13 of the report, which stated that, since the topic of the law of treaties was subdivided into a number of well-defined branches to a large extent self-contained, there was no reason why the Commission's work on each of them should not be submitted to Governments and to the Assembly, without awaiting the completion of the work on the remaining branches or on the subject as a whole.
- 11. Others held the view that the law of treaties could only be codified as a whole and that, while various branches of the subject might be dealt with by the Commission in parts, it would still not be possible for the General Assembly to take final action until the whole text was available.

- 12. Several representatives expressed their agreement with paragraph 18 of the report, which stated that the Commission had not "at present envisaged its work on the law of treaties as taking the form of one or more international conventions or as taking the form of a treaty, but rather as a code of a general character".
- 13. Other representatives disagreed with that statement and held the view that the best way for the Commission to present its recommendations was in the form of draft international conventions to be considered in United Nations organs or at international conferences.
- 14. It was felt, however, that it was too early to recommend a specific method of action because there was not enough information to justify a decision at the present stage.
- 15. In connexion with that section of the Commission's report devoted to co-operation with other bodies (A/4169, chap. IV, sect. II), some representatives, while expressing their satisfaction that the Commission was represented at the meetings of the Inter-American Council of Jurists, at the same time regretted the Commission's inability to have an observer attend the meetings of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee; they expressed the hope that arrangements could be made in the future which would facilitate closer consultation between the two organs.
- 16. During the debate remarks were made by some representatives concerning the methods of work of the Commission. It was held, inter alia, that in order to expedite its work the Commission might appoint assistant rapporteurs to help the rapporteurs in their research, or provide interim associate rapporteurs whenever other duties made it impossible for the regular rapporteurs to complete their assignments. It was also stated that the Commission could be divided into groups which would examine two or more drafts at the same time.

Voting

- 17. At its 611th meeting, on 13 October 1959, the Sixth Committee unanimously adopted the joint draft resolution (A/C.6/L.444 and Add.1 and 2).
- 18. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution I contained in paragraph 55 of the present report.

II. RIGHT OF ASYLUM

Proposal and amendment

- 19. A draft resolution was submitted by El Salvador (A/C.6/L.443) whereby the General Assembly would request the International Law Commission, as soon as it considers it advisable, to undertake the codification of the principles and rules of international law relating to the right of asylum.
- 20. Cuba submitted an amendment (A/C.6/L.447) to the draft resolution of El Salvador in order to replace, in the operative part, the words "as soon as it considers it advisable, to undertake the codification" by the phrase "to give priority to the codification". This amendment was later withdrawn.

Debate

- 21. In introducing his request to the International Law Commission to codify the principles and rules relating to the right of asylum, the representative of El Salvador pointed out that the importance of the matter had been acknowledged by the Commission, which at its first session had included the right of asylum in its list of topics selected for codification (A/925, para. 16). For lack of time the Commission had not yet had an opportunity to study it. The question had not been ignored by the General Assembly where, at its seventh session, in connexion with the debate on the request to give priority to the codification of diplomatic intercourse and immunities, the representative of Colombia had submitted an amendment asking that priority also be given to the right of asylum. 1/This proposal had been defeated on the ground that this constituted a separate topic. In addition, the representative of El Salvador stressed that although the right of asylum, with its twin aspects of territorial asylum and diplomatic asylum, was an ancient institution, accepted and applied in many parts of the world, it had not yet reached adequate uniformity, and that the work of the Commission would have to consist of both codification and progressive development of international law.
- 22. Most of the representatives who expressed themselves on this subject were in favour of the proposal of El Salvador.
- 23. However, some representatives were of the opinion that the request lay beyond the scope of the report of the Commission and therefore could not be discussed by the Sixth Committee, because to do so would in fact be equivalent to including a new item in the agenda of the General Assembly.
- 24. In addition, it was held that the General Assembly should normally avoid disrupting the Commission's programme of work or overburdening it with the study of new questions. A long list might well be made of the subjects which the Commission could profitably discuss; but no new subjects should be proposed for the Commission's consideration, unless they were really of exceptional importance.
- 25. Other representatives felt that if no priority was requested, the proposal was superfluous, since the right of asylum was already on the list of the topics selected by the International Law Commission for codification.
- 26. Several representatives, who were in favour of the Salvadorian proposal, pointed out that the question of the right of asylum, especially territorial asylum, had been studied by various United Nations organs, inter alia, by the Commission on Human Rights which, on 25 March 1959, adopted a resolution whereby it decided to undertake at its 1960 session the drafting of a declaration on the right of asylum. 2/ Therefore they were of the opinion that some clarification was needed regarding the respective functions of the Commission on Human Rights and the Economic and Social Council, on the one hand, and the International Law Commission on the other hand. It was even stated that ½ See Official Records of the General Assembly, Seventh Session, Annexes, agenda item 58, document A/C.6/L.251.

^{2/} See Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, Twenty-eighth Session, Supplement No. 8, chap. III, para. 74.

the International Law Commission could not undertake a codification of the subject before the results of the study by the Commission on Human Rights were available.

- 27. Other representatives thought that the matter might be dealt with in relation to the question of diplomatic intercourse and immunities, of which the right of diplomatic asylum was a part. It was pointed out, however, that this would leave out the problem of territorial asylum.
- 28. In the view of some representatives it was important to consider whether the subject of the right of asylum could be codified and to what extent such codification could endanger the very existence of the institution.
- 29. Some representatives insisted that diplomatic asylum was an institution developed almost exclusively in Latin American countries; they felt that it would be inadvisable to codify in universal terms rules which were of a purely regional character.
- 30. Others rejected that argument and pointed out that diplomatic asylum was a recognized institution outside the Latin American region.

Voting

31. At its 612th meeting on 14 October 1959, the Sixth Committee adopted the draft resolution submitted by El Salvador (A/C.6/L.443) by a roll-call vote of 63 votes to 1, with 12 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Dominican Republic.

Abstaining: Albania, Australia, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Mexico, Poland, Romania, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

32. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution II contained in paragraph 55 of the present report.

III. INTERNATIONAL RIVERS

Proposals and amendments

33. Bolivia submitted a draft resolution (A/C.6/L.445) whereby the Assembly would: (1) request the International Law Commission to include the codification of current laws on the utilization and exploitation of international waterways and navigation thereon, as the next subject in its programme of work; and (2) instruct the Secretariat, in collaboration with the Commission, to compile, classify and analyse existing information on practices having the force of law which govern the use of international rivers.

- 34. A revised text (A/C.6/L.445/Rev.1) was later submitted by Bolivia. In this revised text, operative paragraph 1, inter alia, was reworded so that the International Law Commission would be requested to study, when it deemed it opportune to do so, the possibility of codifying current laws on the utilization and exploitation of international rivers.
- 35. Bolivia later submitted another revised text (A/C.6/L.445/Rev.2), operative paragraph 1 of which requested the Secretary-General:
- (a) To prepare a report on the legal problems relating to the utilization and use of international rivers and containing:
- (i) Information provided by Member States regarding their legislation and practice in the matter;
- (ii) An analysis of existing bilateral and multilateral treaties;
- (iii) An analysis of decisions of international tribunals:
- (iv) A survey of studies made or being made by nongovernmental organizations concerned with international law;
- (b) To include the question of the legal problems relating to the utilization of international rivers in the provisional agenda of the regular session of the General Assembly following the circulation of the report to the Member States.
- 36. Operative paragraph 2 asked Member States to furnish the Secretary-General with the necessary information regarding their relevant treaties, legislation and practice.
- 37. A third revised text (A/C.6/L.445/Rev.3) was finally submitted by Bolivia. In the operative paragraph of this text the word "analysis" was replaced by the word "summary" and the words "including arbitral awards" were added after "decisions of international tribunals". Sub-paragraph (b) of operative paragraph 1 and operative paragraph 2 were deleted.
- 38. Belgium submitted amendments (A/C.6/L.446) to the original Bolivian draft resolution (A/C.6/L.445) in order to introduce some drafting changes in the preamble and to replace the operative part by the following:
 - "Requests the International Law Commission to include in its programme of work, at such time as it considers it suitable, a study of the possible codification of those rules;

"Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in collaboration with the International Law Commission, to undertake the task of compiling, classifying and analysing existing information on this matter."

39. These amendments were later withdrawn.

Dehate

40. In submitting his proposal relating to the legal problems raised by the utilization of international rivers, the representative of Bolivia recalled that half the world's arable land remained unworked for lack of water, and that, with the population increasing daily, the problem demanded urgent solution. The importance of that question had been emphasized on several occasions by the Economic and Social Council and non-governmental organizations. However, the utilization of inland waters was not governed by any international statute and the law applied was purely customary, ill-defined and lacking in uniformity.

- 41. There was accordingly a pressing need to request the International Law Commission to include the codification of current laws on the utilization and exploitation of international waterways as the next subject in its programme of work and to instruct the Secretariat to compile and analyse the existing information on the subject.
- 42. Some representatives were of the opinion that the Bolivian proposal had no connexion with the item under discussion, since it appeared neither in the Commission's programme of work nor in the report itself. Even if the Committee was competent to discuss the question, they felt that Governments had had no opportunity to study the proposal in advance and that therefore the discussion should be postponed to a later session.
- 43. But most representatives limited their criticisms to specific points raised by the draft resolution (A/C.6/L.445).
- 44. Several representatives emphasized the complexity of the problem raised by the proposal and doubted that the International Law Commission was the appropriate body to undertake such a task, which would necessarily require a profound technological knowledge.
- 45. Other representatives were of the opinion that an attempt to codify the matter would be premature and could do more harm than good; it would be better, anyhow, to leave it to the International Law Commission to decide whether the utilization of international rivers was an appropriate subject for codification, than to take the initiative of requesting the Commission to include that question in its programme of work.
- 46. The Bolivian representative then submitted a somewhat more limited proposal (A/C.6/L.445/Rev.1) whereby the International Law Commission was only requested to study, when it deemed it opportune to do so, the possibility of codifying the current laws on the utilization and exploitation of international rivers. The Secretariat was still asked to compile and analyse the available information on the question.
- 47. This proposal still met with opposition and many representatives were of the opinion that all that could be done, for the time being, was to study the available materials in order to understand the actual problems presented by international river systems, and to analyse the tendencies of international practice.
- 48. Consequently, the representative of Bolivia submitted a new text (A/C.6/L.445/Rev.2) which omitted any request to the International Law Commission and merely asked the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the matter and to include the question in the agenda of a future session of the General Assembly. Member States were invited to furnish the Secretary-General with the necessary information.
- 49. In connexion with this new text, several representatives were of the opinion that the General Assembly should not bind itself at present by a decision to include the question in the agenda of a future session. They were also opposed to operative paragraph 2 calling on Member States to furnish the Secretary-General with the necessary information.

- 50. In the opinion of some representatives, the authority competent to initiate the studies concerned was not the Secretary-General but the International Law Commission.
- 51. It was also pointed out that the term "international rivers" was unduly vague and it was agreed that the study to be made should also include the connecting lakes. The use of the word "analysis" in operative paragraph 1 was also criticized.
- 52. For these reasons, and after consulting with an informal working group and taking into consideration suggestions made, inter alia, by the representatives of Poland and Uruguay, the representative of Bolivia submitted a new revised text (A/C.6/L.445/Rev.3). This new text, which only requested the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the question and circulate it to Member States, was found acceptable by most of the representatives.

Voting

53. At its 614th meeting on 19 October 1959, the Sixth Committee adopted the Bolivian revised draft resolution (A/C.6/L.445/Rev.3) by a roll-call vote of 66 to none, with 5 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Albania, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Brazil, Israel, Peru, Turkey.

54. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of draft resolution III contained in paragraph 55 of the present report.

NOTE BY THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

- 1. In the course of its first session, in 1949, the International Law Commission selected "Diplomatic intercourse and immunities" as one of the topics the codification of which it considered necessary or desirable. It did not, however, include this subject among those to which priority was accorded. 1
- 2. At its fifth session in 1953, the Commission was apprised of General Assembly resolution 685 (VII) of 5 December 1952, by which the Assembly requested the Commission to undertake, as soon as it considered it possible, the codification of "Diplomatic intercourse and immunities" and to treat it as a priority topic.²/
- 3. At its sixth session in 1954, the Commission decided to initiate work on the subject, and appointed Mr. A. E. F. Sandström Special Rapporteur. 3/
- 4. Owing to lack of time, the Commission was unable to take up the subject until its ninth session in 1957. At that session, the Commission considered the topic on the basis of the report prepared by the Special Rapporteur. 4/It adopted a provisional set of draft articles with a commentary. 5/
- 5. At its tenth session in 1958, the Commission examined the text of the provisional draft in the light of the observations submitted by Governments $\frac{6}{}$ and those made during the discussion of the draft in the Sixth Committee at the twelfth session of the General

- 6. The International Law Commission submitted its final draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities, together with a commentary, to the General Assembly in chapter III of its report covering the work of its tenth session. §/ The Commission proposed that the draft articles should be recommended to Member States with a view to the conclusion of a convention. §/
- 7. Chapter III was discussed at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly by the Sixth Committee at its 568th to 581st meetings, held from 27 October to 13 November 1958. On 5 December 1958, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Committee, adopted resolution 1288 (XIII) on diplomatic intercourse and immunities, the full text of which is as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Having considered chapter III of the report of the International Law Commission covering the work of its tenth session which contains draft articles and commentaries on diplomatic intercourse and immunities,

"Recalling that the General Assembly, in its resolution 685 (VII) of 5 December 1952, requested the International Law Commission to undertake the codification of the topic 'Diplomatic intercourse and immunities', and to treat it as a priority topic,

"Taking into account paragraph 25 of the report of the International Law Commission covering the work of its ninth session wherein it is stated that the Commission decided to present a final report on the subject of diplomatic intercourse and immunities to the General Assembly at its thirteenth session, after reviewing the subject in the light of the comments of Governments,

"Taking into account also paragraph 50 of the report of the International Law Commission covering the work of its tenth session wherein it is stated that the Commission decided to recommend to the General Assembly that the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities should be recommended to Member States with a view to the conclusion of a convention,

- "1. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for its work on diplomatic intercourse and immunities;
- "2. Invites Member States to submit their comments on the draft articles concerning diplomatic intercourse and immunities not later than 1 June 1959;
- "3. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate such comments so as to facilitate the discussion of the subject at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly;
- "4. Decides to include the item entitled 'Diplomatic intercourse and immunities' in the provisional agenda of its fourteenth session with a view to the early conclusion of a convention on diplomatic intercourse and immunities:
- "5. Decides to consider at its fourteenth session the question to what body the formulation of the convention should be entrusted."
- 8. By 15 July 1959, the Secretary-General had received comments on the draft articles from nineteen Governments, namely, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Chile, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, Ghana, Netherlands, Norway, Philippines, Sweden, Switzerland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and United States of America.

ANNEX

Comments by Governments concerning the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities adopted by the International Law Commission at its tenth session in 1958

1. AUSTRIA

Transmitted by a note verbale of 30 June 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Austria to the United Nations

[Original: English]

Austria considers the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities as a valuable contribution to the codification of international law. Such a codification is considered to be useful as, in spite of commonly developed basic principles of diplomatic intercourse and the diplomatic immunities, the praxis of States still differs in many details.

The Austrian Government is of the opinion that also a codification "step-by-step", beginning with the establishment of rules for diplomatic intercourse and the diplomatic immuni-ties, and continuing with an agreement on consular intercourse and consular immunities and finally rounding up with rules on the intercourse between States and international organizations and the ad hoc diplomacy are to be considered useful. Such a step-by-step codification, however, should not overlook a uniform terminology.

As far as specific articles of the draft are concerned, the Austrian Government is submitting the following comments:

Article 17

The present text does not seem to provide for the absence of the head of the mission during his vacation; the conduct of affairs of the mission by a chargé d'affaires ad interim should be provided for such a case too, even if the head of mission remains in the territory of the receiving State.

Article 18

The wording of article 22 of the draft articles on consular intercourse and immunities, "The State of residence is bound to permit...", 2/ is considered more precise than the wording of this article 18. The wording of article 22 expresses more clearly that by the obligation of the receiving State to permit the use of the flag and emblem of the sending State, the relations in the field of private law between the sending State and the owner of the premises of the mission or residence, in so far as the latter is not identical with the sending State, are not involved.

Article 28

For systematic reasons it would be preferable to refer in article 28, paragraph 2, directly to article 29, paragraph 1 (a) to (c), and not to make reference via article 29, paragraph 3, because this last-quoted paragraph contains a positive rule of immunity, while the phrase "except as provided..." refers to the negative immunity rules, therefore to article 29, paragraph 1 (a) to (c).

Article 29

It would seem preferable to clarify, in paragraph 1, that the issuance and the withdrawal of drivers' licences and the recording of facts after traffic accidents cannot be considered as an "administrative jurisdiction".

Article 31

It would seem advisable if the text of this provision could be harmonized with article 31 of the draft articles on consular intercourse and immunities, whereby the text of this last-mentioned draft should serve as a basis. The terminology of article 1 should be used in wording this article.

Article 36

Following the common praxis that stateless persons are treated in the State of residence the same way as the nationals of this State are treated, it would seem advisable to add in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3, after the words: "if they are not nationals of the receiving State", the words "or stateless persons resident in the receiving State".

2. BELGIUM

Transmitted by a letter of 20 May 1959 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Belgium

[Original: French]

Under article 36 of the new draft, immunity from jurisdiction is accorded to administrative and technical staff and their families. Thus, the scope of immunity from jurisdiction and of diplomatic privileges is broader under this article than in existing Belgian practice, where such privileges are only granted to the wives and minor children of diplomatic and administrative staff and are not extended to children who have come of age.

2/ Yearbook of the International Law Commission, 1957, Vol. II (United Nations publication, Sales No.: 1957.V.5, Vol. II), document A/CN.4/108, p. 97.

As regards paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 1288 (XIII) (dealing with the question to what body the formulation of the convention is to be entrusted), the Belgian Government considers that the question should be submitted to a conference of plenipotentiaries. This would appear to be the most appropriate procedure for introducing any amendments to the draft (including, perhaps, article 36) which might be thought desirable.

3. BRAZIL

Transmitted by a letter of 16 June 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Brazil to the United Nations

[Original: English]

Article 12

Delete the following words "either when he has notified his arrival and a true copy of his credentials has been presented to the Ministry for Foreign Affairs of the receiving State, or".

Article 15

In paragraph 1, delete the following words "either of the official notification of their arrival or".

4. BULGARIA

Transmitted by a note verbale of 15 May 1959 from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Bulgaria

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of Bulgaria considers that the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities prepared by the International Law Commission at its tenth session are constructive and constitute a satisfactory basis for the formulation of a multilateral convention.

Most of the proposed articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities are truly representative of the principles of international law and of the practice followed in this connexion. The provisions of certain articles, such as articles 3, 20, 22, 25, 27, 29 and 40, are of particular importance. There are, however, other provisions which are unacceptable as at present drafted and should be altered.

The Ministry considers it desirable that article 2 should state the principle of the right of legation enjoyed by every State.

Article 7 should simply be deleted.

In article 13, it would seem desirable to omit the class "envoys, ministers and internuncios" and to retain only the classes mentioned in sub-paragraphs (a) and (c).

The Ministry is of the opinion that in article 30, paragraph 3, where provision is made for the possibility of immunity from jurisdiction being waived, the words "may be express or implied" should be replaced by the words "must be express".

Article 36 should stipulate that the grant of privileges and immunities to the administrative and technical staff of a mission will be based on the principle of reciprocity.

Article 45 might be worded as follows:

"Any dispute between States concerning the interpretation and application of this Convention that cannot be settled through diplomatic channels shall be submitted to a conciliation procedure or to the International Court of Justice, in accordance with the Statute of the Court, or referred to arbitration in accordance with the conventions in force."

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of Bulgaria considers that the requirements for the codification of international law will be fully met by convening an international conference of plenipotentiaries which would formulate a convention, taking the International Law Commission's draft as a basis for its discussions.

5. BYELORUSSIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

Transmitted by a letter of 10 June 1959 from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic

[Original: Russian]

The Government of the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic regards the conclusion of an international convention on diplomatic intercourse and immunities as desirable.

It is the view of the Government of the Byelorussian SSR that the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities, prepared by the International Law Commission at its tenth session in 1958, might serve as a basis for an international convention on that subject.

The Government of the Byelorussian SSR believes that the conclusion of such a convention, based on the afore-mentioned draft, which is essentially a codification of the generally accepted rules of law governing diplomatic missions, would help to ensure proper conditions for the work of such missions and thereby strengthen normal, friendly relations between States.

The Government of the Byelorussian SSR naturally reserves the right to submit additions and amendments to the aforementioned draft when it is discussed article by article.

6. CHILE

Letter of 1 June 1959 from the Permanent Mission of Chile to the United Nations

[Original: Spanish]

In this connexion, I have to inform you that, for the time being, the Government of Chile has nothing to add to the comments in its note of 10 March $1958\frac{b}{}$ or to those made by its representative in the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth regular session of the General Assembly.

At the same time, the Government of Chile expressly reserves its right to make further reference to this question at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly or at any meeting in which the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities may be considered.

7. CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Transmitted by a note verbale of 12 June 1959 from the Permanent Mission of Czechoslovakia to the United Nations

[Original: English]

The Czechoslovak Government is of the opinion that the draft prepared by the International Law Commission is a good basis for drafting a multilateral convention on diplomatic intercourse and immunities, the early conclusion of which was recommended by the General Assembly at its thirteenth session. In this connexion, the Czechoslovak Government wishes to draw attention to its position with regard to the draft articles, as expressed by the Czechoslovak delegation in the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly.

Without expressing here all the comments and suggestions which Czechoslovakia may wish to put forward during the consideration of the draft on diplomatic intercourse and immunities in the General Assembly, or at a separate diplomatic conference, the Czechoslovak Government submits the following comments on the draft:

b/Official Records of the General Assembly, Thirteenth Session, Supplement No. 9 (A/3859 and Corr.1), p. 36.

Article 2

It is suggested to add to this article a provision expressing the principle that any State enjoys the right of legation. This provision should be put as paragraph 1 of the said article, and the article in its present wording as paragraph 2.

Article 3

It is suggested to supplement this article by the following provision:

"The functions of a diplomatic mission comprise also the consular functions in those cases where official consular relations between the sending State and the receiving State do not exist."

Article 12

In view of the fact that it is desirable to unify the practice of States with respect to the commencement of functions of the head of the mission, it is suggested that only the second alternative mentioned in the article which reflects the practice prevailing in most States be retained.

Article 36

The range of persons who are to be entitled to diplomatic privileges and immunities, as mentioned in this article, is much wider than that provided by international law. The Czechoslovak Government maintains the view that the explicit accordance of immunities ex lege in this article should be confined only to the diplomatic personnel and that the extension of immunities, on the basis of reciprocity to cover other categories of employees of diplomatic missions, should be a matter of agreement of the parties involved.

The Czechoslovak Government does not agree to the present wording of this article, which provides for obligatory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the convention if one party only submits the dispute to the Court. It is suggested to reword this article so that its provisions be in accordance with the Statute of the International Court of Justice, according to which the jurisdiction of the Court is based upon the consent of both parties to the dispute.

8. DENMARK

Transmitted by a letter of 3 June 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Denmark to the United Nations

[Original: English]

By and large, the draft convention reflects the general tenor of the law in force in this field. Most of the rules embodied in this codification are recognized by Denmark, whose legislation and existing practice take account thereof to such an extent that the Danish authorities have no material objections to raise.

In regard to the articles mentioned below, however, the following observations should be noted:

Article 9

A clause should be inserted in this article to the effect that notification to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of a person's assumption of functions in a diplomatic mission shall be a condition for the receiving country extending to him the privileges and immunities to which he is entitled.

Article 17

Attention is drawn to the fact that in cases where no diplomatic member of a mission is present in the receiving State, a non-diplomatic member of the staff might be officially in charge of the affairs of the mission in the capacity of charge d'affaires. It is suggested that the existence of such arrangements should be mentioned in the convention.

Article 29

The rule in paragraph 1 (c) should be omitted because it appears to recognize, by inference, that a diplomat may engage in professional or commercial activities in the receiving State. According to the existing practice in Denmark, a foreign diplomat is not permitted to exercise professional or commercial activity in the country.

Article 32

Comments on this article will be submitted later, pending the conclusion of discussions with the Danish Ministry of Finance.

9. FINLAND

Transmitted by a letter of 21 May 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Finland to the United Nations

[Original: English]

The Government of Finland consider that the new draft articles prepared by the International Law Commission constitute, as a whole, a substantial improvement on the earlier draft articles. \(\mathcal{Q} \)

In view of the detailed analysis submitted a year ago on the previous draft articles, the Government of Finland do not find, however, that the new articles call for an amplification of their earlier comments on the contemplated codification of the law and practice concerning diplomatic intercourse and immunities as set forth in the draft articles prepared by the International Law Commission.

The comments of the Government of Finland on the previous draft articles were transmitted to Your Excellency by note No. 1046 of 18 April 1958. d/

11. NETHERLANDS

Transmitted by a letter of 10 July 1959 from the Permanent Representative of the Netherlands to the United Nations

[Original: English]

In resolution 1288 (XIII) of 5 December 1958, the General Assembly of the United Nations invited Member States to submit their comments on the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities formulated by the International Law Commission in 1958. In broad outline the articles are similar to the articles drafted by the Commission in 1957, so that as far as the general observations are concerned the Netherlands Government wishes to refer to the comments submitted on 26 March 1958. The amendments made to the 1957 articles would seem to be, for the greater part, improvements.

The Netherlands Government considers it useful to give the following comments on individual articles. The final wording of the articles had best be laid down at a special diplomatic conference to be convened for this purpose.

Article 1

The Netherlands Government is of the opinion that the definition of "head of the mission" as persons charged with the duty of acting in that capacity is too restrictive. It would be better to include in the definition all persons that are authorized to act in that capacity. Therefore the Netherlands Government would prefer the following definition:

c/ Ibid., Twelfth Session, Supplement No. 9 (A/3623), para. 16.

d/Ibid., Thirteenth Session, Supplement No. 9 (A/3859 and Corr.1), p. 40.

e/ Ibid., p. 45.

"The 'head of the mission' is a person authorized by the sending State to act in that capacity."

Sub-paragraph (d) contains the definition of "diplomatic staff". This definition is based on $\underline{\operatorname{rank}}$ whereas elsewhere in the article $\underline{\operatorname{task}}$ is the criterion. The Netherlands Government appreciates that in this case a description based on the task of the persons concerned may give rise to difficulties and disputes, but it should be realized that the definition as contained in the present article 1 is not quite clear either.

In addition to the well-known diplomatic grades, there are at present such officials as information officer, director of the chancery, etc. of which it is not clear whether they are diplomatic or not.

Article 10

The Netherlands Government objects to the expression "reasonable and normal" in paragraph 1, since it suggests a contrast which does not actually exist. The Netherlands Government considers that it is a question of what is reasonable. Of course, what is normal is one of the factors on the basis of which it is decided whether reasonableness exists. But it does not constitute a factor separate from reasonableness. Therefore the words "and normal" should be deleted.

Since a separate article (article 44) has been included dealing with non-discrimination, the words "and on a non-discriminatory basis" in paragraph 2 should be deleted. They create the impression that the exceptions to the principle of non-discrimination contained in paragraph 2 of article 44 do not apply to article 10, which is by no means desirable and probably is unintentional.

Article 20

The Netherlands Government is of the opinion that it is incorrect to say that the premises of the mission shall be immune from requisition, since the substantive law of the receiving State (which includes its laws governing matters of expropriation) also applies to foreign missions. They are obliged to co-operate in the implementation of these acts. There is only immunity from coercive measures. The present wording of paragraph 3 suggests that expropriation is completely forbidden. Even the preparation of a town-planning scheme providing for the demolition of a mission building would thus be unlawful. This is a misrepresentation of the facts. The preparation of such schemes is permitted and the foreign mission is even morally obliged to co-operate towards their implementation. It is only the coercive measures aimed at compelling the mission to fulfil this moral obligation that must be forbidden. It is not the requisition of the buildings of foreign diplomatic missions that must be forbidden but their actual seizure. Therefore the Netherlands Government would prefer to substitute "seizure" for "requisition".

Article 24

The Netherlands Government is of the opinion that too much emphasis is laid on the possibility of restricting freedom of movement. Therefore the following text is preferred:

"The receiving State shall ensure to all members of the mission freedom of movement and travel in its territory.

"Nevertheless, the receiving State may, for reasons of national security, issue laws and regulations, prohibiting or regulating the entry into specifically indicated places, provided that this indication be not so extensive as to render freedom of movement and travel illusory."

Article 25

The Netherlands Government does not suggest any amendment to this article, but wishes to point to the special attention given in the Commission's commentary to a diplomatic courier who is the pilot of an aircraft. A diplomatic courier may perform all kinds of additional functions. In principle his immunity will be restricted to his function of courier, so that he will not be in a position to claim immunity after he has performed his function of courier. Sometimes, however, it is difficult to separate the various functions. If a courier performs additional functions during his journey he will not, as a rule, on that account lose his immunity. In paragraph 6 of the Commission's commentary to article 25 it is stated that a courier who is at the same time the captain of a commercial aircraft does not enjoy immunity. The justification of this special position of the pilot/courier would seem to be the fact that it would be impracticable to accord immunity to a pilot since it must remain possible to institute proceedings against him on account of infringements of the airtraffic regulations.

It will be advisable to include in the convention provisions regulating the matter of additional functions.

New article 26A

The Netherlands Government is of the opinion that an article should be added to the end of sub-section B providing that a receiving State which maintains different rates of exchange should accord the most favourable rate of exchange to diplomatic missions.

Article 27

In the introduction to sub-section C it is explicitly stated that articles 27 to 36 apply exclusively to diplomats who are not nationals of the receiving State, since the position of diplomats who are nationals of the receiving State has been regulated in a separate article (article 37). The Netherlands Government considers this introduction to be of so much importance that it should be incorporated in the text of the articles. If this should not be done, the wording of articles 27 ff. would imply that these articles apply to all diplomatic agents.

Article 29

Particularly since the Second World War a growing opposition to the principle of immunity has been noticeable. It is felt that immunities serve to accordpreferential treatment to the persons concerned and it is felt to be an injustice that a certain group of persons should not be subject to normal jurisdiction. The Netherlands Government is of the opinion that such feelings-though not correct in principle-are understandable, in particular since the number of persons enjoying immunity is constantly increasing. Immunity, however, only serves to guarantee the unhampered performance of an official assignment in a foreign country. The rules of immunity are by no means intended to exempt diplomats from legal process. For the performance of their duties it is only necessary that the State where they are stationed shall not be able to institute proceedings against them. If such proceedings are deemed necessary they should be instituted in the sending State. According to some authors it is a general principle of law that diplomats have a legal forum in the capital of the sending State, but many national systems of law do not contain any provision in this respect. This also applies to the Netherlands. Therefore the Netherlands Government thinks it desirable that the convention should contain a provision putting beyond doubt the competence of the appropriate court in the capital of the sending State. It would therefore suggest that the final sentence of paragraph 4 of article 24 of the Commission's previous draft be adopted.

Article 31

In many bilateral and multilateral regulations a different system is adopted from that suggested in this article. In this respect reference is made, for instance, to the provisions of articles 12 and 14 of Regulation No. 3 of the European Economic Community (Journal officiel des communautés européennes, lère année, No. 30). It would therefore seem advisable that it be made quite clear that the system suggested in article 31 shall apply only in so far as the States concerned do not deviate from it.

Article 34

In the Netherlands Government's view it would be better to word the beginning of paragraph 2 as follows:

"The personal baggage of a diplomatic agent shall only be inspected if there are very serious grounds for presuming...".

f/ See footnote C/.

Article 36

If an introductory article should show explicitly that articles 27 to 34 apply to diplomatic agents who are not nationals of the receiving State, the first words of article 36, "Apart from diplomatic agents", might be deleted.

Article 43

The principle that provisions of the draft articles shall apply only in time of peace and regulate at most the transition from time of peace to time of war, is not adhered to in this article. The article might be interpreted as being applicable throughout the duration of an armed conflict. If the abovementioned principle is to be enforced consistently, the reference to armed conflict in article 43 will have to be deleted and a new article 43A will have to be inserted, laying down transitional measures applicable in case diplomatic relations should be broken off. On the analogy of paragraph 2 of article 38, protection would have to continue for a reasonable period. In the commentary to the article it should be clearly stated that the receiving State will continue to be obliged to grant protection, though no longer under the peacetime law codified by the International Law Commission, but under the law of war, which will then apply.

In view of the above, the Netherlands Government suggests that the following article and commentary be inserted in the draft articles:

"Article 43 A

"In case of the outbreak of an armed conflict, the receiving State shall respect and protect the premises of the mission, together with its property and archives during a reasonable period as mentioned in paragraph 2 of article 38.

"Commentary

"(1) As the rules proposed by the International Law Commission are only intended to apply in time of peace, the provisions of article 43 are not applicable if diplomatic relations are broken off as the result of the outbreak of an armed conflict. In such a case, as in the cases provided for in paragraph 2 of article 38 and in article 42, it appears necessary to establish transitional rules in order to regulate the transition from the law of peace to the law of war. Article 43 A constitutes such a rule.

"(2) After the expiry of the period mentioned in paragraph 2 of article 38, the receiving State shall accord the premises, property and archives of the mission such respect and protection as is required by the relevant rules of the law of war."

12. NORWAY

Transmitted by a letter of 8 June 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Norway to the United Nations

[Original: English]

In the opinion of the Norwegian Government the draft articles submitted by the International Law Commission constitute on the whole a good basis for the elaboration of a convention on diplomatic intercourse and immunities.

Article 13

The Norwegian Government would prefer to see abolished the obsolescent diplomatic rank of minister.

Article 25

It should be specified in paragraph 1 what conditions the receiving State may fix for granting a mission authorization to use its own wireless transmitter. Such conditions should include a right for the authorities of the receiving State to impose the necessary technical requirements and to undertake a technical control of the transmitter from time to time.

Article 29

In order to avoid any possible confusion, it should be stated expressly that the provisions of article 29 in regard to civil and administrative jurisdiction have no bearing on the immunity of the sending State.

It would be useful to add, at an appropriate place in subsection A of Section II, a provision making clear whether or not the sending State enjoys immunity from suit in the receiving State in respect of the premises of the mission and the private residence of the head of the mission.

Article 29, paragraph 1 (a)

The phrase "unless he holds it on behalf of his Government for the purposes of the mission" should be clarified.

Article 29, paragraph Ì (b)

It should be made clear that this exception does not apply if the diplomatic agent is involved in the succession in his capacity as official representative of his Government.

Article 32

The exceptions enumerated in this article ought to include capital tax upon property, in the form of investments in commercial enterprises, in the receiving State. Sub-paragraphs (b) and (d) might therefore be reworded on the lines of article 28, paragraph 2, of the draft articles on consular intercourse and immunities.

Article 36

In the opinion of the Norwegian Government, the administrative and technical staff ought to be bracketed with the service staff rather than with the diplomatic agents. There does not seem to be any valid reason why the administrative and technical staff should be granted the same privileges and immunities as the diplomatic agents.

Article 39

This article is of considerable practical importance. Its importance is all the greater in view of the fact that the conventions on the privileges and immunities of international organizations in several respects refer to the privileges and immunities accorded to diplomatic envoys in States other than the receiving State (see e.g. sections 19 and 22 (f) of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations [General Assembly resolution 22 A (I)]). The Norwegian Government consequently believes that article 39 should define in greater detail the privileges and immunities to which the members of a diplomatic mission are entitled in the territory of a third State.

13. PHILIPPINES

Transmitted by a letter of 8 June 1959 from the Deputy Permanent Representative of the Philippines to the United Nations

[Original: English]

The Philippine Government wishes to take this opportunity of expressing its high appreciation of the work of the International Law Commission and of stating that it is, in general, in agreement with the views and principles embodied in the draft articles prepared by the said Commission during its tenth session from 28 April to 4 July 1958, subject however to the following observations and proposals:

Article 3

It is proposed that in sub-paragraph (d) the word "lawful" should be omitted and replaced by the phrase "not contrary to existing local laws and regulations". As thus modified, sub-paragraph (d) will read as follows:

"Ascertaining by all means not contrary to existing local laws and regulations conditions and developments in the receiving State, and reporting thereon to the Government of the sending State."

The word "lawful" is believed susceptible to a variety of interpretations and consequently does not have the same precision as the phrase to be substituted in lieu thereof.

Article 12

The following alternative given in the draft is considered preferable: "when he has presented his letters of credence".

g/ See footnote a/.

Article 15

With respect to paragraph 1, it is proposed that this paragraph be amended to read as follows:

"Heads of mission shall take precedence in their respective classes in the order of date of the presentation of their letters of credence."

Article 17

With reference to paragraph (2) of the commentary to this article, the Philippine Government wishes to point out that the practice of the receiving State with respect to the question when the head of a mission is to be regarded as unable to perform his functions, should not be considered as overriding the right of the sending State under this article to designate a charge d'affaires ad interim, whenever its interests so require, provided that due notification is given of such designation to the Ministry for Foreign Affairs of the receiving State.

Article 21

In the commentary to this article attention should be drawn to the fact that in certain countries, like the Philippines, real property under lease by a diplomatic mission is not exempted from payment of real estate tax, on the ground that the obligation to pay such tax devolves upon the owner of the property and not on the lessee. Hence in the case of leased premises, it should be understood that the exemption granted to the sending State and the head of the mission from all national, regional or municipal dues or taxes in respect to the premises of the mission does not cover real estate taxes levied on the owner of the property leased by the sending State or the head of its mission.

Article 25

It is proposed that paragraph 5 of this article should be amended to read:

"Subject to the provisions of article 8, the diplomatic courier shall be protected by the receiving State. He shall enjoy personal inviolability and shall not be liable to any form of arrest or detention."

Article 29

It is the understanding of the Philippine Government, with respect to paragraph 2, that it applies only to a diplomatic agent who is not concurrently accredited as a consular officer and recognized as such by the receiving State. It is therefore suggested that a clarification of this point be included in the commentary of the International Law Commission on this article.

14. SWEDEN

Transmitted by a letter of 30 May 1959 from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Sweden

[Original: French]

The Swedish Government took the liberty of making certain comments on the draft articles as adopted by the International Law Commission at its ninth session in 1957. Those comments were transmitted to the Secretary-General of the United Nations on 11 January 1958 and are reproduced in the report of the International Law Commission covering the work of its tenth session. h

In re-examining the draft article adopted in 1957, the International Law Commission took into consideration some of the comments made by the Swedish Government in 1958. Other comments made by the Swedish Government were not, however, endorsed by the International Law Commission. Among these was its comment on the classification of heads of mission. With regard to this important matter, the Swedish Government wishes to state that it continues to favour the division of heads of mission into two classes only, as, moreover, was suggested by the Commission's Special Rapporteur, Mr. A. E. F. Sandström. As to its arguments in favour of such

h/ Official Records of the General Assembly, Thirteenth Session, Supplement No. 9 (A/3859 and Corr.1), p. 49. a course, the Swedish Government would merely invite attention to the observations which it made in 1958. In the other cases where comments made by Sweden have not been reflected in the revised text, I am authorized to state that my Government still considers them to be valid but does not wish to press them further.

The International Law Commission's 1958 draft includes certain provisions which did not appear in the 1957 draft; these do not appear to call for any comment by Sweden.

Nevertheless, the Swedish Government invites attention to articles 36 and 37 of the new draft, corresponding to articles 28 and 30 of the 1957 draft. These articles, in which some alterations have been made, deal with the various categories of staff to be entitled to privileges and immunities. According to these provisions, those members of the administrative and technical staff who are not nationals of the receiving State are to enjoy the privileges and immunities specified in articles 27 to 35. The Swedish Government has no difficulty in accepting this rule, in so far as it applies to acts performed by such staff in the course of their duties. Where, however, acts which have no connexion with the official duties of administrative and technical staff are concerned, the Swedish Government is reluctant, at any rate at the present stage, to endorse the principle of full entitlement to privileges and immunities.

On the other hand, with regard to those members of the administrative and technical staff who are nationals of the receiving State, the Swedish Government wonders whether they too should not to some extent enjoy immunity from jurisdiction, e.g., in connexion with the obligation to give evidence as a witness in matters arising out of their official duties. Under article 37 of the new draft, such persons will enjoy privileges and immunities only to the extent admitted by the receiving State.

At this stage, the Swedish Government does not feel itself to be in a position to express any definite views on this subject; it merely wished to raise these questions in order to be able to revert to them, if necessary, at the appropriate time.

15. SWITZERLAND

Transmitted by a letter of 12 June 1959 from the Permanent Observer of Switzerland to the United Nations

[Original: French]

General remarks

The competent authorities of the Swiss Confederation have given careful consideration to the second version of the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities drawn up by the International Law Commission of the United Nations at its tenth session, from 28 April to 4 July 1958. The competent Swiss authorities have also studied with care the commentary which accompanies the new draft and the observations made by various Governments on the earlier (1957) draft. They are of the opinion that the changes made in the draft have apppreciably improved it, and they desire to congratulate the Commission on the results which it has achieved.

The Swiss authorities are pleased to see that a number of the amendments to the original text are in harmony with suggestions put forward by several Governments, including that of Switzerland. They warmly appreciate the opportunity already afforded to express their views and would be glad to continue to take part in work leading up to a multilateral convention. They are accordingly in favour of a diplomatic conference in which Switzerland would be a participant.

The Swiss authorities are in general agreement with the new draft articles on the clear understanding that these articles are to be taken in the sense attributed to them in the commentary. The Swiss authorities nevertheless adhere to the suggestions which they made regarding the structure of the draft at the time when the original text was under consideration. Moreover, they still feel that there should be an article at the head of section II of the draft stating the principle that the privileges and immunities of diplomatic missions and agents should be interpreted in the light of "functional necessity" or, better still, "the purpose of the mission".

Having made these comments of a general nature, the Swiss authorities now propose to refer in the following paragraphs only to those particular points on which they feel further changes are called for.

Comments on individual articles

Article 1

A definition of the expression "members of the family", on the lines of what is stated below in connexion with article 36, should be added to this article.

Article 8

An explicit provision should be included in this article to the effect that when the receiving State refuses to accept a diplomatic agent, it is not obliged to state the reasons for its decision.

Article 11

Although the Swiss authorities approve of including a provision dealing with the seat of the diplomatic mission, they are of the opinion that this new article is incomplete, since the choice of a place of residence by members of a mission, as well as the establishment of the mission's offices elsewhere than in the town where the mission itself is established, is subject to the consent of the receiving State. Accordingly, this additional rule should also be incorporated in the draft but should be so worded as to make clear that it is not contrary to the freedom of movement provided for in article 24.

Article 12

The Swiss authorities adhere to the view which they have already expressed in connexion with this article. They consider it to be juridically preferable that the functions of the head of mission should be deemed to begin when he has presented his letters of credence. Nevertheless, in view of the divergent view on the question held by other States, the Swiss authorities are prepared to agree to the alternative procedure proposed in this article, on the understanding—already provided for in the article—that the receiving State applies the practice adopted by it in a uniform manner to all missions.

Article 13

The Swiss authorities regret that the distinction between the first two classes of heads of mission has not been abolished. They are glad to note, however, that the new draft specifically states which persons are included in the second class.

Article 17

It is unfortunate that there is no clause in this article stating that the name of the chargé d'affaires ad interim should be notified either by the accredited head of the mission or, if he is unable to do so, by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the sending State. This is the only way to remove any uncertainty which may arise as to whether the appointment of the chargé d'affaires ad interim is in conformity with the intentions of the sending State.

Article 19

The present wording of this article, which obliges the receiving State to "ensure adequate accommodation" for the mission, fails to take into account the practical difficulties which that State might encounter in case of a housing shortage. The following wording is suggested:

"The receiving State must either permit the sending State to acquire on its territory the premises necessary for its mission, or facilitate the accommodation of the mission as far as possible in some other way."

Article 25

In connexion with paragraph 1, the Swiss authorities are still of the opinion that there is no need to abandon the hitherto generally accepted principle that full freedom of communication, including the right to use the diplomatic bag, is limited to direct communication between the diplomatic mission and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the sending State. An extension of this freedom of communication can only be justified in exceptional cases when consulates, owing to the fact that there is no diplomatic mission in the State of residence, are obliged to correspond directly with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of their country or possibly with a diplomatic mission in a third country, under whose superintendence they may be. Even in these special cases, freedom of communication and the right to use the diplomatic bag should only be granted under a bilateral agreement or by tacit agreement.

Furthermore, the Swiss authorities suggest that a clause should be added to paragraph 1 whereby the mission would be expressly granted the right to use its own wireless transmitter for its communications with the Government of the sending State. This right would not relieve the mission of the obligation of complying with the relevant international conventions and rules but would protect it from arbitrary refusal by the receiving State. It is suggested that there should be a new paragraph worded as follows:

"For its communications with the Government of the sending State, the mission shall be entitled to use its own wireless transmitter. The exercise of this right shall be subject to the condition that the mission must comply with the international conventions and rules governing telecommunications and must apply to the receiving State for permission to establish and operate such a transmitter."

With regard to paragraph 4, the Swiss authorities maintain their objection to the definition of the contents of the diplomatic bag. The vague expression "articles intended for official use", which could give rise to abuses, should be replaced by a restrictive definition in which the "functional necessity" of diplomatic missions would be genuinely reflected. Following up their previous suggestion, the Swiss authorities would propose the following wording:

"The diplomatic bag, which must bear visible external marks of its character, may only contain diplomatic documents or articles of a confidential nature essential for the performance of the mission's functions."

As was previously pointed out by the Swiss authorities in connexion with the 1957 draft articles, paragraph 5 fails to mention that the diplomatic courier, unlike the members of the mission, does not remain permanently in the receiving State, his stay being limited to the periods of travel during which he exercises his functions. In order to avoid abuses, the temporary nature of the personal inviolability of the diplomatic courier, as compared with the permanent inviolability accorded to certain members of the mission, should be emphasized. On the other hand, contrary to what was suggested in connexion with the 1957 draft, it seems unnecessary to specify that the diplomatic courier enjoys no other privilege or immunity, since this rule is implicit. Accordingly, the Swiss authorities propose the following wording, which embodies the substance of the suggestion relating to the earlier draft of 1957:

"In the exercise of his functions the diplomatic courier shall be protected by the receiving State. He shall enjoy personal inviolability and shall not be liable to any form of arrest or detention."

Article 30

Paragraph 2 of this article no longer mentions the condition that, in criminal proceedings, waiver of immunity from jurisdiction must always "be effected by the Government of the sending State". This change, which is explained in paragraph (2) of the commentary, is regrettable because, in criminal proceedings, waiver of immunity of jurisdiction is a very serious step. It is therefore important that an absolute safeguard should be provided against the risk that, in extraordinary circumstances, the head of the mission to which the diplomatic agent in question belongs might yield to pressure brought to bear on him by the authorities of the receiving State. In criminal proceedings, it is essential, in order to protect the head of the mission, that waiver should in each case be effected not by the head of the mission himself but directly by the Government of the sending State, even though transmitted to the authorities of the receiving State by the head of the mission.

Article 32

The revised text of sub-paragraph (a), under which an exception is made in connexion with the levying of indirect taxes, is too restrictive. This provision should cover all indirect taxes, i.e., all sales taxes, whether incorporated in the price of goods and services or not, and all stamp duties. It is therefore suggested that the original text should be restored and that the general concept of "indirect taxes" should be reintroduced.

Article 34

Customs exemption should cover not merely exemption from customs duties but also exemption from prohibitions and restrictions of an economic or financial nature on imports and exports, with the sole exception of prohibitions or restrictions based on the public interest.

The limitations on the extent of this exemption should be set out in full at the beginning of article 34 and not mentioned incidentally in connexion with the examination of personal baggage.

Under paragraph 2, the personal baggage of all diplomatic agents is to be exempt from inspection. Although this provision goes further than the practice followed in Switzerland, it would seem to be acceptable in view of the proviso under which the authorities of the receiving State are allowed to carry out an inspection if they have serious grounds—the word "very" should be deleted—for presuming that the baggage contains articles not covered by the exemption. Heads of mission, however, should be entirely exempt from any inspection of their personal baggage.

Guided by those considerations and making partial use of the Belgian Government's proposals in connexion with the former article 27, the Swiss authorities propose that article 34 should be worded as follows:

"1. The receiving State shall, in accordance with the regulations established by its legislation, grant exemption from customs duties and from all prohibitions and restrictions of an economic or financial nature on imports and exports in connexion with:

"(a) ...

"(b) ...

- "2. Exemption from prohibitions and restrictions on imports and exports shall not apply to articles, traffic in which is specifically prohibited by the laws of the receiving State for reasons of public morality, safety, health or order.
- "3. The personal baggage of the head of mission shall be exempt from inspection. This privilege shall also apply to the personal baggage of the diplomatic staff, unless there are serious grounds for presuming that it contains articles not covered by the exemptions mentioned in paragraph 1. Such inspection shall be conducted only in the presence of the diplomatic agent or in the presence of his authorized representative."

Article 35

This article is intended to cover, not only the case of a child born on the territory of the receiving State of parents who are members of a foreign diplomatic mission and who are not nationals of the receiving State, but also, as the commentary points out, the case of a woman member of the mission who marries a local national. With regard to this last-mentioned point, the article is contrary to the Swiss constitutional principle (article 54 of the Federal Constitution) of the unity of the family, according to which a foreign woman who marries a Swiss national acquires her husband's nationality. No departure from this fundamental principle is admissible. The Swiss authorities therefore suggest that article 35 should be supplemented so as to read as follows:

"Members of the mission, not being nationals of the receiving State, and members of their families forming a part of their household, shall not, solely by the operation of the law of the receiving State, acquire the nationality of that State, except in the case of marriage."

Article 36

The words used to define members of the family of a diplomatic agent, i.e., that they must form part of his household, are not sufficiently clear and could lead to misunderstandings and even to abuse. The Swiss authorities suggest that the family circle enjoying privileges and immunities should be limited to the spouse and minor children and, in exceptional cases, to other relatives who form part of the agent's household. A definition on these lines should be inserted in article 1, the other articles using only the broad expression "members of the family".

The reasons given for granting the same privileges and immunities to technical and administrative staff as to diplomatic staff (cf. paragraph (8) of the commentary) appear to be sound. Accordingly, the Swiss authorities, abandoning the misgivings which they previously voiced, are now able to approve the present provision.

As was pointed out by other Governments in connexion with the 1957 draft, it should be clearly understood that a third State's obligation to accord inviolability and other immunities to a diplomatic agent and his family when they are passing through in transit applies only to official journeys carried out without delay or interruption, and is not applicable in the case of journeys made for other purposes, or of sojourns. This is also true in the case of diplomatic couriers in transit, as referred to in paragraph 3. However, there seems to be no possibility of adding a clause expressly defining these limitations, which moreover are based on the general principle of the purpose of the mission.

Furthermore, as other Governments have also pointed out, it is naturally understood that no person covered by this article may claim any right unless he is provided with the necessary documents or unless the third State has authorized his transit, or his presence there is inadvertent or unplanned.

The Swiss authorities agree in principle with the new provision embodied in paragraph 3, whereby third States are to accord to official correspondence and other official communications in transit, including messages in code or cipher, the same freedom and protection as is accorded by the receiving State. They would suggest, however, that the last part of the sentence should be made more explicit and thus read "... the same freedom and protection as the receiving State is bound to accord".

The Swiss authorities also feel bound to point out that, as it stands, the article on the duties of third States still appears to be incomplete. It would seem desirable, in particular, to add specific provisions setting out the obligation of the State of transit in a case where diplomatic relations have been broken off between that State and the sending or receiving State.

16. UKRAINIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

Transmitted by a note verbale of 30 April 1959 from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic

[Original: Russian]

The Government of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic considers that the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities prepared by the International Law Commission at its tenth session could be taken as the basis for the conclusion of an international convention since, in the main, they codify the generally-recognized rules of law governing diplomatic missions which have become established as a result of their long-standing application in the practice of States and in the theory of international law.

The conclusion of such a convention could contribute, to a marked degree, to the improvement of relations between States and to the development of international co-operation on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence.

As regards amendments to individual provisions of the above draft, the Government of the Ukrainian SSR reserves its right to submit them in the course of the discussion of the text article by article.

17. UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS

Transmitted by a note verbale of 26 May 1959 from the Permanent Mission of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to the United Nations

[Original: Russian]

The Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics considers that the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities prepared by the International Law Commission at its tenth session in 1958, in the main, codify the generally-recognized rules of law governing diplomatic missions and may be used as a basis for the conclusion of an international convention on the subject.

The Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics believes that the conclusion of a convention on the basis of these draft articles would help to secure proper conditions for the work of diplomatic representatives and, at the same time, would contribute to the strengthening of normal, friendly relations among nations.

However, the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics reserves the right to present amendments and additions to the aforesaid draft articles when they are considered article by article.

18. UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND

Transmitted by a letter of 28 May 1959 from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the United Kingdom

[Original: English]

I have the honour to refer to my letter ... of 10 March 1958 enclosing a memorandum containing the interim comments j/ of Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom on the draft articles concerning diplomatic intercourse and immunities adopted by the International Law Commission at its ninth session ... and to enclose ... copies of revised and supplementary comments on the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities adopted by the International Law Commission at its tenth session.

Article 11

The drafting might be improved so as to make it clear that the "offices" referred to in this article are not any "offices of the sending State" but only such of its offices as are directly connected with the mission.

Articles 12 and 15

The adoption, in articles 12 and 15, of the same alternatives for determining both the date of the commencement of the functions of the head of the mission and his order of precedence is not, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, to be taken to imply that the same alternative is to be adopted in each case.

Article 21

In the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, the exemption of the premises of a foreign diplomatic mission from local dues or taxes (known in the United Kingdom as local rates) is not required by customary international law. However, it is the practice of Her Majesty's Government to enter into arrangements whereby, on a basis of reciprocity, partial relief from local rates may be secured: the principle applicable is that the diplomatic mission concerned pays only that proportion of the local rates which is attributable to services from which the mission is deemed to derive direct benefit. This principle is similar to that adopted in the draft article, and Her Majesty's Government would therefore be prepared to accept the obligation of the article as an obligation arising out of a convention.

If this article is intended to cover exemption from stamp duty, it is suggested that the phraseology adopted may not be particularly apt, since stamp duty is, strictly, charged upon the documents and not on persons, and the form of the concession is that of free stamping of the document and not of its exemption from duty.

Article 24

While recognizing the general principle enunciated in this article, Her Majesty's Government must reserve the right to impose restrictions on the movements of diplomatic agents of a particular country in the United Kingdom in the face of restrictions imposed by the Government of that country upon diplomatic agents of the United Kingdom stationed there.

Article 25

In the practice of Her Majesty's Government, any bag or container properly addressed and bearing the seal of a foreign Ministry for Foreign Affairs or a foreign mission is regarded as a diplomatic bag and is treated accordingly.

Paragraph 1 of this article might imply a right of consuls to communicate by diplomatic bag or courier or by wireless. It would not seem appropriate to mention, in a draft concerning diplomatic intercourse, the rights of communication possessed by consuls. Those rights will no doubt be dealt with by the International Law Commission when it considers consular privileges and immunities.

Paragraph 5 should make it clear that personal immunity is only enjoyed by the diplomatic courier when exercising his official functions.

With regard to diplomatic wireless, Her Majesty's Government do not object to, nor insist upon licences for, wireless receiving and transmitting apparatus used by foreign diplomatic missions for the purpose of communicating with their respective Governments, nor do Her Majesty's Government require that permission should be sought for the operation of such apparatus. This practice has been established in contemplation of the unqualified right to freedom of communication which is internationally recognized, and is now laid down in paragraph 1 of this article. In this connexion it is to be observed that the relevant international conventions do not impose a specific obligation upon a receiving State or upon a sending State to require that a diplomatic mission should conform to the domestic legalization of the receiving State. The general obligation contained in international conventions (e.g. article 22, regulation 488 of the Radio Regulations of the International Telecommunication Union) should not be considered as applying to diplomatic wireless transmitters since such general obligations must be read, according to the principle generalia specialitus non derogent, as subject to the specific rules of international law (as laid down in paragraph 1 of this article) which secure the right of free diplomatic communication. Her Majesty's Government cannot therefore accept the statements in the last two sentences of paragraph (2) of the commentary to this article, as they are in conflict with the accepted right to freedom of communication, which, in the view of Her Majesty's Government, is correctly set out in the text of the article itself.

Article 28

Her Majesty's Government consider it desirable to specify more precisely the circumstances in which "property" (e.g. a motor car) belonging to a diplomatic agent should enjoy inviolability. In their view it would be preferable that inviolability should not be recognized absolutely unless the property is in the possession or under the control of the diplomatic agent.

There is an apparent contradiction between article 28 and article 34, paragraph 2.

Article 29

The term "real action" may not be a term of art in many legal systems: it is no longer such in English law. The precise scope of the exception in article 29, paragraph 1 (a) is thus not entirely clear.

i∕ Ibid., p. 54.

Article 31

This article does not take account of bilateral or multilateral social security agreements. The United Kingdom has entered into over twenty such agreements with European and Commonwealth countries, almost all of which include an article having specific reference to diplomatic officials. Her Majesty's Government would therefore wish to see a specific safeguard for such agreements incorporated into the article.

The term "social security" is differently interpreted in different countries, and in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government it is considered desirable that the term should in this article be regarded as having the meaning assigned to it in International Labour Organisation Convention No. 102 on Minimum Standards of Social Security. E/*

Her Majesty's Government consider that the drafting of article 31 might be improved if, in place of the last twelve words of the first sentence of this article, there were inserted the words "who are themselves subject to that legislation".

Since not every country interprets the term "social security" in the same way, it would be best to regard it as having the meaning assigned to it in ILO Convention No. 102. At the end of the commentary it should therefore be stated that "Social security has the meaning attributed to it in ILO Convention No. 102 on Minimum Standards of Social Security".

Article 32

As indicated in the comment on article 21, Her Majesty's Government do not consider that the exemption of premises held by a diplomatic agent from local dues or taxes (known in the United Kingdom as local rates) is required by customary international law, although it is the practice of Her Majesty's Government to make arrangements whereby a partial relief from those charges may be given on a basis of reciprocity. However, since the principle on which these arrangements are made is similar to that adopted in the draft, Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to accept the obligation of this article as an obligation arising out of a convention.

Her Majesty's Government would wish it to be made clear that the reference under sub-paragraph (a) to "indirect taxes" applies to taxes such as those which in the United Kingdom are known as excise duties, including the purchase tax, and to customs duties on goods not imported or cleared from bond by the diplomatic agent. In this connexion the words which follow, and qualify, the phrase "indirect taxes" may not be particularly apt, since in particular cases atax which is often incorporated in the price of goods is sometimes payable separately: e.g. in the United Kingdom tax is payable separately where goods which are subject to purchase tax are bought direct from a registered trader, or where goods which are subject to excise duty are purchased in bonded warehouses, although in both cases the tax would normally be incorporated in the price.

It is suggested that paragraph 1 of this article should make clear that the exemptions contemplated are applicable only to articles imported directly or withdrawn from bonded warehouses by the diplomatic agent or his mission. In paragraph 1 (a), in place of the phrase "Articles for the use of a diplomatic mission", the phrase "Articles consigned by the sending State for the official use of its diplomatic mission" is suggested. In paragraph 1 (b) the word "establishment" requires some clarification, since Her Majesty's Government could not agree to allowing the diplomat to import free of duty articles intended for the personal use of servants of his household.

The régime contemplated in the article should be without prejudice to the provisions of reciprocal arrangements existing or to be concluded between Her Majesty's Government and the Governments of other States.

In the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, the absolute exemption of a diplomatic agent and his family from customs duties is not required by customary international law. However, Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to accept an obligation to grant customs exemption as an obligation arising out of a convention.

Paragraph 1 of this article does not take account of the position in States (such as the United Kingdom) where customs exemptions for diplomatic agents are granted without the need for any legislation.

In the opinion of Her Majesty's Government it should be made clear that "customs duties" only cover foreign goods. For example, in the United Kingdom, goods subject to excise duty may be exported without payment of that duty, but on reimportation they may be delivered without payment of customs duties provided that there is paid an amount equal to the excise duty in force at the date of their reimportation: it is the opinion of Her Majesty's Government that no such "amount" should be regarded as a customs duty for the purpose of this article.

Article 35

Her Majesty's Government consider that this article is defective in several respects, and in its present form it would be extremely difficult for Her Majesty's Government to accept. The effect of the article as at present drafted would be to prevent the acquisition of the nationality of the receiving State by a child born there to a woman who was herself a member of the mission, even though her husband was not. This raises difficult issues of principle for it entails a departure from the principle upheld by Her Majesty's Government that in matters of nationality paternal descent alone is relevant. Further, such a child could well be stateless. Her Majesty's Government consider, therefore, that this article might, with advantage, be redrafted on the following lines:

"A child of a male member of the mission, not being a national of the receiving State, shall not, by sole reason of the child's birth in the territory of the receiving State, acquire the nationality of that State. Nor shall members of the mission, not being nationals of the receiving State, and members of their families forming part of their household, for any other reason acquire the nationality of the receiving State solely by the operation of its law."

In the opinion of Her Majesty's Government the relationship between article 36, paragraph 1, and articles 27 to 35 is not entirely satisfactory. Article 36, paragraph 1, speaking generally, confers upon various categories of persons the privileges and immunities of articles 27 to 35. There would, however, appear to be some inconsistency and ambiguity in the specific reference in some of those articles to only some of the categories of persons covered, in general terms, by article 36, paragraph 1. A more satisfactory arrangement, it is suggested, would be for articles 27 to 35 to refer only to the "diplomatic agent" as the beneficiary of the privileges and immunities there set out, and for the extension of those privileges and immunities to other persons to be regulated solely by article 36. If this were to be done, the present scope of these articles would be retained merely by amending article 36, paragraph 2, in order to cover the application of articles 31 and 35 to the service staff of the mission and their families, these being the only persons to whom articles 27 to 35 are at present not intended to apply and who are not already covered by the general extension in article 36, paragraph 1. The remarks in this paragraph of Her Majesty's Government's comment on the article are only directed to the need for some rearrangement in article 36, and must be read subject to any comments of Her Majesty's Government on the desirability of any specific privilege or immunity being enjoyed by any particular category of persons.

Her Majesty's Government consider it undesirable that customs privileges should be extended to the administrative and technical staff (i.e., non-diplomatic staff) of a mission and to their families, or to the relatives of a privileged diplomat other than his wife and dependent children or, in the case of an unmarried diplomat, a near relative acting as his official hostess.

It is suggested that the following words should be added to paragraph 1: "and shall be subject to the provisions of article 30 in regard to waiver of immunity".

In paragraph 2 of this article it is suggested that the reference to official acts might be expanded to refer to "acts done by them in their official capacity and within the limits of their authority".

Her Majesty's Government consider the drafting of paragraph 3 of this article to be unsatisfactory, and that the object of the proviso that jurisdiction shall only be exercised in such a manner as will avoid undue interference with the conduct of the business of the mission requires further consideration. If the intention is to impose an obligation in this sense on the Government of the receiving State, Her Majesty's Government would regard such an ill-defined obligation as incapable of satisfactory enforcement, due regard being paid to the need to leave to the discretion of the courts of law the decision as what constitutes undue interference.

Her Majesty's Government consider that paragraph 3 of this article may go too far in conferring tax exemption on private servants of "members of the mission", in the light of the very wide definition of the term "members of the mission" in article 1.

Article 37

Her Majesty's Government wish to repeat, in connexion with paragraph 2 of this article, the comment already made in the fifth paragraph of their comment on article 36 in connexion with the possible obligation to avoid undue interference with the conduct of the business of the mission.

Her Majesty's Government note that where the members of the family of an alien diplomat are nationals of the receiving State, their position is not made entirely clear by the convention. Such families are excluded from the provisions of article 36, paragraph 1, which confers the privileges and immunities of articles 27 to 35 upon the family of a diplomatic agent and others only if they are not nationals of the receiving State; nor are they covered by article 37 which, as interpreted in paragraph (7) of the commentary, applies only to the members of the family of a diplomat who is himself a national of the receiving State. In the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, members of the family of an alien diplomat who are nationals of the receiving State should be put in the category of persons who may enjoy only such privileges and immunities (if any) as are granted to them by the receiving State.

Article 38

In the opinion of Her Majesty's Government it would be most undesirable to grant as wide an exemption from estate duty as is contemplated in paragraph 3 of this article. Her Majesty's Government might not be able to accept a convention which would require exemption from estate duty on all movable property situated in this country (e.g. shares in an English company), although Her Majesty's Government could accept, if the deceased member of the mission is domiciled abroad, an exemption for his movable property situated in the premises of the mission (or in such premises held by the member of the mission which are inviolable in virtue of other provisions of the convention) and for his movable property situated abroad.

Article 39

Her Majesty's Government consider that the article should clearly establish that it is only while the diplomatic agent is passing through the territory of a third State on duty—that is to say, while proceeding to or from his post either on official business or on leave—that he is entitled to diplomatic immunity in the third State, and that a diplomatic agent who is merely visiting a third State is not automatically entitled to such immunity, even though he may be travelling with a diplomatic passport.

Article 40

Her Majesty's Government consider that it would be beneficial if it were to be accepted that States should use their utmost endeavours to secure that disputes which involve persons entitled to immunity from suit and legal process, and in which it is decided that that immunity shall not be waived, are settled by agreement between the parties. It may be considered suitable that the doyen of the diplomatic corps should, where appropriate, have some locus standi to promote such settlements.

19. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Transmitted by a note verbale of 10 June 1959 from the Permanent Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations

[Original: English]

General observations

The United States Government is of the opinion that the International Law Commission should be highly commended for its work in revising the draft articles on diplomatic intercourse and immunities. The revised draft articles, as they appear in chapter III of the International Law Commission's report on the work of its tenth session (28 April-4 July 1958),1 contain clear and concise statements of those principles of international law and practice which are universally recognized. With respect to matters in which the practice of Governments varies to such an extent that it cannot be said that there is a rule of international law on the subject which Governments must follow, the Commission has formulated a number of proposed rules. These rules are, on the whole, sensible, practical, and realistic. By usage, many of these rules proposed by the Commission will be accepted by Governments as indicative of the standard to be observed, and thus contribute to the progressive development of international law. The Commission is also to be commended for its not having attempted to formulate de novo rules of international law regarding certain questions which as of now are entirely unsettled and on which there is little prospect that Governments would agree.

The United States Government, just as other Governments which expressed reservations in the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly, is unable to agree with all of the Commission's conclusions and recommendations. However, it is pleased to note that most of the provisions to which it had objected were revised by the International Law Commission in a manner generally consonant with the United States concept of what international law and practice requires.

The United States continues to have reservations as to whether or not, after further consideration and revision, the draft articles should be submitted to Governments for signature as a multilateral convention, or as a codification of universally accepted rules on the subject.

Nevertheless, if a majority of Governments favour a convention on the subject, and agree on the text of a convention which is generally consistent with the spirit and intent of the draft articles formulated by the International Law Commission at its tenth session, the United States Government will of course consider the matter further.

There follows a statement of the observations of the United States Government on individual articles, with references, as appropriate, to its previous observations as published in the annex to the Commission's report m/wherein the United States commented on the draft articles prepared by the Commission at its ninth session.

Observations on individual articles

Article 1

The inclusion of a new article defining the diplomatic, administrative, technical and service staff of a mission was recommended by the United States and several other Governments. See the third paragraph of the United States observations on former article 6. The United States notes that

^{1/} Official Records of the General Assembly, Thirteenth Session, Supplement No. 9 (A/3859 and Corr.1).

Governments will no doubt differ in their interpretation of "(d) The 'diplomatic staff'" and "(g) The 'service staff'". The United States is of the view that the definition of the "service staff" should be deleted. The chauffeur and the cook, for instance, employed by the sending State, are in fact part of the administrative staff of the mission.

Article 5

Satisfactory. See United States observations on former article 1, recommending inclusion of such a provision regarding dual or multiple accreditation.

Article 6

No objection, in view of the commentary which follows after article 8. See United States observations on former article 4 and former article 7, paragraph 2.

Article 7

Generally satisfactory. Problems will continue to arise, however, in cases of dual nationals. See United States observations on paragraph (6) of commentary following former article 6.

Article 8

Satisfactory. See United States observations on paragraph 1 of former article 6.

Article 9

This article, which is new, is satisfactory except with respect to private servants. The United States agrees with the commentary thereon but notes that the article itself is broader in scope. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs should be notified regarding only those private servants who are present in the receiving State solely by virtue of their employment by a member thereof, and of those private servantsengagedlocally who are entitled by virtue of such employment to claim diplomatic privileges and immunities. Neither of these conditions is ordinarily present in the case, for instance, of a day maid who is a national of the receiving State employed by a member of a diplomatic mission, whether on a full-time or part-time basis.

Article 10

The United States continues to hold the view that it is impractical to frame a rule on the size of staff, for the reasons stated in its observations on former article 7. However, if there is to be a rule on the subject, paragraph 1 is probably satisfactory.

Paragraph 2 is objectionable. The United States opposes, in principle, unwarranted discrimination in any form. However, the United States is of the opinion that a receiving State is entitled to vary, on a basis of reciprocity, its treatment of members of diplomatic missions accredited to it in any matters not clearly contrary to established principles of international law. See United States views on article 44 and United States observations on former article 7.

Paragraph (5) of the commentary refers to an "arbitral or judicial decision". The receiving State's objections to the size of a mission or the inclusion in the mission's staff of officers of a particular category are sometimes based on concern for internal security. In such case, it is unlikely that the receiving State will submit the question to arbitration or to a judicial body for decision.

Article 11

This article, which is new, accords with the views of the United States Government.

Article 12

No real objection, but see United States observations on former articles 8 and 13.

Article 13

Satisfactory, but see United States observations on former article 10.

Article 14

Satisfactory. See United States observations on former article 11.

Article 15

Satisfactory. See United States observations on former article 12.

Article 16

Satisfactory. See United States observations on former article 13.

In paragraph (7) of the commentary following article 16, the United States Government suggests that the second sentence thereof should begin "This staff may comprise...".

Paragraph (8) should be revised to delete the reference to "military", "naval" or "air" officers, as it is well established that service attachés would be considered as "members of the mission's diplomatic staff" as defined in paragraph (7) of the commentary.

Article 17

Satisfactory, particularly in light of the commentary. See United States observations on former article 9.

As to paragraph (2) of the commentary, the sending State, rather than the receiving State, would seem to be in the better position to judge whether or not the head of the mission is able to perform his functions.

Article 18

The United States agrees that it should be always permissible to use the flag and emblem of the sending State on the premises of the mission. The statement regarding the right to use these on the residence and the means of transport of the head of the mission may not as yet be generally accepted by Governments as a rule of international law. The United States Government, for its part, has no objection to the principle therein enunciated. However, the United States continues to believe that the International Law Commission should not undertake to lay down new rules.

SECTION II. DIPLOMATIC PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES

The United States agrees generally with the Commission's conclusion as reflected in paragraph (3) of the introductory commentary on section II.

Article 19

Generally satisfactory, but see United States observations on former article 15.

Article 20

Generally satisfactory, but see United States observations on former article 16 and commentary thereon, particularly as regards requisitioning and attachment.

Article 21

The United States agrees that the sending State and the head of the mission, as lessee, should be exempt from all taxes imposed by law by reason of being a lessee or occupant. The United States cannot agree, however, to exempting a lessor from taxes imposed by law on him merely because the premises are leased to a sending State or to the head of the mission, See United States observations on former article 17.

Article 22

Text satisfactory, but commentary thereon unsatisfactory. See United States observations on former article 18.

Article 23

Generally satisfactory, but see United States observations on former article 19.

Article 24

The second sentence of the commentary, which is new, is a good addition. However, see United States observations on former article 20. See also United States views on article 44.

Article 25

The United States observations on former article 21 reflect United States views generally regarding the substance of the article and commentary thereon.

Paragraph 2 of the article, which is new, provides that the official correspondence of a diplomatic mission shall be inviolable. Since freedom of communication and inviolability of diplomatic bags are provided for in paragraphs 1, 3 and 4, paragraph 2 apparently refers to official correspondence transmitted other than by diplomatic pouch, presumably by mail. The United States Customs Regulations provide, as do the customs regulations of many other countries, for the inspection of sealed envelopes and parcels when believed to contain merchandise. Moreover, unless official correspondence transmitted by mail is identified as such by some external means, as are diplomatic bags, the fact of its actually being official correspondence cannot be ascertained with certainty except by examination. Accordingly, it is believed that paragraph 2 should be considered further.

Paragraph (2) of the commentary restates the Commission's position that permission to use wireless transmitters should be granted on a non-discriminatory basis, rather than on a basis of reciprocity. The United States views on the principle of non-discrimination are set forth in the United States observations on former article 7 (Limitation of staff) and former article 20 (Free movement). However, see United States views on article 44.

Article 26

No objection.

Article 27

Satisfactory.

Article 28

The United States agrees generally with the apparent intent of this article. However, see United States observations on paragraph 2 of former article 23 concerning commercial ventures.

With respect to the reference in the last sentence of the commentary to article 20, paragraph 3, the United States notes that a "search" of premises is to be distinguished from a "search" of a bank account. Evidence concerning financial transactions supplied by a bank pursuant to subpoena would often be material to the determination of issues contested in the sort of actions contemplated in sub-paragraphs (a), (b) (c) of paragraph 1 of article 29, post.

Article 29

See United States observations on former article 24 and United States views on article 28, supra.

Paragraph (10) of the commentary on paragraph 2 of article 29 appears based on the premise that the only testimony a diplomatic agent might be called upon to give would be testimony in his own interest. This premise seems unwarranted, and inconsistent with the exemptions from immunity from local jurisdiction provided in the preceding paragraph of the article. The testimony of a diplomatic officer who was the executor of a will, for instance, would often be essential to establishing the facts at issue in an estate case. If he is to be made subject to the jurisdiction of a local court with respect to certain actions, then he should enjoy no personal immunity with respect to those actions.

The United States is of the opinion that in general a diplomatic agent ought not to be immune from local jurisdiction in the situations outlined in sub-paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of paragraph 1. However, the United States does not believe that at this time article 29 as drafted may be considered as a rule of international law.

Article 30

As stated in the United States observations on former article 25, the United States does not believe that the reference to implied waivers is consistent with the theory that immunity is for the benefit of the Government and can only be waived by the Government.

Article 31

This provision would exempt from compulsory coverage under social security legislation the members of a diplomatic mission and members of their families, if they are not nationals of the receiving State. However, voluntary participation is not excluded to the extent that it is permitted by the legislation of the receiving State. The exemption does not extend to servants and employees of the members of the mission if compulsory coverage applies to such servants or employees. Although the United States expresses general agreement with the principle of this article, it should be noted that compulsory coverage may be equivalent to a tax, if current social security benefits are not provided or if there is no likelihood that the covered employee will remain in the receiving country long enough to qualify for deferred benefits, such as retirement annuities. Consideration might therefore be given to an exemption in appropriate cases from social security coverage of employees who are not nationals or residents of the receiving country. Also, this article should be considered with respect to article 32 (Exemption from taxation).

Article 32

There is no objection to the list of exemptions to be accorded a diplomatic agent by this article. However, a diplomatic agent may, under articles 1 and 7, be a national of the receiving State. It is noted that the privileges and immunities to be accorded a diplomatic agent who is a national of the receiving State appear to be limited by article 37. However, in view of the specific denial of tax immunities under article 36 in the case of other employees who are nationals of the receiving State, the tax status of diplomatic agents who are not nationals of the sending State should be clarified. The United States is of the view that the listed tax exemptions should not be accorded nationals of the receiving State. The minimum exclusion from the scope of the exemption should comprise: (1) a national of the receiving State; (2) a person who has been resident in the receiving State prior to his employment with the diplomatic mission; and (3) an individual who waives his tax-exempt status, perhaps to qualify for immigrant status.

The preceding observations concerning a diplomatic agent under article 32 are equally applicable to article 36, which extends various privileges and immunities, including tax immunities, to members of the family of a diplomatic agent and members of the service staff of a mission as well as private servants of members of a mission.

Article 33

No objection, except in the case of diplomatic agents who may be nationals or permanent residents of the receiving State.

Article 34

This article is somewhat broader in its scope in extending exemptions from inspection of baggage than is now required by international law or accorded under the practice of international courtesy.

The United States has no objection to paragraph 1 of article 34, which reads: "The receiving State shall, in accordance with the regulations established by its legislation, grant exemption from customs duties on: ...", if these words are intended to cover local laws, rules, or regulations. It is suggested, however, that paragraph 1 might be revised to read: "The receiving State shall, in accordance with such laws or regulations as it may adopt, grant exemptions from customs duties or other taxes or charges imposed by reason of importation on:...".

In addition, it is not clear whether an excise tax imposed on imports is covered by the exemption. If exemption from excise tax on imports is intended, it should be made applicable only to imports consigned directly to a diplomatic agent or mission and not to imports purchased by such diplomatic agencies or missions through ordinary trade channels.

Article 35

This represents existing United States law on the subject and is in conformity with international law as the United States interprets it. See United States observations on former article 29.

Consideration might be given to an expansion of this article to provide that an individual who is present in the receiving State solely by virtue of his employment as a member of a mission should not acquire residence in such State for tax (and possibly other) purposes.

Article 36

The revisions made by the International Law Commission in the text of former article 28 have not overcome the objections the United States has previously noted to that article. The present text is again an effort to prescribe rules of conduct applicable to diplomatic intercourse and immunities, rather than a precise statement of existing rules. It is not to be expected that many Governments will favour the adoption of the policy reflected in article 36 and the commentary thereon, representing as it does such a wide departure from their present practice. Generous as the United States is in granting privileges and immunities to foreign nationals, it could not subscribe to the principle that members of families of employees (as distinct from officers) of the mission enjoy virtually the same privileges and immunities as officers do.

The United States believes that members of the service staff should have immunity for official acts irrespective of nationality.

It is believed that the tax exemptions granted in paragraphs 2 and 3 should not be available to persons admitted to the receiving State for permanent residence. Also, no person should be exempt from taxes on salaries and emoluments not paid by the sending State direct.

Article 37

The United States is of the opinion that a national of the receiving State who is a member of the staff of a diplomatic mission is entitled to full immunity with respect to an official act performed by him while acting within the scope of his functions.

The United States therefore suggests that paragraph 1 of the article be amended by inserting after the words "diplomatic agent", the words "or other member of the staff of the mission". This is consistent with the definition of the staff of the mission, as contained in article 1.

The United States further suggests that paragraph 2 be revised and broken into two paragraphs, to read as follows:

- "2. Private servants who are nationals of the receiving State shall enjoy privileges and immunities only to the extent admitted by the receiving State.
- "3. The receiving State must exercise its jurisdiction over persons named in paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article in such a manner as not to interfere unduly with the conduct of the business of the mission."

Article 38

Paragraphs 1 and 2 are generally satisfactory, but see United States observations on former article 31.

The reference in paragraph (2) of the commentary regarding import duties due on articles arriving after the addressee has ceased to enjoy diplomatic immunity, however, presents special problems.

Paragraph 3, which is new, could more appropriately be included as part of article 32, supra. Also, the paragraph as drafted conflicts with the United States view that the receiving State may taxthe estate of its national, located in its territory, as a condition precedent to the right of the heir or beneficiary to receive the proceeds thereof. This is true, even in the case of the estate of a deceased member of the family of a foreign diplomatic officer.

The United States is further of the view that the exemption should not apply if the individual involved is a national of a country other than the sending State. Finally the United States believes that the exemption from death duties, where applicable, should apply not to all movable property of the deceased but to a limited amount of property, either movable or immovable. In general, the United States takes the view that the personnel of a diplomatic mission, temporarily present in a receiving State, should be subject to estate taxes as if they were non-resident aliens, with the exception of movable property belonging to the estate of a deceased member of the staff entitled to tax exemptions under article 32 or article 36, and used by him in the performance of his official duties. The article might be revised to provide that any part of the estate of such deceased person which does not exceed in value two times the amount of all official emoluments, salaries, and allowances received by such person for the year immediately preceding his death, shall be deemed conclusively to constitute property used by him in the performance of his official duties.

Generally satisfactory, subject to United States observations on former articles 21 and 32.

Paragraph 2 of article 39 is on the whole a desirable addition to the former text. It should be made clear, however, what obligation with respect to territorial jurisdiction is involved in the phrase, "shall not hinder the passage". The third State should not be expected to accord greater immunity to a member of the administrative staff, for instance, than the receiving State must accord him.

SECTION III. CONDUCT OF THE MISSION AND OF ITS MEMBERS TOWARDS THE RECEIVING STATE

Article 40

Satisfactory.

SECTION IV. END OF THE FUNCTION OF A DIPLOMATIC AGENT

Article 41

Satisfactory. See United States observations on former article 34.

Article 42

Satisfactory. See United States observations on former article 35.

Article 43

Satisfactory. See United States observations on former article 36.

SECTION V. NON-DISCRIMINATION

Article 44

This article, which is new, embodies the principle of reciprocity in relations between States. It thus meets most of the United States objections to the provisions in various articles of the 1957 draft that the receiving State shall not discriminate in the treatment it accords the various diplomatic missions in its territory, and members of such missions. See United States observations on former article 7 and former article 20.

SECTION VI. SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 45

As stated in the United States observations on former article 37, this article should be deleted if the draft articles are not submitted to Governments in the form of a convention.

20. CANADA

Transmitted by a letter of 25 August 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Canada to the United Nations

Article 15, Precedence

A redraft of paragraph 3 of this article is suggested in the following terms:

"3. The present article is without prejudice to any existing practice in the receiving State regarding the precedence of the representative of the Pope and Commonwealth High Commissioners."

Article 20. Inviolability of the mission premises

In the Canadian view there should be some modification of the general principle of inviolability of the mission premises in case of a fire or other emergency which threatens the lives or property of nationals of the receiving State. In the comments submitted on the 1957 draft, N several Governments pointed out that inviolability should not preclude the taking of steps by the local authorities to extinguish a fire or to prevent the commission of a crime on the premises. In his conclusions on the observations received from Governments on the 1957 draft, Mr. A. E. F. Sandström, Special Rapporteur of the International Law Commission, conceded that in cases of extreme urgency the immunities must give way to the paramount needs of life itself. In his general observations on the draft submitted to the International Law Commission at its tenth session in 1958, the Rapporteur agreed with the opinion expressed by the Government of the Netherlands that privileges and immunities do not preclude the taking of special measures by the receiving State in emergencies. However, no reference has been made to emergencies in article 20 or the commentary. In the view of the Canadian Government, the commentary on this article should specify that the general principle of inviolability of the mission premises does not preclude the taking of appropriate steps by the local authorities in cases of public emergency or danger. The emphasis should be on public emergency or danger.

Article 23. Facilities

This article should not be interpreted as requiring the receiving State to provide special facilities such as parking space (which missions are at liberty to acquire as part of the mission premises, under article 19). Accordingly, while it is an underlying assumption that requests for assistance under article 23 will be kept within reasonable limits, the text might be improved if it were redrafted to read as follows:

"The receiving State shall accord, to the fullest possible extent, facilities necessary for the performance of the mission's functions."

Article 24. Free movement

It is desirable to establish the general principle of free movement laid down in this article. However, the application of travel controls should be conditional upon reciprocity. The Canadian Government considers that the article, as it stands, is generally satisfactory on the understanding that article 44 would permit the receiving State to apply the rule of free movement restrictively in cases where this rule is so applied to its own mission in the sending State. Some clarification seems to be needed of what is meant by the words "freedom of movement". Does this mean that members of the mission should be free to travel to any areas which are not closed to citizens of the foreign country concerned?

Article 25. Freedom of communication n/lbid., annex.

The Canadian Government reserves its position in respect of this article.

Article 27. Personal inviolability

The Canadian Government considers that the sentence in paragraph (1) of the commentary reading: "This principle does not exclude in respect of the diplomatic agent either measures of self-defence or, in exceptional circumstances, measures to prevent him from committing crimes or offences" could usefully be included in the text of the article itself as a new second paragraph.

Article 28. Inviolability of residence and property

As in the case of article 20 (Inviolability of the mission premises), the Canadian Government is of the view that the commentary to this article should contain a clear statement providing that the inviolability of the diplomatic agent's residence does not preclude the taking of appropriate steps by the local authorities in cases of public urgency or danger.

Article 32. Exemption from taxation

In the Canadian view, article 32 should not provide an exemption from taxes of a minor nature such as amusement, entertainment and restaurant taxes, because of the administrative difficulty of remitting taxes of this kind. Again, while the Commission has sought to explain the meaning of the term "indirect taxes" in sub-paragraph (a) by adding the words "incorporated in the price of goods or services", it would appear that this does not solve the difficulty. Usage has given the terms direct and indirect taxes different meanings in different countries. The words "incorporated in" can be circumvented if diplomatic agents arrange to purchase goods "tax extra" from the manufacturer. Where excise taxes, for example, are applied at the manufacturer's level, as in Canada, and exemption is sought at the retail level, the tax is no longer identifiable in any true sense; moreover, recovery in these circumstances would involve a laborious retracing of the tax back to the original level at which it was imposed.

In an effort to avoid these difficulties it is suggested that sub-paragraph (a) might be redrafted as follows, with the addition of two new sub-paragraphs (b) and (c):

- "(a) Taxes of a minor nature such as amusement, entertainment, restaurant and hotel room taxes and the like;
- "(b) Taxes on goods other than those on automobiles, to-bacco products and spirituous liquors;
 - "(c) Taxes incorporated in the price of services".

This wording would avoid any confusion stemming from the use of the term "indirect taxes" and would make a diplomatic agent liable for taxes of a minor nature such as amusement and entertainment taxes. It would ensure that a diplomatic agent receives exemption from taxes levied by the receiving State on automobiles, tobacco products and spirituous liquors, but not from taxes levied on other goods. The substitution in sub-paragraph (b) of the word "on" for the phrase "incorporated in the price of" is intended to prevent arrangements for purchasing "tax extra" from manufacturers. Alternatively, the words "commodity taxes" could be substituted for "taxes on goods".

It is thought that in the case of services this problem is not likely to arise and the wording of the International Law Commission's draft has therefore been retained. Accordingly, if the tax is incorporated in the price of services the diplomatic agent would be liable; if the tax is identifiable and is not incorporated in the price of the service he would not be liable.

The Canadian Government reserves its position in so far as the imposition of regional or municipal taxes is concerned and, with regard to the present sub-paragraph (c), refers to its comments under article 38.

Article 34. Exemption from customs duties and inspection

In the Canadian view this article should be redrafted to specify that articles for the personal use of members of the family of a diplomatic agent belonging to his household, including articles intended for his establishment, should be exempt from customs duties only if the purchases are made by the diplomatic agent himself and imported in his name. Members of the diplomat's family would thus benefit from the article but would not be entitled to purchase and import goods free of customs duties in their own names.

Article 36. Persons entitled to privileges and immunities

The Canadian Government reserves its position in respect of this article but has the following preliminary comments to offer. In principle, the grant of immunity to administrative and technical staff who are not nationals of the receiving State would give recognition to a trend in State practice which appears to be fairly general. However, there is much less justification for extending to administrative and technical staff, together with the members of their families forming part of their respective households, the same privileges as are accorded to diplomatic agents. The Canadian Government's preliminary view is that duty-free import privileges for administrative and technical staff, together with members of their families, should be restricted to the first entry of personal and household effects, including automobiles.

Article 38. Duration of privileges and immunities

The Canadian Government reserves its position in respect of the succession duties provisions of this article.

21. POLAND

Transmitted by a note verbale of 6 August 1959 from the Permanent Mission of the Polish People's Republic to the United Nations

The Government of the Polish People's Republic considers that the work done by the International Law Commission on the subject of diplomatic intercourse and immunities constitutes a considerable contribution to the unification and development of diplomatic law. The draft articles adopted in this matter by the International Law Commission at its tenth session present as a whole a proper basis for the codification of diplomatic law because they constitute a compilation of principles concerning diplomatic intercourse which have been settled during long periods of time, and also of principles which are now applied in the actual practice of States.

Some of the detailed provisions as presented in the draft, however, raise objections and require modification and amendment. Among those are articles 7 and 37 of the draft.

Article 7 provides:

"Members of the diplomatic staff of the mission may be appointed from amongst the nationals of the receiving State only with the express consent of that State."

Even though the formulation of article 7 makes the appointment of a member of the diplomatic staff dependent on the express consent of the receiving State, in this way reducing it to an exception, the exception itself, however, raises serious doubts. The practice of appointing subjects of the receiving State was applied in the remote past; it was, however, later abandoned. The Government of the Polish People's Republic does not object to the employment by the foreign mission of administrative and technical staff from amongst the nationals of the receiving State with the express consent of this receiving State; it strongly objects, however, to the adoption of the principle of appointment of the head of the mission and of the diplomatic staff from amongst the nationals of the receiving State. Such a principle is no longer in use at present. This institution is contrary to the very aim of diplomatic representation and may create undesired conflicts between the loyalty of such persons towards the sending State and towards the receiving State.

The situation foreseen in article 7 of the draft, linked with article 37, might in practice create many conflicts. It might lead to the situation in which a diplomatic representative who is a citizen of the receiving country could commit a crime with impunity in his own State so that other citizens might be exposed to the risk of being refused a remedy by the courts of justice in case of his illegal activity.

The next question which arises is the problem of persons entitled to privileges and immunities. As far as the limits of diplomatic privileges and immunities are concerned, as granted to the members of the mission in article 36 and others, they raise doubts both subjective and objective. In paragraph 1 of this article, diplomatic privileges and immunities are extended to the administrative and technical staff of the mission and to the members of their families, thus placing them on the same level as the diplomatic agent. This does not correspond fully to the existing practice.

There exists a very essential question linked with the problem of privileges and immunities which was omitted in the Commission's draft, thus creating a loophole with respect to the problem of employment in the diplomatic mission of nationals of a third State residing in the receiving State.

The International Law Commission, in granting diplomatic privileges and immunities to the members of the mission, has adopted the method of negative exclusion. The point is that the privileges and immunities are granted if the members of the mission "are not nationals of the receiving State" (article 36, para. 1, and article 31). Thus a situation is created in which nationals of a third State employed in the mission, residing in the receiving State, enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities equally with the nationals of the sending State and enjoy greater privileges than the nationals of the receiving State

It is the considered view of the Polish Government that there do not exist any well-founded reasons for granting nationals of a third State a more privileged status than nationals of the receiving State. While the receiving State may require trial and punishment of the member of a mission being a national of the sending State in his own country, the third State, on the other hand, is not bound to recognize and may always object to the exercise of its domestic jurisdiction by the sending State; and the sending State would not have any possibility of exercising its own jurisdiction over nationals of certain States. Thus there might arise a situation where such persons will be subject to no jurisdiction for crimes committed.

Another problem which gives rise to objection is the question of waiver of immunity of diplomatic agents. Article 30, paragraph 2, which provides that "in criminal proceedings, waiver must always be express" is clear and unobjectionable. Paragraph 3 of this article provides, however, that "in civil or administrative proceedings, waiver may be express or implied". As diplomatic immunity is granted to the diplomatic agent only in the interest of the sending State and results from mutual intercourse between both States, the implied waiver of immunity should not be admitted.

The right to waive the immunity is available to the State alone, as the person of the diplomatic agent is not the object of immunity, since its purpose is to enable him to perform his duties in full freedom and without fear. Immunity is enjoyed by the agent because he is the representative of a State, therefore neither the head of the mission nor any other person belonging to the diplomatic staff can properly accept the jurisdiction of the receiving State on his own initiative without the consent of the sending State. For the validity of such waiver of immunity the consent of the appropriate authorities of the sending State is necessary.

Objection may also be made to the formulation of paragraph 4, which separates the waiver of immunity from jurisdiction with respect to civil or administrative proceedings from the waiver of immunity in respect of the execution of the judgement. Such a solution may in practice lead to many misunderstandings. The Polish Government considers that the waiver of the immunity of diplomatic agents from jurisdiction, which may only occur after an express consent of the sending State, should automatically include a waiver of any immunity from the execution of a judgement. According to the principles of logic and the principle of good faith (bona fide), the declaration of the acceptance of the local jurisdiction must be understood in the spirit of what the claimants generally claim in addressing themselves to the courts, i.e., not only the theoretical confirmation of their rights but also the execution of the judgement confirming them.

If the solution of the International Law Commission were accepted, the person enjoying the immunity could safely bring any claim because, in case of a judgement unfavourable to him, he would not need to fear any execution of the judgement even in so far as it awarded costs against him.

In submitting the above comments the Government of the Polish People's Republic reserves the right to take its definite position on the draft in question in the future.

Transmitted by a letter of 2 September 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Denmark to the United Nations

In addition to the observations already submitted, the draft Convention gives rise to the following further comments on the part of Denmark:

Article 32

The said article is not in conformity with current Danish legislation in regard to the points given below:

(1) In cases where a diplomatic agent is a Danish national or was fully liable to payment of taxes to the Danish State at the time of his appointment to the staff of a foreign diplomatic mission, exemption from income tax as provided for under Danish law is only applicable in respect of the remuneration received from that mission. Furthermore, exemption from taxation on property, as provided by Danish law, is not applicable in such cases.

In special cases, however, the Ministry of Finance may grant exemption from taxation to foreign nationals who at the time of their appointment to a diplomatic or consular mission in Denmark were liable to payment of taxes to the Danish State.

(2) In cases where a diplomatic agent becomes the owner of entailed estates and trust settlements controlled by the Danish State, or is the beneficiary of Danish family endowments or family foundations, he will be taxable according to the Danish legislation governing the taxation of inheritances and gifts.

Article 39

There are no Danish objections to the draft, provided that the rule does not imply exemption from visa formalities if the country of transit otherwise requires observance of such formalities by nationals of the sending State.

22. PAKISTAN

Transmitted by a letter of 9 September 1959 from the Acting Permanent Representative of Pakistan to the United Nations

Article 3

The Government of Pakistan consider that in view of subparagraph (d) of this article, functions of a mission do not extend to collecting information through secret channels or in contravention of the laws of the receiving State. Attempts by some of the foreign diplomatic missions to secure classified information through clandestine sources, or through undue contacts or through fraternization, are all matters beyond the scope of lawful means and could therefore be objected to.

Article 5

The Government of Pakistan consider that it should not be necessary for the appointing State to obtain prior concurrence of the State to which the diplomatic envoy is already accredited.

Article 22

The Government of Pakistan consider that the provisions of this article are difficult to accept. In view of these provisions several situations may arise which may be difficult to tackle. Therefore, the Government of Pakistan feel that the inviolability should be restricted to documents and archives in a diplomatic bag or within the diplomatic premises, or those in the physical possession of a diplomatic officer or a diplomatic courier.

Article 25

That in the last sentence of paragraph (2) of the commentary under article 25, the words "in force in the receiving State" may be inserted between the words "regulations" and "applicable".

Article 29

The Government of Pakistan are not clear as to how paragraph 3 of this article will operate when measures are taken in respect of the exceptions in sub-paragraphs (\underline{a}) , (\underline{b}) and (\underline{c}) of paragraph 1.

Article 32

The Government of Pakistan feel that sub-paragraph (a) of this article should be reworded: "Indirect taxes incorporated in the price of goods or services whether charged separately or not".

Article 34

The Government of Pakistan feel that the word "official" may be inserted before the word "use" in paragraph 1 (a) of this article.

Article 36

The Government of Pakistan are unable to grant privilege of duty-free imports and other taxes, etc. to home-based non-diplomatic staff of foreign diplomatic missions. The question may be left to be governed by reciprocal arrangements between the sending and receiving States.

23. ITALY

Comments transmitted by a note verbale, dated 22 September 1959, from the Permanent Mission of Italy to the United Nations

The Italian Government states that it is, in principle, in agreement with the draft articles concerning diplomatic intercourse and immunities drawn up by the International Law Commission at its ninth session, and subsequently amended, and recalling its observations and proposals transmitted by letter on 19 April 1958, 2/it has the honour to submit the following additional proposals:

Article 10

The wording of the article might be improved by the introduction of the principle that the size of the diplomatic mission should be in proportion to the scale of the relations between the sending country and the receiving country.

Article 20

The order of paragraphs 2 and 3 should be reversed. In addition, the principle of the inviolability of furnishings intended for the mission should also be affirmed, even where such furnishings are not on the diplomatic premises but, for example, on the way from one place to another.

Article 24

The principle might be introduced into this article that any limitation on freedom of movement for reasons of national security must be imposed by the receiving State through internal regulations of a legislative and general character, which would apply to all citizens of the State. This would prevent any possibility of discrimination against members of the diplomatic mission.

Article 29

The second part of sub-paragraph (a) should be deleted. The last words would then be "receiving State".

Immunity from civil and administrative jurisdiction should be excluded in actions relating to succession, but it should be specified that this is valid only in the case of succession proceedings instituted in the territory of the receiving State (sub-paragraph (b)).

In regard to sub-paragraph (c) it would appear to be advisable to lay down the general rule of conduct that diplomatic agents should as far as possible avoid exercising activities outside their official functions.

A reference to provisional measures might be added to paragraph 3, dealing with measures of execution.

Article 31

The last sentence is redundant and should be deleted in its entirety.

Article 34

The "accessory duties" charged by a number of countries should be added to the reference to customs duties.

Article 35

The entire article could be dispensed with and should be deleted.

Article 36

The Italian Government is of the opinion that the extension of privileges and immunities to the administrative and technical staff of a mission and to members of their families might well give rise to strong criticism and to objections. It is therefore proposed that diplomatic privileges and immunities should be granted to the above-mentioned staff only in the case of acts performed in the course of their duties, and should not be extended to members of their families.

The Italian Government considers that the draft convention makes no provision for the insertion in the domestic legislation of the Contracting Parties of a provision adopting the "diplomatic clause" for the purpose of rescinding leases contracted by members of the mission. The introduction of such a clause would be desirable, since it would help diplomatic agents in their assignments and in carrying out their duties.

Comments transmitted by a note verbale, dated 16 October 1959, from the Permanent Representative of Luxembourg to the United Nations

The Permanent Representative of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg wishes to take this opportunity to express the appreciation of the Luxembourg Government for the excellent work done by the International Law Commission. On the basis of this work, the Luxembourg Government hopes that these articles can soon be drafted in a final form which will serve as a bond between States.

Article 1

The definitions of sub-paragraphs (a) (head of the mission) and (d) (diplomatic staff) are tautological; these passages could easily be omitted. With respect to the article as a whole, the Luxembourg Government thinks that it properly belongs at the end rather than at the beginning of the text.

Article 5

It might be helpful to make this article more complete by taking into account the reverse situation, namely the case where two or more States accredit a joint mission to one or more third States. It seems increasingly likely that the development of the multiple forms of regional co-operation will induce States to provide jointly for the protection of their foreign interests.

Article 15

The practice referred to in article 5, namely that of accrediting a mission to two or more States at the same time, raises a problem with respect to the precedence of heads of mission, since it seems hardly desirable that heads of mission who are accredited to a capital without residing there should take precedence over those who actually reside in that capital. It would be particularly inappropriate if a head of mission should in that way become the dean of the diplomatic corps in a capital where he had no actual residence. Consideration should therefore be given to the possibility of setting up two sub-groups in each category, precedence being given to that group of heads of mission who actually reside in the city to which they are accredited.

Article 17

It seems desirable to indicate, either in the text of the article or at least in the commentary, that the chargé d'affaires ad interim can also be chosen from among the personnel of some other diplomatic mission. This possibility is of some importance for States whose missions have a rather small staff. In some circumstances, these States may be obliged to have recourse to a friendly mission in order to fill a temporary vacancy.

Article 34

This article should also include exemption from excise taxes or, to use a more general term, consumer taxes. Such an addition might possibly make it necessary to redraft article 32, sub-paragraph (a), in view of the fact that consumer taxes are often incorporated in the price of goods.

Article 37

The Luxembourg Government suggests the deletion of the provisions in paragraphs 1 and 2 expressly allowing for the granting of wider privileges and immunities to diplomatic agents and staff members who are nationals of the receiving State, since these provisions add nothing material to the text and might serve to encourage unjustified claims.

22. PAKISTAN (continued)

Transmitted by a letter of 30 October 1959 from the Deputy Permanent Representative of Pakistan to the United Nations

Article 10

The provision for non-discrimination in paragraph 2 of article 10 appears to be accepted by this Government. The provision would be inept in paragraph 1, but its acceptance in paragraph 2 is a matter of policy.

Article 29

The draft commentary of this Government on paragraph 3 of article 29 might be omitted. The measures of execution envisaged could take many forms (e.g. seizing his personal property, prohibiting an activity) none of which would offend the prohibitions in paragraph 3.

Article 32

Sub-paragraph (a) of article 32, would, it is presumed, settle the question which recently arose about the liability of a mission or diplomat serving drinks at a reception at a hotel to excise duties under a provincial statute in Karachi. If the mission or diplomat had imported the drink free of customs, this sub-paragraph would prevent the charging of excise.

25. THAILAND

Comments transmitted by a note verbale, dated 11 November 1959, from the Permanent Mission of Thailand to the United Nations

His Thai Majesty's Government have studied with interest the draft articles formulated by the International Law Commission on the subject of diplomatic intercourse and immunities, and while being of the opinion that these draft articles form a good basis for the conclusion of a convention on this subject, beg to submit the following views and comments for consideration:

Article 7

The Royal Thai Government are of the opinion that the nationality of a person should be determined by the law of the receiving State, and for this reason, propose that this article should read:

"Members of the diplomatic staff of the mission may be appointed from amongst persons who are the nationals of the receiving State under the law of such State, only with the express consent of that State."

Article 9

In order that this article may apply to the heads of the missions as well, the Royal Thai Government submit that the words "of the staff" be deleted.

Article 25

In paragraph 1, put a comma after the words "... diplomatic couriers" and add the word "bag". The sentence will therefore read: "... diplomatic couriers, bag and messages in code or cipher."

Article 36

Paragraph 1 should be the subject of special agreements between States concerned and not be included in the general convention.

Article 45

The Royal Thai Government is of the opinion that this clause should be included in a special protocol.

DOCUMENT A/C.6/L.458

Financial implications of the draft resolution contained in document A/C.6/L.455 and Add.1: note by the Secretary-General

[12 November 1959]

- 1. The draft resolution contained in document A/C.6/L.455 and Add.1 requests the Secretary-General to convoke, not later than the spring of 1961, an international conference of plenipotentiaries "to consider the question of diplomatic intercourse and immunities and to embody the results of its work in an international convention, together with such ancillary instruments as may be necessary". It further requests the Secretary-General to arrange for the necessary staff and facilities required for the conference.
- 2. The Secretary-General has considered the possibility of convening this conference for a period of eight weeks both in 1960 and 1961 at the places indicated in paragraph 2 of the draft resolution. It would be possible to hold this conference at Headquarters either beginning in mid-July 1960 or during the period March-April 1961 with minimum additional expenditures, as indicated in paragraphs 5 and 6 below.
- 3. In so far as the European Office is concerned, it would be possible to accommodate this conference following the closing of the summer session of the Economic and Social Council in 1960, beginning on 15 August, or during the period January-February 1961. There is, however, an important point which the Secretary-General wishes to bring to the attention of members of this Committee concerning the holding of conferences in the European Office. The modernization programme of the Palais des Nations will, from 1 July 1960, affect the assembly hall and contiguous area which, as a consequence, would not be available before May 1961. Should the conference be held in Geneva, it could only be accommodated in one of the main conference rooms. The seating facilities in this case would be limited to a maximum of one delegate and two advisers at the table, for each State attending - the conference, on the assumption that the attendance would consist of some eighty-six Member and non-member States. Further seating in the conference room for members of delegations, specialized agencies and other interested inter-governmental organizations, would be very limited. Subject to these observations, the costs involved are also indicated in paragraphs 5 and 6 below.

- 4. As regards the convening of this conference in Vienna, this would be dependent upon an official invitation being extended by the Government of Austria, and the provisions of General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII) would apply. The Secretary-General understands that such an invitation might be forthcoming, but in so far as 1960 is concerned, the dates of 23 July to 27 August preferred by the Austrian Government would not only overlap with the holding of the summer session of the Economic and Social Council in Geneva but would not provide the full period of eight weeks which is considered necessary. Should it be decided that the conference be held in Vienna in 1961, the Secretary-General would prefer the period March-April, in the light of the conference programme already envisaged for that year.
- 5. The estimates for holding the conference in 1960 would be as follows:

	New York	Geneva
	United States	dollars
Travel and subsistence of staff	-	40,000
Temporary assistance	9,000	80,500
Printing	40,000	40,000
Miscellaneous supplies and services		4,500
TOTAL	49,000	165,000

6. For a conference held in 1961, the estimated costs would be as follows:

	New York	Geneva	Vienna
	Unite	ed States o	lollars
Travel and subsistence of staff	32,000 40,000	16,500 122,000 40,000	24,500 133,000 40,000
services	-	4,500	4,500
TOTAL	72,000	183,000	202,000

7. The estimates for temporary assistance provide for the following:

New York 1960 - $9,000 to cover salaries of three editors and three editorial assistants for a period of two months. This staff is required to edit in the three languages of the conference (English, French and Spanish) the official records of the proceedings, since this work could not be undertaken by the regular staff which at this period of the year is fully occupied with the preparatory work for the General Assembly session.

Geneva 1960 - $80,500 to cover salaries and related travel of 89 temporary staff required to provide services in the three languages of the conference, comprising 12 translators, 2 revisors, 9 editorial staff, 9 proof-reading staff, 7 secretaries, 23 typists, 15 documents reproduction and distribution staff and 12 maintenance staff.

New York 1961 - $32,000. This estimate would provide funds to permit either the recruitment of temporary translators and editors if available in the New York area, or for the undertaking of translation work on a contractual basis in Europe. The provision of staff for the servicing of this conference in 1961 at Headquarters will result in the displacement of other normal translation work, the completion of which can only be assured either by temporary staff or by contractual services.

Geneva 1961 - $122,000 to cover salaries and related travel of 115 temporary staff comprising 8 interpreters, 18 translators, 6 revisors, 9 editorial staff, 9 proof-reading staff, 7 secretaries, 31 typists, 15 documents reproduction and distribution staff and 12 maintenance staff. The increase in the number of temporary staff required for 1961 as compared with 1960 is due to the fact that whereas in 1960 it is anticipated that 27 Headquarters staff will be available in Europe, in 1961 no Headquarters contribution can be contemplated.

Vienna 1961 - $133,000 to cover salaries and related travel of 97 temporary staff comprising 8 interpreters, 18 translators, 7 revisors, 9 editorial staff, 9 proof-reading staff, 7 secretaries, 7 clerks and 32 typists. It will be noted that no provision is included in the estimate for the 15 documents reproduction and distribution staff and for the 12 maintenance staff, it being assumed that these services would be provided by the host Government.

8. The above estimates are based on a conference of eight weeks' duration, and on the assumption that there would be a maximum of two meetings a day requiring services and that these meetings would not be held at the same time.

DOCUMENT A/C.5/805

Financial implications of the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee in document A/4305: note by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [23 November 1959]

- 1. The draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee in its report (A/4305, para. 26) requests the Secretary-General to convoke "... at Vienna not later than the spring of 1961" an international conference of plenipotentiaries "to consider the question of diplomatic intercourse and immunities and to embody the results of its work in an international convention, together with such ancillary instruments as may be necessary". It further requests the Secretary-General "to arrange also for the necessary staff and facilities which would be required for the conference".
- 2. In his note submitted to the Sixth Committee (A/C.6/L.458), the Secretary-General has stated that, should it be decided that the conference be held in Vienna in 1961, he would prefer the period March-April, in the light of the conference programme already envisaged for that year.
- 3. For a conference of eight weeks' duration, and on the assumption that there would be a maximum of two meetings a day requiring services and that these meetings would not be held at the same time, the estimated costs for a conference held at Vienna in March-April 1961 would be as follows:

- 4. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII), paragraph 2 (e), the host Government would assume responsibility for the additional expenditures to the United Nations budget occasioned by the fact that the conference would be held away from Headquarters. In this connexion, the Austrian representative has stated before the Sixth Committee (637th meeting) that his Government would pay the difference between the New York estimate and the Vienna estimate, as shown in the Secretary-General's statement of financial implications. The estimates submitted by the Secretary-General for a conference at New York totalled $72,000, comprising $32,000 for temporary assistance and $40,000 for printing.
- 5. Arrangements would be entered into between the host Government and the United Nations under which expenses in connexion with the provision of the local facilities and services not included in the above estimates would be met by that Government.

6. The estimates herein submitted are tentative and of necessity cannot at this stage take into consideration the impact of the total workload of 1961. However, they provide a reasonable indication of the magnitude of the additional costs arising from the conference meeting at Vienna rather than at Headquarters.

7. In the event of the adoption by the General Assembly of the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee, the Secretary-General will make suitable provision in the 1961 budget estimates. The 1961 estimates for miscellaneous income will also include an amount corresponding to the estimated contribution to be made by the Austrian Government in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII).

DOCUMENT A /4303

Financial implications of the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee in document A/4305: report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

- 1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered the statement of financial implications (A/C.5/805) which the Secretary-General has recommended in respect of the draft resolution (A/4305, para. 26) submitted by the Sixth Committee on the question of diplomatic intercourse and immunities.
- 2. Under the draft resolution, the General Assembly would request the Secretary-General to convoke at Vienna not later than the spring of 1961 an international conference of plenipotentiaries to consider the question of diplomatic intercourse and immunities and to embody the results of its work in an international convention, together with such ancillary instruments as may be necessary.
- 3. The estimate submitted by the Secretary-General for a conference of eight weeks' duration, to be held at Vienna in March-April 1961, amounts to $202,000,

- of which some $130,000 would represent extra costs which would fall to be reimbursed by the Austrian Government in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII) of 13 December 1957. There would be no expenditure in 1960, and the Secretary-General has suggested that, should the draft resolution be adopted, he would make appropriate provision in the budget estimates for 1961.
- 4. The Advisory Committee would, of course, consider the details of the estimates in conjunction with its examination, in the summer of 1960, of the budget estimates for 1961. Meanwhile, the Committee would recommend that the Fifth Committee might advise the General Assembly that the adoption of the draft resolution would entail an expenditure of about $200,000, of which some $130,000 would be reimbursed by the host Government in accordance with resolution 1202

- 8. Ceylon, Czechoslovakia, Indonesia, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia also submitted an amendment (A/C.6/L.457/Rev.1 and Add.1) to the joint draft resolution, proposing the insertion of the following as operative paragraph 3:
 - "3. Invites all States to participate in the conference and to include among their representatives experts competent in the field to be considered."
- 9. Further amendments (A/C.6/L.459 and Add.1 and 2) were submitted by Australia, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, Guatemala, Liberia, Norway and the Philippines. These amendments proposed: (1) to add to the preamble of the draft resolution two paragraphs noting that the International Law Commission was to prepare a final draft on consular intercourse and immunities in 1961 and to take up the subject of ad hoc diplomacy in 1960; (2) to replace operative paragraph 1 by the following:

"Decides that an international conference of plenipotentiaries shall be convoked to consider the questions of diplomatic and consular intercourse and immunities and such other related matters as may be ready at the time, and to embody the results of its work in one or more international conventions together with such ancillary instruments as may be necessary;"

(3) to replace operative paragraph 2 by the following:

"Requests the Secretary-General to convoke a conference in 1963 at a place to be decided by the General Assembly at a future session;"

and (4) to add to operative paragraph 7, after the word "immunities", the words:

"and the relevant reports of the International Law Commission as the basis for its consideration of consular intercourse and immunities and any other related topics ready for consideration."

- 10. Chile submitted an amendment (A/C.6/L.460) to replace the operative part of the joint draft resolution (A/C.6/L.455) and Add.1-3) by the following:
 - "1. Decides that the Sixth Committee shall be entrusted with the drafting of the conventions on diplomatic intercourse and immunities, on consular intercourse and immunities, on ad hoc diplomacy and on immunities of inter-governmental organizations as and when the International Law Commission submits reports on those questions;
 - "2. Decides that the resulting conventions shall be open for signature by all States;
 - "3. Resolves that the first part of the task mentioned in operative paragraph 1 to be undertaken shall be that relating to diplomatic intercourse and immunities, which shall be considered not later than at the sixteenth session, in 1961;
 - "4. Urges the International Law Commission to accelerate its preparatory work on consular intercourse and immunities, ad hoc diplomacy and immunities of inter-governmental organizations so that, if possible, a large number of the present members of the Sixth Committee who have been concerned with the consideration of these questions shall be able to take part in the study of that work."
- 11. The Secretary-General submitted a statement of the financial implications (A/C.6/L.458) of the joint draft resolution.

DISCUSSION

- 12. Under resolution 1288 (XIII) the General Assembly was required merely to decide to what body the formulation of a convention on diplomatic intercourse and immunities should be entrusted.
- 13. Most representatives expressed themselves in favour of convening a conference of plenipotentiaries to draft a convention.
- 14. Some representatives considered that that task could be undertaken by the Sixth Committee; however, several representatives pointed out that, while such a course was financially attractive, it involved many technical problems and the Sixth Committee might take several sessions to adopt a convention.

- 15. Since it was found that the majority favoured the convening of a conference, discussion centred on four main points: (1) the programme of the conference, (2) the States to be invited, (3) the opening date, and (4) the place of the conference.
- 16. With regard to the programme, several representatives expressed the view that the conference should deal only with the question of diplomatic intercourse and immunities.
- 17. Other representatives held that the questions of consular intercourse and immunities and ad hoc diplomacy should be added to the list in view of their connexion with diplomatic privileges and immunities.
- 18. On the subject of the States to be invited to attend, two views emerged. Some representatives wanted all States to be invited. They argued that discrimination against particular States was inadmissible, gravely detrimental to the interests of the United Nations, and incompatible with the purposes and principles of the Charter. Other representatives, in accordance with a practice followed by the United Nations hitherto, wished to invite only States Members of the United Nations, States members of the specialized agencies and States parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice. They held that a decision to invite all States would place the Secretary-General in the awkward position of having to decide to whom invitations should be sent.
- 19. The question of the opening date of the conference was linked with that of the programme, the only text at present in existence being that on diplomatic intercourse and immunities; in principle the International Law Commission was not expected to adopt a final text on consular intercourse and immunities until its 1961 session or to take up the subject of ad hoc diplomacy until its 1960 session.
- 20. Those representatives who favoured limiting the conference to the subject of diplomatic intercourse and immunities wished it to be convened in the spring of 1961.
- 21. Those who wished diplomatic and consular intercourse and immunities and ad hoc diplomacy to be discussed at the same conference expressed a preference for 1963.
- 22. With regard to the meeting-place, some representatives favoured the European Office of the United Nations, others, for reasons both of finance and convenience, preferred Headquarters in New York.
- 23. The representative of Austria, renewing an offer made at the previous session, stated that if the Assembly decided to hold the conference outside New York, his Government would deem it an honour to invite the conference to meet at Vienna in commemoration of the Congress of 1815.
- 24. Generally speaking, the response to this proposal was very favourable, but many representatives expressed concern over its financial implications. In the course of the discussion the Austrian Government announced that it was prepared to meet the additional costs involved in meeting at Vienna, up to a total of $130,000. Several representatives expressed their satisfaction and their gratitude to the Austrian Government, and the Committee decided without opposition to recommend that the conference should be held at Vienna.

VOTING

- 25. At its 638th meeting, on 20 November 1959, the Sixth Committee took a vote on the joint draft resolution (A/C.6/L.455) and Add.1-3 and the amendments thereto. The results of the voting were as follows:
- (a) The paragraph 2 recommended by Chile in its amendment (A/C.6/L.460) was rejected by 41 votes to 24, with 12 abstentions. The vote was taken by roll-call, with the following result:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Ceylon, Chile, Czechoslovakia, Guinea, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Libya, Morocco, Nepal, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, China, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Lebanon, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Sweden, Thailand, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Venezuela.

Abstaining: Burma, Cambodia, Colombia, Cuba, Ethiopia, Jordan, Panama, Peru, Portugal, Tunisia, Turkey, Union of South Africa.

- (b) The remainder of the Chilean amendment (A/C.6/L.460) was rejected by 54 votes to 6, with 18 abstentions.
- (c) Paragraph 2 of the draft amendments (A/C.6/L.459 and Add.1 and 2) was rejected by 39 votes to 25, with 14 abstentions. The vote was taken by roll-call, with the following result:

In favour: Australia, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Ghana, Guatemala, Haiti, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Liberia, Nicaragua, Norway, Philippines, Sweden, Turkey, Uruguay.

Against: Afghanistan, Albania, Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Ceylon, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Federation of Malaya, Greece, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Pakistan, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Dominican Republic, Ethiopia, Guinea, Honduras, Iran, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Panama, Peru, Thailand, Union of South Africa, United States of America, Venezuela.

 (\underline{d}) The Committee then decided, by 49 votes to 1, with 22 abstentions, not to vote on the remainder of the draft amendments.

(e) The proposal contained in document A/C.6/L.456 and Add.1/Corr.1 was adopted by 51 votes to 21, with 7 abstentions. The vote was taken by roll-call, with the following result:

Financial implications of the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee in document A /4305: report of of the Fifth Committee

[30 November 1959]

- 1. In accordance with the provisions of rule 154 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the Fifth Committee considered, at its 754th meeting, held on 30 November 1959, the financial implications of the draft resolution recommended by the Sixth Committee (A/4305, para. 26) which would provide for the convening at Vienna, not later than the spring of 1961, of an international conference of plenipotentiaries to consider the question of diplomatic intercourse and immunities and to embody the results of its work in an international convention, together with such ancillary instruments as may be necessary.
- 2. For this purpose, the Fifth Committee had before it a statement (A/C.5/805) of the financial implications - of the draft resolution, submitted by the Secretary-General, on the basis of an eight-week conference to be held in Vienna in March-April 1961, and a report (A/4303) thereon by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions.
- 3. The Committee decided to inform the General Assembly that the adoption of the draft resolution recommended by the Sixth Committee would entail an expenditure of about $200,000, of which some $130,000 would be reimbursed by the host Government in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1202 (XII) of 13 December 1957.

Introduction

1. At its 782nd plenary meeting, on 5 December 1958, the General Assembly adopted resolution 1291 (XIII), the full text of which is as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Considering that it is a function of the General Assembly to take appropriate measures to encourage the development of international law,

"Considering that the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook may constitute a useful measure for that purpose,

"Recalling its resolution 176 (II) of 21 November 1947,

- "Having considered the discussion in the Sixth Committee on the question of the publication of a juridical yearbook,
- "1. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook, covering in addition the technical and financial implications of such a publication, taking into account the suggestions made during the discussion in the Sixth Committee, and to circulate the report to Member States before the fourteenth session of the General Assembly:
- "2. Decides to place this question on the provisional agenda of its fourteenth session."
- 2. In accordance with that resolution, the Secretary-General herewith presents the following report:

Chapter I. Background of the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook

- 3. The publication of a United Nations juridical year-book was originally proposed in connexion with the question of ways and means for making the evidence of customary international law more readily available.
- 4. In the course of its work on that question, the International Law Commission, at its second session in 1950, recommended that the General Assembly should authorize the Secretariat to prepare and issue, with as wide a distribution as possible, a number of publications, including a juridical yearbook. 1/
- 5. The question was discussed by the Sixth Committee at the fifth session of the General Assembly²/and, by resolution 487 (V) of 12 December 1950, the Assembly invited the Secretary-General to consider the recommendations of the International Law Commission concerning ways and means for making the evidence of customary international law more readily available.

- 6. In accordance with that resolution, the Secretary-General submitted a report to the General Assembly at its sixth session 3 and the question was again discussed by the Sixth Committee. 4 The Secretary-General's report deals with the question of the publication of a juridical yearbook. 5
- 7. By resolution 602 (VI) of 1 February 1952, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit to it, at its seventh session, a report containing detailed plans as to the form, contents and budgetary implications of a number of publications which might be issued by the United Nations, including a juridical yearbook.
- 8. In accordance with that resolution, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly at its seventh session a report 6/containing a detailed plan for each of the publications to which the resolution referred. Part II of the report deals with the question of the publication of a juridical yearbook.
- 9. The Sixth Committee considered the question for the third time at the seventh session of the General Assembly I and on its recommendation 8/the Assembly adopted resolution 686 (VII), in which, inter alia, it requested the Secretary-General to prepare a comparative study of the extent to which developments in the field of customary international law and selected legal activities of the United Nations could usefully be covered by an expansion of existing United Nations publications, by the launching of new special publications of limited scope and by a United Nations juridical yearbook.
- 10. At its seventh session, held in 1955, the International Law Commission adopted a resolution 100 in which it requested the Secretary-General, in preparing the above study, to take into consideration the possibility of printing the studies, special reports and summary records of the Commission, and also recommended to the General Assembly, in connexion with its consideration of the report of the Commission on the work of its seventh session, to examine the possibilities of printing the documents mentioned, including the possibility of publishing them in the United Nations juridical yearbook contemplated in General Assembly resolution 686 (VII).

- 11. In pursuance of General Assembly resolution 686 (VII), the Secretary-General prepared the study in question, 10/ which he made available to the Sixth Committee at the tenth session of the General Assembly, in connexion with the Committee's examination of the report of the International Law Commission covering the work of its seventh session. The major part of the study deals with the question of the publication of the juridical yearbook.
- 12. At its tenth session, the General Assembly took no decision on the subject of a juridical yearbook. In its report, submitted to the General Assembly at that session, the Sixth Committee stated 11/2 that the majority of the representatives taking part in the discussion were agreed that, as the question of a juridical yearbook of the United Nations referred to in the resolution of the International Law Commission mentioned above (see para. 10 above) was not on the agenda, no decision regarding the publication of such a yearbook could be taken at that session. The discussion consequently centred on the question of printing the documents of the Commission as a separate publication.
- 13. The question of the publication of a juridical yearbook was again discussed at the General Assembly's thirteenth session. It was raised during the Sixth Committee's debate on chapter V of the report of the International Law Commission covering the work of its tenth session. At the 553rd meeting of the Sixth Committee, on 1 October 1958, the representative of Ceylon emphasized the value of publishing a United Nations juridical yearbook and placed before the Committee the outlines of a proposal envisaging such a publication. At its 554th meeting, on 2 October, the Sixth Committee decided to set up an informal working group to enable the delegations supporting the Ceylonese proposal to consult together; it also decided that the representative of Ceylon should then submit a memorandum to be used as a basis for debate.
- 14. The representative of Ceylon submitted a working paper $\frac{12}{}$ to the Committee at its 568th meeting, on 27 October 1958, on the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook, based on the discussion of the informal working group.
- 15. The Sixth Committee discussed the question at its 568th, 581st and 582nd meetings, held on 27 October and 13 and 14 November 1958, and on its recommendation 13/the General Assembly adopted resolution 1291 (XIII) requesting the preparation of this report (see para. 1 above).
- 16. It should be noted that the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Israel, and certain scientific institutions, have submitted observations on the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook. In a note dated 27 February 1951, 14/ the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Israel communicated to the Secretary-General his observations on the publications recommended by the International Law Commission in its report on the work of its second session (see para. 4 above). Further, in accordance with the wish of the French delegation, expressed in the report of the Sixth Committee to the General Assembly at its sixth session, 15/ the Secretary-General consulted the American Society of International Law, the Institute of International Law, the International Law Association, the Grotius Society and the Section of Legal Studies of the French National Centre of Scientific Research on the form and contents of a juridical yearbook. The Institute of International Law, on 25 April 1952, adopted a report on this matter and the Chairman of the Committee on Research in International Law of the American Society of International Law transmitted a memorandum on the subject to the Secretary-General, by a letter of 2 July 1952. The text of those two documents is reproduced in annexes to the report of the Secretary-General to the seventh session of the General Assembly. 16/

Chapter II. Role of a United Nations juridical yearbook

- 17. The report prepared by the Secretary-General in pursuance of resolution 686 (VII) of the General Assembly (see para. 11 above) describes the various views expressed in the Sixth Committee at the fifth, sixth and seventh sessions of the Assembly regarding the intrinsic value of a yearbook. $\frac{17}{}$
- 18. At the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, no objection was raised in the Sixth Committee with regard to the principle of the publication of a juridical yearbook. The delegations which participated in the discussion of the question agreed that the publication of a juridical yearbook would be useful and was perhaps even necessary. It was argued that such a publication would contribute to the development of international law and serve to increase the importance of international law in the work of the United Nations. It was pointed out that the United Nations plays an important part in the development of international law because of the number of legal documents and instruments which it prepares. Specialists in international law, and the general public, should be informed of the Organization's many legal activities, which they tend to underestimate. A United Nations juridical yearbook would undoubtedly meet that need. It would serve the purposes of General Assembly resolution 176 (II) of 21 November 1947, concerning the teaching of international law, which states that "one of the most effective means of furthering the development of international law consists in promoting public interest in this subject and using the media of education and publicity to familiarize the peoples with the principles and rules that govern international relations" and that "greater knowledge of and fuller information on the aims, purposes and structure of the United Nations constitute another positive method of assisting the development of international law, of which the United Nations is the main instrument.

19. Resolution 176 (II) was referred to on more than one occasion in the course of the debate, and its importance was stressed in the working paper (see para. 14 above). The resolution is, therefore, recalled in the preamble to General Assembly resolution 1291 (XIII), on which the present report is based, and which expresses the view that the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook may constitute a useful measure for the purpose of encouraging the development of international law.

Chapter III. Contents of a United Nations juridical yearbook

20. Views concerning the scope of the proposed yearbook have undergone certain changes since the question was first raised. The International Law Commission recommended the publication of a juridical yearbook as part of a programme for making the evidence of customary international law more readily available. The original intention was to give effect to the provisions of article 24 of the Statute of the Commission by the publication under United Nations auspices of documents relating to customary international law. The original plan was subsequently broadened to cover not only customary international law but also the law of the United Nations and international law in general. 18/

A. SUGGESTIONS MADE CONCERNING THE CONTENTS OF THE YEARBOOK

1. Suggestions made prior to the thirteenth session of the General Assembly

21. In recommending the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook, the International Law Commission suggested that the yearbook should contain, inter alia, significant legislative developments in various countries, current arbitral awards by ad hoc international tribunals, and significant decisions of national courts relating to problems of international law, in particular those concerning multipartite international conventions. 19/

22. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Israel (see para. 16 above) expressed the opinion that the type of material prima facie suitable for inclusion in a juridical yearbook would be, in addition to the two types of documents proposed by the International Law Commission, texts of international treaties of a law-making character which for some reason or other are not published in the United Nations Treaty Series, published exchanges of diplomatic correspondence relating to important points of international law and practice, and important legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat and of the secretariats of the specialized agencies. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Israel also suggested that a special feature should be made of developments in the sphere of international administrative law. 20/

- 23. In the Sixth Committee at the seventh session of the General Assembly, the Israel delegation proposed that a series of abstracts be published concerning new developments in international law. The Israel delegation pointed out that the area to which international law applied had expanded enormously owing to the emergence of many independent States in recent years; that, although those States had only recently gained their independence, they were the heirs to ancient civilizations, and some way had to be found to combine their ancient traditions with the body of international law as developed in modern times; that the number of questions covered by international law had vastly increased, a development which was reflected in the establishment of the many specialized agencies of the United Nations; and that international law had become applicable to new members of the international community. Consequently, due attention should be given to those new and far-reaching developments, several of which might be ascribed to the influence of the United Nations itself. 21/
- 24. The Institute of International Law (see para. 16 above) suggested that the yearbook might include, inter alia:
- (a) Provisions of national legislation which have direct significance for international law;
- (b) Opinions of the Legal Department of the United Nations Secretariat on matters of principle, the date of publication to be at the Secretary-General's discretion:
- (c) Decisions of the administrative tribunals of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies;
- (d) Documents of juridical interest prepared within the United Nations and its specialized agencies and given only limited distribution, such as the reports and records of the International Law Commission; certain documents drafted in special circumstances, like the report of the Committee of Jurists on the Eritrean Constitution, etc.;
- (e) A complete bibliography of juridical publications related to the United Nations and the specialized agencies;
- (f) The texts of any new treaty provisions relating to the United Nations and the specialized agencies and of the more important rules of procedure;

¹⁸ In the course of the Sixth Committee's discussion of the question at the seventh session of the General Assembly (see para. 9 above) some delegations expressed the view that in carrying out this broadened plan it would be desirable to consider not only the question of publishing a juridical yearbook but also the possibility of expanding existing publications or of initiating new special publications of limited scope. The report prepared by the Secretary-General in pursuance of General Assembly resolution 686 (VII) (see para. 11 above) contains a comparative study of the question whether, and to what extent, developments in the field of customary international law and selected legal activities of the United Nations could be usefully covered by one or other of the three types of publication. The report gives an account of the difficulties that would be involved in expanding existing publications and in initiating new special publications of limited scope.

- (g) The texts of conventions concluded under United Nations auspices, and a list of ratifications and accessions. 22/
- 25. The American Society of International Law (see para. 16 above) considered it desirable that the year-book should include:
- (a) The entire documentation of the A/CN.4 and A/CN.4/SR series, i.e., the documents of the International Law Commission and the summary records of its meetings;
- (b) National legislative texts on questions relating to international law;
- (c) The awards of ad hoc international tribunals;
- (d) Certain legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat;
- (e) Selected case-studies prepared and published on legal questions dealt with by organs of the United Nations, specialized agencies and, perhaps, regional organizations. These would consist primarily of documentary material, with the addition of some editorial notes. 23/
- 2. Suggestions made during the thirteenth session of the General Assembly
- 26. The working paper submitted to the Sixth Committee by the informal working group, which served as a basis for the discussion in that Committee, (see paras. 13 and 14 above) envisaged the publication of a juridical yearbook of some 225 pages, divided into four parts.
- 27. Part I, consisting of approximately 150 pages, would contain studies on problems of international law. It would include articles written by private individuals or, possibly, reports by private associations or institutions. The articles and reports would be mainly confined to the subjects assigned to the International Law Commission and the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and to the jurisprudence of the International Court of Justice.
- 28. Part II, consisting of approximately twenty-five pages, would deal with the legal activities of the United Nations and contain:
- (a) Documents and information concerning the status of the United Nations and the specialized agencies;
- (b) Decisions, recommendations or reports of United Nations bodies of legal interest;
 - (c) Legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat;
- (d) A list of treaties concerning the United Nations and the specialized agencies.
- 29. Part III, also of approximately twenty-five pages, would consist of a list of current decisions of international and national tribunals on questions of international law, especially those relating to the work of the United Nations.

- 30. Part IV, also of approximately twenty-five pages, would contain a bibliography concerning:
 - (a) General theory of international law;
- (b) Law of international organizations.

B. MATERIAL WHICH MIGHT BE INCLUDED IN THE YEARBOOK

- 1. Plan for a yearbook proposed by the Secretary-General in the light of the suggestions made prior to the thirteenth session of the General Assembly
- 31. The two reports prepared by the Secretary-General in 1952 and 1955, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 602 (VI) and 686 (VII) (see paras. 8 and 11 above), deal with the question whether and to what extent the material proposed in the relevant debates and documents could be included in a juridical yearbook. Each report indicates the various difficulties which would be involved in the inclusion of some of this material in the yearbook. The reports draw attention to certain requirements regarding the publication of other material and make a number of suggestions. The reports also take into account various factors of a technical and financial nature and are particularly concerned to avoid, as far as possible, overlapping with existing publications.
- 32. The report prepared by the Secretary-General in 1955 contains the following outline of a juridical year-book:
- (a) Documents relating to customary international law:
- (i) National legislative texts of international scope;
- (ii) Arbitral awards by ad hoc international tribunals:
- (iii) Significant decisions of national courts relating to the United Nations, and decisions involving the application or interpretation of multilateral conventions drafted under the auspices of the United Nations.
- (b) Documents relating to selected legal activities of the United Nations:
- (i) Selected legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat;
- (ii) Selected documents concerning international administrative law.
- 33. The outline also includes the documents of the International Law Commission, to take into account the Commission's decision on the publication thereof (see para. 10 above). It should be noted that, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 987 (X) of 3 December 1955, these documents are at present published in a special publication, the Yearbook of the International Law Commission.
- 34. The plan in question is based on various assumptions which are defined in the report. Thus the sections of the yearbook devoted to national legislative texts of international scope and arbitral awards by ad hoc international tribunals are based on specific suggestions and assume that those suggestions have been accepted.
- 35. The suggestions made concerning the section of the yearbook dealing with national legislative texts of international scope 24/ tend to limit this section to those subjects on which such texts have been published in the United Nations Legislative Series. The yearbook would thus supplement that series, and could also be used to bring it up to date. In the latter respect, the yearbook would certainly provide a more rapid means of bringing up to date the compilations which have appeared in the United Nations Legislative Series than the publication of supplements to various volumes in that series. The latter method has in fact proved to be very slow. It was necessary to wait almost five years to collect sufficient material to justify the publication of a supplement to the volume in the Legislative Series dealing with nationality.

- 36. The suggestions made concerning the section of the yearbook on arbitral awards by ad hoc international tribunals 25/ are similar in character. The Reports of International Arbitral Awards published by the United Nations contain awards rendered at different periods in the past. The first eight volumes of the series have already appeared and cover the period from 1920 to 1941. The four further volumes the Secretariat intends to publish will cover the period from 1871 to 1920. The juridical yearbook could therefore be used for publication of more recent arbitral awards, as and when pronounced, thus bringing the reports up to date.
- 37. The other documents mentioned in the outline (see para. 32 above) will be considered below in connexion with the examination of the plan for a yearbook submitted to the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly.
- Plan for a yearbook submitted to the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly
- 38. A summary was given earlier (paras. 26-30 above) of material suggested for inclusion in a juridical yearbook in the working paper submitted to the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session. The extent to which this documentation could be included in the yearbook must now be considered. This question will be examined in the light of the suggestions made in the course of the Sixth Committee's discussions.

Part I. Studies on problems of international law

- 39. The working paper states that part I of the year-book would include articles by private individuals, writing in their own names. It could also include reports by learned private bodies. Such articles or reports should relate to subjects of special interest to the International Law Commission, the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly, the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and the International Court of Justice. It was also proposed that the specialized agencies should be added to this list.
- 40. The working paper proposes that the responsibility for the selection of the articles to be published in this part would rest with an editorial board consisting of seven members elected on an honorary basis by the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, and acting in close collaboration with the Secretariat. The editorial board should give con-

- sideration to divergent schools of thought if divergent views are expressed on the same subject. The working paper also suggests that the board should be guided in its selection of articles by the principle that they should be scholarly, original and an important contribution to knowledge of the subject. The working paper expresses the hope that it will be possible in this way to sponsor a truly international review of international juridical problems of common concern.
- 41. During the discussion of this question in the Sixth Committee, a number of delegations expressed the opinion that part I was the most important part of the yearbook proposed by the working group and that if it was not included the yearbook would lose most of its value since the material to be inserted in the other parts was already available in various United Nations publications. In that connexion it was suggested that part I of the yearbook should include studies on international law questions in general and not merely on questions of interest to such strictly legal bodies as the International Law Commission, the Sixth Committee, and so forth.
- 42. Other delegations also considered that part I, dealing with the study of problems of international law, would be extremely interesting provided that it represented a meeting-ground rather than a battle-ground. The view was expressed that it would be necessary to ensure that the articles published would not arouse political controversy or lead to the identification of the United Nations with a particular school of legal thought.
- 43. It was also argued that, unless contradictory opinions could be freely expressed in the yearbook, the publication would be devoid of interest. A free exchange of views would in no way detract from the authority of the United Nations. A free exchange of views could, however, only be assured if the editorial board was constituted on a proper basis. In that connexion it was suggested that the only proper basis was equitable geographical distribution, which would make the board representative of the world's different legal systems. The need to ensure fair geographical distribution should not, of course, lead to any lowering of the standards; the persons chosen should all be scholars of recognized authority. A board thus constituted would ensure the proper selection of material, and prevent any unfair emphasis on the views of a single school of thought.
- 44. With regard to the Sixth Committee's ability to select a politically impartial editorial board, it was pointed out that no one questioned the impartiality of the judges of the International Court of Justice, who are elected by the United Nations. Article 8 of the Statute of the International Law Commission could provide guidance in the selection of members of the editorial board.
- 45. Many objections were, however, raised to part I of the yearbook as envisaged in the working paper. A number of delegations considered that this part would give rise to very serious problems. It would be extremely difficult to determine the criteria which would govern the appointment of the members of the editorial board and the selection of articles for the yearbook. It might well be asked what criterion would be adopted in appointing members of the editorial board their nationality, the legal system they represented or their competence. Similarly, would the board's decision to publish an article be based on geographical considerations, the competence and authority of the author, or the scientific value of the article? Another problem was how the members of the editorial board, who were to be unpaid and who would be living in different countries, would consult each other. Those were problems which would not be easy to solve and would require careful study.

^{25/} Ibid., paras. 54-55.

46. It was also argued that it was not the purpose of the United Nations as an international organization designed for the exchange of opinions between sovereign States to propagate the views of private individuals. Moreover, not only would the selection of articles be extremely difficult, but their publication could become a source of serious embarrassment to the United Nations and to Governments. It was also said that even if the yearbook did not become a forum for the discussion of political problems which called for the application of international law, it had to be remembered that publication under the auspices of the United Nations would give great prestige to the writings printed. It was also argued that the patronage of the United Nations might be exploited for political ends and that it was not certain that the proposed editorial board would be able to avoid such improper use. It would be difficult for such a board to display at one and the same time the desired competence and impartiality. It would be equally difficult to lay down rules for the board, as such rules might be misleading and cause international friction.

47. It was pointed out that the appointment of the editorial board was a very delicate question; this election would perhaps be made on the basis of geographical representation, as was customary with United Nations bodies, and the rule could well be that excellent articles might be rejected merely in order to ensure the adequate representation of all regions and groups of countries in part I of the year-book.

48. Doubts were expressed regarding the value of part I, which, as envisaged in the working paper, would only consist of approximately 150 pages. The number of pages proposed was considered insufficient, as the yearbook would be able to publish only two or three articles a year, with the result that the exchange of ideas would be extremely slow.

49. As can be seen, the inclusion in the yearbook of articles written by private individuals would involve many difficulties. In his report, 26/ prepared in accordance with General Assembly resolution 602 (VI). the Secretary-General expressed the view that the publication of scholarly articles on controversial subjects in a United Nations volume might be a matter of considerable embarrassment. This is not true only of purely political controversies. An equally embarrassing situation might result from the publication of articles on controversial legal subjects, which cannot easily be avoided in discussing matters of law, particularly international law. In any event, this is only one of the many difficulties inherent in the adoption of part I of the yearbook as envisaged in the working paper.

Part II. Legal activities of the United Nations

50. In accordance with the working paper, this part would contain: (1) documents and information concerning the status of the United Nations and the specialized agencies; (2) decisions, recommendations or reports of United Nations bodies of legal interest; (3) legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat; (4) a list of treaties concerning the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

51. During the discussion in the Sixth Committee, a number of delegations expressed the view that this part of the yearbook, proposed in the working paper, would be the most valuable section. Existing publications adequately covered the subject matter proposed for parts III and IV; they also contained excellent writings of the type it was intended to include in part I. With regard to the legal activities of the United Nations, however, the proposed new yearbook would probably provide much more complete information than was being published at present. It was accordingly suggested that more space should be devoted to part II than the twenty-five pages proposed in the working paper.

52. If the General Assembly does not adopt part I of the plan proposed in the working paper, a large proportion of the yearbook could be devoted to documentation on the legal activities of the United Nations. The documentation would, however, have to be selected so as to avoid overlapping with the following United Nations publications: the Yearbook on Human Rights, which covers the legislation of States and Non-Self-Governing Territories, treaties, agreements and instruments adopted by specialized agencies and other inter-governmental organizations, and United Nations activities in the field of human rights; the Yearbook of the International Court of Justice, which covers the organization, jurisdiction and decisions of the Court; the Yearbook of the United Nations, which gives a short factual account of the activities, including legal activities, of all organs of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies; the Yearbook of the International Law Commission, which includes, inter alia, the studies, special reports and records of that Commission; and the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs, a comprehensive summary in which the decisions taken by United Nations bodies, and related material, are arranged according to the articles of the Charter and presented in such a way as to elucidate the questions of Charter application and interpretation which have arisen in practice.

53. The publications mentioned above provide more or less detailed information on all the legal activities of the United Nations. It would therefore be superfluous to include in the juridical yearbook documentation concerning human rights, the work of the International Court of Justice and the work of the International Law Commission. The juridical yearbook could cover the remaining legal activities of the Organization in a manner that would avoid the duplication of material included in the Yearbook of the United Nations and the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs. It might include the full texts of the most important documents of legal interest; other documents could be listed together with references to the publications in which they are reproduced.

54. The documents proposed by the Secretary-General, in his report to the General Assembly at its tenth session, for inclusion in the part of the yearbook dealing with the legal activities of the United Nations are listed in paragraph 32 above. In the light of the views and conclusions set forth in this report and the suggestions made in the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly at its thirteenth session, the following material might be included in this part of the yearbook, within the limits indicated below: (a) selected legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat; (b) selected documents concerning international administrative law; (c) documents and information concerning the status of the United Nations and the specialized agencies; (d) decisions, recommendations or reports of United Nations bodies of legal interest; (e) a list of treaties concerning the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

(a) Selected legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat

55. In the course of the discussion in the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session (see para. 15 above), several delegations observed that the United Nations Secretariat might not be prepared to have all its legal opinions published; some of its opinions are of a purely internal nature, and the question was one, in any case, which would have to be left to the discretion of the Secretariat. While recognizing the delicate and special nature of the question, other delegations suggested that the yearbook should contain legal opinions of general interest, so that they could be studied by specialists in international law.

56. The question of the publication of legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat was examined in the Secretary-General's report to the General Assembly at its seventh session. 27/ The report points out that some legal opinions prepared by the United Nations Secretariat are already published in United Nations documents. Other opinions, if published, would require the addition of long explanatory notes with respect to their background and effect and many of them could not be printed except after considerable amplification and editing. Moreover, many of the opinions give advice to the Secretary-General and to Departments of the Secretariat on subjects of active controversy and their publication might not be advisable. Nevertheless, some unpublished opinions would be suitable for publication in the yearbook.

(b) Selected documents concerning international administrative law

57. The Secretary-General's report to the General Assembly at its seventh session ²⁸/_{also} examined the question of the inclusion in the yearbook of documents concerning international administrative law. The conclusion was reached that selected judgements of general interest of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal might be published in the yearbook. It should be noted that the Judgements of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal are now being published in a special United Nations collection, the first volume of which, containing the texts of judgements Nos. 1-70 given between 1950 and 1957, has recently appeared. The second volume will not be published until sufficient material has been gathered. It might perhaps be useful to include in the juridical yearbook a list of judgements given during the year under review and brief summaries of judgements of general interest.

(c) Documents and information concerning the status of the United Nations and the specialized agencies

58. A substantial volume of documents and information concerning the status of the United Nations and the specialized agencies might be accumulated in the course of each year and the inclusion in the yearbook of all the material accumulated would thus involve a substantial increase in the size of the publication. In order to overcome this difficulty, documents in this category would be published in full only if they were fundamental or basic in character. In the case of other documents, extracts or summaries would be given. It might also be possible to supply the necessary information in the form of factual notes. This method might be used, for example, in presenting information on the status of the United Nations Emergency Force.

59. The most important opinions of national legal advisers dealing with the status of the United Nations and the specialized agencies might also be published in this part of the yearbook.

(d) Decisions, recommendations or reports of United Nations bodies of legal interest

60. The decisions, recommendations or reports of United Nations bodies of legal interest also provide too great a volume of material in the course of a year to be included in full in a yearbook. Selection would therefore be necessary but it would seem difficult to establish a specific criterion for such selection in advance. It might be left to the Secretariat to select documents for publication, taking into account, inter alia, the interest of the documents from the point of view of international law and the desirability of avoiding overlapping with existing United Nations publications. Documents omitted owing to lack of space might be listed in the yearbook with an indication of the United Nations publications in which they are reproduced.

(e) List of treaties concerning the United Nations and the specialized agencies

61. The inclusion in the yearbook of a list of treaties concerning the United Nations gives rise to no objections. The secretariats of the specialized agencies might also be invited to prepare a list of treaties concerning their organizations for publication in the yearbook. Headquarters agreements concluded by international organizations might be included in these lists.

Part III. Decisions of international and national tribunals on questions of international law

- 62. The working paper (see para. 14 above) suggests that this part would be a list merely of current decisions of international and national tribunals on questions of international law, particularly those relating to the work of the United Nations.
- 63. In the course of the Sixth Committee's discussion of this question at the thirteenth session, some delegations expressed the view that a mere list of current decisions on questions of international law would not be enough and felt that part III of the yearbook should also include a summary of at least the more important decisions.

 $[\]frac{27}{28}$ Ibid., paras. 52-54.

 $^{28/\}overline{\text{Ibid.}}$, paras. 55 and 56.

- 64. The question of the inclusion in the yearbook of significant decisions of national courts relating to problems of international law, and particularly those concerning multilateral international conventions, is examined in the reports submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its seventh $\frac{29}{}$ and tenth $\frac{30}{}$ sessions. The reports noted that it would be a herculean task to make a compilation of such decisions. Moreover, the collection would be too bulky for inclusion in a juridical yearbook and would duplicate material printed in the International Law Reports, edited by Judge Sir Hersch Lauterpacht. which contain decisions of national courts. The reports accordingly suggest that this part of the yearbook should be limited to significant decisions relating to the United Nations, such as interpretations of the Charter by national courts, cases to which the United Nations was party and decisions involving the interpretation or application of multilateral conventions drafted under the auspices of the United Nations. Extracts from these decisions or digests would be published in the vearbook.
- 65. In the case of other decisions it might be sufficient to give a list indicating the publications in which they are reproduced. National judicial decisions are normally reproduced in the official publications of the country concerned. As the list would refer the reader to these publications, which appear in a wide range of languages and in some cases are not readily available, it may be questioned whether the value of the list would be great enough to justify the labour involved in its preparation.
- 66. One part of the yearbook might deal with current decisions by ad hoc international tribunals. This category of decisions was discussed above (paras. 34-36) in connexion with arbitral awards.

Part IV. Bibliography

- 67. Part IV of the yearbook as proposed in the working paper would consist of a bibliography covering the general theory of international law and the law of international organizations. The working paper states that this part would be merely a list but does not specify whether it would be a list of books or articles, or both.
- 68. The view was expressed in the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session that a mere list of published works would be devoid of any interest, unless accompanied by commentaries. It would, however, be an enormous task for the Secretariat to prepare reviews of the books or articles published each year throughout the world in various languages.
- 69. In any event, it is necessary to consider whether a bibliography of this type should be included in the yearbook in view of the fact that similar bibliographies are available in the following United Nations publications: (a) the Bibliography of the International Court of Justice Yearbook; (b) the Monthly List of Books catalogued in the Library of the United Nations, Geneva

- (a selected bibliography of books dealing with the various questions considered by United Nations bodies); (c) the Monthly List of Selected Articles published by the United Nations Library, Geneva (which covers legal as well as political, economic, financial and other questions); (d) the List of Selected Articles (periodical list) published by the United Nations Library, New York. (The latter also publishes a monthly list entitled New Publications in the United Nations Headquarters Library.) These publications constitute an extensive bibliography of volumes and articles on legal questions relating both to the United Nations and to international law generally.
- 3. Plan for a yearbook proposed by the Secretary-General in the light of the suggestions made during the discussions in the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly
- 70. The Secretary-General has given most careful consideration to the proposal that the juridical year-book should include articles by private individuals writing in their own name, and to the various statements in favour of that proposal made in the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly at its thirteenth session. He seriously doubts, however, whether the value of including such articles would be sufficiently great to outweigh the grave difficulties which their publication would involve.
- 71. The present plan submitted by the Secretary-General for the consideration of the General Assembly is based on various suggestions set out in this report and assumes that the suggestions have been accepted. Each part of the plan is followed by a reference to the paragraphs of the report in which the relevant suggestions are set out:
- (a) Documents relating to customary international law:
- (i) National legislative texts of international scope (para. 35);
- (ii) Arbitral awards by adhoc international tribunals (para, 36);
- (iii) Significant decisions of national courts relating to the United Nations, and decisions involving the application or interpretation of multilateral conventions drafted under the auspices of the United Nations (paras. 62-65).
- (b) Documents relating to legal activities of international organizations:
- (i) Selected legal opinions of the United Nations Secretariat (paras. 55-56);
- (ii) Selected documents concerning international administrative law (para. 57);
- (iii) Documents and information concerning the status of the United Nations and the specialized agencies (paras. 58-59);
- (iv) Decisions, recommendations or reports of United Nations bodies of legal interest (para. 60);
- (v) List of treaties concerning the United Nations and the specialized agencies (para. 61).
- 72. It will be noted that an increase in staff would be required to give effect to this plan. It would not therefore be desirable to adopt a more ambitious plan, ^{29/ &}lt;u>Ibid., paras. 38-41.

^{30/} Ibid., Tenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 50, document A/C.6/348, paras. 56 and 57.

nor would it be desirable to curtail the contents of the yearbook substantially. Curtailment of the proposed plan might reduce the value of the proposed yearbook to a minimum.

- 73. It would be impossible to give effect to the entire plan as outlined if the General Assembly decided that articles by private individuals should be included in the yearbook. In that event the plan would have to be proportionately reduced to keep the yearbook under 250 pages.
- 74. It should also be noted that much of the interest of the documents envisaged in part (a) of the proposed plan will be lost if they are not published in the year-book promptly and as completely as possible. This requirement cannot be met without the effective cooperation of Governments. It would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, for the Secretariat, each year and within the space of a few months, to collect documents of this character relating to all States. The co-operation of Governments would therefore be essential in carrying out this part of the proposed plan.

Chapter IV. Form of the yearbook

A. A SEPARATE UNITED NATIONS PUBLICATION

- 75. The working paper suggested that the yearbook could be either a separate United Nations publication or a third volume to the Yearbook of the International Law Commission, it being made abundantly clear in either event that the International Law Commission bore no responsibility for the juridical yearbook.
- 76. In the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly, at its thirteenth session, several delegations urged that the yearbook should be a separate United Nations publication and not a third volume to the Yearbook of the International Law Commission. It would, they argued, be wrong for the juridical yearbook to appear as a third volume to the Yearbook of the International Law Commission when the Commission would have no control over its compilation and no responsibility for its contents.

B. FREQUENCY OF PUBLICATION

77. The working paper suggests that the yearbook should appear annually and should be published and released for sale and distribution at about the time documents for the annual General Assembly session are released. One representative in the Sixth Committee, however, felt that consideration might be given to a juridical "compendium" to be published every two or three years instead of a yearbook; the consequent savings would make it possible to publish editions in English, French, Spanish, Russian and, if possible, Arabic.

C. LANGUAGES OF THE YEARBOOK

78. During the discussion in the Sixth Committee, several delegations objected to the preponderance given to the English language in the working paper. They were of the opinion that if a juridical yearbook were published, it should appear in the three working languages of the United Nations.

D. SIZE OF THE YEARBOOK

79. The working paper envisages the publication of a yearbook of approximately 225 pages. During the discussion in the Sixth Committee it was pointed out that it was hardly possible to envisage a yearbook of less than 250 pages.

Chapter V. Budgetary implications

- 80. During the discussion in the Sixth Committee, several delegations expressed the opinion that it would be useful to provide a separate cost estimate for part I of the plan for a yearbook outlined in the working paper.31/
- 81. Financial estimates are given below in respect of each of the following alternatives:
- (a) The yearbook would follow the plan outlined in paragraph 71 of this report;
- (b) The yearbook would include, in addition to the material envisaged in part (a) of the proposed plan—which would be curtailed as suggested in paragraph 73 of this report—articles written by private individuals in accordance with the proposal outlined in the working paper.
- 82. Either alternative would require an addition to existing staff. In the case of part (a) of the proposed plan, while the compilation of national legislative texts of international scope, and of arbitral awards by ad hoc tribunals is covered under the existing functions of the Secretariat, the preparation of the remaining documentation would necessitate the addition of two legal officers versed in international law and widely experienced in the preparation of legal texts for publication. Secretariat assistance would need to be provided to those two officers.
- 83. As regards part (b) of the proposed plan, it is assumed that members of the editorial board (see para. 40 above) would serve in an honorary capacity. In the event that the editorial board is required to meet once a year for not more than one week, costs of the order of $9,000 per meeting will arise. It is assumed further that articles for publication in the yearbook would be submitted only in the three languages in which the yearbook would be published. These articles would probably need to be checked in the Secretariat and submitted to the editorial board. This work of checking the articles, editing and preparing them for inclusion in the yearbook would require the whole-time services of two legal officers, and appropriate secretariat staff.
- 84. Thus, salary and common staff costs in either case would be of the order of $42,000 annually (one Senior Officer P-5, one First Officer P-4 and two secretarial staff at the intermedial level).
- 85. In the event the General Assembly should take a favourable decision on the publication of the juridical yearbook the Secretary-General would expect to meet the additional translation work arising from the publication within the existing complement of Language Services staff by appropriate rescheduling of other legal translation work. The cost of translation if separately calculated would be about $13,000.

^{31/} Ibid., Thirteenth Session, Annexes, agenda item 56, document A/C.6/L.428.

86. There would, moreover, be printing costs. On the assumption that the yearbook will not exceed 250 printed pages in length, and would be published in English, French and Spanish, these costs would be approximately:

	English	French	Spanish
	(U.S. dollars)
First 1,000 copies	2,400	2,600	2,800
Each additional 1,000 copies	670	800	800

DOCUMENT A/C.6/L.465

Financial implications of the draft resolution contained in document A/C.6/L.462: note by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [27 November 1959]

- 1. The draft resolution recommends that: (a) the General Assembly decide that a United Nations juridical yearbook should be published and, (b) that as a first step, the Secretary-General prepare and submit for consideration at the fifteenth session a report containing a detailed outline of such a yearbook.
- 2. In his initial report to the Assembly (A/4151, chap. V) the Secretary-General had indicated that the publication of the juridical yearbook would entail additional costs for staff of the order of $42,000, and printing, of the order of $10,000.
- 3. Subsequently, during discussion of this item in the Sixth Committee, and in the light of the statements of certain members, the representative of the Secretary-General indicated, at the 642nd meeting, that efforts would be made to undertake the work of
- preparation of the yearbook with half the complement of additional staff envisaged in document A/4151. At the same meeting it was stated that the Secretariat would absorb additional work on the preparation of the detailed outline referred to in the draft resolution within the level of establishment approved by the General Assembly for 1960.
- 4. Accordingly, on the assumption that a decision as to the content and scope of the yearbook will be taken by the General Assembly only at its fifteenth session, no additional costs are foreseen for 1960. At an appropriate time during the fifteenth session of the Assembly the Secretary-General would propose to submit an estimate of the additional requirements that are likely to arise in 1961 and subsequent years in respect of the preparation and publication of the Yearbook.

DOCUMENT A /4312

Report of the Sixth Committee

[2 December 1959]

- 1. At its 782nd plenary meeting, on 5 December 1958, the General Assembly adopted resolution 1291 (XIII) whereby, firstly, it requested the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook, and, secondly, it decided to place that question on the provisional agenda of its fourteenth session.
- 2. In accordance with that resolution, the Secretary-General submitted a report on the matter (A/4151) to the General Assembly at the present session. This report gave the background of the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook and dealt with the role, form, contents and budgetary implications of such a publication.
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly decided to place the question on the agenda of its fourteenth session and referred it to the Sixth Committee for examination and report.
- 4. The Sixth Committee considered the item at its 639th to 643rd meetings, held between 23 and 30 November 1959.

PROPOSAL AND AMENDMENTS

5. During the discussion, a draft resolution (A/C.6/L.462) was submitted to the Committee by the following countries: Afghanistan, Ceylon, Ecuador, France, Greece, Mexico, Poland, United Arab Republic and United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The text of this draft resolution was as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recalling its resolution 1291 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 regarding the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook,

"Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the matter (A/4151),

- "Considering that it would be highly desirable that documentary materials of a legal character relating to the United Nations should be made available in a yearly volume for the use of Governments as well as organizations and all persons interested in the development of international law,
- "l. Decides that a United Nations juridical year-book which would include documentary materials of a legal character relating to the United Nations, should be published;
- "2. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, as a first step, a report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session containing a detailed outline of such a yearbook;
- "3. Decides to consider at its fifteenth session the above-mentioned report of the Secretary-General."

- 6. Chile submitted an amendment (A/C.6/L.463) to this draft resolution, to replace operative paragraph 1 by the following:
 - "1. Decides that the preparation of a United Nations juridical yearbook which would include documentary materials on international law of interest to the United Nations should be encouraged."
- 7. A further amendment (A/C.6/L.464) to the draft resolution was submitted by Ghana. Under that amendment, the following words would be added to operative paragraph 2 of the draft resolution:
 - "...and the comments thereon of Member States with special reference to the requirements of international law institutions, universities, foreign offices and the other classes of persons for whose benefit the publication is intended."
- 8. The Committee was also seized of a note by the Secretary-General (A/C.6/L.465) on the financial implications of the draft resolution.

DISCUSSION

- 9. Most of the delegations that took part in the discussion on the question expressed themselves in favour of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook. They considered that such a publication would be useful and necessary. Certain delegations, however, though fully endorsing the principle of publishing the yearbook, declared that their position with regard to that publication would depend, inter alia, upon its financial implications. Another delegation, although not opposed to the principle of publication, pointed out that most of the information it was proposed to include in the yearbook already appeared in existing publications, that any documentary materials which had not already been published and which it was desired to include in the yearbook could easily be distributed among those publications, and that that would avoid the expenditure involved in the publication of a juridical yearbook.
- 10. With regard to the contents of the yearbook, the opinions of delegations were divided. The Committee had before it the plan for a yearbook proposed by the Secretary-General in paragraph 71 of his report on the question (A/4151). This plan, which the Committee used as a basis for discussion, was prepared with particular regard to the working paper submitted by the representative of Ceylon, on behalf of the working group, to the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly (see A/4151, paras. 14 and 38-69).
- 11. The opinion which had been expressed in the Sixth Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, that the yearbook should include articles by private individuals under their own names (see A/4151, para. 27), gave rise to many objections. A large number of delegations supported the idea of a yearbook limited to materials of an exclusively documentary character. Certain delegations, however, pointed out that if inclusion in the yearbook of articles written by private individuals was not considered suitable, studies or reports prepared by private scientific bodies could perhaps be published in it.
- 12. Certain delegations suggested that the yearbook might include a series of brief abstracts of articles

- concerning the United Nations and other questions of international law. At the request of one delegation, the representative of the Secretary-General stated that in preparing the report referred to in operative paragraph 2 of the draft resolution (A/C.6/L.462), the Secretariat would consider the feasibility and advisability of including abstracts of that kind in the yearbook and would report on the matter, with a statement of financial implications and some concrete recommendations.
- 13. With regard to the view that the yearbook should contain a bibliography concerning the general theory of international law and the law of international organizations (see A/4151, para. 30), certain delegations considered that such a bibliography would be necessary even if it already appeared in other United Nations publications. It was argued that the yearbook should constitute a whole and, as such, should not be published unless it contained an appropriate and adequate bibliography.
- 14. The plan for a yearbook proposed by the Secretary-General in paragrpah 71 of his report was declared acceptable in principle by a large number of delegations. However, certain delegations considered that the titles of the various sections of that plan did not give a sufficiently clear idea of the yearbook's precise contents. Desiring to have more information on the subject, those delegations argued that a better course would be to accept, at the present session of the General Assembly, the principle of publication of the juridical yearbook and to ask the Secretary-General to prepare for the fifteenth session a detailed table of contents of what might be the first volume of the yearbook.

VOTING

- 15. At its 643rd meeting on 30 November 1959, the Committee proceeded to vote on the draft resolution (A/C.6/L.462) and on the amendment thereto submitted by Chile (A/C.6/L.463), the amendment presented by Ghana (A/C.6/L.464) having been withdrawn by its sponsor at that meeting. The results of the voting were as follows:
- (a) The Chilean amendment (A/C.6/L.463) was rejected by 38 votes to 5, with 20 abstentions;
- (b) Operative paragraph 1 of the draft resolution (A/C.6/L.462) was adopted by 59 votes to 1, with 4 abstentions;
- (c) The draft resolution (A/C.6/L.462) as a whole was adopted by 62 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.

Recommendation of the Sixth Committee

16. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

Financial implications of the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee in document A/4312: letter dated 4 December 1959 from the Chairman of the Fifth Committee addressed to the President of the General Assembly

[4 December 1959]

- 1. At the 759th meeting of the Fifth Committee, held on 4 December 1959, I informed the Committee of your letter of 2 December 1959 regarding the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee (A/4312, para. 16), which was to be considered by the Fifth Committee in accordance with rule 154 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.
- 2. The Committee noted that, as indicated in the statement of financial implications (A/C.6/L.465) which was before the Sixth Committee when it took its action, the adoption of the draft resolution would not affect the 1960 budget. As regards future financial
- implications, the provisions of operative paragraphs 2 and 3 of the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee provided for further consideration by the General Assembly at its fifteenth session.
- 3. The Committee agreed that I should communicate to you the above, in order that the General Assembly could be informed of the effect on the budget of the adoption of the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 847th plenary meeting, on 7 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee (A/4312, para. 16). For the final text, see resolution 1451 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1451 (XIV). QUESTION OF THE PUBLICATION OF A UNITED NATIONS JURIDICAL YEARBOOK

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1291 (XIII) of 5 December 1958 regarding the question of the publication of a United Nations juridical yearbook,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the matter (A/4151),

Considering that it would be highly desirable that documentary materials of a legal character relating to the United Nations should be made available in a yearly volume for the use of Governments as well as organizations and all persons interested in the development of international law,

- 1. Decides that a United Nations juridical yearbook which would include documentary materials of a legal character relating to the United Nations should be published;
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General, as a first step, to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session containing a detailed outline of such a yearbook;
- 3. Decides to consider this report at its fifteenth session.

847th plenary meeting, 7 December 1959.

[4 December 1959]

- 1. On 27 April 1958, the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea adopted a resolution in which it requested the General Assembly to arrange for the study of the juridical régime of historic waters, including historic bays.
- 2. The General Assembly, at its 783rd plenary meeting, on 10 December 1958, adopted resolution 1306 (XIII), in which it decided to place this item on the provisional agenda of its fourteenth session.
- 3. The Secretary-General submitted a note (A/4161) summarizing the background of the question.
- 4. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly placed on the agenda of its fourteenth session the item entitled "Question of initiating a study of the juridical régime of historic waters, including historic bays".
- 5. The Committee considered the item at its 643rd to 646th meetings held between 30 November and 4 December 1959.
- 6. A draft resolution (A/C.6/L.466 and Add.1) was submitted to the Committee by Chile, Greece, Japan and Mexico, whereby the General Assembly would request the International Law Commission, as soon as it considered it advisable, to undertake the study of the question of the juridical régime of historic waters, including historic bays, and to make such recommendations regarding the matter as it deemed appropriate.
- 7. In the course of the debate, some representatives discussed the substance of the question and referred, in particular, to certain problems raised by the juridical régime of historic waters. Some representatives cited specific cases of claims in respect of historic waters and bays.

- 8. The majority of representatives, however, reserved their position with regard to the substantive issues, believing that the documentation concerning historic waters was not yet adequate and that it would be difficult therefore to engage in a constructive debate. They were of the opinion that the debate should be limited, in accordance with resolution 1306 (XIII), to the question of initiating a study.
- 9. A large number of representatives declared themselves in favour of entrusting the study to the International Law Commission and of requesting the latter to make such recommendations as it deemed appropriate.
- 10. At its 646th meeting, on 4 December 1959, the Sixth Committee unanimously adopted the draft resolution (A/C.6/L.466 and Add.1).

Recommendation of the Sixth Committee

11. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

STUDY OF THE JURIDICAL REGIME OF HISTORIC WATERS, INCLUDING HISTORIC BAYS

5/ See footnote 1.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 847th plenary meeting, on 7 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Sixth Committee (A/4333, para. 11). For the final text, see resolution 1453 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1453 (XIV). STUDY OF THE JURIDICAL REGIME OF HISTORIC WATERS, INCLUDING HISTORIC BAYS

The General Assembly,

Requests the International Law Commission, as soon as it considers it advisable, to undertake the study of the question of the juridical régime of historic waters, including historic bays, and to make such recommendations regarding the matter as the Commission deems appropriate.

Explanatory memorandum

1. The General Assembly has considered the Algerian question at each of its regular sessions since its tenth, in 1955. At the eleventh and twelfth sessions, the General Assembly unanimously adopted resolutions 1012 (XI) and 1184 (XII) which expressed the concern of the United Nations at the continuance of the Algerian conflict and urged that the problem be solved in conformity with the principles of the Charter. At the thirteenth session, the First Committee approved by a substantial majority a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.232), which contained the following paragraphs:

"Recognizing the right of the Algerian people to independence,

"Deeply concerned with the continuance of the war in Algeria,

"Considering that the present situation in Algeria constitutes a threat to international peace and security.

۳...

"Urges negotiations between the two parties concerned with a view to reaching a solution in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations".

A draft resolution, which contained the said paragraphs [A/4075, para.10], however, failed by a single vote to obtain the required two-thirds majority in the plenary meeting.

- 2. Despite the appeals in the resolutions adopted at the eleventh and twelfth sessions and contrary to the wishes of the majority of Member States expressed at the thirteenth session, there has been no indication of improvement in the Algerian situation and the hostilities continue unabated with increasing suffering and loss of human life. A million Algerian civilians are reported to have been displaced from their homes and regrouped in other areas, where they are undergoing severe hardship.
- 3. In this situation, the attainment of a solution in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations becomes increasingly difficult. It is requested, therefore, that the question of Algeria be included in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.

Report of the First Committee

[9 December 1959]

- 1. By a letter dated 14 July 1959 (A/4140), Afghanistan, Burma, Ceylon, Ethiopia, the Federation of Malaya, Ghana, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan, Tunisia, the United Arab Republic and Yemen requested the inclusion of an item entitled "Question of Algeria" in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly. Attached to the letter was an explanatory memorandum in accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.
- 2. At its 121st meeting, held on 16 September 1959, the General Committee decided to recommend the inclusion of the item in the agenda. On the basis of Article 2, paragraph 7, of the Charter, the representative of France questioned the competence of the United Nations to consider the matter.
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting, held on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly decided to include the item in the agenda and referred it to the First Committee.
- 4. The First Committee considered the item at its 1067th to 1078th meetings inclusive, held between 30

November and 7 December 1959. The delegation of France did not participate in the consideration of the item by the Committee.

5. At the 1070th meeting, held on 2 December 1959, the representative of Burma introduced a draft resolution sponsored by Afghanistan, Burma, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan, Tunisia, the United Arab Republic and Yemen (A/C.1/L.246). At the 1072nd meeting, held on 3 December 1959, the Federation of Malaya added its name to the list of sponsors of the draft resolution (A/C.1/L.246/Add.1). The draft resolution read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Having discussed the question of Algeria,

"Recalling its resolution 1012 (XI) of 15 February 1957 by which the General Assembly expressed the hope that a peaceful, democratic and just solution would be found, through appropriate means, in conformity with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Recalling further its resolution 1184 (XII) of 10 December 1957, by which the General Assembly expressed the wish that "pourparlers" would be entered into, and other appropriate means utilized, with a view to a solution, in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Recalling Article 1, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

"Recognizing the right of the Algerian people to self-determination,

"Deeply concerned with the continuance of hostilities in Algeria,

"Considering that the present situation in Algeria constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

"Noting with satisfaction that the two parties concerned have accepted the right of self-determination as the basis for the solution of the Algerian problem,

"Urges the two parties concerned to enter into "pourparlers" to determine the conditions necessary for the implementation as early as possible of the right of self-determination of the Algerian people, including conditions for a cease-fire."

LETTER DATED 14 JULY 1959 FROM THE PERMA-NENT REPRESENTATIVE OF INDIA TO THE UNIT-ED NATIONS, ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

In accordance with the instructions of the Government of India and pursuant to rule 13 (e) of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, I have the honour to propose the following item for inclusion in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly:

"Treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa: report by the Government of India".

An explanatory memorandum under the terms of rule 20 of the rules of procedure is attached.

> (Signed) C. S. JHA Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary Permanent Representative of India to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

1. At its thirteenth session, the General Assembly gave consideration for the twelfth time to the item entitled "Treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa" and, on 10 December 1958, it adopted resolution 1302 (XIII) the main paragraphs of which read as follows:

"Regrets that the Government of the Union of South Africa has not replied to the communications sent by the Governments of India and Pakistan on this subject and has not yet agreed to confer with those Governments with a view to arriving at a solution of this problem in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

"Appeals to the Government of the Union of South Africa to enter into negotiations to that end with the Governments of India and Pakistan without prejudice to the position taken by the Union of South Africa regarding its juridical stand on the issue;

"Invites Member States to use their good offices, as appropriate, to bring about negotiations in accordance with the desires expressed by the General Assembly at previous sessions;

"Invites the parties concerned to report to the General Assembly as appropriate, jointly or separately, regarding any progress which may be made."

2. In accordance with the wishes of the General Assembly contained in the aforementioned resolution and with a view to facilitating the holding of such negotiations, the Government of India, through its High Commissioner in London and its Permanent Representative to the United Nations in New York, sent appropriate communications to the Government of the Union of South Africa, through the South African High Commissioner in London and the Permanent Representative of the Union of South Africa in New York. In their communications (see annex), the High Commissioner and the Permanent Representative of India conveyed to the Government of the Union of South Africa the sincere desire of the Government of India to act in accordance with paragraph 3 of the aforesaid resolution, and in conformity with the statement by the Indian delegation in the Special Political Committee at the last session of the General Assembly in respect of this resolution. The Government of India explicitly expressed its desire and readiness to enter into and pursue negotiations with the Government of the Union of South Africa in accordance with the resolution, and also explained that such negotiations would be without prejudice to the position adopted by any of the parties concerned in respect of the issue of "domestic jurisdiction" under Article 2 (7) of the Charter of the United Nations. While the Government of India suggested that such negotiations might conveniently be held between the representatives of the Governments of the parties concerned at New York, it expressed its willingness to consider any alternative venue that the Government of the Union of South Africa might desire to suggest. The Government of India also sought the views of the Government of the Union of South Africa in regard to a suitable time for the commencement of such negotiations and expressed the hope that the Government of the Union of South Africa would welcome the initiative thus taken.

- 3. Although the High Commissioner of the Union of South Africa in London has formally acknowledged receipt of the communication from the High Commissioner of India, the Government of the Union of South Africa has not so far taken any steps to implement the wishes of the General Assembly. Nor is the Government of India aware of any steps taken by Member States in accordance with paragraph 4 of the resolution quoted above.
- 4. In compliance with paragraph 5 of resolution 1302 (XIII), the Government of India proposes to report to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session and, in order to enable it to do so, has asked for the inscription of this item in the agenda. Moreover, the Government of India is confident that it will be the wish of the General Assembly to recommend further measures, in the light of the prevailing situation, for a peaceful and speedy solution of this problem.

ANNEX

They, therefore, desire and are prepared to enter into and pursue negotiations with the Government of the Union of South Africa in accordance with the aforesaid resolution. The Government of India further desire to state that such negotiations will be without prejudice to the position adopted by any of the parties concerned in respect of the issue of "domestic jurisdiction" under Article 2 (7) of the Charter of the United Nations.

The Government of India suggest that such negotiations may conveniently be held between the representatives of the Government of the parties concerned at New York. They would, however, be willing to consider any alternative venue that the Government of the Union of South Africa may desire to suggest. They also seek the views of the Government of the Union of South Africa in regard to a suitable time for such negotiations to begin.

^{1/}Document A/4147/Add.1, dated 22 July 1959, contained a request that Burma be added to the list of sponsors of this item.

Explanatory memorandum

- 1. For the seventh successive year, the General Assembly, at its thirteenth session, considered the question of race conflict in the Union of South Africa resulting from the policies of apartheid of the Government of the Union of South Africa and on 30 October 1958 adopted resolution 1248 (XIII), the operative parts of which read as follows:
 - "1. Declares again that, in a multiracial society, harmony and respect for human rights and freedoms and the peaceful development of a unified community are best assured when patterns of legislation and practice are directed towards ensuring equality before the law of all persons regardless of race, creed or colour, and when the economic, social, cultural and political participation of all racial groups is on a basis of equality;
 - "2. Affirms that governmental policies of Member States which are not directed towards these goals, but which are designed to perpetuate or increase discrimination, are inconsistent with the pledges of the Members under Article 56 of the Charter of the United Nations:
 - "3. Solemnly calls upon all Member States to bring their policies into conformity with their obligation under the Charter to promote the observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms;
 - "4. Expresses its regret and concern that the Government of the Union of South Africa has not yet

- responded to appeals of the General Assembly that it reconsider governmental policies which impair the right of all racial groups to enjoy the same rights and fundamental freedoms."
- 2. There has been not the slightest indication that the Government of the Union of South Africa has taken any step in the matter in consonance with the declarations and the call of the General Assembly. On the contrary, all the information that is available indicates that the developments which, for so many years, in the light of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations—and more particularly Articles 1, 55 c and 56 -and of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights have caused concern to the General Assembly, continue to be aggravated. A grave threat to the peaceful relations between ethnic groups of the world, to which attention has been drawn by successive resolutions of the General Assembly, not only continues but is being made more dangerous every day. In the circumstances, it would undoubtedly be the wish of the General Assembly to address itself once again to the question of race conflict in the Union of South Africa with a view to making appropriate recommendations designed to secure adherence to the provisions of the Charter and of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. In view of the continuing obstacles which are placed in the path of those whose object is merely the observance of the principles in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, it is felt that the United Nations should continue to offer its assistance with a view to a peaceful solution being found for this problem.

Czechoslovakia: request for the inclusion of a supplementary item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [13 August 1959]

LETTER DATED 12 AUGUST 1959 FROM THE PER-MANENT REPRESENTATIVE OF CZECHOSLO-VAKIA TO THE UNITED NATIONS, ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

Under instructions from my Government, I have the honour to request that the following item be included in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly:

"The question of the consistent application of the principle of equitable geographical representation in the election of the President of the General Assembly."

An explanatory memorandum under rule 20 of the rules of procedure is attached.

(Signed) Karel KURKA Permanent Representative of Czechoslovakia to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

- 1. The principle of equitable geographical representation is one of the fundamental principles on which the structure and activities of the United Nations are based. It is a direct expression of the principle of the sovereign equality of all Member States and an indispensable pre-condition for equitable co-operation among United Nations Members in implementing the objectives and purposes of the United Nations Charter.
- 2. The principle of equitable geographical representation is applicable equally to all organs and functional offices of the United Nations. Its consistent application is the basic pre-condition for the normal activities of the United Nations organs. To observe this principle is therefore the primary responsibility not only of the United Nations Organization as such but also of all its Members.

3. The principle of equitable geographical representation has not been consistently applied in elections to one of the most important offices of the United Nations — that of the President of the General Assembly. Representatives of all geographical areas, except Eastern Europe have held that office several times in turn. From the first to the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, the office of President was held by the representatives of the following geographical areas:

Western Europe and the British Commonwealth - five times;

Asia and Africa - five times;

Latin America - three times;

Eastern Europe - not a single time.

- 4. This unsatisfactory state of affairs is an impediment to further development of co-operation and the strengthening of mutual confidence among the Member States of the United Nations. The shortcomings connected with the practice of filling the office of the President of the General Assembly have not been removed even after the adoption of General Assembly resolution 1192 (XII) of 12 December 1957 on the composition of the General Committee. This resolution settles the question of equitable geographical distribution of seats in the General Committee as a whole and at the same time indicates the principles to be followed in filling the office of the President of the General Assembly.
- 5. Convinced that an agreement on the correct application of the principle of equitable geographical representation in the election of the President of the General Assembly will remove the existing short-comings and contribute to a further development of co-operation and the strengthening of mutual confidence among Member States in the General Assembly, the Czechoslovak Government proposes that an item entitled "The question of the consistent application of the principle of equitable geographical representation in the election of the 'President of the General Assembly" be included in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.

Report of the Special Political Committee

[8 December 1959]

- 1. In a letter dated 12 August 1959 (A/4182), Czechoslovakia requested the inclusion of the following item in the provisional agenda of the General Assembly: "The question of the consistent application of the principle of equitable geographical representation in the election of the President of the General Assembly". In the explanatory memorandum, it was stated that the principle of equitable geographical representation, which was one of the fundamental principles on which the structure and activities of the United Nations was based, had not been consistently applied in elections to the office of the President of the General Assembly. Representatives of all geographical areas except Eastern Europe had held that office several times in turn. The shortcomings connected with the practice of filling the office of the President of the General Assembly had not been removed even after the adoption of General Assembly resolution 1192 (XII) of 12 December 1957 on the composition of the General Committee. An agreement on the correct application of the principle of equitable geographical representation in the election of the President of the General Assembly would remove the existing shortcomings and would contribute to a further development of co-operation and the strengthening of mutual confidence among the Member States in the General Assembly.
- 2. At its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly decided to place the item on its agenda and to refer it to the Special Political Committee.
- 3. The Special Political Committee considered the item at its 163rd to 169th meetings held between 1 and 7 December 1959.
- 4. On 30 November 1959, the following draft resolution (A/SPC/L.39) sponsored by Czechoslovakia and Romania was circulated:

"The General Assembly,

"In view of the spirit of the United Nations Charter and of the provisions of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly pertaining to the President of the General Assembly,

"Referring to resolution 1192 (XII) of 12 December 1957 which, based on the principle of equitable geographical representation, determines the distribution of the membership of the General Committee of the General Assembly, while this distribution of membership is adjusted with regard to the region from which the President of the General Assembly is elected.

"1. Confirms that the principle of equitable representation of geographical regions should be applied consistently also in the election of the President of the General Assembly,

- "2. Recommends that in the first four years following the adoption of this resolution the President of the General Assembly be elected successively from Eastern European States, Asian and African States, Western European States and other States, Latin American States."
- 5. At the 165th meeting on 3 December 1959, the representative of Mexico introduced an amendment (A/SPC/L.40) to the draft resolution. Sponsored jointly by the following eleven countries: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Mexico, Peru and Uruguay, the amendment would (1) replace the second preambular paragraph by a paragraph recognizing the importance of ensuring that the President of the General Assembly possessed the highest personal qualifications for the performance of his duties, and also the desirability of taking into account in his election the principle of equitable geographical distribution; and (2) replace the two operative paragraphs by a paragraph according to which the General Assembly would recommend that in the election of the President of the General Assembly the principle of equitable geographical distribution should be upheld to the greatest possible extent, special attention being paid in the first place to the qualifications that the President of the General Assembly must possess in order to perform the important duties of his office.
- 6. At the 166th meeting on 3 December 1959, the following sub-amendments were submitted to the eleven-Power amendment (A/SPC/L.40):
- (a) By France (A/SPC/L.41): to add the following at the end of paragraph 2: "and due account being taken of the prevailing circumstances";
- (b) By Guinea (A/SPC/L.42): in paragraph 1, to delete the word "desirability" and insert the word "necessity"; and in paragraph 2, to delete the words "to the greatest possible extent" and the words "in the first place";
- (c) By the United States of America (A/SPC/L.43): in paragraph 2, to delete the words "special attention being paid in the first instance" and replace them by the following words: "commensurate with the primary consideration which should be given".
- 7. At the 167th meeting on 4 December 1959, Guinea and the United Arab Republic submitted a revision (A/SPC/L.42/Rev.1) of the sub-amendment submitted by Guinea providing for (1) the deletion of the words "also the desirability" in the third line of the first paragraph; (2) the replacement, in the second paragraph, of the words from "the principle of" to the words "important duties of his office" by the words "special attention be paid to the qualifications that the President of the General Assembly must possess in order to perform the important duties of his office and as well as to the principle of equitable geographical representation.

- 8. At the 168th meeting on 4 December 1958, the representative of the United Arab Republic stated that the sponsors of the revised sub-amendment (A/SPC/L.42/Rev.1) would delete the words "as well as" from its second paragraph.
- 9. In reply to a question raised by the representative of Mexico, the representatives of the United Arab Republic and Guinea agreed to substitute the words "due regard be specially paid" for "special attention be paid" in the revised text of their sub-amendment.
- 10. The representative of Italy orally proposed a sub-amendment to the revised text of Guinea and the United Arab Republic (A/SPC/L.42/Rev.1) calling for the insertion of the words "to the greatest possible extent" between the words "office and" and "to the principle".
- 11. At the 168th meeting, the Committee proceeded to vote on the draft resolutions and amendments before it as follows:

Secretary-General: request for the inclusion of a supplementary item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [14 August 1959]

- 1. Pursuant to a request from the International Court of Justice, the Secretary-General proposes the inclusion of a supplementary item in the provisional agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly, namely:
 - "Proposed amendments to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice".
 - 2. The proposed amendments relate to the following points:
 - (a) The grant of a pension to members of the Court who resign;
- (b) The grant to retiring members of the Court of the right to a pension amounting to one-twentieth of the salary of a judge for each year of service, and the increase in the maximum of pension from the present ceiling of one-third to one-half of such salary.
- 3. The Secretary-General will submit to the General Assembly at a later date a detailed explanatory memorandum covering the proposed amendments to the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice.

Note by the Secretary-General

[15 October 1959]

1. By a letter dated 22 June 1959, the Deputy-Registrar of the International Court of Justice, acting at the direction of the Court, drew the attention of the Secretary-General to two matters regarding the

* For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Fifth Committee, 725th, 744th and 750th meetings; Sixth Committee, 630th and 631st meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 845th meeting.

Pension Scheme applicable at present to members of the Court. Subsequently, a report on these matters was prepared by the Registry of the Court and transmitted to the Secretary-General.

2. The Secretary-General submits to the General Assembly the above-mentioned report for consideration and appropriate action. It will be recalled that under Article 32, paragraph 7, of the Statute of the Court the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court are fixed by the General Assembly. The Pension Scheme Regulations for members of the Court now in effect were approved by Assembly resolution 86 (I) of 11 December 1946.

- 3. The first matter raised by the Court pertains to the position of judges who may find it necessary to resign from the Court prior to the expiration of the period for which they were elected. The report suggests that the two specific references to resignations be deleted from the Regulations. This change would entitle judges who have completed five years of service to pensions in accordance with the Regulations, without a special decision of the Court being necessary in each case. The Secretary-General agrees with the views expressed in the report and believes that the General Assembly may wish to give effect to the Court's suggestions at the current session.
- 4. The second matter raised in the report relates to the amount and the method of computing the pensions of judges who retire in the ordinary course. The Secretary-General has not yet been in a position to assemble comprehensive comparative data allowing a full appraisal of the proposals contained in the report. He suggests, therefore, that the consideration of the levels of pensions of judges of the International Court of Justice be deferred until the fifteenth session of the General Assembly, pending the completion of the study of the relevant part of the Court's report by such appropriate body as the Assembly may determine.

ANNEX

- REPORT ON THE SUBJECT OF THE PENSION SCHEME REGULATIONS FOR MEMBERS OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE, REFERRED TO IN THE LETTER ADDRESSED, AT THE DIRECTION OF THE COURT, BY THE DEPUTY-REGISTRAR TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL OF THE UNITED NATIONS ON 22 JUNE 1959
- 1. The present report concerns two matters relating to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations for Members of the Court, as adopted by the General Assembly on 11 December 1946.²
- 2. The first matter pertains to the position of a judge who may find it necessary to resign from the Court prior to the expiration of the period for which he was elected; the second relates to the amount and the method of computing the pensions of judges who retire in the ordinary course, i.e., who are not re-elected for a further term.
- 3. As to the first matter, it will be observed from paragraph 1 of the Regulations that pensions are available to judges who have ceased to hold office only if they: (a) have not resigned; (b) have not been required to relinquish their appointment for reasons other than the state of their health; (c) have completed at least five years of service. Paragraph 4 lays down that: "If a member resigns after having completed at least five years of service, the Court may, by special decision, grant him such pension as seems equitable, but not exceeding an amount calculated as in regulation 6".
- 4. It results from these provisions that a member of the Court who resigns after five years of service is not entitled to a pension as a matter of right although the Court may grant him such pension as seems equitable.
- 5. That aspect of the existing scheme would appear to be open to objection on a variety of grounds. In particular, it may
- a/ For the text of the Regulations, see the annex to General Assembly resolution 86 (I).

- have the effect of discouraging a member of the Court from resigning although he may feel that, without being actually in a precarious state of health necessitating such action, he is no longer in a position to serve the Court to his satisfaction and in accordance with the best interests of the Court. It is also possible that a member of the Court may wish to resign for imperative family considerations such as the serious and prolonged illness of his wife or another member of his family. Yet he may hesitate to resign and to rely on the discretionary decision of the Court in respect of what otherwise would constitute a clearly established right to a pension. The provisions of the Regulations are so general that they could cover the case of a judge who, having served a full period of nine years, has been re-elected for a further period and resigns during the latter period. This would be inconsistent with the fact that he had already acquired a right to a pension on the basis of his first nine years of service.
- 6. It will thus be seen that the regulation may ill serve the purpose for which it was intended. It is not in keeping with the law of many countries which grant to judges who resign after a reasonable period of service a pension equivalent to a full salary or to a larger part thereof.
- 7. The existing regulation is, moreover, a departure from the system which obtained with respect to the members of the Permanent Court of International Justice. Article 1 of the Regulations regarding the Granting of Retiring Pensions, adopted by the Assembly of the League of Nations on 13 September 1929, provided that "in the case of resignation, members of the Court will not be entitled to pensions unless they have completed a period of five years' service". b/There is no indication in the report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its first session, or in that of the Working Party set up by him in 1946, why a different rule was adopted in the new Regulations. In the memorandum submitted at that time to the Secretary-General by the Registrar of the Court, it was merely stated that in the case of resignation no pension rights would be acquired until after five years of service. The Working Party, in noting the passage in question, confined itself to stating that "this is the same arrangement as existed under the former Court and would be consistent with the proposal for the United Nations Pension Plan".d/As no reasons were given in support of the change thus adopted and as none appear to exist, it may be considered that for the reasons stated above the existing regulation should be altered. The amendment could be effected through an alteration of paragraph 1 of the Regulations by way of omitting from that paragraph the words "(a) have not resigned" and by deleting paragraph 4.
- 8. As to the second matter mentioned above, namely, that relating to the amount and the method of computing the pensions of judges, it will be observed that paragraph 6 of the Regulations provides that a member of the Court shall be entitled to the payment of a pension equivalent to one three hundred and sixtieth of his salary in respect of each complete month passed in the service of the Court. It is further provided in paragraph 7 that no pension shall exceed one-third of the annual salary of a judge.
- 9. Neither the basic scale of the pension—according to which a judge is entitled to a pension consisting of one-thirtieth of his salary for each year of service (this figure corresponding to that of one three hundred and sixtieth in respect of each month)—nor the maximum of the pension as fixed in the Regulations appears sufficiently to take into account the circumstances of the election of the members of the Court and the character and requirements of their office. In accepting office, members of the Court abandon an existing career and in some cases the concomitant—and often substantial—pension or insurance rights. On relinquishing office they may not easily be in a position to embark upon a new career or return to their previous career.

of first session, Sixth Committee, annex 20 a, p. 296.

- 10. The amount of the pension which retiring members of the Court are entitled to receive according to the Regulations does not appear to be sufficient to secure the object which was contemplated when their salaries were fixed, nor consistent with the nature of their office. It may also be borne in mind that in a large number of countries the pension granted to retiring judges exceeds substantially the amount of one-half of the salary.
- 11. In view of the foregoing, it is suggested that it would be desirable to alter the Regulations so as to secure to the retiring members of the Court the right to a pension amounting to one-twentieth of the salary of a judge for each year of service and that the maximum of pension now fixed at one-third should be altered to one-half of such salary.
- 12. In the event of favourable action by the General Assembly, the actual increase for 1960 in the amount of the pensions at present paid to former members of the Court would be approximately $17,000. With regard to future annual budgets of the Court, the amount of pensions paid will, of course, depend upon possible changes in the composition of the Court (periodical elections, or resignation), as well as upon the death of pensioned former members of the Court.
- 13. The proposal here advanced is identical with the Pension Scheme adopted in 1954 for the judges of the Court of Justice of the European Coal and Steeel Community. Article 6 of that Pension Scheme provides as follows:

"The pension amounts for each complete year of service to 5 per cent of the final salary received and for each complete month to one-twelfth of that amount. The pension cannot exceed 50 per cent of the final salary received (maximum pension)." ©

- 14. Further details concerning that Court are mentioned in the appended note. Certain changes have been made since 1954 in the Court, which is now the Court of Justice of the European Communities, but the Pension Scheme remains unaltered.
- 15. It may also be noted that, by a resolution of the 42nd session of the International Labour Conference, adopted in Geneva in June 1958, the pensions paid by the Pensions Fund to the judges of the former Permanent Court of International Justice were increased by 40 per cent.

Letter dated 23 October 1959 from the Chairman of the Fifth Committee to the Chairman of the Sixth Committee

I have the honour to refer to the decision of the General Assembly at its 800th plenary meeting in connexion with the allocation of agenda item 63—"Proposed amendments to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice"—whereby the General Assembly noted with approval paragraph 5 of the first report of the General Committee (A/4214) which provided that this item should be referred to the Fifth Committee on the understanding that the Fifth Committee would seek the advice of the Sixth Committee on the questions of policy involved, other than those of a budgetary nature, before its consideration of the item.

The report of the Secretary-General on this question has now been issued as document A/4241. Thus, I have the honour, on behalf of the Fifth Committee, to request the advice of the Sixth Committee as indicated in the decision of the General Assembly, following the receipt of which the item will be considered by the Fifth Committee.

Text of resolution adopted by the Sixth Committee at its 631st meeting on 11 November 1959

[Original text: English] [11 November 1959]

The Sixth Committee,

Having considered a request for advice from the Fifth Committee relating to agenda item 63,

Decides to adopt the following reply to this request:

TEXT OF A LETTER FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE SIXTH COMMITTEE TO THE CHAIRMAN OF THE FIFTH COMMITTEE CONTAINING THE SIXTH COMMITTEE'S ADVICE ON THE QUESTIONS OF POLICY INVOLVED IN ITEM 63 OF THE AGENDA OF THE FOURTEENTH REGULARSESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

1. I have the honour to refer to your letter dated 23 October 1959 (A/C.6/360) relating to agenda item 63—"Proposed amendments to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice". In this letter, in conformity with a decision taken by the General Assembly at its 800th plenary meeting, you requested on behalf of the Fifth Committee the advice of the Sixth Committee on the questions of policy involved, other than those of a budgetary nature, before the Fifth Committee considers the item.

2. The matter was brought to the attention of the Sixth Committee, which discussed the request at its 630th and 631st meetings, held on 10 and 11 November 1959, on the basis of the report submitted at the direction of the International Court of Justice and a covering note by the Secretary-General, both contained in document A/4241. I have now the honour to communicate to you, for transmission to the Fifth Committee, the following observations and conclusions approved by the Sixth Committee at its 631st meeting held on 11 November 1959.

- 3. The action which is sought from the General Assembly is based on the provisions of paragraph 7 of Article 32 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice under which "Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court...". In setting the conditions of eligibility and the amounts of pensions, the General Assembly should, in the opinion of the Sixth Committee, attach full weight to the circumstances of the election of members of the Court and the character and requirements of their office as expressed in the Statute. inter alia, the high degree of independence and moral character and outstanding professional qualifications expected from the judges, the duration of their term of office and the prohibition to engage while in office in any occupation of a professional nature.
- 4. The first question raised in the report (A/4241, annex, para. 3) relates to the position of judges who may find it necessary to resign from the Court prior to the expiration of the period for which they were elected. The Sixth Committee concurs with the views expressed on behalf of the Court that there are well-founded objections to the present system under which a member of the Court who resigns after having completed at least five years of service may receive a pension only by a special decision of the Court. It is the opinion of the Committee that the General Assembly

- should, as suggested by the Court, make pensions payable to members of the Court who resign after five years of service, in all cases, without a special decision of the Court being required. Such a change in the Pension Scheme Regulations for Members of the Court (which are contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 86 (I) of 11 December 1946) could be effected by:
- (1) the deletion of sub-paragraph (a) in regulation 1 and the consequent renumbering of the other sub-paragraphs of this regulation;
 - (2) the deletion of regulation 4.
- 5. As to the second question raised by the Court in its report (A/4241, annex, para. 8), i.e. that of the amount and the method of computing the pension of judges who leave the Court otherwise than by resignation, the Committee noted the suggestion of the Secretary-General that this matter should be deferred until the next session of the General Assembly pending the completion of a study of the relevant part of the Court's report by an appropriate body designated by the Assembly. The Sixth Committee expresses its confidence that the recommendations which the Fifth Committee will make on this matter to the General Assembly will, together with the budgetary questions involved, take due account of the considerations referred to in paragraph 3 above relating to the circumstances of the election of the members of the Court and the character and requirements of their office as well as the importance of making the conditions of service with the principal judicial organ of the United Nations appropriate in the case of persons of the highest recognized competence.

DOCUMENT A /4297 Report of the Fifth Committee

[Original text: English] [24 November 1959]

- 1. The Fifth Committee considered the agenda item entitled "Proposed amendments to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice" at its 725th and 744th meetings, held on 21 October and 16 November 1959, respectively. Two documents were before the Committee:
- (a) A note by the Secretary-General (A/4241) to which was annexed a report submitted at the direction of the International Court of Justice;
- (b) A resolution adopted by the Sixth Committee at its 631st meeting on 11 November 1959 (A/C.6/L.454) tendering advice to the Fifth Committee, at the latter Committee's request (A/C.6/360), on the questions of policy (other than those of a budgetary nature) that arose under the two points involved in the present agenda item.
- 2. The first question was whether to amend the Regulations governing the pensions of members of the International Court of Justice (General Assembly resolution 86 (I), annex) in such a manner that the award of a pension to a member who resigns from the Court after five years of service shall not depend on

- a discretionary decision of the Court, $\frac{1}{2}$ and that, instead, a member resigning in such circumstances shall be entitled to a pension as a matter of right.
- 3. The second question concerned the amount of, and the method of computing, the pensions of members of the Court who retire in the ordinary course. Under existing provisions, the pension is the equivalent of one-thirtieth of salary for each year of service, subject to a maximum of one-third of salary (Regulations, paras. 6 and 7).
- 4. On the first question, the opinion expressed on behalf of the Court (A/4241, annex, paras. 1 to 7), the Sixth Committee (A/C.6/L.454, para. 4) and the Secretary-General (A/4241, para. 3) coincided: paragraphs 1 and 4 of the Regulations should be so amended as to remove the restrictive conditions concerning a

^{1/} Paragraph 4 of the Pension Scheme Regulations reads: "If a member resigns after having completed at least five years of service, the Court may, by special decision, grant him such pension as seems equitable, but not exceeding an amount calculated as in regulation 6".

"special decision" of the Court. In that way a pension would be payable in every case to a member of the Court who resigns after five years of service. A special decision of the Court would not be required.

- 5. On the second question, the Fifth Committee took note of the following opinion and comments:
- (a) The communication from the International Court of Justice considered it desirable to secure to retiring members a pension equivalent to one-twentieth of salary for each year of service, subject to a maximum of one-half of salary (A/4241, annex, paras. 8 to 15);
- (b) The Secretary-General suggested (A/4241, para. 4) that, as comprehensive data on which to base a full appraisal of the proposed change had not yet been assembled, the matter should be deferred until the next session of the General Assembly, "pending the completion of the study of the relevant part of the Court's report by such appropriate body as the Assembly may determine";
- (c) The Sixth Committee, having taken note at its 631st meeting of the Secretary-General's suggestion, expressed confidence that, apart from the financial implications, the recommendations of the Fifth Committee would take due account of considerations related to "the circumstances of the election of the members of the Court and the character and requirements of their office as well as the importance of making the conditions of service with the principal judicial organ of the United Nations appropriate in the case of persons of the highest recognized competence" (A/C.6/L.454, para. 5).

Financial implications

6. Based upon the pension already being paid, the addition to the budget resulting from the proposed change in pension rate (para. 5 (a) above) was estimated for 1960 at about $17,000. No estimate, however approximate, is possible for subsequent years in view of the nature of the determining factors (such as the composition of the Court, and the mortality rate among its pensioned members).

Discussion in the Fifth Committee

7. Representatives were agreed that both the provisions of the Pension Scheme for members of the Court and the general conditions of their service should befit the eminence of the members and the outstanding professional qualities and moral attributes which they brought to their office. Due weight should be given to the circumstances under which the members were elected, as well as to the fact that appointment to the Court often entailed the abandonment of a lucrative career.

- 8. Some of the speakers recognized that, where the first question was concerned, it would be desirable in principle to amend paragraph 4 of the Regulations, even though—as the representative of the Court confirmed to the Committee—no difficulty had arisen in connexion with the existing text. Some members found difficulty, however, in concurring in one of the arguments advanced, to the effect that a member might "hesitate to resign and to rely on the discretionary decision of the Court" (A/4241, annex, para. 5).
- 9. As regards the second question, the representative of Iraq considered it premature to designate the "appropriate body" referred to in the Secretary-General's suggestion. In view of the procedural difficulty to which that suggestion might give rise, he proposed, as an alternative, that the Secretary-General should be requested to continue in 1960 his study of the matter, in consultation with the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions.
- 10. The representative of the Soviet Union was of the opinion that somewhat fuller justification should be presented for a revision of paragraph 4 of the Regulations, to which, he stated, as had been demonstrated, no urgency attached. Similar considerations applied to the study of the second question, which might perhaps be of a detailed character. He proposed that both questions should be carried over to the next session and that the Secretary-General should in the meanwhile study them in consultation with the International Court of Justice.

Recommendation of the Committee

11. The Fifth Committee approved without objection the proposal of the representative of the USSR and, accordingly, recommends that the General Assembly should: (a) defer to its fifteenth session the consideration of the two matters raised under the agenda item; and (b) request the Secretary-General to continue the study of these matters, in consultation with the International Court of Justice, and to submit a further report thereon.

[See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 845th plenary meeting on 1 December 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by Austria, Ghana, Mexico, Philippines, Spain, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America (A/L.270 and Add.1). For the final text see resolution 1408 (XIV) below

At the same meeting, the General Assembly decided, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee (A/4297, para. 11), as amended by the above-mentioned resolution, to defer to its fifteenth session the consideration of the question of the amount of, and the method of computing, the pensions of members of the International Court of Justice who retire in the ordinary course, and to invite the Secretary-General to continue to study the question in consultation with the Court and to submit a further report on this subject.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1408 (XIV). AMENDMENTS TO THE PENSION SCHEME REGULATIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report submitted to it proposing amendments to certain provisions of the Pension Scheme Regulations of the International Court of Justice and the observations presented thereon by the Secretary-General (A/4241),

Having noted the advice extended by the Sixth Committee (A/C.6/L.454) to the Fifth Committee with respect to the position of judges who may find it necessary to resign from the Court prior to the expiration of the period for which they were elected and the report of the Fifth Committee (A/4297),

Resolves to amend as follows the Pension Scheme Regulations for members of the International Court of Justice contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 86 (I) of 11 December 1946:

- (a) Delete sub-paragraph (a) in regulation 1;
- (b) Delete regulation 4.2

845th plenary meeting, 1 December 1959.

2/Sub-paragraphs (b) and (c) of regulation 1 and regulations 5 to 12 should be renumbered accordingly.

- 5. The Commission on Human Rights discussed the draft Declaration at its thirteenth and fifteenth sessions in 1957 and 1959 and transmitted to the Council its observations in the form of a revised draft Declaration, together with the records and documents of its proceedings.

The sponsors have withdrawn their amendments to principles 6 and 7 (reproduced in documents A/C.3/L.722, A/C.3/L.724, A/C.3/L.726 and Add.1, and A/C.3/L.731) in favour of the revised texts of these principles presented below. They are not all jointly committed to the passages appearing in square brackets, on which votes by division are suggested.

1. Principle 6:

"The child, for the full and harmonious development of his personality, needs love and understanding. He shall, wherever possible, grow up in the care [and under the responsibility] of his parents, and in any case in an atmosphere of affection and of moral and material security; [a child of tender years shall not, save in exceptional circumstances, be separated from his mother. $]^{\pi}$

2. Principle 7:

"The child is entitled to receive education, which shall be free and compulsory, at least in the elementary stages. He shall be given an education which will bestow upon him general culture, and enable him on a basis of equal opportunity to develop his abilities and individual judgement and to become a useful member of society.

"The best interests of the child shall be the guiding principle of those responsible for his education and guidance; that responsibility lies in the first place with his parents."

DOCUMENT A/C.3/L.745

Cuba: amendments to document A/C.3/L.743

[Original text: English] [8 October 1959]

Principle 7, 1. First paragraph, first sentence: Replace the word "education" by the word "instruction". Delete the words "which shall be", and put the words "free and compulsory" before the word "instruction". Replace "elementary stages" by "elementary school", and add "in his mother tongue" after the word "school".

2. First paragraph, second sentence: In the Spanish text, delete the word "una" before the words "cultura general". (This amendment does not apply to the English text.)

After the words "equal opportunity" add "and with absolute respect for his vocational aptitudes".

Replace the word "abilities" by the word "capacities".

3. Second paragraph: There is no change in the wording of the amendment.

Add the text of the Commission on Human Rights from the sentence beginning with the words "It shall promote...". For reasons of drafting this sentence should begin as follows "The child's education shall promote...".

Principle 7, incorporating the various amendments, including this sub-amendment and the text of the Commission on Human Rights, would then read as follows:

"The child is entitled to receive free and compulsory instruction, at least in the elementary school, in his mother tongue. He shall be given an education which will bestow upon him general culture and enable him on a basis of equal opportunity and with absolute respect for his vocational aptitudes to develop his capacities and individual judgement and to become a useful member of society.

"The best interests of the child shall be the guiding principle of those responsible for his education and guidance; that responsibility lies in the first place with his parents.

"The child's education shall promote mutual understanding, tolerance and friendship among all peoples and racial or religious groups, as well as understanding of the culture both of his own people and of other peoples and of the principles and purposes of the United Nations."

Drafting suggestions submitted by the Rapporteur of the Committee

[Original text: English, French, Spanish and Russian] [15 October 1959]

1. In the course of the discussion of the Draft Declaration of the Rights of the Child in the Third Committee, it has frequently been stated that certain drafting changes may be required and, in particular, that the various language versions of the draft Declaration should be examined from the point of view of conformity one with another.

2. The Rapporteur has the honour to submit to the Committee the text of the draft Declaration incorporating certain suggestions, intended only as drafting suggestions not affecting the substance. In a few cases, the changes proposed apply to all language versions. In other cases, the Rapporteur had taken as the basic text the original language of the proposals which had become the text adopted, and had made any changes which appeared necessary in the other languages.

3. The changes suggested are underlined, with explanatory footnotes, in the text of the draft Declaration which is annexed. The text, as adopted by the Committee, may be found in documents A/C.3/L.738, A/C.3/L.739 and Corr.1, A/C.3/L.744, A/C.3/L.750, A/C.3/L.753 and A/C.3/L.756.

Preamble

Whereas the peoples of 5/the United Nations have, in the Charter, reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights, and in the dignity and worth of the human person, and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Whereas the United Nations has, 6/ in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, proclaimed that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth therein, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status,

Whereas the child, by reason of his physical and mental immaturity, needs special safeguards and care, including appropriate legal protection, before as well as after birth, 1/

Whereas the need for such special safeguards has been stated in the Geneva Declaration of the Rights of the Child of 1924, and recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in the statutes of specialized agencies and international organizations concerned with the welfare of children,

Whereas mankind owes to the child the best it has to give,

Now therefore 8/

The General Assembly proclaims this Declaration of the Rights of the Child to the end that he may have a happy childhood and enjoy for his own good and for the good of society the rights and freedoms herein set forth, and calls upon parents, upon men and women as individuals and upon voluntary organizations, local authorities and national Governments to recognize and strive for the observance of these rights by legislative and other measures progressively taken in accordance with the following principles:

Principle 1

The child shall enjoy all the rights set forth in this Declaration. All children, without any exception whatsoever, shall be entitled to these rights, 6/ without distinction or discrimination on account of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, whether of himself or of his family.

Principle 2

The child shall enjoy special protection, and shall be given opportunities and facilities, by law and by other means, to enable him to develop physically, mentally, morally, spiritually and socially in a healthy and normal manner and in conditions of freedom and dignity. In the enactment of laws for this purpose the best interests of the child shall be the paramount consideration.

Principle 4

The child shall be entitled from his birth to a name and a nationality.

 $[\]frac{5}{2}$ The addition of these words is suggested in all languages.

^{6/} This applies to the English text only.

I The wording of this paragraph has not been modified but in all languages the order of the clauses has been changed.

^{8/} In the French, Spanish and Russian texts the words "now therefore" seem unnecessary and have been deleted. This conforms to the operative paragraph of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Principle 5

The child shall enjoy the benefits of social security. He shall be entitled to grow and develop in health; to this end special care and protection shall be provided both to him and to his mother, including adequate prenatal and post-natal care. The child shall have the right to adequate nutrition, housing, recreation and medical services.

Principle 6

The child, for the full and harmonious development of his personality, needs love and understanding. He shall, wherever possible, grow up in the care and under the responsibility of his parents, and in any case in an atmosphere of affection and of moral and material security; a child of tender years shall not save in exceptional circumstances, be separated from his mother. Society and the $\frac{6}{}$ public authorities shall have the duty to extend particular care to children without a family and $\frac{6}{}$ those without adequate means of support. Payment of State and other assistance towards the maintenance of children of large families is desirable.

Principle 7

The child is entitled to receive education, which shall be free and compulsory at least in the elementary stages. He shall be given an education which will promote his general culture, and enable him on a basis of equal opportunity to develop his abilities, $\underline{\text{his}}^{6/}$ individual judgement, and his sense of moral and social responsibility, and to become a useful member of society.

The best interests of the child shall be the guiding principle of those responsible for his education and upbringing; ⁹/ that responsibility lies in the first place with his parents.

The child shall have full opportunity for play and recreation, which should be directed to the same purposes as education; society and the public authorities shall endeavour to promote the enjoyment of this right.

Principle 8

The child shall in all circumstances be among $\frac{6}{}$ the first to receive protection and relief.

Principle 9

The child who is physically, mentally or socially handicapped shall be given the special treatment, education and care required by his particular condition.

Principle 10

The child shall be protected against all forms of neglect, cruelty and exploitation. He shall not be the subject of traffic, in any form. 10/

The child shall not be admitted to employment before an appropriate minimum age; he shall in no case be caused or permitted to engage in any occupation or employment which would prejudice his health or education or interfere with his physical, mental or moral development.

Principle 11

The child shall be protected from practices which may foster racial, religious and any other form 6/0 of discrimination. He shall be brought up in a spirit of understanding, tolerance, friendship among peoples, peace and universal brotherhood and in full consciousness that his energy and talents should be devoted to the service of his fellow men.

INTRODUCTION

- 1. The item entitled "Draft Declaration of the Rights of the Child" was included in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Economic and Social Council made in resolution 728 C (XXVIII) of 30 July 1959. By that resolution the Council decided to transmit to the General Assembly, for consideration at its fourteenth session, chapter VII of the report of the Commission on Human Rights on its fifteenth session (E/3229) relating to the draft Declaration of the Rights of the Child, together with the records of the discussion of this subject in the Council, and the other documents which had been before the Council at its twenty-eighth session. 11/
- 2. At its 803rd plenary meeting, held on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly allocated item 64 (Draft Declaration of the Rights of the Child) to the Third Committee.
- 3. The Third Committee had before it a note by the Secretary-General (A/4185) outlining the history of the consideration of the question in the United Nations since 1946, and a memorandum by the Secretary-General (E/CN.4/512), which included the text of the draft Declaration of Geneva of 1924, adopted by the Assembly of the League of Nations.
- 4. The report of the Commission on Human Rights transmitted to the General Assembly by the Council contained both the text of the draft Declaration submitted by that Commission and the text adopted in 1950 by the Social Commission (E/3229, chap. VII, para. 197).

PROCEEDINGS IN THE THIRD COMMITTEE

- 5. The Third Committee devoted twenty-three meetings (907th to 929th meetings), held from 25 September to 19 October 1959, to the consideration of the draft Declaration of the Rights of the Child.
- 6. Four of these meetings (917th to 910th) were devoted to a general debate. Many members pointed out that the draft Declaration had been under consideration for a long time and it was both possible and desirable that a final text be approved during the current fourteenth session of the General Assembly. Some expressed themselves in favour of a briefer and more concise text than that contained in the drafts which were before the Committee. Some thought that the Declaration should proclaim principles only and not contain any provisions on how the principles should be implemented. Others stated that, while they were prepared to support a declaration, they would have preferred a convention, and emphasized that the Declaration should contain certain directives regarding the implementation of the rights proclaimed.
- 7. After the completion of the general debate, the Committee proceeded to examine the preamble and each of the principles of the draft Declaration, taking as the basic text the draft declaration submitted by the Commission on Human Rights. The amendments proposed and the voting thereon are described below. No attempt has been made to summarize the opinions expressed by the various delegations represented on
- 11/ E/AC.7/L.325; E/AC.7/SR.393-396; and Official Records of the Economic and Social Council, Twenty-eighth Session, 1088th meeting.

- the Committee, and attention is drawn to the summary records of the discussions where these may be found (A/C.3/SR.907-929).
- 8. The draft Declaration adopted by the Committee contains a preamble and ten principles. The numbers of the principles quoted in this report are those of the text as finally adopted by the Third Committee. Decisions relating to the numbering of certain principles are indicated where appropriate.
- 9. On principle 7, relating to the child's right to receive education, the Committee heard a statement by the representative of UNESCO; and with respect to principle 9, which deals with the minimum age of employment of a child, the Committee heard a statement by the representative of the ILO.
- 10. At the 928th meeting, on 16 October 1959, Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716) and Ecuador (A/C.3/L.761) introduced amendments proposing additions to the draft Declaration. The representative of Afghanistan withdrew his amendment, reintroducing it later in the form of a draft resolution (see paragraph 109 below).
- 11. The addition to the draft Declaration proposed by Ecuador read as follows: "States shall take the necessary measures for economic development so as to eliminate the conditions which have lead to the insecurity of the child". The representative of Ecuador withdrew this amendment.
- 12. The Committee also considered at the 928th meeting a proposal by Israel (A/C.3/L.719) that the title of the Declaration should be amended to read "The Children's Charter". In introducing this amendment, the representative of Israel said that he would not press it to a vote unless there was unanimity in the Committee with respect to it. Some representatives expressed their preference for the existing title, and the amendment was withdrawn.

CONSIDERATION OF THE TEXT OF THE DRAFT DECLARATION

Preamble

- 13. The Committee discussed the preamble to the draft Declaration at four meetings (911th to 914th), held from 30 September to 2 October 1959.
- 14. Mexico and Peru proposed (A/C.3/L.717) that in the first five paragraphs the words "Por cuanto" in the Spanish text should be replaced by the words "Considerando que". The Committee adopted this amendment to the first paragraph of the preamble by 11 votes to 4, with 37 abstentions; and to the second paragraph by 40 votes to none, with 25 abstentions. At the 913th meeting, the Committee decided, without voting, that the amendment should be applied to the Spanish text of the third, fourth and fifth paragraphs of the preamble.
- 15. The first and second paragraphs of the preamble in the text of the Commission on Human Rights were adopted by 63 votes to none, with 1 abstention, and by 65 votes to none, with 1 abstention, respectively. These paragraphs read as follows:
 - "Whereas the United Nations have, in the Charter, reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights and in the dignity and worth of the human person, and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

"Whereas the United Nations have, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, proclaimed that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth therein, without distinction of anykind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status."

16. The third paragraph of the preamble in the text of the Commission on Human Rights read as follows:

"Whereas the child needs special safeguards, including special legal protection by reason of his physical and mental immaturity."

- 17. Amendments to this text were submitted by Italy (A/C.3/L.713 and A/C.3/L.713/Rev.1) and by Mexico and Peru (A/C.3/L.717). The latter, which called for the replacement of the words "including special legal protection" by the words "including legal safeguards", was subsequently withdrawn.
- 18. The amendment of Italy as revised during the discussion (A/C.3/L.713/Rev.1) called for the replacement of the text of the paragraph by the following:

"Whereas the child needs protection and care by reason of his physical and mental immaturity, and must receive legal safeguards from the moment of his conception."

In a sub-amendment to the amendment of Italy, the Philippines proposed (A/C.3/L.734) that the paragraph should read as follows:

"Whereas the child before as well as after birth needs special safeguards and care, including appropriate legal protection, by reason of his physical and mental immaturity."

Italy then proposed (A/C.3/L.735) that the phrase "Whereas the child before as well as after birth", in the Philippine sub-amendment, should be replaced by the following: "Whereas the child from his conception and after birth".

19. The latter sub-amendment of Italy was rejected by a roll-call vote of 40 to 20, with 9 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, France, Greece, Guatemala, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Lebanon, Morocco, Netherlands, Peru, Philippines, Spain, Venezuela.

Against: Albania, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Haiti, Hungary, India, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Libya, Nepal, New Zealand, Pakistan, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: Australia, China, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, Mexico, Norway, Portugal, Union of South Africa.

20. The sub-amendment of the Philippines (A/C.3/L. 734) was adopted by a roll-call vote of 58 to 1, with 10 abstentions, and became the third paragraph of the preamble. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Albania, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sudan, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Ireland.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Argentina, Australia, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Italy, Lebanon.

- 21. The fourth paragraph of the preamble in the text of the Commission on Human Rights read as follows:
- "Whereas the need for such special safeguards has been stated in the Geneva Declaration of the Rights of the Child of 1924, and has again been recognized in article 25 (2) of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in the statutes of specialized agencies and international organizations concerned with the welfare of children,"
- 22. Amendments were submitted by Mexico and Peru (A/C.3/L.717) and by the Philippines (A/C.3/L.720). The amendment of Mexico and Peru, calling for deletion of the paragraph was subsequently withdrawn in favour of the amendment of the Philippines, which consisted in deleting the words "has again been" and "article 25 (2) of". This amendment was adopted by 65 votes to none, with 3 abstentions.
- 23. The fifth paragraph of the preamble in the text of the Commission on Human Rights was adopted unanimously. It read as follows:
 - "Whereas mankind owes to the child the best it has to give."
- 24. The sixth paragraph (the operative paragraph) of the text of the Commission on Human Rights was as follows:

"Now therefore

- "The General Assembly recognizes and proclaims the essential rights of the child to the end that he may have a happy childhood and be enabled to grow up to enjoy for his own good and for the good of society, the fundamental rights and freedoms, particularly those specified in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and calls upon men and women as individuals as well as upon local authorities and national Governments to recognize and strive for the observance of those rights through the application of the following principles."
- 25. Amendments were submitted by the USSR (A/C. 3/L.712), the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.714), Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716) and the Philippines (A/C.3/L.720).
- 26. The USSR amendment (A/C.3/L.712) was to replace the words "men and women as individuals as well as upon their local authorities and national Governments" by the words "Governments of States, local authorities, and all men and women" and to add the following new paragraph:

"The General Assembly appeals to all States to bring their legislation into conformity with these principles and to be guided by them in practice."

27. The amendment of the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.714) called for the replacement of the latter part of the text of the Commission on Human Rights by the following:

"and calls upon parents, upon men and women as individuals and upon voluntary organizations, local authorities and national Governments to recognize and strive for the observance of those rights through the application of the following principles".

- 28. The amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716) consisted in deleting the words "particularly those specified in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights".
- 29. The Philippines proposed (A/C.3/L.720) a new text for the entire paragraph reading as follows:

"Now therefore

"The General Assembly proclaims this Declaration of the Rights of the Child to the end that he may have a happy childhood and enjoy for his own good and for the good of society the rights and freedoms herein set forth, and calls upon individuals, peoples and Governments to recognize and strive for the observance of these rights through the application of the following principles."

The representative of the Philippines or ally revised the above amendment to take into account a sub-amendment introduced by the USSR (A/C.3/L.736). The phrase "by legislative and other measures progressively taken in accordance with the following principles" was substituted for the words "through the application of the following principles".

- 30. The first part of the amendment of the Philippines, reading "Now therefore the General Assembly proclaims this Declaration of the Rights of the Child to the end that he may have a happy childhood and enjoy for his own good and for the good of society the rights and freedoms herein set forth", was adopted by 61 votes to none, with 7 abstentions.
- 31. - 33. The sixth (operative) paragraph as a whole as amended was adopted by 52 votes to none, with 16 abstentions.
- 34. The preamble as a whole as amended was adopted by 64 votes to none, with 4 abstentions.

Principle 1

35. Principle 1, discussed at the 914th and 915th meetings of the Committee on 2 and 5 October 1959, was based on principle 1 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights, which read as follows:

"The child shall enjoy all the rights set forth in this Declaration without distinction or discrimination on account of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, whether of himself or of either of his parents. All children whether born in or out of wedlock shall enjoy these rights."

- 36. Amendments were presented by Saudi Arabia (A/C.3/L.715), Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716), Belgium (A/C.3/L.718) and the Philippines (A/C.3/L.720).
- 37. Belgium proposed the insertion of the following definition of the term "child" (A/C.3/L.718): "i.e., the human being during the time that he is subject to the authority of his parents or of those who take their place"; it later withdrew its amendment.
- 38. The amendment of Saudi Arabia (A/C.3/L.715) called for the replacement of the words "whether born in or out of wedlock" by the phrase "with no exception whatsoever". Afghanistan proposed (A/C.3/L.716) the addition of the words "and relatives" after the word "parents". The amendment of the Philippines (A/C.3/L.720) consisted in deleting the clause: "whether of himself or of either of his parents".

39. Following suggestions made orally at the 915th meeting by the representatives of France and Poland, the representatives of Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia withdrew their amendments and jointly sponsored an amendment proposing the following text for principle 1:

"The child shall enjoy all the rights set forth in this Declaration. These rights shall be enjoyed by every child without any exception whatsoever and without distinction or discrimination on account of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, whether of himself or of his family."

- 40. The representative of the Philippines withdrew his delegation's amendment but requested that separate votes be taken on the new text proposed by Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia.
- 41. The first sentence of the amendment of Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia was adopted unanimously. The first part of the second sentence reading: "These rights shall be enjoyed by every child without any exception whatsoever and without distinction or discrimination on account of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status" was also adopted unanimously. The remainder of the second sentence reading "whether of himself or of hisfamily" was adopted by 50 votes to 7, with 9 abstentions.
- 42. The amendment as a whole was adopted unanimously.

Principle 2

- 43. Principle 2, discussed at the 915th to 917th meetings of the Committee on 5 and 6 October 1959, was based on principles 2 and 3 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights which read as follows:
 - "2. The child shall be given the means necessary to enable him to develop physically, mentally, morally, spiritually and socially in a healthy and normal manner and in conditions of freedom and dignity.
 - "3. The child shall enjoy special protection by law and by other means. Whenever necessary, opportunities and facilities shall be provided by law to enable him to develop in accordance with the principles of this Declaration. The best interests of the child shall be the paramount consideration in the enactment of such laws."
- 44. Amendments to these principles were submitted by Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716), Thailand (A/C.3/L.722), the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.726 and Add.1 and A/C.3/L.740) and Uruguay (A/C.3/L.729).
- 45. The amendment of Thailand (A/C.3/L.722) called for the deletion of principle 3 of the Commission's text. This also formed part of the amendment of the Netherlands, which was to delete principle 3 and replace principle 2 by a new text. The original Netherlands amendment (A/C.3/L.726 and Add.1) was revised during the discussion. In its revised form (A/C.3/L.740), which included an oral suggestion made by the representative of the Philippines, it was proposed that principle 2 should read as follows:

"The child shall enjoy special protection, and be given opportunities and facilities, by law and by other

- means, to enable him to develop physically, mentally, morally, spiritually and socially in a healthy and normal manner and in conditions of freedom and dignity. In the enactment of laws for this purpose the best interests of the child shall be the paramount consideration."
- 46. The amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716) called for the deletion of the words "and normal" after the word "healthy" in the text of principle 2 submitted by the Commission on Human Rights. It was subsequently moved as a sub-amendment to the above amendment of the Netherlands, and was rejected by 50 votes to 13, with 6 abstentions.
- 47. Similarly, the amendment of Uruguay (A/C.3/L. 729), which was to replace the words "in conditions of freedom and dignity" by the phrase "in conditions of freedom, dignity and responsibility", was moved as a sub-amendment to the above amendment of the Netherlands. This amendment was not adopted, there being 21 votes in favour, 21 against and 27 abstentions.
- 48. The text purposed in the revised amendment of the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.740) was adopted by 67 votes to none, with 5 abstentions, replacing the text of principles 2 and 3 as drafted by the Commission on Human Rights.
- 49. The Committee also discussed, in connexion with principles 2 and 3 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights, a proposal by Afghanistan, Argentina, Brazil, Italy, Spain and Uruguay (A/C.3/L.725) for the insertion of a new principle between principles 1 and 2, reading as follows:
 - "From the moment of conception, the right of the child to life shall be respected and safeguarded."

Abstaining: Australia, Burma, Cambodia, China, Federation of Malaya, Mexico, Philippines, Tunisia, Union of South Africa, Yemen.

Principle 3

51. Principle 3, discussed at the 917th meeting of the Committee on 6 October 1959, was based on principle 4 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights, which read as follows:

"The child shall be entitled from his birth to a name and a nationality."

- 52. Amendments were submitted by Belgium (A/C. 3/L.721), Thailand (A/C.3/L.722) and Uruguay (A/C. 3/L.729).
- 53. The representative of Thailand subsequently withdrew the amendment of his delegation (A/C.3/L. 722), which called for the deletion of the principle.
- 54. The amendment of Belgium (A/C.3/L.721), which consisted in inserting the word "suitable" before the word "name", was rejected by 46 votes to 5, with 17 abstentions.
- 55. The amendment of Uruguay (A/C.3/L.729) called for the replacement of the text of the principle by the following:
 - "The child shall be entitled from his birth to a name and a nationality and to know who his parents are."

This amendment was rejected by 48 votes to 2, with 16 abstentions.

56. Principle 4 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights was adopted by 68 votes to none, with 1 abstention, and became principle 3 of the draft Declaration as finally adopted by the Third Committee.

Principle 4

- 57. Principle 4, discussed at the 917th and 918th meetings of the Committee, held on 6 and 7 October 1959, was based on principle 5 of the text proposed by the Commission on Human Rights, which read as follows:
 - "The child shall enjoy the benefits of social security. He shall be entitled to grow and develop in health; to this end special care and protection shall be provided both to him and to his mother, including adequate pre-natal and post-natal care. The child shall have the right to adequate nutrition, housing, recreation and medical services."
- 58. Amendments were submitted by the USSR (A/C. 3/L.712 and A/C.3/L.742), Thailand (A/C.3/L.722) and the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.726 and Add.1).
- 59. The amendment of Thailand (A/C.3/L.722), calling for the deletion of the principle, and the amendment of the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.726 and Add.1), calling for the deletion of the words "in health" after the word "develop", were both subsequently withdrawn.
- 60. The USSR amendments (A/C.3/L.712) were revised during the discussion, and, in their revised form (A/C.3/L.742), consisted of three parts: (1) the addition of the words "by legislative and other measures" after the words "shall be provided"; (2) the insertion of the word "free" before the words "medical services"; and (3) the addition of the clause, "which shall be secured by the progressive extension of a network of public medical institutions accessible to all", after the word "services".
- 61. The Philippines proposed as a sub-amendment (A/C.3/L.741) to the USSR amendment (A/C.3/L.712) to the effect that the text suggested in that amendment should be replaced by the following:
 - "The child shall enjoy the benefits of social security, adequate pre-natal and post-natal care, nutrition, clothing, housing, recreation and medical services."

- The representative of the Philippines asked that the sub-amendment be applied to the revised USSR amendments (A/C.3/L.742). The Chairman ruled that it could not be so considered and in view of the time limit which has been established for the submission of amendments to the original text could not be voted upon.
- 62. The first part of the revised amendments of the USSR (A/C.3/L.742) was rejected by 36 votes to 15, with 17 abstentions; the second part by 38 votes to 18, with 14 abstentions; and the third part by 30 votes to 21, with 20 abstentions.
- 63. The Committee voted by parts on the text of principle 5 submitted by the Commission on Human Rights. The first sentence, voted on separately at the request of the representative of the Philippines, was adopted by 69 votes to none, with 2 abstentions. The words in the second sentence, "He shall be entitled to grow and develop in health", voted on separately at the request of the representative of Cuba, were adopted by 39 votes to 21, with 9 abstentions. The remainder of the text was adopted by 66 votes to 1, with 4 abstentions.
- 64. The principle as a whole was adopted by 68 votes to none, with 3 abstentions, and became principle 4 of the draft Declaration finally adopted by the Committee.

Principle 5

- 65. Principle 5, discussed at the 924th and 925th meetings on 13 and 14 October 1959, was based on principle 9 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights, which read as follows:
 - "The child who is physically, mentally or socially handicapped shall be given the special treatment, education and care required by his particular condition."
- 66. An amendment was submitted by Italy (A/C.3/L.732), initially presented as an amendment to the principle dealing with the right of the child to receive education (principle 7) and proposing the addition of a paragraph concerning the maladjusted child. The wording of this amendment was revised twice during the discussion.
- 67. Peru proposed a sub-amendment (A/C.3/L.755) to the first revision of the Italian text (A/C.3/L.754), but withdrew it in favour of a separate vote on the words "including the delinquent child" in the second revision. This text was introduced orally by the representative of Italy at the 925th meeting and read as follows:
 - "The socially maladjusted child, including the delinquent child, may not be separated from his family save by decision of a competent judicial authority."
- 68. The words "including the delinquent child" were rejected by 29 votes to 15, with 23 abstentions. The remainder of the amendment was rejected by 29 votes to 27, with 10 abstentions.
- 69. Principle 9 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights was adopted unanimously.
- 70. At the 928th meeting, on 16 October 1959, the Committee adopted a proposal by Greece and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.731) to place this principle between principles 5 and 6 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights. It therefore became principle 5 of the text as finally adopted by the Third Committee.

71. Principle 6, discussed at the 918th to 920th meetings, on 7 and 8 October 1959, was based on principle 6 of the Commission on Human Rights, which read as follows:

"For the full and harmonious development of his personality, the child needs love and understanding. He shall, save where his best interests require otherwise, grow up in the care of his parents, and a young child shall not, save in exceptional circumstances, be separated from his mother. In any case, opportunity shall be provided to the child to grow up in an atmosphere of affection and moral and material security. Society as well as public authorities shall have the duty to extend particular care to children without a family or those without adequate means of support."

72. Amendments were submitted by the USSR (A/C.3/L.712) Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716), Guatemala and Israel (A/C.3/L.723) and Denmark, Greece, the Netherlands, Thailand and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.743). The last-mentioned joint amendment was a revision of amendments initially proposed by the various delegations individually (Thailand, A/C.3/L.722; Denmark, A/C.3/L.724; Netherlands, A/C.3/L.726 and Add.1; and Greece and United Kingdom, A/C.3/L.731).

73. In the joint amendment (A/C.3/L.743) it was proposed that principle 6 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights be replaced by the following:

"The child, for the full and harmonious development of his personality, needs love and understanding. He shall, wherever possible, grow up in the care [and under the responsibility] of his parents, and in any case in an atmosphere of affection and of moral and material security; [a child of tender years shall not, save in exceptional circumstances, be separated from his mother.]"

The sponsors pointed out that they were not all jointly committed to the passages appearing in square brackets and suggested that separate votes be taken on them.

74. The sponsors accepted part of a sub-amendment of Poland (A/C.3/L.747) and added the following sentence to their original text:

"Society shall have the duty to extend particular care to children without a family or those without adequate means of support."

75. At the 920th meeting, the representative of Poland reintroduced the remainder of the Polish sub-amendment (A/C.3/L.747) which called for the insertion of the words "as well as public authorities" after the word "society". This was adopted by 43 votes to 19, with 8 abstentions.

76. The first sentence of the five-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.743) was adopted by 70 votes to none, with 1 abstention. The words "and under the responsibility", voted on separately at the request of the representative of Denmark, were adopted by 66 votes to none, with 4 abstentions. The clause, "He shall, wherever possible, grow up in the care and under the responsibility of his parents, and in any case in an atmosphere of affection and of moral and material security" was adopted by 69 votes to none, with 1 abstention. The remainder of the second sentence reading "a child of tender years shall not, save in exceptional circumstances, be separated from his mother, voted on separately at the request of the representative of Denmark, was adopted by 62 votes to 1, with 5 abstentions. The amendment as a whole, incorporating the sub-amendment of Poland, was adopted by 70 votes to none, with 1 abstention.

77. The amendment of the USSR to this principle (A/C.3/L.712) called for the addition of the following paragraph:

"States should provide for the proper maintenance and upbringing in State and public children's institutions for orphaned children and for children whose parents so desire and have insufficient means for their maintenance. Payment of State and other assistance towards the maintenance of children of large families is desirable."

78. The representative of the USSR withdrew the first part of his amendment after the adoption of the five-Power amendment. The second sentence, relating to assistance for the maintenance of children of large families, was adopted by 19 votes to 18, with 31 abstentions.

79. Guatemala and Israel proposed the addition of the following text to this principle (A/C.3/L.723):

"The child has the right to grow up in the religious faith and national loyalty of his parents; but he shall be protected against any practice which may foster racial, religious or national discrimination and hatred."

At the 920th meeting the amendment was orally revised to read:

"The child has the right to grow up in the religious faith of his parents."

This text was rejected by 46 votes to 6, with 16 abstentions.

80. The principle as a whole, as amended, was adopted by 55 votes to 1, with 14 abstentions.

Principle 7

81. Principle 7, discussed at the 920th to 923rd meetings, from 8 to 12 October 1959, was based on principle 7 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights which read as follows:

"The child is entitled to receive free and compulsory education, at least in the elementary stages. The education of the child shall be directed to the full development of his personality and the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms; it shall enable him, enjoying the same opportunities as others, to develop his abilities and individual judgement and to become to useful member of society. It shall promote mutual understanding, tolerance and friendship among all peoples and racial or religious groups, as well as understanding of the culture both of his own people and of other peoples and of the principles and purposes of the United Nations.

"The best interests of the child shall be the guiding principle of those responsible for his education and guidance; that responsibility lies in the first place with his parents."

82. Amendments were submitted by the USSR (A/C.3/L.712); Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716); Uruguay (A/C.3/

L.729); Mexico, Peru and Romania (A/C.3/L.730); Denmark, Greece, the Netherlands, Thailand and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.743). The last-mentioned amendment constituted a revision of amendments which the various delegations had submitted individually; Thailand (A/C.3/L.722), Denmark (A/C.3/L.724), the Netherlands (A/C.3/L.726 and Add.1) and Greece and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.731).

- 83. The amendment of Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.716) called for the deletion of the phrase "and of the principles and purposes of the United Nations".
- 84. The five-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.743) contained a new text for principle 7. The amendment was revised during the discussion to incorporate part of the amendment of Uruguay, which became a sixth sponsor. In its revised form (A/C.3/L.748) it was to the effect that principle 7 of the text of the Commission on Human Rights should be replaced by the following:

"The child is entitled to receive education, which shall be free and compulsory at least in the elementary stages. He shall be given an education which will promote his general culture, and enable him on a basis of equal opportunity to develop his abilities and individual judgement, and his sense of moral and social responsibility, and to become a useful member of society.

"The best interests of the child shall be the guiding principle of those responsible for his education and guidance; that responsibility lies in the first place with his parents."

- 85. Sub-amendments to this text were proposed by Cuba (A/C.3/L.745) and Bulgaria (A/C.3/L.752). The sub-amendment of Cuba was revised in the course of the discussion. In the revision (A/C.3/L.751) it was proposed that in the first sentence of the first paragraph the word "education" should be replaced by the word "schooling", and "elementary stages" by "elementary school". These two Cuban sub-amendments were rejected, by 44 votes to 11, with 13 abstentions, and by 42 votes to 15, with 8 abstentions, respectively. This amendment was rejected by 24 votes to 23, with 24 abstentions.
- 86. The sub-amendment of Bulgaria (A/C.3/L.752) to the six-Power amendment (A/C.3/L.748) called for the deletion of the words "in the first place" and the addition of the words "as well as with society and the State". This sub-amendment was rejected by 42 votes to 16, with 12 abstentions.
- 87. The amendment of Denmark, Greece, the Netherlands, Thailand, the United Kingdom and Uruguay (A/C.3/L.748) was adopted by 57 votes to none, with 14 abstentions.

sentence concerning measures which the State should take to ensure the right of the child to receive free and compulsory education, was not pressed to a vote. The second, orally revised in response to a suggestion by the representative of the United Arab Republic, called for the addition of the following at the end of the principle: "The utilization of teaching in schools for the propaganda of war and racial and national discrimination shall be prohibited". This text was rejected by a roll-call vote of 28 to 21, with 20 abstentions, as follows:

 - "The child shall have full opportunity for play and recreation, which should be directed to the same purposes as education; society and the public authorities shall be under an obligation to ensure the enjoyment of this right."
- 90. The sponsors of this amendment agreed that it should be voted upon as an additional paragraph of principle 7. They also accepted suggestions made orally by the representatives of Chile and Honduras to replace the words "be under an obligation to" by the words "endeavour to". Separate votes on the amendment were taken at the request of the representative of Portugal. The amendment of the USSR called for the addition of the following at the end of the principle: "Responsibility before the law shall be established by legislation for the paid employment of minors who have not reached a specified age laid down by law and for the employment of adolescents for work endangering health or life". ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 841st plenary meeting, on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft Declaration of the Rights of the Child and the draft resolution submitted by the Third Committee (A/4249, para. 110). For the final texts, see resolutions 1386 (XIV) and 1387 (XIV), respectively, below.

Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly

1386 (XIV). DECLARATION OF THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD

Preamble

Whereas the peoples of the United Nations have, in the Charter, reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights and in the dignity and worth of the human person, and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Whereas the United Nations has, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, proclaimed that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth therein, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status,

Whereas the child, by reason of his physical and mental immaturity, needs special safeguards and care, including appropriate legal protection, before as well as after birth,

Whereas the need for such special safeguards has been stated in the Geneva Declaration of the Rights of the Child of 1924, and recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in the statutes of specialized agencies and international organizations concerned with the welfare of children,

Whereas mankind owes to the child the best it has to give,

Now therefore,

The General Assembly

Proclaims this Declaration of the Rights of the Child to the end that he may have a happy childhood and enjoy for his own good and for the good of society the rights and freedoms herein set forth, and calls upon parents, upon men and women as individuals, and upon voluntary organizations, local authorities and national Governments to recognize these rights and strive for their observance by legislative and other measures progressively taken in accordance with the following principles:

Principle 1

The child shall enjoy all the rights set forth in this Declaration. Every child, without any exception whatsover, shall be entitled to these rights, without distintion or discrimination on account of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, whether of himself or of his family.

Principle 2

The child shall enjoy special protection, and shall be given opportunities and facilities, by law and by other means, to enable him to develop physically, mentally, morally, spiritually and socially in a healthy and normal manner and in conditions of freedom and dignity. In the enactment of laws for this purpose, the best interests of the child shall be the paramount consideration.

Principle 3

The child shall be entitled from his birth to a name and a nationality.

Principle 4

The child shall enjoy the benefits of social security. He shall be entitled to grow and develop in health; to this end, special care and protection shall be provided both to him and to his mother, including adequate pre-natal and post-natal care. The child shall have the right to adequate nutrition, housing, recreation and medical services.

Principle 5

The child who is physically, mentally or socially handicapped shall be given the special treatment, education and care required by his particular condition.

Principle 6

The child, for the full and harmonious development of his personality, needs love and understanding. He shall, wherever possible, grow up in the care and under the responsibility of his parents, and, in any case, in an atmosphere of affection and of moral and material security; a child of tender years shall not, save in exceptional circumstances, be separated from his mother. Society and the public authorities shall have the duty to extend particular care to children without a family and to those without adequate means of support. Payment of State and other assistance towards the maintenance of children of large families is desirable.

Principle 7

The child is entitled to receive education, which shall be free and compulsory, at least in the elementary stages. He shall be given an education which will promote his general culture, and enable him, on a basis of equal opportunity, to develop his abilities, his individual judgement, and his sense of moral and social responsibility, and to become a useful member of society.

The best interests of the child shall be the guiding principle of those responsible for his education and guidance; that responsibility lies in the first place with his parents.

The child shall have full opportunity for play and recreation, which should be directed to the same purposes as education; society and the public authorities shall endeavour to promote the enjoyment of this right.

Principle 8

The child shall in all circumstances be among the first to receive protection and relief.

Principle 9

The child shall be protected against all forms of neglect, cruelty and exploitation. He shall not be the subject of traffic, in any form.

The child shall not be admitted to employment before an appropriate minimum age; he shall in no case be caused or permitted to engage in any occupation or employment which would prejudice his health or education, or interfere with his physical, mental or moral development.

Principle 10

The child shall be protected from practices which may foster racial, religious and any other form of discrimination. He shall be brought up in a spirit of understanding, tolerance, friendship among peoples, peace and universal brotherhood, and in full consciousness that his energy and talents should be devoted to the service of his fellow men.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

1387 (XIV). PUBLICITY TO BE GIVEN TO THE DEC-LARATION OF THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD

The General Assembly,

Considering that the Declaration of the Rights of the Child 12/calls upon parents, upon men and women as individuals, and upon voluntary organizations, local authorities and national Governments to recognize the rights set forth therein and strive for their observance,

- 1. Recommends Governments of Member States, the specialized agencies concerned and the appropriate non-governmental organizations to publicize as widely as possible the text of the Declaration of the Rights of the Child:
- 2. Requests the Secretary-General to have the Declaration widely disseminated and, to that end, to use every means at his disposal to publish and distribute texts in all languages possible.

India: request for the inclusion of a supplementary item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [17 August 1959]

LETTER DATED 16 AUGUST 1959 FROM THE PERMANENT REPRESENTATIVE OF INDIA TO THE UNITED NATIONS, ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

In accordance with the instructions of the Government of India and pursuant to rule 14 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, I have the honour to propose the following supplementary item for inclusion in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly:

"Reservations to multilateral conventions: the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization"

The explanatory memorandum in terms of rule 20 of the rules of procedure is attached.

(Signed) C. S. JHA
Permanent Representative of India
to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

1. The Secretary-General of the United Nations was designated as the depositary under the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO) concluded in 1948. The Government of India, which was an original signatory to this Convention, sent on 6 January 1959 her instrument of acceptance for deposit to the Secretary-General of the United Nations. As the first Assembly of IMCO was then in session in London, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly of the submission for deposit by India of the instrument of acceptance and drew its attention to the declaration contained therein. In this connexion, the Assembly adopted, on 13 January 1959. a resolution requesting the Secretary-General to circulate India's instrument of acceptance to the States parties to the Convention in order to give them an opportunity to express their views on it. The Secretary-General informed the Government of India in his letter of 6 February 1959, that if he received "no objection to the declaration from a State party to the IMCO Convention" India would be listed as a party to the Convention.

2. The Government of India does not find any resolution or decision of the General Assembly authorizing the application of the unanimity rule in regard to multilateral conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations. The Government of India is of the view that the application of this rule in regard to multilateral conventions such as the IMCO Convention is contrary to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on "Reservations to the Genocide Convention" 1/2 and is also not in conformity with resolution 598 (VI) of the General Assembly.

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Sixth Committee, 614th to 629th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 847th meeting.

^{1/} Reservations to the Convention on Genocide, Advisory Opinion: I.C.J. Reports 1951, p. 15.

3. In these circumstances the Government of India considers that the General Assembly should pronounce itself clearly on the principles and procedure to be followed by the Secretary-General in the discharging of his functions as a depositary of instruments of ratification, accession or acceptance of conventions concluded before the date of adoption of General Assembly resolution 598 (VI) and with particular reference to the IMCO Convention. Accordingly, the Government of India has proposed an item entitled "Reservations to multilateral conventions: the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization", for inclusion in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.

1. Statement of facts

A. THE CONVENTION

1. In compliance with resolution 35 (IV) adopted by the Economic and Social Council on 28 March 1947, the Secretary-General of the United Nations convened the United Nations Maritime Conference in Geneva on 19 February 1948. Thirty-six States, including States then or now non-members of the United Nations, were represented at the Conference. Basing its deliberations on a draft agreement which had been prepared by the United Maritime Consultative Coun-

- cil, the Conference drew up the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization²/ and on 6 March 1948 opened it for signature and acceptance. It was deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.
- 2. The Convention came into force on 17 March 1958 upon its acceptance by the necessary twenty-one

^{2/} For the Final Act of the Conference and text of the Convention, see United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 289, p. 3, or United Nations Maritime Conference, Final Act and Related Documents (United Nations publications, Sales No.: 1948. VIII.2), p. 29.

States, including seven having each a total tonnage of not less than 1 million gross tons of shipping. By its terms, the States parties established the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (hereinafter referred to as IMCO). The functions of the Organization are consultative and advisory. 31 and its purposes technical. The Organization is to provide machinery for co-operation among Governments in the field of governmental regulation and practices relating to technical matters of all kinds affecting shipping engaged in international trade. It is to encourage the general adoption of the highest practicable standards in matters concerning maritime safety and efficiency of navigation, as well as the removal of unnecessary governmental restrictions affecting the availability of shipping services to world commerce.4/

- 3. The Organization consists of an Assembly, a Council, a Maritime Safety Committee, and a secretariat. 5/ The Assembly has authority under the Convention to perform the functions of the Organization, to vote its budget, to determine its financial arrangements, to apportion the expenses among the members, and to appoint personnel; and to make recommendations on maritime safety and other technical shipping subjects. The Council acts between sessions of the Assembly. 6/
- 4. The first session of the Assembly was convened in London on 6 January 1959. By the adoption of its resolution A.7 (I), approving the Agreement bringing the Organization into relationship with the United Nations, IMCO on 13 January 1959 became a specialized agency in accordance with Article 57 of the Charter of the United Nations.

B. PROCEDURES AFFECTING THE RESERVATION BY INDIA

- 5. As noted above, the IMCO Convention came into force on 17 March 1958 and the first session of the Assembly convened on 6 January 1959. Likewise on 6 January 1959, the Government of India submitted for deposit with the Secretary-General of the United Nations an instrument of acceptance of the Convention, "subject to" what it termed a "condition", to the effect that any measures which that Government adopts or may have adopted or may adopt on various shipping subjects are consistent with the purposes of the Organization as defined in the Convention (see annex I for the text of the instrument).
- 6. In accordance with established practice, the Secretary-General informed IMCO of the instrument of acceptance tendered for deposit subject to the stated condition. Noting that the condition seemed to be in the nature of a reservation, he suggested to the IMCO secretariat that the matter be placed before the IMCO Assembly, then in session, "for decision".
- 7. At its sixth meeting, on 13 January 1959, the IMCO Assembly adopted a resolution by which it took note of the information received from the Secretary-General concerning the instrument of acceptance submitted for deposit by the Government of India and resolved "to request the Secretary-General of the United Nations to circulate the document to member States of the Organization"; it further resolved "that until the member States have had an opportunity of expressing their views, the representatives of India shall be free to take part, without vote, in the proceedings of this Assembly". Before the vote the representative moving the resolution explained that this form of participation was necessary "for constitutional reasons". It

8. The Secretary-General accordingly, by circular note of 16 February 1959, informed the States members of IMCO of the submission of the instrument and set out the text of the condition declared by India. In so doing he requested of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of each member State that he be "informed as soon as possible of the attitude of ... [his] Government with respect to the above-mentioned declaration". At the same time he gave notice of the contents of the declaration to States entitled to become parties to the Convention. He likewise addressed a note to the Permanent Representative of India to the United Nations outlining the procedure which he had followed, referring to the request of the IMCO Assembly that he make this circulation in order to give the States members of the Organization "an opportunity of expressing their views", and mentioning that the circular note to members requested them to inform the Secretary-General as soon as possible of their attitude in respect of the declaration. He concluded:

"If the Secretary-General receives no objection to the declaration from a State party to the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, India will be listed as a party to the said Convention and all interested States will be notified accordingly."

9. Certain Governments replied that the Indian declaration required no comment or that it elicited no objection on their part. The French Government, however, replied by note of 18 March 1959 that it felt "bound to express its opposition to the reservations contained in the declaration of the Government of India" (see annex II). The United States Government transmitted the considerations on the basis of which it concluded that no part of the declaration constituted a reservation (see annex III). A communication from the Federal Republic of Germany examined the terms of the condition and concluded:

"In view of the difficulties in reconciling the Indian reservation with the general principles of shipping policies and with the purposes of IMCO, the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany suggests that, in due time, within the framework of IMCO, thoroughgoing negotiations should be conducted with the Indian Government, with the aim of causing the Indian Government to withdraw this reservation." (For the full text see annex IV.)

The Secretary-General circulated to Governments the contents of all such communications.

10. While these communications were being received and circulated, but subsequent to receipt of notice of the French objection, the Permanent Representative of India wrote to the Secretary-General noting the reasons for his circulation of the text as requested by the IMCO Assembly, but inquiring as to the significance to be attached to the final observation of the Secretary-General as quoted at the end of paragraph 8 above. The Permanent Representative stated that the Government of India could not believe that it could be the intention of the Secretary-General to introduce in this regard, by such a statement, a rule or principle of unanimity. The Government of India considered that the States parties to the Convention had had adequate time to indicate their views and, if objection had not been received from "all" the States parties, the Government of India had no doubt that the Secretary-General as depositary would list India as a member of the Organization.

11. In a note of reply to the Permanent Representative of India, the Secretary-General explained the position of the Secretariat. The form of the circular notes used by him followed the previous practice which the General Assembly had recognized as applicable in respect of conventions concluded prior to the adoption of its resolution 598 (VI) on reservations to multilateral conventions. Consequently, until the resolution adopted by the IMCO Assembly was modified by a new resolution or decision taken by a competent IMCO organ, the Secretary-General, in view of the expressions of attitude by certain IMCO members towards the condition to which India subjected its acceptance, was unable to receive the instrument in definitive deposit. So long as objection existed to the terms of the Indian acceptance, it would exceed the authority of the Secretary-General, he explained, to make the affirmative decision implicit in the request of India that it be listed as a member. Such a step would constitute an action in favour of one Government's position and against that taken by another. In abstaining from such action, however, the Secretary-General would be reserving to IMCO its right to pass upon the legal status of the acceptance by India, on the basis of its compatibility with the Convention.

II. Considerations of law affecting the reservation of India

A. THE STEPS TAKEN BY THE SECRETARY-GENERAL HAVE NOT AMOUNTED TO "AP-PLICATION OF THE UNANIMITY RULE"

12. In its explanatory memorandum (A/4188) proposing the present item for inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly, the Government of India states that it finds no resolution or decision that would authorize "the application of the unanimity rule in regard to multilateral conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations". The statement thus raises both the question of authority and the question of unanimity.

13. The broad authority of the Secretary-General to serve as depositary of multilateral conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations derives, of course, from policy decisions of the General Assembly taken as early as its first session and regularly renewed thereafter as an administrative matter. In taking specific depositary actions, however, the Secretary-General acts under the authority of the final articles of the conventions in question; as to matters which the States concluding a convention have not expressly covered in the articles on depositary functions, the Secretary-General seeks to follow those established depositary procedures understood to have been contemplated by the States parties at the time of the adoption of a given convention. Moreover, in the present situation, when circulating the text of the Indian reservation and requesting the views of the IMCO members, it is clear that the Secretary-General was specifically acting as agent of that Organization, not as agent of the General Assembly. Accordingly, his authority in this respect is to be found in the resolution of the IMCO Assembly; he would not have been prevented from complying with that request on the grounds of the absence of an express decision by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

14. The Secretary-General believes that it would assist in the consideration of this question, however, if he drew attention to the fact that, while he has sought to follow established procedures in the matter, he has not purported to be applying a "unanimity rule" to the reservation of India. In the indication to the Permanent Representative of India quoted at the end of paragraph 8 above, he did make clear that if there were no objection to their reservation, he would be in a position to list India forthwith as a member of IMCO. It did not, in his intention, follow from this statement that another and different proposition was true: i.e., that he considered that, if any State member of IMCO did object to the reservation, India was to be excluded from membership in that organization. He had merely indicated on the contrary that, in the absence of objection, there would be no obstacle to his treating the matter as already settled by the States concerned.

15. As explained in his reply to the Permanent Representative of India, summarized in paragraph 11 above, the Secretary-General reserved to the members of IMCO, acting through an appropriate channel or organ, the final decision as to the legal consequences of the condition attached by India to its acceptance of their Convention. This was not tantamount to a requirement of unanimity on his part but was only a reservation for the member States of the entire decision, including the question of unanimity. Whether the Assembly or Council of IMCO-upon consideration of the question after receiving the views of the States members of the Organization-would decide that any given numerical vote was necessary for determining the question would be a matter for decision under the IMCO Convention and not for the Secretary-General of the United Nations. That Convention, in fact, itself contains provisions which apply to voting in the Assembly and the Council and which indicate the vote required for various types of decisions.8/

16. It may be that to a certain extent the present difficulties have arisen out of some misunderstanding on this issue. To the best of the information available to the Secretary-General, the IMCO Assembly took no decision, nor was any suggestion made at that time, that a unanimous vote in India's favour was required. The representative of India addressed the Assembly only after the resolution deferring a final decision had been adopted. He then made a formal statement of position 9/ which could not have been implied in a vote actually preceding it and which was not taken with reference to any legal opinion of the United Nations Secretariat or the IMCO secretariat. He stated that his Government considered itself to be a full and unconditional member of that Organization. In fact, it was the representative of India who attributed to IMCO the application of a rule of unanimity. The attitude of the Assembly, he stated, appeared to be based on the view that India could not be treated as a party until "all the other signatories" had accepted the terms laid down in the Indian instrument-which his Government was prepared, for the purpose of determining its status as a party to the Convention, to assume to be a reservation. Was it, he asked, suggested that the objection of one State would suffice to exclude India from membership in IMCO? That might be the legal position, he acknowledged, in respect of certain multilateral conventions but, with respect to those parts of conventions which merely indicated in general terms certain desirable courses of action as an object towards which the parties would strive without assuming legal obligations, the Government of India thought itself entitled to make reservations the validity and effect of which were not dependent upon acceptance by the other parties. That must be so, he concluded, since the Indian reservation was consistent with the general purpose and object of the Convention. For, he noted, the terms of the Indian instrument did not refer to the constitutional parts of the Convention but only to article 1, which determined the purposes of IMCO.

Some IMCO Convention, art. 43. The Secretary-General does not suggest that the stated majorities would necessarily apply to a question of the present nature, but only that the existence of constitutional provisions regulating voting indicates the propriety of his leaving such questions to the bodies concerned.

17. These assumptions were not confirmed by the Assembly. The sponsor of the resolution at once made it clear that the Indian statement had not been known in advance and that the existing position was confined to the statement contained in the resolution which had just been adopted by the Assembly. In any case, the Secretary-General has summarized the IMCO proceedings on this point for the information of the General Assembly and, in particular, in order to demonstrate that any question of the application of a unanimity rule is one which has been, and remains, before IMCO.

B. THE REFERENCE TO IMCO WAS NOT A CONTROVERSIAL ACTION UNDER ANY THEORY OF RESERVATIONS

18. The Secretary-General was at no point in doubt as to the propriety of his referring to IMCO itself the question of the acceptance of India. This procedure conformed (1) to the terms of the IMCO Convention; (2) to the precedents in depositary practice where an organ or body was in a position to pass upon a reservation; and (3) to the views on this specific situation expressed by the General Assembly during its previous debates on reservations to multilateral conventions.

1. The reference to IMCO was in accordance with the IMCO Convention

19. As already noted, the IMCO Convention entered into force on 17 March 1958. The Indian instrument of acceptance was not submitted until 6 January 1959. Clearly the status of that acceptance was governed by the terms of the Convention under which it was submitted and by the intention of the parties thereto. Its article 5 opens membership in the Organization to all States, subject to the relevant provisions of the Convention. Article 6 entitles United Nations Members to join in accordance with the provisions of article 57. which provides for signature and acceptance, the acceptance to be effected by the deposit of an instrument with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The Indian reservation relates essentially to article 1, which establishes the basic purposes of the Organization. It seemed plain to the Secretary-General that if there was any question concerning the effectiveness of the acceptance, that question was one of interpretation of the IMCO Convention and could and should be determined in accordance with the terms of the Convention itself. Its article 55, entitled "Interpretation", provides:

"Any question or dispute concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention shall be referred for settlement to the Assembly, or shall be settled in such other manner as the parties to the dispute agree. Nothing in this article shall preclude the Council or the Maritime Safety Committee from settling any such question or dispute that may arise during the exercise of their functions."

As the Assembly we's convening on the very day on which the Permanent Representative of India submitted his Government's instrument, the Secretary-General could not but treat the legal consequences of the condition to which the Indian acceptance was subjected, and the consistency of that condition with the purposes of the Organization, as a question of interpretation to "be referred for settlement to the Assembly".

20. The propriety of this procedure was impliedly recognized by the IMCO Assembly in connexion with the reservation which had been proposed by another State prior to the Indian submission. At the time of the tender for deposit of an instrument of acceptance by the Government of Turkey, a proces-verbal had been drawn up on 25 March 1958 setting forth the Turkish reservation of its law concerning cabotage and monopoly. The text of the proces-verbal was communicated to all interested States by a circular note of 9 April 1958, with a request to States parties to the Convention to inform the Secretary-General as soon as possible of their attitude towards this reservation. None of the replies contained any express objection to the reservation, and indeed certain of them specified that the IMCO Assembly should definitively pronounce itself on the matter. Consistently with his established procedure the Secretary-General, in reporting to the IMCO Assembly on the status of the Convention, set out the text of the Turkish reservation and indicated the actions he had taken to date. This report constituted an item on the agenda of the first session and the IMCO Assembly, in receiving the report and seating the Turkish delegation without qualification, tacitly accepted the reservation.

2. The reference to IMCO conformed to precedent

21. In previous cases where reservations had been made to multilateral conventions which were in force and which either were constitutions of organizations or which otherwise created deliberative organs, the

^{9/} See IMCO/A.I/SR.6.

Secretary-General has invariably treated the matter as one for reference to the body having the authority to interpret the convention in question.

22. Thus, in 1948 the Secretary-General informed the States parties to the Constitution of the World Health Organization that he was not in a position to determine whether the United States of America had become a party to that Constitution by depositing an instrument containing a reservation, but he noted the authority of the World Health Assembly to interpret the Constitution under its article 75. The Assembly accepted the ratification as not inconsistent with the Constitution. In 1949, a meeting of the contracting parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade considered (in accordance with a procesverbal of signature drawn up by the Secretary-General) the reservations which the Union of South Africa desired to append to its signature of a protocol to the General Agreement which had been adopted by the contracting parties. A declaration accepting the reservations was then transmitted to the Secretary-General. At a later date, at their third session, the contracting parties took a similar decision, declaring valid and effective a Southern Rhodesian acceptance, subject to a reservation, of another of their protocols.

3. Constitutions of international agencies have been recognized as not subject to unilateral reservation

23. It has frequently been observed that, whatever might be the best rule for handling reservations to humanitarian or other normative types of multilateral conventions, stricter procedures apply to conventions which establish and provide for the governance of international organizations and which are therefore in the nature of constitutions. Thus, it was recognized in the debates in the Sixth Committee, at the fifth and sixth sessions of the General Assembly, on the item concerning reservations to multilateral conventions that no reservations to the United Nations Charter were permissible, and representatives of quite different philosophical persuasions took the position as to constitutions of international organizations that at least some form of consent within an organization was required in order to maintain its basic structure as among all the members. It was acknowledged that here the principle of universality of application yielded to that of integrity of the constituent instrument. This is because members of a functioning organization undertake common obligations, and necessarily do so on a multilateral basis, since it would be impossible for an agency to conduct broad operations if it had to apply a constitutional provision differently as between different members. In short, it is not feasible for State A to be a member of an organization in respect of State B and not a member as regards State C.

24. The obvious demonstration of this principle is that there could be no unilateral right to join an international organization subject, for example, to a reservation that the new entrant would pay less than the financial contribution provided under the constitution; nor could a situation be permitted by which one member would count the vote of another member but a third would not. In the IMCO Assembly it appeared that the Government of India wished to acknowledge and avoid this principle by distinguishing between the particular articles of a constitution to which a reservation was in substance applicable. Thus its representative stressed that the Indian condition "did not refer to the constitutional parts of the Convention" but only to those that "laid down general standards of conduct". 10/To the best of the Secretary-General's knowledge, this distinction between types of articles for determining the permissibility of unilateral reservations to the constitution of an operating agency is entirely new, but he has not sought, and would not now wish, to pass judgement on this doctrine as a matter of substance. For the purposes of the depositary it has sufficed that, if it is possible to make such a distinction between articles of the IMCO Convention, then it can be accomplished only through the process of interpretation of that Convention. And the process of interpretation is assigned to the Assembly or Council of the Organization by article 55 of the Convention. It may be that the Assembly could hold that, even if no reservation to the article on the apportionment of expenses among members could be permitted, one addressed to the basic constitutional statement of the purposes and functions of the Organization could be accepted by majority or other vote, or even on a unilateral basis. But so far as concerns the depositary actions of the Secretary-General, the decision whether the Indian reservation as to the purposes of the Organization is consistent with the object and purposes of the Convention rests with IMCO, which remains seized of the entire question. The very fact that the argument in favour of the new proposition has already been placed before the Assembly of that Organization is evidence of this point.

25. It is the conclusion of the Secretary-General from the above that the submission of the Indian reservation for consideration by IMCO does not in any real sense engage the conflicting doctrines that have heretofore led to controversy over the underlying theories of reservations. His referral of the reservation to IMCO did not commit the United Nations to an application of the unanimity rule, since the majority required for a vote within an IMCO organ is for the Organization to determine. Moreover, those who have upheld the classic League of Nations, or contractual, view of reservations have recognized that where the convention in question establishes an organization, that organization is the best medium for providing the necessary consent. Spokesmen for the Pan-American method have also made exceptions for constituent instruments. Nor can there be serious ground for complaint from representatives of the view that would have the depositary leave to States the determination of the legal effect of reservations. In the present case the States concerned are necessarily the members of the Organization whose constitution was made the subject of the reservation, and it is with them that the authority to make the ultimate decision continues to lie.

C. THE REFERRAL TO IMCO MEMBERS WAS NOT IN CONFLICT WITH THE ADVISORY OPINION OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

26. The explanatory memorandum of India expresses the view that the submission of its reservation to the membership of IMCO, as determined by the IMCO Assembly resolution, was contrary to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on reservations to the Convention on Genocide. The Court, however, expressly stated that the replies which the Court was called upon to give to the questions put by the General Assembly concerning reservations to the Convention on Genocide were "necessarily and strictly limited to that Convention". 11/Moreover, the General Assembly in resolution 598 (VI), noting the advisory opinion, recommended to States that they be guided by it "in regard to" the Convention on Genocide, and requested the Secretary-General, "in relation to" reservations to that Convention, to conform his practice to the advisory opinion. This limiting language, it will be recalled, was intentional, since the Court had determined that the solution of the problems placed before it "must be found in the special characteristics of the Genocide Convention". 12/

D. THE REFERRAL WAS NOT IN CONFLICT WITH THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION ON RESERVATIONS

27. The explanatory memorandum also expresses the view that the submission of the Indian reservation to the membership of IMCO, as determined by the IMCO Assembly resolution, was not in conformity with resolution 598 (VI) of the General Assembly of the United Nations. That resolution, however, in requesting the Secretary-General to adopt a new procedure for handling reservations expressly confined the new practice to "future" conventions. It did not apply to conventions which, like that on IMCO, had already been adopted. The summary records of the Sixth Committee at the sixth session leave no doubt that this distinction was conscious and purposeful. The word "future" was inserted because representatives had expressed doubts as to the powers of the General Assembly in relation to conventions already adopted by States. This view was that the General Assembly would not have legal competence to pronounce itself upon matters affecting the legal status of parties to existing conventions, or to modify a practice already followed by the depositary and to substitute one which could not have been contemplated by the negotiators of treaties drafted prior to the advisory opinion of the Court. In other words-to take the problem as it was then stated and to apply it in terms of IMCO-that Convention had already been adopted some four years prior to the Sixth Committee debates, and not by the General Assembly but by the United Nations Maritime Conference, which included States then or now non-members of the United Nations. The General Assembly, having in this connexion powers of recommendation only, could neither make a determination as to the procedures contemplated by the original negotiators, nor pass upon a difference between the Government of India and the IMCO Assembly. It would not be for the General Assembly to fix a rule for determining a question of membership in another international organization; nor would it wish to take a decision in interpretation of the IMCO Convention, a power assigned by that treaty to the IMCO Assembly and Council. To do so, according to the views which seemed to prevail in the Sixth Committee at the sixth session, would be to amend, or modify the application of, the IMCO Convention.

28. Indeed, the deliberate intention of the General Assembly to include the limiting language is demonstrated by the voting. The representative of the USSR called for a separate vote on the phrase relating to future conventions; thereupon the spokesman for its joint sponsors "explained that the purpose of the addition of the words referred to by the USSR representative in the joint amendment was to show that the instructions given to the Secretary-General were not to have any retroactive effect on existing conventions or conventions that had merely been signed, but were only to be applied with respect to future conventions". 13/ The Committee then adopted this language by a vote of 32 to 5, with 12 abstentions. Moreover, to make quite clear how the Secretariat understood that it was to carry out its functions, the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Legal Department had made a formal statement to the Sixth Committee:

"Whatever decision the Sixth Committee might take, the Secretary-General would endeavour to implement it to the best of his ability. Nevertheless, it was clearly understood that any instructions issued to the Secretary-General in his capacity of depositary would be supplementary instructions, applicable solely to future conventions concluded under United Nations auspices and not containing special clauses on reservations." 114/

E. IMCO BEING SEIZED OF THIS QUESTION, THE DECISION RESTS WITH THAT ORGANIZATION

29. Apart from questions discussed above as to the administrative procedures of the depositary, or even as to reservations doctrine, a practical matter concerning conflicts of jurisdiction between international organs now arises. The Secretary-General apprised IMCO of the condition to which the Government of India subjected its membership in that organization; the IMCO Assembly not only took jurisdiction of the question but retained it. Its resolution of 13 January 1959 was by nature a provisional decision "until" the member States should have an opportunity of expressing their views; it therefore did not divest IMCO of its jurisdiction of the question but rather confirmed it. The circulation by the Secretary-General being thus inherently an interim measure, he was serving strictly as agent of the IMCO Assembly, acting at its request. That the question remains pending is further suggested by the fact that the recent session of the IMCO Council has taken note of a report by the IMCO secretariat on the status of the Convention, which referred to the Indian reservation. 15/ Complications could arise if the General Assembly of the United Nations were now to give him instructions as to the procedure to follow in a question still to be considered by an appropriate organ of IMCO; it might even create for the Secretary-General a direct conflict between the authority given him by IMCO as its agent and the views of the General Assembly as a principal organ of the United Nations.

^{11/} I.C.J. Reports 1951, p. 20. At the sixth session, the representative of India in the Sixth Committee "emphasized" that the comments of the Court were "limited to the Convention on Genocide" (Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixth Session, Sixth Committee, 267th meeting, para. 33).

^{12/} I.C.J. Reports 1951, p. 23.

^{23/} Official Records of the General Assembly, Sixth Session, Sixth Committee, 277th meeting, para. 65. The representative of India had also stressed that "the Committee's decision related to future conventions and not to conventions concluded in the past" (ibid., 267th meeting, para. 32).

30. This practical difficulty suggests a risk that, if a question which is still sub judice within IMCO were now transferred to the General Assembly of the United Nations by one of the parties to the question remaining for settlement within that organization, the General Assembly might unintentionally become a court of appeal from adverse decisions within the governing bodies of specialized agencies. A different type of referral is provided by the terms of the IMCO Convention, however. As already noted, article 55 authorizes the Assembly, or the Council during the exercise of its functions, to settle any question concerning the interpretation of the Convention. Article 56 then provides:

"Any legal question which cannot be settled as provided in article 55 shall be referred by the Organization to the International Court of Justice for an advisory opinion in accordance with Article 96 of the Charter of the United Nations."

This decision too is plainly one to be taken by IMCO.

- III. Conclusion: general considerations affecting depositary functions relating to conventions concluded prior to the adoption of General Assembly resolution 598 (VI)
- 31. The explanatory memorandum of India (A/4188) poses the question now before the General Assembly 'with particular reference to the IMCO Convention" and this is the light in which the question has been examined above. In so formulating the question, however, the memorandum states that "the Government of India considers that the General Assembly should pronounce itself clearly on the principles and procedure to be followed by the Secretary-General in the discharging of his functions as a depositary" of conventions concluded before the date of adoption of General Assembly resolution 598 (VI). It is the belief of the Secretary-General that the information set out above would suggest that the procedures which have been followed in the IMCO case do not in themselves raise broader questions of principle on which the General Assembly is required to pronounce itself. For, under any theory of reservations, the question would still have been for settlement by IMCO. A new directive by the General Assembly to the Secretary-General as to reservations procedures in general, therefore, could not alter the status or nature of the specific problem before IMCO.
- 32. Nevertheless, it might be of interest to the General Assembly if the Secretary-General were to conclude this report with general information of a factual character on the broader question, in order that the General Assembly might judge whether reservations procedures since the date of resolution 598 (VI) have to any practical extent presented difficulties either to the depositary or to the States parties to multilateral conventions.
- 33. As recalled in paragraphs 27 and 28 above, that resolution created a procedural distinction between conventions concluded prior to its adoption and conventions subsequently concluded. Thus far, substantive differences in legal consequence do not seem to have flowed from that difference in practice.

- 34. A number of conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations since the date of the resolution have complied with its recommendation that the drafters of multilateral conventions insert provisions for determining the admissibility or not of reservations and their legal effect. Under such conventions procedural problems of any moment have been obviated. A few conventions have not followed the recommendation, but no objection has been received to any reservation yet made, and in any case conclusions as to the legal consequences of such a reservation and objection will not be the concern of the depositary but, under the resolution, will be left to be drawn by each State concerned.
- 35. Accordingly, no difficulty has yet arisen concerning the practice as to the "future" conventions referred to in resolution 598 (VI). What is of more immediate interest in relation to the present agenda item, is that until the current session no difficulty had arisen in respect of the practice followed as to the conventions concluded prior to the adoption of the 1952 resolution. Thus, almost eight years have elapsed since its adoption without any legal dispute arising in relation to, or resulting from, the principles and procedure to be followed by the Secretary-General concerning conventions concluded before 1952. In all probability this fact is due to the lack of substantive difference in the two procedures: regarding the functions of the Secretary-General, the distinction in effect amounts only to one of the style in which the circular notes of the depositary are formulated. That is to say, in circulating the text of a reservation made to a convention existing at the time of that resolution, he requests States parties to advise him of their "attitude" towards the reservation; in the case of conventions concluded subsequent to the resolution, he circulates the text without this request. On the other hand, in either the one case or the other, the Secretary-General publishes only the essential facts: the deposit of instruments, the texts of reservations, and the fact of regardless of the date of the conobjections, vention. 16/
- 36. It may also be that, as time progresses and accessions to the older conventions diminish, the prospect of any significant number of reservations, and therefore the possibility of objections, steadily recede. Certainly, the particular problem which gave rise to the question of the reservations to the Convention on Genocide—whether the entry into force of the Convention could be declared in the face of the depositary's uncertainty as to the number of States to be counted as parties for that purpose—can no longer arise. This is because no more of the conventions existing at the time of the resolution are due for entry into force.
- 37. In any case it has seemed to the Secretary-General that if any new legal question of substance were now to arise in some future dispute (none at present existing within the United Nations) as to the legal consequences of a reservation and objection thereto, the method of solution would be essentially the same, regardless of whether the convention had been concluded prior or subsequent to resolution 598 (VI). If there were uncertainty as to whether the reserving State had a right to treat itself and be treated as a party to the convention in question, that doubt would not be settled by the forms of correspondence which the Secretary-General had followed. In either case it would remain for solution at the instance of an interested State, by way of international procedures: it could be referred to an appropriate organ or to the International Court of Justice, in the same way for an earlier convention as would be necessary for a later one.

38. If the General Assembly were now, however, to wish to suggest some different or more uniform procedure for the Secretary-General in a sense contrary to the requests made to him in the 1952 resolution, the Secretary-General stands ready to provide the necessary information regarding the adaptability of his administrative procedures as depositary to any such alteration.

Instrument of acceptance by India of the IMCO Convention subject to a condition

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS COME. GREETING!

WHEREAS, a Convention relating to the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization was signed at Geneva, on the sixth day of March in the year one thousand nine hundred and forty-eight, by the Plenipotentiary and the Representative of the Government of India, duly autorized for that purpose, which Convention is annexed herewith.

AND WHEREAS, it is fit and expedient to approve and accept the aforesaid Convention subject to the following conditions:

"In accepting the Convention of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, the Government of India declare that any measures which it adopts or may have adopted for giving encouragement and assistance to its national shipping and shipping industries (such, for instance, as loan-financing of national shipping companies at reasonable or even concessional rates of interest, or the allocation of Government-owned or Government-controlled cargoes to national ships or the reservation of the coastal trade for national shipping) and such other matters as the Government of India may adopt, the sole object of which is to promote the development of its own national shipping, are consistent with the purposes of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization as defined in article 1(b) of the Convention. Accordingly, any recommendations relating to this subject that may be adopted by the Organization will be subject to re-examination by the Government of India. The Government of India further expressly state that its acceptance of the above-mentioned Convention neither has nor shall have the effect of altering or modifying in any way the law on the subject in force in the territories of the Republic of India."

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT KNOWN THAT the Government of India, having seen and considered the said Convention, hereby approve and accept the same subject to the stipulation referred to above.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF I, Rajendra Prasad, President of India, have signed these Presents and affixed hereunto my Seal at New Delhi this thirty-first day of December of the year one thousand nine hundred and fifty-eight.

(Signed) Rajendra PRASAD President of India

Reply by France to the condition declared by India

LETTER DATED 18 MARCH 1959 ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL BY THE MINISTER PLENIPO-TENTIARY, DIRECTOR OF UNITED NATIONS AFFAIRS AND INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS AT THE FRENCH MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

By your letter C.N.17.a.1959.TREATIES-4 of 16 February 1959, you informed me of the tender for deposit with the Secretariat, on 6 January 1959, of the instrument of acceptance by the Government of India of the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization, signed at Geneva 6 March 1948, in accordance with article 57, paragraph (c), of that Convention. You requested me at the same time to communicate to you my Government's attitude with respect to a declaration contained in the instrument of acceptance.

In acknowledging receipt of that communication, I have the honour to inform you that the French Government feels bound to express its opposition to the reservations contained in the declaration of the Government of India.

My Government has always considered that the reservations by which a State qualifies its signature, ratification or acceptance of a multilateral treaty are valid only if they are accepted by all the States parties to the treaty.

The French Government is unable to accept the wording of the Indian reservations for two reasons:

1. It is in the first place impossible to accept that a Government party to a multilateral convention should itself decide unilaterally that any measures which it might adopt in the future in regard to the subjects covered by the convention, shall automatically be deemed consistent with the convention.

The question at issue is whether it appertains to a State party to a multilateral treaty to take a decision on this point itself, its discretionary judgement in the matter being then imposed on all the other States parties to the treaty. The determination whether a reservation is consistent with the spirit, object or purpose of a treaty is, in itself, a juridical question of general interest which too closely affects the structure of the treaty to be decided unilaterally. It is for the States parties to the treaty to take a decision on this point, it being understood, to quote the words used by the International Court of Justice in its Advisory Opinion of 28 May 1951, that "if a party to the Convention objects to a reservation which it considers to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, it can in fact consider that the reserving State is not a party to the Convention". 2

In these circumstances it would seem impossible to accept the declaration of the Government of India that "any measures ... and such other matters as the Government of India may adopt, the sole object of which is to promote the development of its own national shipping, are consistent with the purposes of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization". The parties to the Convention are in fact being asked to give a free hand for the future, and they would not be justified in doing so. To be acceptable, a reservation must be precise and strictly limited. It is easy to see that the reservation made by the Government of India is not of this nature.

2. The Government of India adds in its instrument of acceptance that "any recommendations relating to this subject that may be adopted by the Organization will be subject to re-examination by the Government of India".

The acceptance of such a formula by the other parties to the Convention would in practice make the mechanism of the Convention of 6 March 1948 ineffective by subordinating the application of each and every recommendation adopted by the Organization to the consent of the appropriate constitutional organs of the various signatory States. Acceptance of such a system would be tantamount to calling into question the provisions agreed to in 1948. By definition a ratification or an acceptance cannot be conditional. Nothing in the Convention, as it was accepted by the signatory States, authorizes such an interpretation. Acceptance of the Indian doctrine at the present stage would open the door to requests of a similar nature which would undoubtedly be made in the future and which would rapidly destroy the effectiveness of the provisions that were jointly elaborated and approved.

ANN EX III

Reply by the United States of America to the condition declared by India

LETTER DATED 30 JUNE 1959 FROM THE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE UNITED NATIONS ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

The representative of the United States of America to the United Nations presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honor to refer to note C.N.17.a.1959.TREATIES-4 from the United Nations Legal Counsel, dated 16 February 1959, requesting the United States to inform the Secretary-General of its attitude with respect to the declaration contained in the acceptance by India of the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization.

The Government of the United States does not consider that the declaration of the Government of India constitutes a reservation on the part of that Government.

With respect to the first sentence of the declaration, it is not considered that there is anything inconsistent as between the language of the sentence and the purposes of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization as defined in article 1 (b) of the Convention. Article 1 (b) states that assistance and encouragement given by a Government for the development of its national shipping and for purposes of security does not in itself constitute discrimination. The measures which the Government of India sets forth as the kinds of measures which it has adopted or may adopt, are of a kind which constitute assistance and encouragement for development of its national shipping, and are not designed to restrict the freedom of shipping of all flags to take part in international trade, within the meaning of the proviso to article 1 (b); in this connection, it is understood that, in reserving the right to limit its coastal trade for national shipping, India's intention is not inconsistent with the generally recognized principle that a nation may exclude vessels of other countries from transporting passengers or merchandise between ports or places within that nation. Although the Government of India, in the first sentence, also states that it may adopt "such other matters", on the principle of ejusdem generis, these "such other matters" are to be interpreted normally as being of the kind and character as those specifically set forth by the Government of India in the parenthetical expression in its first sentence. Furthermore, all of these measures are stated to be with the sole object of promoting India's national shipping, and thus do not indicate that they are designed to restrict the freedom of shipping of all flags to take part in international trade. Accordingly, in the opinion of the Government of the United States of America, there is nothing in the language of the first sentence of the declaration by the Government of India which is inconsistent with the purposes of the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization as defined in article 1 (b). Moreover, the Government of India itself declares such to be the case. The position of the United States regarding the first sentence of the declaration should not, of course, be taken to constitute affirmative approval of any specific measures taken or to be taken within the terms of the more general reference to measures as set forth in the declaration, since information regarding such specific measures was not made available with the declaration. The position of the Government of the United States is simply that the declaration by the Government of India does not legally constitute a reservation.

With respect to the last two sentences of the declaration, it is noted that, since the functions of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization are declared by the Convention (article 2) to be consultative and advisory only, it is obvious that any recommendation adopted by that Organization would not have binding effects on governments. Any such recommendation would be examined by the governments concerned, and, if expressed in the form of an agreement or convention, would be accepted or rejected, as the case might be, by each Government in accordance with its constitutional procedures. The last two sentences of the declaration of the Government of India are, therefore, a restatement of the right of examination and decision on the part of the Contracting Parties which is implicit in the Convention.

It would be appreciated if the Secretary-General would inform the other interested Governments of the position of the United States with respect to this matter.

ANNEX IV

Reply by the Federal Republic of Germany to the condition declared by India

LETTER DATED 2 JULY 1959 FROM THE ACTING PER-MANENT OBSERVER OF THE FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

The Acting Permanent Observer of the Federal Republic of Germany to the United Nations presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to refer to Circular Note 17.a.1959.TREATIES-4 of 16 February 1959 regarding the declaration contained in the instrument of acceptance by the Government of India of the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization.

Upon instruction from his Government the Acting Permanent Observer of the Federal Republic of Germany has the honour to transmit to the Secretary-General the following comments of the Federal Government on this declaration:

The Government of the Federal Republic of Germany has some difficulties in reconciling its views with the reservation regarding the "allocation of Government-owned or Government-controlled cargoes to national ships" made by the Government of India in its instrument of acceptance of the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization.

The Government of India considers this reservation as being "consistent with the purposes of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization as defined in article 1 (b) of the Convention". In the view of the German Federal Government, however, any measures, taken by a Government, that are clearly designed to favour one-sidedly its national ships conflict not only with the general principles of unrestricted world trade and with the particular principles of freedom in maritime traffic like, for instance, the principles of free choice of flag, of free and fair competition and of non-discrimination of foreign flags through government interference in the shipping business, but also with the very provisions of the IMCO Convention itself. The measures which the Indian Government reserves the right to adopt would restrict the freedom of ships of all other flags to participate in international trade. Therefore, they are inconsistent with article 1 (b) of the IMCO Convention and hence with the declared purposes of the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization. By providing for certain cargoes to be shipped exclusively or preferably by its national ships, a government measure necessarily restricts the competitive possibilities of foreign shipping firms to take part in the international maritime traffic with that country and, by its nature, results in a restriction of the freedom of shipping for all foreign flags.

In view of the difficulties in reconciling the Indian reservation with the general principles of shipping policies and with the purposes of IMCO, the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany suggests that, in due time, within the framework of IMCO, thoroughgoing negotiations should be conducted with the Indian Government, with the aim of causing the Indian Government to withdraw this reservation.

Report of the Sixth Committee

[1 December 1959]

- 1. The Permanent Representative of India, in a letter dated 16 August 1959 (A/4188), addressed to the Secretary-General, proposed for inclusion in the provisional agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly a supplementary item entitled "Reservations to multilateral conventions: the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization". An explanatory memorandum was appended to the letter.
- 2. On 22 September 1959, at its 803rd plenary meeting, the General Assembly placed the item on the agenda of the fourteenth session and referred it to the Sixth Committee.
- 3. The Committee considered the item from its 614th to 629th meetings held between 19 October and 9 November 1959. The Committee took up successively the particular question of the Indian acceptance of the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (614th to 623rd meetings) and, thereafter, the broader question of reservations to multilateral conventions in general (623rd to 629th meetings).
- 4. A report on the question was submitted by the Secretary-General (A/4235).
- I. QUESTION OF THE ACCEPTANCE BY INDIA OF THE CONVENTION ON THE INTER-GOVERN-MENTAL MARITIME CONSULTATIVE OR-GANIZATION

5. Introducing the item, the representative of India reviewed the history of his Government's association with IMCO. India had participated in the United Nations Conference, convened under a resolution of the Economic and Social Council in 1948, which concluded the Convention; and on the date on which it was opened for signature, India had signed the Convention. The Convention having entered into force in 1958, an instrument of acceptance by India was then deposited with the Secretary-General, as depositary of the Convention, on 6 January 1959, the date on which the first session of the Assembly of IMCO was convened. The terms of the instrument stipulated that the acceptance was subject to a number of stated conditions concerning the consistency with the purposes of IMCO, as defined by its Convention, of any measures of the Government for assisting its national shipping. The Secretary-General informed the IMCO Assembly of his receipt of the instrument and of the text of the conditions. That Assembly adopted a resolution requesting the Secretary-General of the United Nations to circulate the Indian document to States members of IMCO; it resolved that, until the member States had had an opportunity of expressing their views. India should be free to take part without vote in the IMCO Assembly proceedings. The Secretary-General thereupon advised the Indian Mission to the United Nations that the practice as to the circulation of reservations or declarations, applicable to conventions adopted prior to General Assembly resolution 598 (VI) of 12 January 1952 on reservations, would

- be followed. Both in IMCO and in correspondence with the Secretary-General, the Government of India took the position that these actions amounted to an application of the "unanimity rule", whereas India considered itself automatically a full member of IMCO, there being no question of another State party raising any objection. Two States members of IMCO, however, transmitted formal objections to the Indian condition.
- 6. The representative of India submitted, as the principal matter before the Committee, the question whether the stipulation in the instrument of acceptance constituted a reservation. He explained that the Indian Government had merely made a declaration of policy, not amounting to a reservation, and intended only to restate the purposes, and the advisory and consultative functions, of IMCO, with which any measure adopted by the Government would be consistent.
- 7. It was therefore the position of India that the Secretary-General should have accepted the instrument without further question, that it was ultra vires and contrary to the Charter for him to act under the instructions of IMCO in circulating the declaration, and that his procedure violated General Assembly resolution 598 (VI).
- 8. A number of representatives raised the preliminary question of the competence or the propriety of the General Assembly's taking jurisdiction of a question affecting membership in IMCO or the interpretation of its Convention. They noted that that Convention expressly conferred upon IMCO organs the authority to settle any dispute concerning the interpretation of its provisions, which necessarily included those relating to membership. They also pointed out that two members of IMCO were not represented in the General Assembly, while many United Nations Members were not members of IMCO. The Secretary-General, these representatives held, derived his depositary authority in this connexion from the final articles of the IMCO Convention and from the request in the IMCO Assembly resolution. They therefore considered that for the General Assembly to give other instructions either to the Secretary-General or to IMCO would amount to exercising a supervisory authority over a separate international organization over which the United Nations General Assembly did not have jurisdiction. According to this school of thought, therefore, IMCO alone had the responsibility for settling any question having to do with the determination of its own membership. A contrary body of opinion, however, held to the view that it was normal for the General Assembly to take up any guestion of the exercise by the Secretary-General of his functions and to make suitable recommendations to specialized agencies in fulfilment of the co-ordinative function of the United Nations under the Charter. Moreover, it was felt that other international organizations, in availing themselves of the depositary services of the Secretary-General, impliedly consented to the General Assembly's authority to give guidance to the common depositary, who in any case acted in the name of the United Nations as a whole.

9. Those representatives who considered that it was basically an IMCO responsibility to determine any question affecting the membership of that organization also adhered to the view that the Secretary-General had acted correctly in referring the matter to IMCO and then seeking to ascertain the attitude of its member States towards the Indian conditions in accordance with the IMCO Assembly resolution. These representatives felt that the nature of the Indian declaration raised sufficient doubt that its submission to the membership concerned was requisite, and compliance with the request to circulate it was a normal depositary function. Those who held to the contrary proposition did so either on the grounds that the depositary should have turned to India to resolve any ambiguity in the instrument or on the grounds that in any case he should always accept an instrument in deposit and give due notice to the parties without any other action, whether or not the instrument contained a reservation.

10. The Committee paid considerable attention to the Indian argument that the actions of the Secretary-General in this case had not been in conformity with resolution 598 (VI) of the General Assembly. Many representatives were satisfied by the fact that the practice established by that resolution regarding reservations related to "future" conventions only, while the IMCO Convention had been concluded some years before. Others emphasized that the whole purpose of the resolution had been to reject the theory of the rule of unanimity, while the procedures followed in the present situation at least admitted of the impression that such a rule had been applied to India, A similar difference of approach was shown regarding the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the reservations to the Genocide Convention: many representatives noted that the conclusions of the Court were expressly limited to that particular Convention, but others stressed the clear denial by the Court that the principle of unanimity had been transformed into a rule of international law.

11. The Committee was virtually unanimous in welcoming the statement by the representative of India that his Government had merely made a declaration of policy intended to be consistent with the Convention and not amounting to a reservation; the Committee was also unanimous in acknowledging the great importance of the full participation of India in the work of IMCO. It therefore welcomed the proposal of the representative of India that a practical solution could be found for the whole question. Speaking on behalf of the sponsors, he suggested that such a solution could be obtained along the lines of a joint draft resolution before the Committee (A/C.6/L.448 and Add.1).

Proposal

12. This draft resolution (A/C.6/L.448 and Add.1) was submitted by Afghanistan, Belgium, Canada, Ceylon, Cuba, France, Greece, India, Liberia, the Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Spain, the United Arab Republic and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. According to it, the General Assembly would: (1) express its appreciation of the information and materials made available to the General Assembly; (2) express the hope that, in the light of the explanatory statement on behalf of India that the stipulation in its instrument of acceptance had constituted a declaration of policy, an appropriate solution to regularize the position of India might be reached in IMCO at an early date; and (3) request the Secretary-General to transmit to the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization this resolution together with the relevant records and documentation.

Voting

- 13. At its 622nd meeting, held on 30 October 1959, the Sixth Committee voted on the joint draft resolution as follows:
- (a) At the request of the representative of Peru, a separate vote was taken on the third preambular paragraph, which was adopted by a roll-call vote of 65 votes to 1, with 1 abstention. The voting was as follows:

II. RESERVATIONS TO MULTILATERAL CONVENTIONS IN GENERAL

14. The representatives who supported a seven-Power draft resolution (A/C.6/L.449 and Add.1 and 2, see para. 20 below), providing that the Secretary-General should be requested to apply the procedure of resolution 598 (VI), paragraph 3 (b), to all conventions which did not contain a provision to the contrary, stressed the practical advantage of the uniformity to be obtained from authorizing the Secretary-General to apply the same depositary procedures to reservations to all conventions regardless of whether they had been concluded before or after General Assembly resolution 598 (VI). In general, they opposed the study of other possible systems, at least until the International Law Commission had completed its work on the codification of the whole law of treaties. A number of representatives particularly emphasized the desirability of continuing and extending the application of resolution 598 (VI) as constituting in itself the best means of furthering international co-operation by affording to multilateral conventions the widest possible application among the greatest possible number of States; these representatives saw little practical significance in any request to the International Law Commission to report on the subject, since its report on the law of treaties would, in any case, be submitted in due course and in its whole context. A number of representatives considered the entire question too complex to justify haste, but felt that the extension of the compromise they found in resolution 598 (VI) provided the best administrative practice in the interim.

15. The supporters of a ten-Power draft resolution (A/C.6/L.450 and Add.1, see para. 21 below), calling for reports by the Secretary-General and the International Law Commission and for further consideration by the General Assembly at its sixteenth session, analysed the extreme complexity of the reservations question and its bearing on the depositary function. They argued that the system instituted by resolution 598 (VI) could not be extended to all conventions without exception unless a thorough technical study of all aspects of the problem were made. They pointed to the number of different systems that might be established to govern the legal effect of reservations and objections. Among the difficulties found in the seven-Power draft resolution (A/C.6/L.449 and Add.1 and 2) were its retroactivity and the fact that it did not precisely conform to the terms of the resolution it was extending, as resolution 598 (VI) had been confined to conventions concluded under United Nations auspices. In addition, they felt that neither resolution 598 (VI) nor its proposed extension would provide a clear rule or a lasting solution. They especially noted that that resolution had been adopted on the basis of several reports or opinions presented to two sessions of the General Assembly, whereas delegations to the present session had not come prepared to dispose of the question of reservations, nor had they ever received a study of depositary practices as such.

- 16. A substantial body of opinion in the Sixth Committee adhered to the view that the two draft resolutions were in reality more complementary than inconsistent. They urged the sponsors of both to seek means of merging the two in a single text.
- 17. The sponsors of both draft resolutions thereafter withdrew the two previous versions and introduced a single new draft resolution (A/C.6/L.451 and Add.1), representing an agreed minimum text acceptable to both groups. The Secretary-General was to be asked, as far as concerned the deposit of documents containing reservations with regard to the conventions concluded prior to the adoption of resolution 598 (VI), to adhere to the same practice which he was requested to follow in respect of the conventions concluded after the adoption of that resolution. Resolution 598 (VI) should, it was provided, now also apply to all conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations prior to its adoption, provided these conventions do not contain provisions to the contrary. The combined sponsors agreed that the provision that the Secretary-General should act in this manner "until such time as the General Assembly may give further instructions" did not alter the nature of the instructions already given in resolution 598 (VI); nor did it imply that the General Assembly would necessarily give further instructions at some future date: the phrase was merely designed to leave the door open for whatever action the General Assembly might deem appropriate in the light of additional studies. The new draft neither asked the International Law Commission to separate the question of reservations from its regular place in the context of the Commission's consideration of the law of treaties nor required that the item be placed on the agenda of any particular session of the General Assembly; it was thought that this compromise would satisfy those who had cautioned against haste as well as those who desired to ensure further consideration of the matter.

- 18. Some representatives felt that the phrase extending the application of resolution 598 (VI) "until such time as the General Assembly may give further instructions" was redundant, since the General Assembly could always revise a previous decision and the International Law Commission would in any case be reporting on the subject in due course. Some also objected to the limitation to conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations.
- 19. The Legal Counsel was asked to clarify the practice which would be followed by the depositary pursuant to the adoption of the compromise draft. He stated that when the Secretariat had to apply a General Assembly resolution which requested Secretariat action, it had only one rule-to be as loyal as possible to the spirit and to the letter of the resolution. That was not always easy, as there might be some discrepancy between the spirit and the letter. The present draft resolution would amend paragraph 3 (b) of resolution 598 (VI) by requesting the Secretary-General to apply this paragraph to his depositary practice until such time as the General Assembly may give further instructions in respect of all conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations which do not contain provisions to the contrary. Resolution 598 (VI) was very definite in a matter of concern to the Secretary-General-namely, that he should continue to act as depositary, in connexion with the deposit of documents containing reservations or objections without passing upon the legal effect of such documents. Its paragraph 3 (b) requested the Secretary-General to communicate the text of such documents relating to reservations or objections to all States concerned, leaving it to each State to draw the legal consequences from such communications. He considered it obvious that in no case would the Secretariat have to pass upon the legal effect of such reservations or objections, as it would leave to each State the function of drawing legal consequences therefrom. He stated that this procedure was quite clear and that the Secretariat would continue to adhere to it. If an instrument of ratification was received with a reservation (no question arising if there were no reservation), the Secretariat would circulate to the States parties to the Convention a notice of the receipt of the instrument and of the reservation. This being the main Secretariat function, it would not draw the attention of States to any aspect but would merely communicate the facts as to the instrument, together with the terms of the reservation. If the Secretariat received objections, it would circulate the objections to the States concerned. Once the Secretariat had accepted an instrument of ratification or accession, it would include the country concerned in all the processes of the operation of the Convention as regards the Secretary-General's functions with respect to the Convention. That might, for instance, include the circulation in every case, to the State which made the reservations objected to, of all documents just as if there were, for the purposes of the Secretariat, no objections. He believed that the foregoing statement, while somewhat condensed, indicated exactly what the situation would be, and established a system which could operate to the satisfaction of all parties concerned. Nevertheless, he wished to refer to the remote possibility that, in the operation of this system, the Secretariat might find itself confronted with a real legal problem which could not be anticipated at the present moment. Supposing that such a case arose, there would be only one possibility for the Secretariat, since it was not to exercise any powers of appreciation, particularly of a legal character. The sole possibility would be for the Secretary-General to request the General Assembly for an advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice. While he trusted that this could occur only in an extreme situation, he thought it clear that such an authority was required to settle a specific legal question, as it would not be within the competence of the Secretariat.

Proposals

20. The seven-Power draft resolution (A/C.6/L.449 and Add.1 and 2), submitted by Argentina, Belgium, Indonesia, Mexico, Peru, Thailand and the United States of America, provided that:

"The General Assembly,

"Having considered agenda item 65, 'Reservations to multilateral conventions: the Convention on the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization',

"Recalling its resolution 598 (VI) on reservations to multilateral conventions,

"Decides to amend paragraph 3 (b) of resolution 598 (VI) by requesting the Secretary-General to apply the aforesaid paragraph 3 (b) in respect of all conventions of which he is the depositary and which do not contain provisions to the contrary."

21. The ten-Power draft resolution was submitted by Austria, Cambodia, Canada, Chile, Ghana, Ireland, the Netherlands, the Philippines, Turkey and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (A/C.6/L.450 and Add.1). It read as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Having considered the general question of reservations to multilateral conventions with particular reference to the functions of the Secretary-General as depositary authority,

"Considering that this question needs further study before any final decision is taken in regard to it,

"Having regard to the fact that the subject of reservations is before the International Law Commission and the forthcoming Inter-American Conference.

- "1. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate to Member States, prior to the sixteenth session, a report on his current practice in respect of reservations to multilateral conventions for which he is the depositary authority, and objections to such reservations, together with any other directly related matters;
- "2. Invites States and international organizations acting as depositaries of multilateral conventions to furnish appropriate information to the Secretary-General on their practice in respect of the matters set out in paragraph 1 above;
- "3. Invites the International Law Commission to expedite as much as possible that part of its work on the codification and development of the law of treaties as relates to the question of reservations to multilateral conventions and the functions of depositary authorities, with a view to reporting thereon to the General Assembly at its sixteenth session;
- "4. Decides to place on the provisional agenda of its sixteenth session the question of reservations to multilateral conventions and of the functions of the Secretary-General as depositary authority."
- 22. These two draft resolutions were later withdrawn by their sponsors who, together with Greece and Pakistan, submitted a nineteen-Power draft resolution (A/C.6/L.451 and Add.1) whereby the General Assembly would: (1) decide to amend paragraph 3 (b) of resolution 598 (VI) by requesting the Secretary-General to apply to his depositary practice, until such time as the General Assembly might give further instructions, the aforesaid paragraph 3 (b) in respect of all conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations which do not contain provisions to the contrary; and (2) request the Secretary-General to obtain information from all depositary States and international organizations with respect to depositary practice in relation to reservations, and to prepare a summary of such practices, including his own, for use by the International Law Commission in preparing its reports on the law of treaties and by the General Assembly in considering these reports.

Voting

- 23. At its 629th meeting, held on 9 November 1959, the Sixth Committee voted in parts, on the nineteen-Power draft resolution (A/C.6/L.451 and Add.1), as follows:

- (c) Operative paragraph 2 was adopted by a roll-call vote of 53 votes to none, with 9 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Denmark, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Liberia, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Arab Republic, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

[Original text: English] [20 November 1959]

- 1. On 11 September 1959, the Secretary-General requested (A/4209) the inclusion of an item entitled "Question of disarmament: (a) report of the Disarmament Commission: letter dated 11 September 1959 from the Chairman of the Disarmament Commission to the Secretary-General" in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.
- 2. At its 122nd meeting, on 16 September 1959, the General Committee recommended (A/4214) its inclusion as sub-item (a) under the heading "Question of disarmament".
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly considered the General Committee's report (A/4214) and decided to include as separate items in the agenda each of the questions listed by the General Committee under the heading "Question of disarmament", leaving to the First Committee the decision as to the manner and order in which they should be discussed.
- 4. At its 1025th meeting, on 8 October 1959, the First Committee adopted without objection the Chairman's suggestion that "Report of the Disarmament Commission: letter dated 11 September 1959 from the Chairman of the Disarmament Commission to the Secretary-General" should be the fifth item on its agenda. The Chairman drew the attention of the Committee to the minor editorial change in the description of the item, the words "Question of disarmament" and "(a)" having been left out.
- 5. On 19 November 1959, India and Yugoslavia submitted a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.242), whereby the General Assembly would: (1) decide that the Disarmament Commission should continue to be composed of all Members of the United Nations; (2) transmit to the Disarmament Commission all the documents, proposals and records of discussions relating to disarmament at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly; (3) request the Secretary-General to provide the staff and services required by the Disarmament Commission and, in consultation with the Governments concerned, provide such facilities as might be required by the ten-nation disarmament committee.
- 6. The item was considered at the 1060th meeting of the First Committee on 20 November 1959. The Chairman noted the informal suggestion of the representative of Greece that the Chairman of the Disarmament Commission might be invited to attend the opening meeting of the ten-nation disarmament committee. The First Committee unanimously adopted the draft resolution (A/C.1/L.242).

Recommendation of the First Committee

7. The First Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

Ireland: request for the inclusion of an item in the provisional agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [18 June 1959]

LETTER DATED 15 JUNE 1959 FROM THE PER-MANENT REPRESENTATIVE OR IRELAND TO THE UNITED NATIONS, ADDRESSED TO THE SECRE-TARY-GENERAL

On instructions from the Government of Ireland, I have the honour to request the inclusion of the following item on the provisional agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly: "Prevention of the wider dissemination of nuclear weapons".

In accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure, I enclose an explanatory memorandum on this question.

(Signed) F. H. BOLAND Permanent Representative of Ireland to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

1. In the course of the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, the Irish delegation drewattention to the dangers to world peace involved in the spread of nuclear weapons and to the urgent need for an international agreement which would ensure that the present nuclear Powers would remain the sole possessors of much weapons. During the general debate in the Assembly [751st plenary meeting], the Chairman of the Irish delegation Mr. Frank Aiken, Minister for External Affairs of Ireland, proposed that the present nuclear Powers should undertake not to supply nuclear weapons to any other country, and that the Assembly should then adopt a resolution calling on all other States to refrain from manufacturing or acquiring such weapons. This resolution could be followed by a convention in which those States would bind themselves, not merely to renounce nuclear weapons, but to accept United Nations supervision of their nuclear development for peaceful purposes. It was recognized that special arrangements would have to be made to secure the adherence of non-member States to the proposed convention.

2. The Chairman of the Irish delegation subsequently submitted a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.206) on this subject during the debate in the First Committee on disarmament questions. The text of the draft resolution was as follows:

"The General Assembly,

"Recognizing that the aim of the United Nations in the field of disarmament is an effective general agreement on the prohibition of atomic, hydrogen and other weapons of mass destruction which will provide for the cessation of the production of such weapons, the destruction of existing stocks and the progressive limitation of conventional armaments,

"Recognizing further that the danger now exists that an increase in the number of States possessing nuclear weapons may occur, aggravating international tension and the difficulty of maintaining world peace and thus rendering more difficult the attainment of the general disarmament agreement envisaged in the preceding paragraph,

"Decides to establish an ad hoc committee to study the dangers inherent in the further dissemination of nuclear weapons and recommend to the General Assembly at its fourteenth session appropriate measures for averting these dangers."

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, First Committee, 1054th to 1056th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 841st meeting.

- 3. In introducing this draft resolution to the First Committee [953rd meeting], Mr. Aiken explained that it was conceived as a step towards the restriction of nuclear weapons, leading eventually to their abolition. He also pointed out that the existing nuclear stalemate would cease to apply once nuclear weapons began to come into the possession of smaller countries. Nothing except international measures to prevent the dissemination of such weapons could prevent them from coming ultimately into the possession of small States or even of revolutionary organizations. The use of nuclear weapons by a small State or revolutionary group could lead to the autbreak of a general war, with disastrous consequences for the future of mankind. In this connection the Chairman of the Irish delegation expressed the view that measures to prevent the wider dissemination of nuclear weapons could not await a comprehensive disarmament settlement, since many years might have to elapse before any such settlement could be achieved. Indeed, the failure to check the dissemination of nuclear weapons during the long period of general disarmament negotiations might in itself render these negotiations fruitless.
- 4. At the conclusion of the debate on the disarmament resolutions before the First Committee, the Irish representative asked [970th meeting] for a separate roll-call vote on the second paragraph of the Irish draft resolution, i.e., the paragraph which would have the General Assembly recognize the dangers inherent in the further dissemination of nuclear weapons. The - result of the vote was 37 to none, with 44 abstentions. The representative of Ireland expressed his satisfaction that no negative votes were cast against the paragraph and that the recognition of the danger of the wider distribution of nuclear weapons was unopposed. Mr. Aiken subsequently withdrew the draft resolution as a whole, indicating that he did not wish to insist on any particular method of dealing with the generally acknowledged danger, but expressing the hope that the reconstituted Disarmament Commission would deal with it as one of its first items. He realized that most Governments had not had sufficient time to study the matter fully since the introduction of the Irish draft resolution.

- 5. In the light of the recognition of the dangers involved in the wider distribution of nuclear weapons implied in the vote of the First Committee at the thirteenth session of the General Assembly, and of subsequent developments, the Irish Government believes that it will be the wish of the General Assembly to give further consideration to this important and urgent question at its fourteenth session in the hope that effective and generally acceptable means of dealing with it may be found. To this end, Ireland requests that the item entitled "Prevention of the wider dissemination of nuclear weapons" be placed upon the provisional agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly and will submit a draft resolution to the Assembly for its consideration in due course.

[Original text: English] [18 November 1959]

- 1. On 15 June 1959 Ireland requested (A/4125) the inclusion of the item entitled "Prevention of the wider dissemination of nuclear weapons" in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.
- 2. On 16 September 1959 the General Committee recommended (A/4214) its inclusion as sub-item (\underline{b}) under the heading "Question of disarmament".
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959 the General Assembly, considered the General Committee's report (A/4214) and decided to include as separate items in the agenda each of the questions listed by the General Committee under the heading "Questions of disarmament", leaving to the First Committee the decision as to the manner and order in which they should be discussed.
- 4. At its 1025th meeting, on 8 October 1959, the First Committee adopted without objection the Chairman's suggestion that "Prevention of the wider dissemination of nuclear weapons" should be the third item of its agenda. - 5. On 28 October 1959 Ireland submitted a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.235), and on 16 November 1959 its final revised version (A/C.1/L.235/Rev.3), where-

- by the General Assembly would: (1) suggest that the ten-nation disarmament committee in the course of its deliberations should consider appropriate means of averting the danger of the wide wider dissemination of nuclear weapons, including the feasibility of an international agreement, subject to inspection and control, whereby the Powers producing nuclear weapons would refrain from handing over the control of such weapons to any nation not possessing them and the Powers not possessing such weapons would refrain from manufacturing them; and (2) invite the tennation disarmament committee to include the results of its deliberations on these matters in its report to the Disarmament Commission.
- 6. At its 1056th meeting, on 16 November 1959, the First Committee voted on the Irish draft resolution (A/C.1/L.235/Rev.3), and adopted it by a roll-call vote of 66 to none with 13 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

Recommendation of the First Committee

7. The First Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change, See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below,]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 841st plenary meeting, on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the First Committee (A/4286, para. 7). For the final text, see resolution 1380 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1380 (XIV). PREVENTION OF THE WIDER DISSEMINATION OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that the danger now exists that and increase in the number of States possessing nuclear weapons may occur, aggravating international tension and the difficulty of maintaining world peace, and thus rendering more difficult the attainment of general disarmament agreement, Convinced therefore that consideration of this danger is appropriate within the framework of deliberations on disarmament.

Noting the resolution of the United Nations Disarmament Commission of 10 September 1959 (DC/146), Desiring to bring to the attention of the ten-nation disarmament committee its conviction that consideration should be given to this problem,

- 1. Suggests that the ten-nation disarmament committee, in the course of its deliberations, should consider appropriate means whereby this danger may be averted, including the feasibility of an international agreement subject to inspection and control, whereby the Powers producing nuclear weapons would refrain from handing over the control of such weapons to any nation not possessing them and whereby the Powers not possessing such weapons would refrain from manufacturing them;
- 2. Invites the committee to include the results of its deliberations on these matters in its report to the Disarmament Commission.

841st plenary meeting, 20 November 1959.

Morocco: request for the inclusion of a supplementary item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: French] [14 August 1959]

LETTER DATED 13 AUGUST 1959 FROM THE ACTING CHARGE D'AFFAIRES OF THE PERMA-NENT MISSION OF MOROCCO TO THE UNITED NATIONS ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-

The Acting Charge d'affaires of the Permanent Mission of Morocco to the United Nations presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to communicate to him, upon instructions from his Government, the text of a note from the President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Morocco concerning the request of His Majesty's Government for the inclusion of the item "Question of French nuclear tests in the Sahara" in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly.

> (Signed) M. WARZAZI Acting Chargé d'affaires

Permanent Mission of Morocco to the United Nations

Note from the President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Morocco

With reference to the provisions of rule 14 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, and upon instructions from my Government, I have the honour to request the inscription of the following item in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the United Nations General Assembly: "Question of French nuclear tests in the Sahara".

An explanatory memorandum is attached hereto, in conformity with rule 20 of the rules of procedure.

> (Signed) Abdallah IBRAHIM President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs

Explanatory memorandum

1. Since the French Government expressed its intention of conducting nuclear tests in the Sahara, the Government of His Majesty the King of Morocco has on several occasions drawn the attention of the responsible French authorities to the multiple dangers and grave consequences which such tests are bound to entail.

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, First Committee, 1043rd to 1054th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 840th meeting.

- 2. Quite recently, following the French Government's official decision to explode an atomic bomb in the Sahara, as announced by the French Minister of the Armed Forces, the Moroccan Government again made representations by note verbale to France with a view to persuading it to abandon that project.
- 3. In view of the anxiety of the Moroccan population of the different parts of the southern Sahara which are exposed to the consequences of the planned tests, and in view of France's refusal to pay heed to Morocco's warnings and of its rejection of the most recent Moroccan notes, His Majesty's Government, considering that it has exhausted all direct and peaceful means for the settlement of this problem as recommended in the Charter of the United Nations, has decided to put the question before the General Assembly in the hope that the latter will settle it in a manner consistent alike with the aspirations of the population of Morocco and the African continent, with considerations of security and with the requirements of the maintenance of international peace.

Recommendation of the First Committee

13. The First Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

QUESTION OF FRENCH NUCLEAR TESTS IN THE SAHARA

The General Assembly,

Conscious of the great concern throughout the world repeatedly expressed in the United Nations over the prospect of further nuclear tests and their effects upon mankind,

Noting the declared intention of the Government of France to undertake nuclear tests in the Sahara,

Considering the deep concern felt over the dangers and risks which such tests entail,

Considering that significant progress is being made in the negotiations now proceeding at Geneva concerning the discontinuance of nuclear weapons tests under an international control system,

Considering that the parties to those negotiations have facilitated their progress by voluntarily suspending such tests,

Considering that the purpose of the said negotiations is to bring about a general discontinuance of nuclear weapons tests and that it is to be hoped that, in the same spirit which inspired the present voluntary suspension of tests, no State will initiate or resume tests of this kind,

Recognizing the anxiety caused by the contemplated tests in the Sahara among all peoples, and more particularly those of Africa,

Bearing in mind that in creating conditions of danger in Africa, France cannot assume the responsibility for the protection of the threatened sovereign States,

Considering the special responsibility of the United Nations for the health, safety and well-being of the dependent peoples of Africa threatened by such tests,

- 1. Expresses its grave concern over the intention of the French Government to conduct nuclear tests;
- 2. Requests France to refrain from such tests.

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 840th plenary meeting, on 20 November 1959, the General Assembly amended and adopted the draft resolution submitted by the First Committee (A/4280, para. 13). For the final text, see resolution 1379 (XIV) below.

India: request for the inclusion of a supplementary item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English]
[17 August 1959]

LETTER DATED 16 AUGUST 1959 FROM THE PER-MANENT REPRESENTATIVE OF INDIA TO THE UNITED NATIONS, ADDRESSED TO THE SECRE-TARY-GENERAL

In accordance with the instructions of the Government of India and pursuant to rule 14 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, I have the honour to propose the following supplementary item for inclusion in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly: "Suspension of nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests".

The explanatory memorandum in terms of rule 20 of the rules of procedure is attached.

(Signed) C. S. JHA
Permanent Representative of India
to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

- 1. The United Nations has for several years been discussing the problem of suspending nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests. The General Assembly considered it during its tenth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth sessions, and India submitted draft resolutions on this subject on numerous occasions.
- 2. The Government of India have repeatedly drawn the attention of the United Nations to the deterioration in the situation over the last few years by the development and accumulation of new weapons, the increase in the number of countries possessing them and the possibility of further increases. With the developments in the field of armament and the progress made in outer-space missiles, any major conflict may result in the annihilation of the world's population and the extinction of all forms of life. There is an ever-growing hazard, with incalculable consequences, from the continuing accumulation of radiation from test explosion of nuclear weapons. Future generations are not safe from this hazard. The Government of India have noted with concern that the number of countries possessing nuclear weapons may soon be increased and thus considerably add to the current dangerous possibilities.

3. The report of the Conference of Experts to Study the Possibility of Detecting Violations of a Possible Agreement on the Suspension of Nuclear Tests 1/, which met at Geneva in 1958, indicated that it was technically and scientifically practicable to establish arrangements in order to ensure the observance of any agreement on the discontinuance of such tests. As a consequence of this report, the States which are testing such weapons met at the Conference on the Discontinuance of Nuclear Weapons Tests, which commenced at Geneva on 31 October 1958, with a view to reaching agreement on the discontinuance of such tests. Such information as the Government of India have of the proceedings of this conference shows that some progress has been made. The Government of India hope that the efforts made at Geneva will reach a successful conclusion and are at the same time anxious that the United Nations should be associated with any decision which may be taken on this important subject. It may also be recalled that, by its resolution 1252 (XIII), the General Assembly expected to be seized of this problem on a continuing basis. It is the view of the Government of India that, in the unfortunate event of no agreement being reached at Geneva in the near future, a discussion of this problem at the forthcoming session of the General Assembly should contribute to its early and satisfactory solution. In the circumstances, the Government of India have proposed the item "Suspension of nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests" for the agenda of the fourteenth session of the Assembly.

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, First Committee, 1056th to 1060th meetings; and ibid., Plenary Meetings, 842nd meeting.

Report of the First Committee

[Original text: English] [20 November 1959]

- 1. On 16 August 1959, India requested (A/4186) the inclusion of the item entitled "Suspension of nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests" in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly.
- 2. On 16 September 1959, the General Committee recommended (A/4214) its inclusion as sub-item (\underline{d}) under the heading "Question of disarmament".
- 3. At its 803rd plenary meeting, on 22 September 1959, the General Assembly considered the General Committee's report (A/4214) and decided to include as separate items in the agenda each of the questions listed by the General Committee under the heading "Question of disarmament", leaving to the First Committee the manner and order in which they would be discussed.
- 4. At its 1025th meeting, on 8 October 1959, the First Committee adopted without objection the Chairman's suggestion that "Suspension of nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests" should be the fourth item in its agenda. The item was considered at the 1056th to 1060th meetings of the First Committee, from 16 to 20 November 1959.
- 5. On 31 October 1959, Austria, Japan and Sweden submitted a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.236) whereby the General Assembly would: (1) express appreciation for the efforts of the parties to reach an agreement on the prohibition of nuclear weapons tests and an appropriate international control system; (2) express the hope that their efforts would be intensified in order to reach the early, successful conclusion of such an agreement; and (3) request the parties concerned to report to the General Assembly the results of their negotiations. On 17 November 1959, the sponsors submitted a revised draft resolution (A/C.1/L.236/Rev.1) with some changes in the operative part and an additional paragraph whereby the General Assembly would urge the States concerned in the negotiations to continue their present voluntary discontinuance of the testing of nuclear weapons.
- 6. On 31 October 1959, India submitted a draft resolution (A/C.1/L.237) whereby the General Assembly would: (1) request the States concerned to reach agreement speedily on the total cessation of nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests; (2) call upon the States concerned to refrain from further tests or preparations for them pending agreement on total cessation; (3) call upon all other States to desist from conducting such tests and from making decisions or preparations in regard to them; (4) remind such States that any such action was contrary to the expressed and urgent desires of the people of the world and of the General Assembly, and to the spirit which had enabled progress at Geneva, and was inimical to further progress and agreement on total cessation; and (5) request the States concerned to report to the General Assembly, at a special session if necessary, on the results of the conference so that it might take further appropriate action.
- 7. On 17 November 1959, a revised version of this draft resolution was submitted by Afghanistan, Burma, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Iraq,

- Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Morocco, Nepal, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Tunisia, the United Arab Republic, Yemen and Yugoslavia (A/C.1/L.237/Rev.1), whereby the General Assembly would: (1) express its appreciation to the States concerned for their patient and sincere efforts to reach agreement on the discontinuance of nuclear and thermo-nuclear tests with effective international control, and for the progress hitherto achieved; (2) express the hope that the States concerned would reach such agreement at an early date; (3) appeal to the States concerned in the Geneva discussions to continue their present voluntary suspension of tests, and to other States to desist from such tests; and (4) request the States concerned to report to the Disarmament Commission and the General Assembly the results of their negotiations. On 18 and 19 November 1959, Cambodia, Cuba, Japan and Libya were added to the list of sponsors (A/C.1/L.237/Rev.1/Add.1 and 2).

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics: request for the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: Russian] [19 September 1959]

On the instructions of the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the USSR delegation requests the inclusion of the following item in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly, as an important and urgent matter: "General and complete disarmament".

In accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure, I attach an explanatory memorandum on this question.

The delegation requests that the Declaration of the Soviet Government on general and complete disarmament, 1/2 submitted for the consideration of the Assembly by the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR on 18 September 1959, be circulated as an official document of the General Assembly.

(Signed) A. GROMYKO
Chairman of the Delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

- 1. On the instructions of the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Soviet delegation proposes that the General Assembly should examine the question entitled "General and complete disarmament" as an important and urgent matter.
- 2. The need for the immediate consideration of this question is dictated by the fact that now, as on certain previous occasions, the armaments race has assumed a character particularly dangerous to the preservation of peace. The inclusion of nuclear and rocket weapons in the equipment of the armed forces of certain Powers and the stationing of atomic weapons and construction of rocket-launching sites in the territory of other countries threaten to precipitate a devastating war fought with those weapons. Against the present background of opposing military alignments, the armaments race is increasing tension in international relations and creating a dangerous situation, in which even a local clash may develop into a general conflict, with all its attendant dire consequences.
- 3. The armaments race not only constitutes a threat to peace and to the security of States, but is already placing a heavy burden on the nations. The efforts of millions of people and vast material and financial resources are being diverted to the manufacture of weapons of war for the destruction of human beings.

- 4. Present circumstances make it imperative for States to adopt drastic measures to halt the armaments race. The most effective means of solving this problem is by complete general disarmament. In this age of rapidly developing military techniques, this course offers the most effective solution to the problem of ensuring a secure and lasting peace.
- 5. The Soviet Government is submitting for the consideration of the General Assembly at its four-teenth session the Declaration of the Soviet Government on general and complete disarmament.
- 6. The realization of the programme of complete disarmament outlined in the Declaration will help to create the necessary atmosphere of mutual confidence between States, eliminate all forms of the "cold war" and preclude the settlement of controversial international issues by force. The destruction of the means of waging war would make the peaceful coexistence of States an inevitable reality, since any other trend in the relations among States would be entirely excluded.
- 7. General and complete disarmament will benefit all the States of the world and all nations. The Soviet Government expresses the hope that the United Nations, and every Member State, will do its utmost to obtain a practical solution to the problem of general and complete disarmament.

Declaration of the Soviet Government on general and complete disarmament

- 1. An agreement among States to limit and destroy the means of waging war has long been the cherished dream of mankind. Long before it experienced the horrors of world wars, disarmament had been proposed and urged by public figures, statesmen and the parties most closely connected with the working people.
- 2. The adoption of effective measures to achieve disarmament is in the interest of every State, large or small, irrespective of its social system and way of life. There is not a nation today that does not view with a deep sense of alarm the present rivalry among States in the production of armaments, a rivalry that has taken on unprecedented proportions, particularly in the development of ever more destructive and lethal weapons of war. There is nothing the nations desire more earnestly than to end such rivalry, fraught as it is with dire consequences for the fate of the world.

GENERAL AND COMPLETE DISARMAMENT IS THE WAY TO SAVE MANKIND FROM THE SCOURGE OF WAR

- 3. People have come to think of the armaments race as a spectre always marching a step ahead of war. That was the case when Europe, arming feverishly, moved step by step towards the First World War. The same pattern was repeated in the thirties, when "guns instead of butter" became the keyword in a number of countries, and the flow of armaments again began to fill the arsenals to capacity. Everyone knows how that ended. The nations were plunged into the Second World War, which brought them disasters and hardships beside which those mankind had experienced in the darkest periods of its history paled into insignificance.
- 4. The war ended, and yet men and women were still unable to find peace. Almost the very day after the last battles had been fought, the world was again gripped by the armaments fever, but on this occasion the danger to mankind was greater, because preparations for nuclear warfare were involved.

- 5. Never before has the armaments race been fraught with so much danger as it is today in the era of the atom, electronics and the conquest of outer space.
- 6. However horrible may have been such means of extermination as rapid-firing automatic weapons, tanks, long-range artillery and aerial bombs, they cannot in any way be compared with atomic and hydrogen weapons and missiles. All the means of destruction available to mankind throughout the centuries, taken together, would constitute but a small fraction of those now at the disposal of the two or three Powers which possess nuclear weapons.
- 7. In fact, it is common knowledge that the discharge of a single large modern hydrogen bomb releases destructive energy greater than that of all the explosives manufactured throughout the world during the last four years of the Second World War.
- 8. The introduction of atomic weapons and missiles into the armaments of military forces, the training of military personnel in their use, and the adaptation of military strategy and tactics to the new types of weapons have already reached such an advanced stage that any future military conflict between the Powers may well become a way in which every weapon of destruction now available to the belligerents will be employed. Outer space, which was inaccessible to mankind only a year or two ago, can now be used, just as the sea and the air were used before it, to deliver a nuclear attack against any point on the globe.
- 9. Both world wars broke out between neighbouring countries with a common frontier. Today war can break out between States which are several thousands of kilometres apart and may involve whole continents.
- 10. In such a war, if it cannot be averted in time, distances would be measured in thousands and tens of thousands of kilometres, time in minutes and seconds and losses in millions, tens of millions, and hundreds of millions of human lives. It would be a war in which there would be no distinction between front and rear, between armies in the field and the civilian populations, between soldiers and children.

- 11. The emergence of military alliances that virtually cover the whole globe and are heavily armed against each other has produced a situation in which a small spark, an incident seemingly of local significance, would be enough to unleash the holocaust of war. Although the general system of military commitments has so far not been set in motion and the brakes have held, there neither is nor can be any guarantee that this will continue to be the case in future.
- 12. Never before have so many States and individuals been involved in military preparations as at the present time. Today tens of millions of persons are in the armed forces. If we add to the number of those in military service the men and women connected directly or indirectly with the production of armaments, military research and other activities relating to the provision of supplies and services for the armed forces, we find that hundreds of millions of men and women have been diverted from peaceful employment. A vast amount of human energy, knowledge, ingenuity and skill is, so to speak, being sunk in a bottomless pit, swallowed up by expanding armaments.
- 13. The armaments race has also spread to States economically unable to support the burden of armaments, a burden which, from the military standpoint, is jeopardizing their very existence. Military bases in the territories of foreign States and armed forces stationed thousands of kilometres from their own frontiers provide clear proof of this.
- 14. On the other hand, the stockpiling of weapons of mass destruction in the arsenals of some Powers and the establishment of air, naval and missile bases increasingly close to the borders of other States compel the States against which these military preparations are directed to take the necessary steps to strengthen their own security and safeguard the peaceful life of their peoples. The Soviet Union, all the socialist countries and many other peace-loving States would like to undertake a complete conversion of their economies and resources to peaceful purposes so that they can provide the people with ample food, clothing and housing. However, they cannot devote their entire efforts to peaceful construction without mortally endangering the vital interests of their peoples and their own very existence. When one side arms, the other side must do likewise. The quantity of weapons of mass destruction is steadily increasing and, at the same time, the danger of a military explosion is growing.
- 15. Today atomic and hydrogen bombs are not only being stored in ultra-secret depots. They are being fitted on bombers which make flights over the territory of many Western European countries. We are nearing the stage when extremely powerful and longrange weapons can be launched not only on the orders of Governments, but at the will of individuals posted at the control panel of these weapons. But it is unlikely that a State on whose territory a nuclear cargo is dropped as a result of evil intent, technical failure or accident, will investigate the cause of such action; it will be compelled to react as it would against a military attack, against an act of war. Can we allow the issue of peace or war to be settled by blind chance?

- Do all these facts not provide further proof that we can go no further along the road of armaments? The Soviet Union by no means considers that an armaments contest is completely inevitable and that it must at all times be a concomitant of relations between States. The Soviet Union has based and still bases its foreign policy on the assumption that it is possible to prevent the future development of human society from taking the course which has led to two world wars and to ensure that the history of human society ceases to be a chronicle of sanguinary wars.
- 16. Weapons are created by the hands of man. The same hands can also destroy them.
- 17. The problem of disarmament has already been under discussion in the United Nations for almost fourteen years. It had previously been considered for many years by the League of Nations and by the disarmament conference convened by the League. However, no practical results have so far been achieved in terms of agreed decisions among States.
- 18. Much could be said about the causes of the gloomy situation that prevails with respect to disarmament. But what we need to do now is not to delve into the past and become further embroiled in controversy, but to remove the chief obstacles on which all previous attempts to reach an agreement on disarmament have foundered.
- 19. The whole course of the negotiations on disarmament, which have lasted for many years, shows that the problems of organizing control over disarmament has been advanced as one of the chief obstacles to the attainment of such an agreement.
- 20. The Soviet Government has always stood, and still stands, for the establishment of strict international control over the fulfilment of agreements on disarmament measures when such agreements have been reached. Every Soviet proposal on the prohibition of atomic weapons and of the testing of such weapons, as well as on the reduction of conventional armaments and armed forces, has invariably been accompanied by specific proposals for the establishment of effective international control. The Soviet Government has, however, been consistently opposed to the control system being converted into a programme of measures unrelated to the actual implementation of disarmament, and more particularly to the control organs becoming organs for the collection of intelligence data on the armaments of States under conditions in which disarmament would not in fact be taking place.
- 21. In present circumstances however, the organization of control does involve real difficulties quite apart from the complications which have been artificially injected into the problem. These difficulties will become quite clear on reference to a problem such as that of the prohibition and elimination of nuclear weapons.
- 22. As we know, the same fissionable materials can be used at the plants concerned both for the production of nuclear weapons and for peaceful needs. This means that in present circumstances, when atomic energy is being increasingly used in the economy, some of the fissionable materials may be surreptitiously diverted to the production of weapons.

^{2/} Conference for the Reduction and Limitation of Armaments.

- 23. To avoid, in the present atmosphere of distrust, all suspicion that some State or other was concealing its use of atomic materials for military purposes, foreign controllers would have to be granted access to a very large number of plants in each country, and that would in fact amount to establishing a sort of foreign trusteeship over a large sector of the country's economy. At the same time and for precisely the same reason—distrust among States—not one State is prepared to admit foreign controllers and inspectors to its enterprises, particularly those engaged in military production.
- 24. Clearly, in the present circumstances, with the continuance of the armaments race, international tension and lack of confidence, the essential conditions for the establishment of over-all control are absent.
- 25. So long as distrust prevails between States, the opponents of disarmament can easily make any disarmament measure subject to control conditions which other States cannot accept. Indeed those States which for that or any other reason raise such farreaching demands regarding the powers of control organs have themselves no inclination whatever to accept such control terms if ever they are put into effect.
- 26. In such circumstances any deliberate attempt to advance inflated control requirements, and especially to put the establishment of control before disarmament as a prerequisite for any disarmament measures, is tantamount to blocking all approaches to the solution of the problem.
- 27. The Soviet Government considers that the time has come to make a sober assessment of the situation that has developed and to admit that, since the approach used so far in seeking a solution of the problem of disarmament has failed to produce the necessary results, the proper conclusions should be drawn from that fact. The Soviet Government believes there can be but one conclusion: that it is the duty of all States and of the United Nations urgently to seek a new way of solving the problem of disarmament, which is the burning problem of our time.
- 28. What is this new way? How can an end be put to a situation in which great wealth extracted by man from nature, and transformed by scientific genius, by the skill of engineers and the efforts of many millions of workers, is wasted on producing means of destruction and extermination? How is it possible to prevent tens of millions of people who are at the peak of their creative force and energy from being torn away from useful work to serve in the armed forces and to train for a war of annihilation?
- 29. The majority of statesmen and public figures, as well as the broad masses of the population of all countries, already recognize that another world war would be a fearful tragedy for everybody, and for some countries whose area is not large but whose population density is high it would be a disaster threatening their very existence.
- 30. The task now is to find some means of preventing mankind from being engulfed in a war fought with nuclear weapons and missiles.
- 31. In the present state of international relations and at the present level of military technology, when any military conflict may lead to a war conducted with

- nuclear weapons and missiles, the only way to ensure the security of all States is to exclude the very possibility of war. As long as large armies, air forces and navies exist, as long as there are nuclear weapons and missiles, as long as young men on the threshold of life are trained first of all in the arts of war, and general staffs work out the plans for future military operations, there is and can be no guarantee of peace between peoples. The most effective and solid guarantee of peace, in keeping not only with the loftiest ideals but also with the urgent demands of the people, is not the balance of armaments, which every State endeavours to interpret in such a way as to turn it to its own advantage, but the inability of States to wage a war for lack of material means.
- 32. After carefully considering the present international situation and the experience of earlier disarmament negotiations the Government of the Soviet Union has come to the conclusion that the best means of solving the disarmament problem, which is the chief international problem of our time, is complete and general disarmament by all States.
- 33. By complete and general disarmament the Soviet Government means the renunciation by all States without exception of the maintenance of any kind of armed force apart from minimum contingents for internal security (militia, police) equipped with small arms and designed to maintain order in each country.
- 34. This means that land armies, navies and air forces will cease to exist; general staffs and war ministries will be abolished, and military training establishments will be closed. Tens of millions of people will return to peaceful, constructive work.
- 35. Foreign military bases now established in a number of States, which are detrimental to sovereignty and security of those States and extremely harmful to the cause of international confidence and co-operation, will be abolished.
- 36. All atomic and hydrogen bombs in the possession of States will be destroyed and their further production discontinued. Energy derived from fissionable materials will be used exclusively for peaceful economic and scientific purposes.
- 37. Military missiles of all ranges will be eliminated, and missiles will remain only as a means of transport and for the exploration of outer space for the benefit of all mankind.
- 38. Guns, tanks, shells, and torpedoes will be melted down to provide metal for theneeds of peaceful construction work. Warships and military aircraft will be scrapped.
- 39. Stockpiles of chemical and bacterial weapons accumulated by some States, asphyxiating and poisonous substances, and cultures of lethal bacteria which are potential sources of severe epidemic disease will all be finally and irretrievably destroyed.
- 40. Such is the disarmament programme which the Soviet Government submits to all States for their consideration, and in the first place to the Members of the United Nations, proposing that it should be put into effect without delay.
- 41. This is a radical programme, but that is precisely what guarantees that it can be carried out - in the present circumstances. The existence of blocs of Powers, opposed to one another, in which dozens of States are committed to mutual military obligations, together with the dizzy pace at which military technology is developing, demands bold and far-reaching decisions if peace is to be ensured.

- 42. The proposal for complete and general disarmament is to be distinguished from all other disarmament proposals, since its realization would completely exclude any inequality and would rule out the possibility that military advantages of any kind would be created for any State.
- 43. Hardly anyone would deny that, if a radical decision was taken to bring about the general and complete disarmament of all States within a short firmly established time limit and if that decision was put into effect, the entire international situation would change completely. Relations between States, including countries belonging to different social systems and to opposing military and political blocs, would be put on a completely new basis.
- 44. Fear of possible aggression by any State would in fact be removed. The readiness of States to undertake complete general disarmament would be convincing factual confirmation of the absence of any aggressive intentions on their part and of their sincere desire to base relations with other countries on the principle of peaceful coexistence. Furthermore, with the destruction of armaments and the abolition of armed forces, no physical possibility whatsoever would remain that States could pursue any policy but that of peace. The abolition of the means of waging war would provide an even more solid basis for coexistence between States as relations between States could no longer develop along any other lines.
- 45. General and complete disarmament would remove the distinction between the victors and the vanquished in the last war. The significance and international prestige of Powers would be determined, not by their military might, but by the extent to which they participate in creating the material and spiritual riches of mankind.
- 46. The prestige of individual States and the importance of their contribution to the history of mankind would be measured, not by the number of their divisions, bombers or rockets, the tonnage of their warships and submarines, or their stockpiles of atomic and hydrogen bombs, but by their achievements in the production of material wealth, in the improvement of the working and living conditions of the people and in the struggle for the prolongation of life.
- 47. Naturally, even after the completion of a general disarmament programme, contradictions between States will remain, particularly between States with different social and economic systems. These contradictions will be resolved, however, not through military clashes, but by peaceful economic competition, by the struggle of ideas, and with the help of other peaceful means as prescribed in the United Nations Charter.
- 48. General and complete disarmament will remove also the difficulties connected with control. In such circumstances, States will have nothing to hide from each other, and there will be every opportunity to carry out checks or inspections if there is any doubt - about the good faith of any State in fulfilling its disarmament obligations.

- 49. In other words, the decision in favour of general and complete disarmament would at last make it possible to break the vicious circle of distrust between States which now fetters them in their negotiations on partial disarmament measures and prevents them from making any progress whatever.
- 50. When general and complete disarmament has been achieved, a new and much more favourable atmosphere will be created for the solution of many complex political problems still outstanding, including those in Europe.
- 51. Lastly, the achievement of general and complete disarmament would offer all countries new prospects of economic development. There would be unprecedented opportunities for a rapid improvement in the living standards of all nations, since funds could be put to good use that are now being spent by States on the maintenance of armed forces and the manufacture of armaments.
- 52. The opponents of disarmament not infrequently try to discredit the very concept of disarmament by asserting that the cessation of armaments manufacture would inevitably cause economic difficulties and bring unemployment to many people now engaged in the armament industries. But this is a specious argument.
- 53. Surely, current production of lethal weapons consumes vast sums of public money which could be used for building houses for the population, new schools for children and free hospitals for those needing medical treatment, and for providing or increasing old-age and disability pensions. Surely the use of these funds for peaceful purposes offers the fullest opportunities for employment.
- 54. There can be no doubt that general and complete disarmament would create conditions for the material and intellectual development of all countries at a rate many times in excess of the present one. The thousands of millions that would flow like a torrent into the civil economies as a result of the cessation of military expenditure would be used in far more favourable circumstances than those prevailing at present. The artificial barriers with which States isolate themselves and jealously guard their scientific and technological achievements for military and strategic reasons would gradually fall away. Scientists in all countries would be able to devote their work exclusively to the service of society and the improvement of living conditions. The unimpeded exchange of information would give new impetus to scientific, technical and economic progress in all States, at the individual and at the collective level.
- 55. If all States pooled their efforts and provided the funds needed for waging an all-out offensive against such enemies of mankind as cancer and other serious diseases which still resist treatment, these diseases could soon be defeated. General disarmament would furnish the prerequisites for such a concerted effort to improve the health of mankind.
- 56. The greater mutual confidence between States resulting from general and complete disarmament would favour the extensive development of international trade. The artificial barriers in the form of discriminatory restrictions, lists of prohibited goods and similar devices employed by certain Powers to prevent the extension of this trade would disappear. The industries of such countries as the United States, the United Kingdom, West Germany and France would at last be able to avail themselves of the existing wide opportunities for securing large foreign orders. Mutually beneficial trade would have a favourable influence on the economies of trading States.

- 57. General and complete disarmament would also create new opportunities for providing assistance to States whose economies are at present under-developed and need help from the more advanced countries. The allocation of even a small proportion of the resources released by the cessation of military expenditure by the great Powers for assistance to such States would inaugurate a new era in the economic development of Asia, Africa and Latin America.
- 58. The following example will suffice. The Aswan High Dam and the hydroelectric installations associated with it, now under construction on the Nile in the Egyptian part of the United Arab Republic, probably constitute the most impressive project now being carried out in any of the under-developed countries of Africa or Asia. If general and complete disarmament is achieved and highly-developed industrial countries set aside say 10 per cent of the resources thus saved for assistance to under-developed countries, such allocations from the budgets of two Powers alone—the United States and the Soviet Union—could finance the construction of several such dams every year.
- 59. In 1958 the direct military expenditure alone of Member States of the NATO military bloc totalled $60.000 million. One-tenth of this sum, if used to help under-developed countries, would finance the construction, every year, of more than ten iron-and-steel plants similar to those now being built in India.
- 60. Such are the opportunities for promoting the economic progress of under-developed countries on the basis of general and complete disarmament. The Soviet Union is in favour of making the fullest use of these opportunities.
- 61. This is not the first time the idea of general and complete disarmament has been put forward. The Soviet Government made proposals to this effect in the period between the two world wars. The interests of rival groupings of Powers attempting to turn the military might of aggresive States against the only socialist State then in existence prevented the adoption of that Soviet proposal, with disastrous consequences for the fate of the world.
- 62. Opponents of the proposals for general and complete disarmament were then wont to say that the Soviet Union had made the proposals because it was economically and militarily weak. This false argument may have misled some people, but it is obvious to everyone today that to talk of the weakness of the Soviet Union is absurd, and that the new Soviet proposal for general and complete disarmament is prompted solely by the desire to promote the establishment of lasting peace between nations.
- 63. The Soviet Union, the People's Republic of China and all the socialist countries are sharply opposed to war and to the manufacture of weapons of war. It would, however, be incorrect to imagine that States with a different social system have no reason - to support sincerely and unreservedly a proposal for general and complete disarmament. Destruction of the means of waging war cannot, and will not, be detrimental to the national interests of any State. No Government with genuine concern for the fate of its country and its people can adopt an unfavourable attitude to a proposal for general and complete disarmament.

- 64. There are over one hundred States on the political map of the world. The States are at different levels of economic development, they have different political and social systems and their peoples have different living conditions and levels of culture. But, despite the different circumstances in which the peoples of the various countries live, they have one thing in common: the desire to prevent another war and to secure everlasting peace on earth. When no State is physically able to take military action against other States, the course of international relations will be dominated by genuine mutual confidence.
- 65. In the belief that all these lofty aims can and must be attained by the concerted efforts of all States, united in the spirit of the peaceful principles of the United Nations, the USSR Government submits for the consideration of the United Nations a proposal for general and complete disarmament.

PROGRAMME FOR GENERAL AND COMPLETE DISARMAMENT

66. A programme for general and complete disarmament must include the following measures:

The disbanding of all armed forces (land, naval and air forces) and the prohibition of their re-establishment in any form:

The destruction of all forms of armaments and military supplies both in the possession of the armed forces and in depots;

The elimination of all warships, military aircraft, and all other types of military equipment;

The complete prohibition of atomic and hydrogen weapons, the cessation of the manufacture of all types of these weapons, their elimination from the armaments of States and the destruction of stockpiles;

The complete cessation of the manufacture, and the destruction of all types of missiles, irrespective of their range, including space rockets designed for military purposes;

The prohibition of the production, possession and storage of the means of chemical and bacterial warfare, and destruction of stockpiles of these types of weapons;

The abolition of military bases of all kinds (army, navy, and air force) in the territories of foreign States and all missile-launching installations;

The cessation of military production at war plants and at war-production units in general industrial plants;

The termination of all military courses and training, both in the army and in public organizations, and the enactment of legislation abolishing military service in all its forms (compulsory, voluntary or by recruitment);

The abolition of war ministries, general staffs, military educational institutions and military and para-military establishments and organizations of all kinds;

The discontinuance of the appropriation of funds for military purposes in any form, whether from State budgets or from public organizations and private individuals;

The prohibition by law of war propaganda and the military education of young people, and the enactment of legislation prescribing severe penalties for the infringement of any of the measures enumerated above.

- 67. States shall retain at their disposal only strictly limited contingents of police (militia), the size of which shall be agreed upon for each country and which shall be equipped with small arms and be used exclusively for the maintenance of internal order and the protection of the personal security of citizens.
- 68. For the purpose of supervising the timely implementation of the measures of general and complete disarmament, an international control organ composed of all States shall be established. The staff of the control organ shall be recruited on an international basis with due regard to the principle of equitable geographical distribution.
- 69. The international control organ shall have at its disposal all the facilities necessary for the exercise of strict control. The functions and powers of this organ shall correspond to the nature of the disarmament measures being implemented.
- 70. The Soviet Government proposes that the programme of general and complete disarmament should be carried out within as short a time limit as possible—within a period of four years.

First stage

71. The following measures are proposed for the first stage:

The reduction, under appropriate control of the strength of the armed forces of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United States of America and the People's Republic of China to the level of 1.7 million men, and of those of the United Kingdom and France to the level of 650,000 men;

The reduction of the strength of the armed forces of other States to levels to be agreed upon at a special session of the United Nations General Assembly or at a world conference on general and complete disarmament;

The reduction of the armaments and military equipment at the disposal of the armed forces of States to the extent necessary to ensure that the remaining quantity of armaments corresponds to the level fixed for the armed forces.

Second stage

72. The following measures are proposed for the second stage:

The completion of the disbandment of the armed forces retained by States;

The elimination of all military bases in the territories of foreign States. Troops and military personnel shall be withdrawn from the territories of foreign States to within their own national frontiers and shall be disbanded.

Third stage

73. The following measures are proposed for the third stage:

The destruction of all types of nuclear weapons and missiles:

The destruction of air force equipment;

The entry into force of the prohibition on the production, possession and storage of means of chemical and bacterial warfare. All stockpiles of chemical and bacterial weapons in the possession of States shall be removed and destroyed under international supervision;

Scientific research for military purposes and the development of weapons and military equipment shall be prohibited;

War ministries, general staffs and all military and paramilitary establishments and organizations shall be abolished;

All military courses and training shall be terminated. States shall prohibit by law the military education of young people;

In accordance with their respective constitutional procedures, States shall enact legislation abolishing military service in all its forms—compulsory, voluntary, by recruitment, and so forth, and prohibiting the re-establishment in overt or covert form of any military or para-military establishments and organizations;

The appropriation of funds for military purposes in any form, whether from State budgets or from public organizations, shall be discontinued. The funds made available as a result of the implementation of general and complete disarmament shall be used to reduce or abolish taxation of the population, to subsidize national economies and to furnish extensive economic and technical assistance to underdeveloped countries:

For the purpose of supervising the implementation of the measures of general and complete disarmament, an international control organ shall be established. The extent of the control and inspection exercised shall correspond to the stage reached in the phased disarmament of States.

Upon the completion of general and complete disarmament, which shall include the disbandment of all services of the armed forces and the destruction of all types of weapons, including weapons of mass destruction (nuclear, rocket, chemical, bacterial), the international control organ shall have free access to all objects of control. It may institute a system of aerial observation and aerial photography over the territories of States.

- 74. While the programme of general and complete disarmament is being carried into effect and until the final disbandment of all armed forces, States shall maintain the same ratio among the various services of their armed forces as existed at the time of the entry into force of the disarmament agreement.
- 75. The programme of general and complete disarmament shall be carried out by States in strict conformity with the time limit specified in the agreement, and its implementation may not be suspended or made contingent upon the fulfilment of any conditions not provided for in the agreement.
- 76. To anticipate possible attempts on the part of States to circumvent or violate the agreement on general and complete disarmament, the agreement shall contain a provision stipulating that any question of its violation shall be submitted for immediate consideration by the Security Council or the General Assembly of the United Nations, in accordance with their respective spheres of competence.
- 77. It goes without saying that the Soviet Government wishes to approach the existing situation realistically, and if at present the Western Powers do not, for one reason or another, express their readiness to embark upon general and complete disarmament, the Soviet Government is prepared, as before, to come to terms with other States on appropriate partial measures relating to disarmament and the strengthening of security. In the view of the Soviet Government, the most important steps are the following:
- (1) The establishment of a control and inspection zone, and the reduction of foreign troops in the territories of the Western European countries concerned;
- (2) The establishment of an "atom-free" zone in Central Europe;

- (3) The withdrawal of all foreign troops from the territories of European States and abolition of military bases in the territories of foreign States;
- (4) The conclusion of a non-aggression pact between the States members of NATO and the States members of the Warsaw Treaty;
- (5) The conclusion of an agreement on the prevention of surprise attack by one State upon another.
- 78. The Soviet Government considers it appropriate to recall its disarmament proposals of 10 May 1955, 3/2 which outlined a specific scheme for partial measures in the field of disarmament. It is convinced that these proposals constitute a sound basis for agreement on this vitally important issue.

- 79. With respect to the cessation of nuclear weapons tests, the Soviet Government has been and still is in favour of immediate cessation of such tests for all time.
- 80. The Soviet Government expresses its deep conviction that the proposed radical solution of the disarmament problem would ensure a profound change in the course of international relations, would bring into being an atmosphere of confidence among States and would create conditions for the peaceful life of nations. The Soviet Government calls upon the Governments of all countries of the world and, in particular, upon the Governments of the great Powers, which possess the most powerful armed forces, which are permanent members of the Security Council, and which bear a special responsibility towards the nations for universal security, to proceed jointly and without delay to the implementation of general and complete disarmament.

Note verbale dated 28 September 1959 from the Permanent Mission of the People's Republic of Bulgaria to the Secretary-General

[1 October 1959]

The Permanent Mission of the People's Republic of Bulgaria to the United Nations presents its compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to enclose herewith a translation of the declaration of the Government of the People's Republic of Bulgaria of 24 September 1959 with the request that it be circulated among Members of the United Nations.

DECLARATION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF BULGARIA

1. The Government of the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the Bulgarian people welcomed with great satisfaction the declaration of the Soviet Government on general and complete disarmament [A/4219] submitted for the consideration of the United Nations General Assembly at its fourteenth session. It is a remarkable historic document the implementation of which will radically change the life of humanity. This is a programme which is completely feasible and great by virtue of its significance and content. Only the Soviet Union, the first socialist country in the world, whose people are now building the communist society, could put forward this proposal, which is unparalleled in its humaneness and which reflects the most cherished desires and strivings of all mankind. In all countries the people welcome with unconcealed joy the programme of the Soviet Government for general and complete disarmament. With admiration they are following the visit of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, Mr. N. S. Khrushchev. to the United States and hailed with great joy his outstanding speech in the United Nations [799th plenary meeting], which is a brilliant defence and exposition of the peaceful strivings of the Soviet peoples. The millions of ordinary people best of all realize how the

- world would look if general and complete disarmament were consistently carried out in all States. If armed forces were abolished, as well as general staffs, military ministries and military academies, if the further manufacture of atomic and hydrogen bombs were discontinued, while those which had already been produced were destroyed, if the manufacture of rockets for military purposes were ended, and if stockpiles of conventional weapons and of chemical and bacterial means of extermination were liquidated, mankind would heave a sigh of relief, war would be for ever abolished from the life of society and peace would prevail on earth for all time.
- 2. In complete accordance with its policy of peace and peaceful coexistence, the Government of the People's Republic of Bulgaria shares the belief of the Soviet Government that it is the duty of all States, as well as of the United Nations, to find immediately a new road to the settlement of such an important and urgent issue as the disarmament question. This new road must lead to the exclusion of the very possibility of launching a war. This is the road to general and complete disarmament.
- 3. The Bulgarian Government fully supports the historic programme of the Soviet Government for general and complete disarmament and holds the view that the implementation of this programme in three stages in the course of a period of four years is fully feasible, provided the efforts of the peoples and their Governments, in particular the great Powers, are united.
- 4. The Bulgarian Government welcomes the readiness of the Soviet Government to reach agreement with other States on appropriate steps of partial disarmament and on the consolidation of security, if, for various reasons, the Western countries do not agree to general and complete disarmament.

5. The Bulgarian people and their Government have supported and will support all measures for the creation of a control and inspection zone and for the reduction of foreign troops on the territories of the West European countries concerned, the creation of an "atom-free" zone in central Europe, the withdrawal of all foreign troops from the territories of the European countries and the abolition of the military bases on foreign territories, the conclusion of a nonaggression pact between the NATO States and the Warsaw Treaty countries, an agreement on the prevention of a surprise attack by one State upon another. There is no people which does not want peace and which does not strive for its preservation. This is fully comprehensible because there is no people which has not, in one way or another, experienced the horrors of war. The Balkans have time and again been an area of conflagration, bloodshed and devastation. Within the life-span of only one generation, the Balkan people were plunged, against their will, into the abyss of several fratricidal wars, which took the lives of and maimed hundreds of thousands of the sons of the people and brought unhappiness to their mothers and fathers, their wives and children. One can hardly find a community in Bulgaria and in the other Balkan countries which has not given war its toll in human life. Wars have inflicted the heaviest of disasters on the economies of the Balkan countries; they have wasted huge funds and the wealth of the people. With the modern nuclear and missile weapons, the consequences of a new war would be incomparably more dreadful, as is noted in the declaration of the Soviet Government. The peoples of the Balkans have renounced this past. This past should be renounced by their Governments; not only the socialist but also the non-socialist Balkan countries should resolutely take the path to a reduction of world tension and a consolidation of world peace. The historical ties and traditions which have been created among the Balkan peoples over the centuries are a valuable capital, to which their Governments should turn in order to find a common language and possibilities for co-operation in the name of peace. General and complete disarmament would relieve the peoples of the heavy burden of the military budgets. The abolition of foreign military

- bases, the discontinuance of the preparations for setting up missile-launching pads on the territory of some countries would scatter the stormy clouds of war hanging over the Balkans and initiate the elimination of mutual suspicions among the Balkan peoples.
- 6. True to its peaceful policy, the Bulgarian Government has undertaken numerous steps to improve relations with the non-socialist countries in the Balkans, to strengthen peace in that area. It has proposed the conclusion of collective or bilateral treaties among the Balkan countries.
- 7. Not long ago our country proposed the signing of a non-aggression pact between the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the Kingdom of Greece. We have twice reduced our armed forces, thereby giving a new and real expression to our peaceful policy. The Government of the People's Republic of Bulgaria and the Bulgarian people have unanimously supported the proposal of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, Mr. N. S. Khrushchev, for the creation of an "atom-free" and rocket-free zone in the Balkans and the Adriatic because it serves the cause of peace. The proposal for a meeting of the leaders of the Balkan States has the same aim. If these measures are carried out, they will open the road to new agreements among the Balkan countries and will provide new possibilities for turning the Balkans into a zone of peace.
- 8. The Government of the People's Republic of Bulgaria wishes to believe that the proposal of the Soviet Government for general and complete disarmament will meet with the support and good will of all Balkan Governments, of the Governments of all countries, big or small. Only then will it be possible to save mankind and civilization from the horrors of a nuclear and missile war, which, if it should break out, will devastate not only whole countries, but entire continents. Now it is the supreme duty of all Governments to act prudently and to listen to the voice of their peoples. For this reason, the Bulgarian Government and people express their complete solidarity with, and give their unreserved support to, the proposals of the Soviet Union for general and complete disarmament, which is in the interests of all mankind and in the interests of peace and peaceful coexistence among nations.

United Kingdom declaration on comprehensive disarmament, made by Her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to the General Assembly at its 798th plenary meeting, on 17 September 1959

[Original text: English] [16 October 1959]

Our aim is to move forward by balanced stages First stage wards the abolition of all nuclear weapons and all In the first stage the following towards the abolition of all nuclear weapons and all weapons of mass destruction, and towards the reduction of other weapons and armed forces to levels which will rule out the possibility of aggressive war. Obviously progress must be made by stages and I will now try to indicate the way in which I think it might be made.

In the first stage the following matters should be dealt with:

(a) Nuclear tests. If, as we very much hope, agreement is reached at the present conference between the Governments of the United States, the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom [Conference on the Discontinuance of Nuclear Weapons Tests], that agreement should be endorsed by other nations.

We believe that that is an important step towards dealing with the vexed question of the spread of nuclear armaments;

- (b) There should be a technical conference on the feasibility of controlling what is called the "cut-off", in other words, ceasing to use fissionable material to make weapons. That is an even more important step if we are indeed to stop the spread of the manufacture of nuclear weapons;
- (c) The great Powers should agree to maximum limits for their forces. There should be the establishment of an international body charged with the task of collecting information on present levels of forces and conventional armaments. The object of this would be to try to establish some basis for limiting conventional armaments. In this context armaments are even more important than the levels of forces:
- (d) We should pursue the idea of the handing over of specific quantities of designated types of armaments to the custody of an international control organization;
- (e) If these other ideas are acceptable I think we should follow up the not very successful Conference of Experts for the study of possible measures which might be helpful in preventing surprise attack with a further conference to consider the political as well as the technical aspects of this particular problem;
- (f) There should be a study of the problems involved in the use of outer space. It is true that some work has been done on this in the United Nations, but the Soviet Union has not taken part in that work. I would hope that their attitude will change on that point and recent remarkable events make that hope not unreasonable;
- (g) Finally, in this stage, we should study between us the nature and functions of the international control organ which will not only have to control disarmament measures, but also will have increasing responsibilities within the framework of the United Nations to preserve world peace as purely national armaments diminish. In 1954 in the Sub-Committee of the Disarmament Commission we did spend considerable time studying the problems of the control organization. The United States paper ½ submitted on that occasion might provide a basis for this further study. We have also gained considerable experience as a result of the discussions at the nuclear tests Conference in Geneva.

All this would be the beginning, the first stage.

Second stage

- At the second stage, or intermediate stage, the following steps should be taken:
- (a) There should be progressive reduction of conventional armaments and military manpower under proper control;
- (b) There should be the introduction of the cut-off of production of fissionable material for weapons purposes;
- (c) We should begin to reduce stocks of nuclear weapons by successive transfers, under international supervision, of existing military stocks of fissionable material, whether fabricated into weapons or not, to non-weapons uses;
- (d) There should be the establishment of a system of inspection against surprise attack;
- (e) There should be agreement on a system to ensure the use of outer space for peaceful purposes;
- (f) We should begin to develop the capacity of the international control organ to take measures to keep the peace.

That would be the second or intermediate stage at which real progress was actually being made with real disarmament.

Third stage

The ultimate objective or the third stage should be comprehensive disarmament by all Powers under effective international control including the following matters:

- (a) There should be a ban on the manufacture of nuclear, chemical, biological and other weapons of mass destruction;
 - (b) There should be a ban on the use of such weapons;
- (c) There should be a ban on the use of outer space for military purposes;
- (d) There should be a re-examination of the possibility of controlling and then eliminating the remaining stocks of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction;
- (e) There should be the establishment of effective international control of military budgets;
- (f) As progress is made in dealing with remaining stocks of nuclear weapons, there would be the final reductions of conventional armaments and military manpower to the levels required for internal security purposes only;
- (g) The international control organ should reach its final form and attain its full capability for keeping peace.

Suggestions of the French delegation (extract from the statement made by the representative of France at the 1030th meeting 5/ of the First Committee, on 22 October 1959)

[Original text: French] [27 October 1959]

- 1. I should like to describe the three principles which we must bear in mind in our present studies, before making some remarks about the plans already proposed.
- 2. The first subject we must consider is that of the new technological situation. Since the interruption of the talks on disarmament in 1957, the speeding up of scientific progress has created new risks and made old dangers more acute. The rate at which devices with thermo-nuclear warheads are being hurled into the stratosphere is proving even more dangerous than the former race in aircraft bombs. It is spreading the danger of almost universal destruction by monstrous robots travelling at thousands of miles an hour. The way is being opened to the tragic possibility of a total war unleashed by accident, by error or through a misunderstanding.

3. The number of projectiles travelling in the stratosphere is increasing so rapidly that it will soon be too late to work out and apply disarmament methods in the complex field of rockets and satellites. Will the Governments of 1960 repeat the error-fraught with consequences-committed by those who in 1946 did not know how to reach a compromise solution on the production of fissionable material for military use? The obstinacies of that time led to the passing of the "point of no return", to which the representative of France so often drew attention in the years that followed, the point beyond which inspection measures, which would have been relatively easy to put into operation before then, became impracticable. Hence the intensified race in the production of nuclear weapons, superimposed upon the race, already longstanding, in the conventional field. Hence, too, the greater burden of military budgets, the tensions increasing throughout the world, and the universal anxiety.

^{4/} Official Records of the Disarmament Commission, Supplement for April, May and June 1954, document DC/53, annex 4.

^{5/} The official record of this meeting is published only in summary form.

- 4. Will there be the same lack of a constructive policy in the matter of satellites and rockets?
- 5. If we are to make full use of the harsh lesson of 1946, we believe it necessary, in any disarmament programme, to give high priority to measures prohibiting first the development and then the manufacture and possession of all vehicles for the delivery of nuclear devices: satellites, rockets, supersonic or long-range aircraft, ocean-going submarines, aircraft-carriers, launching-pads, etc.
- 6. Since past refusals make it impossible today to exercise any effective control over stockpiles of nuclear material, and since the peoples can never again be sure of the total conversion of these stockpiles to peaceful uses, we suggest that anxiety and mistrust should be allayed by starting disarmament efforts with the elimination of the most dreaded vehicles for the delivery of the materials of universal destruction. An action of this kind should be studied before anything else.
- 7. Once this priority has been accepted, we should be ready to consider all methods of application. I do not wish to specify any such methods today. Merely as an illustration I could suggest that a first stage should be a declaration of programmes and existing weapons to the international disarmament organ; a second stage should be the prior notification and control of tests; a third, the prohibition, destruction and control of stockpiles, infrastructures and factories, during which stage all that would remain would be certain approved air and naval material to meet the needs of internal security and the obligations imposed by our Charter. This, I repeat, is simply an outline of what might be studied.
- 8. I shall not enumerate the disarmament operations in other fields. As I said, I have no desire to present a plan today, but merely to formulate a few suggestions as to the relative order of importance of such operations, and to stress the fact that this order has changed over the past two years. The technique of warfare in the autumn of 1959 is no longer what it was in the summer of 1957, when our talks came to an end; still less is it the same as in the preceding years.
- 9. Today priority belongs first of all to the destruction of vehicles for the delivery of nuclear material and next to the elimination of the latter from arsenals. At the same time we must note that the de- velopment of nuclear devices has reduced the importance of conventional weapons and, to an even greater extent, the importance of the numbers of men using them.

- 10. Men of my age witnessed as young soldiers the disappearance, in the face of quick-firing weapons, of the cavalry, proud of its charges in days gone by. The horse—the noblest conquest of man, according to Buffon—yielded its place to horsepower, the individual breastplate to the armoured corps. The First World War marked the pre-eminence of artillery; the Second, that of tanks. Only a few decades after their hey-day, these advanced weapons are on their way out, victims of the atom. Piloted aviation is yielding pride of place to the robots of the stratosphere. Small teams of technicians, applying the discoveries of scientists, are replacing the heavy battalions of former days.
- 11. A reduction of armed forces, far from indicating an effort toward disarmament, is today evidence of the modernization of weapons and of an increase in destructive power. The number of men is reduced in order to compensate in the budget, albeit to a very slight degree, for the higher cost of the devices of modern warfare and, still more, because these devices make it necessary, in a total war, to scatter as widely as possible the minimum number of troops that must be retained in order to ensure the occupation of the terrain.
- 12. These remarks, which doubtless are not very original, surely dictate the order of the studies to be resumed at Geneva and of the actions to be proposed.
- 13. There is a final consideration which is guiding our reflections. Though the accelerated evolution of techniques of warfare requires us to reconsider the order of disarmament operations, certain long-established principles retain their value and are as applicable today as they were yesterday.
- 14. One of these consists in the necessity, during disarmament operations, of not upsetting former parities. As long as there are armies, the problem is in fact to strengthen simultaneously and along similar lines the security of all, not just the security of some to the detriment of others—a situation which would render the plan unacceptable to the latter.
- 15. This principle makes it necessary to correct the excessive rigidity resulting from a consideration of the order of importance alone. We must bear in mind both the relative urgencies and the need to integrate operations in the various technical fields of disarmament; thus, at each stage, we must call for simultaneous measures such that all of them together will provide everyone with ever greater security.
- 16. It is likewise necessary to provide for control; not, as the representative of the Soviet Union, Mr. Kuznetsov, said [1026th meeting], "control without disarmament", which France rejects just as it rejects disarmament without control, but control of disarmament, the aim of which, at every stage, is to dispel distrust by giving each State the certainty that the others are faithfully fulfilling their obligations.
- 17. I am familiar with the Soviet argument that control, far from re-establishing confidence, would increase suspicions while the disarmament operations were being carried out, and ought not to function fully until after those operations are completed. In this extreme form the Soviet position is entirely opposed to ours. Because of this antagonism, we have been moving slowly down a dead-end road.

- 18. I remain convinced, however, that compromises will be worked out. For, and this is our third guiding principle, we are determined to put an end to academic debates and to achieve concrete results. I have never ceased to preach conciliation and the abandonment of hard-and-fast positions. I do not think that this is really a task beyond our powers. It it possible to conceive of a plan in which concepts that yesterday were opposed will be merged.
- 19. If, for example, the first stage involves only reporting, limitations and "freezings", we can imagine it without on-the-spot control, without what our Soviet colleagues term "economic spying". We can agree that each party will rely entirely upon the good faith of the others for the implementation of this stage.
- 20. This stage would, of course, be limited and would represent a halt in the armaments race rather than a beginning of disarmament. But, in order to switch from moving in one direction to moving in the other, must we not first come to a dead stop? Even if limited, these measures would have considerable psychological value, for they would "set the wheels moving"; they would permit a "thaw" in positions that have long been antagonistic.
- 21. Although in this stage the international control organization would have no role other than that of - collecting the information furnished by all the Powers, in the second stage it would carry out inspections that would be as limited as possible, adapted in every respect to the measures then completed. Control would be fully established only during the third stage.

- 22. Similarly, we believe that solemn but unverifiable moral prohibitions leave distrust in existence until the good faith of each has been solidly established by other means. Some years ago, France signed the Kellogg-Briand Pact 6/ outlawing war. That did not prevent the Second World War. Yet we know the value the Soviet delegation attaches to such declarations. That is why, ever prompted by a desire for conciliation, we are prepared, as the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Couve de Murville, recalled in the general debate [814th plenary meeting], to include such declarations in an over-all plan when other measures, themselves controllable and controlled, have contributed to re-establishing a minimum of international confidence.
- 23. We can thus conceive of a plan based at once on the present technical state of armaments, on our past efforts, and on the firmly expressed desires of other delegations. We hope that the ten-nation disarmament committee will examine the problem in this spirit of conciliation.

Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic: request for the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: Russian] [28 September 1959]

On the instructions of the Government of the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, I have the honour to request, in accordance with rule 15 of the rules of procedures of the General Assembly the inclusion of the following item in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly, as an important and urgent matter:

"International encouragement of scientific research into the control of cancerous diseases".

In accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure, an explanatory memorandum is attached hereto.

(Signed) K. KISELEV Chairman of the delegation of the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic to the fourteenth session of the United Nations General Assembly

Explanatory memorandum

1. The delegation of the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic submits for the consideration of the United Nations General Assembly of its fourteenth session the question entitled ''International encouragement of scientific research into the control of cancerous diseases''.

- 2. This question is raised for the following reasons.
- 3. Mankind is becoming increasingly concerned over the prevalence of cancerous diseases. We know that in the study of cancerous diseases there are many questions that are obscure or on which opinion is divided. People in all countries regard cancer as a terrible and fatal disease, since its causes have not been ascertained and effective remedies have not been found.
- 4. Statistical data on the incidence of and mortality from cancerous diseases indicate that the number of persons dying of cancer each year throughout the world is over 2 million. This means that for every 100,000 persons in the world, more than 100 die of cancer every year. Assuming that the average life expectancy of persons with malignant tumours is from two to three years, it can be said that approximately 5 million people throughout the world are now suffering from cancerous diseases.
- 5. In most countries, according to official data, cancerous diseases take second or third place among all causes of human death. The available statistical data on cancerous diseases throughout the world demonstrate that the control of such diseases is an international problem, in solving which the United Nations could play a positive role.
- 6. The extensive scientific research which has been carried on in various countries for many years has already led to some progress in the control of cancerous diseases.

- 7. At the same time it must be said that the efforts so far made in this direction, nationally and internationally, have not yielded effective results. A great deal of work has yet to be done in order to find effective means of treating cancerous diseases. Of tremendous importance in ascertaining the causes of the different forms of cancerous diseases in man is the study of the characteristics of this disease in different countries, of the relationship between the prevalence of particular types of cancerous growths and geographical, climatic, occupational and other factors.
- 8. There is no question that the problem of cancer control is one of the most important problems of world medical science. The eradication of cancer as a fatal and wide-spread disease of manisone of mankind's most important tasks. The United Nations should promote the fulfilment of this task. Article 13 of the United Nations Charter lays upon the General Assembly a direct responsibility to initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of promoting international co-operation in, among others, the health field. The General Assembly might accordingly adopt in this connexion a decision for the international encouragement of scientific research into the control of cancerous diseases.
- 9. A most important means of affording such encouragement would be the institution by the United Nations of international prizes for the most outstanding scientific work in connexion with the control of cancerous diseases. It would place no strain on the United Nations budget to establish three prizes, of a total value of $100,000, to be awarded to scientists every four years.
- 10. At the request of the United Nations General Assembly, the International Union Against Cancer might undertake to award these prizes and to hold the first prize-giving ceremony at the next International Congress on Cancer in 1962.
- 11. It would be desirable that world public opinion should be able to keep abreast of progress in the fight against cancer.
- 12. It would consequently be useful if the International Union Against Cancer would inform the United Nations

General Assembly in 1962 of the progress achieved in the control of cancerous diseases.

13. In view of the foregoing, and guided solely by the interests of humanitarianism, the delegation of the Byelorussian SSR introduces the following draft resolution for consideration at the fourteenth session of the General Assembly:

The General Assembly,

Considering that cancer is at present one of the diseases most dangerous to mankind,

Recognizing the general desire of all mankind to eliminate wide-spread cancerous diseases among human beings.

Recognizing further that the national and international efforts so far undertaken for the control of cancerous diseases have not yielded sufficiently effective results,

Wishing to encourage scientific efforts in this field in all countries and international institutions,

1. Establishes, for the most outstanding scientific work in connexion with the control of cancerous diseases, United Nations prizes:

First prize: $50,000 Second prize: $30,000; Third prize: $20,000;

to be awarded once every four years;

- 2. Requests the International Union Against Cancer to undertake to award the prizes, holding the first prize-giving ceremony at the next International Congress on Cancer in 1962;
- 3. Requests the International Union Against Cancer to inform the United Nations General Assembly in 1962 of the progress achieved in the control of cancerous diseases.

14. The delegation of the Byelorussian SSR expresses its confidence that the General Assembly will give this draft resolution careful consideration and will adopt a decision in the interests of all mankind, which expects a disease as wide-spread among human beings as cancer to be eradicated as quickly as possible.

Financial implications of the draft resolution submitted by the Third Committee in document A/4279 Note by the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [18 November 1959]

- 1. The draft resolution adopted at the 953rd meeting of the Third Committee (A/4279, para. 23) would entail an expenditure of $100,000 every four years. There would be no expenditure in 1960. The Secretary-General would propose to submit suggestions for alternative methods of financing to the General Assembly at its fifteenth regular session.
- 2. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has reviewed this matter and concurs in the approach outlined above.

Report of the Third Committee

[Original text: English and Spanish] [17 November 1959]

- 1. At its 826th plenary meeting on 12 October 1959, the General Assembly included the item entitled ''International encouragement of scientific research into the control of cancerous diseases'' in the agenda of its fourteenth session as item 71 and allocated it to the Third Committee.
- 2. The Committee had before it two explanatory memoranda submitted by the Byelorussian SSR (A/4233 and A/C.3/L.777).
- 3. The Committee devoted seven meetings (948th to 954th meetings), held from 6 to 12 November 1959, to the consideration of the item.
- 4. The representative of the Byelorussian SSR opened the debate by introducing a revised version of the draft resolution submitted by his delegation (A/C.3/ L.772/Rev.1). He stated that, despite the efforts of generations of scientists, the causes of cancerous diseases were still unknown and no effective methods of treatment had been found. In a large number of countries, they were second only to cardio-vascular diseases as a cause of death. The mortality rates for those diseases had risen from 64 per 100,000 in 1900 to 147 per 100,000 in 1955. At the current time, approximately 5 million of the world's inhabitants were suffering from cancerous diseases. Although cancer affected mainly the middleaged and the elderly, it was now appearing to an increasing degree among younger age groups.
- 5. He reffered to measures taken in the Soviet Union and the United States with regard to the control of cancer and expressed his belief that joint efforts on the part of scientists from all countries were called for in the fight against cancer.
- 6. The causes of cancer were still unknown. The virus theory had not been corroborated by the discovery of any causative viral agent in man. A most important means of shedding light on the causes of cancerous diseases was a study of their characteristics by countries and of the relationship between particular types of cancerous tumours and geographical, climatic, occupational and other factors. The lower mortality rate for cancer found in the underdeveloped countries could be explained in terms of incomplete assessment

- of causes of death by the inadequately developed medical and health services of those countries. One of the important tasks of the new science of medical geography would be to prepare maps showing the distribution of cancer throughout the world and to carry out regional studies.
- 7. The representative of the Byelorussian SSR commended the efforts of the WHO and the International Union Against Cancer, but felt that it would be desirable for both organizations, in their long-range programmes, to intensify the co-ordination of scientific research plans and to organize exchanges of information and experience through visits of outstanding medical cancer specialists.
- 8. He did not believe that the expenditure of $100,000 every four years, as proposed in the draft resolution, would give rise to any difficulties. While the greatest reward for any scientist responsible for advances in cancer research would be the gratitude and recognition of all mankind, the prizes provided for would represent a concrete manifestation of that recognition.
- 9. He knew that some delegations felt that the matter of cancer control was one which properly belonged to WHO. However, the problem was so urgent and important that only an organization with the authority of the United Nations could deal with it.
- 10. The revised draft resolution submitted by the Byelorussian SSR (/C.3/L.772/Rev.1) read as follows:
 - "The General Assembly,
 - "Considering that cancer is at present one of the diseases most dangerous to mankind,
 - "Recognizing the general desire of all mankind to eliminate wide-spread cancerous diseases,
 - "Noting with approval the useful work carried out by the World Health Organization, the International Union Against Cancer and national organizations for the control of cancerous diseases,
 - "Recognizing further that the national and international efforts so far undertaken for the control of cancerous diseases have not yielded sufficiently effective results,

- "Wishing to encourage further scientific efforts in this field in all countries and international institutions.
- "1. Establishes, for the most outstanding scientific work in connexion with the control of cancerous diseases, United Nations prizes:

"First prize: $50,000;
"Second prize: $30,000;
"Third prize: $20,000;

to be awarded once every four years;

- "2. Requests the World Health Organization to undertake to award the prizes, holding the first prize-giving ceremony at the next International Congress on Cancer in 1962;
- "3. Requests the International Union Against Cancer to give the World Health Organization its full support and its scientific advice for this purpose;
- "4. Invites the World Health Organization to consider, in accordance with article IV of the Agreement between the United Nations and the World Health Organization, what further steps may be taken to encourage effort in this field;
- "5. Requests the World Health Organization to inform the United Nations General Assembly in 1962 of the progress achieved in the control of cancerous diseases."
- 11. Many speakers congratulated the Byelorussian delegation on its humanitarian initiative. It was also pointed out that much time and money was being wasted as a result of unsatisfactory co-ordination of the research undertaken in various countries. Cancercontrol compaigns had already been organized in a number of countries. It was felt that every national action should be encouraged and supplemented by an international effort.
- 12. Several speakers drew attention to the fact that WHO had been concerned with the question for many years, and that, in its work, it co-operated with such specialized agencies as FAO and UNESCO and with various scientific organizations. It was recalled that a proposal had been adopted at the eleventh World Health Assembly that an extensive examination be made of the role of WHO in medical and health research. The report which had followed contained, inter alia, certain recommendations for increasing the world research potential against cancer. Considerable contributions had been subsequently made to the special account for medical research in order to enable WHO to give additional impetus to the intensified research programme.
- 13. Some delegations pointed out that WHO should be given the principal responsibility for action in the field referred to in the Byelorussian draft resolution, and that the International Union Against Cancer could not be placed on an equal footing with it. It was also argued that the General Assembly should not, in the form of a resolution, express its views on the subject of activities within the purview of a specialized agency, unless that agency had clearly failed in the performance of its tasks. The need for consultation and proper coordination between the United Nations and the specialized agencies was also stressed.

- 14. Some speakers questioned whether the awarding of prizes was the best way to encourage the efforts of scientists. It was suggested that the money could be employed rather for the purchase of equipment or the provision of fellowships. Others felt, however, that the prizes would draw public attention to the work of the scientists and to the non-political activities of the United Nations.
- 15. The representative of WHO reviewed the position of his organization in the campaign against cancer. In its early days, WHO had confined its work on cancer mainly to the granting of fellowships for advanced study abroad and to the preparation of certain statistical studies. It had also recommended standard definitions, nomenclatures and classifications, and had promoted the adoption of common techniques of diagnosis and treatment. The assessment of the results of the different treatments of cancer - surgical, radiological and others - had likewise received attention. That had been followed by recommendations concerning the establishment of certain national laboratories as reference laboratories. He recalled that UNESCO had undertaken international programmes of research into physical, chemical and biological phenomena of cell The World Health Organization co-operated actively also with the International Union Against Cancer and the International Congress on Radiology. In March 1959 a special scientific group on cancer research, convened by the Director-General of WHO, had outlined certain areas where cancer research could be advanced by multinational or international action, with WHO serving as the central point. The experts had suggested that co-ordinated studies should be made on all agents suspected of causing cancer. A research programme, based on the recommendations of twenty-one such groups convened by the Director-General, had been approved by the Twelfth World Health Assembly. A sum of $500,000 had been added to the 1960 regular budget for the programme and a special account had been established to enable WHO to accept voluntary contributions.
- 16. The representative of the Secretary-General stated that it was for the Third Committee to decide whether it wished to recommend the award of prizes to encourage scientific research into the control of cancerous diseases, or whether it preferred to refer the proposal before it to WHO. The Secretary-General saw no objection to establishing United Nations prizes for that purpose, provided that the responsibility of deciding to whom they should be awarded was entrusted to WHO. The question of the financial implications would have to be dealt with by the Fifth Committee, which might prefer that the proposed amount of $100,000 be kept in a special account rather than be included in the regular budget of the United Nations. He added that the Fifth Committee might consider it an anusual procedure to make the funds for the prizes available to WHO, since that organization's financial resources, like those of the United Nations, were provided by contributions from Member States.
- 17. The United States submitted amendments (A/C.3/L.800) to the Byelorussian revised draft resolution (A/C.3/L.772/Rev.1). These amendments provided for:
 - (a) The deletion of operative paragraphs 1 and 2;
- (b) The amendment of operative paragraph 3 to read as follows:

- "3. Invites the World Health Organization to seek the full support and scientific advice of the International Union Against Cancer for this purpose.";
- (c) The addition, at the end of operative paragraph 4, of the phrase: ''including the desirability of making international awards for research into cancerous diseases, or other similar methods of encouragement'';
- (\underline{d}) The replacement, in operative paragraph 5, of the words 'in 1962' by the words 'as soon as possible'.
- 18. After a discussion, the Committee received revised United States amendments (A/C.3/L.800/Rev.1), now sponsored by Colombia as well, to the Byelorussian draft resolution. These amendments provided for the deletion of operative paragraphs 1 and 2 and the replacement of operative paragraphs 3 and 4 by the following:
 - ''3. Invites the World Health Organization to consider, in accordance with article IV of the Agreement between the United Nations and the World Health Organization, what further steps may be taken to encourage effort in the field of the control of cancerous diseases;
 - "3A. Invites the World Health Organization to consider the advisability of establishing and awarding prizes for cancer research according to the following suggested schedule: ten prizes of $10,000 each to be awarded every four years for the most outstanding scientific works in connexion with the control of cancerous diseases, the prizes to be known as United Nations prizes;
 - ''4. Also invites the World Health Organization to seek the full support and scientific advice of the International Union Against Cancer for this purpose.''
- 19. Greece submitted a sub-amendment (A/C.3/L. 809) to the revised amendments by Colombia and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.800/Rev.1). The sub-amendment was subsequently withdrawn, following the introduction of the eight-Power sub-amendments (see paragraph 20).
- 20. Afghanistan, Ceylon, Greece, Iceland, India, Ireland, Mexico and the Philippines submitted a subamendment (A/C.3/L.810) to the revised amendments of Colombia and the United States (A/C.3/L.800/Rev.1). The sub-amendment provided for the replacement of paragraph 3A by the following text:

"Decides to institute suitable prizes of the total value of $100,000 to be awarded for the most outstanding scientific research work in the causes and control of cancerous diseases, and requests the

- Secretary-General to arrange for the awarding of the prizes during the next four years, on the recommendation of the World Health Organization, and to renew this award periodically as long as it is considered necessary, the prizes to be known as United Nations prizes.''
- 21. The representative of the Philippines suggested that the phrase "to be placed at the disposal of the World Health Organization" be inserted in the eight-Power sub-amendment (A/C.3/L.810) between the words "$100,000" and "to be awarded". He subsequently withdrew his suggestion.
- 22. At its 953rd meeting, the Committee voted as follows on the proposals before it:
- (a) The eight-Power sub-amendment (A/C.3/L.810) was adopted by a roll-call vote of 48 to 18, with 10 abstentions. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Austria, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Cambodia, Canada, Ceylon, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Federation of Malaya, Finland, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Jordan, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Thailand, Tunisia, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, United Arab Republic, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Belgium, China, Colombia, Denmark, France, Haiti, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

Abstaining: Argentina, Chile, Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras, Japan, Panama, Peru, Spain, Uruguay.

- (b) The revised amendments submitted by Colombia and the United States (A/C.3/L.800/Rev.1), as amended, were adopted by 65 votes to 1, with 10 abstentions.
- (c) The revised draft resolution submitted by the Byelorussian SSR (A/C.3/L.772/Rev.1), as amended, was adopted by a vote of 60 to none, with 15 abstentions.

Recommendation of the Third Committee

23. The Third Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

Report of the Secretary-General

[Original text: English] [29 September 1959]

CONSULTATIONS WITH THE FORD FOUNDATION

- 1. The Secretary-General takes great pleasure in announcing to members of the General Assembly the receipt of a gift from the Ford Foundation for the construction of a new building to house the United Nations Library. Action to this effect was taken by the Foundation's Board of Trustees at its meeting in June 1959. The Ford Foundation has indicated that its objective in making the grant was to assure the United Nations of a building of the highest quality, aesthetically designed, furnished and equipped in conformity with the most modern library standards. To meet these costs the Ford Foundation is presenting to the United Nations the sum of $6,200,000. Interest accruing on this amount will be used, if necessary, to defray costs of the project. Unused funds will be returned to the Foundation.
- 2. On the basis of data provided to the architects by the Secretariat and the library consultants of the Ford Foundation, the firm of Harrison and Abramovitz, principal architects for the United Nations buildings, conclude that the grant of $6,200,000 plus accumulated interest should be adequate to cover the cost estimates of the project, including the cost of demolishing the present library building, architects' and consultants' fees, preparation of the site, construction of the new building, equipment, furniture and artistic decoration, and ample provision for contingencies. The Secretary-General concurs in this judgement.
- 3. The Secretariat plans for a new building and for obtaining funds for its construction began soon after the Library was moved into its present quarters. The subsequent years, during which consultations took place relating to the request for funds, provided the Secretariat with an opportunity to develop plans for the type of library building that would meet the requirements of the United Nations, and to elaborate practices and policies for the functioning of the Library in harmony with the basic principles laid down by the General Assembly in 1949. 1/

4. During the period from 1952 to June 1959 a succession of consultations - especially activated during the last two years - took place with the officials of the Ford Foundation. Several brochures, including prospective designs for a new library building by the architectural firm of Harrison and Abramovitz, were prepared for the use of the Foundation in the evaluation of the project. Two factors stood in the way of an earlier approval by the Ford Foundation of the request; first, a belief on the part of its officials that the financial responsibility for such construction should be assumed by the Members of the United Nations and, secondly, that such a grant would run contrary to the normal policy of the Foundation not to invest funds in building construction. Despite these considerations, the Foundation officials took positive action in the light of the significant and constructive role played by the Library in the total United Nations effort in the pursuance of the high objectives of the Charter. They noted that the Library, with its excellent collections and highly qualified staff, has been increasingly useful to delegations and to the Secretariat in providing a sound factual basis for the resolving of issues before United Nations organs and for the numerous programmes maintained on the world-wide basis by the United Nations. Furthermore, the Library was attracting an increasing number of serious scholars and writers from the academic world, non-governmental organizations, the world of journalism, business and industry.

- 5. In approving the request, the Ford Foundation attached no conditions. It asked only that the building to be constructed should be of the highest quality, designed, furnished and equipped in accordance with the most modern library standards and that there should be assurance that the analysis, presented by the Secretariat in making its appeal for the development of a unique, specialized international library would, in fact, be implemented. The Secretary-General is glad to report that the concept of the Foundation and that of the Secretariat with respect to the quality of the building and the continuing trends in the effective development of the library as a central tool in the United Nations effort are identical.
- 6. This very substantial gift, supported by identical views as to its constructive objectives, is a source of deep satisfaction to the Secretariat, which undoubtedly will be shared by all members of the General Assembly.
- 7. The Secretary-General is pleased to recommend the acceptance of this gift by the General Assembly.

INADEQUACY OF THE PRESENT LIBRARY BUILDING

8. The present home of the Library was regarded from the beginning as inadequate. When the Secretariat moved into the new Headquarters in 1950, the present building was the only - although unsatisfactory - space for the housing of the Library. The building, architecturally out of harmony with the other United Nations buildings and designed as an office building, lacked the possibility of effective alteration for library use and its floors were not sufficiently sturdy to sustain heavy stacks. It has been necessary to make a vertical dispersal of the collections and services over nine levels, including three basement levels, two of which are scarcely usable because of high temperatures and humidity and one of which is accessible only by stairs. There has been a horizontal fragmentation of the collections and services into many small rooms designed as offices. Moreover, the building, limited in size, provides no further opportunity for expansion and prohibits the growth of the Library to that level which would seem commensurate with the fulfilment of its purposes and with the increasing use to which it is being put by the enlarging membership of the United Nations and by serious scholars and writers interested in the United Nations and in international affairs.

FUNCTION OF THE LIBRARY AS DETERMINED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

9. In the first years of the United Nations special attention was given to the function of the Library, both by the General Assembly and by the Secretariat. Highly qualified outside librarians were secured as consultants who gave invaluable advice regarding the role that might be played by the Library. It was recognized that the central role of the Library as a vital tool for members of delegations and of the Secretariat in the execution of their tasks would, if properly implemented, ensure the creation of a highly specialized international library of unique character.

The Library should not aim at creating a general library or at competing with such libraries, but, within the broad scope of the specialized subjects of United Nations and specialized agencies' concern, it should develop unexcelled collections in these fields. As an outcome of these early discussions the General Assembly defined the Library's basic responsibility in 1949 as follows:

"The Library's primary function is to enable the delegations, Secretariat and other official groups of the Organization to obtain, with the greatest possible speed, convenience and economy, the library materials and information needed in the execution of their duties. The materials to be assembled and the services to be maintained will be determined by the needs of these groups." 2/

10. As a natural — indeed inevitable — outcome of the nature of its collections, the Library was conceived to be also an international centre for study and research in world affairs. This concept of its wider usefulness to users was recognized in the same basic policy directives in 1949.

"The services of the Library will also be made available, as far as feasible, to the specialized agencies, accredited representatives of mass media of information, international governmental organizations, affiliated non-governmental organizations, educational institutions, scholars and writers. No one needing to use full sets of documents and publications of the League of Nations, the United Nations or the specialized agencies will be denied access to the Library." 3/

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE COLLECTIONS, SERVICES AND STAFF OF THE LIBRARY

Collections

- 11. The Library has developed within the terms of reference provided by the General Assembly a collection of about 200,000 volumes in many languages, principally composed of books, maps, periodicals and governmental and inter-governmental documents of legal, political, economic and social interest. In areas of particular concern, such as political questions, world-wide economic and social development, population studies, statistics, boundary disputes, constitutional matters, international law and social legislation, the collections are impressive. They are particularly notable for their comprehensive, multinational, multilingual character and, by reason of their arrangement, for their usefulness as working collections.
- 12. The Library's holdings of the documents and publications of the United Nations itself, the specialized agencies, the League of Nations and other international organizations are the most complete and best organized in the world.
- 13. The map collection is comprehensive as regards questions of boundaries, place names and flags.
- 14. The Woodrow Wilson Memorial Library, established by a gift of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation in 1950 as part of the United Nations Library, is one of the world's most complete and valuable sources of information about the League of Nations and about international affairs during the League's existence.

^{2/ &}lt;u>Ibid., para. 4.

^{3/ &}lt;u>Ibid., para. 5.

Depository library programme

15. In addition to the usual reference and lending functions of a library, the United Nations Library has the responsibility of making the documents of the United Nations and the specialized agencies accessible to the world. To accomplish this it has developed, within limits established by the Publications Board, a worldwide system of depository libraries which receive United Nations publications without charge on condition that they make them available to the public. The conduct of this depository library programme, in all of its aspects other than the physical distribution of the documents, is the Library's concern.

Indexing

16. Towards the same end of making the information contained in United Nations and specialized agency documents readily and generally accessible, the Library performs a variety of highly technical indexing tasks which are not usual library responsibilities. For example, it prepares and publishes a monthly check list and subject index of all United Nations and specialized agency documents produced or received at Headquarters. This United Nations Documents Index is the key to the extensive resources of legal, political, economic and social data contained in these documents. Throughout the world it is an indispensable tool for those who work with United Nations or specialized agency documentation.

17. Similarly, the Library compiles and publishes an exhaustive index to the United Nations Treaty Series, indexes to the proceedings of each session of the General Assembly and other major organs, and a variety of ad hoc indexes and bibliographies essential to the work of the Secretariat and of delegations and most useful to the whole political and scholarly world.

Staff

18. The development, organization, and utilization of these collections can be credited to the capable staff of professional librarians and skilled clerks who meet the highest standards of competence and who, in addition, have had varying experience in their national civil and foreign services. Many, in addition to excellent academic library training, have had training in law, economics and related subjects. The staff is composed of nationals of some twenty-six Member States and together they are proficient in about thirty-five languages. They constitute the most cosmopolitan library staff in the world.

ITS ROLE IN THE LIBRARY COMMUNITY

19. The Library holds a special position among the research libraries of the world. By avoiding the development of large general collections, it concentrates its efforts upon the speedy acquisition of all available useful current materials in germane fields and by the arrangement and, as necessary, the listing and indexing of this material for maximum usefulness with maximum speed. It thus supplements the collections and services of the great general libraries of the world.

20. It is a mark of the success of this effort that other libraries now look more and more to the United Nations Library for assistance and advice, not only in the management of their own United Nations documents collections, but also in areas of particular United Nations competence. For example, the New York Public Library, heading a group of major research libraries in a programme for the co-operative filming of the official gazettes of about two hundred countries and territories, has found that the United Nations gazette collection, because of its scope and relative completeness, is the necessary principal source of original documents to be filmed.

USERS OF THE LIBRARY

21. Since 1956 demands upon the Library by all of its users have increased sharply. A 36 cent increase in the membership of the Organization, greater scope of of political questions, requirements of the programmers of technical assistance, research into new problems such as the peaceful uses of atomic energy and the exploration of outer space, and growing public interest — all of these developments have had a marked impact upon the Library. From the 1951-1955 base, service demands upon the Library increased more than 50 per cent by 1958, as the following table illustrates:

	1951-1955 (average)	1956	1957	1958
Reference queries Loans	61,000 66,000			103,870 91,637

Under the pressure of this increased demand for services, the Library's book funds, staff, and — most of all — its physical plant have been strained to the breaking point.

22. The trend of increasing use of the Library will undoubtedly continue. The further expansion of the membership of the Organization and the growing public interest in the work of the United Nations and its handling of past issues, combined with the early establishment of several scores of missions of Member States across the street from Headquarters, will result in greater use of the Library. Such an increase is welcomed and should be encouraged.

23. Staffs of delegations make regular use of the Library in the preparation of position papers in connexion with the work of the General Assembly, the Councils or other organs of the United Nations. With the rotation of delegations to various United Nations bodies, and with the change in composition of mission personnel, the existence of extensive collections concerning United Nations matters and services by an experienced staff, provide invaluable assistance to the delegations.

24. The great majority of delegations to the United Nations represent smaller countries. The great Powers and certain other states are able to provide their representatives with large and well-trained staffs and to support their work with research departments in their foreign offices. Perhaps as many as two-thirds of the Member States, however, have difficulty in establishing comparable research facilities. For these in particular the United Nations Library provides a necessary research instrument.

25. The library as a research centre also makes its vital contribution to the work of the Secretariat. In preparing background materials and vital information for the General Assembly, Councils, Commissions and Committees, in carrying out special projects resulting from resolutions of these organs and in compiling data for United Nations publications, the Secretariat is engaged in continuous research of world scope over a broad range of subject matter.

- 26. There has also been an increased use of the Library by representatives of the more than three hundred international non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council or on the list of the Office of Public Information. These organizations have made an important contribution to the cause of economic and social progress both interms of advancing public understanding of issues and in terms of material assistance given to specific social and humanitarian projects.
- 27. The Library is also a centre for study and research by representatives of specialized agencies, journalists, scholars in the legal, political, social and economic fields, and by members of staffs in the field of business and industry.
- 28. This expanding group of users, both official and unofficial, calls for generous library facilities, for a well-arranged ready storehouse of facts and information and for a dynamic reference and bibliographical centre.

TEMPORARY ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE LIBRARY

29. In the period between the evacuation of the present building and the completion of the new structure, the Library and its staff would be accommodated in the Secretariat building. Use would be made of the Secretariat lobby for reference and periodical services, while branch libraries would be expanded and increased in number in various offices and departments of the Secretariat. A careful selection of the mostused materials would be made for current use, while less-used materials would be stored in basement areas and elsewhere. Budgetary provision would be necessary to cover this change to temporary quarters. A proposal to this effect, involving a revision of the Secretary-General's 1960 budget estimates, will be presented separately.

DEVELOPMENT PLANS

30. In order to provide adequate library resources and services to meet growing needs, the Secretary-General has estimated that a considerable increase up to an approximate doubling of the present rate of acquisition of library materials would be necessary to achieve a desired eventual total collection of about 400,000 volumes. 4/ He also proposes that, in due course, an increase of 25 to 30 per cent in staff will be necessary to allow, particularly, for an approximate doubling of the present indexing and related bibliographical work. This expanded indexing programme might include the completion of the check list of documents of the United Nations, 1946-1949 publication in French and possibly in other languages of current indexes now issued only in English, and preparation of subject bibliographies and special indexes which are not only essential to the Organization's daily work, but

- which also fulfil its obligation to make the documentary record of its activities more generally accessible.
- 31. To achieve these objectives the Secretary-General will, in due time, recommend the necessary budgetary support.

PLANNING FOR THE NEW LIBRARY BUILDING

- 32. The presentation to the Ford Foundation was made on the assumption that the present unsatisfactory building would be razed to the ground and that the new library building would be erected in its place.
- 33. Attached hereto are preliminary sketches of the new building prepared by the firm of Harrison and Abramovitz. They show that the exterior of the building will be beautifully designed and in conformity with the other buildings that comprise the United Nations compound. This building will complete the group of buildings around the Plaza and will add much to its attractiveness.
- 34. It is intended, should the General Assembly approve, that it would be a building of six storeys in addition to a penthouse, three above ground and three below, measuring approximately 90 feet by 220 feet, approximately 27 metres by 67 metres with a net floor area sufficient to house 400,000 volumes and a total of 285 readers, together with the necessary staff to serve them and to perform considerably expanded indexing and other bibliographical services. In its provision of reading rooms, study rooms, carrells, its entrances and lobbies and in its furnishings and equipment it would be as functionally efficient, as comfortable and as beautiful as expert planning could devise.
- 35. The building which is contemplated would be of modular construction designed for utmost flexibility of space. It is being planned with special attention to the relationships of the several classic functions of a library and to the special functions of this Library, for economical operation and for ease of access.
- 36. The first, or ground, floor would have a main entrance on the United Nations Plaza leading into a lobby and a connexion with the Secretariat Building by way of a glassed-in gallery that would also serve as an exhibit hall. The first floor would house the attractive main reading room, including the reference services, a collection of as many as 10,000 reference books and reading areas for about 100 persons; the public catalogues, designed to accommodate 2,000,000 cards required for 400,000 volumes; the loan desk; and the Acquisition and Catalogue Sections which require convenient access to both the public catalogues and the reference collection.
- 37. The second floor would house the bulk of the United Nations and specialized agency documents collection at present numbering about 30,000 volumes and growing by about 100,000 documents each year, their index catalogue, and the major portion of the Woodrow Wilson Memorial Library of League of Nations documents and related materials. Here, too, would be the reading rooms for these collections, accommodating ninety readers, a small microfilm storage and reading room, a number of carrells and ten study rooms for scholars doing extended research.
- 38. The third floor would carry the balance of the United Nations and League of Nations documents collection, the Index Section and the executive offices. It would also form the galleried upper portion of the Woodrow Wilson Memorial Library, designed as a two-storey room in a style appropriate to its memorial character.

^{4/} It has been estimated by the Library staff and by independent consultants that 400,000 volumes is about the optimum size for the type of special collection of current materials envisaged, and that once that approximate level has been reached it should be maintained by the constant weeding of out-of-date materials. Such weeding is accepted as an essential part of the Library's programme.

- 39. The penthouse above the third floor, accessible by stairs only, would house the mechanical equipment and provide space for an attractive lounge.
- 40. The concourse, or first basement level, would have an entrance on First Avenue by means of which the Secretariat staff could enter the Library or, through an underground connecting corridor, to the Secretariat Building to the northeast. It would house the bulk of the reference collection, the periodical reading room with provision for seventy-five readers and adjacent stacks, the maps collection and reading room to accommodate twenty readers, a staff workroom, a microfilm storage and reading room and a small listening room for the use of language training records. The entrance lobby of the auditorium, accessible from both the Secretariat Building and the Library proper, will also be on this level. The auditorium itself will be of a stadium-type design, two storeys in height, the stage or platform being on a level with the second basement.
- 41. The auditorium would accommodate about 200 persons, for lectures, seminars, panel discussions, briefings and film showings. Neither the present Library Building, nor any other United Nations building contains such accommodation. Provision of an auditorium for these purposes represents a necessary and integral part of the Library in making it the international centre that it is intended to be.
- 42. The second basement would contain chiefly stacks designed to house the main book collection. It would also contain the lower portion of the auditorium.
- 43. The third basement would house the balance of the main collection, in free-standing stacks, and the mechanical equipment of the building.
- 44. This concept of utilization of the space available would allow for maximum concentration of related services on single floors and for easy vertical communication between related collections and services. It is believed that in this regard the proposed building would be a model of compact arrangement of space that is yet sufficiently commodious and flexible to accommodate the Library collections and services that the United Nations will require for the foreseeable future.

45. The development of the basement portion of the plan would call for the displacement and re-equipment of technical and storage facilities designed for and utilized by the Visual Services of the Office of Public Information. These facilities could be conveniently relocated in the hangar area in the basement of the General Assembly building. The cost to the United Nations of this relocation, which, in conjunction with the proposed construction in the same area of a television studio and processing centre, is to be presented as a separate estimate, will be partially offset by certain costs which would otherwise have been required in the renovation of the present library facilities.

JOINT CONSULTATIONS REGARDING THE NEW BUILDING

- 46. The Ford Foundation, in giving favourable consideration to the request of the United Nations, secured the services of four distinguished librarians to assist it in evaluating the project. These librarians were Mr. Douglas W. Bryant, Associate Director, Harvard University Library; Mr. Verner W. Clapp, President, Council on Library Resources, Washington, D.C.; Dr. Frank B. Rogers, Director, National Library of Medicine, Washington; and Mr. Frederick Wagman, Librarian, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.
- 47. At the request of the Secretary-General the Ford Foundation has kindly seconded these librarians to engage in consultations with the Secretariat and with the architects in the tentative formulation of plans and in the establishment of cost estimates at present price levels, as mentioned in paragraph 2.
- 48. Following the acceptance of this gift from the Ford Foundation, the Secretary-General hopes that the Assembly may give him authorization to proceed with the necessary contracts for the completion of architectural plans and for the construction of the building within the financial limits indicated in paragraph 1 above.

Secretary-General: request for the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [29 September 1959]

- 1. The Secretary-General has the honour to request the inclusion of the following item in the agenda of the fourteenth session of the General Assembly, as an important and urgent matter:
 - "The United Nations Library: gift of The Ford Foundation".
- 2. In accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure, the Secretary-General wishes to refer to his report on the proposed item (A/4231), which may be regarded as the explanatory memorandum on this question.

DOCUMENT A /4252

Report of the Fifth Committee

- 1. The Fifth Committee considered, at its 732nd meeting held on 29 October 1959, the item entitled "The United Nations Library: gift of the Ford Foundation". The Committee had before it a report of the Secretary-General (A/4231) and a draft resolution submitted jointly by the following forty-five Member States: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, France, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Liberia, Mexico, Nepal, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay and Venezuela.
- 2. Introducing the report, the representative of the Secretary-General dwelt on the manifold advantages which would accrue to the United Nations from the splendid generosity of the Ford Foundation. Even in 1950, when the Secretariat moved into the new Head-quarters, the present library building was regarded as inadequate. Apart from the aesthetic incongruity of the exterior, the structure of the building was not adapted to library use or conducive to efficient administration. Furthermore, the progressive growth of the collections since that time, combined with a sharp increase in the demands for services, had strained the physical capacity of the Library.
- 3. From the outset, much thought had been given to the problem. Finally, in June 1959, the Trustees of the Ford Foundation, in approving a request submitted by the Secretary-General, generously agreed to make a grant to the United Nations of $6,200,000 representing, with interest accruing thereon, a sum sufficient to cover the cost of constructing, furnishing and equipping the new Library in accordance with the highest modern standards of functional utility and convenience. Unused funds would be returned to the Foundation.
- 4. The new building would provide facilities that were sorely needed both in relation to present demands

- (representing, by comparison with 1955, an increase of more than 50 per cent in reference and loan services) and in relation to the expanding use of the Library, which undoubtedly would be witnessed for some years to come.
- 5. The Secretary-General's representative added that the financial implications for the United Nations were relatively slight. For 1960, expenditure connected with the temporary housing of the Library was estimated at $114,000, while $54,000 would be required in 1961 for the removal into the new building and for related expenses. There would, however, be certain offsetting items: first, as regards the year 1959, a saving of $60,000, representing the balance of the appropriation for repairs to the present building which was no longer required; and secondly, a reduction of $88,500 provided for the present building in the 1960 budget estimate (comprising $52,000 for operating costs, and $36,500 for repairs).
- 6. As requested in the draft resolution, the Secretary-General would report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session regarding the level of library resources and services that should be made available to ensure that the new Library might be used to the best advantage. Generally, as indicated in paragraph 30 of the Secretary-General's report, an increase of 25 to 30 per cent in the present staff appeared to be called for, and an approximate doubling of the present annual acquisition level of $50,000. There would also be a slight rise in maintenance and custodial costs.
- 7. Delegations joined in acclaiming the generosity of the Ford Foundation, whose munificent and timely gift made it possible to build a new library worthy of the United Nations and in keeping with the responsibilities which the Organization had assumed. The work of the Ford Foundation was known to all, for its philanthropy was not bounded by the frontiers of any State. Its efforts were directed to advancing the welfare of mankind and promoting peace and understanding among the peoples of the world, and it was in that spirit that the Foundation had made so liberal a contribution to the work of the United Nations. In so doing, the donors had testified to their faith in the ideals and aims of the Organization.

8. Many representatives also referred with appreciation to the untiring efforts which the Secretary-General and his associates had for many years exerted on behalf of the project, and to the able manner in which they had brought it to fruition.

DECISION OF THE FIFTH COMMITTEE

- 9. The Committee unanimously adopted:
- (a) A proposal of the United Arab Republic to insert the following text as the penultimate paragraph of the draft resolution (A/C.5/L.577):
 - *7. Requests the Secretary-General, as an expression of the gratitude and appreciation of the Member States for the gift of the Ford Foundation, to place a memorial stone inscribed 'Gift of the Ford Foundation' at the main entrance of the new Library";

(b) The draft resolution (A/C.5/L.577) as a whole, as amended.

Recommendation of the Fifth Committee

10. The Fifth Committee accordingly recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[Text adopted by the General Assembly without change. See "Action taken by the General Assembly" below.]

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 835th plenary meeting, on 3 November 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Fifth Committee (A/4252, para. 10). For the final text, see resolution 1354 (XIV).

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1354 (XIV). THE UNITED NATIONS LIBRARY: GIFT OF THE FORD FOUNDATION

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General (A/4231) announcing a gift of $6,200,000 from the Ford Foundation for the construction, furnishing and equipping of a new building to house the United Nations Library on the Headquarters site,

Being convinced of the importance and permanent value of the gift in contributing to the effectiveness of the work undertaken by the United Nations,

- 1. Decides to accept the gift;
- 2. Extends to the Ford Foundation its highest appreciation for the gift and the spirit which prompted it;
- 3. Approves the general plan for the construction of the new Library building as set forth in the report of the Secretary-General;
- 4. Authorizes the Secretary-General to proceed with the construction, furnishing and equipping of the building at a cost not to exceed the amount of the gift, i.e.,

- $6,200,000 plus accumulated interest, to enter into contracts for such construction, furnishing, equipping or other work as may be necessary for these purposes, and to return to the Ford Foundation such funds as may not be used:
- 5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session regarding the level of library resources and services that should be made available to ensure that the new Library might be used to the best possible advantage;
- 6. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit this resolution to the Ford Foundation as an expression of the gratitude and appreciation of the General Assembly;
- 7. Requests the Secretary-General, as an expression of the gratitude and appreciation of the Member States for the gift of the Ford Foundation, to place a memorial stone inscribed "Gift of the Ford Foundation" at the main entrance of the new Library;
- 8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the progress made under this resolution.

835th plenary meeting, 3 November 1959.

Federation of Malaya and Ireland: request for the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English]
[29 September 1959]

On the instructions of our Governments we have the honour to propose under rule 15 of procedure of the General Assembly, the inclusion in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly of the following item:

"Question of Tibet".

An explanatory memorandum as required by rule 20 of the rules of procedure is attached.

(Signed) Dato Nik Ahmed KAMIL Permanent Representative of the Federation of Malaya to the United Nations

> (Signed) Frederick H. BOLAND Permanent Representative of Ireland to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

1. The Governments requesting the inscription of this item are convinced that, under the Charter, the United Nations cannot ignore the present situation in Tibet, as described in reliable and consistent reports over a long period culminating in the official statements of the Dalai Lama dated 18 April, 22 April and 20 June 1959, and his appeal to this Organization of 9 September 1959. After study of the material available the conclusion is inescapable that there exists prima facie evidence of an attempt to destroy the traditional way of life of the Tibetan people and the religious and cultural autonomy long recognized as belonging to them, as well as a systematic disregard for the human rights and fundamental freedoms set out in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

- 2. In such circumstances the United Nations has both a moral obligation and a legal right to discuss the situation.
- 3. The Governments concerned further consider that this Assembly has a duty to call for the restoration of the religious and civil liberties of the people of Tibet.
- 4. To these ends, the inscription is requested on the agenda of the General Assembly at this fourteenth session of an item to be entitled "Question of Tibet".

ACTION TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

At its 834th plenary meeting, on 21 October 1959, the General Assembly adopted the draft resolution submitted by the Federation of Malaya, and Ireland (A/L.264). For the final text, see resolution 1353 (XIV) below.

Resolution adopted by the General Assembly

1353 (XIV). QUESTION OF TIBET

The General Assembly,

Recalling the principles regarding fundamental human rights and freedoms set out in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the General Assembly on 10 December 1948,

Considering that the fundamental human rights and freedoms to which the Tibetan people, like all others, are entitled include the right to civil and religious liberty for all without distinction,

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Plenary Meetings, 831st to 834th meetings.

Mindful also of the distinctive cultural and religious heritage of the people of Tibet and of the autonomy which they have traditionally enjoyed,

Gravely concerned at reports, including the official statements of His Holiness the Dalai Lama, to the effect that the fundamental human rights and freedoms of the people of Tibet have been forcibly denied them,

Deploring the effect of these events in increasing international tension and in embittering the relations between peoples at a time when earnest and positive efforts are being made by responsible leaders to reduce tension and improve international relations,

- 1. Affirms its belief that respect for the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights is essential for the evolution of a peaceful world order based on the rule of law;
- 2. Calls for respect for the fundamental human rights of the Tibetan people and for their distinctive cultural and religious life.

United Nations Special Representative on the Question of Hungary: request for the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [17 November 1959]

LETTER DATED 16 NOVEMBER 1959 FROM THE UNITED NATIONS SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE ON THE QUESTION OF HUNGARY ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

At its thirteenth session, the General Assembly, by resolution 1312 (XIII), declared that the United Nations would continue to be seized of the situation in Hungary, and appointed me to represent the United Nations for the purpose of reporting to Member States or to the General Assembly on significant developments relating to the implementation of the Assembly resolutions on the question.

In accordance with rule 15 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, I have the honour to propose the inclusion of the following item in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly as an important and urgent matter:

"Question of Hungary."

An explanatory memorandum as required by rule 20 of the rules of procedure is attached.

(Signed) Leslie K. MUNRO United Nations Special Representative on the Question of Hungary

Explanatory memorandum

1. The General Assembly has had occasion, at the second emergency special session of 4 to 10 November 1956, and at the succeeding regular sessions, to consider the situation in Hungary which has resulted from the armed intervention of Soviet military forces to repress the effort of the Hungarian people to achieve freedom and independence. This situation has been characterized in Assembly resolutions as involving continuing repression of the political independence of Hungary and the deprivation of the Hungarian people of their fundamental human rights and freedoms.

- 2. The hope has been entertained that, in view of the universal concern to ameliorate the international situation, the Governments directly concerned would see fit to make their contribution by measures designed to achieve the objectives stated in General Assembly resolutions on this subject. This hope has not been realized. The withdrawal of foreign armed forces from Hungary has not been achieved. The framework of repression remains unchanged. Wide-spread concern has been aroused by continuing trials and executions consequent upon the uprising, and by the imminent possibility of further executions, despite solemn assurances given in the General Assembly that such trials and executions had been brought to an end. The Hungarian authorities persist in their refusal to assent to any visit to Hungary on the part of the Special Representative of the United Nations. and thus continue their refusal to collaborate in any manner whatsoever with the United Nations in this matter.
- 3. For these reasons, the situation in Hungary must now be deemed an important and urgent matter requiring the attention of the General Assembly at its fourteenth session.

^{*} For the discussion of this item, see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourteenth Session, Plenary Meetings, 848th to 851st meetings.

United States of America: request for the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the fourteenth session

[Original text: English] [20 November 1959]

LETTER DATED 20 NOVEMBER 1959 FROM THE PERMANENT REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE UNITED NATIONS, ADDRESSED TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

On 16 November 1959, Sir Leslie Knox Munro, United Nations Special Representative on the Question of Hungary, addressed to you a letter (A/4285) proposing inclusion in the agenda of the fourteenth regular session of the General Assembly of an additional item of an important and urgent character under the heading:

"Question of Hungary."

Resolution 1312 (XIII) of the Assembly declared that "the United Nations will continue to be seized of the situation in Hungary". In the same resolution, the General Assembly appointed Sir Leslie Munro "to represent the United Nations for the purpose of reporting to Member States or to the General Assembly on significant developments relating to the implementation of the Assembly resolutions on Hungary".

The United Nations Special Representative has announced his intention of submitting to the fourteenth session a report on his activities pursuant to resolution 1312 (XIII). The United States Government believes the General Assembly will wish to hear and consider Sir Leslie Munro's report. In these circumstances, the United States supports the proposal to place the question of Hungary on the agenda of this session, and I have accordingly been instructed to address to you this further communication requesting the inscription of this item on the agenda.

An explanatory memorandum, in accordance with rule 20 of the General Assembly's rules of procedure, is attached.

(Signed) Henry Cabot LODGE Permanent Representative of the United States of America to the United Nations

Explanatory memorandum

The reasons for inscribing the item entitled "Question of Hungary" in the agenda of the present session of the General Assembly are set forth in the explanatory memorandum accompanying the letter of the United Nations Special Representative on the Question of Hungary dated 16 November 1959. The United States Government considers that those reasons plainly warrant inclusion of the proposed item as a matter of an important and urgent character under rule 15 of the Assembly's rules of procedure. In this way, the General Assembly will be enabled to hear and consider the report of Sir Leslie Munro as contemplated by Article 15, paragraph 2, of the Charter.

Report of the United Nations Special Representative on the Question of Hungary

- 1. On 12 December 1958, the General Assembly, by resolution 1312 (XIII), appointed me "to represent the United Nations for the purpose of reporting to Member States or to the General Assembly on significant developments relating to the implementation of the Assembly resolutions on Hungary".
- 2. From the time of my appointment as United Nations Special Representative on the Question of Hungary, it has been my concern to proceed, within the framework of the General Assembly resolutions on the problem, in a manner calculated to develop friendly relations among nations and to promote respect for human rights, in accordance with the purposes of the United Nations. It is evident that these purposes are dependent for their achievement on the loyal collaboration of Members with the Organization in the application and fulfilment of the resolutions of the General Assembly. I therefore regarded it as incumbent on me to seek the collaboration of the Hungarian authorities and of the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics with a view to paving the way for the satisfactory application of the resolutions in question. I felt it necessary to make clear at an early stage my willingness to proceed to Hungary to explore with the Hungarian authorities the modalities of an adjustment of the conflict which has arisen between them and the Organization.

- 3. This sense of the requirements of the office of United Nations Representative dictated that I should make my approach to the present authorities in Hungary and to the Government of the USSR in whatever manner might seem most acceptable to them, and necessarily in the first instance through informal conversations with their representatives at Headquarters. In the course of these conversations, I expressed to the representative of Hungary my anxious desire for the ending of secret trials and the cessation of reprisals, and stressed the need of an amnesty. I was not unhopeful that through such informal conversations it might be possible to move towards some common understanding, without encountering an abrupt denial on the part of Hungary and the Government of the USSR of all right on the part of the United Nations to concern itself with the question. I had recourse to the formality of correspondence only when I found myself confronted with replies which were unco-operative and, in the case of the reply of Hungary, quite unacceptable in its terms.
- 4. On being informed orally that the present authorities in Hungary persisted in their refusal to collaborate with the United Nations on the question, I addressed the following letter on 14 May 1959 to the Permanent Representative of Hungary at the Headquarters of the United Nations:

"Dear Mr. Ambassador,

"You will recall that, when we lunched together on 21 April, I expressed to you my concern to pay a visit to Hungary. I wish to thank you for bringing this request forthwith to the attention of your Government, and for your informing me of its reply.

"I understand, however, from your telephone communication with me that your Government is not prepared to accede to my request. I had hoped that, by broaching the matter to your Government in this somewhat informal manner, it would be possible to make mutually acceptable arrangements which would generally be regarded as conducive to the relaxation of tension which is so widely sought at this moment.

"I feel that I would be less than just to your Government in its capacity as a Member of the United Nations, and to yourself as its Permanent Representative at Headquarters, if I did not seek clarification as to the significance of the reply given by your Government and as to the terms on which your Government would be willing to afford facilities for a visit on my part to Hungary. The terms of your reply are such as to indicate that your Government is opposed even to any personal visit by myself to Hungary as long as I continue to hold the office, with which the General Assembly has honoured me, of United Nations Representative on the Question of Hungary.

"I would be grateful, therefore, if you would convey this communication to your Government with a view to clarification of the significance of the reply which has been given to the question raised with you.

"Yours sincerely, ..."

5. This letter was returned to me, through the agency of the Secretary-General, accompanied by the following letter dated 19 May 1959 from the Permanent Representative of Hungary addressed to the Secretary-General:

"Excellency,

"I have the honour to return a letter sent to me in a United Nations envelop by Sir Leslie Munro.

"I wish to recall that the position of Hungary - expressed clearly and unequivocally the last time during the thirteenth session of the General Assembly - remained unchanged. We consider that the discussion of the so-called 'Hungarian question' as well as the resolution passed on it attempt to intervene in our domestic affairs, which is contrary to the Charter of the United Nations.

"Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest considerations."

6. Since the resolutions of the General Assembly on the question have also been directed to the Government of the USSR, it seemed to me essential that I should also make an approach to that Government, and seek to utilize its good offices in my approaches on behalf of the United Nations to the Hungarian authorities. I was given to understand, however, by the Deputy Permanent Representative of the USSR that he would decline to enter into any discussion with me on the Question of Hungary. I decided with regret that the only course was for me to clarify in writing the position which the Government of the USSR continues to adopt. Accordingly, I addressed the following letter on 4 June 1959 to the Deputy Permanent Representative of the USSR:

"Dear Mr. Ambassador.

"As you are aware, a meeting between us was arranged for Tuesday last, but I was informed by an officer of your delegation that this meeting was to be cancelled on the grounds of my desire to discuss with you matters relating to Hungary.

"The last session of the General Assembly appointed me Special Representative on the Question of Hungary. I have taken the view that I owed it to the United Nations to seek to establish contact with the States directly concerned in this question. It has seemed to me my duty to make this approach; I would desire to leave no grounds for any feeling that lack of contact was due to failure on my part to undertake the necessary conciliatory initiatives.

"The Members of the United Nations will, I am sure, share my regret at the position which you take on behalf of your Government. The General Assembly has clearly taken the position that its resolutions arising from the events of October-November 1956 relate to matters which are demonstrably within the scope of the Charter. It cannot be denied that the question has been placed on the agenda of subsequent sessions of the General Assembly, and that it has been the subject of discussion within the Assembly.

"I had hoped that, in the present circumstances of universal concern for the easing of international tension, the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics would be willing to reconsider its attitude in relation to this question. I would be grateful, therefore, if you would transmit this communication to your Government.

"Yours sincerely, ..."

7. My letter was returned to the Secretary-General, accompanied by the following communication dated 9 June 1959:

"Dear Mr. Secretary-General,

"I enclose herewith a letter from Mr. L. Munro, received by the delegation of the USSR on 4 June. As you know, the Soviet delegation has frequently pointed out at meetings of the General Assembly that it considers the decisions of the General Assembly on the so-called Hungarian question as illegal. The position of the Soviet Union remains unchanged.

"Consequently, the delegation of the USSR to the United Nations has no intention of entering into any correspondence on this question.

"With respect ..."

- 8. This correspondence is conclusive of the continued unwillingness of the Hungarian authorities and of the Government of the USSR to accord their loyal collaboration to the United Nations on this question.
- 9. In addition to my effort to establish contact with the Governments directly concerned in the question, I have sought throughout the year to maintain consultation with other Governments interested in the question. In particular, in the month of July, a personal visit to Austria afforded me the opportunity of a conversation with the Austrian Foreign Minister; I also visited one of the camps in Austria in which refugees from Hungary are maintained. These conversations have been inspired by my understanding that a solution of the problem of Hungary in accordance with General Assembly resolutions can be prompted only by continued support given by Members of the United Nations to the terms of those resolutions.

10. In their correspondence, the Hungarian authorities and the Government of the USSR have continued to advance the view that the question of Hungary is a matter within the domestic jurisdiction of Hungary. On these grounds, they have denied the legality of the resolutions of the General Assembly on the subject and impugned the validity of my designation as United Nations Representative. The claim of domestic jurisdiction is based on a misunderstanding of the nature of the concern of the Organization in this matter. The United Nations has at no point concerned itself with matters essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of Hungary. Its concern arose in October 1956 from the intervention of the armed forces of the USSR in the internal situation of Hungary with a view to the reestablishment of a régime which had been overthrown by a spontaneous uprising. The United Nations is necessarily concerned with a political situation which has its origin in foreign military action against the Hungarian people, contrary to the provisions of Article 2, paragraph 4, of the Charter. The Organization is equally concerned with the practices resulting from this intervention which contravened the Universal Declaration of Human Rights - such practices as the mass deportations of Hungarians to the USSR and the establishment of a régime of "summary jurisdiction". This delimitation of the rightful sphere of United Nations concern has been clearly stated in the reports submitted by the Special Committee on the Problem of Hungary (A/3592, A/3849) and in the resolutions of the General Assembly. This present report is strictly confined within the limits so indicated.

11. The Hungarian authorities have sought justification for their defiance of the United Nations by constructing a fanciful version of the uprising in 1956. Its most recent statement is to be found in the theses of the Central Committee of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' (Communist) Party printed in the principal party newspaper, Nepszabadsag, on 27 September 1959:

"International reaction, headed by the aggressive circles of the American monopoly capitalists, which supports every oppressive power throughout the world, has been consistently undermining our country since the liberation. Imperialism wanted to reestablish the bourgeois landowners' system in our country, wished to tear out the Hungarian People's Republic from the socialist camp and use it as a springboard against the Soviet Union and the whole socialist camp. Therefore it incited, organized and supported the armed insurrection openly and clandestinely, with diplomatic and propaganda weapons, with various undermining methods, with money, gun-running, and every possible means.

"The counter-revolutionary insurrection which broke out in Hungary on October 23, 1956, endangered not only the socialist achievements of the Hungarian people and their national independence, but was also an attempt against the entire socialist world, against Europe and the peace of all humanity. The struggle was not only a battle between revolutionary and reactionary powers in Hungary, but also a conflict between the international powers of progress and reaction, of socialism and imperialism, of war and peace."

12. Such efforts to veil the true character of the uprising in Hungary in 1956 run counter to good sense. It is contended that the uprising was instigated by foreign Powers. Then how claim that the problem of Hungary was, and is, a matter of domestic jurisdiction? It is contended that the uprising was "incited, organized and supported ... openly and clandestinely, with diplomatic and propaganda weapons... with money, gunrunning, and every possible means". No evidence has been produced to support such a contention. Had the present authorities been in a position to substantiate such a version of the uprising, would they have failed to produce their evidence before the Special Committee which the General Assembly set up to look into the question? The Hungarian representatives participated in the debate on the report in the General Assembly - a debate which continued for four days. Again, no evidence was produced. But, in fact, what happened in Hungary in October and the early days of November 1956 is no mystery. Not even the Hungarian authorities have sought to maintain that tanks other than Soviet tanks shot at the Hungarian workers in 1956 when they were endeavouring to set up a Government controlled by the Hungarian people themselves. Does it make sense to claim that, when the people of a country are targets for military operations conducted by the armed forces of a foreign Power, such actions are a matter of domestic jurisdiction? To assert this view is to destroy the very foundations of the United Nations.

- 13. These considerations arising from the terms of the replies to my communications bear directly on the necessity for, and justification of, the office of United Nations Representative on Hungary. The refusal of the Hungarian authorities to acknowledge in any manner the office of United Nations Representative on the Question of Hungary arises exclusively from their arbitrary refusal to consider as a proper subject for General Assembly concern matters which are demonstrably within the scope of the Charter. It would be contrary to the duty which I owe to the United Nations were I to acquiesce in an attitude which is incompatible with proper recognition of the responsibility of the United Nations in matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security.
- 14. The circumstances which I have encountered in the past year have necessarily raised in my mind the question as to the manner in which I should in the future discharge my duty. Confronted by the impasse constituted by the refusal of collaboration by Hungary and the Government of the USSR, I have considered whether the appropriate response on my part would be to withdraw from the office to which the Assembly appointed me in December 1958. My primary concern is to take no step which would diminish the standing of the United Nations. The compelling consideration in deciding my course is that withdrawal on my part would be taken by Hungary and the USSR as acceptance by the United Nations of the legitimacy of their non-co-operation. I have therefore concluded that it is my duty to continue in the office of United Nations Representative on the Question of Hungary as a symbol of continuing United Nations concern to achieve the political independence of Hungary in accordance with the provisions of the General Assembly's resolutions.

- 15. I have therefore throughout the year exerted myself to bring about, on terms conducive to the interest of the Hungarian people and in accordance with the purport of the General Assembly's resolutions, an amelioration of the relationship between the Organization and the present Hungarian authorities. I shall continue to work towards this objective, conscious that the General Assembly has decided, in its resolution 1312 (XIII) of 12 December 1958, to continue to be seized of the situation in Hungary in view of the continued disregard of the resolutions of the General Assembly.
- 16. In this connexion, it would seem reasonable to regard agreement by the Hungarian authorities to a visit by myself to that country in my capacity as United Nations Representative as the indispensable preliminary acknowledgement on the part of Hungary of its willingness to fulfil its obligations as a Member of the United Nations.
- 17. In its resolution 1312 (XIII), the General Assembly deplored the continuing repression in Hungary of fundamental rights of the Hungarian people and of their freedom of political expression "under the shadow of the continuing presence of Soviet armed forces". The Assembly called upon the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the present authorities in Hungary to desist from repressive measures against the Hungarian people and to respect the liberty and political independence of Hungary and the Hungarian people's enjoyment of fundamental human rights and freedoms.
- 18. What evidence has there been in the past year of any compliance with the terms of the General Assembly's resolutions?
- 19. In the course of the past year, no evidence has been forthcoming of any basic change in the Hungarian situation which would warrant relaxation by the United Nations of its continued attention to the problem. The régime which the General Assembly, in its resolution 1133 (XI) of 14 September 1957 found, on the basis of the scrupulous investigation by the Special Committee, to have been "imposed on the Hungarian people by the armed intervention of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics", continues its domination within Hungary. The regime is now "protected", to cite Mr. Kadar's speech of 15 October 1958, "by our reorganized, reborn people's army, and by the other armed forces of our State", and "by a new and proven weapon - the splendid workers' guard". Protected, it may be asked, against whom? Against the resentment of its own people?
- 20. Since 1956, it is true, the United Nations has not been faced with the continuance of military operations on Hungarian soil. Soviet forces have remained in the country, contrary to the requests of the General Assembly for their withdrawal. Reference has been made on occasion to the possibility of the withdrawal of Soviet forces. On 20 August 1959, in a speech at Györ, Mr. Kadar observed that "hostile propaganda" was talking a great deal about the possibilities of a withdrawal of Soviet troops from Hungary. He added:

"The time will come when the Soviet troops will be withdrawn. The enemy's dreams, however, will be in vain because we have a strong State and strong defences to protect the people's rule."

- 21. If Soviet forces are withdrawn from Hungary and it may be recalled that such appeared to be the intention of the Government of the USSR in October 1956 (see A/3592, para. 332) this act would undoubtedly be regarded by all Members of the United Nations as a contribution to the normalization of the situation.
- 22. Trials and executions in the past year have not attracted the world-wide attention that was focused on the fate of Imre Nagy, Pal Maleter and other Hungarian patriots in June 1958. It was possible to entertain the hope that time itself had to some extent set a term to the repeated instances of repressive action against Hungarian patriots for their participation in the uprising in 1956. This hope appeared to be confirmed by the repeated statements of Hungarian representatives themselves. Speaking in the plenary meeting of the General Assembly on 22 September 1958, in connexion with the inclusion of the Hungarian question in the agenda, the Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Endre Sik, gave the Assembly the following assurance: "As far as the court proceedings are concerned, I am authorized to state that these have been wound up and terminated". 1/ On 12 December 1958, the Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr. Péter, repeated this assurance when he observed: "All these investigations and procedures were completed a long time ago".2/
- 23. The cessation of trials and executions was subsequently confirmed by other Hungarian spokesmen in February of the present year. On 18 February 1959, the Hungarian Prime Minister, Mr. Münnich, speaking in the Hungarian Parliament, stated that the Hungarian judicial authorities "had completed the investigation of counter-revolutionary crimes and the calling to account of counter-revolutionaries". Again, on 27 February 1959, the Minister of Justice, Mr. Nezvál, made the following declaration: "The courts have completely finished the trials of counter-revolutionary cases".
- 24. Nevertheless, the virtual cessation of news regarding continued trials could not obscure one essential consideration: that those sentenced since the uprising by questionable judicial procedures were suffering their various terms of confinement. The memory of their fate should not be erased from the conscience of the world. The names may be recalled of one outstanding group - the Hungarian writers - and among them some of the greatest names in contemporary Hungarian literature: Tibor Déry, sentenced in November 1957 to nine years' imprisonment; Gyula Hay, sentenced to six years; Domonkos Kosary, an outstanding historian; Jozsef Gali and Gyula Obersovsky, writers who were sentenced to death in the trials of writers in 1957 and whose sentences were subsequently commuted to life imprisonment; and many others. Some were men who had for long identified themselves with the Communist cause, but, like others, are still imprisoned for their part in the protest of writers against the oppressive practices of the Rákosi régime and for their role in the uprising and its aftermath. All efforts towards clemency, whether from the United Nations through the offices of the former President of the General Assembly, Prince Wan Waithayakon or more recently, from the International Pen Club, have met with adamant refusal. In July 1959, the Pen Club addressed to János Kádár, as First Secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party, a request "to consider an act of clemency towards imprisoned Hungarian writers, in particular Tibor Dery and Julius Hay". The Chief of the Investigation Department of the Hungarian Ministry of Justice, Dezsö Jászai, replied in August: "The Hungarian subjects named in your telegram were sentenced by the Hungarian court on account of their crimes committed against the Hungarian people. At present we cannot fulfil your request. An act of grace is only possible if the appropriate conditions exist".

- 25. An amnesty was, it is true, issued by the Hungarian authorities on 2 April 1959. But it was merely a partial amnesty. The title of the decree-law itself made that clear. In the main, it applied only to those whose prison sentences were for less than four years, and did not apply at all to those sentenced to so-called "corrective educational labour". Exceptions to the amnesty were deliberately phrased to exclude from its benefit the greater number of those sentenced for their participation in the uprising. The Hungarian authorities' own legislation provides evidence of their refusal to act in accordance with the spirit of the Assembly's resolutions.
- 26. Many organizations have in the course of the year brought to my attention lists of persons who are, according to their information, undergoing terms of imprisonment. It is unhappily not within my power, in the absence of co-operation by the Hungarian authorities, to ascertain the accuracy of such information. Undoubtedly some of those imprisoned have been released. I would recall that a list of persons sentenced was annexed to the special report of the Special Committee on the Problem of Hungary of 14 July 1958. This list was based on press and radio statements from within Hungary itself, but was not necessarily a complete list, since, as the report observed: "Most of the victims have no famous name to bring their sufferings to the notice of the world" (A/3849, para. 22). This list retains its validity as a compilation of the reliable information available as of that date. At that date, much data could be derived from newspapers published within Hungary, especially provincial newspapers. There is reason to believe that, subsequent to the last report of the Special Committee, the Hungarian authorities took steps to diminish the flow of information regarding trials and executions.
- 27. One addition to the Committee's list, however, calls for special mention. The Committee's list was compiled before the Hungarian authorities had pronounced the sentence of life imprisonment on István Bibó, Minister of State in the last Cabinet of Imre Nagy—a sentence pronounced on 28 August 1958, but kept secret until references to the matter in the Assembly

- on 11 December $1958^{\frac{5}{2}}$ made continued secrecy pointless.
- 28. Authoritative information has also become available, since the publication of the Committee's report, of other sentences seemingly pronounced before the compilation of the Committee's list, but for long withheld from public knowledge, such as the sentences on the leaders of the Budapest Workers' Council who were arrested as far back as 11 December 1956—on Sandor Racz to life imprisonment, and on Sandor Bali to twelve years' imprisonment.
- 29. Evidence of the continuance of trials has been forthcoming from information released by the Hungarian Telegraph Agency on 1 April 1959. After a trial between 24 March and 1 April, sentences were pronounced by the People's Chamber of the Supreme Court of ten years' imprisonment on Ferenc Mérey, an educationalist; of nine years on Sandor Fekete, formerly, before the uprising, the cultural editor of the Communist Party organ Szabad Nép; of five years on Jenö Széll, a former Ambassador to Romania; of six years on György Litván; and of two years on András Hegedüs—all of whom were charged with "conspiring to overthrow the people's democratic state order".
- 30. In recent weeks, data regarding certain trials and executions within Hungary have become public knowledge, based on evidence the cumulative force of which commands the most serious attention. Information relating to certain of these trials and executions has been authenticated by the International Commission of Jurists, an organization of eminent jurists of many countries to which the Special Committee on the Problem of Hungary was also indebted for valued assistance and advice.
- 31. On 17 October 1959, a "Hungarian spokesman" in Budapest, in answer to the questions of western newspaper reporters, conceded that sentences of death had recently been carried out in connexion with alleged crimes committed during the uprising in 1956. It would appear that these sentences of death, together with other sentences of long-term or life imprisonment, were the outcome of the trial of a group of people from Ujpest, an industrial suburb of Budapest, earlier this year. Ten sentences of death are reported as having been pronounced, and eight executions as having been carried out on or about 13 August. Some twenty-six sentences of imprisonment were reported, the shortest being for a period of five years.
- 32. Confirmation has been forthcoming regarding the holding of another major trial. In February and March, the trial took place of a large group of young people accused of, according to the statement of an official Hungarian spokesmen on 13 March, "political crimes committed in 1958". As to the sentences imposed, definitive information is not available.
- 33. It is against this background that consideration needs to be given to recent reports of a disturbing character which have aroused wide-spread concern regarding the imminent possibility of further executions. The nature of these reports may be gathered from the terms of the statement made on 31 October 1959 by János Kádár, First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' (Communist) Party, at a meeting of the Budapest branch of the Party. Mr. Kádár said:

"In recent weeks, for example, two extremely vile slanders have been spread through the columns of the western press, with a tendency obviously hostile to the Hungarian People's Republic. First they published a list of thirty-one people who they claimed had recently been executed in Hungary. Naturally, all the names were fictitious. Their intentions to provoke are obvious. Such lists are published to make us issue denials and give explanations right and left to western public opinion.

"They invented the story recently that there are quite a few young men in prison in Hungary. According to them, the Government is waiting for them to become eighteen years old and then they will be hanged. Of course, everybody in Hungary knows that news items of this kind are untrue and constitute vile and dastardly provocations. Unfortunately, western public opinion is not armoured against such provocations. Following the formula of Goebbels, rumourmongers think that, if people believe only 1 per cent of their lies, this alone is profit for them."

34. Mr. Kádár's denial is to be welcomed. Nevertheless, the terms of Mr. Kádár's denial do little to establish the true facts as to the circumstances and outcome of the trials consequent upon the uprising, including that of the young people held earlier this year. It is for the Hungarian authorities to allow the true facts to be known, and to afford facilities for their assertions to be verified by giving their assent to the visit to Budapest of the United Nations Representative.

35. In its report of 14 July 1958, the Special Committee on the Problem of Hungary expressed its hope that the Government of the Hungarian People's Republic, "bringing to an end the present harsh repression, will effectively re-establish the inalienable principles of human rights" (A/3849, para. 29). The system of People's Chambers established under Decree-Law No. 34 of 15 June 1957, which largely replaced the earlier framework of summary jurisdiction examined in full in the main report of the Special Committee, continues to operate. Moreover, under Decree-Law No. 9 of 1959, the powers of the prosecutors have been greatly reinforced. The summary nature of the procedures before the People's Chambers was described by the International Commission of Jurists in its report as continuing "to violate human rights in failing to provide the minimum safeguards of justice in criminal trials which are recognized by civilized nations". This system of People's Chambers is characterized by such features as the absence of obligation for the prosecution to present a written accusation; the holding of trials without advance fixing of a date; and provisions relating to the power of the People's Chamber of the Supreme Court to convict or sentence accused persons previously acquitted.

36. The position in Hungary with regard to trade union rights, as laid down in the Preamble of the Constitution of the International Labour Organisation and in the Declaration of Philadelphia, has been the subject of inquiry by the Committee on Freedom of Association of the Governing Body of the International Labour Office, whose report was adopted by the Governing Body at its 137th session. On the recommendation of the Committee, the Governing Body has affirmed that "the principles concerning freedom of association enunciated in the Preamble of the Constitution of the International Labour Organisation and in the Declaration of Philadelphia, and defined in the conventions relating to freedom of association, are not observed in Hungary". Though the Hungarian Government, in a communication of 30 May 1958, expressed itself as "compelled categorically to repugn the findings brought in by the majority of the Governing Body", the Governing Body decided, on 20 November 1958, to reject the allegations contained in the reply by the Hungarian Government and to give full publicity to the report of the Committee on Freedom of Association dealing with the case relating to Hungary.

37. It had been my hope in assuming the office of United Nations Special Representative on the Question of Hungary that, in the course of the year, the Hungarian authorities would see fit to take such measures as would warrant a report of significant developments, within the terms of the resolutions of the General Assembly on the Question of Hungary, which would be indicative of at least a trend in the direction of conditions consonant with the purport of those resolutions. That the present report continues the theme of previous reports is entirely the responsibility of the Hungarian authorities. No response has been forthcoming such as may reasonably be expected of a Member of the Organization concerned to promote the purposes of the Organization and to act in accordance with its principles.
