P R E F A C E

Most of Africa's social and economic problems stem from the conditions of its vast rural areas, where the consequences of extremely low levels of living and of productivity have persistently held back national development. Although this situation is widely recognized by African Governments, it is an unfortunate fact that very little impact has been made on this critical area by the various development plans which they have so far formulated and implemented.

I am, however, convinced that much valuable work in the field of rural development is at present being undertaken in most African countries by a variety of international voluntary agencies, whose modest but effective efforts endeavour to meet the basic day to day needs of the rural communities. In this Directory, an effort has been made to testify to both the scope of the activities of the voluntary agencies and the magnitude of the flow of voluntary aid to African countries. Working with and on behalf of the rural communities - and thus attempting in most instances to develop and utilize to the full the existing rural human resources - these voluntary agencies concentrate on such areas as : the provision of water for human consumption and for agriculture, through small dams, wells, bore-holes and irrigation schemes; propagation and distribution of improved varieties of seed, fertilizer and pesticide; the introduction of simple but modern agricultural techniques; storage schemes for wheat, fish, fruit grain, fertilizer; training of farmers and agricultural technicians; livestock and fisheries development schemes; family health and nutrition projects; child care services, including pre-school child protection, day care services, mother and child care clinics; the encouragement of co-operatives and more effective marketing schemes; the setting up of loans and credit societies for productive purposes; and the modernization of traditional crafts and industries.

The main purpose of this Directory is to draw the attention of African Governments to the simple types of projects which are being undertaken in their respective (and other) countries, to meet the basic needs of the rural communities. It is my hope that the international voluntary agencies, the various organs in the United Nations system and others will also find the information provided in this Directory useful.

It is also my hope that, with the strengthening of the ECA's relation with voluntary agencies and through its advisory field services, it would be possible to promote a more effective co-operation both among the voluntary agencies, the ECA and other United Nations organs, and with the African Governments, in order to ensure that the projects have a greater impact at the national and regional levels.

The valuable assistance given in the compilation of this Directory, by the voluntary agencies themselves, and by other organizations and individuals, is greatly appreciated. The ECA will be happy to receive any alterations, corrections, etc., from the voluntary agencies in respect of the material contained in this document, so that they could be considered for incorporation in the subsequent issue.

Economic Commission for Africa

INTRODUCTION

Origin of the Directory

1. Resolution 197(IX) of the ninth session (February 1969) of the Economic Commission for Africa requests the secretariat of the Commission, inter alia :

"to promote co-ordination of the work of the ECA, the specialized agencies of the United Nations and UNICEF and other organizations having rural development programmes in Africa, in order to secure maximum impact of these programmes on the social and economic progress of the region".

2. The Symposium on Rural Development in Africa in the 1970s, which was held in Addis Ababa in August 1971, was one response to the Commission resolution 197(IX). Others had included the Africa Regional Conference on the Integrated Approach to Rural Development (Moshi, Tanzania, October 1969); the Central Africa Sub-Regional Seminar on the Development of Rural Life and Institutions (Libreville, Gabon, December 1969); and the Expert Group Meeting on Development of Rural Life and Institutions in West Africa (Accra, Ghana, July 1970).

3. A Provisional Directory of the Activities of International Voluntary Agencies in Rural Development in Africa was specially compiled by the Economic Commission for Africa, in order to facilitate the work of the Addis Ababa Symposium. Contained in five separate volumes 1/, and arranged in Parts I and II, it presented a survey of the scope and nature of activities of all the international agencies which were invited to participate in the Symposium. There was general agreement at the Symposium that the ECA should be encouraged to proceed with the production of such a regional Directory, possibly at two-yearly intervals; and that the voluntary agencies would, on a purely voluntary basis, supply further information.

Voluntary agencies included

4. Information is included on international voluntary agencies which have programmes in rural development in Africa and with which the ECA is already in contact for various purposes. Future editions of the Directory will include information on other international voluntary agencies working in rural areas in Africa, if this information is brought to the notice of ECA.

1/ E/CN.14/SWCD/61; and Add. 1-4

5. The agencies included fall into three major categories :

- (i) those providing research facilities, co-ordinating the work of other agencies or promoting rural development for member organizations;
- (ii) those which collect funds and distribute them through existing channels, operating at the national level;
- (iii) agencies working directly at the national level, or through national branches or local committees.

NOTE : Some agencies operate in more than one category.
