ANNEX

Final statement Of the sixth session of the InterAction Council held in Moscow from 17 to 19 May 1988

1. At the invitation of thr authorities of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the InterAction Council met in Moscow from 17 to 19 May 1988. The session was devoted to thr overall theme:

PREPARINGFORTHETWENTY-FIRSTCENTURY

a. At the beginning of this century, world population ranged romewhere between 1.5 end 2 billion, In 1999, just • loven years from now, world population will have reached the astronomical number of 6 billion, requiring food, health, shelter, energy, education and employment. It is time to consider the necessary steps to be trkrn during the 1990's to bring about a more equitable and stable world then the one we have today.

2. We enter into the 1990's facing  $\bullet$  plague which may prove to be the worst'of modern times. AIDS not only threatens human lives but also could rend the fabric of international relations which has developed gradually through centuries. In other areas of health care, progress hu been  $\bullet$  chiovod under international suspices. We commend in particular intensified support for the programme of Universal Child Immunization and we call on all governments to continue and enlarge the efforts to roach all children of the world.

4. The pursuit of happiness, • conuaic growth, physical hralth of unkind u well as the survival of a nature to which we are physically and socially adjusted hinges on the solution of complex ecological problems, among which the energy • upply and global deforestation - which will lead to disastrous climatic changes - rank high,

5. These problems have acquired a strategic quality. They transcend national boundaries. They cannot be rolved by nation states individurly and In isolation from each other. From now on, rll peoples are living in interdependence. Therefore, the 1990's must be a decade of multilateral approaches and international solutions if we are to prepare ourselves for the twenty-first century.

I. THREATS TO THE ENVIRONMENT

6. Based on the findings of a High-level Export Group on Global Deforestation Trends, convened by the InterAction Council in January 1988 in Lisbon, we are convinced that indiscriminate deforestation and its effects on climate and environment will present one of the major problems of the twenty-Cirrt century. Already today, it is an established scientific fact that the utwlly reinforcing trends of burning of ever higher amounts of hydrocarbons and global deforestation have induced climatic changes described as the so-called "greenhouse effect". Governments rhwld be prepared to apply risk evaluation to all energy sources, for example for Possil fuel-based and nuclear-bared energy, and to recognize that a call for an increase in fossil furl-barred energy is undesirable.

7. The InterAction Council call upon the Secretary-General of the United Nations to place this question on the agenda of the next session of the General Assembly with a view to assessing tha present degree of oporational security of nuclear power plantr and to evaluating the state of nuclear waste disposal. Furthermore, we rtrongly endorse all regional endeavours to roach more understanding of, and rolutionr to,  $\bullet$  nvironmontal problems.

II. THE WORLD ECONOMY OF THE 1990'S

8. The dacada of tha 1980's will rnd in dramatic imbalances among thr industrialized countries as wall as between creditor and drbtor countries. Indeed, rinca the creation of the InterAction Council in 1983, the United state8 her transformed itself from thr biggort creditor to the biggort not drbtor country of the world. During the same period, the debt aggregate of the doveloping countries har goubled to US$ 1.2 trillion. The debt burden, therefore, has become unbearable for most debtor countries in the Third World.

9. We are convinced that further postponement of a radical rolution to Third World debt - which has been proposed by them council rinca 1984 undar the principle of burden-sharing - will disrupt global financial relations, increase tensions, missery and inrtability of societies and governments in developing countries and prove datrimantal to other parties Involved. Concrato co-operation on the rartructuring of the economies of the low-income counttier may lay the foundation for future Improvement.

10. On the other hand, to leave the United States debt problem unrolved increace the risk of new inflation and economic braakdown. We, therefore, emphasize the urgency of adjustment policies on trade and finance. We are convinced that growth is the pro-condition for there adjuatment processes.

11. The InterAction Council Is deeply worried by the magnitude of the adjustments needed to balance International, trad. Increasing charee of global trade are distorted by protectionist measures. Belance of payments policies end strategies to cope with the debt problem are vital to facilitate the neceeeary adjurtment processes. We, rnerefore, urge a thorough survey of the ongoing Uruguay Round of GATT by the end of this year to enhance steps towards dismentling protectionism.

12. The United States, the European Community and Japan heve engaged in costly and devartating agricultural protectionist policies. There is widespread concern that the free internal market of Europe envisaged for 1992 might well trigger new protectionist acts. The new economic entity ham a great potential of contributing positively to the world economy, but in order for that potential to be realized the pursuit of liberal trade policies is no lure than • acential.

13. To prevent the emergence of new imbalances In the next decade, the InterAction Council is convinced of the need to establish norms for balance of payments policies. These norms rhould provide for regulations that would avoid excessive deficits and surpluses. They should also imply a commitment of the rich countries to transfer part of the savings to developing countries. In particular, Japan, being the biggest creditor country, should seek to Increase dramatically her contribution to official davelopment aid. To bring about this set of norms, we call for an international dialogua to which the International Monetary Fund should contribute constructively.

14. A new international monetary arrangement should be empowered to exercise a more • ff@ctiv@ disciplinary function and should apply equally to all participanta of the international currency market.

13. The InterAction Council is concerned by the tendency to solve monetary and trade problems through bilateral arrangements and by the weakening of the indispensable multilateral framework. Do political leaders understand that meaningful solutions require multilateral approacher?

16. We strongly believe that the development of reserve currencies in addition to the United States Dollar would greatly facilitate the improvement of international equilibria. We are convinced that, in the long run, there should be more than just one currency to bear the brunt of global economic growth. Are policy-makers in Japan prepared to meet this challenge? Are the leaders of the European Community aware of the need to develop a European monetary unit (ECU) that will be capable of also becoming a world reserve currency?

17. The past two decade8 have been characterized not only by serious economic Imbalances in current accounts but also by a series of tremendous economic shocks, e.g. the two oil price explonionr of the 1970's and the obvious vulnerability of the global money and stock markets. The industrialized countries as well as the developing countries have not been able to absorb these shocks in a satisfactory manner.

18. Leaders of the Third World must be conscious that disciplined economic and financial management is a prerequisite for increased assistance and credit confidence. Therefore, they muet assume a share of responsibility for a successful and open economic policy, preventing the misuse of resources and unnecessary military expenditures.

19. The 1990'8 will foreseeably be characterized by continuous rapid changes: In the fields of technology, of market competition, of energy. Are political leaders decided to take the necessary actions In order to bring about more flexibility in their national economies and abolish market rigidities? Are they prepared to search for a new balance of social and economic needs, a new balance between the principles of equity and efficiency?

20. The 1990's will be increasingly characterized by the growth of interdependence among nations, This calls for better co-ordination of macro-economic policies of major economies and joint international action to create a secure economic environment. We are aware that this process will face the resistance of many vested interests. We nevertheless call for courageous leadership in the interest of the long-term benefits to ail mankind.

III. THE STRATEGIC PANORAMA OF THE WORLD IN THE 1990'S

21. We share the cautious optimism stemming from the resumption of summit talks between the United States and the USSR. The agreement .on intermediate nuclear forces, which the InterAction Council has advocated since 1983, eliminates for the first time an entire class of weapons. We welcome it as a first constructive step towards a reduction of nuclear weapons.

22. The leaders of both powers must now build on this foundation, de-ideolosize international relations and respond to the economic imperatives confronting both economies. During the next decade imgaination, leadership and political will are required to achieve security at lower levels of armaments.

23. The United States and the USSR bear a special responsibility to apply fully and observe strictly the Treatv on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT). Yet, the growing number of countries possessing a nuclear capability increases the prospect of a regional nuclear conflict. Can discussions begin on how to reduce this dreadful threat?

24. The ABM Treaty between the United States and the USSR is a centerplece in preventing a destabilizing additional arms race in outer space. We again urge both parties to stand by the ABM Treaty. They must urgently settle on an agreed interpretation and application of it and on "offensive" and "defensive" postures, thereby strengthening the Treaty.

25. The very existence of nuclear weapons has imposed caution on the nuclear powers and their allies. Developments in the area of strategic defence and the emergence of new military doctrines require greater clarity. Talks on military doctrines may help bring about a better mutual understanding of strategic intentions and thus reduce the likelihood of conflict. We call on the countries concerned to expand on their initial discussions.

26. The prospect of a cut by 50 per cent in strategic weapons by the United States and the USSR should trigger preliminary work for a succession of strategic arms reductions. What is then the role of European strategic forces? What further cuts may induce China, the United Kingdom and France to 'join in a multilateral conference among all nuclear powers to reduce existing nuclear forces? May we reach a point at which the nuclear weapons on each side could become symbolic deterrents?

27. Efforts to reduce conventional forces in Europe may require the application of asymmetries, both in terms of redeployment and destruction of hardware and reduction of troops, so as to reach parities on lower levels than hitherto.

28. At least sixteen countries currently possess chemical weapons. Will these countries, on a priority basis, accede to a comprehensive bar, on chemical weapons and abandon modernization?

29. The policies of perestroika and glasnost pursued by thr Soviet Union may lead to a new balance in the claim DOT OF THE political and military commitments. DO these policies imply a now strategy approach to co-operation with thr West in tackling the challenges Of thr 1990'83 Will they entail a lesser O IPph8818 On ideological differences? What is meant by the notion of a "common home" (M.S. Gorbachev) in Burops and also in thr Pacific?

30. The Pacific Basin, including China and Japan, is forecast to account for as much as 50 per cent of world CNP by the end of tha century. The sheer  $\bullet$  onomic power of Japan is bound to have political and strategic consequences.

31. We do not think it wise to put pressure on Japan to increase it8 military spending. Japan, in  $\bullet$  b8OlUtO terms, is already on8 Of the largest defence spenders with unknown implication8 for the strategic balance which is of interest to all global powers.

32. The competitive supply of weapons to all regions causes increasing instability in a number of regions. Can a fresh effort be made to roach agreement on the supply of arms to developing countries which drain8 resources sorely required for development purposes?

33. The future of East-West relations should not rest entirely on arms control. A dialogue should build on policy stability less affected by changes in leadership. The agreement on Afghanistan is first, welcome step and ha8 positive repercussions beyond the immediate relations between the two global powers. Is the United States prepared to refrain from delivering further weapons to forces opposed to the Government of Afghanistan?

34. We enjoin thr leaders of the United States and the USSR to co-operate in bringing about, inducing, mediating or oven imposing peaceful solutions to regional conflicts to the Iran-Iraq war, thr Middle East, Southern Africa, the Horn of Africa, Central America and South-East Asia.

- We ark for an early withdrawal of foreign troop8 fice Kampuchea,

• Will leaders of countries with influence over the parties to the conflict In the Sudan be prepared to join hand8 and stop thr military confrontation?

- Are the leaders of the industrialized nations now ready to impose economic sanctions against the Republic Of South Africa as a signal of world disapproval of the system of apartheid and to demonstrate that these countries support the struggle for human rights? Thr InterAction Council believer that thr International community must begin to address itself to the prospects Of a non-racial, post-apartheid Youth Africa.

- For how long will the industrialized countries allow economic and military destabilization of neighboring countries by South Africa with Impunity? Are the western countries prepared to step up significantly their humanitarian, economic and non-lethal rid in order to strengthen the resilience of the countrior subject to destabilization? To that • ffoct, will the industrialized nation8 be ready to join immediately in thr financing of a massive multilateral • 88irtanco programme?

35. Ten years ago, the United Nation8 Security Council adopted Resolution 433 providing for a process loading to thr independence of Namibia. What measures are the Western countrior prepared to take, together with other members of the Security council, to ensure thr ● arly and Cull implementation of this rrsolution?

36. The InterAction Council condemns any act of terrorism. We regret the disparity which has arisen between countrior as to the best way to  $\bullet$  ddr.88 the scourge of terrorism which involves the holding of innocent hostages. Cannot discussions be launched among Governments to arrive at a now consensus, in the light of experience, on how to deal with, and restrain, terrorism?

37. Since a now atmosphere prevails in international relations, • Spocially between the United States and the USSR, thr time is propitious to re-examine the rolr of the United Nations in tho coming decade and to turn II, with the participation of all Member States, into a more successful organization than it has boon.

Are thr leaders of all countries, especially of the permanent members of thr Security Council, prepared to undertake efforts to achieve a fresh start in using the United Nation8 in solving problems and conf lictr?
