Chapter I

Matters calling for action by or brought to the attention of the General Assembly

In 2002, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolutions and decisions that call for action by the General Assembly. The relevant paragraphs of those resolutions and decisions are summarized below.

Adoption of the agenda and other organizational matters

Enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

By decision 2002/288, the Council recommended that the General Assembly take a decision at its fifty-seventh session on the question of enlarging the membership of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from 61 to 64 States.

The contribution of human resources development, including in the areas of health and education, to the process of development

Draft ministerial declaration of the high-level segment submitted by the President of the Council on the basis of informal consultations

The Council adopted the draft ministerial declaration of the high-level segment which stressed the pivotal role of the Council in maintaining the focus on implementation and financing for human resource development as part of its responsibilities in the integrated and coordinated follow-up of major United Nations conferences and summits, and called upon the Council to mobilize and promote a coordinated action by the United Nations system for implementing the declaration, which was being submitted to the General Assembly as a contribution to the follow-up to the major United Nations conferences and summits, including the Millennium Summit.

Strengthening further the Economic and Social Council, building on its recent achievements, to help it fulfil the role ascribed to it in the Charter of the United Nations as contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration

Strengthening further the Economic and Social Council, building on its recent achievements, to help it fulfil the role ascribed to it in the Charter of the United Nations as contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration

The Council adopted the agreed conclusions 2002/1 of its coordination segment and forwarded those agreed conclusions to the General Assembly for its appropriate action, stressing therein the importance of a more effective use of the existing structure, that is to say, the Assembly, and the Council and its subsidiary machinery, for a coordinated and integrated follow-up to and implementation of the commitments agreed at the Millennium Summit and other major United Nations conferences and summits, so as to avoid overlap and redundancy and enhance effectiveness of actions at all levels. The Council also agreed that the items considered in its general segment should be streamlined, in particular by transmitting to the Assembly items more appropriately considered by the Assembly and avoiding addressing the same issues in more than one segment, unless that was specifically decided. The Council stated that, at the coordination segment of its substantive session of 2003, it would benefit from the Assembly's discussion on strengthening the organization.

Special economic, humanitarian and disaster relief assistance

Strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations

By resolution 2002/32, the Council requested the Secretary-General to continue progress on the directories referred to in General Assembly resolution 56/103 of 14 December 2001 and to reflect the progress made in the implementation of and follow-up to that resolution in his next report to the Council and the Assembly on the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations.

13. The Managing Director of IMF, the Managing Director of the World Bank and the Senior Adviser of the World Trade Organization made concluding statements.
14. The President of the Council made concluding remarks.
15. The Secretariat subsequently circulated for information the President's summary of the special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization (E/2002/67). The text read as follows:

“I. Background

“1. The General Assembly, in annex I, paragraph 88, of its resolution 50/227 on revitalizing the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, recommended that the Economic and Social Council periodically schedule a high-level special meeting following the semi-annual meetings of the Bretton Woods institutions. As a result, starting in 1998, the Council has held high-level special meetings with the Bretton Woods institutions annually.

“2. The fifth special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization was held on 22 April 2002. The theme of the meeting was: “Dialogue on the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development and of the meetings of the Development Committee and the International Monetary and Financial Committee”. The Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development,¹ adopted in March 2002, had assigned a specific role to these meetings in the follow-up process. This meeting, held just one month after the Conference, offered the first opportunity to lay down the foundation for “staying engaged” as called for in the Monterrey Consensus. The event brought together in the Council policy makers in the areas of finance and monetary issues, development cooperation and foreign affairs, as well as representatives of civil society and the private sector.

“3. The President of the Council chaired the meeting. The Secretary-General made an opening statement. This was followed by the statements of Trevor Manuel, Chairperson of the Development Committee and Minister of Finance of South Africa, Eduardo Aninat, Deputy Managing Director of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), speaking on behalf of the Chairman of the International Monetary and Financial Committee, and Eduardo Sojo Garza-Aldape, Head of the Office of the Presidency for Public Policies of Mexico. To facilitate an interactive debate, the meeting broke up into two simultaneous round tables for part of the event, chaired by Gert Rosenthal, Ambassador of Guatemala, and Dumisani Shadrack Kumalo, Ambassador of South Africa, Vice-Presidents of the Council. At the resumed plenary meeting, after a brief summary by the two round-table chairpersons, Mr. Aninat, Shengman Zhang, Managing Director, World Bank, and Nacer Benjeloun-Touimi, Senior Adviser, World Trade Organization, made concluding comments. A background note by the Secretary-General on the dialogue on the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development and of the meetings of the Development Committee and the International Monetary and Financial Committee (E/2002/13) was submitted to facilitate the discussion.

“4. The present document provides a synopsis of the meeting. It summarizes the salient points and main aspects of the statements that were made and the exchanges of views that took place. The purpose of this summary is to contribute to the preparation of future meetings and to encourage deeper discussion of the specific proposals reflected.

“II. Development and the world economic situation: current issues

“5. In the view of most participants, global economic prospects were improving markedly. Yet it was pointed out that many questions remained regarding the strength of the recovery, its breadth across regions and its sustainability. There also appeared to be agreement that a measure of caution was necessary since non-oil commodity prices were still depressed, affecting prospects in many developing countries; the Japanese economy remained weak; large imbalances among advanced economies persisted; and the conflict in the Middle East was fuelling increasing uncertainties.

“6. According to the International Monetary and Financial Committee, which had met only two days before, the challenge for policy makers now was to help foster the recovery that was under way and try to ensure that all regions benefited. In this regard, developed and developing countries were expected to pursue structural and macroeconomic policies to improve economic flexibility and enhance resilience. Such policies would also contribute to reducing the persistent imbalances among the more advanced countries.

“7. Many participants stressed that in the medium to long term, international trade held the key for rapid development in most developing countries, for raising incomes and for attaining the millennium development goal of halving poverty by 2015 (see A/56/326, annex, target 1). An open, rule-based, equitable and transparent international trade system was necessary. The prospect of a true development round had emerged at Doha, but concrete actions could be taken even before the new round takes place. The “Everything but arms” initiative undertaken by the European Union (EU) to benefit least developed countries had significantly improved trade prospects for these countries. Many participants argued that developed countries should further reduce, without delay, trade barriers and trade distorting subsidies affecting other countries. It was felt that such measures would increase market access and promote economic growth in a large number of developing and transition countries.

“8. In many African countries, widespread poverty, the prevalence of human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) and the risks of famine were central issues. They had to be tackled by major efforts from the countries themselves with the assistance of the international community. Many delegations stressed that the New Partnership for Africa’s Development constituted an important step forward. The Partnership provided a comprehensive strategy for economic and social development. It had been given decisive support in the Monterrey Consensus (para. 6) and had received strong endorsement from the Development Committee the previous day.

“9. Some of the principles that were highlighted included country ownership, together with the joint cooperative efforts of IMF and the World Bank and other partners to implement the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (PRSP) approach. It was felt that these provided an opportunity to improve the situation and set the foundations for long-term development in low-income countries. In this endeavour, the support of the Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility (PRGF) at IMF could prove critical for many African countries, as well as for other low-income developing countries. There was widespread agreement that education was the most decisive factor in the long term to achieve sustainable development. Accordingly, it should be a top priority in a country’s national strategy. The previous day, the Development Committee had strongly endorsed an action plan presented by the World Bank to help make primary education a reality for all children by 2015 and accelerate the process. The Committee had also called upon the relevant stakeholders to strengthen their efforts to achieve the millennium development goal on gender equality in primary and secondary education by 2005 (see A/56/326, annex, target 4).

“10. Progress achieved by the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative had been tempered, according to several participants, by the small number of countries that had reached the completion point. In some cases, the question of debt sustainability of countries receiving debt relief remained open. It was noted that more flexibility in the application of the framework, as well as all creditors’ contributing a fair share of the relief, would be needed to further progress in the HIPC Initiative. The Development Committee intended to review the Initiative and the question of sustainability at the fall meeting. Regarding the debt of middle-income countries, IMF had been considering approaches to sovereign debt restructuring to allow for more timely and equitable resolution of debt problems. Several participants welcomed efforts in this area.

“11. With respect to crisis prevention, which remains a top priority for the Fund, the institution was focusing its work on strengthened surveillance in all countries, financial sector monitoring, fostering transparency and the adoption of standards and codes. All these tasks were particularly important at a time when the world economy was beset by heightened uncertainties.

“III. The financing for development process and the Monterrey Consensus

“12. Participants welcomed the approach to international policy-making established in the financing for development process as it signalled an important new form of engagement. Greater coordination and increased cooperation among ministries of finance, trade, foreign affairs and development cooperation had emerged as a key facet of the process. Just as important was the much increased and effective cooperation among the United Nations, the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization. The participation of the private sector and civil society in the process had also contributed significantly to enriching the outcome.

“13. The Monterrey Consensus, adopted at the ministerial and summit levels the previous month, was viewed as a major step forward. It had received full endorsement by the International Monetary and Financial Committee and the Development Committee over the prior two days. The policies, instruments and reforms as agreed in the Monterrey Consensus were key to the attainment of the millennium development goals. One significant and tangible immediate achievement was the new pledges by EU and the United States of America, which would lead to a turnaround in aggregate official development assistance (ODA) trends.

“14. The Monterrey Consensus constituted a substantive, holistic and integrated platform on which new and constructive actions could be built in the future. Coherence of the international monetary, financial and trade systems was a major theme, as was the increased participation of developing countries in global economic policy-making. Progress was important on all these fronts.

“15. The nature of the process leading to Monterrey and the “spirit of Monterrey” had contributed to a successful conference in March 2002. It was important to preserve the approach in the critical task beginning now: the implementation stage. Lessons of that approach were also relevant for the World Summit on Sustainable Development to be held soon (26 August-4 September 2002) in Johannesburg, South Africa. Agreement achieved in November 2001 at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held at Doha, and the success of the International Conference on Financing for Development at Monterrey had greatly advanced the international agenda. The World Summit on Sustainable Development offered an additional opportunity for further progress, inter alia, in the social and environmental areas. If the potential of the Summit did indeed materialize at Johannesburg, the international community would take a major and decisive step towards the full realization of the sustainable development and poverty eradication goals of the United Nations Millennium Declaration.²

“IV. Implementing the Monterrey Consensus

“16. According to many participants, the main challenge now was to translate the positive spirit that had led to the Monterrey Consensus into meaningful implementation. A dynamic implementation process should continue to build bridges among global development, finance and trade deliberations. Several delegates stated that it was necessary to move from principles to concrete action. The Monterrey Consensus was based on partnership with shared responsibilities and mutual accountability, as well as an inclusive approach that needed to be carried forward. It was, in the view of one participant, “a performance contract”.

“17. It was pointed out that implementation of the Monterrey Consensus required both effective national and international policies and operational effectiveness of economic cooperation strategies and programmes. Sound national policies in developing countries should be based on country ownership. Several participants voiced concern that capacity constraints could severely limit developing countries’ ability to assume ownership and effectively implement programmes and policies. In this regard, speakers stressed that increased technical assistance for capacity-building in developing countries was necessary, along with increased market access in developed countries, and sufficient and well-coordinated external support.

“18. Coherence and coordination between recipient and donor countries, among donor countries and between donors and multilateral financial institutions in support of national strategies were identified as important steps in strengthening ownership of policies and harmonization of procedures of development assistance. It was essential to streamline requirements and improve coordination of disbursement and delivery mechanisms in order to minimize the burden of compliance on the recipient countries, moving from conditionality to partnership and thus to more flexible approaches. In this context, a number of speakers highlighted the PRSP approach based on strong national ownership, broad-based participation in policy design and monitoring, and strengthened national and international partnerships. Regional initiatives, such as the New Partnership for Africa’s Development, among Governments, the private sector, civil society and development partners were felt to hold great potential. At the same time, several speakers stressed that care should be taken not to duplicate processes that were already taking place elsewhere.

“19. Improved policy coherence and enhanced cooperation at the intergovernmental level were also seen as an important element in effective implementation. Enhanced cooperation among the United Nations, the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, at both intergovernmental and secretariat levels, in the financing for development process should continue and be strengthened in the implementation of the Monterrey Consensus. The increasing engagement of the World Trade Organization was considered particularly important. At the international level, the Council was deemed a natural forum for such a follow-up, in view of its capacity to involve all development stakeholders, including the various United Nations funds and programmes, the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, representatives from civil society and the business sector.

“20. Participants emphasized the need to develop benchmarks and monitor progress in development programmes at the national, regional and international levels, involving all relevant actors. It was underlined that measurable results were essential and strategies had to stress outcomes rather than processes. This was particularly important for effective social programmes and policies focusing on the poor. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) was seen as playing a major role in capacity-building and monitoring of progress in implementation at the country level.

“21. All development goals needed to be matched with clear and measurable programmes of action that made the term “aid effectiveness” meaningful. These included financial estimates and commitments, and effective and sufficiently funded capacity-building programmes. In this regard, several participants stressed that it was essential to consider how the level of ODA of 0.7 per cent of gross national product (GNP) could be reached. Others noted that some of the broad commitments made at Monterrey needed to be finalized, especially the thirteenth replenishment of the International Development Association (IDA) and the question of grants versus loans.

“22. Studies on innovative sources of finance remained important. Several participants called for the swift implementation of the Fourth Amendment of the IMF Articles of Agreement on the special one-time allocation of special drawing rights (SDRs) and urged those countries that had not done so to ratify promptly the Fourth Amendment. They also encouraged developed countries to donate the increase in their allotment to an international development fund.

“V. Specific proposals

“23. The need to work out mechanisms for implementation of the commitments agreed in Monterrey was emphasized by many speakers. While no agreements were reached — nor, indeed, sought — a number of specific proposals were put forward by individual participants, in particular regarding modalities to make the outcome of the future spring meetings of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization more effective and results-oriented.

“24. In this regard, there was broad recognition that future joint meetings would need to be intensively prepared by exchanges among the Council and the Boards of IMF, World Bank and the World Trade Organization and among the related secretariats. One specific proposal was to set up a contact group, somewhat akin to the 15-member Bureau of the Preparatory Committee for the International Conference on Financing for Development. A series of working groups at the intergovernmental level could be another option. Many participants stressed that the preparatory exchanges should identify issues to be addressed in future meetings.

“25. Another proposal was for future meetings to focus on the follow-up of the Monterrey Conference, covering two of the six themes of financing for development each year, on the basis of reports on implementation to be provided before the annual spring meeting by all relevant stakeholders. A review of institutional cooperation in specific areas was suggested as one element for future consideration. Other issues suggested for consideration included policy coherence and global economic governance, education, health, the Doha Developmental Agenda, the international financial architecture, capacity-building, ODA, foreign direct investment (FDI) and external debt.

“26. To ensure the coherence of agendas at the intergovernmental and inter-agency levels, it was further stated that a coordinating mechanism should be considered through which the secretariats would work together. The United Nations, the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization could prepare joint reports on specific and sectoral issues. The inclusive approach of Monterrey — engaging the participation of different ministries and civil society and the business sector — should be kept in mind with a view to devising modalities to adopt such an approach.

“27. Some speakers suggested that the follow-up process should include a plan of action, or a “road map”, which would specify various performance benchmarks and indicators for all relevant stakeholders and include a time frame for implementation. Some speakers also regarded the Council’s meeting as being too short and needing a full day. Others mentioned that mechanisms for the monitoring of implementation outcomes for the millennium development goals in developing and transition countries should be promptly put in place, with a central role given to UNDP at the country level. Monitoring at the regional level was also deemed to be important and the establishment of peer reviews at this level was advocated.

“28. One delegation reiterated the desirability of creating an economic security council, whose functions would include ensuring a proper management of common public goods.”

Ministerial declaration of the high-level segment submitted by the President of the Council

The contribution of human resources development, including in the areas of health and education, to the process of development

“We, the Ministers and Heads of Delegations participating in the high-level segment of the substantive session of 2002 of the Economic and Social Council, held from 1 to 3 July 2002, having considered the theme ‘The contribution of human resources development, including in the areas of health and education, to the process of development’, and the report of the Secretary-General on the subject,¹ as well as the contribution of civil society, inter alia, through the NGO Forum, have adopted the following declaration.

“1. We reaffirm that poverty eradication and sustainable development are the great ethical and human imperatives of our time. We reaffirm the right of everyone to education and that the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health is one of the fundamental rights of every human being, without distinction of race, religion, political belief, economic or social condition.

“2. We also reaffirm our commitment to the full and timely implementation of the goals, targets and commitments of the major United Nations conferences and summits and their follow-up in the areas of both health and education, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration.²

“3. We recognize that human resources development is a fundamental aspect of poverty eradication and vital to the process of sustainable development, contributing to sustained economic growth, social development and environmental protection. Health and education are in turn essential to human resources development and should be fully integrated into macroeconomic policies, including poverty reduction initiatives, and should accordingly be prioritized in national budgetary allocations to health and education.

“4. We recognize the important role of health and education professionals in all countries and their need to upgrade their skills. Training and retention of health and education professionals are a major challenge, in particular in developing countries.

“5. We recognize that people living in poverty must be placed at the centre of the human resources development process and encourage their participation in decision-making.

“6. We recognize that better health and education go hand in hand, with progress in one area reinforcing progress in the other. To take advantage of that synergy, a multisectoral approach is needed. The mutually beneficial effects of health, education and other capacity-building approaches for development outcomes should be explicitly considered in the actual design and implementation of development strategies. To that end, we are committed to strengthening efforts at the national and international levels.

“7. Good governance at all levels, sound economic policies, solid democratic institutions, freedom, peace and security, domestic stability, respect for human rights, including the right to development, the rule of law and gender equality are all essential for progress in health and education and mutually reinforcing.

“8. We stress the need for gender mainstreaming in all human resources development policies and programmes to be able to effectively address gender inequalities. Gender equality considerations are essential to the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes. Full and equal access to health care and education is fundamental for the achievement of gender equality. We reaffirm the goals, objectives and commitments contained in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action³ and also in the political declaration and further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session.⁴

“9. We also recognize that human resources development must begin with an investment in children. We call for timely and effective implementation of the declaration and plan of action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-seventh special session.⁵

“10. We reaffirm the need to provide access to effective and equitable primary health-care systems in all communities. We call for the full implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, as adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-sixth special session,⁶ and the other internationally agreed goals and strategies on malaria and tuberculosis. The response to the epidemic must be through integrating prevention, care, support and treatment in a comprehensive approach. Recognizing that such implementation will require far greater human and financial resources (from 7 billion to 10 billion dollars targeted annually by 2005), we resolve to intensify efforts to mobilize those resources through increased allocations from national budgetary resources, increases in bilateral and multilateral assistance and the provision of substantial and additional resources to, inter alia, the Global Fund to Fight HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. Consideration should be given to launching new partnerships and initiatives in such areas as prevention through education for HIV/AIDS and partnerships for affordable essential drugs. Increased attention must be given to maternal and child health and reproductive health.

“11. We strongly encourage strategic research for and the development of necessary drugs and vaccines, particularly against diseases prevalent in developing countries. Increased investments are required in global health research and research capacity in developing countries. We encourage the pharmaceutical industry to make essential drugs, including anti-retrovirals, more widely available and affordable to all who need them in developing countries. Efforts should continue to ensure improved access to medicines and affordable health systems in line with the declaration on the Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and public health adopted at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, held at Doha in November 2001.

“12. We welcome the work of United Nations organizations in addressing drug-resistant malaria. We encourage the stakeholders of the Roll Back Malaria Campaign and the Stop Tuberculosis Initiative to continue and intensify their efforts and call for full international support for their work. We stress the importance of the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunizations, ongoing governmental programmes and other public-private partnerships that are effective in contributing to equitable health outcomes.

“13. We reaffirm the commitments at the World Education Forum in Dakar to the effect that no country seriously committed to Education for All will be thwarted in its achievement of that goal by lack of resources. We will continue to mobilize political and public commitment and resources for Education for All. We recommend an integrated approach reaching beyond basic education, extending from primary to higher and technical and vocational education, and encompassing early childhood development, girls’ education, adult education and lifelong learning, to maximize the impact of education on development and poverty reduction. Alternative or non-formal education can contribute in ways that complement formal education.

“14. We acknowledge that although the developing countries have the primary responsibility for the development of their human resources, the role of the international community and the multilateral institutions is essential in providing assistance in building human resources in developing countries. North-South, South-South and triangular cooperation can play a significant role in meeting the challenges faced by developing countries. We strongly encourage partnership efforts aimed at advancing health and education goals.

“15. We also underline the importance of increasing the access of all people to modern means of communication and information and stress the need to improve access, thereby increasing the benefits of information and communication technologies (ICT) to people in all countries, in particular developing countries. We underline the potential role of ICT in improving health and education services. We invite the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force and the World Summit on the Information Society in 2003 and 2005 to pay particular attention to bringing the benefits of ICT to people in all countries through human resources development.

“16. We call for concerted efforts to significantly increase investments in health and education with the aim of providing access to health care and education to persons living in poverty and vulnerable groups. We recognize that current levels of investment in health and education are inadequate. We urge an increase in resources from all sources to provide adequate and sustained resources for effective programmes.

“17. We recognize that a substantial increase in official development assistance (ODA) and other resources will be required to provide adequate and sustained resources for effective programmes that will improve the quality of and strengthen the necessary delivery systems for health and education. We urge developed countries that have not done so to make concrete efforts towards the target of 0.7 per cent of gross national product (GNP) as ODA to developing countries and 0.15-0.20 per cent of GNP of developed countries as ODA to least developed countries, as reconfirmed at the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, and encourage developing countries to build on progress achieved in ensuring that ODA is used effectively to help achieve development goals and targets. Recipient and donor countries, as well as international institutions, should strive to make ODA more effective.

“18. We recognize that trade is one of the most important sources of fostering development and financing human resource development. A universal, rule-based, open, non-discriminatory and equitable multilateral trading system, as well as meaningful trade liberalization, can substantially stimulate development worldwide. We also agree that external debt relief can play a key role in liberating resources that can be directed towards activities consistent with attaining sustainable growth and development, inter alia, in the areas of health and education. We stress the importance of facilitating access to and transfer of knowledge and technology on concessional, preferential and favourable terms to the developing countries, as mutually agreed, taking into account the need to protect intellectual property rights and the special needs of developing countries, with the objective of enhancing their technological capacities, capabilities, productivity and competitiveness in the world market.

“19. We express strong support for Africa’s new initiative, entitled the New Partnership for Africa’s Development (NEPAD), to achieve, inter alia, human resources development objectives.

“20. We recall the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development, held in Monterrey, Mexico, including the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development.⁷

“21. We call for further efforts to implement the commitments made for implementing the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010,⁸ adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries in Brussels on 20 May 2001, particularly those commitments related to building human and institutional capacities.

“22. We call upon the United Nations system to strengthen its catalytic and supportive role in promoting human resources development in the areas of health and education. To that end, the United Nations system should continue and strengthen its efforts to:

“(a) Support national-, regional- and global-level efforts to integrate human resources development programmes into poverty reduction strategies on the basis of national ownership and priorities;

“(b) Help countries build institutions and local technical capacity;

“(c) Promote human resources development programmes that facilitate the access to ICT in all countries, in particular developing countries, to build digital opportunities;

“(d) Build partnerships with stakeholders based on common goals and strategies and mutual responsibility and commitment and use sector-wide approaches;

“(e) Strengthen mechanisms for disseminating knowledge and good practices for effective development cooperation in human resources development.

“23. We stress the pivotal role of the Council in maintaining the focus on implementation and financing for human resources development as part of its responsibilities in the integrated and coordinated follow-up of major United Nations conferences and summits. We call upon the Council to mobilize and promote a coordinated action by the United Nations system for implementing the present declaration.

“24. We submit this declaration to the General Assembly as a contribution to the follow-up to the major United Nations conferences and summits, including the Millennium Summit.”

Action taken by the Council

7. Under agenda item 4, the Council adopted agreed conclusions 2002/1, resolution 2002/1 and decision 2002/291.

A. Agreed conclusions 2002/1

8. At the 41st meeting, on 26 July, the representative of Finland, on behalf of the Vice-President of the Council, Marjatta Rasi (Finland), introduced draft agreed conclusions (E/2002/L.35) on strengthening further the Council, building on its recent achievements, to help it fulfil the role ascribed to it in the Charter of the United Nations as contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration.

9. At the same meeting, the Council adopted the draft agreed conclusions. The text read as follows:

“Agreed conclusions 2002/1

“1. The Economic and Social Council notes with satisfaction the progress made, as a result of the reforms of recent years, to strengthen its capacity to serve as a central high-level forum for the consideration of major economic, social and related issues, in providing overall guidance and coordination of the United Nations system and overview of its subsidiary bodies.

“2. The Council recognizes that, in order to meet the challenges and opportunities of globalization and sustainable development and to promote the effective implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration¹ and the outcomes of all other major United Nations conferences and summits, it will need to build on those achievements to further strengthen its role and impact.

“3. The Council recognizes that a strengthened Council will be able to carry out its responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations more effectively and contribute to the overall United Nations review of major United Nations conferences and summits.

“4. The Council reiterates that, while each United Nations conference has its thematic unity, major United Nations conferences and summits should be viewed as interlinked and contributing to an integrated framework for the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and a global partnership for development, with the key objectives of poverty eradication, sustained economic growth, sustainable development and improving the living conditions of people everywhere.

“5. The Council stresses the importance of a more effective use of the existing structure, that is to say, the General Assembly, the Council and its subsidiary machinery, for a coordinated and integrated follow-up to and implementation of the commitments agreed at the Millennium Summit and other major United Nations conferences and summits, so as to avoid overlap and redundancy and enhance effectiveness of actions at all levels.

“6. The Council shall continue to carry out, each year, at its coordination segment, a review of cross-cutting themes common to major international conferences and summits. The theme could be related to the theme of the high-level segment, respecting decisions already made by the Council, thus enabling the Council to address both the policy and system-wide coordination aspects of the theme. In making decisions for the related themes for the coordination segment of the following year, the Council should seek to identify themes, inter alia, on new and evolving issues, that will add value to international efforts to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration and the outcomes of all other major United Nations conferences and summits.

“7. The Council reaffirms the need for “staying engaged” and, as stated in paragraph 69 (b) of the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development,² encourages the United Nations, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the World Trade Organization to address issues of coherence, coordination and cooperation, as a follow-up to the Conference, at the spring meeting between the Council and the Bretton Woods institutions. The meeting should include an intergovernmental segment to address an agenda agreed to by the participating organizations, as well as a dialogue with civil society and the private sector.

“8. The Council looks forward to the outcome of the forthcoming World Summit on Sustainable Development, to be held in Johannesburg, South Africa, and will examine the implications of its outcome in its future discussions on the integrated and coordinated follow-up to and implementation of major United Nations conferences and summits.

“9. The Council will work with the organizations of the United Nations system, including financial and trade institutions, to increase collaboration for implementing the goals of major United Nations conferences and summits, using fully its high-level, operational activities of the United Nations for international development cooperation, coordination, humanitarian affairs, and general segments.

“10. The Council underscores that the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits should be fully taken into account, as relevant, for the operational work and country frameworks of United Nations system organizations, in accordance with national development objectives and priorities. The boards of the funds and programmes should ensure that the policy guidance from the General Assembly and the Council, inter alia, on the follow-up to conferences, is translated, as appropriate, into operational guidelines and programmes, which should be kept under review by the Council.

“11. The Council looks forward to regular consultations and coordination among the principal organs of the United Nations in pursuit of their functions.

“12. The Council notes that the General Assembly has called upon all relevant organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to consider, in accordance with their mandates, the recommendations addressed to them in the report of the Secretary-General on the prevention of armed conflict.³ The Council also notes that the Security Council looked forward to further consideration of that report by the Economic and Social Council. The Council further notes that, at its current session, it has adopted a resolution on the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on African Countries Emerging from Conflict.⁴ The Council reiterates its belief that economic growth supportive of poverty eradication and development should be at the core of conflict-prevention strategies. In that context, the Council’s policy guidance role for the work of funds and programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system is important.

“13. In the follow-up to United Nations conferences and summits, the Council shall continue to ensure the harmonization, coordination and coherence of the agendas and work programmes of the functional commissions by promoting a clearer division of labour among them and providing clear policy guidance to them. Such guidance will enable the Council and its subsidiary machinery to serve as a coherent system within which to review progress. The functional commissions should further enhance their role as the main forums for expert follow-up and review of United Nations conferences and summits. The Council invites its functional commissions to provide inputs to the overall theme of the Council’s coordination and high-level segments as they relate to their area of work.

“14. The Council recalls General Assembly resolutions 45/264, 48/162, 50/227 and 52/12 B, which provided for, inter alia, better division of labour between its segments, shorter and more focused sessions, and clearer and action-oriented guidelines for the United Nations system and funds and programmes.

“15. The Council recalls the resolve expressed in the Millennium Declaration, inter alia, to give greater opportunities to the private sector, non-governmental organizations and civil society in general so as to contribute to the realization of United Nations goals and programmes, and in that regard welcomes their increased contribution in recent years to its activities and encourages them to continue contributing to the realization of United Nations goals and programmes, in accordance with the rules of procedure and relevant Council resolutions, as well as General Assembly resolution 50/227.

“16. The Council recognizes that negotiated outcomes in the form of agreed conclusions or resolutions are normally the preferred outcomes for the coordination, humanitarian affairs and operational activities segments. The Council will consider ways and means to enhance the effectiveness of its agreed outcomes as provided for in General Assembly resolution 50/227. When negotiated outcomes are not sought, the Council will consider inviting its Bureau to prepare a factual summary on the basis of consultations with Council members. Timely submission of reports to the Council will allow negotiated outcomes to be negotiated and finalized by the end of June and in any case no later than the last day of each respective segment. The Council further recognizes the need for more effective meetings during and in preparation for its substantive sessions. It invites the Bureau to submit practical proposals to that effect to the Council before the end of 2002.

“17. The Council invites all the concerned specialized agencies, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to participate actively in the coordination segment.

“18. Every year, the Council will hold a two-day interactive meeting, including at a high level, when agreed, on operational activities, as an integral part of the operational activities segment of the substantive session. The interactive meeting will provide an opportunity for policy makers to address issues related to development cooperation. The Council should also hold an interactive dialogue with the heads of funds and programmes on thematic and coordination issues related to operational activities on options and measures aimed at promoting coordination and improving the performance of funds and programmes in the implementation of the outcomes of relevant major United Nations conferences and summits.

“19. The outcomes of the functional commissions should be considered in the general segment on the basis of their reports and the consolidated report on their work, which should identify cross-cutting policy issues, gaps/overlaps, and areas of complementarity and cooperation, focus on substantive issues and highlight coordination issues requiring the Council’s attention within its coordination segment.

“20. The Council agrees that the items considered in its general segment should be streamlined, in particular by transmitting to the General Assembly items more appropriately considered by the Assembly and avoiding addressing the same issues in more than one segment, unless that is specifically decided.

“21. The Council calls for further efforts by its members, its subsidiary machinery and the Secretariat to ensure greater overall coherence among the reports requested and those presented to the Council, and to streamline its documentation. The Secretariat is invited to submit consolidated reports in response to related mandates. The reports of the functional commissions should focus on substantive issues and highlight coordination, coherence and harmonization issues requiring the Council’s attention. The Bureau and the Secretariat should ensure the dissemination of the outcomes of the Council to a broader audience.

“22. The Council will continue to consider ways to strengthen further the Council, building on its recent achievements, to help fulfil the role ascribed to it in the Charter of the United Nations. At the coordination segment of its substantive session of 2003, the Council will benefit from the General Assembly’s discussion on strengthening the organization.

“23. The Council forwards these agreed conclusions to the General Assembly for its appropriate consideration.”
