Arab Declaration on the pursuit of the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals

Cairo, 30 June 2005

Preamble:

We, the Arab Ministers of Social Affairs and Ministers of Planning, meeting at the headquarters of the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States, in the Ministerial Conference on the pursuit of the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals,

On the basis of our belief that mankind is the agent and objective of development and that progress and advancement are conditional upon human welfare and dignity,

Inspired by the Arab, Islamic and human heritage in promoting the dignity of mankind, and safeguarding human rights and defending human progress, achievements and security,

Being aware that the attainment of development in Arab society is an urgent imperative and that the process of modernizing the social structure must be completed without delay,

Conscious of the magnitude of the challenges facing the Arab nation which threaten its stability and cohesion, and mindful of the close ties between Arab countries and of the importance of Arab solidarity and integration and their role in the achievement of development,

Being convinced of the necessity of reviewing and promoting development policies and of directing the course of those policies in the service of mankind, and affirming that Arab development has its basis in the Charter of the League of Arab States and the resolutions of the Arab summit and its specialized ministerial councils and on the charters of joint action and the related strategies, in particular the social action strategy in the Arab States, the strategy for poverty eradication and the charter of social action,

Affirming that a just and comprehensive peace is an essential foundation for the achievement of development and progress and that the establishment of peace requires the complete withdrawal of the occupation of all occupied Arab territories and the establishment of the independent Palestinian State with Jerusalem as its capital in accordance with Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973) and General Assembly resolution 194 (III),

Being committed to international instruments, in particular the Charter of the United Nations, human rights charters, the United Nations Declaration on the Right to Development and the Millennium Declaration of the United Nations,

On the strength of the existing joint cooperation between the Arab Group and other regional groups, including the African Group, the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States and the Group of 77 and China, and in accordance with the content of the Brasilia Declaration and the Doha Declaration to achieve development and realize its objectives,

Affirming the Arab position of commitment to the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, and effective Arab participation in the efforts being made to prepare for the High-Level Summit that is to be organized by the United Nations in September 2005,

We recognize that the Arab States have it in their power to give effect to the Millennium Declaration, to face up to the challenges of achieving the targets of the Millennium Development Goals by 2015 and that the pursuit of the implementation of that process will require the incorporation of the Millennium Development Goals in overall national strategies, plans, targets and policies, and the formulation of a comprehensive development policy that addresses the social aspect through the following:

I. Reducing poverty and the eradication of extreme poverty and hunger:

(a) Poverty eradication in the Arab States within a specific time frame through a multifaceted and integrated approach embracing economic, social and health policies and within a macroeconomic framework, improving the situation of poor families, efforts to implement the Arab strategy for poverty eradication with emphasis on the need for every national strategy to be ready to understand the nature and causes of poverty in each individual State, and the interpenetration of general measures and the multiple aspects of poverty, and the necessity of participation by poor population groups in the challenges and priorities of the programmes aimed at combating poverty.

(b) Devising policies in support of the process of economic development focusing on increasing the rates of investment and preserving an acceptable degree of economic stability and social justice.

(c) Pursuing financial policies that ensure sustainability and avoid discontinuities that are in practice prejudicial to the Millennium Development Goals.

(d) Removing the obstacles that have an adverse impact on development goals, whether legislative, social, institutional or operational, and the effective administration and utilization of internal and external resources and the coordination of activities among all the governmental agencies involved in poverty reduction and the activation of institutional partnership between various strata of society and social forces, while preserving the harmonious functioning of the various partners.

II. Emphasis on the right to and the quality of primary education:

(a) Ensuring equality of opportunity and non-discrimination, making primary education compulsory and available free to all children, enabling them to obtain a good quality education, making the provision of secondary education universal and available to all, taking into account measures to ensure equal opportunities to acquire education, thereby contributing to the attainment of equality of opportunity.

(b) Development of school administration and empowering it to supervise the processes of school enrolment, and efforts to monitor the enrolment of marginalized groups, particularly in education, and adopting the requirements of local communities to the characteristics of the pupils of those areas.

(c) Curriculum development and eliminating all discrimination from educational content.

(d) Affirming that the goals of universal education require the broadening of participation in decision-making and efforts in favour of the adoption of the principle of decentralization, leading to an increase in the interest taken by families and by the local community in the education of their children with a view to improving the quality of the education service.

(e) The promotion of cooperation in the field of education and activation of the work of the relevant Arab regional and subregional organizations and centres, and of the Arab programmes, in order to devise common programmes and legislation, and to make data available and exchange experiences.

III. A commitment to the necessity of eradicating discrimination against women:

(d) Efforts to ensure that women are represented in decision-making centres and advisory councils and propagating the culture of participation through school curricula and school activities.

IV. Emphasis on primary health care:

(a) Regarding all forms of primary health care as a right the services of which are to be enjoyed by all members of society without distinction and making it clear that the eradication of poverty depends on the elimination of its causes, and that the chief benefit is the enjoyment by members of society of a healthy life free from illness and disease.

(b) Devising health programmes that complement development programmes which reflect directly on the health situation, such as teaching, the infrastructure, the combating of poverty and addressing the defects of society, thereby bringing about a reduction in child and mother mortality rates; the State should use all its institutions, with the participation of the private sector and the institutions of civil society, to develop health services.

(c) Support for preventive initiatives and increased focus on dealing with epidemic gastric diseases including malaria, tuberculosis and AIDS in view of the increasing gravity of the AIDS pandemic, and the inclusion of policies to combat it in educational and media programmes and awareness programmes, and the promotion of participation by all sectors of society in dealing with them, as well as enabling poor people to obtain basic medicines.

Taking the necessary measures to ensure that people with disabilities enjoy to the full all rights on an equal basis with other groups in the community in both the public and private fields, including the possibility of obtaining a good education, comprehensive health care and protection of people with disabilities against violence, ill treatment and neglect; the necessary legislation should be drafted to prohibit discrimination against them, to ensure their dignity and to implement and to make effective the Arab Decade for People with Disabilities, taking account of the particularly difficult situation of poor people with disabilities.

VII. Activating worldwide participation on behalf of cooperation and support:

(a) Participation in the worldwide efforts to eradicate poverty and the necessity of enhancing resources and distributing them fairly and effectively in order to ensure the attainment of all the internationally agreed development goals and to eradicate poverty, to ensure that the developed countries fulfil their undertaking to contribute 0.05 per cent of GDP to the least developed countries by 2009, reducing the disparity in levels of economic and social development between the rich and poor countries as well as promoting the receipt by the developing countries, and particularly the least developed countries, of the technical assistance and training necessary to attain the Millennium Development Goals.

(b) Efforts to bridge the digital divide, as a phenomenon with social dimensions, and to establish worldwide partnership in the field of technology based on a shared view of solidarity and development with a view to achieving the Millennium Development Goals and uniting Arab efforts to attain that objective at the second phase of the World Summit on the Information Society which will meet in Tunisia from 16 to 18 November 2005.
