Sixty-third session

Agenda item 105 (k) and (l)

Appointments to fill vacancies in subsidiary organs and other appointments: appointment of the judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal; appointment of the judges of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal

Report of the Internal Justice Council

I. Introduction

1. By its resolutions 61/261 and 62/228, the General Assembly approved the framework for a new system for the internal administration of justice within the United Nations to be introduced as of 1 January 2009. As part of that framework it established the Internal Justice Council to help ensure independence, professionalism and accountability in the new system. In paragraph 37 (b) of its resolution 62/228 the Assembly requires the Council, as one of its primary tasks, to “provide its views and recommendations to the General Assembly on two or three candidates for each vacancy in the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, with due regard to geographical distribution”.

2. The Internal Justice Council derives from a recommendation by the expert Redesign Panel, established by the General Assembly in its resolution 59/283,<sup>1</sup> which proposed an entirely new system for the internal administration of justice, in which professional judges would issue binding tribunal decisions in a first-instance United Nations Dispute Tribunal (unlike previous peer review bodies that only had the power to make non-binding recommendations). An appeal would lie to a newly established United Nations Appeals Tribunal, comprising seven highly experienced judges. The Redesign Panel regarded the independence of the new judges as a key prerequisite for the new system. To ensure the independence of the judges, it suggested the establishment of an Internal Justice Council, which would, inter alia, compile a list of not fewer than three persons eligible to be appointed to each judicial position.<sup>2</sup> The Secretary-General concurred with the Redesign Panel's recommendation concerning the establishment of the Council.

3. With a few amendments, these proposals were accepted by the General Assembly in its resolution 62/228, in which the Assembly provided for the Council to be established by 1 March 2008. The first four members of the Council were duly appointed by the Secretary-General. The distinguished external jurist members were Sinha Basnayake (Sri Lanka, nominated by management) and Geoffrey Robertson QC (United Kingdom, elected by staff) with Maria Vicien-Milburn (Argentina), the current Director of the General Legal Division of the Office of Legal Affairs as the management representative, and Jenny Clift (Australia), the Senior Legal Officer in the International Trade Law Division, Office of Legal Affairs, as the staff representative. These four members agreed on a suitable distinguished jurist who could be recommended to the Secretary-General for appointment as Chair of the Council: Justice Kate O'Regan, of the Constitutional Court of South Africa, who accepted the invitation. The Council held its first meeting in May 2008.

4. Once fully constituted, the Council considered that its first and urgent task must be to identify suitable candidates to recommend to the General Assembly for appointment as judges in the two new Tribunals. In order for the proposed commencement date of 1 January 2009 to be achieved, the Council considered that the judges would have to be selected by the General Assembly during its sixty-third session, before the end of the calendar year 2008. The Council noted that the Assembly had not finalized the statutes to govern both Tribunals. Among other things, the absence of adopted statutes meant that the terms and conditions attaching to the appointment of the judges might change. Nevertheless, after full discussion with relevant staff members in the Secretariat, the Council considered that it should aim to meet the deadline set by the Assembly by ensuring that suitable candidates for appointment were placed before the Assembly at the beginning of the sixty-third session. In all the steps subsequently taken by the Council, candidates were made fully aware of the fact that the two statutes had not yet been adopted, with the result that the terms and conditions of appointment, and the actual appointment date itself, remained uncertain. The Council has undertaken to inform the recommended candidates of progress made by the Assembly in relation to the establishment of the new system for the administration of justice at the United Nations.

5. As the General Assembly had not adopted the statutes for the Tribunals, the Council was guided in its work by paragraph 41 of its resolution 62/228, in which the Assembly endorsed the qualifications for the judges, as set out in paragraphs 58 and 67 of the report of the Secretary-General (A/62/294) and its decision 62/519. The Council also took into account the following conclusions of the Sixth Committee (A/C.5/62/11, annex, appendix I, para. 12), which the Assembly noted in its decision 62/519:

“Judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal shall be of high moral character, have respectively 10 and 15 years of judicial experience in the field of administrative law or its equivalent within their national jurisdiction, and serve strictly in their personal capacity and enjoy full independence. Due consideration should be given to gender and regional balance in the nomination and process for the selection of judges.”

6. The Council considered that the process to identify suitable candidates should ensure the independence, professionalism and accountability of the judges. To that end, the Council decided that a full public process should be instituted to identify suitable candidates. Advertisements for the vacancies were placed in mid-June in The Economist, The International Herald Tribune, Le Monde, Jeune Afrique and the Asia edition of The Wall Street Journal. Vacancy notices were sent for local circulation to all United Nations information centres and United Nations resident coordinators, as well as to the International Court of Justice, the International Criminal Court and international criminal tribunals. The vacancy notice was also placed on the United Nations website. The vacancy notice and a United Nations press release were also sent to legal journals and to judges’ associations; and the Secretary-General informed all permanent representatives to the United Nations of the judicial vacancies. The closing date for applications was 21 July 2008. The text of the Secretary-General’s letter is included in annex I to the present report, and the vacancy notice as attached to that letter in annex II.

7. The Council is pleased to report that 237 applications were received in good order and on time from 55 countries. The distribution of the applications by country is set out in annex III. The only geographical region the Council felt to be somewhat underrepresented was Asia, despite the measures outlined in paragraph 6 that also targeted Asia. There were 177 male candidates and 60 female candidates. Very few candidates were unqualified, and given that candidates for the United Nations Appeals Tribunal required 15 years’ judicial experience and candidates for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal 10, this was an impressive response from experienced sitting judges in jurisdictions around the world. The Council met in New York for several days following the closing date of 21 July, to consider the applications and other material (including sample judgements) supplied by every applicant. This intense scrutiny was necessary to winnow the field down to 41 candidates for final interview. To be short-listed, candidates had to display on paper the qualifications to suggest they would be excellent judges for the new Tribunals. Selections were also made bearing in mind the need for geographical and gender diversity.

8. In order to meet the General Assembly’s timetable, the Council scheduled interviews for the short-listed candidates in The Hague in the first week of September. Before the interviews were held, referees were contacted and written references obtained from two referees for each candidate. In The Hague, candidates were required to write an exacting two-hour examination to test their writing and reasoning abilities, which was followed by an interview lasting 30 to 45 minutes. All candidates attended, except two who had completed their test paper abroad and who were then interviewed by video-link. Following the interviews and with the candidates’ permission, the Council approached the relevant domestic bar associations and the International Bar Association asking for confirmation of the integrity of the candidates.

9. Candidates for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal often had pronounced preferences for one location over another, or for full-time over part-time appointment, and these preferences have influenced the manner in which the Council presents its recommendations. The Council is also aware that the General Assembly will consider the Secretary-General's recommendation to seek three judges to work ad litem for a year on the backlog of cases that have built up pending the transition to the new system. The Council therefore questioned all candidates as to whether they would be willing to accept such a position were it to be offered, and can provide its recommendations in this regard if requested.

10. Below, the Council provides its views and recommendations in respect of the candidates it recommends as suitable for appointment to the seven vacancies for the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, the three full-time positions for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal (in Geneva, Nairobi and New York, respectively) and the two half-time positions for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal. The curriculum vitae of each candidate is attached to the present report in annex IV. The Council has recommended two candidates each for the full-time appointments to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal in Geneva, Nairobi and New York, respectively; four candidates for the two half-time positions for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and 15 candidates for the seven positions on the United Nations Appeals Tribunal.<sup>3</sup> In making its recommendations, the Council has given due consideration to gender and regional balance.<sup>4</sup> It is the Council's view that all the recommended candidates, were they to be appointed, would serve the management and the staff of the United Nations in a manner that would establish the independence, professionalism and accountability of the new system.

II. Profiles of recommended candidates

11. Candidates are listed by position and Tribunal, and then alphabetically by last name.

A. United Nations Dispute Tribunal

1. Geneva

Jean-François Cousin (France), born in 1944

Annex I

Letter dated 6 June 2008 from the Secretary-General to all Permanent Missions to the United Nations

I am writing to you in reference to the positions of judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal.

As you may recall, the General Assembly, in its resolution 62/228 of 22 December 2007, established the basic framework of a new system of administration of justice in the United Nations, to be in place as of 1 January 2009. It will comprise a two-tier formal system with a first instance United Nations Dispute Tribunal and a United Nations Appeals Tribunal as an appellate instance. The United Nations Dispute Tribunal shall be composed of three full-time judges, to be located in New York, Geneva and Nairobi, and two half-time judges. The United Nations Appeals Tribunal shall be composed of seven judges.

By the same resolution, the General Assembly established a five-member Internal Justice Council to, inter alia, provide its views and recommendations to the General Assembly on two or three candidates for each vacancy in the two new Tribunals, and to liaise with the Office of Human Resources Management on issues related to the search for suitable candidates for the positions of judges. Appointments of judges will be made by the General Assembly.

The General Assembly decided that judges for both Tribunals shall be of high moral character and shall have judicial experience in the field of administrative law or its equivalent, within one or more national jurisdictions. Judges are required to have at least 10 years of judicial experience for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and at least 15 years of judicial experience for the United Nations Appeals Tribunal.

With this in mind, the United Nations is soliciting candidates for the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. In order to draw from a wide pool of candidates for both Tribunals, a public vacancy announcement is being issued, calling for interested individuals to submit their applications by 21 July 2008 in order to give sufficient time for the Internal Justice Council to formulate its views and recommendations on candidates, in line with General Assembly resolution 62/228.

I invite Your Excellency's Government to bring the vacancy announcement attached to this letter to the attention of qualified candidates from your country, including female candidates. I would also note that the conditions of service of the judges are subject to further decisions of the General Assembly on the new system of administration of justice in the United Nations, including the final adoption of the statutes of the two Tribunals.

(Signed) Ban Ki-moon

Annex II

Vacancy announcement

Judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal (three full-time and two half-time judges) located in New York, Geneva and Nairobi

Judges of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal (seven judges)

Sessions to be held at dates to be fixed by the rules of the Appeals Tribunal

The United Nations is in the process of establishing a new internal system for the administration of justice to resolve employment-related disputes in cases, for example, of discrimination, harassment, abuse of authority and retaliation for reporting misconduct. The new system, anticipated to commence operation as of 1 January 2009, will include a two-tier judicial system composed of a first instance United Nations Dispute Tribunal (UNDT) and an appellate instance United Nations Appeals Tribunal (UNAT). The United Nations is inviting applications for:

- Three full-time judges, one each in New York, Geneva and Nairobi, to constitute the UNDT;
- Two half-time judges to complement the UNDT (location to be determined);
- Seven part-time judges of the UNAT, based in New York; sessions to be determined by the rules of UNAT.

Persons applying to serve as judges of the Tribunals should be of high moral character. In the case of the UNDT, candidates should have at least 10 years, and in the case of UNAT, 15 years, of judicial experience in the field of administrative law, or the equivalent within one or more national jurisdictions.

The judges shall be appointed by the General Assembly from candidates recommended by the Internal Justice Council, an independent body established by the General Assembly, comprising two members nominated by staff, two nominated by the Administration and an independent chairperson chosen by consensus by the other four members. At the UNDT level, candidates will have to preside over contested trials. At the UNDT and UNAT levels, extensive judgement writing will be required. In identifying candidates for inclusion in the list to be presented to the General Assembly, the Internal Justice Council will give due consideration to questions of geographic and gender balance.

Applications: Interested candidates are invited to submit a cover letter, including the preferred Tribunal and location, and curriculum vitae by e-mail to internaljusticecouncil-application@un.org or by facsimile to + 1-917-367-0524, to be received by 21 July 2008. The curriculum vitae must include: the date of birth, nationality, gender, language skills, contact details, including telephone numbers and an e-mail address at which the candidate can be reached through March 2009, as well as a full career and educational profile, an example of a judgement delivered by the candidate, or a legal opinion or other equivalent written work, and the names and e-mail addresses of two senior legal professionals able to attest to the moral character and standing of the candidate. A working knowledge of English or French is required.

The appointment of all judges is subject to the approval by the General Assembly of the Statutes of the Tribunals, which have not yet been adopted. Delays in that approval may affect the appointment process and proposed dates of commencement. Prospective candidates should be aware that until the Statutes are adopted, the Tribunals will not be constituted and appointments cannot be made.

The Secretary-General has proposed to the General Assembly that the UNDT judges be remunerated at a level equivalent to D-2. (For indicative purposes, the annual net salary levels at D-2, step IV, single rate, including post adjustment, in effect as from 1 May 2008 are as follows: US$ 164,015 (New York), US$ 191,396 (Geneva) and US$ 142,736 (Nairobi). Additional allowances may apply.) The Secretary-General has also proposed to the General Assembly that the UNAT judges receive an honorarium equivalent to that paid to the judges of the International Labour Organization Administrative Tribunal, currently CHF 3,000 for each case for the rapporteur, and CHF 750 for each judge signatory. The final remuneration package for the UNDT and UNAT judges is subject to approval by the General Assembly.

Queries concerning these positions may be addressed to the above e-mail address or fax number.
