Chapter I

Organizational matters

A. Membership

1. In its resolution 43/222 B, the General Assembly decided to retain the Committee on Conferences as a permanent subsidiary organ. Pursuant to the provisions of that resolution, in 2010 the Committee was composed of the following Member States: Argentina, Austria, China, the Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, France, Germany, Japan, Kenya, Malaysia, Mexico, Mozambique, Nigeria, Panama, the Philippines, the Russian Federation, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, the United States of America and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of).¹

B. Officers

2. At its organizational session for 2010 (504th meeting), held on 30 March 2010, the Committee elected the following officers to serve in 2010:

Chair:

Claudia Corti (Argentina)

Vice-Chairs:

Jun Yamada (Japan)

George Morara Orina (Kenya)

Rapporteur:

Barbara Kaudel (Austria)

3. At the same session, the Committee agreed in principle that the Chair would undertake informal consultations with a view to determining the composition of its 2011 Bureau and that the outgoing Chair and members of the Bureau would continue in their capacity until the 2011 Bureau was elected.

C. Organization of work

4. Also at its organizational session, the Committee agreed to follow the guidelines adopted in 1994 and 1995 with regard to its consideration of intersessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences and to meet, as required, to review proposals affecting the schedule of conferences and meetings during sessions of the General Assembly.

5. At the same meeting, the Chair proposed that an additional meeting be held in order for the Committee to review the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012-2013 in its capacity as the oversight body for programme 1: General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management (A/65/6 (Prog. 1)). At the 505th meeting, held on 28 April 2010, the Committee reviewed the proposed strategic framework. The recommendations of the Committee were transmitted in a letter dated 13 May 2010 from the Chair of the Committee on

¹ One Vice-Chair from the Eastern European States is to be appointed, and one member from the Eastern European States is to be appointed (see A/65/107 and A/AC.172/2010/INF/1).

Conferences to the Chair of the Committee for Programme and Coordination and were issued in a note by the Secretariat on the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012-2013: review of part two: biennial programme plan by sectoral, functional and regional bodies (see E/AC.51/2010/CRP.1, annexes I and II).

6. The Committee convened its substantive session from 30 August to 3 September 2010 (506th to 509th meetings).

7. At the organizational session on 30 March, the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management addressed the Committee. At the meeting on 28 April 2010, the Under-Secretary-General introduced the proposed strategic framework (A/65/6 (Prog. 1)). At the opening of the substantive session on 30 August, he introduced the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences (A/65/122). Statements were made by the representatives of Austria, Mexico and the Russian Federation.

D. Programme of work

8. At its organizational session for 2009 (497th meeting), held on 7 April 2009, the Committee requested that the Secretariat submit the draft agenda for 2010 to the Committee at its organizational session for 2010. At its organizational session for 2010, the Committee adopted the agenda (A/AC.172/2010/L.1) and requested that the Secretariat submit a draft agenda for 2011 to the Committee at its organizational session for 2011.

E. Participation of observers

9. Seven Member States and one intergovernmental organization were represented as observers at the organizational and the substantive sessions of the Committee: Bangladesh, Cuba, Egypt, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, and the Organisation Internationale de la Francophonie.

Chapter II

Calendar of conferences and meetings

A. Requests for exceptions to section I, paragraph 7, of General Assembly resolution 40/243

10. At its 506th meeting, on 30 August 2010, the Committee on Conferences considered the sections of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences (A/65/122, sect. II.A.1 and annex I) containing requests for exceptions to section I, paragraph 7, of General Assembly resolution 40/243, by which the Assembly had decided that no subsidiary organ of the Assembly might meet at United Nations Headquarters during a regular session of the Assembly unless explicitly authorized by the Assembly.

B. Conclusions and recommendations

11. The Committee on Conferences recommended that the General Assembly explicitly authorize the following bodies to meet in New York during the main part of its sixty-fifth session, on the understanding that all such meetings would be allocated conference services on an “as available” basis, in such a way that the work of the Assembly and its Main Committees would not be impeded:

- (a) Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People;
- (b) Committee on Relations with the Host Country;
- (c) Disarmament Commission;
- (d) Independent Audit Advisory Committee;
- (e) International Criminal Court: Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute;
- (f) Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

C. Adoption of the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2011, and related matters

Introduction and overview

12. At its 506th meeting, on 30 August 2010, the Committee reviewed the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2011 (A/AC.172/2010/L.2) and considered the relevant sections of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences (A/65/122, paras. 6-8 and annex II). A major prerequisite for the Department to carry out its mandate was clarity regarding dates, duration and modalities for the meeting and documentation requirements of conferences and meetings envisaged so that the required statement of conference-servicing implications and any necessary statement of programme budget implications, could be presented to Member States for consideration. Recalling that the President of the General Assembly had appointed a facilitator to sort out the conflicting mandates of high-level meetings during the opening of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, it was pointed out that for the sixty-sixth regular session, three competing mandates had already been identified in the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2011. The Department would continue its practice of including the conferences and meetings in question in the calendar on the basis of their legislative mandates and would subsequently specify any relevant conference-servicing and programme budget implications, in accordance with rule 153 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

Discussion

13. It was pointed out that prudence was required in determining the length of conferences and sessions, as many delegations faced financial constraints. The proposals for the scheduling of the resumed sessions of the Fifth Committee were noted with appreciation, although disappointment was expressed that the possible options did not include changing the dates of the Committee for Programme and Coordination or the opening of the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council. While it was important for the Secretariat to continue to improve in the area of timely submission of documents, Member States must also be willing to meet the agreed targets for submission.

D. Intersessional departures for 2010 and related matters

Introduction and overview

14. The General Assembly, in its resolution 64/230, approved the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2010 and 2011, as submitted by the Committee on Conferences, and authorized the Committee to make any adjustments that might become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the Assembly at its sixty-fourth session. The calendar was issued as document A/AC.172/2010/2 and Add.1.

15. At its 373rd meeting, on 26 August 1994, the Committee decided that, in future, requests for intersessional departures submitted to the Committee should be reviewed by the Bureau, in consultation with the Secretariat, for subsequent action.

16. At its 379th meeting, on 23 March 1995, the Committee agreed that proposed changes to the calendar that did not have programme budget implications could be dealt with by the Secretariat, in consultation with the Bureau of the Committee.

17. At its substantive session of 1995, the Committee decided that requests for intersessional departures submitted to the Committee that involved a change of venue should be referred to the members for approval. Departures that involved other types of changes, as decided upon by the Committee at its substantive session of 1994, should be reviewed by the Bureau, in consultation with the Secretariat, for subsequent action.

18. The Committee on Conferences approved the requests received in 2010 from the Commission for Social Development and the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations for an additional meeting at the conclusion of their sessions and from the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters for a change of venue from New York to Geneva, and took note of the request of the Fifth Committee at the second resumed session for an additional meeting.

Chapter III

Meetings management: utilization of conference services and facilities

A. Utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities: meeting statistics of United Nations organs and consultations with/letters to bodies concerning utilization of conference-servicing resources

Introduction and overview

19. At its 506th meeting on 30 August 2010, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences containing statistical data and analysis of the planned and actual utilization of conference resources allocated to a core sample of bodies that met in New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi in 2009 (see A/65/122, paras. 10-13 and annex III).

20. The overall utilization factor for all four duty stations in 2009 was 86 per cent (85 per cent in 2008). Meeting cancellations remained high in New York compared to other duty stations. Late cancellations of meetings and cancellation of certain language combinations for interpretation had in some cases caused disruption in capacity-planning.

21. The Committee also heard an oral report by the Chair on her mandate to hold consultations with the four intergovernmental bodies that had utilized less than the benchmark of 80 per cent of their allocated resources for three consecutive years. A meeting was held with the Chair of the Committee on Contributions. As a result of more accurate planning, early cancellations and optimum utilization of time, the Commission on Population and Development and the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations and its Working Group had already improved their utilization factor above the benchmark in 2010. A meeting is scheduled in October with the Chair of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization.

Discussion

22. For Nairobi, the decrease in the utilization factor from 100 per cent in 2008 to 90 per cent in 2009 resulted from more standardized statistical reporting which now recorded time lost as a result of late starts, early endings and cancellations of meetings.

B. Provision of interpretation services to meetings of bodies entitled to meet “as required”

Introduction and overview

23. At the same meeting the Committee also considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the provision of interpretation services to meetings of “as required” bodies (see A/65/122, para. 14 and annex IV). A comparative analysis showed an increase in provision of services in New York to 95 per cent in 2009; for the period 1 January to 31 May 2010, 98 per cent of such requests had been met. For the first time, Geneva was reporting that category of meetings; 95 per cent of the requests for interpretation services had been met in 2009.

C. Provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States

Introduction and overview

24. Also at its 506th meeting, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States (see A/65/122, paras. 15 and 16 and annex V).

Discussion

25. The significant progress being made in provision of services to meetings of regional groups was welcomed. A representative of the Secretariat said that the improvement could be attributed to increased predictability in the meetings of regional groups at the ambassadorial level, which had been a major factor. As soon as the programmes of work for the Security Council and the General Assembly became available, regional groups could be informed of the availability of services, often one or even two days in advance of a planned meeting. One delegation asked for an explanation of the rise in demand in Geneva, resulting in only 61 per cent of requests being met in 2009, as well as for statistics for Nairobi and Vienna. A representative of the Secretariat said that in Geneva, "as required" meetings of the Human Rights Council took priority when allocating available capacity. Nairobi and Vienna did not have available capacity and therefore did not service meetings of regional groupings.

D. Utilization of conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi

Introduction and overview

26. At the same meeting, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning utilization of the conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi (see A/65/122, para. 17). It was noted with satisfaction that in 2009 all meetings of Nairobi-based bodies had been held in Nairobi, in conformity with the headquarters rule.

E. Utilization of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa

Introduction and overview

27. Also at its 506th meeting, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the utilization of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa (see A/65/122, paras. 18 and 19). In 2009, the utilization rate of the conference centre had remained at 76 per cent. Owing to increased competition in the local and regional markets, an improvement in the centre's utilization rate might not be realistically sustainable in the next few years. Marketing activities of the centre included participation in high-profile international conventions and exhibitions. Among new steps being taken to ensure sustainability of the occupancy rate achieved in 2009, the centre had established partnerships with the Addis Ababa Tourism Commission, Ethiopian Airlines and other stakeholders to sell Addis Ababa as a conference and tourism destination.

Discussion

28. Further information was requested on efforts to market the conference centre, the results of the most recent assessment of the condition of the facilities and any timetable for their refurbishment. In addition, it would be helpful to have information on the most recent security assessment, in view of the construction of high-rise buildings that directly face the delegates entrance of the conference centre, and on any remedial measures planned.

Chapter IV

Impact of the capital master plan, strategy IV (phased approach), on meetings held at Headquarters during its implementation

Introduction and overview

29. At its 506th meeting, on 30 August 2010, the Committee on Conferences considered section II.C of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning the impact on meetings held at Headquarters during the implementation of the capital master plan (A/65/122, paras. 20-24). After the relocation of meetings to the North Lawn Building, the Department continued to face limitations in accommodating meetings with large numbers of participants owing to reduced capacity in the rooms and in accommodating ad hoc meeting requests in excess of core activities owing to a reduced number of rooms. As foreseen, there had been a reduction in capacity for parallel meetings and side events. Since not all conference rooms had the same equipment, for instance videoconferencing equipment, it was often necessary to reassign rooms based on last-minute requests for such services. Owing to ongoing construction and closure of access routes, transportation of documents from the Publishing Section to the General Assembly Building and the North Lawn Building posed a safety hazard to staff. Start-up delays in the North Lawn Building, including the absence of telephones and limited podium seating in some rooms and necessary adjustments to voting software, had affected operations as well. The relocation of all staff of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management into eight swing spaces had posed challenges, and some difficulties persisted.

Discussion

30. Several delegations expressed regret at the reduction in capacity for parallel meetings and asked what specific measures were being taken to resolve that issue. Concern was also expressed about the problems encountered with the voting software and when they would be resolved. Regarding availability of documentation, clarification was requested as to whether only documents available electronically could be printed on demand. It was also asked whether the dispersion of the staff of the Department across eight locations had affected the work of the Department. Another concern was expressed on behalf of Department staff about the irregularities in the functioning of both the heating and the air-conditioning systems in the swing spaces and the North Lawn Building. It was pointed out that the situation had a significant impact on the working environment of the staff concerned, to the extent that it was affecting their ability to work. The Secretariat was requested to provide a detailed list of outstanding issues and their status in respect of the North Lawn Building and the Department swing spaces.

31. A representative of the Secretariat said that the Department had not yet faced a situation where core activities had been affected; no official meetings had been cancelled or requests for official meetings refused because of a lack of space, although there was limited space for side events and gallery space. The problems with the voting software had been brought to the attention of the technical staff and the adjustments were scheduled for completion before the start of the general debate at the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly. With regard to availability of documentation, because of the limited storage space in the North Lawn Building, the Department had moved forward with electronic processing and printing on demand, which tied in with its efforts to move towards full electronic processing of documents. Printed documents were still available but might take slightly longer to be delivered because of the lack of storage space. Guarantees were given that there was no intention to discontinue the provision of hard copies, bearing in mind the disparity in the access by Member States to information technology tools. As for the dispersion of Department staff, the electronic processing of the documents processing chain had made the physical location of staff members less relevant. Moreover, for the first time, the staff comprising the entire document processing chain, from terminology and reference, to editing, translation and text processing, were located in one place, the Albano Building on East 46th Street, which was relatively close to the conference facilities. The air conditioning and heating problems were being addressed in cooperation with the capital master plan contractors.

Chapter V

Integrated global management

Introduction and overview

32. At its 506th meeting, on 30 August 2010, the Committee considered the section of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences concerning integrated global management (see A/65/122, paras. 25-34 and annex VI). Intensive joint efforts of the four duty stations had produced concrete findings and recommendations covering all main conference management areas, including costing models. Of the major information technology projects launched in the past few years, the data warehouse (“project 1”) was now functional and yielding useful management information. “Project 2”, a state-of-the-art meetings management system known as e-Meets 2.0, had been piloted in Vienna and was launched in New York on 16 August 2010. The interpreters assignment programme (e-APG module) was fully functional across all duty stations. Progress on other fronts included the adoption of a single application to manage contractual translation and efforts to standardize workflows and work processes, such as global workload management and global management of contractual translation.

33. Regarding “project 3”, on documents management, the Department had taken action to address the issue of a cost-benefit analysis of information technology arrangements that would both reduce the resources spent and utilize existing applications to realize efficiencies and cost savings, as recommended by the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) (see A/64/166) and endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/230. After broad consultations and intensive preparations, a global evaluation team consisting of representatives from substantive and information technology areas in the four duty stations had reviewed the existing document planning and processing systems and had sent a report to the Information Technology Governance Board for its consideration and recommendations.

34. The strategy of integrated global management had evolved to forge a single entity out of multiple parts operating in unison, and some dimension of global management was implicit in all the topics being considered by the Committee. However, progress in implementation, while significant, had remained slow. The main reason was that integrated global management had until now been premised on a fully voluntary and collaborative approach. Exercising a more robust approach was rendered difficult by the simple fact that the conference management units at the various duty stations did not report to the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management, but rather to their respective Directors-General. The Under-Secretary-General, while accountable for the disbursement of resources under section 2, General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management, of the programme budget, did not have corresponding authority in the management and disbursement of financial and human resources.

Discussion

35. Several delegations noted that the voluntary nature and the lack of clarity regarding accountability and authority in the discussion of integrated global management was a recurring theme. They wondered why the current decentralized structure of the Department had been established and whether there had been any instances in which initiatives had failed because accountability and authority had not been consolidated. It was also unclear whether offices away from Headquarters experienced a lack of accountability in their day-to-day reporting lines. It would also be interesting to know whether any savings had been realized from integrated global management.

36. A representative of the Secretariat said that in 1997, when the Secretary-General undertook a reform of the United Nations, the original idea had been to have similar policies in the area of conference services and to pool resources across duty stations. The concept of integrated global management had subsequently taken hold, to the extent that all conference-servicing resources had been placed in one budget section. However, the Secretary-General's bulletins on the organization of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and the conference services at other duty stations had not recognized that fact. The bulletins governing Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi were in the process of being updated to reflect the current reality. While originally it had been considered that managing the Department directly from Headquarters would be unwieldy because of distance and the varying nature of the work at each duty station, some centralization had always existed. For instance, the Office of Human Resources Management at Headquarters administered the language examinations for all duty stations to ensure overall consistency in the quality of staff. The duty stations had used four different systems for statistics and reporting, but questions from Member States regarding differences in those areas had led to increasing degrees of harmonization and standardization. The purpose of the integrated global management of conference services was not to micromanage from New York, but to ensure the best use of available resources. Regarding savings realized, there were many benefits to standardizing processes across duty stations, but they did not necessarily include savings. Furthermore, it was difficult to quantify the results of the actions taken to streamline and harmonize processes.

37. One delegation asked if the fundamental review of systems and processes across duty stations being conducted by the Department might result in a proposal for a reform of the budget structure and whether it would be preferable to dissolve section 2 of the budget or to maintain the current structure. Another delegation asked if any review of that structure had been conducted over the past 10 years. A representative of the Secretariat responded that the dissolution of section 2 was not advocated, but its structure could be made more logical. For example, pursuant to the recommendation of OIOS, the library at the United Nations Office at Geneva, a large, stand-alone unit with no connection to conference management, had been moved out of that section. On the other hand, the library at the United Nations Office at Vienna, a small unit thoroughly integrated in the terminology and reference component of the document chain, should remain in that budget section. No integrated review of its structure had been conducted.

Chapter VI

Documentation and publication-related matters

Introduction and overview

38. At its 507th meeting, on 30 August 2010, the Committee on Conferences considered section IV of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences, concerning matters related to documentation and publication (see A/65/122, paras. 35-47 and annexes VII and VIII) and the internal printing of parliamentary documents (para. 48 and annex IX). Significant progress had been made in ensuring the timely submission and issuance of documents in New York in a timely manner, including for the Fifth Committee. A decision had been taken to formally implement proactive documents management, namely the slotting system, at all four duty stations, on the basis of the positive results achieved at Headquarters. Late submission of documents and inputs by Member States, however, was impeding further improvement of the timely availability of documents.

Discussion

39. A number of delegations sought clarification on the proposed recommendation to the General Assembly contained in paragraph 40 of the report of the Secretary-General and requested further information on the measures taken since February 2010 to improve the timely submission of documents. It was suggested that a system of alerts to signal the late status of any slotted documents would help management identify potential problems and take action where needed. A more detailed explanation was requested for the problems encountered regarding the processing of documents for the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons. Delegations also wished to know what steps had been taken to address the poor ratings observed in the client satisfaction e-survey referred to in annex VI of the report of the Secretary-General.

40. Additional information was requested on the pilot project for slotting reports to be considered by the Security Council. A comprehensive update was also requested on the implementation of all the recommendations made by OIOS (see A/64/166). Several delegations requested further details on the measurement of document length in words rather than in pages, including the merits thereof.

41. A representative of the Secretariat said that, in addition to the mechanisms of accountability outlined in the Secretary-General's report, submitting departments received reminders on a weekly basis to submit pending documents in a timely fashion and the secretaries and bureaux of bodies awaiting documentation were kept informed of the status of their documentation and given the opportunity to provide feedback on timely submission prior to the beginning of a session. The interdepartmental task force on documentation for the Fifth Committee also continued to hold meetings. Late submissions by Member States were a recurrent issue and directly influenced the performance rates of the Secretariat since a considerable number of reports by the Secretary-General were, in fact, compilations of inputs from Member States or straight submissions by Member States. The list of departments that had consistently failed to achieve the benchmark of 90 per cent timely submission was provided in writing.

42. Regarding the rating of “poor” (6 per cent of participants) received through the e-survey of conference services provided by the Department, the Committee was informed that steps planned or already taken to remedy problems relating to access to the meetings calendar, the electronic board and the Journal of the United Nations included placing a direct link to the meetings calendar in e-Meets 2.0 and improving the user-friendliness and availability of the Journal through Google, Twitter and Facebook. Additional suggestions from Member States would be welcome.

43. While most reports to be considered by the Security Council were highly unpredictable in terms of submission time frames, a recent analysis had shown that a considerable number were recurrent in nature and could, as such, be considered candidates for the slotting system, thus ensuring that they would become available to Member States in a more timely fashion, and thus enhance predictability for planning purposes. The pilot project had only just begun and the Department was working closely with the Security Council secretariat to ensure its success.

44. Shifting from page limits to word counts would help to eliminate confusion by establishing one standard for the length of documents to be submitted and processed. Based on the standard of approximately 530 words per page, 16-page reports were considered equivalent to 8,500 words, 20-page reports to 10,700 words and 32-page reports to 17,000 words.

45. The Committee agreed to change the method used to determine the length of documents from page count to word count, as proposed by the Secretary-General, without prejudice to any of the six official languages. Explanations and reassurances were provided about the margins of flexibility that would be given to languages other than English on the basis of statistical trends.

46. The Committee discussed the proposals contained in paragraphs 46 and 47 of the report and in paragraphs 12 and 13 of annex VIII to the report, which the Committee found to be divergent. Following the explanations given by the Secretariat, the Committee decided not to endorse the recommendation by which the desirable limit of 32 pages (approximately 17,000 words) for documents emanating from intergovernmental bodies would be replaced by a limit of 10,700 words (or 20 pages).

Chapter VII

Translation and interpretation-related matters

Introduction and overview

47. At its 506th and 508th meetings, on 30 August and 1 September 2010, the Committee on Conferences considered section V of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences, concerning matters related to translation and interpretation (A/65/122), including succession planning (paras. 49 and 50), quality control of contractual translation (paras. 51-60), the impact of freelance recruitment on the quality of interpretation (para. 61), the financial and administrative implications of raising or waiving the mandatory age of separation for language staff (interpreters, translators/précis-writers, editors, verbatim reporters and proofreaders/copy preparers) (paras. 62-69) and specific challenges faced by the United Nations Office at Nairobi (paras. 70-75). In the light of the acute demographic transition in the language services expected to take place in the next five years, the Department had begun implementing a proactive succession planning programme, which focused on outreach to universities and streamlining of competitive examinations for language services. Despite a largely inadequate budget allocation for training resources, the Department had made every effort to maintain language-related services. The present arrangement was not sustainable, however, and the Department would need permanent and dedicated capacity to conduct, coordinate and monitor training and outreach activities effectively in the future. Flexibility in applying the mandatory age of retirement for language staff would also ease the demographic transition.

48. While the quality of freelance interpreters had generally been adequate, there were real challenges related to the availability of interpretation services at short notice, the fierce global competition for such resources, which were scarce, and the fact that the conditions of employment for interpreters at the United Nations were not as competitive as those offered by other institutions. All four duty stations had made efforts to increase the share of translation done contractually without sacrificing the requisite quality of the documents processed. The United Nations Office at Vienna, which had historically lacked established capacity to monitor and control the quality of the large proportion of documentation processed externally, would soon benefit from the reclassification of posts to the senior reviser (P-5) level, a change which had been supported by the General Assembly; it was expected that the increase in staff costs would be offset by the savings arising from a higher number of pages translated contractually. Such was not the case at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, unfortunately, where the high percentage of outsourced translation called for more robust quality assurance. Other challenges faced in Nairobi related to the significant increase in the number of meetings held at the renovated conference facilities and the continued difficulty in attracting and retaining high-quality interpreters and translators. It was thus proposed that six interpreter and six senior reviser posts should be upgraded from the P-4 to the P-5 level.

49. Representatives of conference services at the United Nations Offices at Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi participated via videoconference in the 508th meeting of the Committee on 1 September and discussed the theme of outreach, including training and internships. Memorandums of understanding signed with universities facilitated cooperation and helped programmes in interpretation and translation to gear their training towards the needs of employers such as the United Nations. Fourteen universities had already signed memorandums of understanding with the United Nations, with three more Arabic-language universities to follow suit before the end of 2010. The Department had entered into an official relationship with universities covering all six official languages. The language internship programme launched by the Department in cooperation with the Office of Human Resources Management in the summer of 2009 had been expanded in 2010 to other language occupations and duty stations.

50. There were, however, no dedicated staff resources for outreach activities. Staff members were reallocated from other activities, sometimes combining outreach visits with home leave or personal travel, for example. Furthermore, the position of Training and Coordination Officer created at Headquarters was not an established post, and the lack of dedicated resources was limiting the scope of possible activities.

Geneva

51. The Director of the Division of Conference Management at the United Nations Office at Geneva said that the Division had made outreach activities an important objective in its work programme, given the urgency of finding replacements for the large number of retiring language staff (69 between 2010 and 2015). The Division had welcomed 14 interns from six different academic institutions thus far in 2010.

Vienna

52. A special feature in Vienna had been the use of “traineeship” arrangements, in which young language professionals who had not yet passed competitive examinations were hired at a modest salary to work on site, thus benefiting from close mentoring while contributing to the output of the language services. Student internships also continued to be offered. In addition, a varied programme of training to upgrade the substantive knowledge and technical skills of staff was offered. Nevertheless, to meet staff development needs in the interest of long-term quality and performance, more training funds were needed.

Nairobi

53. Through the collective efforts of the Department, the high vacancy rates traditionally experienced at Nairobi had improved significantly; outreach, training and internships were very important in ensuring that the pool of possible future qualified language staff was broadened. With that in mind, the “Africa project” had been initiated, with the aim of building up conference-servicing capacity within African countries, particularly in the areas of translation and interpretation. The Department, through its Division in Nairobi, had taken the lead. The African Development Bank had begun a feasibility study to seek financial support to implement training programmes in Africa. The University of Nairobi had introduced a master’s programme in translation and interpretation in Arabic, English, French and Kiswahili, and the European Union and various European universities with established language programmes were supporting that pilot programme. Universities in Mozambique and South Africa would soon begin programmes as well, and similar efforts were under way in Cameroon, Egypt and Senegal. With the continued support of the Department, the European Union and the African Development Bank, in a few years it would be possible that qualified interpreters and translators from African countries would be working in Africa as well as in other regions of the world.

Discussion

54. The German Translation Service at Headquarters was commended for the excellent services it provided to Member States. The Committee expressed interest in the outreach programme to universities, including the signing of a number of memorandums of understanding. Additional information was provided, including a list of the universities involved thus far and the model memorandum of understanding. Interest was also expressed in the Department's efforts to streamline the competitive examinations for language services. Concern was expressed at the lack of effective roster management across duty stations. Clarification was requested on the measures taken to harmonize procedures for the different competitive examinations used to select staff. It was suggested that the Department should seek funding for interns, including through private institutions, in order to give students a further incentive to apply for internships with the United Nations.

55. A representative of the Secretariat said that the memorandums of understanding signed with universities provided, inter alia, pedagogical assistance in order to prepare students for language competitive examinations. Participating universities are required to meet a number of criteria determined by a steering group established for that purpose. Competitive examinations for language services did not take into account either gender or nationality, but focused solely on specialized language skills. Examination venues were decided on the basis of the location of applicants, who had to pay their own way to sit the examinations, but were not targeted at specific regions. A recently designed outreach portal on language career opportunities at the United Nations and the memorandums of understanding were expected to improve visibility for the examinations. As regards the streamlining of the competitive examinations, a consultant had been hired to make specific recommendations, and a panel of experts had been established to take action on them. Given that the Department was carrying out the bulk of its outreach activities without dedicated resources, it was difficult to envisage contacting United Nations agencies and private institutions to seek funding for interns, but it was an interesting suggestion that could be reviewed should the Department receive additional funding in future.

56. Members of the Committee were informed that translations processed through contractual translations in New York in the first seven months of 2010 accounted for 27 per cent of the total compared with 25 per cent in 2008. In Vienna, the proportion had increased to 30 per cent, compared to 25 per cent for the same period of 2009, and in Geneva the level had remained above 20 per cent in 2009 and 2010. Quality control of contractual translation was performed by senior revisers at the P-5 level. In order to ensure the availability of staff at the required level, five posts in Vienna had been upgraded in the current biennium. A system of more consistent quality checks in all duty stations had assisted in monitoring and improving output quality.

57. More information was requested about the budgetary impact of the reclassification of posts for quality control in Vienna. It was noted that quality control must be a function performed in-house by senior staff, and the Committee asked whether freelance staff fulfilled that role at any duty station. An analysis of the unit cost of internal versus external processing was requested.

58. A representative of the Secretariat explained that the reclassification of posts for quality control in Vienna had been requested during the previous budget cycle but that it had not been approved until the current biennium. The cost savings from the increased use of contractual processing was expected to offset the cost of the post upgrades. In addition to carrying out quality control functions, senior revisers assisted with training and terminology. It was generally recognized that a maximum level for contractual processing would be reached beyond which the achievement of quality benchmarks for United Nations documentation, which remained the top priority, would be compromised. The Department was in the processes of analysing its costing methodologies and establishing globally standardized performance indicators and costing models, as requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/243.

59. In recent years, the Department had argued that flexibility in applying the mandatory age of retirement for language staff would ease the demographic transition. Several delegations expressed the view that the Department should have acted earlier to address the increase in retirements currently anticipated, which were predictable. Others felt that the statistics on forthcoming retirements did not bear out the sense of urgency accorded to the situation. Information was requested on the basis for the current retirement age and the practice in comparator organizations. One delegation wondered how many language staff would actually agree to stay on. Another delegation expressed dismay at the statement in paragraph 68 of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences (A/65/122) that “the proposal to raise the mandatory separation age for language staff would not have any adverse impact” on the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund. Several delegations expressed reluctance to consider raising the mandatory retirement age for just one category of staff, noting that, in any case, the issue would require thorough discussion in the General Assembly and the International Civil Service Commission.

60. A representative of the Secretariat said that the Department had been addressing the issue of anticipated retirements in the context of its succession planning efforts for the past four years. The representative of the Secretariat stated the view that raising the retirement age would provide more stability in the staffing table and ensure the availability of senior staff for the training of new staff members.

Special challenges faced by the United Nations Office at Nairobi

61. Clarification was sought as to the reasons for the scarcity of qualified translators and interpreters at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and the steps taken thus far to address such challenges. A delegation asked for an explanation why the Department had not requested the proposed upgrade of posts from the P-4 to the P-5 level during the previous year’s budgetary negotiations. A more specific and feasible recommendation to Member States regarding the proposed upgrade was requested, as was clarification on whether the upgrade, if agreed to, would have programme budget implications.

62. An update on the implementation of the Africa project was needed, including action taken thus far by the African Development Bank and any other international partners. A specific recommendation to Member States regarding how they might support the project was requested.

63. A representative of the Secretariat said that in order to improve the vacancy rates, the chiefs of translation and interpretation services at Nairobi had gone to great lengths to reach out personally to language professionals. Efforts were also being made to change the perception of Nairobi as a less desirable duty station. Eleven-month contracts had been given to interpreters who had not yet passed the competitive examination but who had worked at the Office at Nairobi for years and were known to be reliable. It was difficult to attract interns to Nairobi not only because they were required to be enrolled in a master's programme, which were not widespread in Africa, but also because they were not paid, except for a modest travel allowance.

64. The proposed recommendation to reclassify a number of P-4 posts to the P-5 level in Nairobi was necessary not only to adequately reflect the principle of equal grade for equal work, but also to ensure quality control for the high percentage of contractual translation produced by that Office. The proposed upgrade would also have a positive impact on the ability to attract and retain staff at Nairobi. The Department had decided during the previous year's budgetary negotiations to request the conversion of several extrabudgetary posts to regular budget posts rather than to upgrade posts because of what it had perceived to be longer-term benefits. It was nevertheless of the utmost importance to address the remaining discrepancies among duty stations. Upon further clarification, the Secretariat explained that it intended to address the matter formally in the normal course of the budget cycle for 2012-2013, and sought the support of the Committee in that regard.

65. The Department took into account all staffing-related matters and had adopted an incremental approach to advocating such changes. It would take the matter up in the context of the budget submission for the biennium 2012-2013.

66. The start of the Africa project had been delayed because the African Development Bank had not completed the feasibility study. It was expected that the graduates of the relevant programmes, if successful in the competitive examinations, would be recruited immediately. The mobilization by the United Nations Office at Nairobi of additional resources for the project would be difficult, as the Office had no capacity to devote to fund-raising.

67. One delegation raised the issue of the translation of the consolidated lists of individuals and entities subject to sanctions according to the Sanctions Committees of the Security Council, which had not been translated into all the official languages. Explanations were requested as to why this was the case. Some doubts were raised regarding the competency of the Committee on Conferences to address this issue. Consideration was given to the provisional rules of procedure of the Security Council and to the terms of reference of the Committee on Conferences.
