Updated inventory chart of General Assembly resolutions on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly to be issued pursuant to resolution 68/307 . . . . .	29

I. Introduction

1. By its resolution 68/307, the General Assembly decided to establish, at its sixty-ninth session, an ad hoc working group on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly, open to all Member States:

(a) To identify further ways to enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly, inter alia, by building on progress achieved in past sessions as well as on previous resolutions, including evaluating the status of their implementation;

(b) To submit a report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-ninth session.

2. In that resolution, the General Assembly also decided that the Ad Hoc Working Group should continue its review of the inventory of Assembly resolutions on revitalization annexed to the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-eighth session (A/68/951), and, as a result, to continue to update the inventory to be attached to the report to be submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-ninth session. The present report and the recommendations contained herein are submitted pursuant to the provisions of that resolution.

3. During the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, the President of the Assembly appointed Ambassador Vladimir Drobnjak, Permanent Representative of Croatia to the United Nations, and Ambassador Wilfried Emvula, Permanent Representative of Namibia to the United Nations, as Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group.

4. Before the formal beginning of the Working Group's deliberations, the Co-Chairs conducted informal bilateral meetings with representatives of various Member States and a variety of political groups. During those meetings, the Co-Chairs benefited extensively from the insights and ideas of Member States on both the substance and the technical and procedural aspects of the revitalization process.

II. Proceedings

5. The Working Group held six meetings, on 3 March, 19 March, 14 April, 27 April, 12 May and 2 September 2015.

6. The programme of work was organized into two practical stages, as follows: general discussion and exchange of views; and thematic meetings. The themes identified by the Co-Chairs for consideration in the four thematic meetings comprised:

(a) The role and authority of the General Assembly;

(b) The working methods of the Assembly;

(c) The selection and appointment of the Secretary-General and other executive heads of the United Nations system;

(d) The strengthening of the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the General Assembly.

A. General discussion

7. The first meeting of the Working Group was convened by its Co-Chairs on 3 March. Following introductory remarks by the President of the General Assembly and the Co-Chairs, the participants in the meeting heard interventions from 20 delegations, including on behalf of major groups.

8. The President of the General Assembly highlighted the central position of the Assembly as the chief deliberative, policymaking and representative organ of the United Nations and hence the critical importance of the Working Group's deliberations. Emphasizing that revitalization of the work of the Assembly contributed to the overall strengthening of the Organization, he remarked that he had made it a priority to engage regularly with the Presidents of other principal organs, so as to bolster coordination and coherence, as well as with the Secretary-General. Underlining the important role of the General Committee, he highlighted the first ever luncheon with its members that was convened during the main part of the sixty-ninth session. He also stressed his commitment to engaging with civil society and other stakeholders. The President further emphasized the importance of implementation of Assembly resolutions and the need to improve the working methods of the Assembly, in particular those of the Fifth Committee. He also identified a review of the modalities for the election of judges to the International Court of Justice as an area of potential interest to the Working Group. Commenting on the annual general debate in the Assembly, the President underlined the importance of protecting its integrity through better coordination and distribution of events during the high-level week. He also hoped that the Ad Hoc Working Group would contribute to advancing the transparency and inclusiveness of the selection process of the Secretary-General. As to the perceived increased workload of the Office of the President of the General Assembly, he stressed the need for adequate and predictable resources, including from the regular budget.

9. Emphasizing the Working Group's cross-cutting agenda, the Co-Chairs encouraged the full and active participation of Member States in the Ad Hoc Working Group during the sixty-ninth session of the Assembly, while underlining in particular the forthcoming celebrations of the seventieth anniversary of the United Nations. In this regard, the Co-Chairs encouraged Member States to work towards a tangible and successful outcome during this session.

10. A group of States reaffirmed the role and authority of the General Assembly (cluster 1), including in questions of peace and security, as well as the intergovernmental nature of the United Nations. The group reiterated its objection to what it perceived as the continuous encroachment by the Security Council on the work of the Assembly. Another group recognized the importance of interaction between the Assembly and international or regional forums and other organizations dealing with global matters of concern to the international community, including civil society, non-governmental organizations and the private sector. Many speakers stressed the importance of implementation of General Assembly resolutions, with some calling for practical proposals to monitor their implementation. Some also expressed disappointment over what they saw as the limited outcomes reached thus far in restoring the role and authority of the General Assembly, while at the same time, the good work during the sixty-eighth session had been widely welcomed and various specific outcomes had been seized upon, such as the early election of members of the Economic and Social Council and of the non-permanent members of the Security Council at least six months in advance of the beginning of their terms of office.

11. On the issue of the working methods of the General Assembly (cluster 2), general support was expressed for improving the efficiency of the Assembly and the Main Committees, which was felt by some should be the priority focus of the Ad Hoc Working Group. Among the issues raised in this context was the need for a lightening of the workload during the high-level week so as to alleviate the pressure on the schedules of world leaders and to allow for a sharper focus on the general debate. The need was also identified to ensure that the Assembly worked “smarter”, including, for instance, by determining deadlines for objectives, clustering topics, establishing sunset clauses, when appropriate, and refraining from adopting resolutions on what was termed “outdated items”. Furthermore, a group of countries highlighted the need for rationalizing the agendas of both the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council in order to avoid duplication in their respective programmes of work, citing resolution 68/1 on the strengthening of the Economic and Social Council in this regard. Rationalization should furthermore include biennialization, triennialization and clustering of items. At the same time, it was underlined that the elimination of topics must always be based on the consent of the sponsoring States. One speaker, who agreed on the urgency of addressing working methods, also considered it as providing the greatest opportunity for making tangible improvements. Another delegation seized upon the modalities for the election of the judges to the International Court of Justice. The timely provision of official documents in the six official languages of the Organization was also urged, while others insisted on the desirability of an overall reduction in the volume of reports.

12. On the selection and appointment of the Secretary-General and other executive heads of the United Nations system (cluster 3), attention was paid in the first instance to the process of the selection and appointment of the Secretary-General, with many delegations underlining the relevance and timeliness of considering this cluster during the sixty-ninth session, and, therefore, prior to the expected next selection process, in 2016. In this regard, many called for greater transparency and inclusiveness and for the Assembly to have a more meaningful role to play. The holding of informal meetings for the purpose of interactive hearings with candidates was raised as a possible step in this direction. A number of speakers also argued in favour of reviewing resolution 11 (I) of 1946, which, inter alia, calls for the Security Council to proffer one candidate only. At the same time, the importance of the principles of regional rotation and gender equality were noted as important factors in the consideration of candidates during the selection process. The need to identify criteria for the post was also noted among the interventions. Some even called for reconsidering the term of office itself, including through the option of establishing a single term of longer duration. One delegation recalled the possibility of a secret ballot. Yet, other delegations strongly reaffirmed Article 97 of the Charter of the United Nations, noting that the Secretary-General shall be appointed by the Assembly on the recommendation of the Security Council, and therefore insisted that the selection and appointment process of the Secretary-General was already clearly defined.

13. Regarding the Office of the President of the General Assembly and the strengthening of its institutional memory (cluster 4), several delegations highlighted the importance they attached to ensuring the Office’s efficiency and effectiveness.

In this connection, one group of States stressed the need to ensure adequate and predictable budgetary support, including from the regular budget of the United Nations, even as another delegation reaffirmed that any such consideration would need to take place in strict accordance with rule 153 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly, that is to say in the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Fifth Committee. Further enhancement of the smoothness of transition from one presidency to the next was also raised, including through codifying best practices and lessons learned. In this context, one group suggested that greater cooperation between incumbent and incoming Presidents of the General Assembly could prove most useful.

14. The Co-Chairs assured delegations that each of the four clusters would receive due attention, while taking note of the divergence of views and positions on them during the general exchange.

B. Thematic meetings

First thematic meeting: the role and authority of the General Assembly

15. In the course of the second meeting, which was also the first thematic meeting, held on 19 March 2015, 14 delegations intervened, including on behalf of major groups. Following opening remarks by the Co-Chairs, who reiterated their desire to move the issue and process forward on the basis of the views and positions expressed by the members, a briefing was provided by the Department of Public Information.

16. The Director of the Outreach Division and Officer-in-Charge of the Department of Public Information provided a briefing pursuant to resolution 68/307 concerning raising the visibility of the Assembly and enhancing, in the light of the seventieth anniversary of the United Nations, world public and media awareness of the contribution made by the Assembly to the fulfilment of the goals of the Organization. This, it was noted, was being carried out as part of raising the overall visibility of the United Nations through several media and outreach platforms. He stressed that the Department of Public Information was guided by the Committee on Information, which provided it with an opportunity to hear directly from Member States and to present to them plans and activities in relation to the anniversary. Activities so far included online campaigns on issues such as climate change, the post-2015 development agenda and financing for development. The support provided to the Office of the President was further underlined, with one staff member from the Department being seconded every year in order to maximize coverage of the work of the Assembly and the President, including through the publication of a press kit, the updating of the President's website and daily coverage of the Assembly's activities, which, it was noted, was higher than ever. A number of activities planned to mark the anniversary was mentioned, including a special website produced in all six official languages; a special anniversary issue of UN Chronicle in which experts and prominent world figures would examine the landmark achievements of the Organization and identify future challenges; issuance of a special edition of the Charter of the United Nations; and an online exhibition entitled "70 years, 70 documents", exhibiting feature milestone documents marking the development of the Organization. Furthermore, a social media team was actively promoting the anniversary with the hashtag #UN70. Each United Nations

Information Centre was also encouraged to mark the anniversary in conjunction with the United Nations system and local partners, especially Member States.

17. In the subsequent debate, speakers generally reiterated their support for strengthening the role and authority of the General Assembly, calling as well for the full implementation of existing provisions in its relevant resolutions. While one group emphasized the relationship between the Assembly and other principal organs — and focused on what it perceived to be the continuous encroachment by the Security Council on the work of the Assembly — another group highlighted the importance of increasing the efficiency, and thus the strength and effectiveness, of the working methods of the Assembly. One group, underlining that revitalization was a political, not merely a procedural process, reiterated that revitalization deserved to be considered in tandem with other reform processes and important topics. Another group was of the view that the General Assembly ought to be able to take relevant action on issues of common concern as the only intergovernmental body with universal membership, while, at the same time, reiterating that strengthening it should be based on the effective and efficient use of available funding and that it was paramount that the Assembly continued to increase its efficiency.

18. The importance of continuing to raise the Assembly's visibility was underscored, and the work of the Department of Public Information was welcomed in this respect, with Member States encouraging it to re-double its efforts to increase awareness of the work of the Organization and of the Assembly. One group specifically commended the creation by the Secretariat of a link on the General Assembly website dedicated to its revitalization. The importance of the Office of the President of the General Assembly in raising the Assembly's visibility was also highlighted, with some arguing that the Office should be supported effectively with appropriate resources. One group emphasized the importance of publicizing the activities of the Assembly in all six official languages and in an equal manner, and stressed that budgetary concerns should not undermine that endeavour.

19. Regarding the relationship among principal organs, many delegations raised concerns over what they perceived as encroachment by the Security Council on the powers and functions of the Assembly, including in the fields of setting norms, law making and administrative and budgetary matters, recalling in particular the Charter of the United Nations, which entrusted those functions to the General Assembly. In this context, reporting by the Security Council to the Assembly was highlighted, and the annual report of the Council was underlined as an essential element in upholding the principles of accountability and transparency. Those delegations supported the institutionalization of consultations prior to the preparation of the annual report to the Assembly, while nonetheless requesting a more analytical and comprehensive report and expressing regret that since the adoption of resolution 58/126, no periodic subject-oriented reports had been submitted to the Assembly. Other delegations stressed the need and importance to respect the clearly defined co-equal relationship between the Assembly and the Security Council as established in the Charter of the United Nations, and cautioned against any proposals that may alter the well-established balance between them. In this regard, concern was expressed about the General Assembly becoming involved in defining the working methods of the Council; it was underscored that any innovations needed to respect the balance of powers of the main organs as set out in the Charter.

20. The benefit of regular meetings among the presidents of the principal organs was highlighted. In this respect, one group called for better coordination of the respective programmes of activities of the principal organs and expressed the view that the aim should be to work in unity, which this group viewed as indispensable to effectively addressing the increasingly overloaded agenda of the Organization. Avoiding duplication between the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council was raised as another path towards enhancing the role and authority of the Assembly. General Assembly resolution 68/1 on strengthening the Economic and Social Council was recalled in this regard. One delegation specifically called for a more focused agenda of the Assembly as an essential factor in strengthening its authority, including through removing what it described as outdated items. Noting the relevance it attached to the Special Committee on the Charter and on the Strengthening of the role of the Organization, one group supported the proposal for the creation of an open-ended working group on the implementation of the Charter regarding the functional relationship of its organs.

21. A range of different views was expressed regarding the relationship between the General Assembly and other stakeholders, with one group reaffirming the intergovernmental nature of the United Nations and drawing attention to the necessity of consulting with Member States on initiatives undertaken within the Organization. Another group was vocal in its support for enhanced interaction between the Assembly and civil society, and in this context spotlighted the benefit of continuous interaction of the Assembly with other regional and global actors, citing as an example the regular dialogue between the United Nations and the Group of 20, as well as with the private sector. Yet another group, while also reaffirming the contributions made by civil society, argued that this type of interaction should be arranged with due respect to the essential intergovernmental character of the Organization and the priority that Member States should have in addressing the General Assembly and its subsidiary bodies.

22. The implementation of General Assembly resolutions was considered essential in enhancing the role and authority of the Assembly. Several speakers welcomed the updated inventory chart prepared by the Secretariat as a very useful tool. One group reiterated its call for the implementation of General Assembly resolutions on a non-selective basis. Noting the growing number and complexity of requests to the Secretariat, the group proposed the elaboration of a comprehensive assessment mechanism, that included reasons for lack of implementation, modelled on the traditional inventory chart, which focused exclusively on revitalization of the work of the General Assembly. One delegation criticized what it perceived as failure by the Secretariat to carry out instructions in General Assembly resolutions and highlighted the need for better communication between the Secretariat and Member States regarding organizational and logistical matters, ranging from access to documents to access to the building. To this end, the delegation proposed setting up a standing committee to deal with relations between permanent missions and the Secretariat of the United Nations.

23. The holding of high-level interactive thematic debates was also underlined, in particular their value in contributing to the interactive and inclusive character of the Assembly. At the same time, it was stressed that those debates should not coincide with periods of special high demand among Member States, and it was stressed that serious consideration should be given to the idea of holding a second week of high-level meetings in the second quarter of the year. Regarding the work of the Main

Committees, it was also recalled that the long-term arrangements for the pattern of rotation of the Chairs and Rapporteurs of the Main Committees was to be presented to the Assembly at its seventy-second session.

24. The Co-Chairs noted the views expressed, acknowledging in particular the suggestions made for a better distribution of high-level meetings throughout the session and for the establishment of a second high-level week in the spring.

Second thematic meeting: the working methods of the General Assembly

25. The third meeting of the Working Group, which was also its second thematic meeting, was convened by the Co-Chairs on 14 April 2015. Following introductory remarks by the Co-Chairs, the meeting participants heard briefings from the Chairs of the First, Fourth, Second, Third, Fifth and Sixth Committees. During the interactive question-and-answer period that followed, one delegation posed questions, eliciting responses from various Chairs of the Main Committees. In the last part of the meeting, dedicated to delegations' general statements, 12 speakers, including on behalf of major groups, took the floor.

26. In opening the meeting, the Co-Chairs drew attention to a joint letter dated 13 April 2015 from the Chairs of the six Main Committees, addressed to the President of the General Assembly. The letter, they noted, contained proposals to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly. The Chair of the Second Committee, on behalf of the other Chairs, and in their respective individual capacity, presented the contents of the letter. Adding that many of the suggestions therein did not necessitate "huge overhauls of the normative framework of the General Assembly", it was suggested that the proposals instead envisaged the full implementation of the Assembly's revitalization resolutions. Those proposals specifically included bringing forward to April the Main Committees' bureaux elections; holding incoming and outgoing bureaux meetings immediately thereafter; improving the budgetary review process for proposals; and possibly establishing an informal coordination mechanism between the President of the General Assembly and the Chairs of Main Committees to allow for better coordination.

Briefings by the Chairs of the Main Committees

27. The Chair of the First Committee noted that the Committee's working methods had evolved over the past 25 years with regard to rationalizing and streamlining the agenda. Key highlights of the structure of the work of the Committee were offered in terms of its general debate, thematic discussions, and action on draft resolutions. Regarding the general debate, allusion was made to the question of the speaking order of observers. Regarding the thematic discussions, the Chair noted that those were inaugurated with annual exchanges with the High Representative for Disarmament Affairs and other high-level officials, and concluded with an exchange with non-governmental organizations. In this regard, the Chair advised that, as of the seventieth session, non-governmental organizations would speak at the end of the general debate.

28. The Chair of the Fourth Committee noted that, traditionally, 13 items were allocated to that Committee, and that most were being considered on an annual basis. He also indicated that this number had risen to 15 during the current session, and, in this respect, stressed the commitment of the Committee to continue to put forward proposals for the biennialization and clustering of items, adding that five items related to decolonization, for instance, had thus far been clustered. The particular practice of holding hearings of representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories and petitioners early in the session was highlighted, and it was noted that the number of petitioners should be synchronized with the programme of work. Referring to the structure of the work of the Committee, the Chair stated that general debates, which preceded the adoption of proposals, also included interactive dialogues. Providing further detail regarding efforts to maximize time, the Chair noted the benefits that had been derived from the use of the Committee's internal website, as well as the timely conclusion of its work at the sixty-seventh, sixty-eighth and sixty-ninth sessions. Acknowledging the importance of fostering collaboration and cooperation among the Chairs of the Committees, the Chair pointed to the convening of a joint ad hoc meeting of the First and the Fourth Committees in the fall as an important effort. In reference to the elections of the Chairs, the Fourth Committee recommended for the forthcoming session a balanced rotation of the post of rapporteur among the regional groups that was in accordance with the rotation of the Chair for the seventieth and seventy-first sessions. In closing, the Chair requested consistency in the use of the name and order of the placing of the Fourth Committee (after the First Committee) in accordance with rule 98 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly.

29. The Chair of the Second Committee indicated that the Committee had adopted by recorded vote more draft resolutions during this session than in the past few and highlighted the holding of joint meetings with the Economic and Social Council. Proposals arising from the meetings of the Committee aiming to improve its working methods were also shared, including dispensing with its general debate in order to start earlier the consideration of individual agenda items, and obtaining of cost implications of draft resolutions on a timelier basis. The Chair stressed the need to provide clear guidelines to facilitators to address questions concerning the budgetary implications of draft resolutions in a manner that would not encroach on the mandate of the Fifth Committee. The need to meet deadlines for the submission of proposals and to establish a clear procedure for to request an extension for their submission was also underscored. The silence procedure, the Chair stated, was causing delays, and should be applied on an exceptional basis only. The Chair further highlighted a meeting with the chairs of the five regional groups and with the chairs of major groups that had been held in November to consult on the Committee's programme of work and encouraged future Chairs to follow up on this initiative, which had been welcomed. Emphasis was placed on reducing the duplication of work, in particular with the Economic and Social Council, given also the financing for development process and the implementation of the post-2015 development agenda.

30. The Chair of the Third Committee referred to document A/C.3/68/CRP.1 as a useful source of information for mapping the working methods of the Committee. With 14 items traditionally allocated to the Committee on an annual basis, efforts at streamlining the agenda had continued. The Chair noted as an example the sub-item "Life for life: shaping future agendas", which had been triennialized during the current session, while some other items were traditionally clustered. Mentioning resolution 65/281, the Chair stated that the allocation of the "Report of the Human Rights Council" to both the plenary as well as the Third Committee remained a sensitive issue. Another question of concern, in the Chair's view, was the late issuance of important reports, many of which emanated from Geneva. Indicating that the consideration of the clusters of items related to human rights took up the majority of the Committee's time, the Chair expressed concern at the two-fold increase in the number of rapporteurs and independent experts heard by the Committee in the past five years (53 during the current session alone), while the number of meetings remained unchanged. Despite those challenges, the Chair stressed that time management had been exemplary. Concerning decision-making, with approximately one third of the Committee's draft resolutions adopted by recorded vote, questions remained regarding the adoption of omnibus resolutions. It was noted that the adoption of comprehensive draft resolutions had not necessarily contributed to reducing the number of resolutions passed by the Committee, which was the highest on average. The benefits of the web-based facility Quickplace were underlined in this respect. The practices of elections of bureaux, which were held three months in advance of the ensuing session, and of meetings between the incoming and the outgoing bureaux, were emphasized.

31. The Chair of the Fifth Committee highlighted the importance of the discussion on working methods as a basis for identifying specific measures for improvement, and stressed the value attached to the discussions among the Chairs, which had led to the joint letter presented to the President of the General Assembly. Emphasizing the importance of bearing in mind the individual capacities of the permanent missions, the Chair called for a more equitable distribution of the workload. Noting further that the Fifth Committee comprised a wide range of players (including the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, and Member States), the Chair underscored the importance of ensuring smooth and synergistic coordination among them all. In preparing for the second resumed session of the Committee, during which consideration of 19 peacekeeping operations, 3 special political missions and the overview of cross-cutting issues was planned, the Chair emphasized the timely issuance of documentation as a key, and essential, component of the process. Mentioning that the Fifth Committee had held informal consultations on its working methods that had led to the current stocktaking stage of the Committee, the Chair moreover insisted that creating and building trust were critical for any intergovernmental process.

32. The Chair of the Sixth Committee underlined the efforts made towards making its work more focused and efficient, noting in particular the annual review of its working methods. In this context, during this review, it had surfaced that the consideration of the reports of the International Criminal Court and the United Nations international criminal tribunals in plenary should not coincide with the reports of the International Law Commission during the international law week. The Chair requested that this be acted upon urgently. Also as part of this annual review, the Uniteshare was considered useful for communication, as was the use of PaperSmart. The Chair referred to a paper on lessons learned that had been adopted by the bureau at the sixty-eighth session, underlining the importance of joint meetings between the outgoing and incoming bureaux each year, the increase of opportunities for informal briefings by delegates, and the interaction between staff of the Secretariat and members of the International Law Commission.

Interactive segment

33. Following the remarks of the Chairs of the Main Committees, one delegation posed questions during the interactive segment of the meeting, seeking clarifications concerning the initiative contained in the joint letter initiative and noting, inter alia, that, in the context of elections being held in April, the Fifth Committee would not have yet concluded its work. The delegation also noted that the value of a new informal mechanism for coordination was unclear given that there already was such a mechanism in place, based on the rules of procedure, namely, the Assembly's General Committee. The delegation generally stressed the need to adhere to existing rules regarding the assessment of budgetary implications and noted that the Fifth Committee should have enough time to undertake such review, expressing concern over what it saw as a growing trend in other Main Committees to discuss such matters on their own. On a general point, the delegation concurred with the need for the availability of documentation on a timely basis.

34. In response, the Chair of the Second Committee, who had presented the joint letter on behalf of the Chairs of the Main Committees, along with other Chairs, reiterated the general objective of the letter, expressing the hope that it would inject new momentum towards gathering collective support for improving working methods across the Main Committees. He further clarified that despite holding bureau elections in April, the standing bureau of the existing session would remain in charge throughout the session for which it had been elected. Concerning the proposed informal mechanism, it was noted that the idea was not to replace the General Committee but to establish a platform for informal consultations. To that point, the Chair of the Fifth Committee added that concerns regarding the Fifth Committee were valid and should be considered as part of the ongoing discussion.

Statements/debate

35. In general statements, Member States expressed appreciation for the briefings and encouraged the Chairs of the Main Committees to continue the practice. They further indicated their readiness to work constructively towards improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the General Assembly. While some noted the joint letter initiative as meriting positive consideration, it was also stressed that the only places in which to consider working methods were in the Main Committees themselves as well as in the Ad Hoc Working Group. At the same time, general support was reiterated for the early elections of Chairs and bureaux, with several speakers also noting the interim arrangement contained in decision 68/505 and the relevant provisions of resolution 68/307.

36. Many delegations expressed their openness to considering proposals aimed at enhancing the scheduling of high-level meetings and high-level thematic debates. Various groups reaffirmed the centrality of the general debate as the apex of the annual session of the General Assembly and insisted on the importance of preventing the overburdening, overshadowing or dilution of the profile of the general debate. In this regard, concern was expressed at resolutions on modalities that had been adopted in the last two years that had altered the date for the start of the general debate, which was contrary to the rules of procedure. Other delegations proposed exploring how to concentrate more events, including a second ministerial meeting, in the spring. Yet another reiterated that the speakers list for the general debate should more closely reflect political realities among the membership, noting that the functions of some Heads of State were endowed with an exclusively ceremonial role.

37. Regarding the planning of meetings throughout the session, one group called upon the General Committee to better coordinate meetings to avoid simultaneous meetings of the Assembly's plenary and its subsidiary bodies that would normally require the participation of the same experts. Due regard needed to be given to the resources and capacities of permanent missions. Another Member State called for rationalizing the schedule of meetings, and also requested that greater advance notice of planned meetings be given. The importance of starting meetings on time was raised, with one delegation arguing that significant resources could be saved in this manner.

38. The need to rationalize the agenda was recognized by delegations as another potentially important step towards enhancing the quality of the consideration of topics. Several delegations in this regard raised the prospect of biennialization, triennialization, and the elimination and clustering of items. One group called on Member States to demonstrate flexibility on this issue, adding that the coordination by the Chairs of Main Committees could help facilitate in this process, and furthermore asked the Co-Chairs to prepare, with the assistance of the Secretariat, structured assessments of issues that were best qualified for streamlining. The group further called for preventing the duplication of items between the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council.

39. Another delegation added that the annual inclusion and consideration of what it described as outdated and obscure items risked diluting the authority of the General Assembly, and suggested that looking at resolutions with only minor or technical updates as a first step towards rationalizing the workload of the Assembly, including through the inclusion of sunset clauses. Yet another delegation stressed that decisions on rationalization required the explicit consent of the sponsoring State and must not undermine the sovereign equality of Member States. Furthermore, the delegation suggested that the best way to streamline the agenda was by implementing the resolutions of the Assembly. In this respect, one speaker insisted on expanding the inventory chart on the status of implementation of General Assembly revitalization mandates and to include a list of all Assembly resolutions that contained mandates addressed to the Secretariat.

40. The working methods of the Fifth Committee were also raised in the deliberations. The question of the review process of programme and budgetary implications for draft resolutions was highlighted, with one group requesting the Secretariat to provide information at an earlier stage. Another delegation underlined the importance it attached to the principle of consensus-based decision-making in the Fifth Committee, warning that previous instances when the Committee had deviated from this approach had led to budgetary crises for the Organization. It further noted practical steps to improve the work of the Committee, including improving the timeliness of documentation, ensuring that coordinators were better trained, outlining realistic work programmes, and reducing the workload by less frequent consideration of items. One group highlighted what it saw as a chronic problem with the late submission in the Fifth Committee of reports in all official languages of the United Nations. It also added that experts should be empowered to continue negotiations, not leaving sensitive political issues to be dealt with by small political groupings.

41. Regarding documentation in general, one group stressed the importance of providing documents in paper format during meetings and requested an explanation from the Secretariat of what actions had been taken and/or were intended to be taken to ensure that the United Nations Journal be issued in all six official languages. Whereas some delegations commended the use of the PaperSmart portal and of electronic resources, including the multilingual General Assembly revitalization webpage, another group cautioned that the wider use of electronic services should not be interpreted as an endorsement for the replacement of hard copies.

42. The issue of the annual report of the Security Council to the General Assembly was also raised. One delegation proposed that a meeting be held between the President of the General Assembly and the delegation charged with drafting the annual report of the Council and that it be followed by an interactive debate with all Member States prior to the drafting of the report by the Council. The delegation further supported the conveying by the President of the General Assembly to the President of the Security Council of a summary of recommendations regarding the report of the Council that emanated from the plenary debate in the main part of the sixty-ninth session. Also, as part of accountability practices, one group commended the practice initiated by the current Secretary-General of providing briefings on his activities to the membership in informal meetings of the General Assembly and encouraged him “to increase those encounters in the future.” A number of Member States also recalled the early elections of the members of the Economic and Social Council and the non-permanent members of the Security Council as a significant outcome of the Ad Hoc Working Group during the sixty-eighth session.

43. The Co-Chairs thanked the representatives of the Main Committees for their briefings and thanked delegations for their active participation during the discussion, expressing appreciation for the proposals voiced. They highlighted, inter alia, the views on rationalization of the agenda and the implementation of resolutions. The Co-Chairs looked forward to the contribution of the Ad Hoc Working Group to achieving concrete success in the light of the seventieth anniversary of the Organization.

Third thematic meeting: selection and appointment of the Secretary-General and other executive heads of the United Nations system

44. The Co-Chairs convened the fourth meeting of the Working Group, which was also the third thematic meeting, on 27 April 2015, and heard statements from 33 delegations, including on behalf of major groups.

45. In their opening remarks, the Co-Chairs recalled the latest mandate, contained in resolution 68/307, which requested the Ad Hoc Working Group to continue considering this matter during the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly. In this regard, they stressed that the relevant language in this year’s resolution — both in terms of what would and would not be included — could have a direct impact on the next selection process, in 2016.

46. In the course of the ensuing debate, many speakers called for tangible improvements in the process, especially with a view to strengthening the role of the General Assembly, thereby enhancing its transparency. This, it was argued, was the more important given the role of the Secretary-General in dealing with global challenges. The factors of regional rotation and gender equality were raised, as were procedural aspects, such as the possibility of establishing a predictable timeline, including a deadline for the identification of candidates — as well as their pros and cons. There was also a general appreciation of the distribution of roles that was accorded in the Charter of the United Nations, in particular in its Article 97, which states that the Secretary-General “shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council”, a point that was reinforced by some of the speakers. On the other hand, several other speakers indicated their openness to considering new measures, such as the possibility of having more than one candidate be considered by the Assembly. Several delegations also argued in favour of taking a decision on the appointment of the Secretary-General by secret ballot. Some speakers also called for greater interaction with candidates, including through the timely holding of informal meetings of the Assembly, interactive dialogues, or a Security Council meeting open to all Member States of the United Nations, as well as observers and civil society. The role of the President of the General Assembly was raised, as was the possibility of modifying the term of office to a single, non-renewable term. Interventions furthermore called for the implementation of existing provisions in resolutions on this issue that had already been adopted. Overall, however, there was a clear consensus on the need for the process to identify the best possible candidate for the post of Secretary-General.

47. The Chair of the Eastern European Group for the month of April, as the only regional group in the General Assembly from which a Secretary-General had never been elected, reiterated its interest, first expressed in 2004, that the position of the next Secretary-General be filled by a candidate from that Group. Recalling resolution 51/241, which provided for “due regard” to be given to regional rotation, the Group was of the view that the time had finally come for a national from its region to be entrusted with the highest position in the Secretariat. The Group furthermore stressed the need to apply the principle of rotation in filling all key positions within the United Nations system. Whereas one speaker observed that the position of Secretary-General had so far never been filled by a candidate from Eastern Europe, another argued that while candidates from the Western European and Other Group had held the office for a total period of 25 years, the Eastern European Group had never had a Secretary-General and that the Latin America and the Caribbean Group had had only one. Yet another participant stressed that the paramountcy of electing the most qualified person should override other important aspirations.

48. An important factor discussed was the question of gender balance, in which regard many speakers noted that due consideration should be given to that question in the appointment process. Some observed that the office had so far never been held by a woman, and therefore strongly encouraged Member States to put forward qualified female candidates during the forthcoming selection process. Those Members moreover argued for preference to be given to equally qualified female candidates in the next selection process, noting, inter alia, the role of the United Nations in advocating women’s empowerment and gender equality worldwide. One delegation pointed out that in the past 70 years, 60 women had assumed the highest office and that 28 women were currently leaders of their respective countries. Some even noted that resolution 11 (I) of 1946 referred to a “man”, and that this needed to be amended, even as subsequent resolutions included references to gender equality. Arguing against restricting the pool of candidates, another delegation, on the other hand, stressed its principled position that discrimination generally was unacceptable, including vis-à-vis men, and noted historical instances of women having been considered as candidates, such as in 2006. Resolution 11 (I), it was furthermore pointed out, was gender neutral in some of the official language versions and hence should not be considered as an impediment to putting forward female candidates.

49. A Group of States, having circulated a non-paper outlining specific procedural steps aimed at ensuring increased transparency, inclusiveness and a more rigorous process in selecting the next Secretary-General, laid out a vision that would include a joint letter from the President of the General Assembly and the President of the Security Council inviting nominations, including a deadline; issuance of an official document listing the candidates; and a timeline indicating the necessary steps leading to the final appointment. One delegation called for such a letter to be sent in June or July 2015, and another requested the President of the sixty-ninth session of the Assembly to issue a call for nominations before the end of his term. Another group was of the view that early presentations of candidatures and the establishment of a list of candidates could facilitate the process and allow for sufficient time for interaction with Member States. Other delegations, on the other hand, objected to the imposition of deadlines, stressing that the overriding goal was to ensure that the best individual for the job was found, even if his or her candidature was presented late in the process.

50. Considerable interest was expressed by various speakers regarding the provision of opportunities for interaction with candidates, either in the Security Council and/or the General Assembly. One such group, for instance, called for open hearings organized by the President of the Assembly in the form of interactive dialogues with the wider membership as well as for hearings and Arria-formula meetings in the Security Council with shortlisted candidates. Those speakers also supported public briefings to update the membership on the developments in the selection process. Another group called upon the President of the Assembly to conduct timely hearings for an exchange of views and dialogue with candidates endorsed by a Member State. One delegation argued that it was not necessary to wait until all candidates had presented their candidatures before convening those meetings. Another delegation, on the other hand, opposed such hearings by pointing to the existing practice of candidates' meeting with regional groups instead. The question of criteria for the post was also raised on the argument that those could serve as a guide in the selection process. In general, commitment to the principles and goals of the United Nations, leadership, and extensive administrative and diplomatic experience were cited as examples. Some countries noted a number of additional attributes which they saw as indispensable, including exceptional management and leadership skills; the demonstrated commitment to creating and building integrity, fairness and competence; determination to accelerate management reform of the United Nations; being a proven team leader; and possessing sensitivity for the needs of the developing world. Some delegations also mentioned that it was important for the future Secretary-General to have multilingual skills. Yet, others, more generally, stressed the importance of seeking the best candidate, and argued that guidelines that were too restrictive might exclude valuable candidates.

51. Several Member States appealed to the Security Council to consider recommending more than one candidate for consideration by the Assembly, with some arguing that resolution 11 (I) was reflective of a particular historical context and was no longer appropriate in today's global context. One delegation specifically argued that resolution 11 (I) in any case was only a recommendation since it stated that it would be merely “desirable” for the Council to present one candidate only. Regarding voting procedures, one Group of States stressed the importance of full compliance with relevant Assembly resolutions as well as with rule 141 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly, which, it argued, provided for a secret ballot in a private meeting. It was also argued that the Secretary-General should be appointed by a 2/3 majority of the members of the General Assembly. At the same time, it was also suggested that it was important to respect past practices in the Assembly as well as the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. One delegation underlined therefore that it was not realistic to look at options beyond what was envisioned in the Charter, and cautioned that the Assembly should not attempt to pursue changes to the Council’s role, and/or working methods, in the process. Another delegation similarly stressed that any new procedures should not risk fragmenting support for the new Secretary-General.

52. Some speakers also touched upon the appointments of other executive heads, and one group in this regard stressed that candidates for the post of Secretary-General should not be under pressure to make senior appointments. Another group indicated that the criteria applied in the appointment of executive heads needed to be re-examined, including with regard to inclusivity and transparency, and specifically requested the Secretariat to provide information about the number of nationals from the Latin American and Caribbean region who had either been appointed as executive heads, or were in other high-level management positions throughout the Organization. Another delegation encouraged a discussion about the appointment process of the Deputy Secretary-General and argued that regional rotation and gender balance should also be observed in the selection of candidates for that position. Yet another group, while stressing the need to ensure equal and fair distribution based on gender and geographical balance, called for candidates who meet the highest possible requirements in the appointment of executive heads of the Organization.

53. In closing, the Co-Chairs summarized the main points in the deliberation, and, while identifying some discrepancies that needed to be addressed, recognized nonetheless the high expectations among the membership to reach a tangible outcome of this issue in the Ad Hoc Working Group.

Fourth thematic meeting: strengthening the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the General Assembly

54. The Co-Chairs convened the fifth meeting of the Working Group, which was also the fourth thematic meeting, on 12 May 2015. It included briefings by the Chef de Cabinet of the Office of the President of the General Assembly and by the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management. The briefings were followed by an interactive question-and-answer session and, subsequently, by remarks from nine delegations, including on behalf of major groups.

55. In their opening remarks, the Co-Chairs stressed that while some measures had already been adopted to strengthen the Office of the President of the General Assembly, there was still room for improvement, especially to ensure the best possible institutional memory for future Presidents of the General Assembly.

56. The Chef de Cabinet, pursuant to resolution 68/307, provided a briefing on the role, authority and activities of the President of the General Assembly. To this end, he provided an overview of various high-level meetings initiated by the President during the sixty-ninth session so far, as well as a preview of others yet to come. Underlining the continued commitment of the President to strengthening further cooperation, and the coordination and exchange of information with the other principal organs and the Secretariat, he pointed to regular meetings held during the sixty-ninth session. Highlighting the considerable increase in the workload of the Office in recent years, the Chef de Cabinet expressed regret that this had not been matched with adequate resources, arguing that the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly as a whole had been undermined. Therefore, bold steps were required from Member States to ensure more adequate financing, including the timely provision of staff, especially in the light of the fact that by the time the Presidents got a full complement of appropriate staffing, the session was well under way. Furthermore, provision of an official residence from the United Nations regular budget was a measure that could be envisaged. The unpredictable resource situation currently obtaining might pose the risk that some Member States would be prevented from ever offering a candidate for the post of President of the General Assembly. Regarding the transition from one session to the next, the current President had agreed to take over some staff from the previous presidency, and was willing to similarly cooperate with the next one as well. The Chef de Cabinet issued a special token of gratitude to the Secretariat, in particular the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, for the dedication, tireless efforts and professionalism of its staff, without which the important work done during this session would not have been possible.

57. The Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management provided a briefing on the staffing, funding and budgetary support for the Office of the President of the General Assembly, as well as the overall support provided by the Department. The Under-Secretary-General informed that, in terms of staffing, the overall resources allocated in support of the Office exceeded $1 million per year from the budget of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and included two posts at the D-2 level, one at the D-1 level and one at the P-5 level, as well as one General Service staff member to be recruited by the President of the General Assembly. From within the Department, two staff members at the Professional level were designated to provide substantive and analytical support to the Office of the President in order to have the continuity and institutional knowledge and expertise sought by the Assembly. Two General Service staff members of the Department were located directly in the Office to assist in the daily functioning of the work of the Office, based on institutional memory. In addition, and pursuant to resolution 68/246 by which the Assembly had approved the Department's request for an additional post in support of the Office, the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management provided a wide range of assistance and services; this support included protocol services, and translation and text processing services, depending on the language requirements of each presidency. From other Departments, the President was provided with a car and driver to be used for official purposes, and office space, including transitional office space for the Presidents-elect, from the Department for Management. The Department of Safety and Security provided the President with a security detail, including during travel and in support of official functions. The President was also entitled to select a spokesperson for the duration of his or her term of office, who was provided by the Department of Public Information. The Office of Legal Affairs also provided legal assistance and guidance as requested.

58. Turning to the issue of funding the Office, the Under-Secretary-General noted that the overall resources arose from many sources, and so was embedded in numerous budget lines. He noted that the Assembly approved an amount of $250,000 per annum, effective 1998 — currently approximately $300,000, if adjusted for inflation — this amount covered the costs of official travel, official hospitality and miscellaneous staff expenditures, such as overtime and other expenditures. In response to the interest expressed by the Assembly in seeking ways to further support the Office in accordance with existing procedures, the Secretariat, in the light of the difficult financial situation which prevailed, had so far sought to increase substantive support to the Office of the President while maintaining the current level of funding. Given the static nature of this funding, a trust fund had been established in 2010 for the purpose of accepting voluntary funds in support of the Office. The respective contributions were usually earmarked for specific purposes, such as the organization of a thematic debate, and were associated with a specific session. During the sixty-ninth session, a number of contributions had been received, particularly in support of activities in connection with the post-2015 development agenda.

59. Aside from those specific allocations, either in the form of financial or human resources, the Secretariat actively supported the President and his Office on a daily basis throughout the year, with the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council Affairs Division of the Department of General Assembly and Conference Management serving as both the focal point, the repository of best practices, and the substantive backstopping office for the President and his or her Office. The Department also advised the Presidents-elect and facilitated the transition period from one session to the next. In this context, the Under-Secretary-General highlighted the collaboration between the Department and the Permanent Mission of Finland to the United Nations, which had taken the initiative to organize a retreat — now for the fifth year in a row — that brought together the incoming and outgoing presidencies, including the elected members of the General Committee, thereby contributing to an exchange of ideas and best practices. Generally, the Department's support encompassed a wide range of analytical, substantive, and technical support and included background briefs on specific substantive, procedural or technical questions during each presidency, as well as a whole range of conference management and conference support services which benefitted the Office.

60. Nine delegations commented on the presentations given, and expressed appreciation for the briefings provided. Highlighting the increased workload of the Office of the President owing to the number of meetings, volume of resolutions, frequency of United Nations conferences, mandates and other commitments routinely addressed to the Presidents, a number of speakers expressed support for an increase in the resources allocated to the Office. Those speakers noted that, while the prerogatives of the President had remained unchanged, his role and activities had evolved in adapting to the growing number of conferences and initiatives of the Assembly, in the performance of official protocol functions, in representing the Assembly all over the world and in making its work more widely known and more visible. In this connection, those speakers sought clarification from the Secretariat about the current status of the Trust Fund since it was authorized by resolution 68/307. One delegation suggested that the number of United Nations conferences that required attendance by the President undoubtedly entailed budgetary implications for the Office. Some noted that the Secretariat had repeatedly failed to implement relevant provisions in the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, specifically the request that the Secretary-General make proposals to review the budget allocation of the Office of the President in the context of the biennial budget proposals, and sought clarification on that point.

61. A number of other delegations, on the other hand, expressed their principled opposition to any measures that would entail budgetary implications, emphasizing their continuing reservations against any budgetary implications arising from decisions taken by the Ad Hoc Working Group and stressed that in the light of the current budgetary situation, the Working Group needed to focus exclusively on cost-neutral and/or cost-reducing measures. Those delegations therefore proposed to look instead into other measures that could alleviate the workload of the Office, as well as that of the General Assembly, more generally. Such proposals included setting deadlines for Working Groups, improving the working methods of the Main Committees, reducing the number of items on the agenda through streamlining, and rationalizing the meetings schedule of the Assembly. The Office of the President, it was suggested, could be a valuable partner in ensuring the success of any such initiative. One group expressed its readiness to discuss constructively measures that might help to improve the functioning of the Office, seeking to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly, while also commending the Secretariat for the creation of a multilingual General Assembly revitalization website within existing resources. Other measures proposed included the practice of outgoing Presidents' briefing their successors and encouraging them to share their views and recommendations with the Ad Hoc Working Group as well; and gaining from the experiences of past Presidents through the Council of Presidents of the General Assembly, more generally. This Group also recalled the provision from previous resolutions for the Presidents of the General Assembly to continue the practice of periodically briefing Member States on their activities, including official travel, which, it emphasized, was not only a valuable source of information but also an important act of transparency for Member States, especially as the President represented all Member States when attending official meetings and during official travel.

62. One speaker furthermore stressed that any proposal for the increase of the budget allocation for the Office of the President of the General Assembly needed to be approved by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Fifth Committee in line with the rules of procedure of the Assembly, and be accompanied by detailed information on its rationale. At the same time, any such request should coincide with a thorough examination of the use of the current resources allocated to the Office, including how effectively its staff operated. Another participant underlined the importance that the staff of the Office meet the highest standards, and should be recruited on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

63. Other proposals made included the issuance by the Secretariat of a compendium of best practices; that outgoing presidencies submit an analytical report to their successors on lessons learned and outstanding items on the agenda; the establishment of a consultative forum bringing together Facilitators and Co-Chairs during any given session to facilitate exchange among them; the creation of a "permanent committee" within the Office to preserve institutional memory; and review and reduction of the number of thematic debates, which should be convened only if corresponding to a matter of interest to a majority of the membership.

64. In closing, the Co-Chairs, at the end of five meetings, dedicated to substantive debate, commented on the high level of interest in the issue of revitalization of the work of the General Assembly, as underscored throughout those meetings. Looking forward, they would be preparing a draft resolution, based on resolution 68/307, which would be circulated in early June for review and comments by Member States before commencing negotiations.

III. Conclusion

65. In accordance with its mandate, the Working Group endeavoured to identify key issues of concern and possible consensus, to examine the current status of implementation of those issues, and either to take action or to indicate possible further action to be taken.

66. At its final meeting, held on 2 September 2015, the Working Group considered and adopted the present report, including the draft resolution contained in section IV below (see para. 68).

Explanatory note by the Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the Work of the General Assembly (sixty-ninth session)

1. In accordance with paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 68/307, in which the Assembly decided that the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the Work of the General Assembly should continue its review of the inventory of Assembly resolutions on revitalization annexed to the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-eighth session (A/68/951), and, as a result, continue to update the inventory to be attached to the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group at the sixty-ninth session, the Co-Chairs, assisted by the Secretariat, have prepared the updated inventory chart for consideration by Member States.
2. The present inventory chart has been updated to reflect the progress achieved since the adoption of resolution 68/307.
3. The Co-Chairs, assisted by the Secretariat, obtained updated information, where possible, from relevant entities responsible for implementation.
4. The updated inventory chart retains the following two-part structure, which was also utilized in the report submitted at the sixty-seventh session:
  - (a) The first part contains unimplemented provisions, in order to focus on their follow-up;
  - (b) The second part contains implemented provisions, both those that required one-time action and those to be implemented on an ongoing basis, in order to keep track of previous achievements and provide the means to compare with and learn from past experience.
5. Thus, in practical terms, the updated inventory chart can continue to provide clear evidence of ongoing progress and signal opportunities for further progress.
6. The inventory chart does not have a definite character and may be amended at any time by Member States through the Ad Hoc Working Group. Furthermore, it is not intended to, and does not, have any legal effect. It should serve only as a tool to facilitate discussions on the follow-up to the implementation of the previous related resolutions.
