		The Holy See commended the Government of Norway for hosting the Conference on the Humanitarian Impact of Nuclear Weapons in March 2013, and welcomed the offer by the Government of Mexico to hold a follow-up meeting to continue the discussion on this extremely important matter. At the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on nuclear disarmament, the Holy See reiterated its conviction that the complete elimination of nuclear weapons is essential to removing the danger of nuclear war, and that it joined all who wish to be free from the spectre of nuclear warfare. The Holy See also expressed concern over the modernization programmes of the nuclear weapons States, which continue despite their affirmations of eventual nuclear disarmament. It emphasized that these affirmations must result in meaningful commitments by the nuclear weapons States to divest themselves of their nuclear weapons. Furthermore, it stressed that in order to address in a systematic and coherent manner the legal, political and technical requisites for a world free from nuclear arms, preparatory work on a convention or a framework agreement for a phased and verifiable elimination of nuclear arms should begin as soon as possible. In this context, the Holy See does not countenance the continuation of nuclear deterrence, since it is evident that deterrence is driving the development of ever more modern nuclear arms, thus preventing genuine nuclear disarmament. The Holy See emphasized that the military doctrine of nuclear deterrence, politically supported by the nuclear weapons States, must be addressed in order to break the chain of dependence on deterrence. The Holy See also called on everyone to consider the ethical dimensions and the moral legitimacy of the production, processing, development, accumulation, use and threat of use of nuclear arms, emphasizing that military doctrines based on nuclear arms, as instruments of security and defence of an elite group, hinder and jeopardize the process of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation.
