Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

In a number of resolutions, the General Assembly has noted with satisfaction the active participation of regional and other organizations in the work of the United Nations. The present report is prepared pursuant to the most recent requests of the Assembly that the Secretary-General submit a report on the implementation of those resolutions at its seventy-first session. As requested by the Assembly in paragraph 4 (l) of the annex to its resolution 58/316, this is a consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations.

The present report covers the period since the issuance of the most recent consolidated report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, issued on 4 August 2014 (A/69/228-S/2014/560).

In its resolution 1809 (2008), the Security Council requested the Secretary-General to include, in his regular reporting to the Council, assessments of progress on the cooperation between the United Nations and relevant regional organizations. In its presidential statement of 6 August 2013, the Council also requested the Secretary-General to include, in his next biannual report to the Council and the General Assembly on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, recommendations on ways to enhance cooperation between the United Nations and relevant regional and subregional organizations and arrangements.

I. Introduction

1. Section II of the present report has been prepared pursuant to the most recent resolutions in which the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report on the cooperation between the United Nations and a number of regional and other organizations.

2. In its resolution 1809 (2008), the Security Council requested the Secretary-General to include, in his regular reporting to the Council, assessments of progress on the cooperation between the United Nations and relevant regional organizations. In its presidential statement of 6 August 2013, the Council also requested the Secretary-General to include, in his next biannual report to the Council and the General Assembly on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, recommendations on ways to enhance cooperation between the United Nations and relevant regional and subregional organizations and arrangements.

3. The activities and achievements described in the present report speak to the depth and range of cooperation achieved between the United Nations and its regional partners across international peace and security, humanitarian assistance, development, and human rights.

II. Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations

African Union

4. The Security Council and the African Union Peace and Security Council held their ninth and tenth annual consultative meetings in 2015 and 2016. The United Nations-African Union Joint Task Force on Peace and Security continues to meet regularly in order to advance a common understanding of the causes of conflict in Africa and to promote joint approaches to resolving those conflicts.

5. The United Nations Office to the African Union has continued to strengthen the partnership with the African Union in the area of peace and security. Specifically, the Office has enhanced political engagement with the decision-making organs of the African Union and with the Commission. The Office has promoted shared analysis and common understanding between the United Nations and the African Union of the root causes and drivers of conflict and jointly developed options for intervention. Through sustained engagement of the African Union Commission, troop-contributing countries/police-contributing countries, Member States and donors, it has contributed to enhanced political coherence and alignment in decision-making by the two organizations, and promoted better coordinated joint initiatives in conflict prevention, peacemaking and peacekeeping. The United Nations Office to the African Union has been instrumental in facilitating better synchronized planning and management of African-led peace operations, as well as transitions to United Nations operations.

6. The Office continued to work with the African Union on the operationalization of the African Standby Force, as one of the key pillars of the African Peace and Security Architecture. Among the deliverables of this cooperation is the implementation of the African Standby Force Road Map II, which culminated in the conduct of a continental-level peace support operations exercise, Amani Africa II, in October 2015 in South Africa, and its after-action review in March 2016 in Mozambique. The exercise aimed at assessing the operational readiness of the African Standby Force and involved the deployment of over 5,000 military, police and civilian personnel from the five regional standby forces. Following this exercise, four of the five regional standby forces declared their operational readiness.

7. During the past two years, the African Union-led International Support missions in Mali and the Central African Republic transitioned to fully fledged United Nations missions. Joint planning and management of these transitions have contributed to more effective communication between the African Union and the United Nations. The momentum created by the 2015 High-Level Independent Panel on Peace Operations report (S/2015/446) and my subsequent report on the future of United Nations peace operations (S/2015/682) has generated willingness among key actors to move forward on institutionalizing and expanding the United Nations-African Union partnership through consultations and coordination while also looking for ways to ensure sustained, predictable and flexible funding mechanisms for African Union peace operations.

8. In Somalia, the strategic partnership between the United Nations and the African Union remains a key component of the international community's support to peacebuilding. Cooperation between the African Union Mission to Somalia (AMISOM) and the United Nations Assistance Mission in Somalia on the ground has remained strong, at both the strategic and operational level. The United Nations delivers the logistic support package to AMISOM through the United Nations Support Office for the African Union Mission in Somalia, and its successor operation, the United Nations Support Office in Somalia. In addition, the United Nations Office to the African Union continued to provide technical management and expert advice to the African Union in the planning and deployment of AMISOM. The African Union and the United Nations conducted a second joint Mission in April 2015 which led to the AMISOM Concept of Operations review in August 2015.

9. In Burundi, cooperation on political and human rights efforts has intensified since the beginning of the crisis in April 2015. Since July 2015, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has provided logistical and capacity-building support to the African Union human rights observers and military experts deployed in Burundi and cooperated with the observers in joint monitoring missions and advocacy. In April 2016, the African Union and the Peacebuilding Support Office approved a project of $2.26 million to enable the continued deployment of 32 African Union human rights observers in Burundi for six months starting in April.

10. The Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the Great Lakes Region has continued to work closely with the African Union, the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region and the Southern African Development Community (SADC) to advance the Peace, Security and Cooperation Framework for the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the region, signed in February 2013. The United Nations has also cooperated with the African Union, the International Conference and SADC in their efforts to eradicate illegal armed groups operating in the eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo, notably the Mouvement du 23 mars and the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda. The United Nations, together with the African Union, the International Conference and other partners, organized the first Great Lakes Private Sector Investment Conference in Kinshasa in February 2016.

11. Since December 2014, the United Nations and the African Union have co-chaired the International Contact Group on Libya, which has convened five times. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Libya regularly coordinated with the African Union Special Envoy for Libya, as well as with the Commissioner for Peace and Security, including through several visits to Addis Ababa.

15. The United Nations and the African Union continued to coordinate on country-specific electoral projects as necessary. The United Nations recruited and deployed a senior electoral expert to the United Nations Office to the African Union in early 2015. The senior electoral expert has contributed to the United Nations electoral support in the region and provided technical advice to the Democracy and Electoral Assistance Unit of the African Union as necessary.

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) supports NEPAD capacity development work for nutrition-sensitive agriculture investment plans and the establishment of a knowledge-sharing platform for food security and nutrition as well as the implementation of the NEPAD Youth Programme. The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) has worked with NEPAD to combat rural poverty across the continent.
