Seventy-third session

Item 79 of the preliminary list*

Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission

Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report has been prepared pursuant to paragraphs 30 and 31 of General Assembly resolution 72/112. Section II contains a summary of information received from Governments on the extent to which jurisdiction over their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission is established under their national laws. Section III provides a summary of the information received from Governments on the handling of credible allegations that reveal that a crime may have been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission by States against whose nationals such allegations are made, and matters relating thereto. Section IV provides a summary of the information on cooperation among States and with the United Nations in the exchange of information and the facilitation of investigations and prosecution of such individuals, as well as the protection of victims and witnesses in this process. Section V contains a summary of information on vetting by Member States contributing personnel to the United Nations. Section VI provides a summary of the comments received from Governments on the report of the Group of Legal Experts on ensuring the accountability of United Nations staff and experts on mission with respect to criminal acts committed in peacekeeping operations (A/60/980), including on the question of future action. Sections VII and VIII relate to information on activities within the Secretariat.

* A/73/50.

I. Introduction

1. The present report has been prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 72/112, in which the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the resolution, in particular with respect to paragraphs 10, 12, 13, 15, 18 and 20 thereof, as well as any practical problems in its implementation, on the basis of information received from Governments and the Secretariat. The present report contains summaries of the information received from Governments and from the Secretariat further to the aforementioned paragraphs of resolution 72/112. The full texts of the information received from Governments will be made available from the website of the Sixth Committee (www.un.org/en/ga/sixth/).

2. Information was received from the following States: Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Finland, Germany, Greece, Latvia, Mexico, Montenegro, the Netherlands, Qatar, Switzerland, Turkey and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

3. Section II concerns information received relating to the criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission, pursuant to paragraph 10 of resolution 72/112. Section III concerns information received pursuant to paragraphs 18 to 20 of the resolution, while section IV covers information received under paragraph 12. Section V provides information relating to paragraph 13 of the resolution and section VI relates to information regarding paragraph 15.

4. Sections VII and VIII relate to activities undertaken within the Secretariat in the implementation of paragraphs 6, 13, 14, 18 to 23 and 31 of the resolution.

5. The present report should be read together with the other report of the Secretary-General issued at the seventy-third session of the General Assembly under the item on criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission (A/73/128), as well as previous reports of the Secretary-General under that item.¹ As noted in previous reports of the Secretary-General, the present report, coupled with the work of the Sixth Committee, is but one aspect of the work of the Organization to address issues of accountability within the United Nations. Different reporting mechanisms apply with respect to questions of accountability within the Organization which might bear on questions of criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission. As noted in previous reports (see, for example, A/72/205), other reports prepared pursuant to other mandates may be relevant to the present item.²

II. Establishment of jurisdiction over crimes of a serious nature

Belgium

6. Belgium noted that it does not have specific rules or provisions on jurisdiction over United Nations officials and experts on mission or over Belgian nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission. Belgium stated that the rules of ordinary law applicable to Belgian nationals, based on territorial and extraterritorial jurisdiction, might apply to such cases. Belgium also stated that those rules apply, with the reservation for immunities and jurisdictional privileges binding on Belgium, under international law and, at the national level, under article 1 bis of the preliminary section of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Belgium noted that persons subject to Belgian military laws, persons attached in any capacity to an army detachment serving in foreign territory or persons authorized to accompany military units forming part of such detachments may be prosecuted by the Belgian judicial authorities for any offence committed in the territory of a foreign State by virtue of article 10 bis of the preliminary section of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Belgium highlighted that this would be subject to the immunities and jurisdiction privileges recognized under international law. Belgium clarified that no provision of its criminal law or criminal procedure specifically applies to the immunities and jurisdictional privileges of United Nations officials and experts on mission. Belgium provided information on relevant provisions of its Criminal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure.

² See, for instance, A/73/71, A/72/751 and A/72/751/Corr.1, A/72/773 and A/72/885.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

7. Bosnia and Herzegovina reiterated information previously provided (see A/72/205). Bosnia and Herzegovina also specified that the following principles are envisaged in articles 8 and 9 of its Criminal Code: territoriality, nationality, protective principle, passive personality and universality.

8. Bosnia and Herzegovina noted that there are specific situations in which certain categories of persons are not subject to criminal legislation or are subject to it conditionally. Bosnia and Herzegovina offered examples of such categories of persons: Members of Parliament, Heads of State, heads of diplomatic missions, members of diplomatic staff and international officials.

Bulgaria

9. Further to information previously reported (see A/66/174), Bulgaria provided unofficial translations of excerpts of its Criminal Code. According to articles 3 to 6 of the Bulgarian Criminal Code, the Code applies to: (a) all crimes committed in the territory of Bulgaria; (b) Bulgarian citizens for crimes committed by them abroad; (c) foreign citizens who have committed crimes of a general nature abroad, whereby the interests of Bulgaria or of Bulgarian citizens are affected; (d) foreign citizens who have committed crimes against peace and humanity abroad, whereby the interests of another State or foreign citizens have been affected; and (e) other crimes committed by foreign citizens abroad, where this is stipulated in an international agreement to which Bulgaria is a party.

Germany

10. Germany reiterated information previously reported (see A/63/260). Germany added that German law allows for the prosecution in Germany of criminal offences committed by its nationals while serving on United Nations missions. Although the German Criminal Code does not contain specific provisions on United Nations personnel, German nationals are subject to German jurisdiction if the act constitutes a criminal offence in the locality where it was committed or if that locality is not under any criminal jurisdiction. Certain types of offence, such as offences against sexual self-determination, are also subject to German jurisdiction even if the act does not constitute a criminal offence in the locality where it was committed.

11. Germany stated that there is no separate regime for soldiers in its Federal Armed Forces and that German criminal law also applies to offences committed by Federal Armed Forces personnel on missions abroad, including United Nations missions.

Greece

12. Greece reiterated information provided in previous reports (see A/63/260, A/68/173 and A/70/208). Greece stated that although it has no specific criminal legislation covering United Nations officials and experts on mission, its criminal law adequately covers such category of persons. It added that it has no specific legislation concerning Greek military personnel when deployed to the United Nations, and thus the relevant provisions of the Greek Penal Code and Military Penal Code apply.

Latvia

13. Latvia reported that under its Criminal Law: (a) section 4 provides for extraterritorial jurisdiction over offences committed by its nationals, including persons serving in United Nations missions; (b) a Latvian national serving as a United Nations expert or official can be held liable under section 1 for an offence committed in the territory of another State or outside the territory of any State irrespective of whether it is punishable in that territory; and (c) section 4, paragraph 2, establishes jurisdiction over extraterritorial offences committed by Latvian soldiers on United Nations international missions, unless otherwise provided for in international agreements binding upon Latvia.

14. Latvia noted that the model status-of-forces agreement for peacekeeping operations provides for the exclusive jurisdiction of States over military members of their national contingents in respect of any crimes committed in the host State.

Mexico

15. Mexico reiterated information provided in previous submissions (see A/64/183 and A/65/185). Mexico added that it is in favour of States establishing jurisdiction over crimes of a serious nature committed by their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission.

Montenegro

16. Montenegro reported that under articles 136 and 137 of its Criminal Code, the criminal legislation applies to: (a) Montenegrin nationals whenever they commit a criminal offence abroad, provided that they are found in the territory of Montenegro or are extradited to Montenegro; and (b) foreign nationals who commit crimes abroad against Montenegro or its nationals, provided that they are found in the territory of Montenegro or are extradited to Montenegro. In such cases, prosecution is only conducted if the criminal offence in question is also punishable under the law of the State in which the offence was committed, except in cases in which the Supreme State Prosecutor approves prosecution otherwise.

17. Montenegrin criminal legislation also applies to individuals who become nationals of Montenegro after the commission of the criminal offence. This provision is an attempt to preclude perpetrators from avoiding criminal responsibility when they cannot be extradited to a foreign country, except when there is an international obligation binding on Montenegro.

Netherlands

18. The Netherlands provided an unofficial translation of the applicable provisions of its Criminal Code concerning criminal accountability. According to such provisions, the Criminal Code sets forth the principles of territoriality (section 2), nationality (section 7), passive personality (section 5), protective doctrine (section 4) and universality (section 6). Section 8 of the Criminal Code is a specific rule with regard to Netherlands officials, while section 4 of the Military Criminal Code is a specific rule with regard to members of the armed forces.

Qatar

19. Qatar reiterated information previously provided (see A/70/208). Qatar clarified that any national of Qatar who is a United Nations official shall be subject to the provision of the Penal Code of Qatar, even if the alleged crime is committed outside Qatari territory.

Switzerland

20. Switzerland reiterated information provided in previous submissions (see A/63/260, A/66/174, A/67/213, A/71/167 and A/71/167/Corr.1, and A/72/205). Switzerland asserted that in order for Switzerland to be able to prosecute its own nationals serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission, the United Nations must first waive their immunity.

Turkey

21. Turkey reported that under paragraph 10 of its Penal Code, an investigation can be conducted in Turkey, irrespective of the nature of the crime, when the crime was committed by a Turkish citizen in a foreign country while the citizen was performing an official duty in the name of Turkey. Additionally, under paragraph 11 of the Penal Code, depending on the severity of the crime, an investigation can also be conducted in Turkey when a Turkish citizen commits a crime in a foreign country. As a result, Turkey exercises jurisdiction over crimes, in particular crimes of a serious nature, committed by Turkish nationals abroad and while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission.

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

22. The United Kingdom reiterated the viewpoints previously expressed (see A/71/167 and A/71/167/Corr.1) and submitted updated tables, including references to legislation covering extraterritorial jurisdiction.

III. Handling of credible allegations that reveal that a crime may have been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission by States against whose nationals such allegations are made, and matters relating thereto

Finland

23. Finland reiterated its previous comments (see A/72/205). Finland reported that no crimes of a serious nature committed by Finnish nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission had been brought to the attention of the Finnish authorities.

Latvia

24. Latvia stated that information could be provided to the Secretary-General on the basis of a request insofar as it is not contrary to national law or prejudicial to national investigations, including the procedures stipulated in section 375, paragraph 1, of its Criminal Procedure Law.

Qatar

25. Qatar reiterated information provided in its previous submission (see A/70/208). Qatar added that according to its national records, there is no evidence that any Qatari nationals who are also United Nations officials have committed any crimes while in service.

Switzerland

26. Switzerland reported that cases had been brought to its attention because the alleged offences, although not committed by Swiss nationals, allegedly occurred in its territory. Switzerland informed the Secretary-General of measures taken regarding such cases. In this connection, Switzerland noted that the scope of paragraphs 18 and 20 of resolution 72/112 could be broadened to include cases that have been brought to the attention of a State other than the State of nationality of the individual.

Turkey

27. Turkey explained that article 158 of its Code of Criminal Procedure provides that a report or a complaint regarding crimes committed abroad but requiring follow-up in another State may be submitted through the diplomatic channel. In relation to United Nations officials and experts on mission, relevant diplomatic missions may be notified, and such notification is submitted to the Chief Public Prosecutor's Office. Furthermore, in the light of articles 8, 10, 11, 13 and 160 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Chief Public Prosecutor is obliged to deal with the matter and start proceedings upon being informed that a crime has been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission.

28. Turkey further stated, subject to the confidentiality of the investigation and principles of protection of personal data, its belief that it was an important and positive step for the Secretary-General to bring allegations to the attention of States, and for the States to provide updates on the handling of the allegations. Turkey noted that this would help to reduce impunity.

IV. Cooperation between States and with the United Nations in the exchange of information and the facilitation of investigations and prosecutions, and protection of victims and witnesses in this process

Bulgaria

29. Bulgaria reiterated information provided in its previous submission (see A/66/174) and submitted unofficial translations of: (a) chapter 36 of its Penal Procedure Code, which regulates proceedings in relation to international cooperation in criminal matters; (b) the Law on Extradition and the European Arrest Warrant; and (c) articles 67, 123 and 141 of its Penal Procedure Code, which govern victim and witness protection, including protective measures and interrogation of witnesses with secret identities.

30. Bulgaria further provided unofficial translations of two special laws on victims of crime, concerning: (a) the protection of persons endangered in connection with criminal proceedings, which provides for the conditions for ensuring special protection on behalf of the State to such endangered persons when they cannot be protected with the means envisaged in the Penal Procedure Code; and (b) the provision of support and financial compensation to victims of crimes (various types of support may be offered to victims, such as psychological and legal support, as well as financial compensation). Such legislation applies only to victims of specific crimes, such as terrorism, murder, sexual abuse and rape.

Germany

31. Germany stated that, in principle, evidence obtained from the United Nations is admissible in German criminal investigations and judicial proceedings, while its reliability and admissibility is decided by German investigating authorities and courts.

32. Germany reported that numerous legislative proposals adopted over the years have improved the position of victims in criminal proceedings. The protection of victims is foreseen in the German Code of Criminal Procedure and has been implemented under the European Union Victims' Rights Directive (directive 2012/29/EU). Victim support institutions and initiatives also exist in Germany.

Greece

33. Greece affirmed that it is ready and continuously endeavouring, in accordance with its national law, to afford every possible means of assistance, support and protection in relation to criminal investigations and criminal or extradition proceedings in respect of crimes committed by United Nations officials and experts on missions. Greece noted that it is willing to explore all ways and means of enhancing assistance and support and facilitating proceedings, bearing in mind due process considerations.

Latvia

34. Latvia noted that information exchange in criminal matters is taking place as prescribed in part C of its Criminal Procedure Law. Sections 673 and 675 of the Criminal Procedure Law address international cooperation with other States in various aspects of criminal matters and the procedures governing such cooperation between the relevant competent authorities. Latvia further explained that the Criminal Procedure Law allows the use in criminal proceedings of information provided by United Nations bodies, and that United Nations officials may be invited to take part in the criminal proceedings as witnesses or experts. Evidence acquired as a result of cooperation in criminal matters and in accordance with the criminal procedure of a foreign State is granted equivalent treatment as evidence acquired in accordance with the procedures under the Criminal Procedure Law.

35. Latvia added that victims and witnesses in cases of offences committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission are not granted a privileged status, but are subject to the applicable sections of the Criminal Procedure Law. In particular, chapter 17 of the Criminal Procedure Law provides a mechanism for the special procedural protection of persons involved in criminal proceedings whose life, health or other lawful interests are threatened.

Mexico

36. Mexico asserted that it will respond to all requests for support and assistance submitted by requesting States, either by means of a treaty or on the basis of reciprocity, concerning crimes of a serious nature alleged to have been committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission. Mexico is currently a party to 34 bilateral treaties on mutual legal assistance and extradition and several multilateral treaties on international cooperation.

37. Mexico reported that, according to the General Victims Act, all government authorities and constitutional organs, government offices, agencies and entities and public and private institutions responsible for protecting victims are required to provide victims with support, assistance and/or comprehensive reparations. The General Victims Act is informed by, inter alia, the principles of protection, proportionality and confidentiality. It also provides for the establishment of a national victims' registry, whereby victims are granted timely and effective access to assistance, care, justice and comprehensive reparations.

Montenegro

38. Montenegro stated that it had signed the European Convention on Extradition of 13 December 1957. In this vein, in the case of a request for the extradition of a Montenegrin national for a criminal offence committed in the territory of another State, Montenegro may refuse to extradite its national. Should that be the case, Montenegro informs the authorities of the requesting State accordingly.

39. Montenegro also stated that it had signed extradition treaties with Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Italy and Serbia. Under those treaties, Montenegro reports that there is the possibility for a party to extradite its own nationals to another party.

Qatar

40. Qatar reiterated information previously provided (see A/70/208) and asserted that it is willing to cooperate judicially with any State that hosts United Nations operations and to exchange information pertaining to investigations, in accordance with Qatari laws.

Turkey

41. Turkey reported that it is a party to several international agreements and conventions regarding legal cooperation on criminal matters and extradition. With respect to States with which Turkey does not have an agreement, or are not party to a convention to which Turkey is a party, Turkey cooperates on the basis of reciprocity, in accordance with article 3 of Law No. 6706 on International Legal Cooperation in Criminal Matters. The law is aimed at facilitating, at the national level, the implementation of international agreements and conventions regarding legal cooperation on criminal matters to which Turkey is a party.

42. Turkey further reported that the Second Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters, which regulates judicial assistance procedures, entered into force in Turkey in 2016. Accordingly, judicial assistance procedures became possible in connection with requests for the provision of evidence in relation to Member States that are also party to the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters. Regarding Member States that are not party to the Convention, Turkey stated that judicial assistance requests can be addressed within the framework of existing bilateral agreements; if no such agreements are in place, requests can be addressed on the basis of the principle of reciprocity, as explained above.

43. Turkey stated that there is no obstacle to accepting information and material obtained from the United Nations for the purposes of criminal proceedings. However, Turkey noted that its Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 5271) has specific rules and conditions on the collection of samples from bodies of suspects and other persons for the purposes of an investigation or prosecution.

44. Additionally, Turkey stated that the Law on Witness Protection (Law No. 5726) and article 58 of the Turkish Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 5271) regulate witness protection. Under those laws, in order for the witness to benefit from protection measures, the crime in question should be serious to some extent, such as organized crime. Victims of crimes, who are also heard as witnesses, and their relatives enjoy the same witness protection. A witness protection board has also been established within the Ministry of the Interior, which conducts witness protection activities. Currently, efforts are in place to finalize the draft law on victims' rights, which concerns fundamental rights granted and support services provided to victims of crimes.

V. Vetting by Member States contributing personnel to the United Nations

Germany

45. Germany reported that the Centre for International Peace Operations, which is responsible for seconding personnel to the United Nations, ensures that personnel are aware of the high standards of conduct expected of those working for the Organization.

Latvia

46. Latvia noted that soldiers who meet requirements under its Military Service Law can be conscripted or accepted into military service and that those involved in the commission of offences cannot be sent on operations. Latvia further stated that all soldiers sent on international operations undertook pre-mission training, and that its armed forces will, where necessary, ensure the vetting of personnel and send those who meet the standards set for United Nations officials and experts.

47. Latvia added that United Nations recommendations will be taken into account in relation to the participation of the National Guard volunteer force in United Nations operations, pursuant to section 14, paragraph 4, of the National Guard of the Republic of Latvia Law.

Mexico

48. Mexico noted that it does not have legislation regulating forces that are deployed to United Nations peacekeeping operations. It noted that Mexican personnel serving in peacekeeping operations abide by the standards of respect for human rights and accountability.

49. As part of the zero-tolerance measures taken in relation to sexual exploitation and abuse, a protocol to prevent, address and punish sexual harassment and sexual abuse was issued in 2016, which applies to the entire Mexican federal public administration. Mexico also reported that in 2017 it signed the voluntary compact on preventing and addressing sexual exploitation and abuse proposed by the Secretary-General.

VI. Report of the Group of Legal Experts, including on the question of future action

Finland

50. Finland asserted that it remains ready to consider a proposal for a comprehensive international legal framework to ensure that criminal conduct of United Nations officials and experts on mission is addressed.

Mexico

51. Mexico stated that an instrument on the subject would be extremely useful in establishing an international treaty regime that obliges States to prosecute or extradite persons accused of crimes of a serious nature and to extend cooperation and mutual legal assistance to that end.

Qatar

52. Qatar noted that allowing States to hold international officials and mission members criminally accountable meant limiting the privileges and immunities enjoyed by those serving in that capacity, which would affect their neutrality and impartiality. Qatar stated that limits placed on privileges and immunities must conform to certain rules and conditions and must not allow abuses. Qatar suggested that a United Nations official be present during criminal accountability procedures and that the United Nations be informed of every act that might constitute a crime, restricting accountability to acts of a serious nature, regardless of the official's rank or title.

Switzerland

53. Switzerland reiterated the viewpoints previously presented (see A/71/167 and A/71/167/Corr.1 and A/72/205). Switzerland expressed hope to continue the discussions on the results of the study of the Swiss Institute of Comparative Law at the seventy-third session of the General Assembly, particularly in the working group of the Sixth Committee.

Turkey

54. Turkey affirmed that giving priority to the jurisdiction of the host State can be a practical solution in terms of the swift and efficient collection of first-hand evidence of the crime; this would also facilitate the protection of the evidence and prevent any possible delays. Turkey further asserted that jurisdiction is mainly established on the basis of the principle of territoriality and, in accordance with its national law, Turkish laws apply to offences committed in Turkey.

VII. Bringing credible allegations that reveal that a crime may have been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission to the attention of the States against whose nationals such allegations are made, and matters relating thereto

55. In paragraphs 18 to 23 and 27 to 31 of its resolution 72/112, the General Assembly urged Member States to provide information to the Secretary-General, requested the Secretary-General to provide certain information to the Assembly and requested the United Nations to take certain measures concerning the issue of criminal accountability of officials and experts on mission.

Criminal conduct of personnel deployed in field missions

56. The Secretary-General continued to expect that any criminal conduct committed by United Nations staff members, or other categories of personnel deployed in field missions, would be prosecuted in a manner consistent with the gravity of the offence. That was particularly the case in instances of sexual abuse that amounted to crimes under the laws of host or sending States. Such instances would include non-consensual sexual activities and sexual activities with minors. During the reporting period, the Office of Legal Affairs referred 14 cases of credible allegations of criminal conduct involving field personnel, including seven cases of sexual exploitation and abuse, to their States of nationality (see annex I to the present report).

57. In the latest report of the Secretary-General on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse (A/72/751 and A/72/751/Corr.1), the issue of the need for United Nations personnel to be held accountable for criminal offences was again raised. The Secretary-General again urged Member States to conclude the long-standing discussions on the adoption of an international convention on the issue. The Secretary-General also indicated that information would be sought from Member States regarding amendments to their administrative rules, regulations or codes governing police and military contingents to clearly recognize all forms of sexual exploitation and abuse as misconduct, where that was not already the case, and to indicate that such acts would attract the harshest available sanctions.

58. As observed in the previous report of the Secretary-General on criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission (A/72/205), peacekeeping missions continued to report, on a quarterly basis, on cooperation with host States regarding the investigation and prosecution of criminal offences committed by United Nations personnel, where applicable.

Referrals in relation to officials or experts on mission during the period from 1 July 2017 to 30 June 2018

59. The request in paragraph 18 of resolution 72/112 is similar to those made by the General Assembly in paragraph 17 of its resolution 71/134 (see A/72/205, covering the 2016/17 period), paragraph 15 of its resolution 70/114 (see A/71/167 and A/71/167/Corr.1, covering the 2015/16 period), and paragraph 9 of its resolutions 69/114 (see A/70/208, covering the 2014/15 period), 68/105 (see A/69/210, covering the 2013/14 period), 67/88 (see A/68/173, covering the 2012/13 period), 66/93 (see A/67/213, covering the 2011/12 period), 65/20 (see A/66/174 and A/66/174/Add.1, covering the 2010/11 period), 64/110 (see A/65/185, covering the 2009/10 period), 63/119 (see A/64/183 and A/64/183/Add.1, covering the 2008/09 period) and 62/63 (see A/63/260 and A/63/260/Add.1, covering the 2007/08 period).

60. During the period from 1 July 2017 to 30 June 2018, the Office of Legal Affairs referred to States of nationality, through the permanent missions concerned, 24 cases involving 25 United Nations officials and experts on mission for investigation and possible prosecution. Of those cases, 10 concerned allegations of corruption and fraud; 1 concerned allegations of corruption, fraud and drug crime; 2 concerned allegations of entitlement fraud; 6 concerned allegations of sexual exploitation and/or abuse; 1 concerned allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse and corruption; 1 concerned allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse and physical assault; 1 concerned allegations of threat of assault through the brandishing of a firearm; 1 concerned allegations of physical assault; and 1 concerned allegations of theft. Additional details regarding those cases, as required by paragraph 31 of resolution 72/112, are contained in annex I to the present report.

Information on the nature of the allegations and information received from States on all referrals since 1 July 2007

61. Annex I to the present report contains credible allegations that have been referred to States of nationality pursuant to resolution 62/63 and subsequent resolutions on the criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission. It also contains information and updates received from States in response to such referrals since 1 July 2007 and specific categories of information relating to the credible allegations referred. In addition, annex I contains the dates of follow-up requests sent by the Secretariat to such States, as requested by the General Assembly in paragraph 31 of resolution 72/112.

Updates from States on the status of their efforts to investigate and, as appropriate, prosecute cases, as well as assistance requested from the Secretariat

62. In accordance with paragraph 20 of resolution 72/112, the Secretariat requested the States to which cases were referred to keep the United Nations informed of any action taken by national authorities in relation to such cases and followed up on cases in which it did not receive a response from the Member State concerned. As of the date of preparation of the present report, the Secretariat had been contacted by States to which referrals were made during the reporting period with respect to the cases of five officials or experts on mission, noting that such cases had been raised with the relevant authorities. In three of those cases, the States concerned also requested specific assistance from the United Nations. The Secretariat remains ready to assist on all referrals made.

Notifications received from States with respect to investigations or prosecutions of crimes allegedly committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission

63. In paragraph 19 of resolution 72/112, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to seek, from all States that have notified the United Nations with respect to investigations or prosecutions of crimes allegedly committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission, updates on the status of their investigations or prosecutions, provided that this would not prejudice national investigations or national proceedings. In accordance with paragraphs 19 and 31 of resolution 72/112, annex II to the present report provides information on investigations or prosecutions concerning United Nations officials or experts on mission of which the Organization was notified during the reporting period, and as to which the State concerned did not object to their inclusion in the present report.

Possible use by States exercising jurisdiction of information from United Nations investigations

64. In paragraph 21 of resolution 72/112, the General Assembly requested the United Nations, when its investigations into allegations suggest that crimes of a serious nature may have been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission, to consider any appropriate measures that may facilitate the possible use of information and material for purposes of criminal proceedings initiated by States, bearing in mind due process considerations. In the same vein, in paragraph 23 of that resolution, the Assembly urged the United Nations to continue cooperating with States exercising jurisdiction in order to provide them, within the framework of the relevant rules of international law and agreements governing activities of the United Nations, with information and material for purposes of criminal proceedings initiated by States.

65. In that regard, it is important to recall that the legal framework within which the referrals are made by the United Nations and the role of the Secretary-General have been outlined in a previous report of the Secretary-General on criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission (see A/63/260, sect. IV).

66. The United Nations cooperates with law enforcement and judicial authorities of relevant Member States in accordance with its rights and obligations under the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, adopted by the General Assembly on 13 February 1946, as well as other relevant international agreements and applicable legal principles. Accordingly, the Organization will disclose documents and/or information and waive immunity on a case-by-case basis where, in the opinion of the Secretary-General, immunity would impede the course of justice and can be waived without prejudice to the interests of the United Nations. Consequently, information obtained by the United Nations may be provided to the relevant authorities and documents may be shared, subject to considerations of confidentiality and privileges and immunities. Documents may be redacted where necessary. It should be noted that, since the United Nations does not have any criminal investigative or prosecutorial jurisdiction, the use of any documents or information provided by the United Nations, including their admissibility in any legal proceedings, is a matter for determination by the relevant judicial authorities to whom such documents or information have been provided.

Protection of United Nations officials and experts on mission from retaliation

67. For information responding to paragraphs 22 and 24 of resolution 72/112, the situation remains the same as reported in prior reports of the Secretary-General (see, for example, A/70/208, paras. 34 and 35). In addition, a revised Secretary-General's bulletin on protection against retaliation for reporting misconduct and for cooperating with duly authorized audits or investigations (ST/SGB/2017/2/Rev.1) was issued on 28 November 2017.

VIII. Practical measures to strengthen existing predeployment training and vetting measures

68. Training material on conduct and discipline, including obligations for all United Nations personnel to observe the laws of host States and possible consequences of failure to observe such laws, continue to be made available for use by Member States in predeployment training of their military and police personnel. Prior to the deployment of their personnel, Member States are asked to certify that their personnel have been trained on conduct and discipline. The same training material is also used in predeployment training for United Nations staff members. In addition, all United Nations personnel, civilian and uniformed, receive induction training on conduct and discipline upon arrival in peacekeeping and special political missions. An online training programme specifically on the prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse was also launched by the Department of Field Support in September 2016. The online training programme has been mandatory for all field mission personnel since the end of 2016, and it became mandatory for all other Secretariat personnel at Headquarters and in mission locations in May 2017. The training programme covers the United Nations standards of conduct concerning sexual exploitation and abuse and consists of two mandatory courses: one for all personnel and a second, dedicated course for managers and commanders. To enhance accessibility, the programme has been made available to all categories of personnel through a number of technological platforms, and it is being translated into all official languages, as well as languages of the top troop- and police-contributing countries. The French language version of the programme will be launched by July 2018. The Department of Field Support continues to engage with Member States to incorporate the e-learning programme in predeployment training, including through blended learning initiatives in peacekeeping training centres and in Member States.

69. All personnel in peacekeeping and special political missions continue to be vetted for possible records of misconduct, including criminal conduct, during prior deployments in field missions. Member States are also asked to screen military and police personnel to be deployed in United Nations field missions for criminal records, human rights violations and disciplinary records. Member States then need to certify having conducted this screening prior to the deployment of the personnel involved. A United Nations system-wide screening database has been finalized under the auspices of the Office of the Special Coordinator on Improving the United Nations Response to Sexual Exploitation and Abuse to allow the screening of personnel for substantiated allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse and sexual harassment. As a result of its experience in developing a data management system for misconduct in peacekeeping missions, the Department of Field Support is a key adviser and member of the working group put in place to develop and finalize the system-wide database, which was launched in June 2018.
