

Human Rights CouncilFiftieth session

13 June–8 July 2022

Agenda item 3

Promotion and protection of all human rights: civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, including the right to development*Resolution adopted by the Human Rights Council on 7 July 2022*50/8. Human rights and international solidarityThe Human Rights Council,*

Reaffirming all previous resolutions and decisions adopted by the Commission on Human Rights and the Human Rights Council on the issue of human rights and international solidarity,

Underlining the fact that the processes of promoting and protecting human rights should be conducted in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law,

Recalling that, at the World Conference on Human Rights, held in June 1993, States pledged to cooperate with each other in ensuring development and eliminating obstacles to development, and stressed that the international community should promote effective international cooperation for the realization of the right to development and the elimination of obstacles to development,

Reaffirming the fact that article 4 of the Declaration on the Right to Development states that sustained action is required to promote more rapid development of developing countries and, as a complement to the efforts of developing countries, effective international cooperation is essential in order to provide these countries with the appropriate means and facilities to foster their comprehensive development,

Recognizing that the attention paid to the importance of international solidarity as a vital component of the efforts of developing countries to realize the right to development of their peoples and to promote the full enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights by everyone has been insufficient, and in this context reaffirming the critical relevance of international solidarity to the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development,

Reaffirming the fact that the widening gap between economically developed and developing countries is unsustainable and that it impedes the realization of human rights in the international community, and makes it all the more imperative for every nation, according to its capacities, to make the maximum possible effort to close this gap,

Mindful of the fact that, while globalization opens up new opportunities for growth and development, it also presents challenges, including growing inequality, widespread poverty, unemployment, social disintegration and environmental risks, that demand increased coordination and collective decision-making at the global level,

Reaffirming the crucial importance of increasing the resources allocated to official development assistance, recalling the pledge of industrialized countries to allocate 0.7 per cent of their gross national product to official development assistance, and recognizing the need for new and additional resources to finance the development programmes of developing countries,

Emphasizing the commitment of States in the 2030 Agenda to a revitalized Global Partnership for Sustainable Development based on a spirit of global solidarity, in particular with the poorest and with people in vulnerable situations,

Affirming the fact that the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals and the realization of the right to development call for a more enlightened approach, mindset and action based on a sense of community and international solidarity,

Determined to take new steps forward in the commitment of the international community with a view to achieving substantial progress in human rights endeavours through an increased and sustained effort of international cooperation and solidarity,

Recognizing that the promotion and protection of human rights should be based on the principles of cooperation and genuine dialogue and aimed at strengthening the capacity of Member States to comply with their human rights obligations for the benefit of all human beings,

Emphasizing that the impacts of the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) pandemic can be countered effectively only through international cooperation, unity, solidarity and collective action, based on a multilateral approach, and strong international institutions,

Emphasizing also in that context that responses to contain, mitigate and overcome the pandemic and its consequences should be people-centred, gender-responsive, with full respect for human rights, multidimensional, coordinated, inclusive, innovative, swift and decisive at all levels,

Asserting the necessity of compiling and disseminating good practices and good experiences of international solidarity, from States and non-State actors at all levels, in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic and post-pandemic recovery efforts,

Resolved to strive to ensure that present generations are fully aware of their responsibilities towards future ones, and that a better world is possible where future generations can enjoy an environment adequate for their health and well-being,

1. Reaffirms the recognition set forth in the declaration adopted by the Heads of State and Government at the Millennium Summit of the fundamental value of solidarity to international relations in the twenty-first century in stating that global challenges must be managed in a way that distributes costs and burdens fairly, in accordance with the basic principles of equity and social justice, and that those who suffer or benefit least deserve help from those who benefit most;

2. Also reaffirms that international solidarity is not limited to international assistance and cooperation, aid, charity or humanitarian assistance; it is a broader concept and principle that includes sustainability in international relations, especially international economic relations, the peaceful coexistence of all members of the international community, equal partnerships and the equitable sharing of benefits and burdens;

3. Reiterates its determination to contribute to the solution of current world problems through increased international cooperation, to create conditions that will ensure that the needs and interests of future generations are not jeopardized by the burden of the past, and to hand over a better world to future generations;

4. Reaffirms the fact that the promotion of international cooperation is a duty for States, and that it should be implemented without any conditionality and on the basis of mutual respect, in full compliance with the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular respect for the sovereignty of States, and taking into account nationally defined priorities and development plans;

5. Also reaffirms the ongoing need for enhanced voluntary contributions to the relevant United Nations funds to support technical assistance and capacity-building in the field of human rights, and encourages States to continue to make contributions to these funds;

6. Recognizes that international solidarity shall be a foundational principle underpinning contemporary international law;

7. Also recognizes that there is an overwhelming manifestation of solidarity by States, individually and collectively, by civil society, by global social movements and by countless people of goodwill reaching out to others, and that this solidarity is commonly practised at the national, regional and international levels;

8. Acknowledges the increased need for States and other actors to come together and take collective action in solidarity;

9. Recognizes that international solidarity is a powerful tool for addressing the structural causes of poverty, inequality and other global challenges;

10. Takes note of the report of the Independent Expert on human rights and international solidarity;¹

11. Requests the Independent Expert to compile and disseminate good practices and good experiences in the field of international solidarity from States and non-State actors, at both the national and international levels, in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic and post-pandemic recovery efforts, taking into account their contribution to the realization of human rights worldwide and to the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development;

12. Reiterates the central role of the State in any sustainable response to the COVID-19 pandemic and other global crises, and commends the international solidarity actions of various States, multilateral agencies, philanthropic institutions and private sector actors in providing human, intellectual, financial and technical resources to fight the pandemic;

13. Reaffirms the fundamental role of the United Nations system in coordinating the global response to control and contain the spread of COVID-19 and in supporting Member States, and in this regard acknowledges the crucial leading role played by the World Health Organization;

14. Emphasizes that humanitarian and technical cooperation, including in the context of South-South and triangular cooperation, is an important aspect of international solidarity during and after the pandemic;

15. Also emphasizes the need for enhanced voluntary contributions to the relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes to support technical assistance, exchange of information and experiences, technology transfer and capacity-building, including in the field of human rights, and encourages States to continue to make contributions to that end;

16. Requests all States, United Nations agencies, other relevant international organizations and non-governmental organizations to mainstream the right of peoples and individuals to international solidarity into their activities, to cooperate with the Independent Expert in his mandate, and to supply all necessary information requested by him, and requests States to give serious consideration to responding favourably to the requests of the Independent Expert to visit their countries to enable him to fulfil his mandate effectively;

17. Requests the Independent Expert to continue to participate in relevant international forums and major events with a view to promoting the importance of international solidarity in the realization of the right to development and the achievement of the 2030 Agenda, especially those goals relating to economic, social and climate issues, and invites Member States, international organizations, United Nations agencies and other relevant organizations to facilitate the meaningful participation of the Independent Expert in these international forums and major events;

18. Also requests the Independent Expert to continue to examine in his reports ways and means of overcoming existing and emerging obstacles to the realization of the right of peoples and individuals to international solidarity, including the challenges of international cooperation, and to seek the views and contributions of Governments, United Nations agencies and other relevant international organizations in this regard;

19. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide all the human and financial resources necessary for the effective fulfilment of the mandate of the Independent Expert;

20. Reiterates its request to the Independent Expert to take into account the outcomes of all major United Nations and other global summits and ministerial meetings in the economic, social and climate fields, and to continue to seek views and contributions from Governments, United Nations agencies, other relevant international organizations and non-governmental organizations in the discharge of his mandate;

21. Requests the Independent Expert to report regularly to the Human Rights Council and to the General Assembly in accordance with their respective programmes of work;

22. Decides to continue its consideration of this matter under the same agenda item.

7 July 2022*
