Matters calling for action by the Economic and Social Council or brought to its attention

A. Draft decision for adoption by the Council

1. The United Nations Forum on Forests recommends to the Economic and Social Council the adoption of the following draft decision:

Ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of the eleventh session of the United Nations Forum on Forests on the international arrangement on “The forests we want: beyond 2015”

The Economic and Social Council takes note of the following ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of the eleventh session of the United Nations Forum on Forests:

Ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of the eleventh session of the United Nations Forum on Forests on the international arrangement on “The forests we want: beyond 2015”

We, the Ministers responsible for forests, gathered at the high-level segment of the eleventh session of the United Nations Forum on Forests, have adopted the following declaration:

1. We stress the vital role and significant contribution of all types of forests and of trees outside forests in achieving sustainable development, including economic development, social development and environmental protection.

2. We also stress that over 1.6 billion people depend on forests for subsistence, livelihoods, employment and income generation, and recognize that forests provide a wide range of goods and services, which create opportunities to address many of the most pressing sustainable development challenges.

3. We underscore that forests and sustainable forest management provide multiple benefits for the lives and well-being of people across the planet, recognizing the importance of living well in harmony with nature.

4. We reaffirm our strong commitment to forests and the sustainable management of all types of forests. The sustainable management of all types of forests is vital to facilitate transformative change and address major challenges, such as poverty eradication, economic growth and sustainable livelihoods, food security and nutrition, gender equality, cultural and spiritual values, health, water, energy production, climate change mitigation and adaptation, combating desertification, the reduction of dust and sand storms, biodiversity conservation, sustainable soil and land management, watershed protection and disaster risk reduction.

5. We are deeply concerned about the continued deforestation and degradation of forests in many regions and underscore the need to reverse this trend.

6. We stress the need to continue to promote a common understanding of the concept of sustainable forest management and to continue to cooperate internationally and bilaterally to promote sustainable forest management and address drivers of deforestation and forest degradation, including by strengthening forest governance through, inter alia, promoting secure land tenure rights and stakeholder participation.

7. We welcome efforts by countries and stakeholders to advance the sustainable management of all types of forests, including the role of collective action by indigenous and local communities and community-based sustainable forest management.

8. We also underscore the essential role of major groups and other stakeholders in achieving the global objectives on forests.

9. We recognize that the United Nations Forum on Forests, with its universal membership and comprehensive mandate, plays a vital role in addressing challenges and issues relating to forests in a holistic and integrated manner and in promoting policy coordination and cooperation to achieve the sustainable management of all types of forests and trees outside of forests. We encourage other forest-related forums, initiatives and processes to cooperate with the Forum to achieve sustainable forest management.

10. We recognize the value of the Forum as a policy forum for the promotion of sustainable forest management and decide on the continuation of the international arrangement on forests, emphasizing the need to use the potential of the Forum efficiently and to contribute to cooperation and synergies.

11. We welcome forest-related developments in other forums, in particular the Rio conventions,¹ their continued contribution to sustainable forest management and the importance of cooperation and synergies between these forums and the international arrangement on forests.

12. We affirm that the international arrangement on forests beyond 2015 should play a key role in promoting the achievement of forest-related sustainable development goals and targets that will be considered for adoption at the United Nations summit in September 2015.

13. We underscore the need to accelerate efforts at all levels to achieve the objectives of the international arrangement on forests beyond 2015 and the need to establish a stronger, more effective and solid arrangement for the period 2015 to 2030.

14. We, the Ministers responsible for forests commit ourselves:

(a) To implement sustainable forest management as defined in the non-legally-binding instrument on all types of forests, taking into account different visions, approaches, models and tools, including by strengthening the implementation of the non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests and by taking action at the national, subregional, regional and global levels to achieve the global objectives on forests;

(b) To affirm our commitment to a stronger and more effective post-2015 international arrangement on forests with a view to providing leadership to promote the vital significance of forests in the global sustainable development agenda, enhancing the implementation of sustainable forest management, advancing forest policy dialogue, including with major groups, and fostering collaboration, cooperation and synergies across all forest-related organizations, conventions and other processes;

(c) To promote the integration of sustainable forest management and the commitments contained in the non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests into our poverty reduction strategies, national sustainable development strategies and sectoral policies, and its synergistic implementation with other forest-related initiatives;

(d) To support the work of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests as a strategy for improving coherence and synergy on forest issues at all levels and to promote the integration of sustainable forest management into the strategies and programmes of the member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership, as appropriate;

(e) To adopt cross-sectoral approaches and foster collaboration to address the drivers of deforestation and forest degradation in a coherent and coordinated way and to increase the valuation and recognition of the full value of forest goods and services;

(f) To review and, as needed, in accordance with national legislation, policies and priorities, improve forest-related legislation, strengthen forest law enforcement and promote good governance at all levels in order to support sustainable forest management, create an enabling environment for forest investment and combat and eradicate illegal practices, as well as to promote secure land tenure;

(g) To continue to tackle deforestation and forest degradation and to promote the trade in forest products from sustainably managed and legally harvested forests;

(h) To promote the sustainable management of all types of forests, including by:

(i) Stressing the importance of mobilizing new and additional resources from all sources for the sustainable management of all types of forests and taking steps to enhance the ability of countries to access and effectively employ the forest-related funds, ensuring better coordination across the variety of existing and emerging forest financing instruments and mechanisms and the use of such financing in line with the principles of aid effectiveness;

15. We invite:

(a) The third International Conference on Financing for Development to give appropriate consideration to the issue of financing for forests and sustainable forest management as one of the priorities;

(b) Forum members, financing institutions and the private sector to aim to ensure that investments and development finance take appropriate account of the role of forests in poverty eradication and sustainable development and to give financing for sustainable forest management greater priority and increased relevance, including through the recognition of the public goods and services that forests deliver;

(c) The Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change to consider the importance of forests and sustainable forest management in both climate change mitigation and adaptation, consistent with its mandate;

(d) The Conferences of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa and the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change to consider outputs of the future international arrangement on forests, consistent with their mandates, and also invite their secretariats to continue to actively participate, as appropriate, in the Collaborative Partnership on Forests as well as to continue their involvement in the work of the Forum and the Partnership;

(e) The existing and emerging forest-related financing initiatives, including the Global Environment Facility and the Green Climate Fund, to support the implementation of sustainable forest management, consistent with their mandates;

(f) The above-mentioned forums and conferences and the United Nations summit for the adoption of the post-2015 development agenda to consider the present declaration to be the contribution of the Forum to the outcomes of those events, and in this regard request the Secretary-General to officially submit this declaration to those entities.

Summary by the Chair of the multi-stakeholder dialogue

1. The multi-stakeholder dialogue was held on 5 May 2015. It was opened by the Chair of the Forum at its eleventh session, Noel Nelson Messone (Gabon). An introductory presentation was given by the Director of the Forum secretariat, who outlined efforts that had been made to enhance the engagement of major groups in the work of the Forum during the intersessional period, including the strengthening of major groups' networks; the organization of the major group-led initiative on the theme "Sustainable forest management: designing the vehicles for securing the means of implementation", held in Kathmandu from 2 to 6 March 2015; the development by the major groups of submissions in response to the call for views on the future international arrangement on forests; and major groups' participation in the first and second meetings of the Open-ended Intergovernmental Ad Hoc Expert Group on the International Arrangement on Forests.
2. The Chair then invited Lambert Okrah, of the non-governmental organizations major group, to serve as Moderator during the multi-stakeholder dialogue. Mr. Okrah explained that, following presentations by representatives of major groups, the participants would be invited to comment on the recommendations from the major groups about the future international arrangement on forests, as contained in the report of the major group-led initiative (see E/CN.18/2015/13, annex) and the discussion paper submitted by the major groups (E/CN.18/2015/6/Add.1).
3. Joe Cobbinah, of the scientific and technological communities major group, explained that the role of major groups within the Forum included advocacy, bringing diverse perspectives (including those of the marginalized voices) to the Forum, cascading policies down and getting feedback from the ground up, creating awareness of policy decisions and providing an extended platform for the Forum. He then informed the Forum that the Major Groups Partnership on Forests had been established in 2012 to coordinate major groups' inputs to the Forum, build collaboration between and among major groups and facilitate knowledge generation and information-sharing, and for liaison between major groups and the Forum secretariat, Member States and regional processes.
4. Cécile Ndjebet, of the women major group, highlighted the need for a strengthened United Nations body for forests. After outlining their views about the limitations of current arrangements, she said that the major groups proposed a new multi-stakeholder United Nations forest organization, not under the Economic and Social Council, that would address both policy and implementation; deal with forestry issues in a coordinated and holistic manner at the global, regional, national and local levels; be responsible for dialogue at a high political level about the forest-related aspects of the proposed sustainable development goals; coordinate all institutions and mechanisms engaged on forest issues within the United Nations; meet more often than biennially; and have a stronger role in providing input into the use of forest-related climate funds. In addition, the major groups considered that recommendations on forests should be legally binding, that major groups should be part of the governing structure of the new body on forests, and that the new United Nations forest body should serve as the coordinating body of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests.

5. Peter deMarsh, of the farmers and small forest landowners major group, then made a presentation about a possible global financial mechanism for forests. He explained that existing funds are not designed to meet the specific needs of sustainable forest management. He proposed a fund that would have a catalytic and strategic role in order to fill gaps, complement other funds, leverage funds from other sources and facilitate access to the “big funds”, with a particular emphasis on developing capacity. He also said that in order to help justify investment in sustainable forest management, it was important to recognize the full value of forest ecosystem goods and services, the subsistence value of food, fuel and medicine and the value of in-kind investments that were not currently reflected by official national accounting systems.

6. Olivia Sanchez Badini, of the children and youth major group, outlined the challenges facing major groups, individually and collectively. She also summarized the major groups’ recommendations for the future international arrangement on forests. Those recommendations included recognizing the Major Groups Partnership on Forests as a legitimate coordinating body for major group involvement, granting the Partnership official permanent observer status in the post-United Nations Forum on Forests process, having major group representation on the governing body of the Forum (or its successor), and reviewing how the Economic and Social Council rules govern major group accreditation and engagement.

7. During the interactive discussion, the participants thanked the major groups for their presentations and discussion paper. Many participants stressed the critical importance of broad and inclusive stakeholder involvement in safeguarding and sustainably managing the world’s forests, noting especially the role of indigenous peoples and local communities in supporting the management and conservation of forests. They also urged stronger and more meaningful engagement with major groups, including the private business sector, local authorities, international conservation groups and indigenous representatives, adding that the active, open and transparent participation of all relevant stakeholders needed to be enhanced in the post-2015 international arrangement on forests; they said that this could result in better policy decisions, a wider understanding of the policies and improved implementation by working through major groups’ networks and constituencies.

8. The participants welcomed the creation of the Major Groups Partnership on Forests and considered that its role in helping major groups to coordinate their activities and develop joint statements would benefit the future international arrangement on forests. Questions were asked, however, about whether the Partnership required a formal institutional relationship with the Forum in order to be effective; and further clarification was sought on the cost implications and potential sources of funding. It was noted that the Government of Germany had already provided valuable support for the Partnership.

9. To strengthen the engagement of major groups in the work of the Forum, a number of participants said that it would be useful if in future the major groups were invited to make comments on each agenda item, or at the end of each day. Other suggestions were that more countries should invite representatives of major groups to join their national delegations; that major groups should participate as observers during meetings of the Bureau; that major groups should second staff to the Forum secretariat; and that regional meetings should be used to offer further opportunities for engaging major groups. While several participants stressed the value to the Forum of continuing to be a subsidiary body of the Economic and Social Council, they also asked about opportunities for increased flexibility regarding the participation of major groups under the rules of the Council.

10. There was also discussion about strengthening relationships between the Collaborative Partnership on Forests and major groups. The Partnership agreed that there were important areas where such cooperation would be beneficial, for example, in relation to developing a science-policy interface on forestry and through joint activities. The President of the International Union of Forest Research Organizations, Mike Wingfield, highlighted the fact that the Union's membership included a large number of universities and was therefore closely linked with the children and youth major group, as well as the scientific and technological community major group; in this regard, he highlighted the importance of investment in forestry education and the proposed joint project of the Union and the International Forestry Students' Association on forest education.

Annex III

Summaries by the Chair of the ministerial high-level segment and the Co-Chairs of the high-level round tables

A. Ministerial high-level segment

1. Following an introduction by the Chair, who explained that the theme of the ministerial high-level segment would be “The future international arrangement on forests we want”, the President of the Economic and Social Council, Martin Sajdik (Austria), addressed the Forum.

2. In their general statements, country representatives highlighted the vital contribution that forests and trees outside of forests can make to sustainable development, noting their economic, social and environmental benefits as well as their cultural value. Many explained that sustainable forest management can help in addressing such major global challenges as poverty eradication, biodiversity conservation, climate change mitigation and adaptation, and combating desertification, as well as helping to meet food, water and energy needs. A number of countries expressed concern about the under-valuation of forests, saying that the value of non-timber forest products and ecosystem services was often not fully recognized. Concern was also expressed about the urgent need to address the drivers of deforestation and forest degradation, including illegal harvesting, mining, urbanization and the increasing demand for land to produce food and other commodities; nevertheless, some countries gave positive examples of action that had been taken to reduce net deforestation and to tackle forest degradation. Meanwhile, several countries stressed the importance of forests to the indigenous and local communities that depend upon them for their livelihoods; the benefits of community-based sustainable forest management and effective stakeholder engagement and participation were also highlighted, as well as the importance of gender equality. In addition, reference was made to the importance of recognizing different visions and approaches to sustainable development, and to the fact that in some countries and regions “Mother Earth” is a common expression used to describe the planet Earth.

3. The non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests, with its the global objectives on forests, was highlighted as a key achievement of the United Nations Forum on Forests and several countries explained that the instrument had provided a valuable framework for policy and programme development at the national level. Many representatives said that the international arrangement on forests should be strengthened and in particular stressed the importance of utilizing the arrangement more effectively to promote the implementation of sustainable forest management. Some speakers referred to the need for a strategic plan to identify clear priorities and targets for the future arrangement. There was wide support for the role of the Forum, with its universal membership and its ability to address the challenges facing forests in a holistic manner. It was also noted that the establishment of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests had fostered stronger collaboration and cooperation among the key forest-related organizations at the global level. Several countries welcomed efforts to promote a wider understanding of the importance of forests and trees, and their multiple benefits, including through the International Year of Forests and the International Day of Forests. However, some representatives said that there was insufficient public recognition of these benefits and that the visibility of forests was still too low. A number of representatives said that the non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests would continue to provide an effective framework for sustainable forest management. Some representatives proposed work to develop a legally binding agreement on forests. The importance of adequate means of implementation, including robust financing mechanisms, capacity-building and environmentally sound technologies was emphasized, and the particular challenges facing low forest cover countries, small island developing States and landlocked developing countries were also highlighted. While some countries reported that financing for sustainable forest management had increased in recent years, others underscored the need for a global forest fund; other suggestions for the financing sustainable forest management included continued development of the facilitative process and making increased efforts to attract private sector investment. Several countries highlighted the importance of having a supportive enabling environment for investment, and the need for effective forest governance. In addition, the need for the Forum to address emerging issues, such as forest landscape restoration, was stressed.

4. Country representatives also emphasized the need to improve cross-sector collaboration at all levels in order to achieve more effective integration between forest policies and related policies, such as agriculture, energy, climate change, biodiversity and water. In addition, a number of representatives highlighted the importance of overcoming fragmentation by securing good coordination between different forest-related processes and funding mechanisms; in this context, several countries described the benefits for sustainable forest management of action taken at the national level in the context, for example, of the Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation in Developing Countries (REDD)-plus programmes, the European Union Action Plan on Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade, and the Convention on Biological Diversity Aichi Biodiversity Targets. Representatives welcomed the forest-related elements of the proposed sustainable development goals and targets, and said that 2015 provided a unique opportunity to integrate forests into the post-2015 development agenda. Many said that it would be important for the ministerial declaration to send a clear message about the global significance of forests to the third International Conference on Financing for Development, to be held in July 2015, the United Nations summit to adopt the post-2015 development agenda in September 2015, and the twenty-first session of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, to be held later in 2015.

B. Round table 1: integration of forests in the post-2015 development agenda

5. Round table 1 was co-chaired by the Minister for Forests, Environment and Protection of Natural Resources of Gabon and Chair of the Forum at its eleventh session, Noel Nelson Messone, and the Federal Minister of Food and Agriculture of Germany, Christian Schmidt.

6. Summing up the interactive discussion, the Co-Chair (Mr. Schmidt) said that it had been extremely useful in highlighting the importance of integrating forests in the post-2015 development agenda, as well as recognizing their multifunctional role in the climate change agenda. During the discussion, participants stressed the need to strengthen the Forum and align it with the post-2015 development agenda. A number of speakers focused on the importance of effective monitoring, assessment, reporting and follow-up processes for forest-related goals, targets and associated indicators, and the potential role of the Forum in this regard. In addition, several participants emphasized the need to broaden the context of forest-related discussions in order to achieve more effective coordination with other key aspects of sustainable development, such as poverty eradication, sustainable livelihoods, agricultural policies and food security, as well as integration with national development plans. Speakers also highlighted the critical role that stakeholders, including non-governmental organizations and the private sector, as well as members of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests, could play in contributing to implementation, for example, through new partnerships for action on the ground. Many speakers highlighted the urgency of securing adequate and predictable resources for implementation, and asked that the Forum send a clear message about the importance of financing sustainable forest management to the third International Conference on Financing for Development and other forthcoming high-level meetings. The Co-Chair concluded his summary by saying that the round table had underscored the importance of adopting a holistic approach to sustainable forest management at all levels.

C. Round table 2: renewed commitments to the implementation of the international arrangement on forests beyond 2015

7. The second round table was co-chaired by Noel Nelson Messone (Gabon) and the Deputy Minister of Natural Resources and Environment of the Russian Federation and Head of the Federal Agency for Forestry of the Russian Federation, Ivan Valentik.

8. The Co-Chair (Mr. Valentik) summarized the discussion on renewed commitments to the implementation of the international arrangement on forests beyond 2015, saying that the round table had provided a good opportunity to share experiences on best practices and lessons learned. In emphasizing their countries' commitment to combating deforestation and forest degradation, some participants gave examples of how their forest-related priorities and objectives had been incorporated within broader sustainable development strategies. Meanwhile, a number of participants described ways in which forests in their countries contributed to wider policy objectives, including ecotourism, the promotion of health and well-being and the development of a green economy, and the importance of taking these wider objectives into account when formulating and implementing forest policies. Some speakers pointed out that the full value of forest-related goods and services to their national economies could be much greater than the monetary figures reported by official statistics. Several speakers stressed that, for effective implementation beyond 2015, it would be essential to continue to facilitate capacity-building, training and technology transfer, through South-South cooperation as well as North-South and triangular cooperation. Speakers also highlighted the importance of working in partnership with members of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests and stakeholders, including the private sector and non-governmental organizations, and the need for adequate resources to strengthen implementation. Reference was also made to the importance of clear land tenure and effective governance arrangements to support implementation. The Co-Chair concluded his summary by emphasizing the importance for the future international arrangement on forests of securing strong political commitment to the implementation of sustainable forest management.

Annex IV

Summary by the Chair of the high-level dialogue with the heads of the member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests, heads of the regional organizations and representatives of major groups

1. The high-level interactive dialogue with the heads of the member organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests, heads of the regional organizations and senior representatives of major groups was held on 14 May 2015. The Assistant Secretary-General for Policy Coordination and Inter-Agency Affairs of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, Thomas Gass, delivered opening remarks, welcoming partners to the dialogue and emphasizing that achieving global sustainable forest management required collective action by all stakeholders.
2. The Executive Secretary of the Convention on Biological Diversity, Bráulio F. de Souza Dias, said that forests were central to the work of the Convention because of their high biodiversity value, and that this was reflected in the Aichi Biodiversity Targets. Accordingly, the Convention valued its working relationship with the Forests and other members of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests. He added that, at the thirteenth session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, to be held in November 2016, strategic actions to enhance national implementation through the integration of biodiversity across relevant sectors, including agriculture, fisheries and forests would be considered.
3. The Executive Director of the International Tropical Timber Organization, Emmanuel Ze Meka, called for sustained funding mechanisms to help support the costs of undertaking projects of the Collaborative Partnerships on Forests at the request of the Forum. He also stressed the economic importance of the timber and wood processing industry for many tropical countries with significant areas of forest. In addition, he outlined the role of the International Tropical Timber Organization in relation to promoting the use of criteria and indicators and developing the collaborative forest resources questionnaire.
4. The Assistant Secretary-General of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), Elliott Harris, highlighted the role of UNEP, along with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), in initiating the United Nations Collaborative Programme on Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation in Developing Countries (UN-REDD) to support nationally led REDD-plus results-based payment processes. He also referred to the role of UNEP in helping countries to work towards achieving the Bonn Challenge through the restoration of degraded and deforested land. In addition, he said that UNEP had presented an analysis of private sector finance for forests to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change Standing Committee on Finance.
5. The Director of Programmes of the Global Environment Facility (GEF), Gustavo Fonseca, underscored the relevance of forests to the sustainable development agenda and the need to incorporate forests into national development programmes, as well as the importance of developing partnerships with those outside the forest sector. He then outlined the role of GEF in providing support for forests through the GEF-5 Sustainable Forest Management/REDD Incentive Mechanism, and now through the GEF-6 Sustainable Forest Management Programme: Strengthened Support for Forests, which promotes an integrated approach at the landscape level.

6. The Director of the Forest Economics, Policy and Products Division of FAO, Eva Muller, reminded participants of the strong contributions that FAO had made to the work of the Collaborative Partnerships on Forests since its creation, and of the importance to the international arrangement on forests of many of the FAO core activities, such as the Global Forest Resources Assessment. She reaffirmed that FAO would continue to support the Forum, and play a leadership role in the Collaborative Partnership on Forests, encouraging partnership organizations to work together effectively in a manner that would utilize their distinctive comparative advantages and that would be guided by an agreed workplan.

7. The Vice-President for Task Forces, Special Programmes, Projects and IUFRO-led Initiatives of the International Union of Forest Research Organizations, John Parrotta, explained that the Global Forest Expert Panel's recent scientific assessment of the contribution of forests and trees to food security and nutrition had provided evidence to demonstrate that forests, trees and landscapes could be an integral part of the solution to the global problem of providing 9 billion people with food by 2050. He also referred to the proposed joint forest science-policy interaction platform that had been offered by the Union, and its partners in the Collaborative Partnership on Forests, the Centre for International Forestry Research and the World Agroforestry Centre, as a means of addressing knowledge gaps identified by the future Forum.

8. The Deputy Director of the Bureau for Policy and Programme Support of UNDP, Stan Nkwain, explained the role of UNDP as a GEF implementing agency and outlined the way in which it contributed to the UN-REDD partnership. He also highlighted the urgent need to tackle deforestation and forest degradation at all levels, and the contribution that this would make to climate change mitigation.

9. The Permanent Observer for the International Union for Conservation of Nature, Narinder Kakar, explained that the Union worked with partners to build capacity and provide support for the restoration of degraded and deforested lands around the world, adding that it had a global network of 1,269 members in some 160 countries who could leverage support for the implementation of sustainable forest management. He also highlighted the Global Partnership on Forest Landscape Restoration, which is coordinated by a secretariat hosted at the Union and aims to spread best practice and political awareness of restoration and its benefits.

10. The Programme Officer of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification, Nandhini Iyer Krishna, highlighted the interaction between land degradation and deforestation, stressing that unsustainable agriculture practices could be a significant drivers of deforestation; in this context, she emphasized the importance sustainable livestock management and the value of agroforestry. She also noted that, while attention was often focused on rain forests, dry land forests were also important, providing a buffer against drought and desertification, a safety net against poverty, biodiversity richness and other vital ecosystem goods and services.

11. Tiffany Hodgson delivered a statement on behalf of the Executive Secretary of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, Christiana Figueres, explaining that global deforestation accounted for more than 20 per cent of the world's carbon dioxide emissions, and that the twenty-first session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention, to be held in Paris later in 2015 would provide an opportunity to advance recognition of the crucial role of forests. Noting that the decisions reached at the United Nations Climate Change Conference in Warsaw in 2013 had provided methodological guidance for implementing REDD-plus, she explained that six countries, namely Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Guyana, Malaysia and Mexico, had already submitted forest reference emission levels for technical assessment, as a basis for results-based payments for REDD-plus action. She also highlighted the key role of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change Standing Committee on Finance in delivering climate finance for forests.

12. Joe Cobbinah, representing the major groups, highlighted the role of major groups in speaking for the marginalized and presenting different perspectives on sustainable forest management. He stressed the importance, for the future international arrangement on forests, of science-based policy, of using networks to help with implementation, of securing adequate means of implementation, including finance, and of capacity-building. He also reiterated the need to strengthen engagement with and participation by all major groups.

13. The themes for the subsequent interactive discussion were the potential for partnerships, regional cooperation and participation to leverage support for the post-2015 international arrangement on forests, and strategies for integrating forests in the broader post-2015 development agenda, including cross-sectoral and landscape approaches. During this discussion, the representative from the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) indicated that CITES would be willing to join the Collaborative Partnership on Forests in order to assist more actively in the implementation of sustainable forest management. Other speakers highlighted the important role of members of the Partnership in supporting implementation at national level; the need for adequate means of implementation and the critical part that stakeholders should play in implementing sustainable forest management. In addition, the value of regional processes, and in particular their role in developing criteria and indicators that could be used for monitoring, assessing and reporting progress towards sustainable forest management, was emphasized.
