1. THE BECKET FUND FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

(General Consultative Status granted in 2002)

PART I: Purpose and activities

The Becket Fund is a nonpartisan, interfaith, public interest law firm dedicated to protecting the free expression of all religious traditions. We believe the exercise of conscience is a fundamental human right, and must be preserved for all. The Becket Fund's clients have included Buddhists, Christians, Hindus, Jews, Muslims, Sikhs, and Zoroastrians. The Becket Institute, The Becket Fund's academic arm, moved to Rome in 2005. It was formerly hosted by St. Hughes College, Oxford University, in the United Kingdom. In October 2006, Angela C. Wu replaced Emilie Kao as the Director of International Advocacy and the primary liaison for international affairs. In 2002-2005, there have been no other significant administrative or governance changes at The Becket Fund.

PART II: Activities in the current reporting period

A. Contributions to United Nations bodies (United Nations Commission on Human Rights Interventions and Parallel Sessions)

1. The Becket Fund delivered the following interventions at the 60th session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights ("UNCHR") in Geneva, Switzerland:

- i. March 31, 2005 statement, Untitled. The Becket Fund addressed emerging trends in Sri Lanka regarding the consideration of anti-conversion legislation. Specifically, the intervention addressed the lack of tolerance prevalent in the Radical Theravada Buddhist political movement and its proposed adoption of anti-conversion legislation as a response to other religions in Sri Lanka.
- ii. March 23, 2005 statement, Untitled. The Becket Fund addressed the UNHCR on Turkey's ban of the Muslim headscarf. The Becket Fund sponsored the participation of former Turkish Parliamentarian Merve Kavakci at the session.
- iii. April 5, 2005 statement, Untitled. Representing over 3,000 Muslims and the Imam of the Juma Mosque (Baku, Azerbaijan), The Becket Fund advocated against the repression of the Juma Mosque in Azerbaijan.
- iv. April 8, 2005 statement, Untitled. The Becket Fund addressed issues affecting governments around the world regarding the right of the child to express religious belief in the classroom. The Becket Fund commented on England's Court of Appeal decision that a high-school student, Shabina Begum, may express her religious belief by wearing a jilbab, a full-length Muslim gown to class. It contrasted that situation to France's decision, in the fall of 2004, to implement a prohibition on religious clothing that forbids children from symbols such as the turban, the yarmulke, the cross, and the headscarf to school.

v. April 14, 2005 statement, Untitled. The Becket Fund discussed Chapter 16, section 8 of Sweden's criminal code, which prohibits the expression of "disrespect" towards favored minority groups. The law carries a penalty of up to four years of imprisonment. It requires no evidence of incitement to violence and lacks any objective standard for identifying disrespect. The Becket Fund argued that its overbreadth would encourage censorship that will foster intolerance towards disfavored minorities.

2. During the 61st Commission Session in Geneva, Switzerland, The Becket Fund hosted a parallel session called "Stripping the Body of Belief: The Human Right to Wear Religious Dress" on March 24, 2005 at the Palais des Nations. The panel featured Muslim laywomen, including a former Turkish Parliament Member, prosecuted by the governments of France, Turkey, and Belgium for wearing religious dress and symbols.

3. At the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, The Becket Fund filed several petitions on an anonymous basis on behalf of clients who were imprisoned for their religious beliefs. One of these clients' detention was declared arbitrary, and the client was subsequently released from prison. Two other petitions are currently pending.

B. Activities undertaken in support of internationally agreed human rights goals

1. International litigation

i. At the European Court of Human Rights in 2004, The Becket Fund formally filed an application with the European Court of Human Rights (ECHR) in the case of "Juma Mosque," regarding an Islamic mosque that was expelled in the city of Baku in Azerbaijan.

ii. In the Swedish domestic courts, The Becket Fund worked in 2005 with local counsel to litigate a case on behalf of a pastor who was convicted on criminal charges after preaching a sermon that cited Biblical texts on homosexuality. The Becket Fund's brief to the court explained that Pastor Green's sermon fell squarely within Article 18's protection of the "freedom . . . in community with others . . . to manifest his religion or belief in . . . teaching." His conviction has since been vacated by Sweden's highest court.

iii. With the Sri Lankan government, The Becket Fund has advocated and provided legal arguments regarding its severe anti-conversion laws.

Related activities that The Becket Fund hosted and conducted include:

- a fact-finding mission July 5-9, 2004 in which lawyers from The Becket Fund met with NGO representatives, constitutional lawyers, a member of the Sri Lankan Parliament, and US and British Embassy staff in Sri Lanka. The Becket Fund also documented acts of violence against religious minorities.

- a roundtable discussion titled “Religious Freedom in Sri Lanka” on November 19, 2004 at the Sri Lankan Embassy in Washington, DC, USA. Panelists included two former United States Ambassadors, a Professor from University of Virginia, and representatives from the International Center for Religion and Diplomacy, the United States Department of State, the Southern Baptist Convention, and the Pew Forum on Religion and Public Life. In attendance was the Ambassador from Sri Lanka to the United States.
- a congressional briefing titled “Congressional Briefing on Religious Freedom in Sri Lanka” on how religious persecution in Sri Lanka was affecting tsunami relief efforts. Among those in attendance were ten United States Senators and Representatives, and representatives from Amnesty International, the United States Department of State, and the United Nations.

2. Public education

The Becket Fund created a traveling exhibit titled “Body of Belief” featuring a collection of banned religious clothing and other distinctive symbols, including the headscarf, yarmulke, cross, Sikh turban, and tie. The exhibit was inaugurated in Geneva at the 61st session of the United Nations Human Rights Commission on March 23, 2005 at the Intercontinental Hotel in Geneva, Switzerland. It was also shown in New York, USA on May 5, 2005 and Washington, DC, USA, at The Capitol Building from October 24-28, 2005. The interactive, multimedia exhibit seeks to engage individuals by including changing artifacts and inviting individuals who have been terminated from their places of work and discriminated against, punished, and ostracized for wearing religious symbols.

3. Government relations

The Becket Fund attends and monitors closely the activities of the United States Department of State in regard to the UNHRC, contributes actively and monitors the annual release of the Department of State's human rights report and international religious freedom reports; works closely with the United States Committee on International Religious Freedom, and works with the United States Congressional Human Rights Caucus. The Becket Fund attended meetings in Washington, D.C. with representatives from these bodies in 2002, 2003, 2004, and 2005.

4. Academia

- i. In March 21-22, 2002, The Becket Fund hosted a conference entitled “Truth and Freedom,” in Washington, D.C., the fourth in a series of international conferences on the theme of religious liberty. The conference was designed to foster dialogue among Muslims, Jews and Christians on the possibility of a common understanding of religious liberty, a particularly timely and urgent topic since the events of September 11.
- ii. In December 5-10, 2005, The Becket Fund co-hosted a conference with its academic institute in Rome, Italy. The conference, entitled “Religious Liberty and Relativism,” produced a collection of papers of the same title exploring the topic of religious liberty and emerging international secularist trends.

iii. Representatives from the Becket Fund have spoken at dozens of conferences and participated in roundtable discussions and consultations with universities and NGOs in several countries, and published widely on religious freedom issues, including in Jerusalem, Jordan, the United States, Rome, and South Asia. For example, in 2003, Stephen G. Post published Human Nature and the Freedom of Public Religious Expression, a book he researched and wrote during his time as a visiting scholar at the Becket Institute. And in December 12, 2005, the Wall Street Journal (Asian Print Edition) printed an opinion piece titled “Fearing Christmas in Sri Lanka” by a Becket Fund attorney Roger Severino on religious liberty in Sri Lanka.

UN Watch also organized periodic, one- or two-day seminars at which American and European university students learned about the UN system from UN, member-state, and NGO representatives. For example, on November 11, 2005, a UN Watch seminar in Geneva for students from Columbia University's program in Paris featured a tour of the Palais des Nations, a visit to the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Museum, attendance at a meeting of the Committee Against Torture (CAT), and briefings from the CAT's Vice Chair, as well as from human rights and humanitarian officers from the European Commission and the British Mission. In addition, UN Watch's fellowship and intern programs have allowed a number of young people from around the world to spend several months to one year in Geneva working closely with the UN.

UN Watch also met with UN officials, as well as with member-state representatives. These meetings provided an opportunity for friendly dialogue on issues within UN Watch's areas of activity.

In December 2005, UN Watch was granted Associate Status by the UN Department of Public Information.

5. WOMEN'S INTERCULTURAL NETWORK -WIN

Special Consultative Status granted in 1998

The Women's Intercultural Network -WIN - was incorporated in 1994 to 'connect women and girls across cultures for collective action on common concerns.' Our vision continues to be that of ensuring that the voices of all women and girls are heard in public forums and to provide opportunities and venues for the voices of women who have not been able to speak for themselves.

Ten years ago, 1995, along with 40,000 other delegates who attended the 4th United Nations Conference on Women, WIN took up the challenge to bring the Beijing Platform for Action (BPFA) to the grassroots of California for implementation - and agreed to "keep on moving forward" - our charge from the Beijing Conference. We formed the California Women's Agenda - CAWA, to carry out WIN's mission and the mission of the BPFA - the global women's agenda. Now a million California girls and women are connecting on the ground and on the internet for collective action on the BPFA. We continue to use the 12 critical concerns from the BPFA as our framework for advocacy on women's issues - locally, statewide in California, nationally through US Women Connect and globally with our "Circles" in Uganda, Afghanistan and Japan.

CAWA has been honing its organizing and advocacy model since 2002 with global leadership exchanges in Uganda, Japan and Afghanistan. We have learned and exchanged best practices and worst barriers to empowering women. We initiated CALLING THE CIRCLE OF WOMEN FOR FULL PARTICIPATION IN DEMOCRACY and took the CIRCLE to Africa and Central Asia - Uganda and Afghanistan. We have brought Ugandan and Afghan women leaders to CAWA networks throughout California in 2002, 2003, 2004 and in August, 2005, we did full CIRCLE when two young women from Uganda, serving as WIN Board members, returned to California. They met with CAWA networks in Los Angeles, San Diego, Ventura, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Marin, Napa, and San Francisco counties. They spoke about our groundbreaking partnership project in Uganda that has granted acres of land to 100 homeless women who suffer from domestic abuse and HIV/AIDS. We helped them raise $17,600 to purchase the land for homeless Ugandan women. Those eight CAWA county coalitions, along with eight other CAWA county partners, are now mobilizing around their local county priorities in California for action plans that would give grassroots input into a dynamic California Women's Agenda, a U.S. Women's Agenda and the United Nations women's global agenda (BPFA) that we take to the United Nations Commission on Women. We have sent delegates to the United Nations CSW meetings – including Beijing+5 and Beijing+10 meetings, and were significantly involved in March, 2005 in reaffirming the Beijing Platform for Action, by lobbying our United States government representatives who were hesitant in supporting the reaffirmation. One of our key volunteers is the national chair of the National Committee on the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). Many of our members serve on United Nations committees.

Launched as a project of the Women's Intercultural Network (WIN) specifically to monitor and implement the United Nations Beijing Platform for Action, The California Women's Agenda (CAWA) has since 2002:

- expanded our state network to more than 600 organizations
- developed a state task force for each of the issues identified in the Beijing Plan as crucial to improving the status of women.
- developed a county structure in seventeen areas of the state, guided by coordinators who mobilize local organizations in action networks on local issues
- built an on-line electronic information and action alert system for rapid communication to the task forces, county coordinators and key CAWA activists who then forward the material to their personal and constituent networks
- re-designed and updated our web site to make it an effective tool for accessing resources and facilitating interactive discussions and strategic planning on key issues, including Calling the Circles of women from the United States, Afghanistan, Uganda and Japan. Our web site now reaches out across the world to a huge and diverse audience of women in many countries – all working on the United Nations Beijing Platform for Action and CEDAW.
- created a Legislators' Council that includes 41 State level and national level California women elected officials who have indicated their support of the principles of the Beijing Platform for Action
- hosted women leaders from Afghanistan, Uganda and Japan in leadership exchanges with CAWA activists and supporters in various communities throughout the state
- shared our organizing model and participated with activists in 9 other states (in 10 Federal regional hubs) to form United States Women Connect as an anchor for a United States women's agenda and national version of women's groups linked in a global network for women's rights.

CAWA's success has been possible, in spite of limited financial resources, because we operate largely as a "virtual network" relying on old and new technologies to expand our reach. E-groups and telephone conference calls have helped maintain contact among the dedicated volunteers who have accepted the responsibility for the task forces, the action alerts and the local organizing. Many also serve as CAWA representatives to coalitions that have formed to address racism, anti-immigrant policies, the plight of people with disabilities and the rights of indigenous people.

THE BEIJING +5 REPORT AND PLAN OF ACTION: IN PRINT AND ON-LINE

Two hundred California activists convened at SBC Media Center in San Francisco on December 3rd and 4th, 2004, set priority issues and recommended strategies for the California Women's Action Agenda 2005 and beyond. They applauded legislators who spoke passionately about their districts and neighborhoods and heard panelists who brought expertise, experience and exciting new ideas to the table.

Participants agreed that health; education and economic equity are still priority issues for women and girls in California, that the full implementation of CEDAW in our cities and counties, the election of progressive women to local, state and federal offices and the support of progressive men can move the agenda forward. Following Health, Economic, Education and CEDAW panels, they drafted Policy Papers on-line for county activities and actions.

Parallel to base building in California, WIN co-founded US Women Connect which served as the anchor for monitoring US implementation of the BPFA, Beijing+5 in 2000. USWC was reconstituted in March, 2004 as a national action network of 10 states in 10 Federal regions that is growing to 50 State networks, on the ground and on the Internet, amplifying United States women's voices on critical issues of public policy. USWC will serve as the anchor for a United States Women's Agenda that will connect all 50 United States to the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women's Beijing+15 report in 2010.

WIN and CAWA celebrated ten years of connecting women across cultures for collective action on local and global Platforms for Action in 2005. We thanked and honored the many women who had kept us moving forward locally and globally since 1995. We gave the CIRCLE OF COURAGE AWARDS to the tip of the iceberg of fearless, courageous, and progressive California. On accepting her award in December, 2004 Congresswoman Nancy Pelosi, San Francisco, California, said, "Setting an Action Agenda is essential. The status of women and the well being of our children and families are in great danger. We cannot afford to waste one minute in implementing an agenda that will protect and enhance the status of and opportunities for women and girls throughout California, the United States and the World." We accept Congresswoman Pelosi's challenge and intend to keep on moving forward locally, state wide, nationally and globally.

We look forward to continuing our partnership with the United Nations to bring Equality, Development and Peace to all women and girls – our families, our countries and our world.
