3. CHURCH WORLD SERVICE (CWS)

(Special Consultative status granted in 1974)

Principal Areas of Activity: sustainable development; emergency relief, assistance to refugees

Changes in Governance since the last report: Church World Service separated from the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States, becoming a separate organization governed by a Board of Directors.

Changes in the activities of the organization since the last report: Church World Service continues to be a leader in the field of emergency relief, international development, and refugee assistance. There has not been a major shift in the focus of the activities of the organization since the last report, though the shifting needs of our partners in the global south and lessons learned in prior work have lead to some changes in our program delivery.

Church World Service continues to work both domestically in the United States, as well as throughout the world. As of December 2005, CWS had projects in some 80 countries around the world, including Asia/Pacific, the Americas and the Caribbean, Africa, the Middle East, and Europe and the former CIS countries. The Disaster Relief and Recovery area work was allocated 34% of the funding, followed by Refugee Resettlement and Assistance at 29%, and International self-help Development Assistance at 12%. (Smaller percentages were allocated for US Hunger and Development, Fundraising and Information, Administration, Education and Advocacy, and Mission Relationships.)

Efforts to improve the understanding of our partners and donors on the work of the United Nations: In order to lift the visibility of the United Nations and the importance of our representation work there, CWS established a page on its web site relating to the United Nations. This page allows CWS to highlight work relating to the UN, and our work here is often featured in a news release sent to the press corps.

Similarly, CWS has developed a series of education and advocacy materials for use by our denominations and supporters that refer to the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). These materials help bring the MDGs to the attention of members of civil society across the United States, thus helping to build political will for development and for reaching the goals set.

To make the work easier and more effective, Church World Service opened a small office in the Church Center and arranged for representation by a consultant and later employees of the organization. CWS representatives have engaged with other non-governmental organizations in work on issues of importance to our organization and our partners in the developing world, including access to water, sustainable development, social development, and the complex emergencies in many parts of the world which are impacting families in the most devastating ways.

Part 11 - Church World Service Participation in the work of the United Nations during the reporting period

During the reporting period (2002-2005), Church World Service has had a few shifts in the staffing of its representation function at the United Nations which has created some small gaps in our participation during this period. Nevertheless, CWS has been involved on key issues of importance to its global partners and constituents. Church World Service has participated in the following meetings:

- United Nations Commission for Social Development (CSocD)

In the 2005 43rd session of the CSocD (9-18 Feb. 2005) in New York, CWS Representative Albert Gyan played an active role, which included participation on a panel sponsored by the Sub-Committee on the Elimination of Poverty called "Participation Works: International Success in the Fight Against Poverty." CWS worked to ensure that language was included in the outcome document, and worked closely with other NGOs active in the CSocD to bring issues to the attention of the Bureau and the participating member states.

- United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development (CSD)

CWS was an active participant in the CSD in 2004 (14-30 April) and 2005 (11-22 April). In both years, with the particular focus on water, CWS joined with other NGOs to emphasize in particular the challenges faced by many of our partners in the developing world in accessing water, and the need to look at access to water within a rights-based framework. CWS joined other Major Groups in producing side events and in raising the awareness of the member states and the Bureau of the importance of the issues to many in the global south with whom we work.

- United Nations Commission on the Status of Women (CSW)

During the meeting of the Commission on the Status of Women on 4-17 March 2005, Church World Service presented a side event entitled "Grassroots Women's Strategies to Combat HIV/AIDS: Home Based Care Approach".

- Financing for Development

Thanks to the participation of its consultant, Ms. Philo Morris, CWS was actively represented in the work at the FFD meetings during the 2002-2005. CWS worked collaboratively with other NGOs, cooperating in side events and taking an active role in presenting the concerns of our partners to the member states involved in the negotiations.

- UN General Assembly 23-24 June 2005 Civil Society Hearings, New York

Church World Service Representative Albert Gyan took part in the Hearing within the "Freedom from Want" Cluster.

- Commemoration of World AIDS Day (1 December)

CWS has commemorated World AIDS Day annually in a number of ways. On 1 December 2003, Church World Service and other organizations in the Geneva-based Ecumenical Advocacy Alliance worked with UNAIDS to launch a poster exhibition, “Signs of Hope, Steps for Change”, featuring artwork created in over 23 countries addressing the stigma and discrimination suffered by those living with HIV and AIDS. The exhibit remained in the UN General Assembly Visitors’ Lobby in New York through January 23, 2004, helping to raise awareness among the visitors to and employees of the United Nations. .

Operational Collaboration

As a major player in international emergency relief, Church World Service has maintained a close relationship with the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA). For example, CWS provided immediate relief in the Pakistan earthquake of January 2004 (and fall of 2005), and the tsunami disaster of December 2004. CWS remains very active in both of these areas, providing continuing assistance as the populations try to re-establish their livelihoods and communities.

In September 2005, Church World Service also worked closely with UNICEF in the provision of assistance to those affected in the Gulf Coast of the United States by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Specifically, UNICEF provided “Schools in a Box” which were distributed by CWS to devastated areas. This collaboration not only provided important assistance to those affected, but helped to lift the visibility of the United Nations and UNICEF in particular in an area in which the UN is not always clearly understood.

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights -- CWS contributed to the development of a training manual on Human Rights Monitoring prepared by the OHCHR during the reporting period.

Conclusion

Despite some brief gaps in staffing during the reporting period, Church World Service has been active and effective in bringing the needs of our partners in the global south to various United Nations fora and in sharing with our contributors and friends the important work of the United Nations. We have built relationships in many areas of the Organization, and look forward to sharing with you in our next report the work already underway to build on these efforts.
