Assessment of the work of the Security Council during the presidency of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (September 2003)

Introduction

Under the presidency of Sir Emyr Jones Parry, Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Security Council fulfilled a busy programme in September. During the month, the Council established the United Nations Mission in Liberia to support the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement signed at Accra, lifted the sanctions on the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, and extended the mandates of UNMEE and UNAMSIL.

The Council met at ministerial level on 24 September to consider the item entitled "Justice and the rule of law: the United Nations role". The meeting was presided over by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Jack Straw, and by the Minister of State for International Development, Hilary Benn. The presidency's aim in bringing the subject to the Council, was to affirm the central importance of justice and the rule of law in the work of the United Nations and to begin a process of reflection and analysis on those issues, involving the whole United Nations system, so that the experience and expertise available in the international system could be drawn on more effectively in the future.
