The Chairman of the Burundi configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission and Permanent Representative of Sweden to the United Nations, H.E. Mr. Andres Lidén, also spoke before the Council emphasizing that the sustained support of the international community and its involvement, in particular through the African Union and the Regional Initiative, as well as the close collaboration between the Council and the Commission, were essential in support of the consolidation of peace in Burundi. In the consultations of the whole that followed, Security Council members exchanged views on the situation in Burundi as well as on the latest report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB) (S/2008/745).

The Chairman of the Committee informed the Council regarding the continuation of the conditional abolishment of sanctions against Liberia. He stressed the limited capacities that States in the region have in implementing the travel ban. Following the adoption of resolution 1851 (2008), the Security Council heard a briefing by the Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon, on the political and security situation in Somalia. The Secretary-General welcomed the Council's actions with respect to the fight against piracy off the coast of Somalia but also emphasized that piracy in Somalia was a symptom of the anarchy that had persisted in the country for more than 17 years. Anti-piracy efforts, therefore, must be placed in the context of a comprehensive approach, he added. The meeting was chaired by the Prime Minister of the Republic of Croatia, H.E. Dr. Ivo Sanader. Members of the Security Council expressed concern regarding the climate of impunity and the ongoing violence in Darfur, which targets innocent civilians, peacekeepers and humanitarian workers alike. International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda

On 12 December, the Council held a debate to hear a briefing on the completion strategies of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia by its President, Judge Patrick Robinson, and its Prosecutor, Serge

Brammertz, and on the completion strategies of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda by its President, Judge Dennis Byron, and its Prosecutor, Hassan Bubacar Jallow. They presented their respective assessments of the implementation of the completion strategies of the Tribunals (S/2008/729, S/2008/726). Pointing to the continuing impunity enjoyed by some leaders responsible for the gravest crimes, they emphasized that the end of the mandate of the Tribunals should not signal that those persons were safe from justice. Members of the Security Council urged the Tribunals to continue to work on completing their respective mandates as early and as expeditiously as possible, without jeopardizing the fairness of the process.

The representative of Belgium, who facilitated the work of the Security Council Informal Working Group on the International Tribunals, briefed the Council on the progress achieved by the Informal Working Group on the issue of the establishment of a residual mechanism to carry out certain essential functions of the Tribunals after the closure of the Tribunals. On 19 December, the Security Council also adopted a presidential statement (S/PRST/2008/47), in which it took note of the presentations made on 12 December 2008 by the Presidents and Prosecutors of the Tribunals. Noting with concern that the 2010 deadline was not likely to be met, the Council emphasized that trials must be conducted by the Tribunals as quickly and efficiently as possible. It reaffirmed the necessity of persons indicted by the Tribunals being brought to justice, and called on all States to intensify cooperation with the Tribunals. In that context, the Council reaffirmed that the referral of cases to competent national jurisdictions was an essential part of the completion strategies of the Tribunals. The Council expressed its appreciation for the work of its Informal Working Group on the International Tribunals. The Council acknowledged the need to establish an ad hoc mechanism to carry out a number of essential functions of the Tribunals, including the trial of high-level fugitives, after the closure of the Tribunals, which would derive its authority from a Security Council resolution and from the respective statutes and rules of procedure of the Tribunals.

Threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts

On 9 December, the President of the Republic of Croatia, H.E. Mr. Stjepan Mesić, chaired an open debate on threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts. The Council was briefed by the Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon. In advance of the meeting, Croatia had circulated a concept paper (S/2008/738, annex), focusing on revitalizing and strengthening international solidarity in combating the threat of terrorism, including the strengthening of the leading role of the United Nations in global counter-terrorism efforts.

The Secretary-General stressed that, as a leading threat to international security, terrorism had to be one of the international community's main priorities. He added that the best response to a corrosive, malevolent ideology is a strong assertion of collective resistance. The Secretary-General emphasized that the international community needs to defend the human rights that terrorism so brutally violates, and urged the defence of values enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The United Nations has a responsibility to lead international efforts to confront this menace. The adoption by the General Assembly of the Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy in 2006 was a landmark event, and United Nations mechanisms, such as the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force and subsidiary bodies of the Council, were also important parts of the picture. Referring to the attacks on the United Nations offices in Baghdad, Algeria and Somalia, the Secretary-General stated that while it was more apparent than ever that the United Nations has become a deliberate target, these tragedies have deterred neither its will nor its ability to serve the international community.

Following the briefing, there were statements by 46 States, both members and non-members of the Security Council. Council members reaffirmed their commitment to pursue the struggle against terrorism, and with many speakers noting that their countries had experienced that scourge, most also agreed about the need for a revitalized and unified anti-terrorism effort and the need for a multidimensional approach. Many Council members also stressed the need for political and developmental initiatives to deal with conditions conducive to terrorism, as well as a renewed combat against money-laundering, drug trafficking and other networks that aided global terrorism.

At the end of the debate, the Council adopted a presidential statement (S/PRST/2008/45), in which it reiterated its condemnation of terrorism in all forms and manifestations and emphasized the central role of the United Nations in the global struggle against terrorism. The Security Council welcomed recent statements made by intergovernmental organizations condemning all forms of terrorism, including suicide bombing and hostage taking. The Council reaffirmed the importance of resolutions 1373 (2001) and 1624 (2005) and the work of the three committees established pursuant to resolutions 1267 (1999), 1373 (2001) and 1540 (2004). It also emphasized the importance of technical assistance aimed at increasing the capabilities of Member States in the fight against terrorism by addressing their counter-terrorism needs.

Furthermore, the Council called on all Member States to express support for the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy. It emphasized the need to enhance dialogue and broaden understanding among civilizations, condemned incitement to terrorist acts and reaffirmed the importance of countering radicalization and extremism. The Council reminded States that they must ensure that any measures taken to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law. The Security Council called on all Member States to renew the degree of solidarity manifested immediately after the tragic event of 11 September 2001, and to redouble efforts to tackle global terrorism.
