Assessment of the work of the Security Council during the presidency of Mexico (April 2009)

Introduction

During the presidency of the Permanent Representative of Mexico to the United Nations, Ambassador Claude Heller, the Security Council undertook an extensive programme of work. Throughout the month, Mexico contributed to the reaching of consensus and the taking of concerted action by the Council in making important decisions.

In the month of April 2009, 22 agenda items were considered by the Council, concerning Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and the Middle East.

A total of 35 meetings were held, of which 15 were informal consultations, 17 were formal meetings and two took the innovative form of “informal interactive dialogues”. A further meeting was an Arria-formula meeting concerning children and armed conflict, attended by participants from civil society and non-governmental organizations with an interest in that issue.

Three open debates were held, on the situation in Haiti, on the maintenance of international peace and security: mediation and settlement of disputes, and on children and armed conflict, the last of which was presided over by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Mexico, Patricia Espinosa Cantellano.

The Security Council adopted 17 decisions, comprising two resolutions on the extension of the mandates of peacekeeping operations, seven presidential statements, three statements to the press and five media appearances by the President of the Council, in which he delivered messages approved by the Council members.

The Special Representative presented the twentieth progress report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Operation in Côte d’Ivoire (S/2009/196). He stressed that UNOCI was focusing on advancing the electoral process and that, while progress towards the holding of the elections was slow, the main actors would count on great political will to that end.

Following the meeting, the Council held informal consultations at which a brief report on the work of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1572 (2004) was presented by Mexico in its capacity as Chairman of that Committee, followed by an exchange of views among the Council members.

Council members expressed disapproval of the failure of Eritrea to comply with resolution 1862 (2009) and concern over that country's unwillingness to establish dialogue or accept the good offices of the Secretary-General. They encouraged the United Nations Secretariat to continue its efforts towards rapprochement and mediation and requested the Under-Secretary-General to keep the Council informed of developments in the situation.
