On 5 June, the Security Council received its biannual briefing from the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court, Luis Moreno-Ocampo, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1593 (2005). In his briefing, the Prosecutor provided information to the Council on the activities of his Office with regard to Darfur and summarized his planned activities for the next six months. The Prosecutor emphasized that all States parties to the Court's founding Rome Statute have a responsibility to arrest and surrender any indictee travelling in their territory, noting also that, while non-signatories to the Statute have no such legal obligation, the Council in resolution 1593 (2005) urged them to cooperate fully with the Court. The Prosecutor further informed the Council that, in the coming six months, and in accordance with its mandate, the Office of the Prosecutor would continue monitoring ongoing crimes, galvanizing efforts to arrest fugitives and building cooperation with regional organizations. The briefing was followed by a private debate on the matter, during which Council members were able to express their positions on this issue.

On 11 June, at a formal meeting, the Council was briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Coordinator, John Holmes, on his recent trip to the Sudan. The Under-Secretary-General, who described the expulsion of humanitarian aid workers from the Sudan on 4 March as unjustified, explained that through the efforts of the humanitarian community, working together with the Government of the Sudan, the most critical lifesaving gaps had been significantly narrowed and a humanitarian crisis had been prevented. Nonetheless, he noted that a full return of humanitarian capability was still needed in Darfur. He further stated that following the decision of 4 March, the Government of the Sudan had taken some important steps to rebuild cooperation with the humanitarian community and had reaffirmed existing agreements. He also emphasized that, in order to meet the requirements of the new situation throughout the Sudan, the financing needs for humanitarian assistance must be reworked. He called on both the Government and the donor community for accelerated help. He also mentioned the situation in the south of the Sudan as a source of major concern. The briefing was followed by informal consultations.
