Statement by the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to the United Nations on the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, made at the 72nd meeting of the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict

Madam,

First and foremost, I would like to thank you for taking the initiative of organizing this meeting regarding the situation of children in armed conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

I would also like to thank the Working Group, whose commitment and determination in fulfilling its mandate reflect a genuine will to contribute to the return of peace and stability and to eradicate the problem of child soldiers in my country.

I wish to express my appreciation to Ms. Virginia Gamba, Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, and to commend her commitment and dedication to child welfare.

Madam,

By way of reminder, it is worth recalling that the eastern part of my country has faced recurring armed conflict for over a decade, resulting in numerous deaths and material losses. That state of war is at the root of the sexual violence and the violations and abuse to which children in that part of my country continue to be subjected.

To date, the various armed groups continue to recruit children. As was the case during the uprisings, children act as fighters, miners, messengers, sexual slaves, spies and ammunition carriers.

Allow me to recall all of the legislative and regulatory measures that have been taken to strengthen the fight against the recruitment of children with a view to better responding to the problem and ultimately eliminating it. Those measures include the following:

1. Decree-Law No. 66 (2000) of 9 June 2000 concerning the demobilization and reintegration of vulnerable groups present in fighting forces.
2. Decree No. 03/041 of 18 December 2003 establishing the Interministerial Committee for Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration.
3. Order No. 07/056 of 14 July 2007 establishing the National Implementation Unit for the National Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Programme.
4. Law No. 09/001 of 10 January 2009 on the protection of children.
5. On 4 October 2012, an action plan was signed to tackle the recruitment and use of children and other grave violations of children's rights by the armed forces and the security services of the Democratic Republic of the Congo.
6. The Democratic Republic of the Congo has strictly enforced those laws and regulations. From 2003 to 2016, the National Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Programme thus succeeded in removing 53,548 children, including 9,485 girls, from armed forces and groups. It supported and provided various resources to 208 schools, which brought the children back into the school system, and supported 417 vocational institutions, which enabled them to learn a trade.

7. The introduction of operational standards to determine and assess children's ages made it possible to avoid drafting minors into the Forces armées de la République Démocratique du Congo (FARDC) during recruitment drives.
8. Strengthened identity checks introduced in accordance with those operational standards made it possible to separate 453 children from FARDC from July 2015 to May 2016; 330 of those children were reunited with their families. The 123 children who were separated from the Kamina military base have been reunited with their families in the former Kasai provinces via the city of Lubumbashi, with logistical support from the Congolese Government and its partners, namely the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the International Committee of the Red Cross.
9. Those measures have been bolstered by a tried-and-tested technological process for the biometric registration of FARDC soldiers, along with the formal and compulsory use of banking services.
10. In addition, intensive specialized rehabilitation programmes have been established, and buildings have been constructed with the assistance of the National Institute for Professional Training, with funding from the Government and with Japanese cooperation. As a result, over 1,500 survivors and children who have left armed groups have thus learned small trades in Kibumba and Rusthuru, in North Kivu province, and in Bunia and Aru, in Ituri province. Six classrooms have been built and equipped in Luiza territory, in Central Kasai, with a view to bringing children back into the school system after they have left or been separated from armed groups.

Since the elimination of child recruitment, FARDC has set itself the goal of zero children within its ranks. During recruitment, before recruits are sent to a training centre, their identity is verified and any minors are separated. FARDC is working in synergy with protection agencies, namely UNICEF and the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO).

Madam,

In one case, officers in Kamina who allegedly removed children from screening while monitors were at work have been identified, and the Chief of Staff has opened disciplinary proceedings. The Minister of Defence is awaiting the findings of the disciplinary proceedings before taking a decision. The proceedings were described at the meeting of the joint technical working group on 27 April 2018.

Coming back to the contents of the preliminary report, the current report states that the defence and security forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and armed groups have recruited and used children, subjected children to prolonged detention, murdered and mutilated children, committed rapes and sexual violence, attacked protected buildings and abducted children.

It should, however, be noted that according to that very report, the main perpetrators of those grave violations of children's rights continue to be the domestic and foreign armed groups.

The Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo is determined to continue operations to eradicate the militias just as it defeated the Kamuina Nsapu movement. On 13 January 2018, the Minister of National Defence, War Veterans and Reinsertion announced that military operations against the Allied Democratic Forces (ADF) would resume in Beni territory. On the same occasion, he reminded FARDC of the obligation to respect international law and rules of engagement during the operations.

It is worth drawing attention to the origin of the Bani Mura militia, whose crimes against the rights of the child are underscored in the current preliminary report. The militia was created by individuals from the Pende and Chokwe ethnic groups who were based in locality of Mogamba in the territory of Kamonia, Kasai province, in order to confront the expansion of Kamuina Nsapu. The latter was in turn the product of a local conflict in Dibaya, where it ruined communities and expanded rapidly in the Kasai area.

Using war weapons, hunting weapons and knives, the Kamuina Nsapu militia committed several abuses and massive violations. In particular, it forcibly recruited and used children; killed, decapitated and mutilated children; and destroyed religious, health care, educational and public infrastructure.

Faced with that situation, the President of the Republic enacted Order No. 017-002 of 9 March 2017, which put in place the Greater Kasai operational sector, enabling FARDC to deploy there in support of the Congolese National Police with a view to bringing an end to the conflict and restoring public order while respecting the rules of engagement. The defence and security forces responded by combating all militias, including the Bana Mura militia

The defence and security forces were thus able to free a considerable number of children connected with armed groups and return them to their families, acting through protection structures. The Kamuina Nsapu militia accounts for 195 of those children, 54 of whom were handed over to UNICEF and 141 to their families.

As regards the recruitment and use of children, I should mention that in the course of 2017, FARDC formally recruited individuals who wanted to follow a military career. The process was consistent with the directive enacting the plan of action against the recruitment and use of children. It took place in cooperation with the United Nations child protection team from UNICEF and MONUSCO, which was active in the place of recruitment and in the various instruction and training centres. Three cases of use detailed in the report were not detected by those inspections. The Congolese National Police did not recruit in 2017. It is inconceivable to allege that recruitment took place in Haut-Katanga and South Kivu without specifying the exact number for each of the two provinces. The Democratic Republic of the Congo therefore looks forward to receiving more specific information regarding the children's identities and places of recruitment. The same applies to the allegations that were made regarding FARDC.

Thank you for your attention.
