STATEMENT BY THE LEGAL COUNSEL ON BEHALF OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

As I indicated earlier when the meeting of States Parties met a few moments ago, the Secretary-General convened the meeting in accordance with the recommendations of the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, and also consistent with article 319 of the Convention.

States parties to the Convention were invited.

Other States that are yet to ratify or accede to the Convention and other entities were also invited to participate as observers in accordance with the decisions to be taken by the meeting of States parties. These invitations were extended consistent with the spirit and intent of the recommendation of the Preparatory Commission subject to the decision of the Meeting of States parties. A few moments ago the States parties decided to invite observers to participate.

I am pleased to note that the meeting has now elected its President and I wish to extend my congratulations to you, Mr. President.

This is a historic occasion as it is the first meeting of States parties properly constituted in accordance with the Convention. The meeting is of special significance since it brings together States parties to the Convention in this setting for the first time since the entry into force of the Convention on 16 November 1994. On that date, in accordance with the requirements of the Convention, the Assembly of the International Seabed Authority met in Kingston at a ceremonial session to mark the occasion. The Secretary-General addressed that meeting and stated:

"The dream of a comprehensive law for the oceans is an old one. Turning this dream into a reality has been one of the greatest achievements of this century. It is one of the decisive contributions of our era. It will be one of our most enduring legacies.

"The Convention establishes a new and more equitable relationship among States. It establishes distinct zones of sovereignty and jurisdiction for coastal States. It formulates rules for the high seas. It lays down rights and duties of States with respect to navigation. It provides for the protection of the marine environment, and the conduct of marine research.

"At the same time, the Convention provides a legal framework for the development of marine resources. It creates a new regime for deep seabed mining. It addresses concerns relating to the limits of the continental shelf. It recognizes the rights and jurisdiction of States over resources, but also the duties and obligations of States seeking to exploit those resources. And the Convention provides detailed procedures for the compulsory and binding settlement of disputes.

"The Law of the Sea Convention demonstrates what can be achieved when mutual support and mutual respect provide the basis for relations among nations. The regime established and the mechanisms for dispute resolution that are created are an important contribution to preventing conflict and promoting international peace and security."

In providing for compulsory dispute settlement, central to the system is the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea. You are gathered here to take practical steps concerning the organization of the Tribunal.

It augurs well for the Tribunal and for the Convention as a whole that the States parties have promptly proceeded with their work and have, inter alia, decided to bring into their deliberations the States and other entities that are yet to become States parties.

It is also admirable that the meeting should in so short a time decide to follow the path of consensus in taking decisions, whenever feasible.

I would convey to the meeting the commitment of the Secretary-General and of the United Nations to do whatever is needed to facilitate and to ensure the equitable, consistent and coherent application of the Convention.

I would reiterate the Secretary-General's sentiments expressed on 16 November, and congratulate you on the historic demonstration of international cooperation in your undertaking.
