Viet Nam has promulgated a number of legal provisions relating to the definition of outer space. Article 1 of the Constitution of Viet Nam, adopted in 2013, stipulates that “the Socialist Republic of Viet Nam is an independent and sovereign country enjoying unity and integrity of territory, including the mainland, islands, seas and airspace”. In addition, the 2003 Law on National Border provides that “the national border in the air is the vertical plane stretching upward from the land border and national border at sea”. Pursuant to Decision 144/2004/QĐ-BQP, issued by the Minister of National Defence on 30 October 2002, establishing restricted areas in the national airspace of the Socialist Republic of Viet Nam, the height of the restricted airspace of Hanoi extends from the surface towards infinity.
